MR. RADKA: Well, including these words that we have "combine 1 or more counties into probate districts," and the question of the referendum I am just offering as a possibility, rather than subscribing to this amendment in its entirety. I will take the phrases in reverse order. The second problem that we have—and I think that this is the most serious problem, as far as this sentence is concerned—"and shall do so". Now, this means that they will have the right to combine probate districts and will also have the right to combine the office of probate judge with any judicial office inferior thereto. This power, by this constitutional provision is placed in the hands of the supreme court, "and shall do so on recommendation and report of the supreme court." I call your attention to the word "shall", and I will just briefly say, we have had a whole lot of comment on this particular problem, and rather than belabor the point, I feel, once again, we are giving too much power to the supreme court which is legislative power and not within the judicial sphere.

I will merely mention the other phrase which I object to, and that is "in any county with less than 25,000 population with supplemental salary as provided by law." I point here specifically to the 25,000 figure. I heard Mr. Kuhn ask a question the other day, or raise a point, he thought that the 25,000 figure might be arbitrary and was unrealistic, therefore there will be many of you who will want to probably decrease this figure. I suggest we might decrease it to the figure of 2,716, because the population of Keweenaw county is 2,717, I believe.

The other facet of this particular amendment—and I will just point it up and you can run with it—"combine the office of probate judge with any judicial office inferior thereto," now, the problems that are found in this particular phrase we have discussed at great length when we were talking about the last sentence of section a, so I won't belabor you with this. In talking to many delegates, just this afternoon, some people have said they would agree to the combination of the probate court with the circuit court commissioner, but they wouldn't believe they could combine the probate court with the justice of the peace, so you have a whole lot of problems present here.

I, therefore, offer this amendment, and say that it should be passed on the basis of each of any 1 of the 4 phrases, but when you get all 4 of them together, it certainly should receive considerable consideration, and perhaps your support. I move the adoption of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, I would ask that the amendment be divided into 3 parts: that is, "The legislature may combine 1 or more counties into probate districts," being the first part; "or combine the office of probate judge with any judicial office inferior thereto in any county with less than 25,000 population with supplemental salary as provided by law," as the second part; and the third, "and shall do so on recommendation and report of the supreme court." I think that we are dealing with 3 particular ideas.

In addition, the amendment offered by Mr. Leppien referred to the first clause that I have read, and I would ask that the Chair might rule that that particular portion will not be in order, having been considered already.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof first requests the division of the question, and the question will be divided in accordance with his request.

Mr. Danhof, second, makes the point of order that the words "The legislature may combine 1 or more counties into probate districts or", as incorporated in Mr. Radka's amendments are the same words sought to be stricken by Mr. Leppien's earlier amendment which was rejected by the committee of the whole. The Chair will sustain that point of order and rule that that portion of the question is not in order and is not before the committee at this time. Therefore, the remaining portions of the question, the right of the legislature to combine the office of probate judge with any judicial office inferior thereto in any county with less than 25,000 population with supplemental salary as provided by law, and the final phrase, "and shall do so on recommendation and report of the supreme court" will be considered separately.

Mr. Radka.

MR. RADKA: I merely wanted to state, Mr. Chairman, I make no strong objection to this, but I think that our discussion on the floor this morning clearly indicated how closely interrelated all of these phrases which are contained between the 2 periods really are, and I am a little bit concerned. You raised the point of order when I was discussing a particular facet of this matter—I don't see how we can intelligently discuss this amendment without discussing all parts of just 1 simple sentence that has an awful lot of dynamite hidden in it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair has ruled, Mr. Radka, that the words of your amendment, "combine 1 or more counties into probate districts or", have already been disposed of by the committee. The remainder of your amendment is in order and will be considered in 2 separate parts.

Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, in part I am speaking for myself and not for the committee, and that would be with regard to the last clause, "and shall do so on recommendation and report of the supreme court". Speaking for myself, I feel that there is merit in what Delegate Radka says. I don't think it is necessary to the intent of implementing this section. With regard to—and I will vote that way, Mr. Radka—the combining of the probate judge "with any judicial office inferior thereto in any county with less than 25,000 population with supplemental salary as provided by law," I think that is the particular part of the question that is before us now, is that right?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: That is correct, Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: For the information of the delegates and Delegate Hubbs, the matter of the salaries of probate judges is like this: the smallest salary in the state of Michigan is $5,000; the legislature has provided by statute that the pay shall be at least $5,000 in every county. Counties are permitted, however, to supplement that salary. You start at $5,000 in counties under 5,000 population. It is increased $500 in counties from 5,000 to 10,000 population, and thereafter for each 10,000 it is an additional $500. The highest paid probate judges in Michigan are in Oakland county. The statutory salary is $18,500, and the county supplements that salary by paying an additional $5,000, and they have $23,500. In Wayne, the statutory salary is $18,500; their supplement is $4,000, and it is $22,500.

The concept of this particular section that is sought to be stricken is this: as a matter of economy and a matter of sound administration of the lower court system in the small counties—and you can decide what you want to do with this. This is offered by the committee, I think, in good faith, not for the benefit of lawyers, but for the benefit of the people in that area — that in these very small counties, a county like Keweenaw, with 2400 people, the probate judge just doesn't have much to do with 2400 people in the county, but there is a base salary of $5,000. It is a place to build a court of limited jurisdiction. This was the idea, that in the very small counties, it would require a very small supplement. The legislature has taken care of this matter with regard to probate courts in general. As far as the committee is concerned, I do not recall any particular dissatisfaction with what the legislature had done with regard to salaries of probate judges, and we just left it alone. But we are giving an opportunity to the very small counties to build a court system, and we have given the flexibility to the legislature to provide for it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Leibrand.

MR. LUNDGREN: Mr. Chairman, I would have a point of order, first.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lundgren, state your point.

MR. LUNDGREN: That interesting ruling that the Chair just gave out would make me wonder whether the people on the next amendment should talk now or later, because upon the passage of this amendment depends whether we are going to have our amendment acted upon. Would you please rule on that?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair was just examining the amendment offered by Messrs. Lundgren, Perras and Plank with that in mind, Mr. Lundgren, and would recommend that Messrs. Perras, Lundgren and Plank participate in the debate on the questions currently before the committee. They do appear to be almost identical.

MR. RADKA: I raise another point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Radka.

MR. RADKA: If you would examine the amendment that was offered this morning by Mr. Leppien, he moved to amend after "may" by striking out "combine 1 or more counties into probate districts or".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: That is correct.

MR. RADKA: And I question whether my amendment, where I struck out "The legislature", might change the entire meaning. The intent and purpose of my amendment was completely different from what Mr. Leppien had offered.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair thinks, Mr. Radka, as was earlier ruled, the proposal by the committee contemplates that the legislature may do 2 things and shall do 1 thing upon recommendation of the supreme court. One of the things which the committee proposes that the legislature may do was the subject of the Leppien amendment this morning which the committee has acted upon. The other thing which the legislature may do is to "combine the office of probate judge with any judicial office inferior thereto," and so forth, contemplated by your amendment. That portion of your amendment remains in order, as does the final portion dealing with what the legislature shall do upon recommendation and report of the supreme court.

The question, in the judgment of the Chair, is clearly severable. The Leppien amendment took care of the first portion of it, and the Chair's ruling is as stated earlier.

MR. RADKA: Might I call the Chair's attention to section 316 of Mason's, paragraph 6:

> The formality of a vote on dividing the question is generally dispensed with, as it is usually arranged by general consent. But if this cannot be done, then a formal motion to divide is necessary, specifying the exact method of division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will call Mr. Radka's attention to rule 51 of the rules of the convention:

> Any delegate may call for a division of the question, which shall be divided if it comprehends propositions in substance so distinct that one being taken away a substantive proposition shall remain for the decision of the convention. . . .

It does not require a vote of the committee.

MR. RADKA: Mr. Radka accepts the ruling of the Chair.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair is grateful.

Mr. Lundgren, have you a further point?

MR. LUNDGREN: I was just going to ask if he is accepting that for all of us. You are destroying the whole intent of the amendment here. I feel, if you take out one part of it, then you have nullified the whole thing, and I think the sponsors of an amendment have the proper authority to talk about their whole amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will call to the attention of Mr. Lundgren and the other sponsors of amendments pending that we have had a great many amendments, some of which attack one portion of the committee proposal, others of which attack other portions. To the extent that the questions are divisible, the delegates are entitled to have them divided, as they have been in accordance with the request of the chairman of the committee, Mr. Danhof.

Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise to speak with reference to the third division of Mr. Radka's amendment, which moves to strike the phrase or the clause, "and shall do so on recommendation and report of the supreme court." Traditionally, courts in this country have been created in about 3 ways. All of them are, more or less, legislative in character. First, through the medium of constitutions; second through legislatures; and third is the local courts, through home rule charters which are voted upon by the people.

In lines 10 and 11 of Committee Proposal 94, we embark upon a totally new concept, that of empowering the supreme court to direct the creation of courts and the alteration of court boundaries. All of the traditional processes — such as the constitutional convention, the legislative process, or the local charter process — involve long debate, public hearings, and an opportunity of the public to express their opinions. Here we embark upon a process where the Supreme Court of the state of Michigan, which, as I have observed before, may turn out to be an appointive body, can, by one stroke of the pen, alter districts and create courts.

This proposition has come up before this convention before, and I say, Mr. Chairman and delegates, we are embarking upon a dangerous voyage. I support division 3 of Mr. Radka's amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise to oppose the amendment and support the committee recommendation. There are some reservations that I have about it, but not the ones that are posed here. First of all, I think we have to recognize that the people of this state have grown, more and more, to look to the supreme court for advice and counsel with regard to the administration of justice in this state, and what I think the committee is doing in this recommendation is to take that into account and to give the supreme court certain means by which this might be accomplished, which are not any more than making strong recommendations on the basis of considered appraisal of the facts and appraisal of the way in which justice is administered. I think that the judicial power, as such, includes the power, on the part of the supreme court, to make recommendations and to make reports to those who have the power to implement recommendations and reports.

I do think that there has been a very difficult problem in this state with regard to the conducting of justice at the lower level. In the public interest — not in terms of the interest of the lawyers, but in terms of the public interest — and particularly the little people in this state, it is absolutely imperative that we begin to think in terms of the appropriate ways by which the administration of justice might be executed. I think the committee has done some original thinking in this area and ought to be complimented by both the lawyers and nonlawyers, and the public interest, for giving us the kind of formulation that helps in a flexible way to deal with this problem. It promotes the opportunity of thinking in terms of family courts. It promotes the opportunity of thinking in terms of the function, if any, of the J.P.s in relation to the administration of justice on the local level, and I think the kind of formula that has been developed here is one that has within it the potential of intimate adaptation to the needs of communities, and leaves it up to the people who have the power to implement it in such a way that it will take into account some of the points raised by Mr. Hubbs, people who raise questions of economy, people who raise questions of the local concerns and the particular characteristics of the area.

I think that there has been some good thinking here, and I think it ought to be supported. And I think the amendment ought not to be supported.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lundgren.

MR. LUNDGREN: It appears that I am going to have to talk about our up coming amendment because all the other sponsors have left the floor, amongst quite a few others.

I again address a question, which I think I have talked 2 or 3 times about, and I will direct it to Mr. Danhof or anybody on the committee, the judicial committee. I would like to have you clearly state for the record what particular courts are going to be inferior, that the probate court might be joined with. Now, do you consider that we are going to continue to have justice of the peace courts after the legislature gets through with this, or not?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Lundgren, you have answered your own question, after the legislature gets through with it. I will be very frank to tell — is Mr. Higgs here or has he left the hall? Mr. Higgs, Mr. Lundgren has made a particular point, this particular provision regarding these counties under 25,000, I will state to the committee, we discussed it very thoroughly, but Mr. Higgs, in particular, did a tremendous amount of research on this particular item, and the numerical designation was one, which, upon his research, he recommended to the committee and gave cogent reasons therefor.

I would respectfully suggest, Mr. Lundgren, that perhaps Mr. Higgs can give you a better idea as to what courts you will or will not have, or what he envisions this might or might not do. I am sorry that Mr. Habermehl had to leave for the afternoon. Mr. Habermehl put this in in the form of a delegate proposal and urged it, very strongly, upon the committee. He appeared and his testimony, as I say, is upon the record and the tapes. Naturally, he wanted Alpena county to be included and where we set the figure doesn't include Alpena county. He had an amendment in, but I think he withdrew it during his absence.

I know Mr. Higgs was present, and from that and from Mr. Habermehl's original discussion, this particular concept developed. If Mr. Higgs will take over, perhaps he can give you more explanation. If there is anything further, I will try to add to it. I would yield to the delegate from Bay City.

MR. LUNDGREN: That is perfectly all right, but you don't have to talk too long about it; just tell me what courts you have in mind. I have been trying to draw that out for a long time and it hasn't come out.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Courts inferior thereto would be courts of limited jurisdiction. Those would include —

MR. LUNDGREN: Yes, but what are they?

MR. HIGGS: I am coming to it.

MR. LUNDGREN: Okay.

MR. HIGGS: Those would include the circuit court commissioner's court, which a later proposal contemplates eliminating, and it would include justice courts, and it would include municipal courts.

MR. LUNDGREN: Let me ask you this: you are more aware of it than I am — except in counties that I have covered in one way or the other in different things — circuit court commissioner is not truly a court, it is one lawyer that accepts the job because nobody else wants it. So let's not delude ourselves that it is properly a court like we are talking about or you are trying to eliminate here. This is the thing that bothers me.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Lundgren, I don't quite follow your point. Let me try. The circuit court commissioner's court, probably the most significant function that this court exercises in the counties of small population are cases involving the possession of real estate, that would involve the foreclosure of land contracts and the summary possession of real estate. At least now, that is my understanding. It is a fee court. They are paid on the basis of fees. They do have very little business. They are required to be lawyers. It is hard to get anyone to even take the job. There have been times in our county when we have had to go round looking for somebody to fill this function. Nobody really wanted to. In larger areas, and in Wayne in particular, it is a court. They have a number of judges and they have office space, and it is a different situation.

It was our thinking that because of the limited function and use of this court — but nevertheless, a very necessary function — that very conceivably this particular judicial function, with the exception of that part of the power of the circuit court commissioner to issue injunctions — we don't think that should be transferred to a court unless it is a court of record with a lawyer, if I may be so bold before this committee as to mention that awful word — we don't think probably that a municipal judge should have the power to issue an injunction that would restrain someone from doing something that may involve a very serious aspect of their business.

MR. LUNDGREN: Do you envision that the probate court should eventually take these kind of duties over? What I am trying to draw out is just what courts does the judiciary have in mind or don't they have in mind any courts? What if the legislature decides not to act, what are we going to have?

MR. HIGGS: Exactly what you have now.

MR. LUNDGREN: For 5 years.

MR. HIGGS: Well, in a period of 5 years —

MR. LUNDGREN: That is what is bothering me. There's no ifs, ands, or buts about it. It is in the constitution, and that is what is bothering me.

MR. HIGGS: In a period of 5 years, of course, it is conceived — I wonder whether we are in the right section, whether this is germane?

MR. LUNDGREN: Well, I think it is germane because all through this you are eliminating this and that. You have made a very strong supreme court, and it seems to me, as a layman, that you are creating a very strong probate court, and to a layman, I don't think that is what we want, in our smaller areas, let's say.

MR. HIGGS: Well, have I answered your question as to what courts were to be included?

MR. LUNDGREN: No, you haven't, because apparently your committee doesn't feel free to elaborate on it very much because you have chosen the path of elimination rather than the path of creation, and that is what is bothering me, and I think you have made your point and I think I have made my point, that you haven't created something for the future, except —

MR. HIGGS: Well, Mr. Lundgren, in a few words, the courts of limited jurisdiction below the circuit court include the probate court, the circuit court commissioners, justices of the peace, and municipal courts.

MR. LUNDGREN: And the other day, the chairman said that the county courts, if created — he felt that they would be inferior to a probate court. Now, you can correct me if I am wrong, but that is what, I believe, was said the other day here on the floor.

MR. HIGGS: Dr. Joiner advised our committee that when we used the words "courts of limited jurisdiction", we are referring to courts below the level of the circuit court. We used the word "inferior;" this may be something that we should clarify in style and drafting.

But those are the courts that we were thinking about.

MR. LUNDGREN: Thank you. I am stepping on eggshells here because I am not a lawyer.

MR. HIGGS: That is all right.

MR. LUNDGREN: But, I think the point is pretty well made that we haven't created something that the state is going to need, and it might come back to haunt us.

MR. HIGGS: Well, the concept — if I may, Mr. Chairman — is that we are trying to provide the necessary flexibility in the legislature so that it can create courts to take over these functions that will be adaptable to the varying needs of the different parts of the state. It is not conceived by the committee that we should lay that out, because of the differing needs that were presented to the committee.

MR. LUNDGREN: Well, I shall not talk any further to the point, thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: For what purpose does the gentleman rise, Mr. Leibrand?

MR. LEIBRAND: A question to Delegate Higgs, if I might. Am I out of order?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If it relates to the subject which has just been discussed, the Chair thinks it would be easier if you proceeded at this point so we might have some continuity.

MR. LEIBRAND: May I then direct a question to Delegate Higgs?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may proceed, Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Delegate Higgs, you have just spoken about other provisions here enabling the legislature to create other inferior courts, is that correct?

MR. HIGGS: Inferior courts, which I would conceive —

MR. LEIBRAND: Of limited jurisdiction.

MR. HIGGS: That is what I understood.

MR. LEIBRAND: Then, by Committee Proposal 94, aren't we authorizing the Michigan supreme court to wipe out these other inferior courts or combine them with others?

MR. HIGGS: Delegate Leibrand, I have already stated, as far as I am personally concerned, I intended to vote against that part of the question. Speaking for myself, this is not the recommendation of the committee, but I, myself, would leave it to the legislature entirely. I don't think the committee feels strong about it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, have you taken a census lately?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary advises that he has just taken a census and that there is a quorum present.

MR. HUBBS: Did he divide it into laymen versus barristers, might I ask? I want to know whether the audience is sympathetic or not.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary advises that he made no separation. If he does, which side would you like to be counted with? (laughter)

MR. HUBBS: I was trying earlier to get to be an honorary barrister. I was hoping that someday that would be forthcoming, but in the meantime —

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You are in your sophomore year, Mr. Hubbs. (laughter)

MR. HUBBS: Thank you, sir. In the meantime — getting back to business — I can well understand now why my earlier amendment was defeated. I didn't get it up to the desk in the right order, or at least I hope I didn't get it up in the right order.

Here is the situation as it now exists. The reason I put my amendment in was to guard against a contingency that I know is forthcoming, provided this section carries as it is. And I would heartily agree with Delegates Lundgren, Perras, Radka, Leibrand and others who have suggested that we delete the lines starting with 8, "combine courts of probate judge with any judicial office inferior thereto in any county with less than 25,000 population with supplemental salary as provided by law, and shall do so on recommendation and report of the supreme court." This is what I arose to agree with. I know why my amendment was defeated. I support this amendment, and I hope that we can strike this language out of here. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, as you may have noticed, I have, right along, supported a strong supreme court. I think it is extremely important that this supreme court have power to make rules, power to enforce procedure, general supervisory power over the inferior courts, and for that reason, I would like to — not for that reason necessarily — but I would like to support the second divided part of the pending amendment, not support the amendment, but support the original committee language.

Now, when we get down into this third part, we are talking about something else. We are talking about something that I haven't supported, and I think it is extremely important that we all stop and take a look at this proposition. Now we are saying that the supreme court is going to have the power to create inferior courts, if that word "shall" means anything, and I guess maybe some think it doesn't, but I think it does. I think the legislature is obliged to respect that kind of language, and I took a look at the federal constitution to see what that said on the subject, and it said that the judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one supreme court, and such inferior courts as congress may, from time to time, ordain and establish.

We don't have a congress in Michigan, but we have a legislature in Michigan, which is somewhat analogous to a congress, and that is where courts should be created, not in the supreme court. So, with regard to that last part, I am opposed to it, and with regard to that, I do not think the committee position ought to be sustained.

Certainly the legislature should have the right and the authority as the years go by — and we are not writing this constitution for 1962, contrary to what may appear to be the case, we are writing it, perhaps, for another 50 years. I am sure that in 1907 they couldn't envision the problems that we have today, and I am just as sure that we can't envision the problem that the succeeding generations will have a half a century from now. But, at no time do I want it to be thought that I support the proposition that the Supreme Court of the state of Michigan can create inferior courts. That is purely a legislative function and ought to remain so.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I want to oppose the amendment, and in the process of doing that, I would like to straighten out what I consider a few misinterpretations here. When Mr. Higgs quoted Dr. Joiner in speaking of courts of limited jurisdiction and saying that they were inferior to the circuit court, he was talking about Committee Proposal 90. To get all this into perspective, in Committee Proposal 90, we established the 5 tier court system. There, when we were speaking of courts, we spoke of the supreme court, the appellate court, the trial court of general jurisdiction, a probate court, and other courts of limited jurisdiction, whatever they may be.

Now we come to this proposal, and in this one — well, first we ought to have the history of this particular part of this proposal. We had voted down the general county court. We had disposed of the supreme court — well, we hadn't disposed of the supreme court, we never did do that adequately. We disposed of the other courts and we came to the probate court. We agreed on keeping a probate court. We did not want to do anything to the small counties, we wanted to do something for the small counties.

It was represented to us that the small counties needed this, so we provided that in these small counties under 25,000, the probate court could be merged, not horizontally with courts of equal jurisdiction, or not taking in jurisdictions greater than theirs, but with courts "inferior thereto", referring to inferior to the probate court, and not inferior to the circuit court.

Now, when you go to 96, in 96 we abolish, within 5 years, the circuit court commissioner and the justice of the peace.

We do not abolish, in 96, the municipal courts. They were created by a statute, and we say in 96 they may retain their jurisdiction and their powers unless and until the legislature abolishes them or changes them. So, the only thing that this can mean is that the probate court will or can, if the legislature so sees fit, be merged downward with the circuit court commissioner and the probate court. As for municipal courts, the legislature always could do what they wanted to with them.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: Point of information, Mr. Chairman. I would like to ask the chairman of the committee or Mr. Higgs, if they in their committee gave any thought to letting the counties that might be involved in this merger of probate courts — if they gave any thought to these counties, probably, letting these people vote thereon. Was that brought up in your committee at all, Bob?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Is a discussion of this type pertinent to the present amendment, Mr. Chairman? I don't want to get started if it is not. We are not talking now about the combining of various counties into districts. The Chair has ruled that is not under discussion.

MR. PERRAS: My question, Mr. Danhof, was the combining of 1 or more counties into probate districts, that is what my question was about, and to the point that it was considered that the people of these various counties might bring this up together and vote on doing this without giving that power to the legislature.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Perras, if your question does relate, as the Chair believes you just said it did, to combining 1 or more counties, the Chair would rule that you were not proceeding in order. If your question relates to the combining of the probate courts with judicial offices inferior thereto, your question would be in order.

MR. PERRAS: Well, that was what my question was. I asked if it was thought of in the committee that the people of those counties could have had the chance to vote on it themselves, without giving that power to the legislature. That was my question, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof, does the gentleman care to answer?

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Perras, the answer is, yes. However, we are not writing in any of these provisions any self executing document of any kind. We are not making anything that is accomplished upon the passage of this constitution. We felt, to specifically answer your question, it would best be left to the legislature to determine the method; whether they wanted the people to vote, whether they wanted the board of supervisors to consider it, whether they wanted to shoot dice for it or draw straws; this could best be left to the legislature. On that basis, we felt that this was a matter that could be handled in that particular regard. The answer to the question is, yes, we did discuss it. We did not feel we had the foresight to write in what might be the proper means, and I still think the question is directed basically to the first clause of this particular sentence more than the second, Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Radka. Before stating the question the secretary will ring the bell.

A division has not yet been requested. Mr. Everett? Mr. Everett requests a division on the Radka amendment. Is the demand supported? It is supported.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Parliamentary inquiry. Will we vote on the first clause under consideration?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question will be put separately, Mr. Danhof. In order to avoid repetition, the Chair thought we might get a little more of the committee present. The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Radka, which has been divided. The secretary will read the portion of the Radka amendment first to be voted upon.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment, as now divided, will be as follows:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "districts" by striking out the comma and "or combine the office of probate judge with any judicial office inferior thereto in any county with less than 25,000 population with supplemental salary as provided by law,".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, on this part, the committee feels that this would be a step forward. It would again give the legislature a great deal more leeway in this particular field. We would urge, very strongly, that this part of the amendment be defeated.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Those who are in favor of the — Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: With respect to this portion of the amendment, since I didn't vote with the committee on this, it might appear that we are going against them, but with respect to this particular portion of it, I wish to support the amendment. I think that we have been persuaded, some of us, by the arguments made by people like Mr. Radka. There is one other, and that is that it occurred to some of us in looking at this that we are vitiating, in part, a concept that we adopted this morning, that juveniles should not be lumped together with adult criminals, and it now appears that in one part of the section we are saying they shouldn't and then in another part we are saying in counties of under 25,000, you can lump them together if you want to. It doesn't seem to be consistent, and for this reason I support the present part of the Radka amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the portion of the Radka amendment which has been read by the secretary dealing with combining the office of probate judge with judicial offices inferior thereto in counties with less than 25,000 population. Those in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of this portion of the amendment, the yeas are 51; the nays are 47.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is adopted. The question is now upon the second portion of the Radka amendment, which the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: The last part of the Radka amendment is:

1. Amend page 1, line 10, by striking out "and shall do so on recommendation and report of the supreme court".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: On this portion of the Radka amendment, the Chair will recognize Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I am not going to spend a long time on this particular area. As you well know, I had some comments on this whole question yesterday regarding whether the supreme court should be able to force the legislature to make decisions regarding the court system and the court setup. I understand, of course, that the committee of the whole has now struck out much of this section and, of course, to be totally consistent, probably should strike out the second section just to be consistent. However, I do know something about striking out a section in the committee of the whole and having it not sustained when it reaches the floor of the convention, so I am going to make a few comments which otherwise would not be necessary.

The particular section which includes the provision that the supreme court may make recommendations, and that upon their recommendation, the legislature shall carry out their mandate, in this particular section, this particular proposal is a little different than the prior proposal, Committee Proposal 93. Committee Proposal 93, when the supreme court was given power to tell the legislature what to do, they were telling the legislature what to do in regard to the setting up of their judicial circuits. This might be construed to be a function of the administrator of the supreme court. I did not agree with this, but I can understand how this might be construed. However, this particular proposal goes much further than Committee Proposal 93, because this proposal gives the power to the supreme court to tell the legislature how much money it is to spend. It says that they may provide for supplemental salary as provided by law. In other words, it is giving the supreme court the power to tell the legislature what to do in the setting of certain salaries, additional supplemental salaries. In addition, as has been pointed out by Mr. Radka, this committee proposal—

MR. HIGGS: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Excuse me, Mr. Boothby, Mr. Higgs makes a point of order. Would you state your point, Mr. Higgs?

MR. HIGGS: It is my understanding this portion was stricken that Mr. Boothby is talking about. It never did provide for the supreme court setting salaries, but I believe it has been stricken.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair believes your point is well made, Mr. Higgs. Would you confine yourself to the remaining portion of the amendment, Mr. Boothby?

MR. BOOTHBY: Very well. The reason for my comment was because I had an experience yesterday. I would like to direct a couple of questions, at this time, just to clarify my own particular thinking. Mr. Higgs, I believe, a few minutes ago made some comment in reference to this particular provision of the amendment, to the latter portion which provides that "and shall do so on recommendation and report of the supreme court." As I understood Mr. Higgs, he said that he had no real objection to having this part of the section removed. I am wondering if he would clarify his position on that?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Yes. I am speaking personally and, of course, I cannot speak in behalf of the committee, but I did say that. That is a personal thing. I don't feel that is necessary.

MR. BOOTHBY: I would also like to direct a question to Mr. Everett, because he has spoken on this judicial section a great deal, and I respect his thinking. I am wondering whether he has any real objection to having this latter provision stricken from the committee proposal?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Boothby, I felt when the part which has just been taken out was still in, that probably we would be wrong in leaving this to the supreme court. I would say, now it is somewhat academic. I would certainly not object if it were taken out. Again, I am expressing a personal opinion. I am not speaking for the committee. I certainly wouldn't object to its being taken out. I would say that if we had left the other part in, it might be preferable to take it out.

MR. BOOTHBY: Thank you very much. I am moved by the comments of these members of the judicial committee. I, personally, have felt that the supreme court should not be empowered to tell the legislature what to do. I am now particularly impressed that this provision should not be left in the constitution because these very highly regarded members of the judicial committee also have indicated that they have no particular objection to having it removed, and I would then ask that the committee of the whole concur and vote to remove this provision from the committee proposal, and vote yes on the latter portion of the Radka amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the remaining portion of the Radka amendment, to strike the words, "and shall do so on recommendation and report of the supreme court". Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, by reason of the action of the committee of the whole, the matter now reads, "The legislature may combine 1 or more counties into probate districts and shall do so on recommendation and report of the supreme court".

Now, we went all through this yesterday, and I agree with Mr. Boothby, there is no use taking a great deal of time. When I looked at the last vote which we took, between the reds and the greens and the blacks, why, it looked to me like the blacks were ahead. Again, we have gone through this. It is as Dr. Norris has pointed out, the reason why we did it. The middle section has been removed. I think now it is exactly as we have it with the circuits, when we talked about altering or creating or increasing the number of districts, there is no particular difference. I would urge the defeat of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the final portion of the Radka amendment. Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I don't want to belabor this point. I am somewhat embarrassed, because I didn't think that the middle part was going to disappear, and now that the middle part has disappeared, my remarks concerning the latter part don't seem nearly so important. So, I am not going to take a position one way or another. I merely want to explain how I got in this awkward situation and I trust that if and when the committee rises, with regard to this section, and if and when there is a full committee here, that probably the second part will be back in, at which time I can oppose the third part.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the final portion of the Radka amendment. Mr. Heideman.

MR. HEIDEMAN: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, yesterday I spoke on this question of "shall" and "may", and several days before on the same subject. I think that the "shall" here was as pertinent yesterday with respect to giving the supreme court this power, in that the interpreting of the law is a judicial function and the creation of courts is a legislative function, and we were creating, hereby, a supreme legislative body out of the supreme court.

The federal constitution clearly says the legislative power shall, and the executive power shall, and the judicial power shall be vested in, and then goes off to "may", on the permissive; from the mandatory "shall" to the permissive "may". In addition to that language, a very careful distinction also is made between shall and may in the federal constitution. I went through the judicial article, article V of the model state constitution of the national municipal league. In the judiciary article, I counted 26 shalls and 15 mays, used very carefully and very advisedly.

Delegate Boothby and I both had submitted an amendment to the same effect, to strike this last part of the language, which reads "and shall do so on recommendation and report of the supreme court". So, I support the amendment in this regard.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, just a brief question. I would like to ask the chairman of the committee if it was the intent of the committee that this last phrase, "and shall do so on recommendation and report of the supreme court", was meant to apply to the first phrase, "The legislature may combine 1 or more counties into probate districts", or just specifically what was it meant to refer to?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. King, after 5 days, I am not sure what we all referred to, and I will state that it was my intention that it referred to this as it now applies, yes, the same as to creating, altering or changing circuits, that there would be a possible study and that we meant it in the same direction as we would for creating new circuits out of old circuits, by splitting them; the same deal would prevail, the same thinking. We were consistent, at least we tried to be, from the circuit court down to probate court.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the final portion of the Radka amendment. Is there any delegate who desires to have it read further? Those in favor of the Radka amendment will vote aye, and those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of this part of the amendment, the yeas are 61, the nays are 35.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is adopted. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, we have completed this section. There are more amendments. I looked at the last vote and it got down to 90 something, I think it totaled.

I move the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof moves that the committee do now rise. The question is on the motion of Mr. Danhof that the committee now rise. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The committee will rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, Vice President Hutchinson resumed the Chair.]

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes the delegate from Oakland, Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration one proposal of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 94, A proposal pertaining to the probate court; has adopted an amendment thereto; and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Any further announcements?

SECRETARY CHASE: Yes, Mr. President. Will the delegates please leave your bound volume of journals here over the weekend if at all possible, so that the staff may divide them and put the larger portion of them in some permanent binders and leave your ringbook binders to be added to from day to day.

We have the following requests for leave of absence: Mr. Farnsworth wishes to be excused from the session of Monday; Mr. Tubbs, from the afternoon session of Monday; Mr. Spitler, from Monday's session; and Mr. Donald Doty wishes to be excused from the sessions of March 6 and 7.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, the several requests will be granted. The Chair hears no objection and it is so ordered.

MR. SNYDER: Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Delegate Snyder.

MR. SNYDER: I believe I filed a request with Mr. Chase for an excuse for Monday also.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Snyder requests excuse from Monday's session.

SECRETARY CHASE: I think we took care of that this morning, Mr. Snyder. I am not sure, but we will make sure.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, it will be so ordered. It is granted.

What is the pleasure of the convention? The Chair recognizes the lady from Wayne, Miss McGowan.

MISS McGOWAN: Mr. President, I move that the convention now stand adjourned.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the motion to adjourn. All those in favor will say aye; opposed will say no.

The motion prevails and the convention stands adjourned until Monday next at 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon.

[Whereupon, at 3:50 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 4:00 o'clock p.m., Monday, March 5, 1962.]

NINETY-SECOND DAY

Monday, March 5, 1962, 4:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation today will be given by one of our own delegates, Allen Rush of Macomb county. Will you please rise.

MR. RUSH: Let us pray. Our heavenly Father, we recognize Thee as the giver of all good and worthwhile gifts, the Father of all mankind, and the Author of life, liberty and justice.

As we reconvene this afternoon to try to solve the many problems that confront us, may we put aside our selfish desires and realize the need for Thy divine guidance. Help us to discern the truth, to refrain from being misled by popular slogans, to be able to judge the facts and above all, to seek Thy help.

We thank Thee for the heritage that is ours, for the sacrifices and vision of our forefathers. May we be equal to the task that has fallen to us—to preserve and pass on to posterity the many blessings that we have enjoyed. Give us strength, courage and wisdom to meet this challenge. These things we ask, our Father, in the name of our Savior and Redeemer, Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary.

May I call your attention to the fact that last Friday when the roll call was taken there were 15 delegates present who did not indicate they were present. This is rather difficult for the secretary and his staff. So if you are in your seats, or when you come in, will you please register yourself present. Thank you.

A resolution for continuing and increasing fellowship and understanding among the constitutional convention delegates.

Whereas, The constitutional convention has been immeasurably enriched in its morale and effectiveness by the close association and fellowship of the delegates throughout the work of the substantive committees of the convention; and

Whereas, Said committees, with one exception, have now substantially completed their work; and

Whereas, In the unanimous opinion of the delegates it is good that such association and fellowship be continued; now therefore be it

Resolved, That the president of the convention create or direct an appropriate committee to devise ways and means by which the convention delegates may, from time to time and without public expense, be drawn together in congeniality and friendship; and be it further

Resolved, That the purpose of such get togethers be for the sole purpose of enriching and deepening common understanding, mutual respect and fellowship, toward the creation of a noteworthy document.]

R. C. Van Dusen, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the substitute. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, this resolution was introduced some time ago by Father Dade. The committee on rules and resolutions appointed a subcommittee to consider it and redraft it. We felt that through implementing it by some appropriate committee, to be either appointed by the president or to be referred to by the president, the resolution had merit and we urge the adoption of the substitute and the adoption of the resolution as so substituted.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the substitute resolution as submitted. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The substitute is adopted.

The question is now on the adoption of the resolution, as substituted. Those in favor will say aye; opposed, no.

Resolution 57, as substituted, is adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on rules and resolutions, by Mr. Van Dusen, chairman, reports back to the convention Resolution 72, A resolution amending rule 57 of the rules of the convention; without amendment, and with the recommendation that the resolution be adopted.

R. C. Van Dusen, chairman.

For Resolution 72 as offered, see above, page 1067.

PRESIDENT NISBET: According to the rules, this will lie over for 2 days.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the standing committee reports at this time, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: No resolutions on file.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, while there are no resolutions on file, the rules committee authorized me, as its chairman, at its meeting last Friday to move, and I move at this time, that Resolution 45, A resolution to provide a schedule for completing the work of the convention by March 31, 1962; as amended by Resolution 75, be amended by deferring each of the remaining dates for 2 weeks. This would simply put over the deadline for the completion of the work of the committee of the whole until March 21 and each of the succeeding dates would similarly be postponed for a period of 2 weeks. The action of the committee was substantially unanimous — I believe there was one dissenting vote — and I urge the adoption of the motion at this time.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

Following is Resolution 45 as amended:

A resolution to provide a schedule for completing the work of the convention by April 14, 1962.

Resolved, That:

1. All public hearings by substantive committees shall be completed on or before December 21, 1961, unless otherwise authorized by the convention. This shall not preclude a committee from hearing witnesses invited by the committee.

2. All substantive committee hearings on delegate proposals shall be completed on or before January 5, 1962.

3. All substantive committee proposals and supporting reports shall be submitted to the convention and placed on general orders in accordance with rule 57, paragraph 2, on or before January 31, 1962.

4. The committee of the whole shall complete its consideration of all committee proposals and make its reports in accordance with rule 57, paragraph 4, on or before March 21, 1962.

5. The committee on style and drafting shall complete its consideration of all committee proposals and make its reports in accordance with rule 57, paragraph 5, on or before March 23, 1962.

6. Second reading of all committee proposals shall be completed on or before March 30, 1962.

7. The final report of the committee on style and drafting shall be made in accordance with rule 57, paragraph 8, on or before April 6, 1962.

8. The convention shall finally adjourn on or before April 14, 1962.

MRS. HATCHER: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mrs. Hatcher.

MRS. HATCHER: I suppose it's too late to ask a question as to the purpose and perhaps the finality of extending the convention date from 2 weeks to 2 weeks. I would like to, if possible, ask for a point of special privilege at this time.

PRESIDENT NISBET: You may ask the question.

MRS. HATCHER: I'd like to ask Mr. Van Dusen if this means that the 2 weeks that the committee has extended, does that mean that this is a deadline? My purpose for asking this is that I am sure that I, as many other delegates, would like to plan future schedules, and I would like to have some idea whether or not we can assume that this will be the final date or will we be continuing to extend the convention 2 weeks at a time.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen, do you care to answer or can you answer? (laughter)

MR. VAN DUSEN: The gentleman wishes he knew the answer. Mr. President, obviously, the rules committee hopes that these dates may be met by the convention. We don't regard them as hard and fast. We feel that the experience of the convention thus far is such that any dates established are somewhat unpredictable. I think, however, that if the work of the committee of the whole can be completed within a period between now and March 21, there is reasonable likelihood that the remainder of the dates can be met. We are hopeful, but we can't promise, Mrs. Hatcher.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. President, could I ask Mr. Van Dusen whether he is adjusting the ruling of the attorney general so that the convention can take some appropriate action on a different date?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Unfortunately, Mr. President, Dr. Pollock, that is not within the province of the rules committee.

MR. POLLOCK: I understood that the president had asked the chairman of the rules committee to consider ways and means if we did not meet the original deadline. Am I not correct about that?

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President and Dr. Pollock, the rules committee has that matter under consideration. At our last meeting we agreed to devote a substantial portion of a succeeding meeting to the study of that particular point.

MR. POLLOCK: There is no reason to think that it is a hopeless task, is there? (laughter)

MR. VAN DUSEN: I do not know the answer to that, Dr. Pollock. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: In the light of that comment and before we go into general orders, I happened to read something this week. I don't think it applies — I'm sure it doesn't apply to anybody here — but it might have application. This is what I happened to read, "It is my understanding that for those who speak by the yard and think by the inch there is a ceremonious treatment by the foot." (laughter) With that start for the week, the Chair recognizes Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, before we get to general orders of the day, may I move that the order of second reading be passed for the week.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen that the order of second reading be passed for the week. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Now, Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering matters on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, Mr. Van Dusen assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The committee will be in order.

When the committee last met we had under consideration Committee Proposal 94, A proposal pertaining to the probate court. Certain amendments have been adopted to section a of Committee Proposal 94 and the secretary will read at this point section a as it currently stands after the amendments which have thus far been adopted by the committee of the whole.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 94, see above, page 1417.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section a, as amended, now reads as follows:

In each county organized for judicial purposes, there shall be a probate court. The legislature may combine 1 or more counties into probate districts, ...

Then going down to line 11:

The jurisdiction, powers and duties of such courts and of the judges thereof shall be prescribed by law. They shall also have original jurisdiction in all cases of juvenile delinquents and dependents.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there further amendments to section a of Committee Proposal 94?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon offers the following amendment—

MR. MAHINSKE: Point of information, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Mahinske, state your point.

MR. MAHINSKE: I notice in the journal which we just received, on page 697 we had the Leppien amendment, which was adopted, as I understand it—

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Leppien amendment was not adopted, Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I thought the motion prevailed here. Oh, I see here. So the Leppien amendment was not adopted?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Leppien amendment was not adopted.

MR. MAHINSKE: So we still have in the article here that there can be combining of counties and probate districts?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: That is correct. Mr. Secretary, will you proceed to read the next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon has offered the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 14, after "dependents" by inserting "except that juveniles shall not be tried in court as adults".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon. Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, this was Father Dade's amendment. He was unable to be here today and he asked that I offer it for him. I will read the remarks which he prepared toward this effect.

On Thursday when this matter was under thorough discussion, we asked a question of Delegate Ford. We hoped, in the interest of working out a knotty problem, he would be most helpful. His answer was neither informing, nor illuminating, but full of confutation.

This amendment seeks to put in the constitution in simple language the safeguarding of a basic right for the youthful offender. The complexion of our courts may change. However, human weakness and frailty of human nature will ever be realities of human existence.

In our accelerated society of today we may come to a time when the sympathetic and skillful understanding of the juvenile may be dulled. I feel it is fundamental for the growth of the kind of world we want to live in, that our provision should be absolute in the law of our state.

I urge support of this amendment. It is my opinion that these amended words express the consensus of feeling in the hearts and minds of so many delegates on last Thursday. Sincerely, Malcolm G. Dade.

That will be all the comments that I have to make. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I think this amendment was more apropos at the time that we had the original committee proposal before us. I am not sure at this time particularly what it adds, if anything. I think that we have a matter here which does not define any particular restriction. The legislature has provided for the method by which juveniles shall be handled within the probate court. It sets up the procedure and method. I think that this particular matter is a legislative matter and is something that we should not write into the constitution tied in particular to the probate court section. Perhaps if there is to be such a section it should be handled within the civil rights section, as Dr. Nord pointed out when we discussed this particular matter on either Thursday or Friday. Accordingly, for that reason and for the reason that it is a legislative matter, I would urge the defeat of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment quite similar to this on the secretary's desk but I will speak on this amendment and I will speak in favor of it because it is similar.

Now, the argument that this is statutory perhaps has some weight except that all of the discussion on the previous battle of leaving jurisdiction within the probate court seemed to hinge on the fact that most of the delegates felt we should not allow children while they are juveniles to be taken into criminal adversary proceedings to be tried. Now, if this is a prevailing thought, some language similar to this is necessary to plug the gap or the hole in this thinking. At the present time, children between the ages of 15 and 17 may be waived. While the probate court has original jurisdiction, they may be waived on motion of the prosecutor, and if accepted by the probate court, waived to a court of criminal jurisdiction, namely, the circuit court or in Detroit, the recorder's court, and tried as adults. If you want to prevent this, it would seem from the discussion that was had the other day that this would be the way to do it. It is no more statutory in nature, I submit, than the whole article placing the jurisdiction of juveniles in the probate court. And it seems to me that the great sentiment on the floor was to keep this because I think everyone feels that this is the type of court, the non-adversary proceedings, where juveniles should be tried. And until or unless we have language to this effect, I believe that we will run the risk of trying children as they are presently being tried in courts of criminal jurisdiction.

This amendment, I think, has one fault in it, and that is that it sets no age limit, so it would be easy for the legislature if it was of a mind, to lower the age of what is considered a juvenile to a point that will still allow juveniles to be taken into courts of criminal jurisdiction. Both Judge Gadola and I are cosponsoring an amendment to take care of this. But I will have to stand and rise in support of this amendment at the present time.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon. Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, if it is the intention of this amendment to prevent the present rule of law which prevails in permitting the probate court to waive jurisdiction when it sees fit, I certainly would oppose it. I see no reason why under the present circumstances, with severe crimes being committed in this state by juveniles, it should not be possible if in the opinion of the probate judge he thinks it desirable to waive them to the court of criminal jurisdiction. This applies, of course, only as provided by law by the legislature to juveniles of certain ages. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon. Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: I think the problem Mr. Stevens is speaking to, Mr. Chairman, is one that we are trying to prevent. It seems that when you have a particular heinous crime, or one that arouses public emotion, it is plain this is when you get the waiver of the juvenile and the pressure upon the probate court. And I would feel probably that the pressure would probably be stronger outstate than our own juvenile setup, where we've got a special court for it. But this is the very reason that many of us feel something of this nature is needed. Otherwise, when the public pressure builds up, they are waived, and it isn't the particular crime that makes the difference. If a person is a juvenile, I think we have come to the point of history and time where we feel that he should be treated in a different manner. And I submit that one problem you run into if you don't treat him in a different manner, if you get him in a jury trial in a court of criminal jurisdiction and you have a 15 or 16 year old on the stand—I think many attorneys have had the experience that a jury is very reluctant to do anything to convict a child of that age in a criminal court — and as a result, chances are many times the child will be acquitted, will have no type of training or any type of custody over him when very well he might need some real help and that type of help that he might get through the probate court and through a juvenile court.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I'd like to ask for a reading of this.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Will the secretary please read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment is:

MR. MAHINSKE: I'd like to ask the proponents of this amendment a question through the Chair, if they care to answer it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If Mr. Faxon cares to answer it. Mr. Faxon is not here to answer.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, without giving him his day in court under his own amendment here, I'll have to state that I would be opposed to this because this is a flat mandatory prohibition against waivers of any type. Frankly, I don't believe that is what —

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Faxon has rejoined us, Mr. Mahinske, if you now wish to —

MR. MAHINSKE: I see that Mr. Faxon is back here. I would like to ask if it is your intent to constitutionally prohibit waivers?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I am not an expert in this. I don't believe this would do so. I think it leaves to the legislature some degree of latitude with regard to the interpretation of the word "juvenile". I don't think it would prevent waivers as such. Now, I am not an expert on it and I would invite those who are more familiar with this, to comment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: It may be helpful, Mr. Mahinske, if you will pardon the Chair; there are 3 amendments pending dealing with this subject, of which the Chair believes you have notice of only 1, or perhaps 2, and will ask the secretary at this point to read, in addition to the Faxon amendment, the amendment offered by Judge Gadola, Mrs. Cushman and Mr. Hodges, and the amendment offered by Mr. Staiger, simply for the information of the delegates. Mr. Staiger has withheld his amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Gadola, Mrs. Cushman and Mr. Hodges have filed this amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 14, after "dependents.", by inserting "Jurisdiction shall be original and shall not be waived for juveniles 17 and under, and such age may be increased as provided by law.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Now, Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, I would say that that amendment does exactly what this amendment does. We have our juveniles defined under the statute today as 17. There are areas where I feel that waivers have been justifiably made and should have been made and that there will probably be in the future other waivers made. For these reasons I would oppose this amendment and any proposed amendment that would exclude, constitutionally at least, waivers of, if you want to call them children, or juveniles between 15 and 17 because basically on the fact situations, these people are not juveniles. Primarily they are juveniles chronologically, not otherwise. Socially these are not juveniles that are being waived.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, I should like to direct a question to Mr. Danhof, if he would answer it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. YEAGER: We refer in the constitution in this particular article a number of times to the term "juvenile". Is the term "juvenile" defined any place in the constitution and should it be? I understand that the word "juvenile" is defined by statute. Does this place the legislature in the position of giving definition to the constitution?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: It has not been defined in the 1908 constitution and I know of no definition within this constitution except perhaps what might come out of the declaration of rights, suffrage and elections as it relates to qualifications of voting. By statute, you are correct. Basically what constitutes a juvenile or what constitutes a delinquent and what constitutes a dependent has been left to the legislature within bounds, I would imagine. Now, they have determined that at age 17 a person charged with a crime will be tried the same as one 25. Below 17, they have set the fact that he will be tried in the probate court, except as has been pointed out, there may be waiver, which there has been to the age of 15. There is no definition of a juvenile nor is there a definition of a delinquent, for that matter, or the definition of a dependent, Mr. Yeager, to my knowledge.

MR. YEAGER: Isn't it true, though, that in the amendment on Friday, I believe, we struck the words "as provided by law?" Therefore, I raise the point that perhaps, technically speaking, we have no way really of defining what a juvenile is, since you have taken away the right of such definition by the legislature. Is this —

MR. DANHOF: No, because now it is exactly as it was in 1908, and they have passed a statute under the 1908 constitution making these classifications, Mr. Yeager. The exception, as otherwise provided by law, related to the jurisdictional aspect also, but if you are quiet in the constitution and if words need to be defined, they only get defined in 2 ways: either by the court when they come up for a case or by statute passed pursuant hereunder. In this particular case there have been statutes passed pursuant to this particular section.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, this amendment is an example of the problem you run into when you think in good conscience you are trying to solve a problem which is fairly technical. I would oppose this amendment.

First of all, you heard a discussion with regard to juveniles and as to what is intended by that, but most important of which is the waiver from juvenile court to circuit court. This is not done in all cases because of the fact that you want to treat the juvenile more harshly. It may be, as a matter of fact, that a juvenile is better tried in the circuit court than in the probate court. It may be, for instance, that there are psychiatric services and treatment available in circuit court that are not available in the probate court. You must recognize that in many parts of the state we have courts that have no services immediately available to them. Also, the juvenile does not have in a probate court trial the same constitutional rights that he has in the circuit court, and in matters of a very serious crime it may be to the best interests of the juvenile that he be tried in the adult criminal court.

I think this should best be left to the legislature. It has been handling this problem very nicely. There have been cases where there have been extensions of what is meant by juveniles from 17 to 18 in recent years.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Garvin.

MR. GARVIN: Part of my question has been answered since the amendment was placed on the wall here. However, I wanted to state that since that other has been deleted, it seems to me that the statute is in a condition that it would work admirably under the present circumstances.

I might state here since there has been question of what the age of a juvenile is, that it is statutory for a juvenile. The juvenile doesn't necessarily mean a minor. A minor is one thing, under 21 years, and a juvenile is defined by the statute. Now, if we leave it as it is, since "except as otherwise provided by law" has been eliminated, I believe the courts can proceed to try juveniles as they have been tried. I was interested in Mr. Higgs' comment. I heard him mention Judge Baird quite a bit over the past few months, a probate judge, and it was interesting that Judge Baird tries his cases separately, as Mr. Higgs says, involving juveniles. I checked on attorneys that live in other jurisdictions, and find out that is true too. I find out that Judge Conlin in Washtenaw county tries his separately, in a different room entirely. I submit that that is because the statute reads as it did in 1908 without the exception, "except as provided by law".

I am submitting these additional matters, although we have been over them, to reemphasize the importance of leaving the last sentence as it is, "They shall also have original jurisdiction in all cases of juvenile delinquents and dependents." Period. And I submit to you that after some experience with dependents and juveniles, that that would be the best thing for the child and the parents and for the state of Michigan. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford, do you still seek recognition?

MR. FORD: No.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon, which the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon's amendment:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Those in favor of the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to section a?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Gadola, Mrs. Cushman and Mr. Hodges offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 14, after "dependents.". by inserting "Jurisdiction shall be original and shall not be waived for juveniles 17 and under, and such age may be increased as provided by law.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, I made my initial remarks on the other amendment which would be the same as on this one. At this time I would yield to Judge Gadola for additional remarks.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Gadola.

MR. GADOLA: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I will try to be as brief as possible because after the explanation of the lineal rules this morning, I don't want to solicit the footwork that was described.

This amendment in no way is intended to reflect upon probate courts or probate procedure. We all recognize that there is a great difference in our courts because of population area and the setup of the courts. In our metropolitan areas we have extremely fine probate procedures with adult groups of probation officers, which they do not have in the sparsely settled communities. Something has been said here relative to the mental equation that the sparsely settled communities do not have. But they do have it. Any time that a prosecutor believes that any boy or anyone else is a mental case, he may file in the probate court to test that mental capacity, and that would be the fine thing to do.

The reason for advocating this amendment that I have had is this: after years and years of experience with waivers from probate court, I have always thought that there were too many waivers of these boys at 16. I say boys because in all of my experience I have had but 2 girls, and so it's all boys under this waiver provision. Now, the reason for this is this — you know, we'll first look into the reasons why the amendment shouldn't be given — they say, "Well, if some juvenile commits some extremely atrocious crime, he should be waived to circuit court." Well, perhaps that's true; but remember, that atrocious crime is the exception, oh, grossly the exception. And what happens to all the rest of these juveniles that have not committed atrocious crimes, such as stealing automobiles and other things? In a great many jurisdictions the prosecutor loves a conviction; and I am not criticizing the prosecutor for that. And the police officer loves a conviction; and I am not criticizing him for that.

But I do say this: we are attempting to protect not only youths, but the adult. That youth is going to become an adult sometime. One of the greatest examples that I ever had of that was when a man was summoned for jury duty and on the examination, as we always do, we ask the jurors if any of them have ever been arrested or convicted of a crime. They all said no. After the examination was over, this man came into my office and he said, "Judge, I want to be excused from jury service." And he said, "I'll tell you why. I'll honestly tell you why. I lied in there in the courtroom," he said, "for this reason. As a boy, I stole an automobile. I was convicted. I was punished." He said, "For years I've lived here in the city of Flint." He was a southerner — it was in the south. He said, "I've lived here in the city of Flint. I've raised my family. My children are going to school here. I am a business man here. I am a member of the church, carrying out the work," he said, "and am I going to be damned now after all these years? Because I know the question will be asked over and over again if I'm selected for jury service in any case." I said, "No." I said, "As a juvenile you should have been protected more than you were. Instead of being branded as a felon, something else should have been done with you. You are excused from jury service." That was one opportunity I had to correct something that shouldn't have needed correction.

I've had any number of these boys 16 brought before me that I didn't want before me at all, but I had nothing to do about it. They were waived from probate court. What could I do? I put them on probation. That didn't mean anything. Very few of them violated their probation but that stamp of a felon was upon them. And later on if they sought a position, they required a bond. What happened? Every bonding company and every man here that has ever had anything to do with bonding companies knows that the first question that is asked is, "Have you ever been convicted of a crime?" And they don't ask what the crime is or how old you were or anything about it. If you've been convicted of a crime, you're a poor risk and out you go.

That's why I want you to increase this age just 1 year, just 1 year. That's all that I ask by this amendment, that you increase it 1 year. They can waive now for that 1 year but at the end of that year they can be charged as an adult anyway. And what are we doing here? Are we paying any attention to what a juvenile is? We are making a juvenile an adult in criminal matters when he is 16. You can make him an adult in criminal matters at 16. But in every other activity of life he can't be an adult until he is 21 — with certain exceptions, of course. Nevertheless, we don't allow him to vote. We don't allow him to enter into contracts. We consider him as a child up until he is 21 really, but in criminal matters he is an adult at 16. And I say let's keep him in juvenile court. It can be handled. Later on, no matter what they say, all these atrocious crimes, he may be a repeater and all these things. If he is, he'll be back, and after 16 he'll be handled. If we had any place to keep him, if we had any place to help him as a juvenile, after we have had him in circuit court, it would be fine. But we have no place.

There was established a few years ago under the name of one of the delegates here, the Pugsley camp, where we sent some of the juveniles — they were not juveniles; they were youngsters — and they were sent to that camp for correction. But they were convicted of a felony. They are felons. Remember that. So let's think that over. Protect them.

I'm sorry I took as much time as I did. But let me appeal to you — everybody but Ann here because she says she's not going to have any grandchildren (laughter) — let's appeal to you as fathers, mothers, grandmothers and grandfathers — let's at least protect them for 1 more year.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hodges, the Chair believes you retained the floor. Do you wish to yield at this time?

MR. HODGES: No.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, could I have that amendment read again? I am not sure I understood it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment is:

MR. KING: Thank you. Despite what was said by the learned Judge Gadola, I am afraid that I would have to be opposed to this sort of an amendment. The idea of extending the age 1 year, which is what Judge Gadola mentioned, I think is very commendable. But we are also taking away the right to waive jurisdiction. I think this is a problem we are bound to get into when we try to draft details into this section. I frankly favor it the way it came out of committee.

> It is fast developing into a complete system of fascism, as dangerous to our institutions as communism. Our youth are jailed, bailed, granted or denied rights on the mere order of probation officers, sheriffs and other executive officers. Laws and regulations are not made by legislation or settled law but by those in control . . . This theory of divorcing the home from the direct control of the parents as to discipline sets a dangerous precedent. It centers the function of fatherhood and motherhood in the state and in principle is socialistic . . . .

Now obviously, this is a very severe criticism of the juvenile system in this country and I don't think it's wise. I do think that there are cases, many cases, where 15, 16 and 17 year olders ought to be tried in a circuit court, and I view some of the remarks as being criticisms of the circuit court. These men have hearts too, the circuit judges, and they can be trusted. There may be zealous prosecutors and zealous police officers, but there are also zealous men on the circuit bench of the state of Michigan. And sometimes this works to the disadvantage of the youthful offenders. Let me quote again from this article:

> Many critics fear that the juvenile court will become a form of star chamber with little to restrain the judge but his own common sense. The Michigan code has been designed to meet this objection. However, there is no public trial, rules of evidence are not required to be rigidly followed, an oath may be given but is not required, and self incrimination and confrontation [of witnesses] are matters not specifically covered.
> There are certain procedural safeguards that could surely be practiced without presenting any conflict between the dual goals of rehabilitation and protection of the individual against arbitrary state action. The juvenile court would not suffer if better stenographic records were kept, the statutes were more precise in establishing jurisdictional standards, the referees were trained in the law, and more protection were given in the matter of detention before trial without an arrest warrant or hearing. Indeed, correction of these faults would do much to assuage the critic's attack upon those lax procedures which court officials deem essential to the system.

And I think we've seen in the last few days on the front pages of the newspapers just how this can happen, how a youngster can be kept and confined, as far as I can see, completely unlawfully.

So I say to you that this is not the sort of thing that we ought to be writing into the constitution. Now, if this matter came up across the street in the legislature and they wanted to give this a trial run, treat everyone 17 years and younger as a juvenile, with no waiver possible, then perhaps I'd be inclined to vote for it over there. But I think we are tying our hands far too much. There are better systems. Quite frankly, I think a family court is one of those better systems. We have already decided never to let that happen in Michigan without constitutional reform, assuming this constitution passes. This, I think, is unfortunate. But we are going one step further and I think we ought to think very carefully before we take this kind of a step.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford, do you seek recognition at this time?

MR. FORD: A question to the proponents of the amendment. Do you mean by this that a person who has not yet reached his eighteenth birthday cannot be tried as an adult?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hodges? Mrs. Cushman? Judge Gadola?

MR. GADOLA: I will answer that. It's 17. This just moves it up from the present 16 to 17 and it doesn't go to 18. That is our intention, at least.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Well, of course, no waiver is necessary over 17 because one moment after the child becomes 17 he is treated as an adult and the waiver is not in consideration. But the way I read this language, it says juveniles 17 and under, which means to me that a person who is past his seventeenth birthday is 17, or it may be under his seventeenth birthday, and I would assume that the cumulative effect of this language is that we are talking about children under 18. I think the present statutory breaking point is the seventeenth birthday. What I am asking is whether this is just 2 ways of construing the language or whether they meant the eighteenth birthday.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Judge Gadola.

MR. GADOLA: I believe it was intended for the seventeenth birthday.

If I may, while I'm on the floor, make one more little remark. Remember that everything relative to this at the present time is by statute and peculiarly — and I've questioned this all the way through this provision here — nowhere in the constitution are they trying to state what a juvenile is. They're leaving it to the statute, and unless something is done, the legislature can make it any age it wants to. And in addition to that, remember that the handling of a juvenile is all statutory. It's pretty near a whole little book by itself as to what's got to be done with him as soon as he is arrested, and you know, it's really more marked by its disregard than by its regard. In other words, any police officer arrests a juvenile, he is supposed to immediately go and find his guardian or parents; he isn't even supposed to take him to question at all. They don't do that. They don't do that. He is taken in, questioned, confesses, and everything else before he has a chance to talk to his parents or guardian. The statute doesn't say that. In addition to that, he's not supposed to be incarcerated at all with adults. They throw him in the county jail or at police headquarters just the same. There's the question. Are we protecting the juvenile? That's all I'm looking for is protection of that juvenile.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I just sent to the library for the probate code. Apparently someone else has it out. I don't know if it's here on the floor or not. But it is my understanding of the probate code that the waivers of procedure were involving the ability of the child to defend himself, actually, and it doesn't relate to the time of the commission of the offense entirely but permits waiver after the child has reached 15 before he is 17, and this 15 is merely an age when they decide that before he is 15 he can't defend himself and after he is 15 he can, so they take a 14 year old and hold him until he is 15 and then file a petition. Is that right, Judge?

MR. GADOLA: No. The supreme court says you can't do that. They did do that, yes.

MR. FORD: It is my understanding this has been abused in some ways. The theory of this is very good. But I think Mr. King has raised a good point, and that is that some of us are a little bit leery about putting it at 17 because what our standard might be today might be different in the future. I don't know how long ago it was, but I know that Michigan has had at least 2 adjustments in the statutory rape age and perhaps this is an age that may be adjusted either up or down in the future, depending on our experience. It seems to me that it would be a matter better left to the legislature if we make it clear that we are not going to commingle the juveniles, however they are defined, with the adults.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, this particular idea, as far as I know, was never brought to our committee by anyone. I didn't hear anyone argue or contend for such a provision as this. Consequently, it is a little difficult to have to sit and do some thinking right here on the floor as to what the hazards involved are. I think Delegate King has brought out a few, in particular, and there are others.

I'd like to call your attention first to the fact that the legislature has actually extended the age in certain cases from 17 to 18 so that the probate court and the circuit court have concurrent jurisdiction over certain classifications of juveniles in that age bracket. There is no reason to believe that the legislature is going to go backward. Second, I think we've got to bear in mind, as Delegate King has brought out, the ideas in the current state bar journal. A juvenile may be better off in the circuit court than he is in probate. He has certain constitutional rights guaranteed to him in the circuit court that he does not have in the probate court. As a parent, I may prefer my child, if he were 16, to be tried in the circuit court because of that fact. There are other children who may at that age be better off tried in the circuit court. And you must bear in mind the proceedings in a probate court are summary in many situations and that once the jurisdiction has attached, the court actually becomes a part of your family. Now, in the circuit court you have a right to a public trial. You have the right to be confronted by the witnesses. The child has the right to an attorney to help him, which he does not have in the probate court. He has the right to bail. Delegate King has already pointed out some of the deficiencies — problems, I should say — with regard to the stenographic records, and other proceedings. Now, I don't mean to be critical of the probate court. We heard Delegate Habermehl point out the lack of facilities the probate courts have in some parts of our state, where they are working all alone, a 1 man court. Thirty-three of our probate judges are nonlawyers.

Like I say, it was not brought to the attention of the committee. No one came before our committee and proposed anything like this, and I think it is hazardous if we attempt to rigidly incorporate into our constitution a provision which would actually invalidate a whole body of statute law that I presume there is some basis and foundation for in experience.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Baginski.

MR. BAGINSKI: Mr. Chairman, delegates, let's break this down and let's see the picture clearly. If you take away from the probate court the waiver right, anyone picked up by the probate court charged with an atrocious crime, will have to be tried by the probate court or the juvenile section, and the probate judge there, if he finds the juvenile guilty, his choice then is to send the child to the boys vocational school or, if he finds that he is mentally ill, he has to send him to a mental hospital. In most of these cases, the children are mentally ill, mentally disturbed. Now what happens if a probate judge is forced to send this boy or girl who committed this atrocious crime to a mental hospital? That hospital in our area would be Northville. The child has to be placed in a dormitory with maybe 10 other boys and the 10 boys who are there are mentally ill and the reason they are mentally ill is they may be introverted, nonagressive — maybe just like vegetables — and you take this aggressive type of boy who is charged with murder or rape and you let him loose with these 10 other children who are mentally ill, and you are setting back the care, treatment and cure of these 10 mentally ill children a year or 2 because you permit this aggressive person to go into this dormitory.

Now, on Friday we mentioned the case of Johnny Smith. This morning I called Dr. Brown at Northville and he said he'd take Johnny Smith; but he said, "Baginski, we shouldn't take him in this hospital. He is going to do a terrific amount of damage. That boy should have been sent to the hospital for the criminal insane at Ionia." A probate judge is not permitted to commit to the hospital for the criminal insane at Ionia. That only can be done by the recorder's court or circuit court. Now, if you tie the hands of the courts by this amendment, remember the damage that you may be doing to the other children who are in mental hospitals and who can be cured but whose cure may be retarded because you put in one of these wild, aggressive type patients. I think this amendment should be defeated.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the purpose of those who offer this amendment is certainly for the best, but the fact of the matter is that this is a field where we are still feeling our way along; where we don't know whether 15 or 16 or 17 is the proper age to turn a boy over to the circuit court or not. We are still finding that out. It seems to me where you have a situation of this kind it is peculiarly a matter where you want flexibility and legislative discretion to act and adjust the situation according to what the best in psychiatry, the best in medicine, the best in criminal procedure shows ought to be done. For that reason, though it seems to me the purpose of the amendment is good, that it should be left to the discretion of the legislature and the amendment should not be adopted.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, Mr. Baginski has made a point on most of the things I wanted to talk about. Incarcerating these children, who are often hopeless, developed criminals, with other children, whether they are delinquents or of unsound mind is certainly an undesirable thing.

In addition, I would like to state that within my observation this happens only where it is an almost hopeless case where the juvenile has become a hardened criminal with many cases; he has been brought into the juvenile court to the youth bureau and other places many times before they go to this extent. Remember, he cannot be waived except by the juvenile judge or the probate judge acting in that capacity. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: This will be the last time I rise on this, Mr. Chairman. I just point out 2 things: one, to Mr. Higgs' comment about the type of proceedings that are conducted and about his children, I would submit — I am sure the records would show — that there are very few instances, indeed, where parents or counsel for the boy have waived or requested a boy to be waived into a criminal case. It is on the motion of the prosecutor that this is done. The other thing is, I had a talk with my own probate judge, who was of different mind than I was on this proposition, and he pointed out the problem they have outstate and that they have waivers outstate because they do not have the facilities to keep these boys or detain them anywhere. There is no regional detention, most of these small counties don't have facilities and they can't keep them in the county jail. I would submit that this would be more reason to adopt this type of thing. It seems to me that if this was adopted, then the legislature would have to clearly see its duty and things like Marty Baginski just pointed out couldn't happen; that there are needs. We do need additional facilities which we don't have at the present time. There is no answer. There should be maximum detention or places for these children that have committed serious crimes and are maybe mentally incompetent or insane. I think this might help rather than hinder getting these regional detention homes and maximum security places where juveniles of this age can get help rather than waive them out because you don't have the facilities, and waive them out to be sent to Jackson or to Ionia.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Gadola, Mrs. Cushman and Mr. Hodges. Does anybody desire to have the amendment read again? If not, those in favor will say aye; those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to section a of Committee Proposal 94?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Radka has offered the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "districts,", by inserting "upon approval of the electors of the counties being combined,"; so that the language in the second sentence will read, "The legislature may combine 1 or more counties into probate districts upon approval of the electors of the counties being combined."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Radka. Mr. Radka.

MR. RADKA: I see no reason to belabor the argument on this proposed amendment. We have heard the chairman of the committee, Mr. Danhof, explain the reason that they didn't allow the referendum provision. It was discussed in committee and rather than set forth that the districting must be approved by the voters or the electors of the counties or by another method such as a 2/3 vote of the board of supervisors for the purposes of flexibility, they left it up to the legislature. I offer this amendment, saying that I feel that if we are going to consolidate probate courts between counties, the people of the counties concerned should have the opportunity to determine the destiny of their own probate courts.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, if we were in the deliberative body that reposes across the street, I would think that Mr. Radka's remarks would be well taken and I might concur therein. And if we were setting up a mandatory or a self executing provision within this article and within this section, again, this might be the appropriate way to have a check thereon. However, as the matter now stands it is left solely to the legislature. The legislature may combine 1 or more counties into probate districts. This is left solely to its discretion. We are not even sure that it will be done, or as he himself states, he is not sure that it should be by election, by a referendum, by some vote of the governing board of the county, if it be the board of supervisors, or some other means or tribunal which is the governing body of a particular county. We are here leaving solely to the legislature when this will take place, under what circumstances it will take place, and the method by which it is to be accomplished.

The legislature has the power to create or alter circuit lines and it does it solely by law. I don't know whether the legislature would invoke that particular manner in regard to probate districts or not. But I do think that what we have here, again, is what we have had in the past 2 amendments, and is something which is better left to those who have more time to tend to the particular problem of the particular county than we had. We spent 4½ months on the entire court system. I think perhaps that a legislative committee may spend as much as 2 or 3 years studying this one particular aspect thereof.

I think that this is an unnecessary detail, something which will tie the hands of the legislature if it wants to set up a method of combining the particular counties, if it even agrees that in certain areas this is or is not feasible. Certainly, I think that it can best be the judge. I am sure that it is probably amenable to the wishes of the people and will be to the areas involved, being elected to that body every 2 years. I therefore feel that to put this restriction in would be unnecessary and would tie the hands of the legislature on something that is merely permissive and upon which it should have probably the greatest freedom that it can have to study the matter and then if it decides it should do it, to set up the method. The committee of the whole has removed the remainder of that particular sentence and I would therefore urge that the amendment be defeated in regard to the writing in of a mandatory referendum provision.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Radka.

MR. RADKA: I have nothing further to offer other than state there is a principle involved here and I ask for a division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Radka requests a division on the amendment. Is the demand supported? It is supported.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I would be inclined to agree with the chairman of the committee if he had any way of guaranteeing that the legislature would recognize this principle. As has been suggested here previously, at this time we do not know how the legislatures are going to be set up in the future. This would apply in most counties that even now have a very minimal representation in the legislature and there is no guarantee under those circumstances that the legislature will be willing to recognize that the people of the counties involved have a sufficient interest to entitle them to be consulted on it. I think the only safe way to handle this matter is to put the restriction in the constitution.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Sharpe.

MR. SHARPE: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to ask the chairman of the committee, Mr. Danhof, a question if he would care to answer it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may proceed, Mr. Sharpe.

MR. SHARPE: Mr. Danhof, do you say that you would object to the people having the privilege of recommending this merger of courts if they so desired?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I don't know the desires of the people but offhand, if that is the way that it would be set up, I would have no objection, Mr. Sharpe.

MR. SHARPE: In this event, why would you object to this amendment?

MR. DANHOF: I wouldn't object if you set it up for a vote of the board of supervisors either. I think that they would be amenable to the people and I think that perhaps there is a matter of cost and there is a matter of setting up the particular procedure. If the legislature would decide that it would be as well accomplished upon a majority or upon a 2/3 vote of the board of supervisors of the county involved, I would say that that would be a reasonable process. I just think that once you put this in, you are freezing in something which is not in here except if we were making this mandatory that all counties with less than 25,000 would be combined, or combinations thereof until you got to 25,000 or 20,000 shall be combined in the probate districts, then I would say that we should spell out the means by which there should be a check on this by the board of supervisors or by an election.

This is strictly a permissive matter and I think we are writing in unnecessary detail, the same as we would have written it into the home rule provision or anything else. We left that entirely and basically to the legislature. I think this is something we can just as well leave with and allow to its particular discretion what it may feel that is necessary. In counties of a certain size there should be a referendum and in counties of another size it should be handled by the boards of supervisors. I don't know. I don't have all of the details. I wouldn't have any objection to either one.

MR. SHARPE: You would have no objection to either one?

MR. DANHOF: Across the street, but not here.

MR. SHARPE: I see. Who do you think would be more capable of deciding whether or not their county should merge with another county than the people themselves?

MR. DANHOF: Again, now you are getting into a whole question of merger and annexation.

MR. SHARPE: Let's take the word "merge" out and put the word "combined" in then.

MR. DANHOF: Are you speaking of the people? If you have a special election, I would rather leave it to the boards of supervisors, Mr. Sharpe. With the return that you usually get in a special election, where you get 12, 14, 15, 20 per cent of the electorate, I would rather trust the governing body.

MR. SHARPE: Would you support an amendment, then, stating so?

MR. DANHOF: No, I will not because I think it is legislative detail.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I'd like to address a question to Mr. Radka, if I may. In your language, Mr. Radka, you say "upon approval of the electors of the counties being combined." In this instance do you mean upon approval of the electors of each of the counties being combined?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Radka.

MR. RADKA: This is correct.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Radka. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I think that one of the problems raised is the way the sentence in the committee proposal reads. It has been read, as I understand by conversation off the floor with some of the members, that the legislature itself would by statute say that county A and county B shall thereafter be combined, while I think most of us thought that what we were doing was saying that the legislature might do this but that probably it would provide a method whereby if 2 counties or 3 desire to do it, could do it. Whether it was by the electors or by the board of supervisors I don't think we got into. But perhaps without tying the legislature, we could do it by making it clear at the style and drafting level that what we intend is that the legislature will provide a procedure for this but not necessarily provide a self executing statute that says hereafter county A and county B are combined.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Radka. Does any delegate desire to have it read further? If not, a division having been ordered, those who are in favor of the amendment offered by Mr. Radka will vote aye. Those who are opposed will vote no. The question, Mr. Walker, is on the amendment offered by Mr. Radka. Has everyone voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Radka, the yeas are 50; the nays are 65.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to section a of Committee Proposal 94?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Higgs offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, by striking out all of lines 6 through 14. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Higgs, which would strike what remains in section a. Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, of course, I am not speaking for the committee. This particular amendment is to point out again the problems of legislative detail that we are writing into the constitution, since we are 1 of only 14 states that makes any provision whatsoever for the probate court. And this is where we get into trouble with all this legislative detail. Inasmuch as this particular section was designed to grant the maximum degree of flexibility possible to the legislature to handle the problem, and inasmuch as it is not yet in final form, I will withdraw the amendment at this time and see what it looks like when we get done with it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs withdraws his amendment. Are there further amendments to section a of Committee Proposal 94?

SECRETARY CHASE: That's all the amendments presently on file on the desk, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to ask the committee chairman a question. I had contemplated submitting an amendment which would have created a right to counsel on behalf of a juvenile or his parents. I have not submitted that. I just wondered what the thinking of the committee was with regard to that proposition and whether or not the proposition was at all discussed. I understand that most of the witnesses that have appeared before the committee were judges and I don't know whether or not this particular matter was given the kind of thought that I might have given it had I been on that committee.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: If I understand your question, it was whether we had discussed the idea of guaranteeing to juveniles the right to have counsel. Is that right? What do you mean, for the parents to have counsel or the right to have the parents there?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, the present statute reads, ". . . and in the event such child or his or her parents desire counsel and are unable to procure same, the court in its discretion may appoint counsel to represent the child." Now, first of all, there is the question of the desire being manifested by the juvenile or his parents that has to take place; and second, "the court in its discretion may." Now, that may suit most circumstances, but there is a serious question because, after all, if you are creating — as we do in this section — a constitutional right on the part of the juvenile to be tried in a juvenile court, you are also saying he has a constitutional right not to have constitutional rights because that's the way the courts have construed it. Now, should he have at least the right to counsel?

MR. DANHOF: The answer to the first part of your question — I'm not sure this was before my committee. Rather, it was before the committee on which you served as the second vice chairman, where you provided for the defendant in all criminal cases to have the right to have counsel. Perhaps the primary jurisdiction would lie there insofar as the committee assignments were concerned because it is a civil right, I would think, rather than a judicial right. Now, the matter had some discussion at the time that Judge Coleman came before our committee, wherein she pointed out — not in as much detail, but alluded to and touched on — the matters that Mr. King referred to regarding the proceedings in the probate court. And in response to some questions, it happened to be her personal procedure that in numerous juvenile proceedings, and more as time went on, she was appointing counsel since she felt that it was needed in a number of cases. She went on to state that this was one of the reasons why, in her opinion, it was necessary that the judge be a lawyer. She tied it more in with that line to make sure that the juvenile's constitutional rights and those civil rights that are perhaps guaranteed to all of us by the federal constitution were protected because even a juvenile would have some rights thereunder and it was tied more to that.

Now, the specific question — we did not write it in here because, to be very frank with you Mr. Norris, I don't think it has to do with a judicial selection or a court administrative problem, which was our basic problem. Now personally, I might agree with you that if we get back to the civil rights section on second reading or something, that this would be an appropriate thing to insert in that section relating to the right of the defendant to have counsel, to likewise include juveniles and their parents, or some appropriate language. But we did have some discussion — not detailed or a great deal of discussion, since we were more concerned with the type of court except for this one general jurisdictional grant to the circuit court — but we had some discussion on it along that line. From her comments and the comments of the committee, it was our opinion that in more juvenile cases there should probably be attorneys to protect the civil rights of the juveniles and of their parents before these particular proceedings. We did not discuss the possibility in great detail of writing it into this particular article.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mrs. Cushman, Miss McGowan, Messrs. Follo and Faxon offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "districts" by changing the period to a comma and reinserting "or combine the office of probate judge with any judicial office inferior thereto.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mrs. Cushman, Miss McGowan, Messrs. Follo and Faxon. Mrs. Cushman.

MRS. CUSHMAN: Our purpose in offering this amendment was simply to have the convention rule on this very definite idea of allowing the legislature, under whatever rule it would like to set up, and without the restrictions previously in this, to combine the office of probate judge with a judicial office inferior thereto. That is the purpose that we have. As you can see, it is a reinstatement of certain of the language, but without certain restrictions, allowing the utmost flexibility.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mrs. Cushman and others. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I don't believe that this amendment would change much of anything except to make it possible to change the name of the probate court because presently the legislature has no restriction on it against adding any powers it wants to the probate court. It can give it criminal jurisdiction; it can give it civil jurisdiction that it doesn't now have; it can give it almost any jurisdiction that it might choose. I know of no constitutional restrictions except that the circuit court has the original jurisdiction in common law matters not otherwise covered and so long as it wasn't in contravention of that, it could do this now. And all this section would do would be perhaps to make it possible to combine the probate court and thereby abolish it by creating a county court. If Mr. Higgs had put this in, I'd know that was what he was after. But I am surprised when I see Mrs. Cushman, because I don't think she is an advocate of the county court. That is exactly what this is leading up to and that is what this language would have been for when it was presented to our committee and rejected.

For that reason, I don't disagree with the principle of flexibility, but I think it is already there and I disagree with the amendment because it would permit something that I should hope they don't want to have happen.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Radka.

MR. RADKA: Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order. I question whether this proposed amendment is much different than the language that previously was included in section a and has been deleted by amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Radka, the Chair will rule that the language previously stricken was, "or combine the office of probate judge with any judicial office inferior thereto in any county with less than 25,000 population with supplemental salary as provided by law." The language inserted by this amendment has a somewhat different purpose, as its proponent pointed out, and the Chair will rule that it is in order.

The question is on the amendment offered by Mrs. Cushman and others. Does any delegate desire to have the amendment read again? If not, those in favor will say aye; those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to section a of Committee Proposal 94? If not, the section will pass.

Section a, as amended, is passed. Mr. Sharpe.

MR. SHARPE: Mr. Chairman, this is a last minute thought, you see, but I thought that possibly on line 7, after the word "combine" we should strike the figure "1" and insert the figure "2". I believe that the legislature might find it difficult to combine 1 county. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof, do you have any comment?

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Sharpe, Mr. Hutchinson made the remark, "Good point." He has made a note. He will take care of it when they next meet with Mr. Cudlip.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary will read section b. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, I would move at this time the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof moves the committee rise. Those in favor will say aye; those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The committee will arise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration one proposal, of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 94, A proposal pertaining to the probate court; has considered several amendments thereto and has come to no final resolution thereon. That completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Any announcements?

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on emerging problems will meet Tuesday, tomorrow, in committee room I on the third floor at 7:30 p.m. Frank G. Millard, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. McLogan.

MR. McLOGAN: Mr. President, I move the convention take a recess until 8:00 o'clock p.m.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. McLogan. Those in favor will say aye; opposed, no.

The motion prevails. We are recessed until 8:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 5:30 o'clock p.m., the convention recessed; and, at 8:00 o'clock p.m., reconvened.]

The convention will please come to order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Are there any announcements?

SECRETARY CHASE: None at this time.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I move the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering matters on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen. All those in favor will say aye; opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Van Dusen.

[Whereupon, Mr. Van Dusen assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The committee will be in order and the secretary will read section b of Committee Proposal 94 dealing with the organization and jurisdiction of the probate court.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section b.

[Section b was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 1380.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, having finally gotten through section a, we turn to section b which has to do with the judiciary of the probate court. For an explanation of the committee report, I should like to call on the delegate from Highland Park, Miss Donnelly.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: Pursuant to our president's words and to our chairman's words and to Mr. Van Dusen's words, this is short. We have made 1 change. We have increased the probate judge's term 2 years. Otherwise it is about what we have in the constitution, only reworded; otherwise, it is consistent with the first paragraph and the 1 change is from 4 to 6 years.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to section b?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Higgs offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1 by striking out all of lines 16 through 20, being all of section b.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, the purpose of this amendment is the same as the amendment which I am reserving with regard to section a. I will withdraw it at this time and possibly introduce it at a later time.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs' amendment is withdrawn. Are there any further amendments to section b?

SECRETARY CHASE: None on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If not, it will pass.

Section b is passed. Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? Mr. Radka.

MR. RADKA: Mr. Chairman, may I direct a question to Miss Donnelly through the Chair, please?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Proceed, Mr. Radka.

MR. RADKA: Miss Donnelly, you stated that section b is consistent with section a. I would ask, is section b consistent with section a as amended?

MISS DONNELLY: In my opinion, yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 94, as amended, is passed. The secretary will read Committee Proposal 95.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 6 on the calendar, from the committee on judicial branch, by Mr. Danhof, chairman, Committee Proposal 95, A proposal pertaining to appeals from administrative tribunals. Amends article VII by adding a section.

Following is Committee Proposal 95 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. ALL FINAL DECISIONS, FINDINGS, RULINGS AND ORDERS OF ANY ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICER OR BODY EXISTING UNDER THE CONSTITUTION OR BY LAW, WHICH ARE JUDICIAL OR QUASI JUDICIAL AND AFFECT PRIVATE RIGHTS, SHALL BE SUBJECT TO DIRECT REVIEW BY THE COURTS AS SHALL BE PROVIDED BY LAW. THIS REVIEW SHALL INCLUDE, AS A MINIMUM, THE DETERMINATION WHETHER SUCH FINAL DECISIONS, FINDINGS, RULINGS AND ORDERS ARE AUTHORIZED BY LAW, AND, IN CASES IN WHICH A HEARING IS REQUIRED, WHETHER THE SAME ARE CLEARLY SUPPORTED BY RELIABLE, PROBATIVE, AND SUBSTANTIAL EVIDENCE ON THE WHOLE RECORD.

Mr. Danhof, chairman of the committee on judicial branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 95:

Sec. a. The committee recommendation will create a new constitutional provision. Since the adoption of the 1908 constitution, the field of administrative law has assumed a more significant position in the jurisprudence of our state. This explains the absence of a similar provision in the present constitution and justifies the present consideration of problems that arose in the developmental stages of this distinct field of law in our state.

The committee recognized that this area poses several distinct problems. The committee, however, addressed its attention exclusively to the specific problem that falls within the purview of its primary jurisdiction, namely, the scope and method of judicial review of administrative decisions.

The proposed language is designed, in the main, to afford a full and adequate method of review of administrative agency decisions consistent with established principles of sound administrative practice.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: For an explanation of Committee Proposal 95, the Chair will recognize Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, before proceeding with an explanation of this particular section, there is on the secretary's desk an amendment which I have filed on behalf of the committee which I would like to take up at this time.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary will read the committee amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Danhof, on behalf of the committee on judicial branch, offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 12, after "clearly" by striking out "supported by" and inserting "erroneous in view of the"; so that the language will read; "in cases in which a hearing is required, whether the same are clearly erroneous in view of the reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof on behalf of the committee on judicial branch, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Danhof.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, at the time that we originally considered this, we wrote the language "clearly supported by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record." Subsequently, upon the request of the subcommittee which worked this particular section, we met and struck out the words "supported by" and put in "clearly erroneous in view of the." Now, perhaps to the nonlawyers this may not seem to be tremendously important. But it was found after we had studied this for some time that the way that we had originally written the section put the burden of proof upon the administrative agency, and this we did not intend nor did we want to do. So by the insertion of the amendment, the burden is now upon the person appealing and it is upon him to show that the decision is clearly erroneous in view of the reliable, probative, and substantial evidence. That is, he must show that the administrative agency erred and the administrative agency is not required to show that their decision is supported by the evidence. Consequently, we request and urge the adoption of this particular amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof on behalf of the committee on judicial branch. Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would like to direct a question to Mr. Danhof through the Chair.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. MAHINSKE: Is the amendment offered with the thought that the burden going forward with the evidence would shift on appeal rather than remain with the administrative agency?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: No, not with the burden. But you see, the way it had originally been written — and perhaps Mr. Krolikowski, who will give the report of this will shed some additional light — if an appeal were taken it would be upon the administrative agency to show that their decision was actually supported by the record. As it is now, if we move to amend it, it will show that it is upon the appellant, the one is taking the appeal, to show that the administrative agency erred, which we believe should be the correct view, and that the decision is clearly erroneous by looking at the particular record. Now initially, of course, the burden is on the agency or the burden is upon whomever the legislature places it, in effect, Mr. Mahinske, in the original hearing. Sometimes it is on the agency; sometimes it is on the person who is being brought before the agency, as you well know, to show that he is not in violation of what they claim he is.

MR. MAHINSKE: Administrative agencies being what they are, the majority of them have extremely hearsay evidence rules. Now, your amendment says that they should show that the same are "clearly erroneous in view of the reliable, probative, and substantial evidence. . . ." Now, they may be erroneous with reference to this type of evidence but not erroneous with reference to the allowable or permissible hearsay evidence within the administrative tribunal. Now, do you feel that this would override any finding based on the hearsay?

MR. DANHOF: We would view this as setting a particular standard that there would have to be some reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the record to support the decision. It was the intent of the committee that this particular thing be done. If I might, perhaps I might yield to Mr. Krolikowski, who might shed a little further light on this particular matter.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof yields to Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Would you pose that question again, Mr. Mahinske?

MR. MAHINSKE: Generally speaking, the rules against hearsay evidence are quite lax in the administrative tribunal. The rule today, as I understand it, is the scintilla rule. In other words, if you have just a little bit of fact and a hell of a lot of hearsay, then you've got a case on your side or against you. (laughter) Now, this wording here, as I see it, doesn't change the rules of evidence at all because on appeal, the appellant will have to come in — in fact, the burden shifts here to the appellant — the appellant is going to have to show that the finding is clearly erroneous, based on reliable, probative, and substantial evidence. Now, does this change the existing rule any or is it intended to change the existing rule any? This is all I want to know, if you intend to change the existing rule or not.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: When you say "existing rule", Mr. Mahinske, you should be apprised of the fact that there are many existing rules with respect to the scope of review of administrative agencies. Now if, by "existing rule," you refer to the rule under the administrative procedures act, I should say that it broadens the scope of review. We have a number of methods of review that are current in our administrative procedure in Michigan today. Basically, I should think that this would be a reaffirmation of the substantial evidence rule. That is what it is designed to do. And of course, as you will note, it is couched in minimal language. Now, this is the minimum that an administrative agency must adhere to.

MR. MAHINSKE: Except that you have the word "clearly" in here. Then you mention —

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Perhaps if I define "clearly erroneous" you may get a better insight into what we are seeking to achieve.

MR. MAHINSKE: But the answer I was looking for is, is it not your intent to leave the existing scintilla rule in force; that you feel that there should be some change?

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Emphatically, no.

MR. MAHINSKE: Fine. That answers my question.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, in view of the fact that I apparently need glasses and we can't read what is on the wall on this side, would the secretary be kind enough to reread the amendment, please.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment is:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Finch.

MR. FINCH: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I would like to ask a question of the judicial committee. Putting it in words that I can understand, does this reverse the old rule that the individual is innocent until proven guilty?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: No. This presumption of innocence to which we are presently referring is an entirely different concept and it is a concept that is applicable in the criminal code. It is not intended in any wise to be foisted into this committee proposal. The answer to your question is, no.

MR. FINCH: All right.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof on behalf of the committee on judicial branch. Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I have an amendment which I would like to have considered prior to the committee amendment, if that's possible, because the committee amendment strikes out language which I would want to insert and I would therefore have to change my amendment to put this language back in.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: It may be done by unanimous consent, Mr. King. Is there objection to considering Mr. King's amendment in advance of the committee amendment?

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Objection, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: An objection is heard, Mr. King.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: In behalf of the committee, I think I should say that we would prefer to have the committee amendments adopted first and then reserve to Mr. King the right that he of course has to modify the committee proposal after we once present it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Your objection was heard, Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Thank you.

MR. KING: In view of his explanation, I would just like to say that the committee almost did something significant here and it's just a shame that they had to go back and retract it. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof on behalf of the committee on judicial branch. Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct a few questions with regard to this matter to Mr. Krolikowski and Mr. Danhof. Do I understand that this particular proposal establishes a standard or test for judicial review for administrative tribunals which now reads that the findings will have to be supported by "reliable, probative, and substantial evidence. . . ." and be clearly erroneous in view of that?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Yes, that is correct.

MR. NORRIS: Under recent decisions of the court, I understand that it is established, particularly in workman's compensation fields, the standards being supported by competent evidence. Do you feel that the rule established by the court pursuant to the statute, say in workman's compensation law, is inadequate in such a degree that it would create the necessity for a constitutional test that you now propose?

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: In behalf of the committee, the answer is yes.

MR. NORRIS: What particular problems have arisen which in your view would support a need for this revised standard?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Norris, the Chair would inquire whether your question is directed to the committee amendment or whether it is directed to the proposal itself?

MR. NORRIS: Well, as I understand it, the odd language of the amendment does seem to establish a test for a review of findings and rulings of administrative tribunals. What I would like to think here is that we should have before us some, if you will, clear, reliable, probative, and substantial evidence for this proposal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair is still in doubt as to whether your inquiry is directed to the amendment offered by the committee and would urge you to so confine it if you are able to do so.

MR. NORRIS: Well, what I am seeking, Mr. Chairman, and I think it is a legitimate inquiry, is that we have a body of statutory law now in an adminstrative procedures act, and in each act it sets up a taxing authority, workmen's compensation commission, the ratemaking authorities of this state, and what I am trying to find out is what is wrong with the present statutory tests that would create the necessity for our inserting in the constitution a new and broader test.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Now, with respect to the scope of review that is prescribed to a particular agency, of course, that is a policy question in the first consideration. What the committee is aiming at here with this language is to impose upon all administrative agencies a uniform scope of review, and that uniform scope of review would blanket in, of course, the workmen's compensation, to which you have adverted.

Now, with reference to your specific question as to the justification for this particular rule of evidence to be imposed upon the workmen's compensation, that is a policy question which we are not considering at this time.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof. Mr. Danhof, do you seek recognition? Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Perhaps it may seem out of place for me to be asking this question now, since I didn't attend the meeting at which the committee reviewed this language, but Mr. Krolikowski, the present rule of law with respect, for example, to an appeal which is a one way appeal from the suspension of a policeman under civil service statute or charter provision, is that he has a right to appeal from the determination by the civil service commission which in the first instance is an appeal from the person who removed him or the board that removed him to the circuit court and the circuit court is bound by the findings of fact, and the examination of the findings of fact has in the past been limited to a finding that the facts in the record clearly tend by competent evidence to support the finding made by the civil service commission. Is it your thought that now we would be proceeding in a manner where in addition to showing that there was a fair probative value that there would have to be some greater test met by the civil service commission in sustaining its action, or sustaining the action of the removing authority who fired a policeman, for example, for drunkenness?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Yes, I think they would. First of all, this language will negate the possibility of conclusive findings of fact on the part of an administrative agency.

MR. FORD: I just sent for a volume of the reports, but I find a headnote here indicating that our court has in the past held that a legislative attempt to create such a rule was violative of the constitution and it seems to indicate that it is a violation of the separation of powers because of the fact that the court is substituting its discretion for that of an administrative body. Was this question gone into at all when your subcommittee was working on this?

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: I think that there is a line of judicial thinking that would sustain that theory. However, I think that you must recognize that the concept of separation of powers is defined in the organic law of the state. Now, if this proposal is adopted, I submit that it would be conclusive on the question of separation of powers so that any cases to which you advert would be obviated by a constitutional provision which defined the separation of powers. This committee proposal would accomplish that fact.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: I'd like to address a question through the Chair to Mr. Krolikowski.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may proceed, Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Mr. Krolikowski, was this language dreamed up by the subcommittee or is this language the result of a recommendation of our research department or American bar association, or is it in any other constitution? I was just wondering about the background of this specific language.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: This language is in part adopted from the Missouri constitution. The part dealing specifically with the scope of review which embraces the "erroneous in view of" rule of law springs from the uniform code that has been proposed by the American bar association.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof on behalf of the committee on judicial branch to section a of Committee Proposal 95. Mr. Garvin.

MR. GARVIN: I guess you covered it, Mr. Chairman, because it seems that the body of section a is being discussed rather than the amendment. It seems to me that perhaps the delegates would allow the committee to correct or adopt the amendment and then everyone would have the right to talk on the section as a whole, because we've lost considerable time not talking about the amendment so far.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair is glad to have his impression confirmed, Mr. Garvin. Mr. Brown, do you wish to speak on the Danhof amendment?

MR. G. E. BROWN: I wish to inquire on the Danhof amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may proceed.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to address a question to Mr. Krolikowski, and that question is this, if the word "clearly" was removed from the original committee language instead of adding the language that you have suggested, would the result be different? Otherwise the language would then read, "whether the same are supported by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record" whereas you suggest we insert "clearly erroneous in view of. . . ."

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Of course, the intensity of judicial review cannot be measured mathematically or in any tangible form, but I should think that it would be the opinion of the committee that there would be a difference, that the "erroneous in view of" affords a broader base for review than the "clearly supported by." I think that is the considered position of the committee.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Krolikowski, when you say "clearly erroneous in view of the reliable" and so forth, aren't you in effect reinserting the rule that has applied to administrative hearings in the past, and that is, if you can find any reliable, probative, and you say "substantial" — but what is substantial? Aren't you in effect establishing the old rule?

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: No, I don't think so. When we say "clearly erroneous" — well, let me say that you can have something clearly erroneous notwithstanding that it has a reasonable basis.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Krolikowski, my question would then be, wouldn't it still require then that it be supported by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record?

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: When the reviewing court is allowed to adopt this "erroneous in view of" position, the court can recognize the fact that there is a reasonable basis, or that the substantial evidence rule has been adopted, but that in spite of the fact that there is a reasonable foundation for the finding of fact, that there still can be an error in judgment. Let me say that it is the recognized authoritative view that the "clearly erroneous in evidence" view is closer to a substitution in judgment than the "substantial evidence" rule as is presently adopted by the courts, and as the proposal would stand, if it were not amended by the committee amendment at this time.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Krolikowski, in view of the justification for the amendment, the amendment appears clearly erroneous in view of the justification, and therefore, I would not support the amendment and I would suggest that others not support it, and that rather, the word "clearly" be stricken, that "supported by" be reinserted as being the end that many of us who are interested in a paragraph of this nature, supported from the start. I would also like to comment on what Dr. Norris had to say. I am a little bit surprised that he is for limiting the rights of an individual with respect to administrative review, when this is, in effect a civil right.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof. Does any delegate desire to have it read? Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Chairman, with your consent and the consent of the committee, I would like to ask Mr. Krolikowski a question.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: On the amendment, you may proceed.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Krolikowski, can you and will you explain in simple language the meaning of this amendment so that those present who probably are not familiar with the legal efficacy of this will understand it?

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Do you want a definition of terms, Mr. Bledsoe?

MR. BLEDSOE: Just a simple statement so it can be understood.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: "Clearly erroneous" means that there is a firm and definite conviction of mistake.

MR. BLEDSOE: What does this have to do with? What does this amendment have to do with?

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Scope of review of an administrative decision or finding.

MR. BLEDSOE: Go ahead.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Do you want me to continue defining the terms in the proposed amendment?

MR. BLEDSOE: Yes, please.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Of course, the balance of the terms are identical to the terms we had in the original committee proposal. Do you still want those terms defined? We would turn to that definition in the course of the full presentation of the committee's position unless you feel that you want the balance of the terms defined now.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Krolikowski, I don't want it particularly for myself. I'd like to have it so the nonlawyers can understand it. That is what I am asking for.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Well, let me try to fashion it in this manner. If the reviewing magistrate decides that there is something definitely wrong on the record in the decision of the administrative agency, the reviewing magistrate would be authorized to reverse, modify or take any other remedial action which was in the purview of his authority.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof. Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, before we vote, I simply want to urge you to defeat this amendment and adopt the original proposal as it was put out by the committee. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof. Mr. Krolikowski, do you seek recognition?

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, on behalf of the committee, I should say that the language that has been recommended by the committee comports with the rules of the most modern concept in administrative law. The committee is of the opinion that it provides a full and adequate scope of review and the committee would urge you to adopt the committee amendment because it is designed to more fully implement the overall concept that the committee intends to advance with this proposal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, in addition to what Mr. Krolikowski has stated, let me give you some of the background. At the time that we originally conceived this type of a provision, we had the language as we hoped it will be after it is amended. However, after consultation between Mr. Krolikowski, Mr. Iverson and Judge Leibrand, who comprised the subcommittee, together with the subcommittee of the legislative powers committee, and in going over this with the research department, they came up with "clearly supported by" because this happened to be a more well known rule of law within the state of Michigan. Thereafter we found that the language "supported by" went farther than the committee had definitely intended — because we intend here a bare minimum; if the legislature wishes to go farther, it can. And when you say "supported by" you put a burden upon the administrative agency and what you are in effect doing is, for all practical purposes, removing the value of administrative agencies. Now, whether or not that is a matter which we should or should not have, we can take up after the amendment. But the committee intended originally to set up the minimum. We then went to this language upon advice, thinking that we were doing the same thing. We reflected upon it further and we went back to our original language, which is recommended by Professor Cooper of the University of Michigan, an administrative agency expert, and not only the best in the state, but one of the best in the country. This is the Missouri constitution in essence and what is recommended by the American bar association as a minimum. Now, this is the judicial committee recommendation. If this committee wants to go farther, we can take that up when we get to the policy. But I would urge that you support the amendment. Then if you want to go farther, that will be up to this committee. But our intention was this.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I wish to support the committee's recommended amendment and I hope that we will take a real long look before we adopt the entire section. I feel that the whole thing goes much further than was anticipated but at least the amendment by the committee is a step in the right direction back toward the present rule of law and a more conservative approach, I'm sure, but one that might not do as much violence to our present system.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I'd like to direct this question to whoever should care to answer from either the judicial committee or the rights committee. In section 16 of Committee Proposal 15, we adopted this language, which I don't feel was affected by the original language of the judicial committee, but I think is going to be affected by the proposed amendment. This is the language that we have adopted:

> The right of all persons to fair and just treatment in the course of legislative and executive proceedings, investigations and hearings shall not be infringed.

I just wonder if this sort of cuts away some of the ground under this other provision that the rights committee has adopted.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will recognize Mr. Krolikowski for an answer to the question and will ask that the committee be in order.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, I certainly don't intend to beg Mr. Mahinske's question at this juncture. However, I do think that it might be more properly directed to the committee after this particular amendment is adopted. I think it goes to the heart of the committee proposal and we should be happy to embark on an answer to Mr. Mahinske's question at that time.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, then, perhaps the answer to this question directed through the Chair may shed some light on it. Is it the intent of the proponents of this amendment that this restriction should only go to evidentiary grounds for appeal?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: This is intended to serve as a rule of evidence, yes. The answer would be yes.

MR. MAHINSKE: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof on behalf of the committee on judicial branch. Does any delegate desire to have the amendment read? The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment as offered by the committee:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: I request a division, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Yeager requests a division. Is the demand supported? It is supported. Those in favor of the amendment will vote aye; those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by the committee, the yeas are 77; the nays 41.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is adopted. Are there further amendments to section a?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. King offers —

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, if I might —

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I would like before we get into the amendment, if I may, to yield to Mr. Krolikowski, then to Mr. Iverson for an explanation of this particular section.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will recognize Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, Committee Proposal 95 contemplates a new constitutional provision. Since the adoption of our present constitution in 1908, the field of administrative law has been expanded to a point where today it occupies a position of prominent importance in the jurisprudence of our state. The committee proposal strikes at an area that is presently covered in the main by statutory law and case law. In the opinion of the committee a constitutional provision is necessary in order to assure a judicial review of administrative agencies and appended thereto a minimal scope of review. Now, the first sentence of Committee Proposal 95 sets out the requirement that the findings, decisions, rulings and orders of all administrative agencies shall be subject to direct review by the courts. The second sentence sets out the minimum standards of review that shall be imposed uniformly upon all administrative agencies in the state. Now, the scope of review is couched in the "erroneous in view of" language. By "erroneous in view of the reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record" it is meant that there must be a firm conviction of the state on the part of the reviewing magistrate after an examination of the full record emanating from the administrative agency.

Now, "reliable" is intended to mean trustworthy. This can go into questions of credibility of witnesses. "Probative" means such evidence as tends to prove a fact or an ultimate fact in issue. "Substantial evidence" means such evidence as a reasonable mind will accept as adquate to justify conclusion. "On the whole record" means that the reviewing magistrate can consider all the evidence in favor and all the evidence against a certain determination.

It was the opinion of the committee that this proposal is necessary to assure full and adequate protection from administrative decisions and findings. In behalf of the committee, I should urge you to adopt the committee proposal. I yield to Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I would at this time call upon the delegate from Wayne, Mr. Iverson.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, after what Mr. Krolikowski has said, I believe it goes without saying that the members of this committee are entirely familiar with the growth of administrative law over the years and perhaps more familiar with its abuse in some instances. The committee, I believe, had in mind the protection of the public, the individuals, business and otherwise, in the adoption of these recommendations and I might say that in Committee Proposal 123, which we have not yet acted upon, coming from the legislative powers committee, is a measure which I wouldn't say is similar, but has some bearing upon this matter. In other words, 123 has to do with the legislature having some control over the issuance of rules and regulations by an administrative body created by the legislature, and Committee Proposal 95, which we are now discussing, is the protection granted to the individuals by the issuance of a regulation authorized by a legislative act. So it was felt necessary that each have the protection. In other words, it is our opinion — and I think there is little doubt about this — that this is a protection so far as the public is concerned. After all, we have seen the situation where it is possible for the legislature to pass a law with respect to every item necessary and therefore they ended up granting authority to administrative agencies the right of rule making powers. And it has thereby become necessary to protect the people in their right of appeal and their right to be heard in another branch of the government, namely, the judicial branch, on matters affecting their person, their property or their business.

I might say further that we must recognize the fact that perhaps administrative rules and regulations are necessary — the complexity of government these days perhaps makes it necessary — that we be governed to a degree by rules and regulations. However this proposal, in the judgment of the committee, is a safeguard, if you please, against bureaucratic action by an administrative agency which might, so to speak, get the bit in its teeth and run away with it. And I, for one, fail to see why anyone in this room would be unable to support the right of an appeal, a reasonable appeal from an action by an administrative body which is judicial or quasi judicial. We all recognize the fact that they have become such in recent years and certainly the public and business needs that protection.

Now, it seems that from some of the questions asked here and some perhaps eager individuals who desire to make this even stronger than it is, let me caution you slightly. I happen to have had considerable experience in practicing before commissions of the state and I have had my problems with respect to what I considered perhaps power which they asserted which I didn't agree with. But let's bear this in mind, and the committee had this in mind when we requested that this committee of the whole adopt this amendment. As it was originally written, the language said "clearly supported by". This, in effect, the committee felt required practically every act of the administrative body to be tried anew in a court of law; in other words, a trial de novo, if you please; to try all the facts and all the law. And I think that it goes without saying that that would create a hardship which would practically destroy what the legislature intended in the first place, to simplify the administration of the act which it passed. I don't think it was the intention of our committee that any such noose around the neck, so to speak, should be placed upon any administrative body, and for that reason the language was changed. But we felt it still gave proper protection to the people of the state of Michigan or business or individuals in their relationship to administrative bodies and who might someplace along the line be affected by some administrative rule, regulation or decision.

I sincerely believe that with the amendment which we have placed in here we have completely protected the rights of the citizens of this state against a bureaucratic act by an administrative body which is created by the legislature, if you please, and I believe this right, in conjunction with Committee Proposal 123, which of course we have not acted upon, is a complete protection to the people of the state of Michigan and still maintains the division of the 3 branches of government. I certainly urge the support of this proposal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman and delegates, Committee Proposal 95 which we are now considering does establish a basic constitutional right to appeal to a court from boards, bureaus and commissions; that is, from their decisions. Now, I feel that administrative law as I learned it as a member of the subcommittee, is highly technical. I myself have had but little experience with it. I recall only one instance in the last 8 years where I was required to appear before a state administrative board. I do not normally represent clients with causes before these boards; neither do I represent clients or insurance companies as defendants before these boards. But I do think that the issues that are before us here should be presented a little more clearly and I will try to present them in just as nontechnical language as I can use. I might say that I joined in the committee report both on the majority report and on the amendment, although in both instances I felt that the right of appeal granted to a judicial body was probably not wide enough or strong enough, however you want to say it.

Whatever we put in here with reference to appeals from administrative agencies will be new. The Constitution of 1908 had no such provision probably because there were few or no administrative boards, bureaus and commissions, but since 1908 this administrative government has grown by leaps and bounds. The estimates vary now, but we have heard estimates of from 125 to 150 boards, bureaus and commissions, with great, great powers over private rights and private property.

Now, we are not dealing here, fellow delegates, with peanuts. Let us take a situation before the public service commission. When someone applies for a license to establish a trucking line, perhaps in competition with another line, or when the commission finds that some existing trucking line has violated the rules of the public service commission and the commission seeks to penalize that line or perhaps revoke its charter entirely, we may very well be dealing with something that is valued at millions of dollars, and that is a property right.

Let's take the matter of the granting or the transferring or the revocation of a liquor license. Now, the theory of the law is that a liquor license is only a permit, a temporary grant by the state to the holder, which the state can revoke at any time and do about anything it wishes with. But we who are in the law business and you who have had contacts with hotels and taverns and that sort of thing know that that isn't true. We know that that license, despite the legal theory of it, has a value perhaps of $10,000, $20,000, maybe $100,000.

Let me move on a minute to something which is often in the realm of a sacred cow — workmen's compensation. Now, I don't question the fact at all that the workmen's compensation law as established in Michigan some 40 years ago, or perhaps more, represented great social progress and social advance but it also represented something else. It represented the power to take money away from one person and give it to another, a power which had hitherto before that only been exercised by the courts. And this isn't peanuts either. I am informed by Delegate Sablich who, I am told, is well versed in workmen's compensation matters, that the maximum compensation award may be $56 a week for a maximum of 800 weeks, which is something like $45,000 of somebody's hard earned cash that is passing by virtue of a nonelected agent, employee, board or bureau of the state of Michigan.

Now, we go to great lengths to assure that a fellow that has been sued for a grocery bill of $501 will have the judicial right of appeal all the way through the gamut of courts through a scale of perhaps 1, 2, 3, 4 or 5 courts. But nevertheless, with these administrative agencies who are transferring thousands and millions of dollars worth of money and property every year — probably more in the aggregate, than do the courts — many of them are almost totally removed from judicial review.

We had the benefit in the committee — as someone has stated — of the research of Professor Joiner and Frank Cooper, one of the greatest administrative authorities, so we are told, in the state of Michigan. And I might say here and now that back in 1952 the legislature attempted to do something about these administrative agencies by providing a uniform administrative procedures act which would give some form of judicial review to people, whether they might be claimants or whether they might be defendants who felt they had been wronged before the state agency. But here is what Professor Joiner tells us about that act:

> The administrative procedures act passed in 1952 prescribes administrative procedure for all state boards, commissions or bureaus authorized to adjudicate contested cases except the workmen's compensation commission, the employment security commission, the department of revenue and the public service commission. Separate legislation exists for the scope of judicial review for these agencies.

Now, the first thing that I feel that this administrative article should do in the constitution is to assure that neither the rights and privileges of judicial appeal now granted by the 1952 act or as construed by the supreme court shall be diminished. In other words, these rights of appeal shall not be diminished. The legislature may enlarge those rights of appeal, but shall not diminish them. And the only way to assure that is to put some provision here in the constitution. Now, Professor Joiner goes on:

> Michigan statutes 17.186 provides for review of the workmen's compensation commission by the supreme court. Findings of fact made by the commission in the absence of fraud are conclusive. The supreme court will not weigh the evidence if there is some competent evidence to support the finding of the commission.

Now let me tell you in layman's language what this means to me. A fellow by the name of Charlie who works in a shop goes out with his bowling league to a bowling alley and he slips and he twists his back and he lies on the floor there in agony and finally a group of his friends pick him up and they get him in a taxicab and they take him to a doctor and the doctor massages him and puts some sort of a sacroiliac belt around him and they take him home and put him to bed. The next day our man goes to work and within the first 5 minutes after he arrives there, he slips on a little greasy spot on the floor, and a short time afterwards he is before the workmen's compensation commission for compensation arising out of and in the course of his injury. Now, 10 or 15 people at the bowling alley may tell how Charlie got hurt; they swear how Charlie got hurt, and when he got hurt, and where he got hurt. The doctor who gave him first aid may testify as to when and how he got hurt. But if Charlie goes in before the commission and says overnight his back recovered completely by morning, he felt no sign of pain when he went to work, but within 5 minutes after arriving at work he slipped on this grease spot, and if the commission awards him compensation, there is nothing in the absence of fraud. The supreme court and the courts cannot weigh the evidence. Unless it could be proven that this was fraudulent, that the deputy commissioner or the commissioner was bribed and there was some actual fraud, that compensation award stands. Now, nobody is more in sympathy with a man that's legitimately injured in a manner arising out of or in the course of his employment than I am. But when you have an administrative system that leaves the agency as the final arbiter — the final arbitrator — of these things, irrespective of the weight of the evidence, then I say it's time that some relief should be given, some control of these agencies should be taken over by this constitutional convention.

Now, there are other agencies where this right of review is limited. I have already said the effect of the general proposal as originally proposed by the committee was to assure that the legislature did not repeal those protective rights which it was granted by the 1952 act. A further administrative provision in this constitution will, in my opinion, assure that the Michigan supreme court does not in the future stretch the limits of perpetuity in some of these cases and will be given at least some opportunity to review the facts as well as the law on an appeal. What I say applies to both the defendant and the claimant. Currently today the claimant has no more right of appeal than the defendant does, and I feel this right of appeal should be extended to both of them, should be a constitutional right.

Now, the right of appeal that we propose to give by Committee Proposal 95, fellow delegates, is not a lawyer's bill. We don't provide for a new trial where you have to hire a lot of lawyers. As Committee Proposal 95 stands now, it provides for review, both as to the facts and the law on the transcript or on the record made before the administrative agency below. So while we lawyers may have been accused at times in this convention of trying to make business for ourselves, I don't think that we can be so accused in this case. I am in favor of the broad principles intended to be reached by Committee Proposal 95. I think the right of appeal could even be more greatly enhanced, not for the benefit of one party or the other, but for the benefit of both parties who find themselves in a situation involving thousands and perhaps hundreds of thousands of dollars without the right to have their day in court.

I understand there are going to be several amendments to Committee Proposal 95. As to some of them, I shall probably vote for them. As to some, I shall vote against them. But whatever we do, let's not finish this convention without doing something to control this completely arbitrary system of administrative agencies. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Gover.

MR. GOVER: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, it is my opinion that no person should be prosecuted and judged by the same official. I am not much on the law but it seems that it just isn't right for the same person to both judge and prosecute when it comes to these administrative decisions, which is done in many of these hearings. To be deprived of liberty or property by such an official should have some sort of definite review and that is what this Committee Proposal 95 does for the people. In fact, I think that the hearing should start all over again with a new trial for fairness to all instead of taking on the evidence if it is found to be faulty at all. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will advise that while there are a few speakers seeking recognition, it might be helpful at this point to channel the work of the committee to proceed to the consideration of the amendments. The Chair would request that the speakers, unless their remarks are completely general, defer their comments. Mr. Hodges, you may proceed.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, I would just like to address my remarks to certain remarks made by Judge Leibrand regarding workmen's compensation. I don't know how many other people here are familiar with the field. I worked as a defense attorney in workmen's compensation for some time for a large corporation and one of the grave reasons that we cannot have these tremendous delays in terms of appeal and so on is the terrific burden that is placed upon the person who is injured. Now, it is a well known fact and practical knowledge that you can sweat out an injured worker because he is without any kind of income. He is injured; he has no source of revenue; and if you can wait him out long enough, you can get the right kind of settlement out of him because he needs the money at the present time. Right now, as I read in the papers, it takes up to 13 months for a case to come up in the commission itself. If we are to tack upon this, appeals for any purpose whatsoever, or retrials for all practical purposes, the whole impact of workmen's compensation, as we know it now, on the employee would be lost, and much of the meaningful need he has for this compensation. He would have to surrender his rights for possibly a reduced sum or redemption. Therefore, in these fields of compensation it is difficult to talk in terms of long extended appeal procedures where the weight is so terrifically against one's party.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I just have a couple of questions, if I may, of Judge Leibrand. I am a little concerned because on the one hand, I see a larger standard than is now the case when it is required that there be reliable, probative, and substantial evidence produced by the administrative tribunal. As I understand it, Judge Leibrand, that is a greater quantum of evidence in support of the decision or ruling of the administrative tribunal than is now the case. As you cited, there is a question of the great weight of the evidence and some competent evidence. You are attempting to establish a greater standard by asking for the insertion of reliable, probative, and substantial evidence in the constitution. Is that right, sir?

MR. LEIBRAND: You bet your life.

MR. NORRIS: All right. Now, the appellant, whoever he may be, the aggrieved party — whether he be the insurance company or whether he be the claimant or the licensee — in addition, has to establish that this greater quantity of evidence, this greater quantity of reliable, probative, and substantial evidence has to be clearly erroneous. Is there not now a greater burden on the party who is the appellant to upset the ruling of the administrative tribunal? In other words, don't you have a situation here where the noun gives and the adjective takes away?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, answering Mr. Norris' question, are you referring now to the original committee proposal or to the committee proposal as amended?

MR. NORRIS: As amended, sir.

MR. LEIBRAND: I believe you are correct. That's why I'd like to go back to the original proposal.

MR. NORRIS: Well, does not the administrative procedures act, which you cited, sir, take care of the problem in those areas where the legislature has not seen fit to set forth an appropriate standard of proof?

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may proceed, Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Norris, it certainly doesn't take care of the problem under the workmen's compensation act, under the employment security commission, under the department of revenue or under the public service commission, which are not included in the uniform procedures act. Does that answer your question?

MR. NORRIS: I appreciate the fact that there were certain exceptions. However, I note with great interest that Committee Proposal 95 has not only the question of commissions, agencies or bureaus — which I understand you cited the administrative procedures act contained — but also administrative officers. What units of government are you seeking to reach by the term "administrative officers" which are not now reached, sir?

MR. LEIBRAND: I understand that among the some 146 administrative agencies there are many who are governed by a number of men — boards, bureaus and commissions. I understand that some of the others — at least a minority of them — simply have 1 head, 1 officer at its head, and we certainly don't want to exempt these 1 officer agencies any more than we do the 5 officer agencies — not as much. I think it is more important that you have the 1 officer agencies reviewed.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, if I may address a few more questions. Did I understand you to say that unless there is a provision in the constitution which creates a right of review or appeal, there is not now an appeal? In other words isn't —

MR. LEIBRAND: Well — Mr. Chairman, I have to remember my etiquette here.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair is very grateful, Judge Leibrand. (laughter)

MR. NORRIS: I am merely counsel. This is a judge here.

MR. LEIBRAND: There is a right of appeal, sir, under act 197 of the public acts of 1952. I don't think that that even goes far enough but even though it does, what the legislature has put in this year it can take out next year and it can eliminate the entire review procedure contained in that act by a majority vote of both houses, any time. That is something I think the constitution should protect against.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a comment on this, if I may. As I understand it, we have a whole series of administrative tribunals, which have grown up for the purpose of dealing with specific problems requiring expertise in these areas — particularly in the rate making field and workmen's compensation and taxes — and in each one of these areas the legislature has made certain provisions with regard to the quantity of proof required to sustain a ruling or an order of an administrative tribunal. And I appreciate the fact that there have been a considerable number of abuses in this area. And I think there is a problem which has to be met. I raise the question, however, of whether or not it is possible that in view of the kinds of problems that have arisen in industrial states calling for multi faceted administrative tribunals, that we don't create more problems than we seek to ameliorate by this kind of provision. I think on the one hand we want to protect adequately and intimately the rights of individuals, associations, firms and corporations that do business or have relationships with other people than with the state. But if you are going to have complicated regulatory agencies, you also have to give them the kind of power to deal with these matters so that you don't put all of their functions back into the courts, which courts cannot deal with these problems.

It was the very function of quasi judicial or administrative agencies to deal with certain technical problems that this whole set of agencies grew up on a national scale, with the interstate commerce commission and the federal trade commission and the whole host of regulatory agencies. And we do have a national administrative procedures act which deals with these matters. And the legislature sought to deal with some of these matters in the administrative procedures act which Judge Leibrand has adverted to. But I think we ought to be quite wary of setting up the kind of test that is established in this provision and then also placing a disproportionate burden upon the appellant, whoever he may be, to establish that that burden, that test, is clearly erroneous.

It seems to me that the provisions here are ambivalent; they move in opposite directions and create problems for everyone. I am not so sure that the provision as a whole does not create more problems than it solves, especially when, as Mr. Iverson indicated, we ought to look at 95 in conjunction with 123. Committee Proposal 123, as I understand it, states that before there can be the promulgation of any rule or regulation, this rule or regulation has to be filed with the legislature and the legislature may reserve the power to suspend or annul, some kind of a restraint upon administrative tribunals.

The combined impact of 95 and 123, it seems to me, is to unduly restrict an effort on the part of all of us to deal with complicated facts, complicated industrial situations, complicated tax and rate making problems, and may very well hamstring the power of the people to regulate in the public interest. I don't mean by this to suggest any abatement of enthusiasm or desire or interest in the protection of the right of individuals against administrative tribunals and that they might be deprived of rights without due process. But I suggest that these 2 efforts, 123 and 95, do create more problems than they solve. And I personally, unless I am persuaded otherwise, and unless the amendment seeks to clarify the situation, would be moved to vote against both 95 and 123.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand, do you have —

MR. LEIBRAND: I have just one short comment. Committee Proposal 95 does not seek in any way to control the entire judicial review or appellate procedure of these 146 agencies. If you will look at line 9, it simply sets a minimum standard, a minimum below which the legislature may not go in providing for review. The maximum, the method, the details are entirely left to the legislative body. Thank you. Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary will read the first amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. King offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 12, by striking out "clearly erroneous in view of the" and reinserting "supported by"; so that the language will then read; "in cases in which a hearing is required, whether the same are supported by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: On the amendment, the Chair will recognize Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, as I stated when my amendment was first objected to, this requires putting back some words which the committee of the whole has taken out and I know that this is a difficult thing to ask any group to do. But I am taking out 1 word. Let me explain it this way — the committee did a very substantial job of revision in this particular area and then — I mean this as a figure of speech only; I hope no one will be offended — someone got to the committee. Now that someone, it appears, is a very learned man by the name of Cooper. He inserted the proviso which is presently in the Missouri constitution. Now, it may be that the committee went too far initially, and I would not object to their backing up a few feet. However, what they have done is backed up to the starting point. They have actually, in my opinion, gone back, if not all the way, at least very close to the scintilla rule. To those of you who are not familiar with that term, the scintilla rule means that if there is a scintilla, a tiny bit, of evidence which the reviewing court can hang its hat on and find is in fact there, then it does not affect the decision of the administration, board, tribunal or commission. Now, I am willing to take out the word "clearly" so that what we are saying is that the hearing of a decision must be supported — not clearly supported, but just supported — by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record. I can't believe that there is anyone here who would feel that if an administrative decision was not supported by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record, that those delegates would want the decision to stand.

Of course, Delegate Norris is completely right when he says that the adjective takes away and the noun gives here. I think perhaps we should say that the adjectives give and the adverbs take away. But there is a conflict there and I am not a student of English, so I won't get into it any more than that. This is a major change. In fact, I'm not sure that it doesn't violate the 3 day rule which states that committee proposals shall lay over 3 days. I don't mind minor changes but this is a major change — 180 degrees. We are not asking for a trial de novo. All we are asking is that we get away from the scintilla rule.

I'd like to just read a quote from the Niles, Michigan Daily Star of December 12, 1961, where the editor states:

> Contrary to the concept of the United States constitution and bill of rights we have today at both state and federal government levels administrative bodies whose officials sit in a 3 way capacity of prosecutor, jury and judge.

Believe me, that is true. As a practicing attorney, I've seen it. And I think that the committee perhaps did go a little too far, but I think that right now we can correct that slight error by removing the word "clearly" and going back to the original committee language. And so I would ask that the committee of the whole do that at this point and time.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. King. Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr Chairman, members of the committee, I rise to support the King amendment. He has done in his amendment the point to which I was speaking before, that is, that I believe by the committee's amendment in saying "clearly erroneous in view of the reliable, probative, and substantial evidence" we are back where we started from, back to the idea that any evidence, regardless of how insignificant, if it is evidence that is reliable and probative, is enough to support the findings. Now, this would say that this must be supported by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record. I support wholeheartedly the King amendment. I think this is where we should be. I don't believe we should have stayed with the original committee language with the word "clearly" in there because that puts too great a burden, but with the language as it will be after the King amendment, that is, so that it says what I think the committee intended in the first place, that being whether the same "are supported by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record" is where we should be and I would urge every delegate here to support it, it being the proper place to be with respect to this proposal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett.

Mr. Faxon, have you a point of information?

MR. FAXON: Just a point of order. Haven't we already acted upon this by adopting the amendment of the committee and inserting the language that this hopes to delete?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Faxon, the word "clearly" is sought to be stricken by the King amendment. It was not touched by the committee amendment and therefore, in the opinion of the Chair — and the Chair will so rule — the amendment is in order.

Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I would oppose the amendment — not because I am out of sympathy with what Mr. King and Mr. Brown have said, but because I think that they may be the ones who are defeating our purpose. As Mr. Krolikowski said earlier, the words "clearly erroneous" have been determined by the courts — I don't believe by our own, because we have never used that language, but by courts in general who have given a distinct meaning which permits the court, if it determines a mistake has been made on the whole record, to correct that mistake. Now, they would have us take out this language which has definite meaning and put in the words "supported by". Well, what does "supported" mean? Does it mean a very small amount of support? Any support at all? Or total support? Well, they don't tell us. And the courts are going to have to decide that for themselves. And they could very easily decide that any competent evidence which supported a finding, no matter how small it was, no matter how much it might be outweighed by other evidence, was support, and therefore, the court would not have a right to overturn the decision. Now, that's right where we are today. I appreciate that's not where they want to end up but I suspect that that's where they're going to end up. I would think that we might better take the language as to which we have a distinct attached meaning, a recognized meaning, and stand by it and not gamble on something which they think means more, but which may in fact mean much less.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett, do you desire to yield to Mr. King for a question?

MR. EVERETT: I do.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. What court which has any binding authority on the Supreme Court of Michigan has made this determination as to the meaning of the words "clearly erroneous"? Are you talking about the Missouri supreme court?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, Mr. King, it wouldn't have binding effect on it, but it is judicially interpreted; and granted, our court can throw it aside, and it has been known to do such things, but at least there is less reason to think they would throw this aside than if they would not find that any support was sufficient support.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I think the committee started out to negate what we call the scintilla rule and to require that the decision of an administrative tribunal be supported by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence. It appears to me that Mr. King is right, and when we made the committee change, we in effect went back to a rule which was little short of or actually is the scintilla rule. I think his amendment is correct in that it does clearly establish the fact that we want to get away from this rule that the slightest fragment of evidence will support the ruling of an administrative tribunal. I believe his amendment should be supported.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, again I want to speak against the amendment and I don't want by doing that to indicate approval of the language without the amendment, but the amendment clearly puts this back in the condition it was in before the committee reconsidered its previous action and corrected the situation that they were creating. And although the Chair has ruled that because the word "clearly" is left out, it is my feeling that the legal import of what we have now is exactly the same as the legal import of what we had in the original committee recommendation.

Mr. King, I think, has misled the laymen certainly, and perhaps some of the lawyers with his definition of the scintilla rule. Our supreme court has defined this frequently and it doesn't say that you have a pinch of evidence and this is good enough. It says that the evidence has to fairly support the finding of fact made by the administrative body or agency — for example, a civil service commission. The civil service commission has to have some facts to act on and those facts have to, when examined on their face, fairly support the findings. Now, this doesn't mean that they could support it entirely on a presumption on a presumption or on presumptions without any direct evidence. It is subjected at the present time to review because it is in the nature of certiorari. I don't think that we should be misled by this over exaggeration of the scintilla rule into believing that Mr. King's amendment will do anything except what Mr. Cooper wanted to do in the first place. Mr. King suggested — and I hope not unkindly — that Mr. Cooper got to the committee and that, as a result of that, they made their change. As a matter of fact, Mr. King, what happened was that Mr. Cooper wrote the original language, which is now your language, and the committee woke up and found out that Mr. Cooper had gotten to it and they made the change. I don't think it is any secret what Mr. Cooper's position is. He is the general counsel for the Michigan manufacturers association, I am informed, and this may have something to do with his point of view on this matter.

But certainly, to support the King amendment is to put back in the pernicious language that was in the original committee report and the committee justifiably decided that that was going too far.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will remind the delegates to keep rule 22 in mind. Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: I should raise a point of information first, Mr. Chairman. What is rule 22? (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may proceed, Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, first of all in answer to Mr. Everett, when he says that this will permit any evidence, I think that we must read the next to the last line in the committee proposal as it would be with the King amendment, which says, "reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record." This means that there must be substantial evidence. It doesn't mean that any evidence will be sufficient. Then in answer to Mr. Ford, I think with respect to the King amendment, the original committee proposal in using the words "clearly supported by," I think, went a little too far. I think this is the way Mr. King feels from the way that his amendment has been worded. In a sense it seems to say that there must be a predominance of evidence on this particular point that you look at, and you weigh the evidence. Now, that isn't the question in an administrative hearing. The question is, is it supported not by a proponderance of the evidence, necessarily, but by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record? I think it is the place it should be. Once again, I would urge the support of the King amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, in behalf of the committee, I should urge you to defeat the King amendment. I think that the King amendment is ill advised. It apparently contemplates that the language adopted by the committee is some kind of a modified scintilla rule. Nothing could be further removed from the truth. Nothing could be further removed from judicial construction of the language adopted by the committee in terms of "erroneous in view of". We should recognize that the words "reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record" set out the scope which the reviewing magistrate can review in reaching his decision. He can go into the reliability, into the probativeness and into the substantial evidence on the whole record. The "erroneous in view of" is the conclusion that he finally reaches after screening the entire record. So the King amendment will not cure anything. It will simply reduce the broad concept of review that is contemplated in the committee proposal. I urge you to defeat the King amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I have a question through the Chair to Mr. King regarding some of the argument that has come on the floor and I believe what his intent was — and my suggestion being that he accept the amendment — after evidence, insert "in view of the whole record". Would that clarify the point he is trying to reach?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. King, does the gentleman care to answer?

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, I would have no objection to that amendment. While I'm here, will Miss Donnelly yield to me for a second?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss Donnelly yields to Mr. King.

MR. KING: I have a note here, "Mr. King, did Michigan manufacturers get to you?" It is not signed. At this time I would like to yield to Mr. Ford to correct a misstatement that he made.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I want to make it clear that the committee wrote the proposal and the amendment. The language which the committee has now adopted was approved by Mr. Cooper in his recommendations. The language which we struck, I understand from talking to my associates here, was authored by Mr. Joiner of our staff, so that as we now have it, apparently Mr. King was right in his first assertion to some extent and we now agree with Mr. Cooper on the committee level. (laughter) would have avoided all these problems in the first place, gentlemen. Mr. Habermehl. Mr. Habermehl passes. Judge Leibrand.

MR. LIEBRAND: Mr. Chairman and delegates, for reasons given by Delegate Martin, I support the King amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. King. Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Chairman, does Leibrand yield to a question?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand has yielded the floor, as the Chair understands. You may proceed.

MR. BLEDSOE: May I ask him a question?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. BLEDSOE: Judge Leibrand, are you familiar with the methods of the appeal and hearings before the present compensation commission?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, Delegate Bledsoe, I haven't had a workmen's compensation case either on one side or the other for over 20 years. For some mysterious reason, all the claimants go elsewhere. (laughter)

MR. BLEDSOE: Do you understand that presently there is a method of appeal from the hearing referee to the full board? The de novo hearing presently in the commission?

MR. LEIBRAND: I believe that is the full practice: an appeal from the deputy commissioner lies to the full board, which is within the same department or agency.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bledsoe, the Chair will ask you to confine your inquiries to the King amendment.

MR. BLEDSOE: I got permission to ask this question and you told me if he would answer it. The King amendment wasn't mentioned. (laughter)

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, I'll be happy to try to answer any question that the gentleman poses.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bledsoe, will you proceed in order? You will be in order asking questions relating to the King amendment.

The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. King, which the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. King's amendment:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, the only danger that I see in Mr. King's amendment is that the cases could go on and state that this would require not only "supported by" but "a preponderance of". I don't think that anybody would recommend this particular type of rule, because if you do, you are completely emasculating all of the advantages of administrative tribunals.

I don't say that the court has to rule this way under the "clearly supported" and perhaps that's why we did it, because that almost forces them to rule that way. But I think that there is a chance that they could rule on this basis. Now, the language which we adopted, the "clearly erroneous in view of the" is the language in the recent revised model state administrative procedures act, and this is taken as a minimum. There is nothing — I repeat, there is nothing — that would prohibit the legislature from expanding this if it so believed it to be in the best interests of the majority of the people. Now, we submit that in the past it probably hasn't. We do submit that there is language here which will allow the courts to get away from the scintilla rule. I suppose we could be here all night and say under "supported by" or under the language we have they could in effect still have the scintilla rule if the courts want to do it. But there is an opportunity for a court review and for the pointing out on the part of the aggrieved party that the decision of tribunal is erroneous in view of the evidence, as the reliable, probative, and substantial evidence.

I am afraid that if we adopt the amendment we may be going farther than some of us believe is advantageous at this particular time. There is a question here of separation of powers. There is a question as to why the legislature set up an administrative tribunal. There is still the question that it can dissolve it if it so desires. It can pass laws regulating and relative to its use. It has passed some. The committee felt that it had not gone far enough and that we should set out a minimum — I repeat, a minimum — requirement. The legislature can go farther; it could have gone farther, and some feel it has not. For the reason that I fear that we may be going too far and that the "supported by" would give an interpretation that we are getting up to where it has to be a preponderance or by the greater weight of, and in effect giving an appeal de novo and letting the circuit court or court of appeals — wherever the legislature decides it should be sent — get into this particular field, I would at this time feel constrained to oppose the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: Keeping in mind the word that Judge Dethmers gave us the first evening we were together, it appears to me that the committee has tried to put in some words that are going to be very difficult to interpret. To me as a layman, "evidence supported" is much easier to determine than "erroneous". Therefore, I would support the King amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I think this is one of the really very important parts of this constitution that we are writing here. I would like to urge again the support of the King amendment and ask for a division vote.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Yeager requests a division vote on the King amendment. Is the demand supported? It is supported. The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. King. Does any delegate desire to have it read again? The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. King's amendment is:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Those in favor of the King amendment will vote aye; those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment offered by Mr. King, the yeas are 67; the nays are 55.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is adopted. The secretary will read the next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Bledsoe offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "officer or body" by inserting a comma and "except the workmen's compensation commission,"; so the language of the sentence will then read:

> All final decisions, findings, rulings and orders of any administrative officer or body, except the workmen's compensation commission, existing under the constitution or by law, which are judicial or quasi judicial and affect private rights, shall be subject to direct review by the courts as shall be provided by law.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Bledsoe. Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Chairman, in view of the vote just passed, I would like for the chairman to strike that amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bledsoe withdraws his amendment. The secretary will read the next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. G. E. Brown, King and Brake offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 7, after "rights,", by inserting "privileges or licenses," ; so the language will then read, ". . . which are judicial or quasi judicial and affect private rights, privileges or licenses, shall be subject to direct review by the courts as shall be provided by law."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Brown, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I think that the amendment is self explanatory in that it adds the words "privileges or licenses." We have been speaking to that end in the course of the discussion of the previous amendment in connection with the committee proposal. I have discussed this with some of the members of the committee and they feel that judicial interpretation of the words "affect private rights" contemplates rights that are in the nature of privileges or licenses. Certainly it is in the field of privileges and licenses that the right to judicial review from a determination by an administrative body is most essential. I should like to add that it is with respect to this amendment that Mr. King and Mr. Brake were also cosigners. Apparently their names were lost in the shuffle in putting the amendment up on the wall. I would urge support of this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Brown. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I wish to oppose Mr. Brown's amendment. I think that he and I can probably agree on some kinds of licenses and privileges, but as I read this, I would take from it the fact that if the state plumbing board, for example, were to revoke a master plumber's license, that he could go to court and have the judge decide whether he was a fit man to have a plumber's license or not. Presently he can go to court and review whether or not the plumbing board had followed the law in revoking his license, but it is the plumbing board that makes the determination as to whether or not he is fit. And this applies to all forms of licenses. I think that Mr. Brown might be shooting at the liquor license proposition, which really isn't a license at all, but a contract between a distributor and the state of Michigan. I don't know whether this would accomplish that end or not. If a real estate or an insurance license was up for a question of dishonest conduct, or a question of conduct on the part of an insurance man that was inimical to what the department of insurance considered was proper conduct for a person so licensed, he could go to a circuit judge, have the circuit judge decide that the insurance commission didn't know what it was talking about, that they don't really understand what a good insurance man is, and he does. The effect of this would be to destroy the actual licensing control of all of the licensing boards in the state.

I respectfully ask that you defeat the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, in behalf of the committee, I should urge you to defeat the Brown amendment. The Brown amendment is a direct assault on the privilege doctrine as enunciated by the Michigan supreme court. It was not the intention of the committee to overturn that doctrine. If anyone should overrule the privilege doctrine, the supreme court should do it. We were reluctant to insert the word "privileges" because the impact of that word would undermine the entire regulatory process in the state. As Mr. Ford pointed out, presently there is a procedural due process that is attached to all adjudicative facts that come before an administrative tribunal.

What Mr. Brown's amendment will do is allow for a challenge on all legislative facts being implemented by the administrative tribunal. It is the opinion of the committee that this will literally open Pandora's box with respect to regulation of the entire administrative process in the state of Michigan and we urge you to defeat the Brown amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I think that the gentlemen that have spoken previously have nothing to fear but fear itself. In the first place, I would direct your attention to the opening paragraph which relates to those hearings which are judicial or quasi judicial in nature. Now, this will eliminate much of the Ford argument, although I think what he had to say was in support of the amendment rather than in opposition to it. He indicated the need for such an amendment to include these words.

I am not concerned about what Mr. Krolikowski has said. I think that the legislature, in providing for the review of what the record shall contain, would not open Pandora's box, so to speak, but rather would provide for a judicial review of an administrative determination which is judicial or quasi judicial in nature. When we say "affect private rights" it seems to me that we are limiting the language from what is contemplated by the very idea of having such a provision in the constitution. When we talk about "affect private rights" we are talking about those rights which are in the nature of a license or a privilege, since a driver's license and all of these things are not rights, but are privileges, and therefore in order to eliminate any possibility of the court misconstruing this language, we should put in the words "privileges or licenses". Now, if the committee on style and drafting thinks that the words "privileges or licenses" are not the proper words, I'd be happy to have them change the words to retain the substance of such words.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, there is no need for the Brown amendment. The objective of the Brown amendment can be achieved under the present laws of the state of Michigan. The Supreme Court of the state of Michigan has ruled repeatedly that procedural due process attaches to license revocation. This is an adjudicative matter and we are protected under the purview of the due process clause. The only area that it will open is the area dealing with legislative fact; the question as to the granting of the license. Now, this is an area that we do not want to invade by this constitutional amendment because the committee has not weighed the impact that this would have upon the regulatory process in the state of Michigan. It is further the opinion of the committee that the supreme court can bring in the adjudicative sources that are required in the revocation of licenses within the contours of the phraseology in the proposal mainly affected by private rights. There are numerous other courts, the courts of California, the courts of Massachusetts that have already brought licensing revocation within the language that appears in the committee proposal. It is the considered opinion of the committee that the Brown amendment is unnecessary and that it will merely cause uncertainty and possibly great harm in the regulation of state agencies.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, delegates, speaking solely in my personal capacity, I would endorse the Brown amendment. Delegate Ford speaks of the revocation of licenses and privileges and how we shouldn't interfere with them, how it is not necessary for court protection. Let's put that on a more personal basis. That plumber's license is his livelihood, the way he feeds himself and his family. That insurance man's license is his livelihood. And I feel that no man should be deprived of his livelihood without the opportunity for judicial review. I support the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof, did you seek recognition on the amendment offered by Mr. Brown?

MR. DANHOF: Yes, Mr. Chairman, I wanted to approve what Mr. Krolikowski stated, the reasons why we left these out. If you include the word "privilege" you might be indirectly stating that perhaps on advising the court that now a driver's license is no longer a privilege but it is really getting down to where it is a matter of right. Now, without debating the philosophical aspect of whether that is correct or not or whether that is the tack that we should take, we did not feel that this was the particular section in which to get involved. We have historically ruled in this state that in essence the right to drive a car is a privilege. Now, by inserting this language in here, I think that as Mr. Krolikowski stated, we are going to begin to indirectly state — and maybe adopt what California has — that it is not a privilege to drive a car; it's a right. Maybe this is all right. It's a matter of philosophy. If it is, I think we should put it in a separate section; perhaps state what are rights. But if you think this should perhaps be a matter of consideration by a more deliberative body — perhaps the legislature — if it wants to state that it is a right for everybody to drive a car, this is all right so far as I am personally concerned. But here I think we would just be creating what would lead to confusion. And I would recommend that the amendment be defeated and leave the language as it now stands as amended.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, it appears to me that we are taking a long, long jump forward on this last amendment in that we are going into a field where we don't quite see what the full significance of it is. It has long been the law of Michigan that a privilege or a license does not create a property right and if we are now suddenly going to declare that every privilege that we may have in the state of Michigan has become a right on which any interference by an administrative tribunal creates the right of court review, we are going to have more business in the courts than anybody ever dreamed of. It seems to me that the committee proposal is in proper shape at the present time but that if we add this we are going into a completely uncharted field. I think the committee should be supported on this and that the amendment should not be supported.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, until Mr. Ford's remarks I was inclined to think this language was unnecessary. But I now want to support Mr. Brown's amendment. Certainly, as a member of the committee, when we were talking about rights, I thought one of the most fundamental rights was, as Judge Leibrand suggested, the right to make a living at your trade. Now we are being told that this right is to be taken away from a man without any judicial review. I would remind you again that the whole scope of the proposal is not to substitute the court's action for the administrative body's action, but simply to review the administrative body's action and if it is clearly erroneous and if it is not supported by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence, then to correct it. So that if the administrative agency's act in taking away this license is so supported, the court has no right to substitute its judgment. Certainly, it seems to me it would be shocking indeed to tell a man that his neighbor, who can appeal to a court if he is fined $10 in a traffic matter, may not appeal to the court if his very job is taken away from him by some administrative agency. This would be a fundamental error in not protecting one of the most important rights that all of us have. I think that we should adopt Mr. Brown's amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to support the Brown amendment and I don't think it will have the earth-shaking effect that the committee seems to think. All it really would say is that when these privileges are affected by some administrative agency, that the person affected would have the right to appear in court; that a court hearing, of course, would be confined strictly to whether or not the facts support the suspension.

In regard to the matter of automobile licenses, I think everyone here is quite aware that we do exactly that sort of thing now, only we have to come in the back door of the court instead of the front door. We petition the circuit court for restoration of driver's privileges and the matter is reviewed there. This would simply permit us to do directly what we now do indirectly. It couldn't possibly create any constitutional rights that are described in here as privileges or licenses. For those reasons, I would support the Brown amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I shall be very brief, but I think that Mr. Martin hit upon something that should be answered and that is that in putting "privileges or licenses" into the language of this committee proposal, we are not establishing property rights that are protected as a matter of due process; rather, we are saying that they shall be subject to judicial review. This is not a test of whether or not there is reasonable doubt or whether there is a preponderance of the evidence but rather, is there evidence — reliable, probative, and substantial evidence — that will support the finding of an administrative body? Mr. Everett said this also, but I would like to point out that this is what the provision does. It doesn't provide that this is a property right that is to be protected by due process, but merely that this is a right in the nature of a private right, a privilege or a license that shall be subject to judicial review and subject to the test that has already been adopted.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, there possibly was some note of confusion generated a few minutes ago when Mr. Krolikowski indicated that in the state of California, the driver's license privilege had been construed to be a right, so we shouldn't be too concerned about this since it might be construed to be a right. Mr. Danhof said he agreed with Mr. Krolikowski but came up with a different conclusion, that drivers' licenses should not be construed to be a right. Now I am concerned that the people of the state are not faced with the situation after the constitution is adopted that the courts will draw nice distinctions between what a privilege, what a license and what a right is. I am certain that a person who has a driver's license and might happen to have it taken away, doesn't understand the distinction between privileges and rights. He wants to get into court and have decided the question of whether a certain individual acted arbitrarily and without sufficient reasons.

All we are saying here is that when an individual acts in the capacity of a prosecutor, a jury and a judge — and it doesn't matter whether he is affecting a privilege, a right or a license — we are going to give that person his day in court. And for my own money, I'd rather have my day in court than to leave the possibilities of a result with one single individual with those capacities of a judge, a jury and a prosecutor. I ask the adoption of this amendment and ask for a division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Boothby requests a division on the Brown amendment. Is the demand supported? It is supported. Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I just want to say, as a member of the judicial committee, I support this amendment. I had more liberally construed it apparently in committee than it is being construed on the floor. Therefore, this more clearly meets my opinion than when I voted for it in the first place.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ostrow, did you seek recognition earlier or were you just stretching back there? (laughter) Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, as a member of the judicial committee, I am afraid that I will have to take the position that I had to take as to most of the recommendations of the committee and say that I support the amendment. I recall having heard over the last several years a great number of complaints from people as to the autocratic, arbitrary attitude and decisions and treatment of the public by these administrative agencies and as time has gone on, those complaints, instead of decreasing, have increased. I don't recall having heard 1 single constituent, 1 single private citizen say that he thought that the actions of these administrative tribunals, when they have been arbitrary and have just disregarded the evidence and have sought to enforce — and this is actually what has happened — their social theories of what should be the situation on the people by this device, I haven't heard 1 say that he has thought that that was correct. I'm for the little people. I'm for the poor citizen who is trying to make a living, trying to abide by the law. And this applies to any future amendments to this one that would clip the wings of these administrative agencies and give some rights to the individual citizens at least to have a judicial review, a review to be sure that their rights have been protected and that these administrative agencies have at least had some grounds on which to act. I would be for, and I urge you to support this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair is advised that the secretary has an amendment to the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Martin offers the following amendment to the amendment offered by Messrs. Brown, King and Brake:

1. Amend the amendment by striking out "privileges"; so that the language will then read, "and affect private rights or licenses."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Martin to the amendment offered by Mr. Brown. Mr. Martin, do you desire recognition?

MR. MARTIN: Simply bearing on my earlier comments, Mr. Chairman, I think clearly the word "privileges" ought not to be in here because it totally confuses the fundamental distinction between a privilege and a right. Therefore, I offer the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ostrow, do you desire recognition on the Martin amendment?

MR. OSTROW: Yes, I would like to ask Mr. Martin a question.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may proceed, Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Martin, would this amendment mean that if a student were turned down on his application for admission to one of the colleges, that he could apply to the courts for redress?

MR. MARTIN: Well, I think if the word "privileges" is in there, he could, because it is certainly a privilege to submit an application, it is a privilege to walk down the street, it is a privilege to do almost anything you can think of that we do without asking somebody's permission.

MR. OSTROW: I just wanted that clarified.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Martin to the amendment offered by Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, to this colloquy that has gone on, I merely say that I think that the question raised by Mr. Ostrow does not constitute a judicial or quasi judicial function.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Martin to the amendment offered by Mr. Brown. Those in favor will say aye; those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted. The question now is on the amendment offered by Mr. Brown, on which a division has been ordered. Those in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Messrs. G. E. Brown, King and Brake, the yeas are 82; the nays are 37.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is adopted. Are there further amendments to section a of Committee Proposal 95?

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: In view of the hour, I move the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof moves that the committee do now rise. Those in favor of the motion will say aye; those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The committee will rise.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair will recognize Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration several matters, of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 94, A proposal pertaining to the probate court; and reports this proposal back to the convention with 3 amendments, recommending the amendments be agreed to and the committee proposal as thus amended do pass.

Following are the amendments recommended by the committee of the whole to Committee Proposal 94:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "districts" by striking out the comma and "or combine the office of probate judge with any judicial office inferior thereto in any county with less than 25,000 population with supplemental salary as provided by law,".

2. Amend page 1, line 10, by striking out "and shall do so on recommendation and report of the supreme court".

3. Amend page 1, line 14, after "dependents" by striking out the comma and "except as otherwise provided by law".

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on agreeing to the amendments recommended by the committee of the whole.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. President, in view of the complexity of these 3 amendments, I would ask particularly that they be divided; that they be considered separately. And further, I will ask for a roll call on amendment 1 as read by the secretary and amendment 3 as read by the secretary. I anticipate that perhaps there will be additional amendments offered and I would prefer and recommend that the convention not concur in amendment 1 and amendment 3. Perhaps this will provoke considerable discussion; I am sure it will and, therefore, if it be the pleasure of the convention, I will move at this time that the decision on concurring in the recommendation of the committee of the whole be held over until the session of tomorrow.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Is the demand for a roll call vote on amendments 1 and 3 supported? It is supported. Now the question is on the motion of Mr. Danhof to postpone until tomorrow action on the report of the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 94. Those in favor will say aye; opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 95, A proposal pertaining to appeals from administrative tribunals; has adopted several amendments thereto, and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: I have the following announcements: the committee on rules and resolutions will meet tomorrow, March 6, during the noon recess in room I; and the committee on emerging problems will meet Tuesday, tomorrow, in committee room I on the third floor at 7:30 p.m. Frank G. Millard, chairman.

The apples this evening were grown in the Turner orchards of Saginaw but are furnished by Mr. Burton Richards of Berrien county, who is fresh out of apples. (laughter and applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Dr. Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: Mr. President and fellow delegates, the committee on the judiciary has been under fire for a day or so and I think that they can take care of themselves — or at least I hope they will get a bit of inspiration and courage from this story. This man received a letter from the collector of internal revenue. The letter said, "If you don't pay the back installments of your income tax, we are going to cause you a lot of trouble." He wrote back and said, "I'm not going to pay the back installments of the income tax because in the spring we had a flood and it washed out half of my crops. Then we had a dry spell and I lost the rest of my crops. I was forced to sell my cattle at a loss. The termites moved into my house and it's about to fall down. Lightning struck the barn and it burned down. My son was convicted of stealing and sent to the penitentiary. My wife got discouraged and ran away with the milkman. I'm not going to pay the back installments of the income tax because I'm just interested to see what kind of trouble you can cause me." (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Incidentally I think the convention will be glad to know that today happens to be the birthday of 2 of our delegates, D. Hale Brake and Dr. Anspach. (applause)

MR. ANSPACH: May I acknowledge for Mr. Brake and myself your very nice tribute? And yet I want to say this: a man went home one time after receiving such an accolade and he said to his wife, "Do you know how many important men there are in the world?" and she said, "There's one less than you think." (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Dr. DeVries.

MR. DeVIES: Mr. President, the committee on administration will meet Wednesday at 1:00 p.m. to consider Resolution 78 introduced by Messrs. Binkowski, et al, on the post adjournment affairs; Wednesday at 1:00 p.m.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase.

SECRETARY CHASE: I have the following requests for leave from the convention: Mr. McAllister requests leave from tomorrow's session; Mr. Davis wishes to be excused from tomorrow morning's session; Mr. Anspach requests to be excused from the session of Wednesday, March 7, to speak to a community luncheon on the work of the convention; Mr. Follo requests leave to be absent from the session of Friday, March 9; and Mr. Perras requests leave for the sessions of Thursday and Friday, March 8 and 9 to attend the funeral of a very close friend and business associate.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the leaves are granted.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. President, I move that the convention do now adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor will say aye; opposed, no.

The motion prevails. We are adjourned until 9:30 tomorrow morning.

[Whereupon, at 10:20 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 9:30 o'clock a.m., Tuesday, March 6, 1962.]

NINETY-THIRD DAY

Tuesday, March 6, 1962, 9:30 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

We are very happy to have with us this morning Mr. Gust's pastor, the Reverend Bertram Atwood of the Grosse Pointe Memorial Church, who will give our invocation.

REVEREND ATWOOD: Our Father, as we begin this day of deliberation, we would remember that this is a new day, fresh from Thy hands; that it is unlike any other day Thou has ever made; that it has cost Thee long ages to bring it forth. Teach us now that we cannot use this day well without Thy guidance and direction. Help us to put the welfare of our state and her people above party and selfish consideration. Thou knowest our motives, our hopes, our fears. Thou art concerned about what is said and done here. Grant us when night falls to have a clear conscience before Thee, and be able to look every man in the eye without wavering. Bless us according to our deepest needs, and use us for Thy glory. Through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present please vote aye.

SECRETARY CHASE: Have you all voted? The machine is now locked, and the attendance will be recorded.

Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Absent with leave: Messrs. Davis, Donald Doty, Downs, Miss Hart, Messrs. McAllister, Murphy, Pellow and Tweedie.

Absent without leave: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: Under the item of unfinished business the president lays before the convention the report of the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 94, A proposal pertaining to the probate court; which was reported on yesterday with 3 amendments, which amendments by request of Mr. Danhof are to be considered separately; and on amendments 1 and 3 the yeas and nays have been ordered. The first amendment is as follows:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "districts" by striking out the comma and "or combine the office of probate judge with any judicial office inferior thereto in any county with less than 25,000 population with supplemental salary as provided by law,".

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. President and members of the convention, I think if you will check your journal at the time that this particular amendment was considered and voted upon you will find that the vote thereon was carried by approximately 4 votes, with less than 100 delegates voting. As a consequence, I feel that this particular matter should be given as serious consideration as it had in the committee.

The committee is of the opinion that this is a valid provision, and that it will allow the legislature — and it will be just the legislature — to give flexibility, if it so desires. There is nothing self executing about this particular provision. There is nothing mandatory about it. And it will be solely within the province of the legislature to do what it deems and feels should be done under the particular circumstances. The committee was of the opinion that such a provision should be included, and I think now that if we leave it solely to the legislature it would be advantageous, and it would be a step forward which would not endanger or make this particular matter self executing, but would leave it with the legislature in their discretion and after their study. Consequently, in view of the other amendment, I would seriously urge and recommend that the amendment be not concurred in; that a no vote be cast with regard to this particular provision and amendment; and that it be adopted as written by the committee, taking into consideration the further amendment of the sentence.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the amendment. The yeas and nays have been ordered. Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. President, would you have that particular amendment read over again?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase, would you read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: This is amendment 1:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. President, I would like to rise to support the committee on this particular amendment. I intended to speak last Friday but my absence made that impossible, so I would like to make just a few remarks in support of the committee this morning. I'm afraid that I have to disagree completely with my friend and neighbor, Delegate Radka. Our districts overlap. His county is also in my district that I represent here.

Even before the convention this was a subject that I was particularly interested in, and I think the delegates to this convention should be. We spend a great deal of time worrying about a method of selection of supreme court justices without stopping to think that for every individual that appears before the supreme court probably a thousand people are concerned and interested in the matters before these smaller courts. This subject, then, to the people of the state, is probably considerably more important than the matter of the selection of supreme court judges. It seems to me here that the committee has attempted to do a most commendable thing. The counties of Michigan, of course, are vastly different, both in their needs and in their means of financing what is important to the people of each county. And when we go from a population of about 2,600,000 in Wayne down to a population of 2400 in the smallest county, we must recognize that the legislature must have some flexibility if it's going to provide a system that will benefit all of the counties in Michigan.

I'm particularly concerned in this matter of children and the treatment that children will get statewide. I don't believe that children and their needs should differ from county to county. I don't believe that the place of residence of a child should determine the kind of care that that child can get. In the outcounty area the big problem is trying to finance methods of taking care of our juveniles when they are in trouble, when they are emotionally disturbed, or when they do get into conflicts with the law. In the big counties the problem does not exist, actually. There is plenty of financing — plenty of money to set up a very fine system, as Wayne county now has.

In the small counties we simply don't have the kind of financing that will enable us to provide any sort of counseling service for these juveniles. Now, nothing could be more important. Mishandling of a juvenile by our courts can result in a ruined life. If the child is not treated properly at 15 or 16, or even at ages below that, it affects the child for the remainder of his life.

We have to have some sort of flexibility in this provision. We cannot now lock out the possibility of doing something in the way of furnishing these services to the children of the state. And the big problem is not the name of the court, not the particular setup or the preservation of a status quo; the problem is the financing of such services. Very obviously a county of 2400 people is simply not going to be able to afford a child guidance clinic or psychiatric counseling for the children when they get into trouble. We must, then, have some flexibility. The committee of the whole has provided one means, the combining of these small counties into a probate district. This I think is fine for some parts of the state. In some parts of the state it will fit very well. We can then set up our child guidance clinics on a multicounty basis, probably even set up our handling of juveniles on a multicounty basis, and provide this kind of counseling to the children of that area. It isn't the whole answer, however. There are a number of Michigan counties that will not fit readily into a combination with their neighboring counties.

In those areas I submit that there is a better way, a way of integrating our courts horizontally; that is, combine a number of these courts that we might have in these small counties into 1 court of general jurisdiction. That's what the committee provision tried to do. I submit there is nothing wrong with that. I think that probably for a long time we have gotten used to the idea of designating a court for a specific or particular purpose. We are trying then to extend this idea of specialization into our inferior courts.

On the circuit court level we are doing exactly the opposite. The circuit courts now, under the new judicature act, will not even have a chancery and law division. We are assuming that a circuit court has general jurisdiction, and I submit that there's a reason why these inferior courts can't have a similar type of setup, with an advantage to everyone. This would, then, in almost every county in Michigan, provide a means of financing an adequate budget that would permit the county to furnish at least a minimum of counseling service, of psychiatric care, to the children that might become involved in troubles in that county.

The one way in which it will be done will be by the combining of offices and combining of budgets of existing courts. Every county has a budget, and actually a pretty adequate one, for the probate court. Many counties have budgets for other inferior courts, municipal courts, J.P. courts — and of course on the matters where J.P.s now collect fees, we are proposing later on to set up that court on a budget and provide a salary for the judge. If we can, then, combine these budgets we can furnish an adequate budget for one court.

This would do another thing. We've been talking about magic numbers. There's one magic number in the law now, the age of 17. In most of the counties in Michigan the youngster under 16 of course will appear in the probate court. Most counties have a county juvenile agent, a man whose job it will be to oversee these youngsters when they do get into trouble and keep them out of probationary status, and to regulate their conduct. The moment, however, a child passes the age of 17, such a service is no longer available to that child. In most counties in Michigan, in the municipal and justice courts there are only 2 alternatives when a youngster gets into trouble; either he goes to jail, or a fine is assessed against him. There are no probation officers for the youngsters of that age. If now we can again set up a system whereby this same county juvenile agent can oversee the activities and can provide for probationary service over these youngsters, we may keep them out of the circuit courts and keep them away from this handicap of having a felony on their record for the rest of their lives.

Many, many times people who have been in my position or are in my position now, as a former prosecutor, have found cases where there was nothing else we could do with the youngsters but to take them up to circuit court, and finally wound up sending them to Jackson prison for offenses which, had they been a few months younger, could have been handled on the probate court level. And it's no fun sending a 17 year old to Jackson prison; I can testify to that. In other words, the combining of these courts would make available all of the services we have now in the county to youngsters of all ages, right up to the age of 21.

We have another problem up there. If we can get a competent person to man these probate courts, generally it is on a part time basis. A lawyer will take the job if he can spend 2 days or 3 days a week at it and continue his practice in addition. It has to be done that way, because most of these counties dealing with the probate court alone cannot provide an adequate salary for that judge. This of course has many evils. The bar association is most unhappy about a judge competing with them, we'll say, in the other courts. And we have a situation where the probate judge one day might be defending a criminal case in circuit court, and might the next day be handling a matter on the juvenile level.

There is no conflict between the probate court and these other inferior courts, and no reason why they cannot be combined. I do not propose that this be a mandatory provision in any sense. I simply say that the legislature should be empowered, where that solution might be the best solution, to permit these counties to integrate these courts, to set them up on a single court basis. And I think it would be presumptuous of us here to say that the legislature shouldn't have such power.

Now, the only opponents to this provision are those delegates interested only in maintaining the status quo; interested only in protecting the incumbents in office. It seems to me that is hardly reason enough to oppose a provision that could be of great benefit to these smaller counties.

In every other aspect of government, in the home rule provision and in the metropolitan district provision, we recognize the fact that counties differ; that counties should then have an opportunity to work out their own problems. Here, for some reason or another, 51 delegates last Friday decided that the counties in this field should have no opportunity to do that at all; that we should freeze into the constitution a provision that would prevent them from working out their own problems. Certainly here is an opportunity for those that are interested in what happens to our juveniles to permit these counties to make some adequate provision to take care of these emotionally disturbed kids that we have all through the state. And here is an opportunity to make sure that the geographical distribution of those children shouldn't affect their rights to justice and to proper care.

[Vice President Hutchinson assumed the Chair.]

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon concurring in the amendment. The Chair next recognizes Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: A point of information I would like to direct to the secretary. There seems to be some confusion this morning, Mr. Secretary, as to what a yes and no vote would do in this case. Would you please clarify that?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The secretary will clarify the situation.

SECRETARY CHASE: Amendment 1 was adopted by and therefore recommended by the committee of the whole, and the question will be on concurring in the amendment, which will strike from section a the language indicated. If you do not wish to concur in the recommendation of the committee of the whole, you should vote no.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: I think a part of Mr. Habermehl's remarks were addressed to the first portion of this section, which was not stricken out on our previous consideration of the matter. There was also taken out of the committee proposal the language which immediately follows the second section, "and shall do so on recommendation and report of the supreme court," and in my voting on this present amendment I shall assume that that language will remain out.

I'd like to ask the chairman of the committee, however, this question. Is there any doubt in your mind, Mr. Danhof, that if the legislature chooses to exercise the power conveyed by this section, it would have the right to attach a referendum clause to the statute?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The gentleman yields to Mr. Danhof for a question.

MR. DANHOF: They would have that absolute power, in my mind, if they should so desire, Judge.

MR. DEHNKE: Thank you.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. President, I've been listening to a good bit of this discussion on the probate courts and the taking care of our juveniles in the state, and it would seem that those speakers who are asking you to put through this proposal which would supplement the salaries of the judges of the smaller counties are suggesting that the rest of us here are opposed to helping any child that gets into trouble; that we are heartless; that we just have no souls. Actually, I think that we want to help them just as much as we possibly can. We go out of our way to do this. We would be willing to spend money to do this.

However, this particular proposal takes care of the situation by giving these smaller counties an opportunity to combine, to get together to work out their problems. There's no reason on earth why they can't do it.

Oh, I could understand it back in the days when even I, myself, used to say, "Giddup, Maude;" when I couldn't get across the county. However, today I get into my Comet and I can drive across quite a few counties and be there, if I left at 7 o'clock in the morning, at the county seat, going across a good many counties to get to that county seat so that I could take care of those cases were I a probate judge.

Actually, what are we doing here if we do as Mr. Habermehl wishes us to do? In giving these additional funds we are letting Oakland county, Genesee, Kent, Wayne and a couple more supplement those salaries. I think we had better start getting back to fundamentals and start worrying about what we are going to do in this state when these manufacturers and these businessmen who furnish these tax moneys get angry at us and leave the state.

I'm not alone in being worried about these taxes. There were men worried about this a good many years ago. I happen to have a clipping here from the Detroit Free Press in which a very conservative writer talks about who is doing the squeezing. And just to quote from Judd Arnett's article in the Free Press:

> For a long time the taxpayers of Detroit have been supporting the development of outstate Michigan. In the early 1920s the late Alex Groesbeck, then governor, spotted the drift of things to come.

Now, as I said, the committee provided for the situation in the smaller counties. They can combine and get themselves a probate judge. And there's no reason why we can't do that. And, frankly, I'm for deleting that section which supplements the salary of a judge at the expense of someone else.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin, the delegate from the seventeenth district.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, I just want to comment on Mr. Habermehl's statement, because I think it is the most enlightened statement that we have had on this general subject so far this session. Every study that we have made shows that he is absolutely correct; that we can't have adequate probate courts in these counties unless we have enough base, enough cause for full time operation, so that we can pay these judges adequately for full time work, and staff those courts properly. So I want to second what he said. I think it is very important that we have this provision in here to give the legislature some flexibility.

Just one fact which I think is important to you — it was called to my attention last night that 40 per cent of all the arrests made in Michigan are of children under 17 years of age. This is a big problem — and it's a big problem for the smaller counties just as well as for the larger ones. It needs this kind of provision to make it possible to get those courts beefed up to the point where they can do the job that they are supposed to do.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Bay City, Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I would like to support the committee in this proposition and what the chairman, Mr. Danhof, said; and in particular recall your attention to the fact that when we voted on this last Friday we had less than 100 delegates on the floor, and it lost by 4 votes. So it may be important to review several of the most significant aspects of this.

While it is fresh in our minds, I would like to comment upon Delegate Madar's concern about Wayne county supporting outstate Michigan with this supplemental salary business. Now, this is really not the intention of the committee. All probate judges are now paid as provided by law, and all we are actually providing for is that their salary — if there is a judicial office combined with the probate judge — be augmented by some supplemental salary provided for by law to compensate for the additional duties, as provided by law, as the legislature may determine. This salary of probate judges now provided by law is not paid for by Wayne county. It is paid by the county in which the probate judge is working. So I hope this will put Mr. Madar's mind at rest.

Now, in speaking with other delegates since last Friday, I found that they had 2 concerns about this particular proposal. In particular, the first concern was with the clause which followed it and which was deleted in the committee of the whole, "and shall do so on recommendation and report of the supreme court." Last Friday I spoke and voted in favor of deleting that clause, and I do so again today. And I note that our committee chairman has not asked for the yeas and nays on that particular amendment. In speaking with other delegates, I feel certain that that should no longer be of concern to us.

Also, I would like to call to the attention of the delegates who may not have been here last Friday that this proposal will not affect Muskegon, Kent, Montcalm, Isabella, Midland or Bay counties, or any county south of these counties. It will, in the discretion of the legislature, only affect counties north of that line, of which there are 39 that fall into that general classification.

Another concern about giving this discretion and flexibility to the legislature was the fear that the legislature would just arbitrarily do this. I don't know whether you have had any experience in getting the legislature to act. Our county has, with regard to a judicial matter in setting up a second judgeship. But getting the legislature to act requires a concerted effort, for the most part, on the part of the district which is involved. And I would expect that before the legislature would act in either this alternative or in the first alternative, you would find that it would be the people in that area requesting the legislature to solve the problem in their area. And all that the committee has done, actually, is provide alternatives so that should the people go to the legislature, the legislature will be free and have sufficient flexibility in order to adapt a solution to the needs of that community. This is a flexibility feature. It is not self executing; it is not mandatory. It merely supplements the first alternative that we have provided.

I urge that you vote no, so that you will vote down the deletion, and will thereby be affirming the committee in its original proposal.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes the delegate from Wayne, Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. President, I would like to take issue at the outset with Mr. Habermehl's statement that those of us who spoke the other day in favor of the amendment are worried about the tenure of the probate judges. I don't believe, Mr. Habermehl, that this in its wildest application could have any effect at all on the county that I come from. However, as I indicated the other day, if we are going to remain true to the principle that we want to separate a juvenile function and we have arrived at the idea that we have 1 court that up until now we have managed to keep adversary type proceedings out of, it seems that we are moving backwards when by constitution we indicate an intention to combine adversary and criminal proceedings with the present probate court.

Now, the probate court isn't a new concept in Michigan. Mr. Higgs said yesterday that many states don't provide for a probate court. Well, every state provides for a probate court, but not every state calls it a probate court. In some states they are called county courts, and in other states they have different names, but the probate function is performed, and I'm sure all the lawyers will agree, in the same manner as it is in Michigan by some court in every state in the union. And it is most generally true that what we consider to be probate functions, above and beyond the juvenile function, are handled by a court and in a manner and under procedures that are entirely different than the procedures that obtain in our courts of general trial jurisdiction.

The only thing that strikes me as a member of the judiciary committee, about this part of the proposal, is this: we have already provided that in the small counties, in order to be able to pay more money and in order to be able to serve more people with fewer judges, that they can combine the counties into districts. We have provided that this could be done for 2 purposes that were urged upon us. One was, as I have stated, that the cost of maintaining the court would be spread around a little thinner. Two, that probably by doing this they could obtain better juvenile facilities by having 1 juvenile judge for 3 or 4 counties instead of 1 serving a single county. And he of course could have referees, much as the system we have in Wayne county, and you would have a pretty nice system.

Then we come down to the situation where we are talking contrary to what we established with the very first article that we adopted on the judiciary, and that is that we wanted a 5 tier court system; and now we are talking about what the judicial committee came to know as vertical integration. We are not going to have a 5 tier system throughout the state of Michigan.

Mr. Habermehl said that he felt that people in one part of the state should be treated the same as people in another part of the state. I cannot under any circumstances be blamed for not having a personal interest in what happens to anybody in a county under 25,000, because I'm not sure, except for delegates to this convention, that I even know of anyone who lives in such a county. But if we are going to be consistent about establishing a uniform court system, and if we believe what we said at the beginning, on the first day, that we should have a 5 tier court system, with a clear 5 tiers, and that we should evolve the future of the court system within the framework of this so that we don't have splinter courts like the recorders court and common pleas and all the rest of them going up in the future, then let's do that. Now in the 5 tiers we have provided a very distinct line between the probate court and the fifth tier, the probate court being the fourth tier from the top, and the fifth tier from the top being some form of local court or countywide court, whatever the legislature might wish to provide.

Now we are being asked again to sacrifice at the altar of flexibility. I guess that everybody likes to use this phrase because it seems to pick up about 10 votes from someplace. There are 10 people that come to attention and vote whenever you say something is flexible. And I guess I've been guilty of this, too. But the flexibility is already here. There is nothing in this constitution, as I have indicated before, that prevents the legislature from adding to the duties of the probate court in these counties any duties that they wish to keep that judge busy. And, as has already been indicated, the only constitutional authority that court has comes from its juvenile function; all the rest of its functions are by statute. What we are getting involved in here is a situation where you can amalgamate the fourth tier and the fifth tier of the court system, and actually we will not have a 5 tier system; we will have a 5 tier system in counties over 25,000 and a 4 tier system in counties under 25,000.

For these reasons, and not because of the reasons that Mr. Habermehl has indicated, I would urge you to vote in favor of the committee of the whole's recommendation, and against the judicial committee's recommendation with respect to this particular phrase.

[President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Sleder.

MR. SLEDER: Mr. President and fellow delegates, the amendment that I think the delegates should be talking to is not the amendment on whether to combine counties for probate courts, "The legislature may combine 1 or more counties into probate districts." This is not the problem, and it seems that many of the lawyers are trying to confuse us in an attempt to say that this is what we are discussing. It is not this. It is the next part of the sentence, which says that the legislature or the supreme court may combine the work of the probate court and inferior courts. They likewise state the fact of the juvenile problem. It seems to me in their argument they are adding to the problem of the juveniles when they are adding work by combining the probate court and the inferior courts. They are complicating the problems in the juvenile section of the probate court rather than aiding it. I therefore feel that we should be speaking only on the part that is under discussion, the fact of combining the probate court with inferior courts in counties of under 25,000 population.

Likewise, Mr. Higgs states that this affects only counties north of the Bay City line. I'm sure on a poll you will find that a majority — and a large majority — of the delegates representing this area are in favor of striking this part of this sentence from the committee report.

I therefore urge you to vote yes on the present amendment before the convention.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Lawrence.

MR. HABERMEHL: Point of information, Mr. President. I believe that the present amendment makes no reference whatsoever to the supreme court. Is that correct?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Amendment 1:

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. President, members of the convention, I feel that this particular section that we are dealing with now is one of the most important in the judicial section. I hope that we will obtain as large a vote as possible on it from the members of the convention.

If I understand this proposition right — and from things that have been said here this morning I am wondering if we do understand it — if you vote no at this time you in effect vote to restore the original language, which would allow the legislature to provide for the combination of the probate court with other courts inferior thereto in counties of 25,000 or less, in the hope and in the belief that by so doing we will create a better court system in those counties, and particularly, in this instance, with regard to the treatment and care of juveniles. Now, if that is right and if a majority vote of the convention against this amendment will restore that provision in the constitution, then by all means, if we have meant what we have said and we are trying to provide a constitution that is flexible — and I make no apologies for that word "flexible" — we should vote no. My only regret is that the committee saw fit to put 25,000 as the maximum, rather than some higher number.

We are trying to frame a constitution that will meet the needs of the people of this state for years to come. This isn't just a matter of legislation that can be amended or changed next year, or should be changed next year. This is a permanent provision, we hope. Our efforts should be to try to create a better system for the people of the state of a lasting nature. And by all means there is no indication whatever that this provision will inure to the detriment of the people of the state, particularly in the smaller counties.

I urge you to vote no on the present amendment, and in that way support the recommendation of the committee.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. President, I feel that what we have before us is not only a significant portion of the judiciary article, but of the entire constitution, because I believe that the whole question, for example, of the bill of rights is one that infuses every section and every clause of the constitution; and we are dealing with an area which has a direct relationship upon the existence, perpetuation and vitality of constitutional rights. I say that because, first of all, this judicial committee proposal is to take the probate court and use it as a basis for constructing a kind of court in which we could get the highest standard and quality of justice. I think what we have to realize is that, after all, the purpose of the exercise of the judicial power is justice, and we are seeking to do that in this proposal.

I do think that a no vote, as explained by Mr. Lawrence, is in order here, for this reason: if you can take the probate court, which has a preserved, defined jurisdiction here with regard to juveniles, as stated in the last sentence of this section, and at the same time preserve that confined jurisdiction and add to it such functions as may from time to time be added which are now the province of the justice of the peace or circuit court commissioners, you are then able to secure an attorney — a person who is qualified to administer the kind of justice that would meet the local needs and state needs.

Now, why is that so important, particularly with regard to the exercise of the probate function? Today a juvenile does not have the protections of the Constitution of the state of Michigan or the United States. We have stated in our constitutional decisions that a juvenile may be deprived of constitutional rights, because we want to create a court that stands in loco parentis to a juvenile — that is, in place of the parents — so that we don't treat him as a criminal. We treat him differently, so that there can be a more sympathetic and compassionate approach, in order that we might get the salvageability of the youngster before us. That's the key thing — the salvageability of the youngster.

Now, if you have a person who is not a lawyer and who may not have all the qualifications which we would like to see here, you have a situation in which a youngster doesn't have constitutional rights, and you have sitting as a magistrate a person who may not even recognize that there is a deprivation of constitutional rights. He doesn't even have to give the person constitutional rights which he may not even recognize in the first instance. A juvenile doesn't have the kind of constitutional rights which even the most hardened criminal has; namely, the right to be informed of the charges against him, the right to counsel, the right to cross examination, jury trial — all the protections. And here you are going to place him before a person who doesn't even know that these rights are being denied in the first instance. So that it becomes more necessary than ever before to have a skillful person to extract the truth from a confused sea of hearsay, speculation, rumor and suspicion which constitute the basis for many of the pronouncements in juvenile court today. Most of the statements made in juvenile court are the product of secret investigations — of ex parte investigations, where the person who makes the investigation is not subject to cross examination. What is the purpose of cross examination? The purpose of cross examination is to get at truth. Truth is the basis for a judgment of the court. And you do not have these fundamental rights in a probate court which administers the juvenile matters. So it makes it even more important, in order to get a proper standard of justice, to create the opportunity for the legislature to take the probate court and add to it functions which are now the functions of other courts of inferior jurisdiction, particularly J.P.s and circuit court commissioners, so that you can make a court which meets the needs of the kind of justice standards we want today.

Now, I was very much disturbed by some amendments proposed at the time, that wanted to say, "Well, if the state wants to set these kinds of standards for local areas, then the state ought to pay for it;" as if the local people are not interested in a higher standard of justice. This I refuse to believe. I believe that if the facts are brought to the attention of all of the people, and if, as Judge Dehnke introduced before us, there is a distinct possibility, with the power of the legislature to create a referendum provision attached to the idea of synchronizing or amalgamating these judicial functions, it would be supported by the local people who indeed want a high standard of justice.

I am moved by the data called to our attention that 40 per cent of all the arrests in the state are of juveniles. This means that there must be seasoned, mature judgment to protect the rights of young people. After all, if these people do not see how constitutional rights are protected, how then do we have a model for them to emulate as adults?

It seems to me that the proposal which is before us — namely, the judicial committee proposal — permitting the opportunity of the court to be enlarged is a very fine proposal, constructive thinking, original thinking; and I think that it ought to be supported, and a vote no on the matter before us is in order.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Allen.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. President, I, too, favor a no vote. But I would like to make this point. I feel that all of the arguments which we are hearing today we heard at considerable length last week. I sometimes wonder, having gone through all of the arguments in the committee of the whole and then coming back into the plenary session and going through them all again, if we aren't going to be here possibly on June 15, rather than ending on May 15. Therefore, since all of these arguments have been heard, I should like to move the previous question.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The previous question has been demanded. Is that demand seconded? Those in favor will rise. There is a sufficient number up.

The question now is, shall the previous question be put? Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. The question is now on the amendment. Mr. Chase will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Amendment 1:

PRESIDENT NISBET: The yeas and nays have been demanded. Those in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Mr. Heideman.

MR. HEIDEMAN: Will you explain that vote again?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Those in favor of the amendment adopted by the committee of the whole will vote aye. Those opposed to the amendment adopted by the committee of the whole will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

SECRETARY CHASE: On agreeing to amendment 2, the yeas are 104, the nays are 29.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is adopted. The secretary will read the third amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Amendment 3:

3. Amend page 1, line 14, after "dependents" by striking out the comma and "except as otherwise provided by law".

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. President and members of the convention, on this amendment the vote again was within 4 votes. I think it was 61 to 57 or 58. A number of the delegates were absent. We have had a great deal of discussion on this particular section. We spent a day on it. The committee's idea, as put forth in the report, was to grant to the probate court constitutional jurisdiction. That, if in the opinion of the legislature, it would become wise to be able to move this by providing a substitute, the flexibility—and I use the word almost with fear and trepidation—would be there.

I want to point out something. The jurisdiction has been granted. There is nothing the legislature has to do to give the jurisdiction to the probate court. That is there. And I think Mr. Higgs made quite a point here when he said that we know that unless there is a real concerted push, the legislature very seldom makes any particular change. This would require the taking away — not the granting, but the taking away — and I submit that unless there is an adequate remedy or substitute provided, it would not be taken away.

Now, we have had all of the arguments about the family court and the juvenile court, and many others, and someone will speak on that, and I believe if you have any such provision or any such thoughts, by accepting and returning to the original wording of the committee you will allow this to be done.

I know this provoked a great deal of discussion. I would hope that today we might keep our remarks to a minimum and get on and vote, and try to finish other parts of the judicial article. I would urge that the convention not concur in the recommendation of the committee of the whole, and that you vote no.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mrs. Judd.

MRS. JUDD: Mr. President and members of the convention, I agree with Mr. Allen, and also with the chairman of the committee, that this was thoroughly discussed in the committee of the whole, but the fact that there were such a large number absent and the fact that the vote was very close makes it, I think, somewhat dangerous to vote without reiterating some of the points that were made.

I hope this is the day that we are going to trust the legislature and leave this matter to it. I am in support of the committee's proposal to include the phrase "except as otherwise provided by law," for the following reasons. First of all, to delete it would be to violate the constitutional principle of flexibility. Except as to the justices of the peace in the old constitution, neither in the 1908 constitution nor in the committee proposal for a new constitution do we find any other specific assignment of jurisdiction to any court. The assignment of the juvenile jurisdiction to the probate court in the 1908 constitution might have been justifiable in 1908 on the grounds that it was a pioneering venture. Today, however, the concept of a nonadversary handling of juvenile matters is well established, and it is time for us in the 1962 convention to carry this pioneering venture into our own age of complex urban life. To do this we must open the way, constitutionally, to judicial recognition of the family as a whole as the setting within which juvenile problems must be handled.

The question before the convention, then, is whether we wish to provide the legislature with greater flexibility in determining the most suitable handling of the judicial aspects of these problems, particularly whether we should make it possible for it to allocate such jurisdiction to a higher level court. The unification and coordination of the judicial facets of family problems can only be fulfilled or can best be fulfilled by making a constitutional change.

Last week there was quoted on the floor here the case with respect to public act 186, 1913, which created, or attempted to create, a court of domestic relations in counties of 250,000 or over, and was declared unconstitutional, in that it deprived the probate courts of their constitutional jurisdiction over juvenile delinquents and dependents. We have further the word of such authorities, as to the need of constitutional change to achieve this, as Maxine Virtue. Those of you who have read her pamphlet, published by the University of Michigan, entitled, Public Services to Children in Michigan: A Study of Basic Structure, have read her conclusion, in which she recommends a study of changes needed in the legal machinery, and lists the following areas that might be considered, and I quote:

> Amend the constitution to provide for a more efficient judicial system by 1 of these methods:
> 1. Establishing a juvenile court on an area or circuit basis with especially qualified judges;
> 2. Providing a family court in the nature of a special tribunal with a specialized judge;
> 3. Transferring the present juvenile jurisdiction to the circuit court.

Now, what is this committee proposal, with this phrase included, designed to do? This is not the time or the place to discuss the details of the family court concept; but I wish to quote a few sentences from a 1959 publication of the national probation and parole association, now I believe called the national council on crime and delinquency, as a means of establishing their authority behind the concept. For instance, they state:

> The purpose of a family court act is to protect and safeguard family life in general, and family units in particular, by affording to family members all possible help in resolving their justiciable problems and conflicts arising from their interpersonal relationships — and please note

> — in a single court, with one specially qualified staff, under one leadership, with a common philosophy and purpose, working as a unit, with one set of family records, all in one place, under the direction of one or more specially qualified judges.

If we were to read further in this report, we would see that they particularly recommend that such a court be placed on the level of the highest trial court. They recommend that it be established by the legislature. And if you were to read the suggested list of subjects that would come under their jurisdiction, you would see that it is still child centered; that it includes those aspects of family life as they affect the child that would come into a juvenile court.

Now I think we should again recall the attitude of the Michigan bar on the question of the constitution and the family court. The other day I read to you a portion of the report of the bar committee on domestic relations law, quoted in the Bar Journal of September 1959. I will not reread it now, but will remind you that, first, it indicated the desirability of a family court; second, that the family court would be possible only by constitutional amendment; and, third, that the proposed constitutional amendment should simply permit the legislature to establish such a court, and to confer its jurisdiction. It is interesting to note that on this committee were Maxine Virtue and Judge John Conlin.

I would remind you also of the recent poll of the Michigan bar taken on request of the convention's committee on judicial branch, in which question 22 was, "Should a family court be established?" And the answer was: yes, 2,952; no, 1,995. This was followed by the question, "If your answer is yes, should it be established by (1) the constitution?" — this got 979 votes — or (2) by the legislature?" — and this got 2,067 votes. In conclusion, then, I think that we must do some real soul searching as delegates in the way in which we make up our minds on this question.

Those of you who were here last week will recall that the only testimony brought to witness in behalf of deleting this phrase and freezing in the jurisdiction of the probate court over juvenile matters came from the probate judges.

We have heard many times through the months of this convention the need to elect our government officials so that they might be responsive to and close to the people. We delegates were elected by the people. I believe that this is our chance to demonstrate the sincerity and validity of this claim. We must ask ourselves as individuals, when we vote, "To whom are we closest, the probate judges or the people? Shall we, as representatives of the people, examine this question and determine it from the point of view of the welfare of the families in our increasingly complex urban life?"

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. President, fellow delegates, last week for about 2 days we were treated to a very lengthy discourse on this particular issue. The whole gist of the discourse was we must not mix up these adversary courts with these nonadversary courts.

I suggest to you that that completely missed the point of what the committee was trying to do here. As one who practices in the probate court, and as one with 5 children under the age of 17 and having a personal interest in this, I suggest to you that the name of the court has absolutely nothing to do with the issue. The issue is, simply: shall juveniles be treated as juveniles by our courts?

I think that Delegate Nord mentioned that the age of 17 is a rather ridiculous thing, and if it were at all possible to insure that all juveniles would be treated in a manner that would attempt to effect their rehabilitation, in a manner that would attempt to make honest, decent citizens out of them, rather than to punish them, I would be in favor of any such approach. The real question, then, is the nature not of the court, or the name of the court, but the nature of the proceeding. If we assume that the probate court alone must have this, a particular court by the name of the probate court, we are assuming that only the judge of that court can look down off the bench and see that the person appearing before him is a juvenile. While I have had many arguments with judges, I have never found one that couldn't determine that the person in front of him was a juvenile. The nature of the proceeding then is the important thing, not the name of the court.

I believe that there must be something done here, as Mrs. Judd has mentioned, to unify, to bring together in 1 court all matters dealing with the family. Certainly no divorce can be granted without that court concerning itself with what is going to happen to the children of this marriage. Certainly no juvenile may be treated in any court with the idea of rehabilitating him or her without looking into that child's background and finding out what happened here in the marriage, in the family, that caused this child to become delinquent. If, then, all these matters can be considered in a proceeding, in any one proceeding, the entire picture will be before the judge of that court. Now, to say that only the probate court may do this simply doesn't conform to the facts. The circuit judges in our circuits throughout the state do it every day in a divorce matter.

Whether or not this jurisdiction should be in the circuit judges, whether it should be in the probate judges, or whether it should be in an entirely different sort of court setup, is a matter still to be determined in the future. Yet the amendment that was adopted here by the committee of the whole would freeze it into one place for as long as this constitutional provision endured. It would prevent the legislature from trying to effect this sort of unification of family matters.

I think the real issue, ladies and gentlemen, was put by Delegate McAllister when he said, "Judge Jim Lincoln is a friend of mine, and I promised him I would vote to delete this particular provision." The real issue here then is the concern on the part of some probate judges with any efforts or any attempts to tamper with their existing jurisdiction. I think we had all better recognize that any incumbent officeholder does not particularly desire any change in his power or jurisdiction. Yet for these officeholders, these particular probate judges, to say to this convention, "Don't you tamper with my jurisdiction; and what's more, make sure that the legislature will never do so," certainly is asking a great deal of this convention.

We are supposed to be proposing a constitution that will endure for a long period of time. To freeze juvenile jurisdiction into 1 court is simply not wise or good constitutional practice. I would urge a no vote on the matter of concurrence with the amendment of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. President, last week I heard so much from our delegates on how their probate judges thought on this matter that I went home and called my probate judge. To reply to Don Habermehl, I want him to know that my probate judge never called me or contacted me and told me how he stood on this issue. I consider my probate judge as probably one of the greatest authorities in this field. Certainly he is the bible in Michigan. Judge Arthur E. Moore is one of the most renowned probate judges in the United States. I called him yesterday, and he returned my call, and I said, "Judge, Committee Proposal 94 is on the floor, and I have heard so much talk about the last few words, 'except as otherwise provided by law,' I would like your thoughts on it." He said, "It should not be in there." I said, "Well, there's a great argument going on about family courts. The people are worried about them." He said, "That has nothing to do with it. They can still have their family courts." Therefore, I am prepared today to strike this language.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. President, we heard a great many arguments on this the other day. I move the previous question.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The previous question has been demanded. Is the demand seconded? Those in favor will rise. There is a sufficient number up. The question now is, shall the previous question be put? Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed, no.

The motion prevails. The question is now —

MR. FORD: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: This is a matter of perhaps personal privilege, or maybe of parliamentary inquiry, I leave it to the Chair. But I think you may have noticed that none of the proponents of the amendment that is before the body now have yet taken the floor, although I guess one or more of us are on the list; and what is happening now is that all of those people opposing the minority report amendment which was adopted by the committee have had their say, and we are going to proceed to vote without hearing the other side. This is all right, I suppose, with respect to those who were here, but it has already been stated that there were 25 people absent the other day when we had the discussion.

I just call this to the convention's attention when you vote on moving the previous question.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The previous question has been ordered, Mr. Ford. The question is now on the amendment as adopted by the committee of the whole. Mr. Chase will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment is:

3. Amend page 1, line 14, after "dependents" by striking out the comma and "except as otherwise provided by law".

PRESIDENT NISBET: Those in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed to the amendment will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On agreeing to the amendment recommended by the committee of the whole, the yeas are 63, the nays are 72.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is not adopted. This completes the amendments recommended by the committee of the whole. Are there other amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Sleder and Mr. Plank offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 9, after "county" by striking out "with less than 25,000 population"; so that the language will then read:

> The legislature may combine 1 or more counties into probate districts, or combine the office of probate judge with any judicial office inferior thereto in any county with supplemental salary as provided by law.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment. Mr. Sleder.

MR. SLEDER: Mr. President and fellow delegates, the discussion relative to the amendment to eliminate the combining of the probate court with other inferior courts, which was not adopted, was applicable only to those counties under 25,000 population.

With the points that were made here before the convention relative to the advantages of combining these 2 courts, the inferior courts and the probate courts, the combining of these 2 courts certainly shouldn't be limited to counties of under 25,000. It should be likewise as good for counties of 28,000 or 30,000 or 33,000, and we can go on continually. If the advantages are there for the counties under 25,000, it is very, very evident that they are there for the counties of over 25,000. Likewise, it has been brought out that this power should rest with the legislature. And if we are going to give the power to the legislature to determine what courts should be combined, the probate courts and the inferior courts, we should likewise give the power to the legislature to determine the population of the counties that this should apply to.

We here in Lansing should not sit and determine that the figure of 25,000 is a sacred, mystic figure that should determine if a probate court and an inferior court should be combined. I therefore urge you to vote in favor of this amendment, and strike the figure of 25,000 from the constitution.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I find myself in agreement with Mr. Sleder and Mr. Plank, and I would support their amendment. I think that someplace there is a breaking point where the combination of these powers would simply overwork an already full court, but I'm not satisfied that the figure of 25,000 or 35,000 or any fixed figure is exactly that breaking point.

The principle which we fought for before, which the convention has now upheld, I think is applicable in a wider area than a range of 25,000. I recognize, as I say, that someplace along the way the legislature no doubt would draw its own line. But I think the amendment is valid, and I think that we should support it.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Radka.

MR. RADKA: Having hastily discussed the substance of this amendment with Mr. Plank and Mr. Sleder, and after hearing the remarks of Delegate Habermehl this morning and being foreclosed to add anything from the other side of the question because the previous question was moved, I felt that we should keep within the spirit as it was set forth by Mr. Habermehl that we should have a uniform court system throughout the state. I feel that if we remove this population figure we will help to keep ourselves honest. I urge you to support the amendment.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. President and members of the convention, I am not going to voice any personal convictions, but I want to say this: the figure was not just pulled out of the air.

I agree that perhaps there is nothing magic about 28,000, so Alpena county might get in, or 30,000 would be as good. But information was furnished to the committee that at a figure around this 25,000 mark it would not become economically or judicially feasible to do what we allow the legislature to do; that is, about 25,000, maybe 30,000, maybe 35,000, if you have a probate court that has any activity in it in the probating of estates or the handling of minors, and any juvenile activity, depending of course on the staff and the competency thereof, you reach a point where any additional duties would not be feasible. Now, I, personally — and I speak only personally — think that the legislature would probably recognize this particular feature.

I only want to state that the 25,000 was not just pulled out of a hat as something which we thought sounded like a good number, and maybe we wrote it in there. There was some justification for it. That is why the committee voted the 25,000, and that is why the vote came out of the committee.

We did consider this amendment. This did not prevail for the reason that there were a number of delegates on the committee from the metropolitan areas who did not feel that this should be in because it was not feasible and probably would not be carried out. That's why the population limitation was written in there. I only give you the explanation of the committee.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. President, fellow delegates, you heard from Mr. Sleder. Mr. Sleder's county of course is Grand Traverse, with 33,000 population. I'll give you the views of the other county in the northern lower peninsula that would not be included in this 25,000 figure. Alpena county has 28,556, and in my county there is a great deal of interest in being able to combine these courts.

I think, too, that trying to put a population figure in the constitution is a very difficult and unwise thing to do. If, for example, the county were to exceed that figure on the next census, does that mean that they would have to break up any court system that they might have established, and go back to separate courts?

Leaving it, as it is, to the discretion of the legislature and with the assumption that these counties would request the legislature to act, seems to me to be the most advisable thing that we could do. For that reason I would heartily support the amendment offered.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Heideman.

MR. HEIDEMAN: Mr. President, fellow delegates, I would simply like to concur with the amendment to strike out the 25,000 figure. I think it would be wise to leave this to the wisdom and the judgment of the legislature.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Young.

MR. YOUNG: Mr. President, I support Mr. Sleder's amendment. In my opinion the figure 25,000 is purely arbitrary, and it is dangerous to fix inflexible figures in the constitution. It is calculated to last for a number of years. This is especially true in the face of the rapidly changing population pattern within our state, as well as the great advances that are being made in transportation.

Now, I don't know what type of scientific examination the judicial committee made in order to arrive at the magic figure of 25,000, but I am told — and perhaps Mr. Danhof can correct me — that the figure started off somewhat higher, and was amended lower and lower, until finally it got to a figure that was lower than the population of any county of any member of the judicial committee. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. President, I was just asked if I was going to defend myself, and I guess I wasn't paying attention, so I can't. I would like to echo what Chairman Danhof said. This figure was not picked out of the air. It was our thinking that there is a valid line to be drawn. Larger counties are not in the same position as the smaller counties with regard to the applicability of this provision. I think there is some merit in the argument, certainly, that the drawing of this line properly is a legislative matter. I think there is, therefore, merit in the particular amendment, except that I have a strong feeling that the amendment is advanced — and I would say this not without foundation — in an effort to strike the whole proposal in that connection. If this amendment were offered in good faith and with a sincere desire to make it workable and flexible, I could support it. I would certainly like to have reassurance from the sponsors of the amendment that that is not their purpose.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Plank.

MR. PLANK: I'd like to ask Mr. Danhof a question, if I may.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Would you care to answer, Mr. Danhof?

MR. PLANK: Mr. President, Mr. Danhof, if you had so much reason for picking the figure of 25,000 and it was not just picked out of the air, why don't you share it with us?

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Plank, I thought I had. The information was given to us that at approximately this particular figure, assuming a reasonably active county from the standpoint of probation of estates and juvenile activity, if additional duties were added this would make a full time court in counties of up to about 25,000 or that particular number. Now, I can't give you the particular breakoff, but as the population increases and you get up to maybe 35,000, 40,000, 45,000 or 50,000 the duties assigned to the probate court become almost a full time job in and of themselves. It was for this reason that we came to the figure of approximately 25,000. As I say, I'm not sure of the magic number, and I think by study the legislature may arrive at this figure by its independent judgment.

Basically, the figures around this area came to me from information provided by the deputy court administrator, who is the one charged with studying the activities of the particular probate courts. It was for that reason that the majority of the committee voted to put in the 25,000 figure. And it was for that reason that it went through. Now, whether you strike it or not, perhaps the legislature will arrive at it.

That, Mr. Plank, was the reasoning for the 25,000 figure. At least in my opinion I think this is borne out by the committee records.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Plank.

MR. PLANK: I would say that Delegate Danhof has given us the argument we need to strike this 25,000 from the proposal, by saying that he feels the legislature might arrive at that figure, too. So let's let it.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I wish to support Mr. Sleder's amendment because I think that we have to be consistent. It seems that the convention has now determined by its last 2 votes, notwithstanding what we did last week, that there isn't any real need for a distinction between the circuit court and the probate court, or between the probate court and municipal courts or justice courts, or whatever might come below them. It seems that step by step the convention is going toward the idea that was advanced by some people very early in the convention that really what we should have is a single court on a supermarket basis, with divisions. Mr. Higgs prefers the example of New York. Some others prefer the example of California. But a long time ago the committee on judicial branch decided that we did need a 5 tier court system with 5 distinct tiers, and I thought this convention voted that way a few days ago.

Now, you may notice, for example, that none of the proponents of the 25,000 figure came from counties that are going to be affected as long as you leave the magic 25,000 in there. In other words, this is something that they think is so good that it's good for everybody else, but don't touch us, because we live in a county that has more than 25,000. And they now seek the protection of a constitutional guarantee that although you have flexibility, you aren't going to have it in their county; you have it for somebody else. I think it is also apparent that the delegates here who are representing the areas that will be directly affected by this figure of 25,000 were in opposition to the total concept.

Now, if we are going to remain consistent and say that we want flexibility, and we want the legislature to make this decision, then let's take the 25,000 out and let the legislature decide which counties are going to have a separate 5 tier system and which counties are going to have a supermarket court by some other name. If you really want to get flexible, let's go back and reconsider Committee Proposal 90, and say that there shall be a supreme court and such other courts as the legislature may provide, and let it do what it will with it. Now the question is, at what point do you stop being flexible? Is it at 25,000, or 26,000, or 17,000? Where do you want to be flexible, and where do you stop?

I want to take issue with the members of this committee who indicate that this figure was arrived at by some sort of consideration of facts and matters urged upon us by experts or people interested in the matter. We arrived at the figure of 25,000 by a process of elimination; by a series of amendments that started up here and kept coming down, down, down until 20 of the 21 members on that committee were no longer affected by it.

I want to be honest with the convention and say that the only reason I voted for it was because it wasn't going to touch a county that's anyplace close to me, and I felt that if somebody outstate felt that strongly about it, they ought to be entitled to have it. But I was surprised to find, after the committee took this action, that I haven't run into a single delegate to this convention who comes from a county of under 25,000 who wants this provision in there. Now, why is it that those of us from the large counties are so anxious to give our cousins from the smaller counties this wonderful flexibility that we are afraid to have for ourselves?

Now, if you're going to be consistent and are going to go all the way and amalgamate the court system into a supermarket court, let's do it for everybody right up and down the line as far as the legislature wants to go. Give it all the flexibility in the world.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. President, members of the convention, for the reasons that I stated earlier, I would like to support this amendment as a real step forward. I believe I stated that I regretted that that limit had not been raised. Now, if someone will be good enough to put in an additional amendment to line 9 and take out the words "inferior thereto," and we pass both of these, I think we will have a provision we can all be proud of and that will be flexible, and that the people of the state of Michigan will benefit by.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Bonisteel.

MR. BONISTEEL: Mr. President, fellow delegates, I think that we have heard all the arguments that can possibly be made, and there are a number of arguments which I think are pertinent to this about flexibility and inflexibility, and all that sort of thing. I move the previous question.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The previous question has been demanded. Is that demand seconded? Those in favor will rise. There's a sufficient number up. The question now is, shall the previous question be put? Those in favor say aye. Those opposed, no.

The motion prevails. The question now is on the amendment of Mr. Sleder.

MR. BARTHWELL: Mr. President, I demand the yeas and nays.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The yeas and the nays have been demanded. Is that demand seconded? There is a sufficient number up. Mr. Chase, will you read the amendment?

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment by Mr. Sleder and Mr. Plank:

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Sleder and Mr. Plank, the yeas are 121, the nays are 8.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is adopted. Are there any other amendments to Committee Proposal 94?

SECRETARY CHASE: There are none on file, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Radka.

MR. RADKA: Mr. President, I rise to a point of parliamentary inquiry. I offered an amendment, while we were sitting as the committee of the whole, which in effect provided for a referendum of the people in the event any combination or districting of probate courts was encouraged between counties. The amendment was after "districts" by inserting "upon approval of the electors of the counties being combined". My question is this: if I offered this amendment at this time and it were defeated, could it be offered again at the second reading of this particular proposal?

PRESIDENT NISBET: The answer is no, Mr. Radka.

MR. RADKA: That is the question I wanted to ask.

PRESIDENT NISBET: If there are no other amendments, then Committee Proposal 94, as amended, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 94 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. In each county organized for judicial purposes, there shall be a probate court. The legislature may combine 1 or more counties into probate districts, or combine the office of probate judge with any judicial office inferior thereto in any county with supplemental salary as provided by law. The jurisdiction, powers and duties of such courts and of the judges thereof shall be prescribed by law. They shall also have original jurisdiction in all cases of juvenile delinquents and dependents, except as otherwise provided by law.

Sec. b. Judges of probate shall be nominated and elected at nonpartisan elections in the counties or the probate district in which they reside and shall hold office for a period of 6 years and until their successors are elected and qualified. In multijudge counties or districts the legislature shall provide by law for staggered terms.

General orders. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering matters on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Van Dusen.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The committee will be in order. When the committee last sat it was considering Committee Proposal 95, dealing with appeals from decisions of administrative tribunals. The committee had made certain amendments to Committee Proposal 95. There are further amendments to be considered. Before proceeding with their consideration, the Chair will ask the secretary to read Committee Proposal 95 as it has been amended to this point.

SECRETARY CHASE: Committee Proposal 95 has been amended in the following particulars, in line 12, strike out the word "clearly" — this is the net effect of that amendment — so the language then reads, ". . . in cases in which a hearing is required, whether the same are supported by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record."; and in line 7, after "rights,", by inserting "privileges or licenses,".

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 95, see above, page 1440.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary will read the next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon has offered the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 9, after "law.", by striking out the balance of the section.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I didn't expect we would get to this so soon. I am just going to make reference to some of the arguments that were used yesterday in asking for the inclusion of this particular section in the constitution, and ask that you consider whether the matter that I am asking you to delete could not be better handled through statutory legislation rather than through a constitutional provision.

It was indicated that this whole section was new, and that much of the material contained therein is already to be found in statutory matters in a majority of other states. Now, I make reference here to the fact that the first sentence gives to the legislature a sufficient grant of power to take care of the second sentence. The second sentence starts out by saying, "this review shall include, as a minimum," and in essence then it is prescribing to the legislature a minimum which obviously isn't necessary for the legislature in order for it to take sufficient action upon the matter.

Now, I was little bit confused yesterday at the manner in which the second sentence was looked upon by members of the committee. First, we went ahead and supported the recommendations made by the committee to insert the language "erroneous in view of the," and then we followed this up by going back and taking out that language and putting back "supported by." Rather than get into a hassle as to whether it should be "erroneous in view of the" or "supported by," it would be better to delete the sentence and leave the questions that are to be determined here to future legislative action.

I ask you, how many times in the constitution do we have need for setting a minimum prescription for legislative action? And this is really what this is doing. "This review shall include, as a minimum . . ." I maintain that in the first sentence, where we have already inserted "privileges and licenses," and we have a question of judicial, quasi judicial and private, you have a sufficient and broad enough grant of power with the additional words "as shall be provided by law" to give sufficient scope to this kind of provision without getting into legislative detail.

For the sake of brevity, to eliminate the confusion that has ensued over the second sentence, and to keep more strictly in line with what is good constitutional language, I would ask your support for this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon. Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would be opposed to the amendment, for the simple reason that this would leave us exactly in the situation that we find ourselves in today.

From line 9 down we have provided for a minimum; that whether or not the legislature provides for this in the establishment of one of these bodies, we have this. As it is today or under the amendment, the legislature would simply create, as it does today, one of these bodies, and in the enabling statutes it provides for the scope of review to be determined by the body itself, by its own rule. Now, if the body does not provide for a scope of review, there is absolutely no recourse. Under the committee proposal, as proposed, there would be at least the saving recourse that we have from line 9 down. By striking this, and by having the newly created body not providing for a scope of review, then we find ourselves exactly in the situation that we are in now. Some of these bodies have not provided for any scope of review, or review at all, and we have to rely on what we can find in the constitution itself. For these reasons I would be opposed to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon to strike the second sentence of section a. Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I support the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon. I believe the last sentence is just chock full of legislative material, none of which in my opinion is worth a nickel. Every bit of it will cause trouble. There are many words in there which are certainly of no value, such as "reliable, probative, and substantial." All of those words will cause trouble in the courts. Further, all of these words — and keep in mind that the object of these words is to prevent the legislature from requiring less review than this — all of these words will simply require the court to go into the same business as every administrative officer and board. They will have to ignore practically all of the work of the administrative officers and board, and do it all over again, because they will have to determine whether the evidence is reliable, for example. How are they going to find out whether the evidence is reliable without a complete and thorough review of the evidence? Of course, as to whether it is probative, it raises nothing but legal problems, because if it isn't probative it could not possibly be evidence. As to whether or not it is substantial evidence, that is now basically the rule in any event. But putting the 3 words one right after the other can certainly do nothing but cause harm.

My feeling is that Mr. Faxon is correct. This last sentence does no good. It introduces legislative matters. It is chock full of troublesome legal words. In addition, as a substantive matter, it would practically wreck administrative boards and officers. It would certainly change the entire course of administrative law, and it would mean that wherever there is a hearing by an administrative officer or board, that is basically nothing but a matter of form. It will have to be done all over again by a court. It seems to me that the least we can do with this section is as Mr. Faxon suggests, and that is to strike out the last sentence.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon. Mr. Ford, do you seek recognition?

MR. FORD: I rise to support Mr. Faxon's amendment. I think at this time I would like to point out the weakness of this whole new section and what we are actually doing. There were crocodile tears cried here last evening for the poor plumber who has his license taken away and hasn't got a chance to go to the court. This isn't quite true, and I think the people who said it knew that it wasn't true. The present law provides adequately for an appeal in this kind of a matter.

If we leave the section the way it has been amended now, with this last section intact, no one can guess what happens with the number of people who apply for licenses of one kind or another not just from the state of Michigan but from every municipality in this state and every county in the state. What happens in a city the size of Detroit with just the applications for an electrician's license, a plumber's license, or any one of the hundreds of licenses that are required? Is it the board of experts in the field of electricity who determine, on the facts, whether the man is competent, or is it a circuit court that determines that the man is competent? I think that, as Mr. Krolikowski so aptly put it, we have opened the door for all sorts of mischief. Now, really, from the legal point of view, I think we are missing the real question of what kind of a change is attempted by Committee Proposal 95.

I took a look at some cases with which some of us are familiar who have been involved in these civil service matters, from the municipal point of view, and the nature of the appeal. And in deciding these cases in the past I think the supreme court has laid down very clearly the concept of what we are talking about here. And the section of the constitution that causes the appellant to come a cropper in these appeals from administrative sections is not in the judicial article at all. The section that has been relied upon by the supreme court in the past for setting down the rules that it has set down on the scope of the appellate jurisdiction of the courts is in article IV, section 2 of the present Constitution of 1908, which has been passed by us, and will be in the new constitution. This is what we call separation of powers.

In the case of in re Fredericks — which was an appeal from a decision by a rather famous judge, Homer Ferguson, in which he was sustained, incidentally — the supreme court said with respect to the action of a civil service commission at the local level — in this case it was the city of Detroit —

> . . . in attempting to provide for an appeal from orders of the civil service commission to the circuit court, imposed nonjudicial functions upon the court, and was, therefore, unconstitutional, violating the Constitution of 1908, article IV, section 2.

Now, they go on to define why they feel it is a violation of the separation of powers provision of the constitution. There are a lot of details here, and I won't burden you with the nature of the proceedings. Testimony was taken before the civil service commission, the civil service commission made a decision on the basis of that, and the appeal was taken from it.

> Although partaking of that which is judicial, its acts are not truly of such a nature, and are therefore termed quasi judicial functions. This view may appear to be in conflict with the broad language of some of the earlier decisions of this court, which held that removal for cause was an exercise of judicial power.

And then they give the citations of the early Michigan cases.

> Moreover, we believe the rule to be more correctly expressed in Fuller vs. Attorney General [and there are several citations] and the act of removing for cause to be primarily administrative and, although judicial in a sense, not an act of such a nature that it requires performance by the judicial branch of the government or permits an appeal thereto.

A decision of the civil service commission upon a hearing to remove for cause, not being the result of judicial action, but being at the most a quasi judicial act of an administrative tribunal, is not subject to review by the courts on appeal, and an attempt by the legislature to create a right of appeal would fail as an unconstitutional endeavor to foist nonjudicial functions upon the courts.

However, the foregoing proposition would be inapplicable in the event that the legislature did not intend a review de novo by the circuit court but contemplated a review by certiorari and thus expressed its intent by the indiscriminate use of the word "appeal".

What they are saying, in effect, is the court should have the right to review, and the court does not have the right to hear an appeal; but the court, as soon as it substitutes its discretion for the discretion of the administrative body, and substitutes its wisdom for the wisdom of the administrative body as to the substance of the facts, is crossing over the line and exercising an administrative function which is contrary to the concept that the administrative part of government should be kept separate and apart from the judicial function of the government.

Now, the court went on to sustain the right of the circuit court to hear this kind of appeal, again by a section that we are not talking about here, but under that provision which we have already reenacted which says that the courts have the general right to superintend and control inferior tribunals. On that basis our supreme court has said that the circuit court is the proper place to hear and review, and must have some sort of an appellate right, because of its general power to superintend or supervise the inferior tribunals of the state under the present Constitution of 1908, article VII, section 10. Now, we have already voted in this convention to reinstate, in substance, the language of article VII, section 10.

In a more recent exposition of this same principle, which is again a case involving a removal of a police officer — and Judge Pugsley has an intimate acquaintance with these, because this whole series of cases grew out of a series of trials that Judge Pugsley conducted — and these were people who had been convicted of crimes who had been removed as police officers, and this is their appeal after removal by the civil service commission:

The trial board shows a valid reason for its action. Such action therefore must be affirmed. We must not usurp the functions of an administrative body.

The foregoing principle is applicable to the case at bar. Even though the defendant trial board was acting in a quasi judicial capacity, it was still part of an administrative department.

So when we put the magic word "quasi judicial" in here, we are not doing much of anything because what we are trying to do by indirection is commingle the administrative and judicial functions; and if we want to do this, then we should go back to article IV, section 2 and do it there, and say that when we mean there shall be a separation of powers, there shall be a separation of powers, except; and then take over the job of the legislature and set out the exceptions.

In talking about this thing, in talking about quasi judicial powers, what we are actually asking the court to do in the future is to get some new nomenclature here and decide whether when they said quasi judicial in these cases, they meant the same thing as we mean when we are talking about quasi judicial here. I gather from what has been said by everybody advocating this section that they mean by "quasi judicial" a clear cut distinction between judicial and administrative, and that quasi judicial actually means judicial, and not something else or something less. But the supreme court has said that "quasi judicial," when you are talking about a function exercised by an administrative body, is not really a judicial function at all, but is an extension of the administrative function; and that to use the word "quasi judicial" as a method to get into the judicial function a part of the administrative function is a violation of the separation of powers. Again, in the subsequent cases, article IV, section 2, is alluded to and I think that this points out the exact problem that we are facing.

Now, if we adopt the Faxon amendment, at least we will cure some of the problems that have been created by the other amendments that were adopted yesterday. If we adopt the Faxon amendment, what we are saying — and we should understand that we are saying this — is that the legislature may, notwithstanding the language we have put in about the separation of powers, confer upon the judicial branch functions of the administrative part of government, or the executive branch, if you please. If we are going to confer administrative functions on the court, let's say so. But we are here putting into the constitution in the judiciary article a section which is going to be in conflict with what we have already said, and I'm not guessing that it is going to be in conflict. I'm citing to you examples of where the Supreme Court of the state of Michigan has said that the language we are now putting back is in conflict with such an attempt to commingle the judicial with the administrative function. And if we clearly intend to invade the administrative function by the judiciary, then we should do it by a clear exposition of that intent, and not by language that is going to leave it to the court to wonder whether we really meant that we were going to do something different than we had done in the past, and whether we really meant it when we reenacted the separation of powers section of this constitution.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, I move the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof moves the committee do now rise. Those in favor of the motion will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The committee will now rise.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration one proposal, of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee has had under consideration Committee Proposal 95, has considered one amendment thereto, and has come to no final resolution thereon. That completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Any announcements?

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on style and drafting will meet in Room K at 8:00 o'clock this evening. William B. Cudlip, chairman.

Mr. Hoxie requests leave of absence from the afternoon session.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, he will be excused.

The Chair recognizes Judge Mosier.

MR. MOSIER: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I move that we recess until 2:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Judge Mosier. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. We are recessed until 2:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 11:40 o'clock a.m., the convention recessed; and, at 2:00 o'clock p.m., reconvened.]

The convention will please come to order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Mr. Sterrett has filed a request that he later on be excused from the remainder of the afternoon session.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, he will be excused.

Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering matters on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen. Those in favor say aye. Those opposed, no. The motion prevails. Mr. Van Dusen

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The committee will be in order. When the committee last sat it was considering Committee Proposal 95, dealing with review of decisions of administrative tribunals. The question is upon an amendment to Committee Proposal 95 offered by Mr. Faxon, on which 4 speakers had sought recognition, the first of whom is Mr. Krolikowski. The Chair will recognize Mr. Krolikowski if he desires recognition at this time.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: I yield.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Krolikowski passes. Mr. King, do you desire to be recognized at this time?

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, one of the delegates has pointed out that if we permit this present language to stand, that we have opened the door to all sorts of mischief. I would suggest that we have opened the door to justice. I won't answer specifically the statements made by that delegate, because he was talking about the word "quasi judicial," and Mr. Faxon's amendment, which I believe is still on the floor at this time, does not touch upon that matter at all. All we have really done here is to provide for justice, and I direct your attention specifically to line 7 of this proposal, where we are talking about judicial and quasi judicial determinations.

I think it is awfully easy to be misled to think that we are going to permit review of every single administrative board hearing in the state of Michigan. Of course that is not so at all. We are only talking about — and I'll refer right to the language, "Final decisions, findings, rulings and orders of any administrative officer or body existing under the constitution or by law, which are judicial or quasi judicial. . . ." Those are the areas where we think that the judiciary has a proper and legitimate function. And I really find it hard to believe that anybody would deny the appellant the right to a judicial determination of judicial or quasi judicial matters. I don't think that any harm can come from this, and I am convinced that a great deal of good can come from it. I urge that the Faxon amendment be defeated.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman and delegates, we discussed this general question for some 2 hours last night. The hall wasn't empty. There were, by my count, from 125 to 130 delegates here, and they heard that discussion. I have heard it said that more lawsuits were lost by asking one more question than by any other means. I'm beginning to suspect by my experience in this convention that more measures are lost by one more speech than by any other means. So I'm not going to repeat my remarks of last night. But I do want to say this. If Committee Proposal 95 last night had any merit at all, the Faxon amendment cuts the very heart out of it, in my opinion. You heard speakers here last night — people with actual experience — tell you of their experiences before these boards, bureaus and commissions, and the kind of treatment and the kind of rulings and decisions they got. Now, the Faxon amendment would leave these poor benighted souls who have business before these bureaus, boards and commissions in exactly the same position that they are now. Remember this: Committee Proposal 95 does not provide for a new trial; does not require the presentation of witnesses. The complete process of review under this proposal is simply a review on the record made before the board of review or commission below. It is a summary proceeding, and if the people of the state of Michigan who have business before these boards are going to have real justice, something in the nature of Committee Proposal 95 is necessary.

I urge the defeat, and the resounding defeat, of the Faxon amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, if it will expedite the vote, I will pass.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Shackleton.

MR. SHACKLETON: Mr. Chairman and delegates, Committee Proposal 95 is one of the most important we have in our proposed constitution. I have heard no lawyers suggest that laws not be reviewed by the courts. When bureaus or bureaucrats can issue rules and regulations which essentially have the effect of law, they too should be reviewed. There isn't a business man here, undoubtedly, who hasn't at some time or another run up against a bureau, a department, or a bureaucrat somewhere who has been autocratic, has been paradoxical, has hardly been civil at times, and this is one way that we can to some extent protect the poor businessman who is subject to the autocrat's whims and fancies as the occasion might dictate. I certainly would urge the defeat of the Faxon amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, it appears that the debate is dying down. I think that everyone has had a chance to properly survey this question. And if anyone hasn't made up his mind relative to this issue, if he wants to raise his hand and get further information on it, I would be happy to supply it. But in the event that isn't necessary, let's vote on the question.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon to Committee Proposal 95 to strike the second sentence thereof. Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, I don't quite understand the posture of the committee. Has the question been moved by Mr. Brown, or are we still open for discussion on it?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is before the committee for discussion, Mr. Krolikowski. Mr. Brown happened to be the last speaker who had sought recognition, and therefore the question was about to be put. If you seek recognition, you are in order.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. In view of the fact that the Faxon amendment is consistent with an amendment being sponsored by Mr. Bledsoe and myself, I am constrained at this time to concur with the Faxon amendment. Now, lest the record portray me as being Janus-faced, or making a hasty departure from the initial committee position, I should like to state that I was assigned a committee task, and although the committee chairman had been apprised that my personal sentiments were at odds with the committee position, I felt incumbent to sustain the committee's position to the point where my personal views, as embodied in the Bledsoe-Krolikowski amendment, came out before the committee. By reason of the fact that the Faxon amendment concurs with the Bledsoe-Krolikowski amendment, in that the Bledsoe-Krolikowski amendment would strike Committee Proposal 95 in its entirety, and the Faxon amendment strikes only one portion of Committee Proposal 95, I should now like to address myself to the Faxon amendment.

The real purpose of the Faxon amendment, as I understand it, is to strike that portion of the committee proposal which is statutory in nature. Now, the committee proposal imposes a restraint upon the legislature with respect to the scope of review that it can impose upon its administrative agencies. I think that the position that this matter is statutory in nature is amply supported by the fact that only one other state, the state of Missouri, has deemed it necessary to incorporate similar language in its constitution. Even the Missouri proposal, however, is far less stringent than the phraseology contemplated in Committee Proposal 95. In effect, the language of the committee proposal will be an undue infringement on legislative power, in that henceforth the legislature will be unable to impose the requisite degree of finality on administrative decisions.

From the arguments that I have heard, the only real argument to justify this radical departure was the argument advanced by Judge Leibrand. Judge Leibrand's argument was that the decisions and findings of the workmen's compensation agency are now conclusive. He painted a hypothetical case; he analyzed it; and he rendered a decision — and, as is customary for Judge Leibrand, I believe his decision was correct on the factual analysis that he presented. However, there are 2 answers to Judge Leibrand's quandary. The first is if he has any quarrel with his own decision or the decision he was compelled to render, it's a matter that can readily be corrected by the legislature. It is the Michigan state legislature that has prescribed the narrow scope of review which is presently imposed upon the workmen's compensation. Furthermore, I think that the Michigan supreme court has directly addressed itself to Judge Leibrand's problem. The Michigan supreme court has stated that if the legislature were to impose this conclusiveness on findings of fact of administrative agencies, and if these findings of fact were wrong and invaded constitutional rights, this would constitute an undue limitation on the judicial power of the state, and the courts could take remedial action. So on 2 counts I believe that Judge Leibrand's only argument can be obviated. The first is to go directly to the legislature and ask them to correct the scope of review. The second is to take direct recourse to the supreme court.

Now, I should just like to make the observation that although Judge Leibrand seems to be unhappy with the scope of review that is presently imposed upon workmen's compensation, I don't believe that this is reflective of any special affinity on the part of the legislature for workmen's compensation. There are other agencies that enjoy a similar privilege. The state board of education findings of fact are presently conclusive. I don't think this is motivated by any special regard for the nature of the findings. I think that the legislature acts upon due deliberation in imposing a standard of review. In this instance the review from workmen's compensation, as well as from the state department of education, are conclusive. I believe that there is ample justification for legislative action in this area, and that we err in trying to strip the legislature of this power to impose varying degrees of review upon administrative agencies. I'm not fully acquainted with the reasons for the finality that is attached to the findings of fact of the board of education. I can imagine that there is some desire to have a unified system of school reorganization, and that it is preferable for the state board of education instead of a circuit court judge to decide whether a school district should be organized or not organized.

Although I'm not familiar with the state board of education's internal operations, I do know that there are significant reasons why the legislature has imposed a conclusiveness on findings of fact from the workmen's compensation. I think the first fact that should be recognized is that in workmen's compensation the state of Michigan is not itself a party. The state is acting merely as an arbiter. The parties are the employer and the employee. Secondly, the scope of review within the workmen's compensation is broad and exhaustive. There are appeals within the agency itself. Third, and this is certainly a significant factor, to thrust review of workmen's compensation findings of facts upon every determination is to impose upon the person least likely or least able to absorb it at a time when he is in dire need of finances. The entire concept of administrative agencies is defeated unless swift and inexpensive review can be afforded to the individual who is dependent upon the statute which is being administered by the particular agency.

So, with respect to Judge Leibrand's argument, I don't find that it is sufficient justification to take as radical a departure as is being contemplated by Committee Proposal 95. I therefore urge you to adopt the Faxon amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I think it's about time that we got down to basic things. I think it is a question of philosophy. Do you believe in government according to law or according to men? If you believe that we should have government according to law, then you should vote no on the Faxon amendment. If you believe that we should have government according to men, and let a small group decide the rights of other people, regardless of the law, then you should vote yes for it.

I agree with Judge Leibrand and Mr. Shackleton that this is a step forward, and it is made necessary — it is not statutory — by the autocratic power and authority that these administrative agencies have assumed throughout the years. This is a real step forward. The provision as it is now is something that you can be proud of. I urge you to vote no as to this amendment. And if the Krolikowski-Bledsoe amendment comes up, as it was explained by Mr. Krolikowski, it is even worse and I urge you to vote no as to that.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, being the third member on the subcommittee of which Mr. Krolikowski was the chairman, I rise to oppose the Faxon amendment, and am rather amazed at his change of position in this respect.

I simply say this. The apparent fears which have been indicated here are absolutely without foundation. The only thing that we are attempting to do here is to grant to the citizens of this state a right of review of a determination by an administrative body. And bear in mind that we are only setting up minimum rights so far as appeals are concerned. I believe that you will find that there's no attempt to hamstring any department. If Mr. Krolikowski or anyone has any fear that workmen's compensation or anyone else is going to be bothered so far as the payment of funds is concerned, or payments from these administrative bodies, I think you only need to refer to the employment security commission, where rights of appeal are granted to the individuals or to the companies, and still the individual gets paid his unemployment compensation. So why draw the red herring across the trail with respect to that?

The legislature has plenty of authority, even under this, to make such arrangements with regard to those cases so it doesn't create any hardship; and I urge you to vote against the Faxon amendment, and I move the previous question.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Unfortunately, Mr. Iverson, the previous question is not in order. The Chair fervently wishes it were. Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: I will speak briefly. Mr. Chairman, I raised the point of workmen's compensation yesterday, and I made the remark that I had some experience on the defense side of it. And in workmen's compensation, more than in probably any place in the law, is the old phrase "justice delayed is justice denied" applicable. For those that are injured and do not have any income coming in, I believe this amendment just opens the door to capricious appeals for the purpose of forcing redemptions of claims at amounts that would be far less than the person might be entitled to, because the average injured worker has to have some kind of income, and as long as it is tied up in appeal he isn't getting it. And Mr. Iverson says that it can be taken care of by the legislature, but it hasn't in the past.

And remember this. Every time an injured worker is forced again to be on appeal, it isn't tough on a corporation which has house counsel or people on contingent fees. But, for that employee who is injured, his workmen's compensation payments are being eaten up by attorney fees, and the more you make appeals, the bigger the percentage that comes out. God knows it is difficult now to live on the inadequate amount that injured workers get, and if you allow this to go on they will be getting practically nothing. For that reason I urge you to support the Faxon amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, first of all I would like to say this. As to the general motive behind the idea of having review or some sort of civil rights, you might say, in administrative hearings, I am sympathetic to it. In fact, I was one of the movers in the emerging problems committee to have that considered. So let no one get mixed up on the point of view that I think nothing should be done. I think something should be done. But I am very much satisfied that what we have before us is not the right thing. I believe it is a meat axe approach to a very sophisticated problem.

Now, I believe also the arguments presented in favor of the committee proposal and against the Faxon amendment have been, basically, meat axe type arguments. For example, Mr. Lawrence — one who usually doesn't engage in that kind of argument — has stated pointblank that anyone who disagrees with him doesn't believe in government according to law. Now, I take strong exception to that. I fought as hard as I could, and I believe every lawyer here and many other people too have fought all their lives, or as long as they were able, for government according to law; and I don't intend to stop now, even though I disagree with Mr. Lawrence, I do believe in government according to law.

The question is, however, whether the present committee proposal relates to that problem or to a different problem. The present system we have, without Committee Proposal 95, does guarantee government according to law, even in administrative tribunals. They cannot get away with violating the law. If they depart from the statutory authority, there can always be an appeal on that. That is one of the grounds for appeal, always has been, and always will be. Secondly, if they do something which deprives somebody of a constitutional right, that is appealable. That always has been, and that always will be. Therefore, if there is a violation of the law that is always appealable and always has been appealable; that will be without this committee proposal.

The question that we have to consider is not whether an administrative tribunal is going to break the law. They can't. But who is going to determine the facts? That is the question. Who is going to determine the facts, and how, in a particular case? It isn't correct to say that nobody in the world can ever determine facts except judges. If that were so, for example, then the constitutional convention wouldn't think that it could determine facts, especially facts about how judges should go about deciding facts.

There are many ways of deciding facts. Now, we know that traditionally it has been the American approach and the common law approach that judges do determine facts. Of course, juries have determined facts, too. Juries are not judges, but nevertheless they are governed by judges. But that has not been the only way in which facts have been interpreted. When the workmen's compensation board and a great many other administrative boards came into being, the volume of business was such — and for other reasons, as well — that it was decided a different method should be tried. Facts should be determined not necessarily by judges; facts should be determined by people who have a specific law to administer, accustomed to hearing facts of the same type, and have expertise and can make the administration of justice cheap and expeditious and accurate.

With the proposal that we have before us, Committee Proposal 95 before the Faxon amendment, it seems clear to me that we open the door for every single case, every determination by any administrative board, to be subjected to a review. Not just some cases, but every case. Because there are enough words in that last sentence to make it an easy thing for a lawyer to pick on one of them. Is the evidence reliable? That is a question of fact. That could be one way or the other. That could be reviewed. Is the evidence probative? Is it substantial? Those kinds of questions would make it an automatic appealable case in every single case. And, if we have that, we have really lost the use of administrative procedure.

You should also keep this in mind. That whatever you are providing or are purporting to provide in the sentence that Mr. Faxon has asked to cancel, that power exists in the legislature anyway. If it was thought necessary during all the time that administrative boards have come into being to use such a power to put in such provisions in the law, it could have been done. It still can be done. It can be done in the future if it becomes necessary. The legislature, as far as I know, has never seen fit to do that, not only in our state, but in other states.

What you are insisting, however, is that the legislature ought to see fit to do it; in fact, they must see fit to do it. You are telling the legislature, whether you like it or not, this is the way you should govern your business. Then you're telling the courts, whether they like it or not, this is the way they should govern their business. And the administrative boards you are telling not to govern their business. I fail to follow any of the arguments to the extent to show why any of these changes, if they are needed at all, are needed in the constitution. They are clearly legislative in nature. They are legislative in nature, and the legislature has not been interested in them. As far as I know, nobody has been interested in urging them before the legislature.

What we have, in effect, is this kind of problem. It has been stated by someone, I've forgotten who, on the floor that the Faxon amendment would cut the heart out of Committee Proposal 95. In my opinion that is an accurate statement. It would cut the heart out of Committee Proposal 95. That is why I'm in favor of it. And the reason why I'm in favor of cutting the heart out of something is this. This particular proposal is aimed at cutting the heart out of administrative law, and therefore we ought to cut the heart out of this proposal. I think we should adopt the Faxon amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The last speaker currently seeking recognition on the Faxon amendment is its author, Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I fail to understand some of the points that have been raised here in objection to the deletion of the sentence that I am attempting to delete, and I just want to call this to your attention, and I'm going to quote the objections as I have heard them. Mr. Iverson stated that what the people want here is the right of citizens to review of the decisions made by administrative bodies. As I read this first sentence, it states clearly:

This gives the kind of latitude to the legislature that we have been attempting to put in in previous articles. Just this morning we added to the article dealing with the probate court sections which gave latitude to the legislature. I thought at the time that we were proceeding on the assumption that we could trust the legislature. Now I find that we have to prescribe a minimum set of rules for the legislature. Now, if we here are in agreement that we can trust the legislature with regard to the probate courts, then I don't see why we should suddenly alter that position and say that we can't trust the legislature with regard to setting up proper procedures for review of administrative rulings.

I want to make another point here, when it comes to the question of goverment according to law. I think it is quite clear that these administrative agencies to which these people have directed their criticism are agencies that have been created by law. It is within the province of the legislature at will to make any sort of determination it likes with regard to how procedures will be followed with regard to appeals. Now, if this is already in the legislature, what are we trying to do here? Are we saying the legislature hasn't been able to meet its responsibilities? I would invite those people in the convention who are such strong proponents of the legislature having the rights and responsibilities to get up and to state whether they feel the legislature has erred in providing adequate safeguards for the appeal of administrative rulings. It seems to me — and I'm just repeating this final point — that this sentence that we are asked to delete, "This review shall include, as a minimum. . . ." is just fraught with non-constitutional language. "As a minimum." Is it necessary to tell the legislature what it must include as a minimum? The legislature must in its wisdom use discretion with regard to what these appeals shall take the form of.

It has been already pointed out, I think very clearly, by Delegate Krolikowski, that there are varying degrees of review by different agencies. The state board of education was used as an illustration of one. Now, I would invite anyone here to comment with regard to whether the state board of education as an illustration of one. Now, I would invite anyone here to the decisions which they make, which might better be left with their rulings, rather than to be carried on to the courts. In fact, we have a former member of the state board of education who might be able to comment on it, and I would invite his comment with regard to this particular function of the state board of education. With those comments I would conclude.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, from the sweeping generalization made by Delegate Lawrence, one might readily conclude that the committee recommendation is absolutely necessary because we have nothing in the state of Michigan that adequately protects the individual against administrative tyranny today.

Just to get this in the proper perspective, I should like to read a short paragraph from the administrative procedures act which was adopted in the state of Michigan in 1952. Now, this sets out the scope of review that is imposed upon all administrative agencies that are invested with rule making authority to adjudicate contested cases. I will read you the scope of review that presently exists and ask you to determine for yourself whether there is adequate protection in the state of Michigan under the present statute. I quote from Michigan Statutes Annotated, 3.560 (21.8), subsection 6 — and this is as a matter of right —

> The court may affirm the decision of the agency or remand the case for further proceedings; or it may reverse or modify the decision if the substantial rights of the petitioner have been prejudiced because the administrative findings, inferences, conclusions or decisions are:
> (a) In violation of constitutional provisions;
> (b) In excess of the statutory authority or jurisdiction of the agency;
> (c) Made upon unlawful procedure;
> (d) Affected by other error of law;
> (e) Unsupported by competent, material, and substantial evidence in view of the entire record as submitted, or contrary to the overwhelming weight of the evidence;
> (f) Arbitrary or capricious.

If any one of these defects exists in the findings, the inferences, the conclusions or decisions of any administrative agency, the petitioner may take swift action and file an appeal as a matter of right to the circuit court. Thereafter, if he still deems himself aggrieved, he may appeal to the supreme court.

Now, there are only 4 agencies that are expressly excepted from the administrative procedures act. Those 4 agencies are the workmen's compensation commission, the employment security commission, the public service commission and the department of revenue. I believe that the legislature has exercised good and sound judgment in excepting these 4 agencies from the administrative procedures act. I feel that there's absolutely no reason whatsoever to impose the stringent standard that the constitution will impose upon the state legislature. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon to strike the second sentence of section a of Committee Proposal 95. Those in favor of the amendment —

MR. LEIBRAND: Division, please.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Leibrand requests a division. Is the demand supported? It is supported. Those in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon, the yeas are 35, the nays are 88.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read the next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. T. S. Brown offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 7, after "licenses,", by inserting "and to which the state is a party in interest,"; so that the language will then read, ". . . and affect private rights, privileges or licenses, and to which the state is a party in interest, shall be subject to direct review by the courts. . . ."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. T. S. Brown, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Brown.

MR. T. S. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, because of the fact that, generally speaking, the supporters of the proposal as it now stands who just voted down the Faxon amendment have indicated that their principal intention is to protect the private individual from capricious action by state administrative bodies, I think we should therefore preclude any other meaning being attached to what I'm sure you genuinely believe in, and what I'm sure you genuinely believe is progress and a good thing, by inserting the actual meaning of the net result of the present terminology. This would be to guarantee this substantial appeal in those matters only where the state is a party in interest; where the state would not be then interfering as an arbitrator between private individuals or groups of individuals that happen to have a conflict that comes under the purview of this or that administrative body. I think therefore that the amendment is self explanatory.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Brown. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: A division is requested. Is the demand supported? It is supported. Those in favor of the amendment offered by Mr. T. S. Brown will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Brown's amendment is to insert after the word "licenses,", the words "and to which the state is a party in interest,".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. T. S. Brown, the yeas are 37, the nays are 77.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read the next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. T. S. Brown offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "courts" by inserting a comma and "at the request of natural persons only,"; so that the language will then read, " . . . shall be subject to direct review by the courts at the request of natural persons only,".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. T. S. Brown, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Brown.

MR. T. S. BROWN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, generally speaking, I think it is agreed upon at this juncture that we all realize the fact that there are certain appellate rights guaranteed under our compiled laws today, and that the genesis of this particular provision was actually the fear that the poor little man would again be at the mercy of the dispassionate state agency.

I understand — and now we are coming down to the basic problem — and I actually do believe, and I hope I'm wrong, that the originators, or the original draftsmen of the terminology that we have before us, outside of my amendment, were directly motivated and employed by the manufacturer's association. Now, if this is true, then I sincerely believe that there must possibly be some motive other than what we have been discussing. And if we are attempting to protect the rights of natural persons, the little man, the poor man, and if we are going to make the progress in this convention that we've been talking of, then I suggest that we actually spell it out; that we speak of natural persons only, as opposed to corporations.

Now, it was mentioned in an earlier argument in regard to the Faxon amendment, I believe by Mr. Krolikowski, that he was concerned about the workmen's compensation provisions. My amendment of course would not affect the workmen's compensation provisions in one way or another. They would remain essentially as they are today, and they would be covered in their appellate rights by our present statutes. But I would be concerned about the 80 per cent of the workmen's compensation cases that do come before the tribunals where the claimant is not represented by counsel. And if he were to be subjected to this particular provision and had to run on his record, in effect, before the courts, without having had the benefit of counsel in his previous hearings, then I think his substantial rights would have been usurped. I believe that by spelling out the terminology of the natural person that we all here want to try to protect, we will therefore make it a better proposal than it is as it presently stands.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct a question to Mr. Brown, if he would care to answer.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. KING: Is a labor union a natural person?

MR. T. S. BROWN: I don't know the answer to that question.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. King.

MR. KING: I couldn't support anything which would deny the right of a labor union to appeal its case. I will have to vote against it. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Brown.

MR. T. S. BROWN: Mr. King, despite your remark, any case in which a labor union per se would be involved is already adequately covered by statute, and has been explicitly laid out. I am concerned with the natural person in a specific instance. Incidentally, another gentleman asked me a question recently. A d/b/a under this provision would be construed as a natural person.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. T. S. Brown. Does any delegate desire to have it read again? Those in favor of the amendment will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read the next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Nord and Mr. Norris offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 12, after "supported by" by striking out "reliable"; so the language will then read, " . . . whether the same are clearly supported by probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Nord and Norris. The Chair will recognize Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I hope no one will think that I'm against the rule of law when I move to strike the word "reliable." The objections I made before were directed largely towards that word. I indicated that the problem was whether the court or administrative tribunal, in certain cases, when the legislature says so, should be able to determine the facts. And I indicated that it seemed to me that by using some of these words, and particularly this one, "reliable," that we open the door to an appeal in every case.

Now, it appears to me that if we cross out the word "reliable" what you will have left in the last sentence will be words which will not be nearly as objectionable as this one. The first part of the last sentence will say:

> This review shall include, as a minimum, the determination whether such final decisions, findings, rulings and orders are authorized by law, . . .

That is the present law at the present time, so that makes no difference. And then it says, crossing out the word "reliable:"

> and, in cases in which a hearing is required, whether the same are supported by probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record.

Basically, that is the law also. It is maybe not exactly the law, but it is practically the law. The main difference is the word "reliable." And that is the word, the main word, which seems to me to cause the most trouble. Therefore, I move, supported by Mr. Norris, that we ought to strike the word "reliable," and in that case we will not be inviting review in every case, but only in cases where there really is a need for review.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Nord and Norris. Does any delegate desire to have it read again? Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: A division is requested. Is the demand supported? It is not supported.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Krolikowski and Bledsoe offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, following line 4, by striking out all of lines 5 through 13, being all of section a.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Krolikowski and Bledsoe. Those in favor will say aye. Excuse me. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask one of the proponents of this amendment a question, if I might.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. FORD: What does "direct review" mean in this? I would like a clear definition of the kind of review that a direct review is in the contemplation of this section.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Are you directing that question to me now? I'll answer it but, of course —

MR. FORD: I don't think so, Mr. Krolikowski, since you no longer seem to be an exponent of this section. Somebody here obviously feels that we need something that isn't now in the law, so I apparently don't understand what "direct review" means. I would like from one of these people who indicate that the present law is inadequate an explanation of "direct review." You can answer it if you want to.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: There might be many kinds of direct review. I would consider that direct review would be a review of the same case and the same parties and the same questions, as distinguished from a collateral review attempted to be attained by something like injunctive relief. Now, there may be very many other patterns of collateral review, but that's an example.

MR. FORD: Does direct review mean a trial de novo?

MR. LEIBRAND: It certainly does not. It means a review of the exact record. It is a review of the exact record that was made before the administrative body.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I had not intended to speak on this question. I had sat very patiently. But, inasmuch as Delegate King saw fit to more or less make a joke out of this, and recognizing his great concern and bleeding heart for the rights of the working man —

MR. LUNDGREN: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will remind Mr. Marshall of rule 22, and ask him to avoid personalities in debate.

MR. MARSHALL: I was going to answer the Chair on a previous remark that you made from the Chair, but I will not do that on the floor. I'll take it up with you out in the hall. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Is the gentleman suggesting that we step outside? (laughter)

MR. MARSHALL: Not exactly that, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may proceed in order, Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Not exactly that. I'm not exactly suggesting that, because looking at your midriff and then looking at mine, I don't think that either one of us is in shape. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair would agree, Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I want to support the Bledsoe amendment, and I want to make a few brief remarks concerning the proposal. Number one is, in answer to the question that Delegate King did raise, labor unions are not, in these cases of appeal on workmen's compensation, a part of the appeal. It affects the worker, the injured worker himself, directly. The only time and the only way that the labor union is involved is in an advisory capacity, or in some cases helping to supply legal counsel. This seems to me a blatant attempt to deny rights that people now have. You can appeal a workmen's compensation case now. But you go further here, as I see it. I'm not an attorney, so I'm not going to debate the legal terminology with the delegates. But you go on to provide that the courts could change rulings of boards and commissions. You have boards and commissions that are capable, qualified and trained in a given field. You throw this all into the arena of the courts and the judiciary.

It is obvious to me that what some of our attorneys — and I hope I don't get ruled out of order again — whether they are doing this deliberately or not, are attempting to provide a guaranteed annual wage for attorneys. The legislature is now debating the question of adding 5 judges in Wayne county. If this proposal is adopted, they will have to increase that to 15, 20 or 25. You will clog the courts with all of this detail. The legislature now can enact any statutory law that it wishes to in this area. This proposal, which is a new one, is strictly statutory. It is not constitutional. And I see no reason or no purpose for incorporating this type of language into the constitution. I said that on other occasions here where the delegates to this convention have written into the constitution statutory language that could have been best left to the legislature to perform its duty. It is obvious to me what this whole proposal is intended to do, and I think it's going to be obvious, if it's passed, to a great majority of the people of the state of Michigan. I support the Bledsoe amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, I would like first to ask the chairman of the judicial committee 2 questions, if I may, please.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Danhof, again more or less for the record, do I understand correctly that the language embodied in Committee Proposal 95 did not appear in the form of a delegate proposal? Or substantially appear?

MR. DANHOF: The exact language here I do not think came in in the form of a delegate proposal, Mr. Binkowski. We had, I think, maybe 2 or 3 delegate proposals requesting court review of administrative decisions as a general matter. I don't think anybody drafted the particular language involved in this particular case.

MR. BINKOWSKI: So the language substantially did not appear in the form of a delegate proposal for others to study beforehand, before it appeared in the journal?

MR. DANHOF: I imagine that would be right.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Secondly, Mr. Danhof, it is my understanding that a subcommittee appointed by you and also a subcommittee of legislative powers worked together with respect to the administrative agencies; is that correct?

MR. DANHOF: That is my understanding, yes.

MR. BINKOWSKI: And that they also worked with an expert named Mr. Cooper?

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Cooper was requested to appear, and I think met with them on at least 1 or 2 occasions. Mr. Leibrand, Mr. Iverson and Mr. Krolikowski can probably tell you on how many occasions.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Danhof, the question I have with respect to Mr. Cooper is whether or not you know he acted in the capacity of counsel to the —

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Binkowski —

MR. BINKOWSKI: — Michigan manufacturer's association. I am not engaging in personalities. I think this convention has the right to know.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You are out of order, Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Well, may I find out why I am out of order?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Because you are violating rule 22 in directing your remarks to personalities.

MR. BINKOWSKI: You mean this convention is being prevented from finding out what is being presented to the convention, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Binkowski, the subject under discussion was explored at length last night. The Chair exercised wide latitude in granting speakers the opportunity to proceed into it. You may direct your remarks to the committee proposal, and you will confine your remarks to the committee proposal.

MR. BINKOWSKI: A point of personal privilege, Mr. Chairman. I think we can go back to the record, and when I spoke to this convention in reporting as one of the vice chairmen of the subcommittee on corporations, I referred to this gentleman specifically in his capacity, and quoted this into the record. This was part of the record. Now, at that time nobody raised the question that this was "personalities," and I am at a loss at this particular time, when the gentleman appeared before the subcommittee in that capacity, and now I ask this question at this time and you tell me that I am engaging in personalities.

Now, if I am wrong, I certainly want to apologize before this group; but I don't see where I'm wrong.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may proceed, Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Well, may I have the answer to my question?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Would you repeat the question?

MR. BINKOWSKI: Yes. My question is whether or not Mr. Danhof knew if Mr. Cooper appeared before and worked with the committee in his capacity as counsel to the Michigan manufacturer's association.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. DANHOF: I don't know.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Thank you, Mr. Danhof. Now, the questions that I have raised were, I think, for good purposes. In the first instance I am a member of the state bar committee of administrative agencies. I brought before that bar committee the various delegate proposals with respect to the administrative agencies because I thought this so called expert body and this body which is working in the field of administrative agencies should have every opportunity to review the work of this convention, and that if there were any proposals which affected administrative agencies and if this body wanted to make any recommendations to the constitutional convention, they certainly should be in that position. I think it is quite clear that Committee Proposal 95 did not have the opportunity of being studied by anyone. Now, whether this is good or bad I leave to the delegates of this convention. However, I would like to make the point that I failed to find out from what source either the state bar committee or any other body here felt that this amendment was a necessary part of the proposed 1962 Michigan constitution. So I raise this question of whether it is, and whether it should be a part of the constitution?

Now, a delegate asked, "How will this affect the rights of the workers?" I believe that several of the delegates have commented in detail on how it would affect the rights of the laboring man, particularly in workmen's compensation. Very briefly, I would like to inform this body that it takes approximately a year to have the injured worker's case decided before a referee. It takes an additional year to have that case appealed to the appeal board. That's 2 years. If the case were to go to the Michigan supreme court, there would be an additional 2 year period. I suggest that this has a very direct effect on the rights of all laboring men, and particularly the injured worker.

One of our delegates, Dr. Nord — and I don't think I am engaging in personalities — spoke at length upon the need of administrative agencies, the fact that they are experts in the field, and their importance in this area. I think that if this convention adopts Committee Proposal 95, it will represent a step backward in this important area of administrative agencies. We are going to see many more administrative agencies in the future. Now, there are problems, and I don't stand before you saying that there aren't any problems. I do not believe, though, that this proposal presents the solution.

Maybe we should have some kind of administrative court which would review the work of these agencies. But I do not believe that the courts themselves should be found working with these various facts, because we found the very reason for these administrative agencies, in giving them quasi judicial powers, was that the courts were inadequate in deciding these questions, and they were not experts in this area.

I don't know, according to the answer of Mr. Danhof, what is happening in the convention. And I, certainly, as a responsible delegate, do not want to be accused of making irresponsible attacks on any organization. But I can't help wondering if particular organizations in the area of workmen's comp are so unhappy with the present state of affairs and so unsuccessful in their attempts to change the present procedures before the legislature that they are now working in the constitutional convention. I just raise that as a question. Mr. Marshall has told you the effect it will have on the rights of the working man, particularly the injured laborer. I also leave this question with you. If you vote to insert this provision in the proposed document, will you be giving every laborer in the state of Michigan the opportunity to vote against this document?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Walker.

MR. WALKER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, as a businessman and as an employer, I like section 18 as it reads. I don't like the Krolikowski-Bledsoe amendment, because with section 18 I don't have to be concerned with safety regulations; I don't have to be —

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Walker, the matter under discussion is section a of Committee Proposal 95. The Chair trusts you will confine yourself to that subject.

MR. WALKER: Thank you. You've got me all off the track here, Mr. Chairman. I dare say it was intentional. However, as a human being who has a great deal of love for my fellow beings, I do favor the Krolikowski-Bledsoe amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I don't think all of the recent remarks which have gone into the record can lay there unchallenged. I trust nobody will object to inserting some facts, rather than simply innuendoes. I would like to give you the background of this proposal. To begin with, there were delegate proposals, and they went much further than this. Many of us who sat in the judicial committee felt a need for judicial review, but not the type of review and the extensive review that some of the delegate proposals offered. We asked Mr. Cooper to come down here and, frankly, I don't have the slightest idea of who he represents. I only know that he has tremendous stature in the field of administrative law throughout the United States. We asked that he review with us, in an effort to find a happy medium —

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett, the Chair doesn't like to persist in reminding delegates of rule 22, but does want to do it with an even hand.

MR. EVERETT: I stand corrected, Mr. Chairman. I oppose this amendment for this reason. We developed within the committee, and I might say — and I hope this won't embarrass Mr. Krolikowski — with very diligent, hard work by Mr. Krolikowski and others, language which we felt would hit a medium between a review which would be so extensive as to make administrative agencies' work virtually useless, and a review such as we frequently now have which makes the court review meaningless. We have hit, I think, in the opinion of every member of the judicial committee — I remember no dissents at the time it was voted upon; there may have been 1 or 2 — such a medium.

Now, what we are now being told by those who support the amendment is that they do not want any examination made to determine whether the administrative agency's finding is supported by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence. That's all. In our opinion if such a finding is not so supported, it should not stand. And it doesn't matter to us whether the individual makes the appeal or a corporation makes the appeal, or who makes the appeal. As a matter of right, he should be told in advance that the courts will look for this type of evidence to support the finding. If it's there, the finding must stand. If it's not, it must fall. And I think that that proposition is an honest one, and one which most of us can conscientiously support.

I don't think that the matters injected in behalf of the amendment really go to what the proposal does, and I submit that the amendment should be defeated.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Marshall, the Chair will advise that there are 8 speakers seeking recognition, of which you are the seventh. The Chair will be glad to have you on your feet, if you like.

MR. MARSHALL: It gives me a chance to stretch.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, I ask leave to rise to answer Mr. Baginski's question, but if the question was within the purview of rule 22, it occurs to me that the answer will probably be; so I withdraw my request.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Thank you, Judge Leibrand. Mr. Binkowski would like the record to show that it was Mr. Binkowski who put the question.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Baginski would also like that. (laughter)

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to yield to Mr. Krolikowski to answer Mr. Everett, because I want to raise another question, and then I'll ask my question afterwards. I saw he was raising his hand, and I thought it was in response to that. So I will yield to him.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Faxon yields to Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Well, I didn't intend to belabor this matter, but thank you for the opportunity, Mr. Faxon. With respect to Mr. Everett's statement, to put the matter in its proper light, I should concur with him that all of the members of the committee leaned heavily upon the recognized expertise of a certain gentleman. However, I think that in all fairness to the members of the committee it might be stated that the committee was acting under the sharp pressure of a deadline, and we were trying to reach a conclusion.

Thereafter, however, certain members embarked upon an independent investigation of the status of administrative law in the state of Michigan. Upon an independent examination, we found that the situation as delineated by the expert was more reflective of a situation that existed prior to the adoption of the administrative procedures act. Now, subsequent to the adoption of that act in 1952, much of the criticism that was directed against the state of administrative procedure in the state of Michigan has been removed. Therefore, after an independent investigation, some of us respectfully disagreed with the expert, and that is the basis for the Bledsoe-Krolikowski amendment. Thank you.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Faxon, before you proceed, the Chair is reminded of a remark made by Delegate Yeager on one occasion when rising in a committee. He said he was rising for the specific purpose of belaboring the point. No offense to you, Mr. Krolikowski. Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, this is a question to Mr. Danhof, if he could clear up my thinking on this. First of all, is this provision found in any other state constitution? I have heard it alluded to in the Missouri constitution, but is this the extent of its actual involvement in constitutions?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: To my knowledge, the state of Missouri is the only one that I have personal knowledge of. Again, perhaps some of those in the subcommittee who worked harder than I might be able to answer that.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof, do you desire to yield to Mr. Krolikowski?

MR. DANHOF: Yes, I will, or Mr. Iverson, one or the other.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: A similar proposal is found in only one state constitution, that of the state of Missouri. However, the standard imposed in the Missouri constitution is less stringent than the one found in the present committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Is it then, through the Chair, your feeling that this has never really been used before, and we are really opening up an area that is completely new as far as giving this provision constitutional status?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Yes. The answer to that would be a categorical yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Well, it just seems to me — I guess I'm only one of few conservatives here, and I sort of look askance upon a departure from a tradition in terms of opening up an area that has been hitherto untouched in constitutional language in other states and in our own state in our history.

I would ask of the chairman of the committee, this question, then, which is directed to the same subject, concerning the question of appeals from administrative tribunals. Mr. Danhof, did your committee give any consideration to the establishment of administrative courts as a method of solving this difficulty which seems to be present in your opinion?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: The establishment of an administrative court? Is that your question?

MR. FAXON: Yes.

MR. DANHOF: I don't recall. I cannot at this time recall that we considered such an item in the judicial committee, Mr. Faxon. I may be wrong, but I cannot recall it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Well, just concluding, I wish to plead the cause of conservatism in asking the members of the committee to go slowly and tread carefully on grounds which have not yet been plowed up.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I would just like to point out to Mr. Binkowski that I introduced Delegate Proposal 1367, supported by 2 other Oakland delegates and 2 Wayne delegates, which goes as follows:

> The legislature shall enact no law which shall confer judicial or quasi judicial power on any official of any executive department or administrative agency, and all determinations and regulations of such departments and agencies shall be subject to judicial review de novo in any court of competent jurisdiction.

Now, obviously, this goes much, much, much further than what the committee decided was proper. And I'm perfectly willing to go along with what the committee of the whole has decided. It certainly is true that this is an area of great abuse. There were many other delegates besides myself who were concerned about this. I am concerned.

I don't want to deal in personalities, and I don't. But the man whose expertise has been so often referred to was the one who backed up the language of the committee to the position where it was when we considered it before my amendment. So obviously — and I thought that one of the delegates very graciously apologized and made the record correct in that manner last night. So certainly any such fears as have been expressed are unjustified and unfounded and unwarranted. This man is a very distinguished man, I understand.

As for the delegate's question, "Have we considered administrative courts?" I don't know what an administrative court is. I view all of these bodies which make quasi judicial decisions as a type of an administrative court.

The idea here is to get full, fair, honest to goodness judicial review, not de novo. My proposal was de novo, but the committee doesn't want to buy that, and I'm not pushing that point. Just a review on the record. Now, surely, no one can be opposed to that. I'm not saying it won't cause an increase in the amount of judicial work in this state, but I never maintained that justice was cheap. You have to pay for justice. There's no question about it. And certainly it is not directed at one agency, when there are hundreds of agencies in this state which are making these quasi judicial decisions every day of the week. And all of a sudden as an emotional attack it's said that somebody is directing an attack against one particular agency. Well, of course, that's not the case at all. I'm sure that the legislature and the courts are going to be most sympathetic to that kind of a problem, and will work out an equitable solution. So I certainly hope that this amendment by Mr. Bledsoe and Mr. Krolikowski will be defeated resoundingly.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair has 8 speakers seeking recognition. State your point, Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: I would like to ask one question of Mr. King, if I may.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. King, do you desire to yield to Mr. Bledsoe for a question?

MR. KING: I would be happy to yield to Mr. Bledsoe.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. King, is it your understanding that there is no provision for appeal now from the decision of a referee? You said that you wanted to be sure that there was an appeal. Is it your position that they don't have that right now?

MR. KING: No, indeed. There are many decisions which can be appealed. I don't know which ones you are referring to.

MR. BLEDSOE: Well, which one were you referring to when you said there was no appeal?

MR. KING: When I support the committee's position, I am referring to them all, and saying that there shall be appeal in every case of a judicial or quasi judicial decision. And that's what I support. Certainly there are some procedures for appeal presently provided for in the administrative procedures act.

MR. BLEDSOE: Isn't that true in Michigan now?

MR. KING: Yes.

MR. BLEDSOE: Well, just what did you have reference to when you said that nobody can object to having an appeal?

MR. KING: Nobody can object to having an appeal in all such cases.

MR. BLEDSOE: Which ones don't have appeals then?

MR. KING: I don't care to get into — as I say, there are hundreds of these boards and agencies. I don't care to get into —

MR. BLEDSOE: Name one.

MR. KING: Liquor control. That's one that comes right to mind easily. But that's not one of my favorites.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will request that the succeeding speakers, of whom there are 7 seeking recognition, confine themselves as closely as possible to the amendment under consideration, which is the striking of section a of Committee Proposal 95. Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, the discussion on this amendment has, to me, seemed to take a partisan issue; and I'm very disturbed about this, for it's not a partisan issue. We are talking about the right of appeal for all the people of Michigan. And this matter was brought before the judicial committee, as Mr. King mentioned, by many delegates in this convention through delegate proposals. I happened to have a friend back in my home town who sent me a list of proposals. I looked them over, and one of them looked to me as though it might be something for us to consider, because of the tremendous growth of administrative boards in the last few years; and where is it going to go from here? How can we tell? Delegate Proposal 1702 was thus submitted, and it went much farther than what the committee has recommended. I would like to read you the language, "Every person shall be entitled to appeal —"

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Upton, the Chair is reluctant to interrupt, but will urge you to confine your remarks to the amendment to section a of Committee Proposal 95.

MR. UPTON: Well, what I'm trying to point out is that many of us wanted a stronger amendment than what was proposed by the committee. The people who endorsed this proposal at that time were from both parties. If I might, I would like to read their names. Would this be out of order?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: That would be out of order, Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: I was trying to answer Mr. Binkowski's question as to where this came from, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You see, that's the kind of problem you get into when you ask questions that are out of order in the first place. The Chair will request that you proceed in order, Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: I feel that the people who felt this was a good thing a month or so ago have evidently changed their minds considerably. I would like to just remind them that they thought this proposal was good at one time. Therefore, I hope they reject this amendment and vote affirmatively for the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, I don't expect to be called out of order, because I want to answer Mr. Binkowski, and I think I've got a right to. But, fortunately, the attention of Mr. Binkowski has been called to the fact that there was a Delegate Proposal 1367 which Mr. King referred to, and a Delegate Proposal 1702 which Mr. Upton referred to, both of which were considered by the subcommittee of the committee on judicial branch. So I want it distinctly understood by the delegates that whether Mr. Binkowski knew it or not, there were delegate proposals on this matter which were considered by the subcommittee.

Now, the other question I wanted to call the delegates' attention to is this. Mr. Binkowski calls our attention to the fact that Frank Cooper appeared. I want the delegates to know that he appeared at our request.

MR. SNYDER: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Snyder makes a very valid point of order, Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Well, I am answering Mr. Binkowski, and I think I've got a right to. I think it might be interesting to the delegates to know why he was called. If they are not interested, I'll sit down. Or if the Chair rules me out of order, I'll also sit down.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will ask you, in proceeding, Mr. Iverson, to keep in mind rule 22.

MR. IVERSON: I'll sit down.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, when I originally indicated a desire to be recognized, I had a lot more material than I have now. This too was in answer to Mr. Binkowski's suggestion that the committee had grabbed this out of the clear air without basing it on any delegate proposals. In the very limited time I had at that time, I found not only the 2 which have already been mentioned, 1367 and 1702, but also 1008, which was introduced as early as October 12, 1961, by Mr. Gover, and asked for a great deal more than this proposal provides.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, about 38 years ago I lost these fingers. And when I lost them, I should have gotten some compensation for them. They were lost in the plant. And I never in all my life saw anything that was as rotten as happened at that time, and I don't ever expect to see it again. This has to do, incidentally, if you're getting up for a point of order—

MR. BOOTHBY: Point of order.

MR. MADAR: I haven't mentioned your name. I'm sticking to rule 22, even though the Chair didn't awhile ago.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman, I'm not referring to rule 22. I'm referring to the rule on germaneness.

MR. MADAR: This is germane.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Madar, the Chair trusts you will confine your remarks to section a of Committee Proposal 95—

MR. MADAR: I have been.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: —which deals with a review of the rulings of administrative tribunals.

MR. MADAR: I have been. And I'll continue to do so. Now, I don't mind saying that today I think I would have been sicker in my stomach than I was when I lost these fingers, because over the last 38 years I have seen some marvelous laws passed, statutes, and they have been able to take care of people that have been hurt. But here, in this constitution, I have been watching how not the laboring man's or the working man's interests, the little fellow's interests, are being guarded, but those who don't have a thing to worry about and are never in any position where they might get hurt, except occasionally, pocket wise.

And so I say, let's vote for the elimination of those items that Bledsoe mentions, and get something here for the working man and the little fellow. Let's stop working for the man that's got all the money.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, it is not my desire to make this a partisan issue, and I rise a second time to try to put this in its proper perspective in order that we can bring it to a vote. I have about 2 points that I want to cover, and I'll be very brief. I think maybe the impression might have been left here by some of the remarks that some of the previous speakers have made that this is a question that affected just labor unions. The committee proposal—and I'm speaking in support of the Bledsoe amendment—opens up a floodgate. It does not affect just union members. In my considered judgment it affects all working people adversely, whether or not they belong to a union, and as all of you know many, many working people do not. In opening up this floodgate, we talk about the decisions and rulings of the Michigan corporation and securities commission; we talk about the public service commission, which deals with utilities and control of utilities; we run the whole gamut.

This is strictly a legislative matter, and has no place in the constitution. If there is to be judicial review, it should be left to the discretion of the legislature, in its wisdom, to say how much judicial review, where, when and how—not pin down this type of statutory language in a constitution. In closing, and in further support of my contention that it is statutory, I would remind all of you that there is now a bill in the legislature similar to this one—maybe not verbatim, but certainly substantially the same. That is presently before the Michigan state legislature. I think that all of us, very seriously, will be making a serious mistake if we place this type of language into a constitution with nothing to go on except that it was done in the state of Missouri, and as I understand—unfortunately I haven't read that—is not nearly as encompassing as this one. And I say, let's quit legislating. Let's quit trying to write our own philosophies into a constitution, and let's write the basic law for this state and leave the legislating for the legislature. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I am prepared to speak for about an hour, and I thought it might be wise, in view of the debate that we have had so far, to pass; and I will do so on the condition that the man next in order to speak also passes, and the next in turn.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: There are only 2 speakers seeking recognition, Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Will the next gentleman pass?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: No.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Brown, you will proceed in order, and confine your remarks, please, to Committee Proposal 95, the amendment pending, which is to strike section a.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Rather than to continue for the hour that I intended to talk for, I shall pass anyway, because the matter which I intended to speak to, otherwise the Upton-Ford-Pugsley-McCauley amendment, has already been mentioned.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I have no intention of speaking for an hour, either. I should just like to shortly capsule the position of the sponsors of this amendment. It is our belief that much of the attack that has been waged here apparently is bent upon disregarding the fact that we have ample statutory protection to assure review from administrative decisions and orders. Now, we referred specifically to the administrative procedures act, which guarantees appeal as a matter of right. In the event that one of the agencies fails to fall within the purview of the administrative procedures act, there is a special statute, Michigan Statutes Annotated 27.545, which again guarantees review as a matter of right from administrative decisions. And the review in this instance is a review de novo. Aside from these 2 protective measures, we have the Michigan constitution, the federal constitution, and the inherent right of the courts to superintend the work of administrative agencies. On the basis of those safeguards, it is our position that this language is utterly unnecessary in the state constitution.

I should like to correct some reference that was made here by someone — I think Mr. King or Mr. Brown — that by some mistake the liquor control commission doesn't come within the purview of any of these restrictions. I emphatically deny that, and I refer them to the Michigan Reporter 336, page 398. This was on certiorari after direct appeal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I rise to speak on this matter with the greatest of reluctance but I am moved to do so because, first of all, I'm not sure that all of us are fully aware of the tremendous reach of the proposal which we have before us.

We are trying to draft a constitution, as we have said repeatedly, for the next 30 or 40 years. The whole history of the regulatory process has been to develop the kinds of governmental means to regulate complicated affairs between man and government and between man and man. And what we are seeking to do here seems to me to place a very severe constitutional roadblock against that kind of project in that direction or that enterprise. I know of no professor of administrative law in this state who would come here and support the proposal which is now before us. And I challenge those who are in support of this to muster the students of this problem to support their measure. There is no state in the union that has developed the kind of test which you now seek to encrust in the constitution for decades. This is a very serious matter. And I suggest that if this matter is encrusted in the constitution, there is a very strong question as to whether those who want to develop a constitution that is going to serve the needs of the people, all the people, for the decades to come, can ratify a constitution that so seriously interferes with the regulatory process.

No one is more adamant in the protection of civil and constitutional rights than I. But I submit that there is a way here of reconciling the rights of individuals before administrative tribunals and constitutional rights without the kind of test which is now being imposed. I am most sincere, Mr. Chairman, in saying to you that I am not concerned about the motivation of any particular person or group with regard to the proposal, or where it came from. I think that the group here is capable of examining any proposal on its merits, with regard to whether it serves not merely the interests of working people, not merely the interests of manufacturing associations, but the public interest.

It is the function of administrative tribunals to protect the public interest, because of the limitations of the separation of powers doctrine; because of the limitations of the judiciary in the implementation of certain legislative objectives. We have developed, nationwide and in the state of Michigan, administrative tribunals to deal with complicated problems in the rate making field, the public service corporations, in the tax field, in the liquor field, in workmen's compensation — in a whole host of agencies. And I think what we are seeking to do here is to develop a means totally disproportionate to the end sought. We are developing a means here which instead of protecting the little fellow is endangering the public interest. Instead of protecting the rights of individuals before tribunals, we are developing a kind of impedimenta to public interest organizations created by the legislature to serve public needs. It is in the interests, if you will, of the civil and constitutional rights of individuals that we developed the kinds of means to deal with these particular problems. These agencies are not created to obscure or impede the rights of individuals or the public interest. They are there for the purpose of carrying out a finding of necessity for the public interest and to serve them.

And there's no question, I'm certain, in the mind of any delegate here that the problems which these agencies are called upon to deal with are going to multiply and be more complicated as time goes on. We are in a totally different industrial age, both in this state and in the nation, and in the world. And some people want it to move backward instead of forward. They don't realize, it seems to me, that what we need is the development of the kind of governmental means to deal with these complicated problems. And the whole function of the agency is merely to regulate; and if there's a substantial or reasonable basis for the judgment to be made, the ruling to be made, then the courts will sustain it. Otherwise, with the word "reliable" in there you are going to have an inquiry by the court, constitutionally mandated and directed, to examine all of the evidence, and the court is going to be able to say, "We would not find the same judgment or ruling that this agency did, and we are going to substitute our judgment for that of the agency." And that is precisely what was sought to be avoided by the creation of such agencies. And you're going to have the courts then becoming the regulatory agency. It is going to multiply the functions and jobs and difficulties of the courts.

On the one hand you are trying to streamline justice and to create a vested exclusive power in the supreme court and its superintending power, and all the rest of it, and you are undermining it by this particular proposal. I urge that we go very slowly in this area, with more circumspection than has thus far been accorded to this history making proposal. And if we can't do anything else, I urge opposing it. But I do feel that we can deal with this matter in a different way, and I urge that we do not support this proposal. And I urge, too, that if we don't do it that way, that perhaps on second reading or third reading we can consider this matter before the final constitution is placed before the people.

I am most distressed, Mr. Chairman, that we are not giving this kind of matter the attention that I know it deserves. As a matter of fact, I am tempted, by looking at the seats here, and the kind of one sided debate, to relate the story about the lady juror who said, "I don't want to hear the evidence; I want to make up my own mind."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Norris, the Chair would remind the committee that we are shortly to complete our fourth hour of debate on this subject. Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I'm sorry that I find it so late to come before you with this matter. It would clearly appear, according to the old statement, and in view of the climate as it exists here presently, that I find myself in the position of the so called angel rushing in. At least, that's the climate that I feel here.

There's only one thing that I want to call your attention to. It just so happens that for 2 years it was my job for the people of the state of Michigan to administer the compensation division of your state. And, if you will notice, that's the reason why I asked 2 questions here during this debate. I asked brother King—and you heard his answer—he didn't even know whether or not they had the right of appeal. And he came out with a glorious statement about the liquor control commission, and he has been straightened out on that. And that's what you have been fed. I asked Judge Leibrand yesterday if he had any experience with appeals. Do you remember what he said? He hadn't had one in 20 years.

injured person to get compensation, the legislature set up these procedures by which this could be effected at minimum cost to the workman and for the best interests of society. And I want to say to you that if you look at that statute, every year, every time the legislature has met since the statute was enacted, the legislature has mothered that statute. They have amended it every session. You rarely have a statute that receives as much attention — not just 20 years, Judge, but every session, that statute has been amended. The people of this state regard the compensation law as remedial legislation. They have sought to do this thing in the most facile and easy way, and for the best interests of society.

Now, there's one question — and believe me — that will constitute an unconscionable roadblock in the path of an injured workman to get his matter heard before the workmen's compensation commission — and do you know what that roadblock is? Presently, a man gets injured, and I have checked with the department, and it is now running around 13 months before he can even get his case heard. I want to tell you something else about that. During that time an injured workman is not eligible for welfare because he has a job. He can't get workmen's compensation, because of his inability to work, because this disablement occurs out of his injury. And he can't go back to the employment security commission and get unemployment compensation, because there's no disability connected with unemployment compensation. So during that 13 months he's got to shack with his family and get money the best way he can. The breadwinner of that family loses prestige in his home.

Now, everybody has been talking about the administrative boards, but these are the things that constitute the chickens coming home to roost, by persons who have had the actual administration of this law. Not in just 20 years. It happens every day. Just go over to the department and see that group of people sitting up there, with their arms in slings, a leg off, an eye out. Go down there and look at them, waiting and trying to find out when their cases are going to be heard.

Now, here is the essential roadblock. The courts now say that an award will be sustained so long as there is competent, creditable, reasonable, substantial evidence; and unless that record is cluttered with fraud or some palpable something, the courts — and believe me, our courts are very great in their approach to this matter — just simply won't review those cases. Because our courts understand. So why this additional roadblock that is contemplated by this amendment? And listen to this, ". . . clearly supported by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence" —

MR. G. E. BROWN: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bledsoe, the word "clearly" has been stricken.

MR. BLEDSOE: I'm asking to have the entire section stricken.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair would simply ask that if you are going to read the section, you read it as it presently is before the committee.

MR. BLEDSOE: I'm just trying to save some time, Mr. Chairman. This matter has been quoted. I am trying to approach this matter from an entirely different point of view. As far as I am concerned, personally, it doesn't affect me. But I have had experience with it, and I'm trying to share with my fellow colleagues the experience I have had in administering this law. That's the only thing that I'm doing, and I hope that I'm not plaguing you too much. But I felt it was my duty to do it, and I'm going to say this, and then I'm going to close. When the legislature is working every time they meet to improve the lot of the injured workman, I don't think we ought to put any additional roadblocks in the way of the injured man or woman — because a lot of women get hurt, too — and it's the children and families of the workmen who suffer. I don't think that we need to put another single roadblock in their way. Because it is not for the best interests — and I want you to get this — it is not for the best interests of society. Just forget all this talk about big people and little people and unions. It just isn't for the best interests of society, because the interests of society is paramount. I think all of us can take a stand there, and if we can't, God help us.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, perhaps this should come under personal privilege, I don't know. I may have made a point which was not well taken, and if so I would like to apologize to the group. I was fully aware that Delegate Proposals 1123, 1307, 1367 and 1396 had been submitted, and they are embodied in the amendment which I have from the particular gentleman whom I have mentioned. However, I think that they were rather extreme, and no one seriously considered them as such. Now, as I said, if my point was not well taken, I apologize.

As for the gentleman himself, for the record, and since I have to work with him on the state bar committee, I would like to say that I have the greatest admiration for this gentleman. Without any doubt — and I agree with you, Mr. King — he is by far the expert in the state of Michigan. He may be the expert in the entire country. I don't know. I certainly do not impute anything to him. However, since he did appear before another committee in a certain capacity, and since a delegate mentioned — and the record can be checked as to this — a particular organization which he had represented before our committee in his capacity as legal counsel, I thought that any question as to this should be removed; and if there were any shadows of doubt, they certainly should be removed.

Again, if I was wrong in doing this, I apologize. I did not mean to raise any hornet's nest. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Binkowski and members of the committee, the Chair would like to suggest, perhaps in amplification of the earlier ruling, that the question of personalities, as described in rule 22 does not, of course, preclude any delegate from mentioning, in the course of debate, who advocated a particular matter before a committee; in what capacity he advocated or opposed a matter; or who may have assisted in the preparation of committee proposals. Rule 22 is designed, however, to prevent dealing in personalities in such a way as to involve the motives, the character or the attitudes of any individual, whether he be a delegate to this convention or otherwise. Last evening the question of the particular individual's participation in the draftsmanship of the proposal before the committee was raised and explored at some length and without interruption from the Chair until it began to get repetitive, at which point the Chair called to the attention of the delegates the fact that rule 22 was applicable to the discussion of personalities. For that reason, when the subject was again raised this afternoon, the Chair made the point rather emphatically. The product, of course, of raising it this afternoon was that no fewer than 6 delegates felt impelled to respond and we consumed in the course of that response some 40 minutes of debate. It seems to the Chair this is clear evidence of the desirability of complying fully with rule 22, and the Chair trusts that the delegates will do so in the future.

Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman —

MR. YOUNG: I have a point of parliamentary inquiry.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Young.

MR. YOUNG: I didn't quite understand your last remarks. Are you saying that when Delegate Binkowski identified the organization from which this individual came, that he was in fact in order?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: That is correct.

MR. YOUNG: I understand.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I realize that, as the Chair has pointed out, this has been an extremely prolonged debate; 4 hours. I also realize that this is the third time I have spoken to you on this subject. And I certainly don't do that lightly, because I realize nobody wants to hear from anybody 3 times on the same subject.

I am not going to do a Garry Brown and chicken out. If I promise to speak an hour, I will. But I am not going to promise to speak an hour. What I am going to promise to do, however, is this. I wish to call to your attention that we don't have 4 hour debates on trivial matters. There is something big at stake.

I believe it's my duty to second the statements that were made by Professor Norris. As far as I can recall, we are the only 2 law professors here. As a law professor, I want to call to your attention that you are doing something, judging from the past votes on this subject, which you will regret. I can't force you to regret it, but you will regret it just the same. I want you to realize you are doing something dangerous. You are committing a tragic error. It can't be that this is what you wish to do. Whatever it is that you wish to do, you know, I'm sure, that you can do it in the legislature. Whatever specific thing you are concerned about, you can do it in the legislature. And if you are wrong, if it causes harm, it can be corrected next year. And you can direct it against a specific 1, 2 or 3 agencies, if you have them in mind. There's nothing to prevent you from accomplishing exactly what you wish, in the way that you wish, and in a way that you can reverse if you are wrong, as I say you are. But if you put it in the constitution, you can't get it out that easily. It will be your error, and it will be enshrined there.

Now, I say that you are committing a serious and grievous error when you do this — and it isn't just workmen's compensation. Many of us have pointed out that it would damage very seriously workmen's compensation. That is my feeling. But that is not the only matter. You are going to damage the entire subject of administrative law, and that I'm sure you couldn't possibly wish to do. You might wish to do something to one board or another, but I can't see how you could wish to damage the entire area of administrative law.

For example, just as an example, suppose your son takes the bar exam. I have had a lot of experience with this. And suppose he fails the exam. Now, the board of law examiners is an administrative office or a body. They exist under the constitution and by law. They make a decision that your boy doesn't pass. That is a quasi judicial decision because it determines the merits of his particular case. That is a quasi judicial determination. And that affects private rights, privileges or licenses — his license to practice law. Now, that boy and every other one who fails the bar exam will have the right — an absolute right — to appeal to a court. And when he appeals to a court, what will he appeal on? He will ask the board of law examiners to show by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence that he is not fit to practice law. The courts then will be just backing up the board of law examiners. But maybe you think they should back the board of law examiners. That's your prerogative.

But that is not the only board of examiners. There are a great many boards of examiners in this state. There's a board of examiners of barbers, for example. They admit people to practice barberous activities of some sort. (laughter) I don't think that we have the slightest idea how many different kinds of administrative boards and offices there are now or might be in the next 50 years.

Now, with many of these things, such as the board of law examiners, we don't want the courts to be mixed up in this. We want them to make their decision. If they have been prejudiced, or something like that, there should be an appeal to the court — and there is. But we can't have the court determining the grade of this man on the exam. The court can't go into those facts. It can't raise the question, is this decision based on reliable evidence? That is what you are setting out to do; to put the courts in to backstop every decision made by every administrative board. I really can't believe that that is what you intend. I don't believe that that's what you intend. But I know this. That is what you are doing. And you are going to do it in an irreversible way. Now, the reason I mention this to you and, as I say, the reason I take the risk of speaking to you for a third time in a lengthy debate is I just honestly can't believe that this is done with your eyes wide open. I believe that you have been rushed into this, and panicked into it.

I would like to say further that on this particular subject I didn't make up my mind on this matter on the basis that workmen's compensation will be injured. That is a factor in my mind. I didn't make it up since this committee proposal was brought on the floor. This proposal was given to me to judge, to look at, by the subcommittee of the committee on emerging problems quite a long time ago, and at that time I pointed out to the chairman of that subcommittee that this particular provision, in my mind — and I only had 10 minutes to look at it — I was boobytrapped with one problem after another. That was on the basis of 5 or 10 minutes looking at it. It is boobytrapped. It is just chock full of problems. I say to you go slow, as Mr. Faxon, the conservative, says. When you are making a big error, you can afford to go slow. I suggest that you don't make this error, and that you strike this section.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Pugsley.

MR. PUGSLEY: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I did not expect to speak on this issue. I think that most of you have heard quite aplenty. It has occurred to me, however, as I have listened to these discussions that there may be some confusion concerning the real issue that is before us. I wish to speak very briefly, and I hope to the point.

The first question in my mind is whether or not there should be written into the constitution a minimum rule of required evidence in every appeal that is taken from the decision of an administrative body. This was the subject matter of discussion before the judicial committee and was the subject of the inquiry that was made of Professor Cooper when he appeared before that committee. I heard that discussion. I likewise heard a similar discussion when he appeared before the committee on emerging problems. This matter was referred to the latter committee before action was finally taken upon it by the judiciary committee. And when the committee on emerging problems was certain that the judiciary committee was about to act upon it, or was taking action, the matter was referred back to that committee. I repeat, the question is, should the constitution contain a rule of evidence? It was the thinking of the committee that the subject matter under discussion was so important and that the matter of a fair, honest review of the proceedings of the lower body should be had in a court of review, that they thought in keeping with that, its importance would justify the definition of a fair rule.

I then come to this point. Is the rule of evidence which is set forth within the proposal before you one that is fair to all parties concerned? This appeal, like every appeal from a lower court to a higher one, contains a question of law. Also, it contains in addition thereto a question of fact. So if you will turn your attention to the language contained in this proposal, the appellate court is called upon first to determine as a minimum whether the decisions, findings, and orders are authorized by law. In other words, did the tribunal make a mistake in its interpretation of the law? And then you pass to the second question. Does the record — not in part, but in its entirety — set forth errors in view of the reliable, probative, and substantial evidence? If it does disclose such errors, then it will be the duty of the appellate court to reverse the decision. If the record taken as a whole substantiates that, then it should be affirmed.

I submit to you if you believe that such a rule is a proper one to be included in the constitution, then you should support this proposal and you should defeat the amendment. I repeat, the first question is, should such a proposal be in the constitution? And, if so, you should support the committee's finding.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, as a member of the judicial committee, I would like to say that this is one of the most important proposals that you will have to consider. I am assuming that you who are here realize that, and that you realize that if it takes us 4 hours or 4 days, it should be thoroughly discussed and should be thoroughly understood, and that the time is not being wasted.

I am somewhat pleased to have heard what Judge Pugsley said, because he has hit on the thing that to me we have got beclouded, and that's the real issue. If some of you, at least, who are here and are listening will look at Committee Proposal 95, let me very briefly analyze it for you. First, I want to say this. Do we believe in our form of government with 3 branches?

If we do, then we believe that the executive and the legislative branches should not exercise the powers of the judiciary.

Now, in the development of our society, the legislature will pass laws; and either it will create in some instances — in fact, in many instances — an agency to enforce those laws, or the executive will do it. Obviously the legislature can't handle all of these things itself. So these agencies are created to enforce the laws. And these agencies lay down rules and they make determinations. In doing so, it is inevitable that they make judicial or quasi judicial findings that affect private rights. Now, in the first sentence of section a we recognize that condition as it exists, and we say that when any of these administrative, legislative or executive agencies — that's what they are — make findings that are judicial or quasi judicial and affect private rights, that those decisions shall be subject to direct review by the courts as provided by law. We come to what I said earlier. I think we have to determine whether we are going to have a government of men or of law. Certainly no one should object to judicial rights being determined according to law.

Now we go to the second sentence. All that second sentence says is that the review that is to be exercised by the court, as a minimum, shall determine first whether the decision of that administrative tribunal is authorized by law. In other words, did it exceed the law? Did it get into a field it shouldn't have gotten into, that it wasn't authorized to get into? Certainly, if we are to have a government of law, we can't object to that. We can object to individuals running over our private rights, just on their own whim, caprice or because of the autocratic nature they have assumed. And the other thing that it says is this — and this is all it says — it says if it's such a decision that a hearing is required, then they've got to make their decision based on reliable, probative and substantial evidence on the whole record. Again we come back to the fact that if the legislative and the executive are going to exercise judicial functions, they've got to have those decisions they make supported by reliable evidence. And certainly that is not too much to expect. We don't have tyranny here. We are supposed to be governed by law.

I am glad that Dr. Nord brought up the matter of the bar exam because I happen to have a son who is going to take the next bar exam, and he happens to be one of Dr. Nord's pupils, or is taking his refresher course. So I am vitally interested in this. But let's take his analogy. Would the bar examining board's decision be reviewable? According to this, the only thing that the court can determine is, first, in the first part of that second sentence, did it have authority to do what it is doing? And, secondly, if a hearing is required, is it supported by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence? Well, I didn't know a hearing was required in a bar exam. I don't think his example is at all applicable. I think it is indicative of the type of thing we've gotten into in this, where we are losing sight of the real issue.

I think it is important, to preserve our way of life, that a proper check be made on the exercise of authority by these administrative agencies. And that proper check is simply that they act according to law; and if they make findings on hearings, that there be some evidence to back up those findings. I ask that you vote against this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I have listened to the entire debate without commenting on this, because I wanted to know what the committee thought and what those who studied the problem thought.

I am impressed, first of all, by the tremendous scope of the proposal that is being made. There is no question at all but that this is one of the most far ranging proposals for change which we are making in this entire constitution. There is also no question but what there have been abuses in this field, and this proposal is designed to correct those abuses. At the same time, I recognize — and I think others of us recognize — that we have people whose rights and interests need to be protected on both sides of the controversies that may be involved before these administrative tribunals.

It is not only the question of the person whose property may be taken by the decisions of these tribunals, but it is also a problem of seeing to it that the people who come before these tribunals with respect to workmen's compensation awards and other matters of that kind receive prompt action within reasonable time on the matters that they bring before these boards. Because it is true that they are in many cases people who cannot afford long protracted proceedings, and if they are carried through a long series of judicial reviews from one court to another there may be some serious problems for them that we have to be concerned about, too. I raised the question yesterday with regard to the introduction of the words "privileges and licenses." I understand that the change which we made in changing "erroneous" to "supported by" is a change which Mr. Cooper, who is one of the acknowledged authorities in the country, is doubtful about. Mr. Norris has spoken about the possibility of reconciling some of the language of this proposal with some of the problems which he sees.

I think we should pass the proposal; I intend to support the committee on this, but I think that in light of its importance, we can't just send it to style and drafting and then bring it back and act on it without further thought. I think it has to go to style and drafting, and in the meantime I think the committee should take another long look at it. I would like to know what Blythe Stason, for example, who is one of the great experts on administrative law in this state, thinks about it; and Mr. Cooper, as well; and some of the other people who know what the impact and import of this proposal would be. When we know that, then I think we may be in better position to determine what changes, if any, should be made, or whether it should be passed exactly as it is presented to us here.

I just want to record for the record my feeling that this is not the final look as far as I'm concerned, at least, and that all of us better take another long look at it before we make up our minds that this is the way it ought to be, finally, once and for all.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Krolikowski and Bledsoe to strike all of section a of Committee Proposal 95. Those in favor of the amendment will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: A division is requested. Is the demand supported? It is supported. Those in favor of the Krolikowski-Bledsoe amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Messrs. Krolikowski and Bledsoe, the yeas are 37, the nays are 83.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to Committee Proposal 95?

SECRETARY CHASE: There are none on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 95, as amended, is passed. The secretary will read the next committee proposal.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on judicial branch, by Mr. Danhof, chairman, Committee Proposal 96, A proposal pertaining to general and special provisions relative to the courts of the state. A substitute for sections 17, 19, 20 and 23 of article VII.

Following is Committee Proposal 96 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. THE SUPREME COURT, THE COURT OF APPEALS, THE CIRCUIT COURT, THE PROBATE COURT AND OTHER COURTS DESIGNATED BY THE LEGISLATURE SHALL BE COURTS OF RECORD AND SHALL EACH HAVE A COMMON SEAL. EXCEPT AS AUTHORIZED OTHERWISE BY THIS CONSTITUTION,

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

JUSTICES AND JUDGES OF THE COURTS OF THIS STATE SHALL BE LAWYERS LICENSED TO PRACTICE LAW IN THIS STATE AND SHALL NOT BE ELECTED OR APPOINTED TO A JUDICIAL OFFICE AFTER REACHING THE AGE OF 70 YEARS. NO JUDGE OR JUSTICE OF ANY COURT IN THIS STATE SHALL BE PAID FROM THE FEES OF HIS OFFICE NOR SHALL THE AMOUNT OF HIS SALARY BE MEASURED BY THE FEES OR OTHER MONEYS RECEIVED NOR BY THE AMOUNT OF JUDICIAL ACTIVITY.

Sec. b. WHENEVER A JUDGE SHALL REMOVE HIS DOMICILE BEYOND THE LIMITS OF THE TERRITORY FROM WHICH HE WAS ELECTED, HE SHALL BE DEEMED TO HAVE VACATED HIS OFFICE.

Sec. c. A JUSTICE AND A JUDGE OF A COURT OF RECORD SHALL BE INELIGIBLE TO BE NOMINATED FOR, OR ELECTED TO AN ELECTIVE OFFICE OTHER THAN A JUDICIAL OFFICE DURING THE PERIOD OF HIS SERVICE AS A JUDGE AND FOR 1 YEAR THEREAFTER.

Sec. d. WHEN A VACANCY OCCURS IN THE OFFICE OF AN ELECTED JUDGE OF ANY COURT OF RECORD, IT SHALL BE FILLED AT A GENERAL OR SPECIAL ELECTION ACCORDING TO LAW. THE SUPREME COURT IS EMPOWERED TO AUTHORIZE PERSONS WHO HAVE SERVED AS JUDGES AND HAVE VOLUNTARILY RETIRED, TO PERFORM JUDICIAL DUTIES FOR THE LIMITED PERIOD OF TIME FROM THE OCCURRENCE OF THE VACANCY UNTIL THE SUCCESSOR IS ELECTED AND QUALIFIED.

Sec. e. THERE SHALL BE PRINTED UPON THE BALLOT UNDER THE NAME OF EACH ELECTED INCUMBENT JUSTICE OR JUDGE, WHO IS A CANDIDATE FOR NOMINATION OR ELECTION TO THE SAME OFFICE, THE DESIGNATION OF THAT OFFICE.

Sec. f. ANY JUSTICE OR JUDGE SERVING AT THE TIME THIS CONSTITUTION BECOMES EFFECTIVE MAY SERVE THE REMAINDER OF THE TERM AND BE ELIGIBLE FOR REELECTION TO HIS PRESENT OFFICE REGARDLESS OF OTHER PROVISIONS IN THIS CONSTITUTION PERTAINING TO THE QUALIFICATIONS FOR THE OFFICE.

Sec. g. SALARIES OF JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT, OF THE JUDGES OF THE COURT OF APPEALS, OF THE CIRCUIT JUDGES WITHIN THE COUNTY OR CIRCUIT, AND OF THE PROBATE JUDGES WITHIN A COUNTY OR DISTRICT, SHALL BE UNIFORM, AND MAY BE INCREASED BUT SHALL NOT BE DECREASED, DURING A TERM OF OFFICE EXCEPT AND ONLY TO THE EXTENT OF A GENERAL SALARY REDUCTION IN ALL OTHER BRANCHES OF GOVERNMENT.

EACH OF THE JUDGES OF THE CIRCUIT COURTS SHALL RECEIVE A SALARY PAYABLE MONTHLY. IN ADDITION TO THE SALARY PAID FROM THE STATE TREASURY, EACH CIRCUIT JUDGE MAY RECEIVE FROM ANY COUNTY IN WHICH HE REGULARLY HOLDS COURT SUCH ADDITIONAL SALARY AS MAY BE DETERMINED FROM TIME TO TIME BY THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF THE COUNTY. IN ANY COUNTY WHERE SUCH ADDITIONAL SALARY IS GRANTED, IT SHALL BE PAID AT THE SAME RATE TO ALL CIRCUIT JUDGES REGULARLY HOLDING COURT THEREIN.

Sec. h. FOR REASONABLE CAUSE, WHICH SHALL NOT BE SUFFICIENT GROUND FOR IMPEACHMENT, THE GOVERNOR SHALL REMOVE ANY JUDGE ON A CONCURRENT RESOLUTION OF 2/3 OF THE MEMBERS ELECTED TO EACH HOUSE OF THE LEGISLATURE; AND THE CAUSE FOR WHICH SUCH REMOVAL IS REQUIRED SHALL BE STATED AT LENGTH IN SUCH RESOLUTION.

Sec. i. THE OFFICE OF CIRCUIT COURT COMMISSIONER AND JUSTICE OF THE PEACE SHALL CONTINUE TO HAVE, FOR A PERIOD OF NOT TO EXCEED 5 YEARS FROM THE DATE THIS CONSTITUTION BECOMES EFFECTIVE, ALL THEIR RESPECTIVE POWERS AND JURISDICTION UNTIL THE TIME WITHIN THIS PERIOD THAT THEY ARE ABOLISHED OR THEIR JURISDICTION AND POWERS ARE TRANSFERRED TO, OR INVESTED IN, OTHER COURTS THAT SHALL BE ESTABLISHED IN ACCORDANCE WITH THIS CONSTITUTION.

SPECIAL STATUTORY COURTS IN EXISTENCE AS OF THE TIME THIS CONSTITUTION BECOMES EFFECTIVE SHALL RETAIN THEIR POWERS AND JURISDICTION, EXCEPT AS PROVIDED BY LAW, UNTIL AND UNLESS THEY ARE ABOLISHED BY LAW.

Sec. j. THE PROVISIONS OF THIS CONSTITUTION REQUIRING THE ESTABLISHMENT OF STAGGERED TERMS OF OFFICES IN EXISTENCE, SHALL BE IMPLEMENTED AT THE NEXT ELECTION FOR SUCH OFFICES BY LEGISLATION PROVIDING FOR ELECTIONS FOR TERMS OF VARYING LENGTH, NONE OF WHICH SHALL BE SHORTER THAN THE BASIC TERM PROVIDED HEREIN FOR THE OFFICE.

Sec. k. EACH BRANCH OF THE LEGISLATURE AS WELL AS THE GOVERNOR SHALL HAVE THE AUTHORITY TO REQUEST THE OPINION OF THE SUPREME COURT UPON IMPORTANT QUESTIONS OF LAW AND UPON SOLEMN OCCASIONS.

Mr. Danhof, chairman of the committee on judicial branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 96:

Sec. a. Most of the content of this section is found in section 17 of article VII of the Constitution of 1908. The new court of appeals has been included as a court of record and the legislature is permitted to determine which of the lower courts will be so designated.

Two substantial additions have been made. One requires that all judges be lawyers. An exception is made in section f for those nonlawyers now serving as judges. In the case of justices of the peace, this exception cannot extend beyond 5 years. (See section i hereunder.)

The committee felt that a minimum requirement for judicial office should be a license to practice law. This doctrine has been recognized as to the supreme court and the circuit court through an amendment adopted by the people in 1955. We would apply it to all courts.

Abolition of the fee system would also be accomplished. The committee could find no support for paying a judge on the basis of the amount of litigation before him. Even the justices themselves would not wholeheartedly endorse what appears to the committee to be an indefensible method of payment.

Sec. b. The committee has in essence adopted the provisions of section 19 of article VII of the Constitution of 1908. Due, however, to the elimination of the justices of the peace from the proposed new article any reference to this office has been eliminated. In addition, the word "territory" has been substituted for the word "jurisdiction," inasmuch as the section refers to the physical moving of the judge from the territory from which he was elected.

Sec. c. Since 1850, circuit judges have been prohibited from holding other than a judicial office for their term and an additional year. We felt the principle of divorcing the judiciary from the political arena was valid. There seemed to be no reason to place the limitation on circuit judges alone. On the other hand, the committee felt that such a restriction should be tied to service on the bench, rather than the term to which he was elected.

Sec. d. This provision is a substitution for section 20 of article VII of the Constitution of 1908 and provides that vacancies in the office of an elected judge of any court of record shall be filled by general or special election. This is a significant change and removes from the governor the power to appoint judges. The provision is included in order to maintain a philosophical consistency in the idea that this state should have an elected judiciary. The present system where the governor in case of a vacancy makes an appointment and there is then bestowed upon the appointee the incumbency designation, has had an overwhelming tendency in the past to insure the election of the appointee and thereby creating in effect an appointive judiciary. The proposal embodies the idea that the supreme court may fill the vacancy temporarily by utilizing the services of judges who have retired. This pool of judicial manpower will continue to grow and can be readily utilized as needed. It is recognized that perhaps certain legislation will be needed to amend the retirement program.

The committee on executive branch is unable to concur in this proposal.

Sec. e. This provision is the last paragraph of section 3 of article VII of the Constitution of 1908, with one significant change. There has been inserted in front of "incumbent" the word "elected". Hence it now provides that only judges or justices who have been elected will be eligible for the incumbency designation. This method is utilized to provide tenure for those judges who have previously qualified, gives stability to the judiciary of this state and is extremely vital in order to secure proper court administration when you have an elected judiciary. The majority of the committee were of the opinion that the incumbency designation is something which should be earned by previous election.

Sec. f. This is a "grandfather" clause to permit present nonlawyer judges to serve the remainder of their term and be eligible for reelection. As pointed out in the earlier comments, after a maximum of 5 years, this exception would no longer protect justices of the peace.

Sec. g. The provisions of this section are designed to assure uniform salaries for all judges within a certain district. It likewise removes the restriction of section 3 of article XVI which, as it now stands, prohibits the increase of salary of any supreme court justice during his term of office. We now have justices whose salaries vary as much as $7,000.00 per year. The committee believes that this discrimination should be abolished. However, due to the requirement of staggered terms for circuit judges and probate judges it became evident that some other method should be devised if a salary reduction ever became necessary. Accordingly, the proposition was adopted that a salary reduction could be obtained for the judiciary only if general salary reduction were made in each of the other branches of the government. This would eliminate the danger of the judiciary being singled out for salary reduction.

Sec. h. This section is identical with the present provisions of article IX, section 6. The matter is simply transferred to the judicial article.

Sec. i. Having determined that the offices of circuit court commissioner and justice of the peace should be abolished, the committee recognized the need to provide for a period of time for the legislature to accomplish an orderly transfer of the powers and duties of these offices to other judicial and nonjudicial offices where indicated. Five years did not seem to be an unreasonably long period of time in that the legislature may desire to reevaluate the entire system of courts of limited jurisdiction in the development of a modern lower court structure, better adapted to the needs of the people and the ends of justice.

Under the 1908 constitution, several statutory courts have been created. Among these are the recorder's court and common pleas court of Detroit, superior court of Grand Rapids, municipal courts throughout the state and the court of claims. These will continue in existence, unless action is taken by the legislature to abolish them or transfer their duties elsewhere. No new power is vested in the legislature in this regard.

Sec. j. This provision is needed to allow the legislature to fulfill the constitutional requirement of staggered terms for both circuit and probate judges.

Sec. k. This is a new section and is recommended for the purpose of empowering the supreme court to furnish advisory opinions to the governor and each house of the legislature on important questions of law and solemn occasions. An example of this would be the 4 cent sales tax which was passed and, in a short time thereafter, was declared unconstitutional. By this provision it is felt that more effective governmental operation is made possible. This is a nonadversary proceeding. Similar language appears in the Constitution of the State of Massachusetts. The matter of advisory opinion was recommended to the committee on judicial branch by Mr. Justice Black. We feel the court will provide for notice and hearing in proper cases.

Following is minority report A to Committee Proposal 96 as offered and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

Messrs. Ford, Garvin, Bledsoe, Miss McGowan, Messrs. Ostrow, Krolikowski and Barthwell, a minority of the committee on judicial branch, submit the following minority report A to Committee Proposal 96:

A minority of the committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Strike all of Section d and reinsert in lieu thereof the language of article VII, section 20 of the 1908 constitution, which language reads as follows:

> When a vacancy occurs in the office of judge of any court of record, it shall be filled by appointment of the governor, and the person appointed shall hold the office until a successor is elected and qualified. When elected, such successor shall hold the office the residue of the unexpired term.

Messrs. Ford, Garvin, Bledsoe, Miss McGowan, Messrs. Ostrow, Krolikowski and Barthwell, a minority of the committee on judicial branch, submit the following reasons in support of the foregoing minority report A, which accompanied Committee Proposal 96:

The proponents of this minority report believe that the majority's recommended prohibition against the filling of vacancies by gubernatorial appointment would create a unique problem that could conceivably result in prolonged vacancies on the bench.

The majority proposes that pending the occurrence of an election to fill a judicial vacancy, the vacancy could be temporarily filled by retired former circuit judges. An examination of the number and location throughout the state of retired judges available for this service casts strong doubt on the practical value of this method to meet the problem.

It is apparent from many years of experience with the present system that judicial vacancies have been filled by the governors of this state on a careful and considerate basis. The vast majority of its judges, who have been appointed to fill a vacancy, have been elected and reelected many times over by the voters, demonstrating their confidence in the caliber of person the present system produces.

Following is minority report B to Committee Proposal 96 as offered and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

Messrs. Ford, Ostrow and Garvin, a minority of the committee on judicial branch, submit the following minority report B to Committee Proposal 96:

A minority of the committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. i. On page 3, of Committee Proposal 96:

1. Strike out all of lines 11 through 17, inclusive.

2. Amend line 18, by striking out "SPECIAL STATUTORY" and inserting "ALL".

3. Amend line 20, after "UNLESS" by striking out "THEY" and inserting "SUCH POWERS".

4. Amend line 20, after "ARE" by inserting "MODIFIED OR", so that section 1 will read as follows:

Sec. 1. ALL COURTS IN EXISTENCE AS OF THE TIME THIS CONSTITUTION BECOMES EFFECTIVE SHALL RETAIN THEIR POWERS AND JURISDICTION, EXCEPT AS PROVIDED BY LAW, UNTIL AND UNLESS SUCH POWERS ARE MODIFIED OR ABOLISHED BY LAW.

Messrs. Ford, Ostrow and Garvin, a minority of the committee on judicial branch, submit the following reasons in support of the foregoing minority report B, which accompanied Committee Proposal 96:

The purpose of the proposed changes of the majority report are to remove the language provided for the absolute abolition of the circuit court commissioner and justice of the peace on or before 5 years from the date of the adoption of the constitution.

It is the belief of the minority that removing the justice of the peace from the constitution provides sufficient flexibility for the legislature to abolish, modify or otherwise replace both of these courts. If this should at any time in the future be necessary and desirable on a statewide basis, it is thought that by leaving this matter completely to the legislature, it will be free to add to the present court system a system of local courts to replace the justice of the peace in parts of the state where this may be desirable. The language of the majority report would, however, abolish these courts throughout the state and does not admit of the possibility that these courts perform necessary functions in many parts of the state.

The circuit court commissioner's court in Wayne county, for example, handles a large volume of work which would of necessity be transferred to other courts already operating with overburdened dockets.

The amendment to the second paragraph of this section would make it clear that all judicial powers being exercised at the time of the adoption of this constitution would continue without the necessity of immediate legislation to replace constitutional powers being abolished or left out of this constitution.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: For an explanation of section a of Committee Proposal 96, the Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee on judicial branch, Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, we now turn to the committee proposal which deals with miscellaneous provisions, which will refer to all or certain specific courts and cover certain other particular items which are applicable to all of the proposals that we have considered thus far. In order to explain the position of the committee in this regard, I should like to call upon a gentleman who served with our committee and who was long suffering in the fact that he was the only nonlawyer on the committee. I would at this time call upon the delegate from the city of Detroit, Mr. Barthwell.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will advise the committee that at a meeting of the rules committee this noon it was suggested that Mr. Barthwell be awarded the honorary degree of L.S.L., long suffering layman. (laughter) Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I don't know if this layman has suffered as much as the convention has, because I found out that 20 lawyers can't talk as much as 57 lawyers and some laymen. (laughter) I would like to say, though, that this duty has been an enjoyable one, and I think it was nice that I was here, because when we are going to try to fix up the lay people, they are going to let a layman do the job.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

I would like to state again that the changes in this section are 2: one, all judges of all courts must be lawyers; and 2, no judges shall be paid on a fee system. I would also like to state that, personally, I, as a lay person—although it seems that I am waiving all of my opportunities to cash in on the services that I have put in on this committee—have found out that a nonlawyer could be a judge, although he couldn't practice law. When I agreed with this, though, I was following the established concept that specialization produces the best results. And I, as a lay person, when I go before a court, not only would like to feel that the judge is a lawyer, but would kind of hope that he was an experienced lawyer.

I would like to say that I urge, on behalf of the committee, that this section be adopted.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Thank you, Mr. Barthwell. Mr. Danhof, do you have any further explanation?

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, I think it might be in order, if I can, to request that we consider this particular section sentence by sentence. In this way we can proceed, and if there are amendments, as I note there are, we might be able to take them up by sentence, in the order that they come up in the proposal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Without objection, we will proceed to consider section a of Committee Proposal 96, sentence by sentence. Are there any amendments to the first sentence?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Radka, Pugsley and Rajkovich offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "designated" by inserting "as such"; so that the language will read:

The supreme court, the court of appeals, the circuit court, the probate court and other courts designated as such by the legislature shall be courts of record and shall each have a common seal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Radka and others to the first sentence of section a. Mr. Radka.

MR. RADKA: I have nothing to offer in the way of explanation. I think that probably the amendment is clear, although I believe the words must be read in conjunction with the amendment that is offered as far as the second sentence is concerned, which involves line 10. I will defer until you pass the first sentence.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Radka and others to the first sentence of section a. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I might state for the committee that I think this is a matter that is clarifying rather than changing any intent. It was the particular intent of the judiciary committee that the courts named herein — that is, the supreme court, the court of appeals, the circuit court and the probate court — should by constitution become courts of record. Now, this is a very technical matter, and it has to do with the acceptability of the orders and the records of the court. We further intended that any other courts which might be created by the legislature, as provided in Commitee Proposal 90, could be, if the legislature deemed it desirable, designated as courts of record. It is my understanding that the amendment here is merely clarifying, and I see no real objection to it at this time.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Radka and others to the first sentence of section a. Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, I have one question here. We have had, on style and drafting, certain problems, one of which is the word "such." Normally, the word "such" refers to an antecedent noun. My understanding of the intention, so that we can have that clear before us in style and drafting, is that "such" really refers to "courts of record," is that correct?

MR. RADKA: That is correct.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Radka and others to insert the words "as such" after the word "designated" in line 8, in the first sentence of section a. Those in favor of the amendment will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is adopted. Are there further amendments to the first sentence of section a? If not, the secretary will read the second sentence.

SECRETARY CHASE: The second sentence:

[The second sentence was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 1478.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there amendments to the second sentence?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Radka, Pugsley and Rajkovich offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 10, after "courts" by inserting "of record"; so the language will then read:

Except as authorized otherwise by this constitution, justices and judges of the courts of record of this state shall be lawyers licensed to practice law — et cetera.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Radka, Pugsley and Rajkovich, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Radka.

MR. RADKA: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, might I first offer to Mr. Higgs the suggestion that rather than "as such," that we might put in the word "so" before "designated," and it would accomplish the same thing. I don't like to have you people in style and drafting work too hard; just so long as you keep the same substantive meaning.

The purpose of the amendment to add the words "of record" is really quite a simple one, as far as we people in the sparsely populated areas of northern Michigan are concerned. We find ourselves presented with this problem. In a lot of counties there are not a whole lot of attorneys. Many counties have one attorney. And we are anticipating what is going to be done in the remaining sections of this particular proposal as far as the justice of the peace courts are concerned. It was our feeling that if at the end of 5 years the layman justice of the peace court was going to be abolished and we found ourselves with no attorneys in our county, we would have no court to serve our people. So we are here offering this amendment, hoping that it will give the legislature the flexibility — and I detest that word at this stage — to provide for a court not of record, and the justice might be a layman, not an attorney; and it is just as simple as that.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Radka, Pugsley and Rajkovich to line 10 of section a of Committee Proposal 96. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, as Mr. Radka has pointed out very succinctly, this is the bridge that will have to be crossed. The majority of the committee voted to put in a requirement that all judges and justices of the courts of this state — and that meant all, from the top to the bottom — shall be lawyers licensed to practice law, and shall not assume judicial office after reaching the age of 70. Now, the age of 70 has been written into the constitution for some time. This was the majority view of the committee, and it should be noted here exactly what is transpiring and what will be accomplished by the acceptance of the amendment if that be the will of this committee. I think that it is something that we have to face up to, and something that the convention cannot ignore.

We have left to the legislature to provide in essence for the courts of limited jurisdiction. One of the things they would have had to include is that the judges be lawyers. If the amendment carries, it will limit it to those courts which are courts of record, which are the 4 named above, plus any others so designated by the legislature.

I should like to yield at this time to another member of the committee for some further comments in this regard, the delegate from Battle Creek, Mr. Everett.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Danhof, this matter, as pointed out by the 2 gentlemen who preceded me, is not a simple matter, and would effect quite a vital change from the committee's action. I would inquire of the committee chairman if he proposes that we extend the debate through this entire section at this time, or if he would prefer that we withhold it, and pick up tomorrow where we leave off today?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Well, I am willing to abide by the wishes of the committee. Mr. Radka has laid the matter out very clearly. I'm not sure how much discussion it will provoke. If it's the will that we conclude, fine. If not, why go ahead, Mr. Everett.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may proceed, Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: How do we determine the will, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: I would suggest, Mr. Everett, that you proceed.

MR. EVERETT: All right.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You have been recognized.

MR. EVERETT: As Mr. Danhof suggested, the term "of record" has a technical meaning, but applied practically, this is what the effect of Mr. Radka's amendment would be: it would change an outright flat statement that all the judges of all of the courts of this state be lawyers to a simple statement that some judges be lawyers and some judges not be.

I know in this convention there are many here who sincerely believe that the justices of the peace, who are nonlawyer justices, perform a valid function for the people. Where we differ on that point, it is an honest difference of opinion, probably based on experiences which are unique to ourselves, and not available to the other side. But I have a strong feeling that within the last couple of days, in particular, there are many delegates here who are suggesting the principle which the judicial committee has set forth — that all judges of all courts should be lawyers — is a valid principle, but. . . . And then they have reasons of their own for rejecting a valid principle for what would appear to be a more expedient course. It is to these delegates that I would address myself. If this is a matter of principle — and to many of us it is — then the principle is simply this: Do we, as a constitutional body, draft a framework for the best possible judicial system in the state of Michigan, or do we not?

Let me say this. I would not suggest for a moment — and I don't think anybody here would suggest — that the framework is the total answer. Because a good system can produce bad judges, and a bad system can produce good judges. But, in the final analysis, the system if it's sound is much more likely to provide a good judiciary and a good judicial system for the people of the state than a bad one is. So to a majority on the committee — and I cannot now recall what constituted that majority, but it is now my recollection that there was not substantial disagreement in this; and if I'm wrong, I'll be corrected — the issue was very clear cut. And I'm glad that Mr. Barthwell was able to present the committee position, because I might say he was one of the most vocal spokesmen on the committee for the idea that no judicial system is sound unless it is manned by men who, as a minimum requirement, are lawyers. To us this was sound.

Now, it has been suggested by many people here that this is a matter which does not concern most of us; it concerns areas where there are not too many people. To those I would submit that the judicial structure of the state of Michigan and the administration of law and justice are vital to every person in the state of Michigan, wherever he may live. Even if you never come in contact with that court in all your existence, the fact that the people of this state are served by a good judiciary or a bad judiciary is a matter of importance, not only to us as delegates, but to every citizen of this state.

It has been suggested, too, that all lawyers do not make good judges — and nobody will quarrel with this. But what we are stating here is that as a minimum requirement this is essential. To some of us, at least, it would be absurd to suggest that in a small county you could license the barber to remove appendixes because the doctor was quite a ways away. You might say, well, he could kill the man that way.

I would remind you that there were many instances in our history in which men yielded their lives before their rights.

And, in the final analysis, the determination of whether your rights are protected or not depends on the judges who sit on the bench. To me this is not a matter of the personalities involved. It is not a matter of whether there are some good justices or some bad justices. There are some of each. It is a question of whether or not any judicial system that is founded upon anything other than a minimum of legal training could possibly serve the needs of the people.

A day or two ago, in discussing this matter with Mr. Radka, I made a facetious remark that ultimately, after this 5 years has gone by, the people might have to live with this situation. And those words have come back to haunt me. I do not accept for a moment the proposition that any part of the state of Michigan is so lacking in abilities, in manpower, that it cannot man a good judicial system.

This morning we took tremendous strides forward to improve the judicial system. It was pointed out then by several men that what we are talking about now is, as far as many people are concerned, far more important than the supreme court; because for every person whose rights are litigated or determined by the supreme court, literally thousands of people will have their rights determined in the probate and in the justice courts. And it is for them that we of the committee are speaking. Not for lawyers; not simply for judges; but for people whose final determination is going to be made there at that level. Appeals from these courts are rare. The cost of appeal is heavy. And the final decision is usually made at that level. And it is going to be made properly and in the interests of justice, or not, primarily on the basis of what type of man mans that court.

Now, this morning, in opening the door to permit the districting of probate courts and a combination of functions of the probate courts with inferior courts, we have given a partial answer to those who say this cannot be done in the small counties. We have indicated to them a clear way in which it could be done in the small counties, where by combining activities of courts in the small counties they could not only make the court attractive from a financial standpoint, but from the standpoint that they would engage the services of men who would have vital work to perform in these areas. This is one answer to it. There are others. We are not trying to write into the constitution all of the possible answers.

But to me there is one thing unanswerable. How can we leave this convention and go back home and say that we have engrafted something less than the best possible judicial system which was available to us? And that's what we are being asked to do by this amendment. If you believe in the best, if you believe the people of the state of Michigan are entitled to the best, not simply now, but in the future, then I submit you have only one recourse, and that is to vote down this amendment and to support the committee's position. If you accept the possibility, if you accept the premise that some people in this state are not entitled to the best simply because they live in small counties, or because there aren't a lot of them, or because they are not rich, if you are satisfied to saddle them with something less than the best, then you now have your opportunity to do so.

To me, to the majority of the committee, and I'm sure to many other men and women in this convention, we do not have any choice. We must produce the best if it lies within our means to do it. It does lie within our means, and I would urge you to defeat the amendment and to support the committee.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, I've looked around the room, and I see that absenteeism is going up again. I note further there are some amendments to consider on Committee Proposal 95. We have had the 2 basic considerations to be considered in this particular sentence ably put forth by Mr. Radka and Mr. Everett. I think the committee is tired, and at this time I recommend we not take a vote on this matter, and move that the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof moves the committee do now rise. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails, and the committee will rise.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration several matters, of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 95, A proposal pertaining to appeals from administrative tribunals. It reports the proposal back to the convention with 2 amendments, recommending the amendments be agreed to and the proposal as thus amended do pass.

Following are the amendments recommended by the committee of the whole:

1. Amend page 1, line 7, after "rights,", by inserting "privileges or licenses,"; so that the language will then read:

> All final decisions, findings, rulings and orders of any administrative officer or body existing under the constitution or by law, which are judicial or quasi judicial and affect private rights, privileges or licenses, shall be subject to direct review by the courts as shall be provided by law.

2. Amend page 1, line 12, by striking out "clearly"; so the language will then read:

> . . . in cases in which a hearing is required, whether the same are supported by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on concurring in the amendments recommended by the committee of the whole. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed no.

The amendments are adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Faxon, Austin and Nord offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 12, by striking out "supported by" and inserting "erroneous in view of the"; so the language will then read:

> . . . in cases in which a hearing is required, whether the same are erroneous in view of the reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. President, we have discussed this. This is the original recommendation of the judicial committee, and I would yield to Mr. Danhof, the chairman of the committee, for his comments.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: After we have belabored this within the committee of the whole, Mr. President, I think it becomes evident that perhaps we should return to the original language as was reported out by the majority of our committee. I therefore would recommend the adoption of the amendment and returning to the original language of the committee as it had been brought forth. I will support the amendment.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon.

MR. FORD: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I would like to move, under the rules, for a call of the convention. Only the people who are within the bar of the convention.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Ford, would you be satisfied if the bell is rung to bring everybody in here? We will ring the bell anyway, and see what happens.

MR. FORD: Mr. President, it is my understanding that on a motion for a call of the convention, if the call is had, only those persons excused from today's session are excused from attending; is that correct?

PRESIDENT NISBET: That is correct.

MR. FORD: Then anyone who has been excused is not a problem, as I understand it. There is some concern over here that you would have to take some people out of a sickbed. We just want the people who are in the building to come in. We have been debating all day.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair thinks your request, Mr. Ford, will be taken care of by the ringing of the bell. Mr. Knirk.

MR. KNIRK: Mr. President, I do not believe that the bell rings downstairs at all. So I think someone should go downstairs.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. DesRocher, does the bell ring downstairs? Would you, Mr. DesRocher, as sergeant at arms, send somebody downstairs, to see if there's anyone there.

MR. KING: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. King.

MR. KING: A point of parliamentary inquiry. It is my understanding that a call of the convention requires a vote of the majority. I don't believe such a vote has been taken.

PRESIDENT NISBET: We have not had a call of the convention. We are trying to do it informally, Mr. King. Mr. DesRocher.

SERGEANT AT ARMS DES ROCHER: All of the delegates in the building are on the floor, sir.

MR. WALKER: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Walker.

MR. WALKER: May I ask of Mr. Ford whether that was made in the form of a motion, or just a suggestion? I understood it to be a motion.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Ford, do you insist on a motion?

MR. FORD: It has just been called to my attention that Dr. Hannah left ill, and was not excused before he left, and I wouldn't want to be caught in a parliamentary maneuver where we would be dragging a sick man out of bed. But I think that we now understand the seriousness of getting everybody in here, even if we have to wait a few minutes to do it.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair is informed by the sergeant at arms that all delegates in the building are now on the convention floor.

The question is on the adoption of Mr. Faxon's amendment. Mr. Chase, would you read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment is as follows:

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the amendment. Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. President, we have been through this now for quite some time and I would like to urge the defeat of this amendment, because this amendment changes the whole meaning of this particular provision. I would urge the defeat of this amendment at this time. Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the amendment. Mr. Upton.

MR. UPTON: Can we have a roll call vote, sir.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The demand for a roll call has been made. Is it supported? There is a sufficient number up. Those in favor of the Faxon amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Mr. Walker.

MR. WALKER: May we have the amendment read one more time?

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment is:

PRESIDENT NISBET: Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

MR. BLEDSOE: I want the record to show that my reason for not voting is that I am apprehensive that it may be understood that my vote would be in the nature of a compromise. I want the record to show that I brook no compromise in the position that I have taken on the floor here with reference to this amendment.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment offered by Messrs. Faxon, Austin and Nord, the yeas are 50, the nays are 67.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is not adopted. Are there any other amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Faxon, Austin and Nord offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 12, by striking out "reliable"; so the language will read, " . . . in cases in which a hearing is required, whether the same are supported by probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record."

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. President, point of information.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: I don't think it was clear in the last vote—there seemed to be some confusion in my section of the floor at any rate—as to how that whole sentence read with and without the amendment. I'd like to know how it reads now. That is, in particular, whether the word "clearly" was involved.

SECRETARY CHASE: The word "clearly" was not involved, Mr. Higgs, because of the fact that this was an amendment adopted in the committee of the whole and which was previously approved. The word "clearly" is not in the language.

MR. HIGGS: Then the Faxon amendment was to insert the words "erroneous in view of the" without the "clearly," is that it?

SECRETARY CHASE: That is correct.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon.

SECRETARY CHASE: Which amendment now pending is in line 12, by striking out the word "reliable."

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I ask for the yeas and nays, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The yeas and the nays have been demanded. Is the demand supported? There is a sufficient number up. Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President, I wish to abstain from casting any further votes on this entire proposal—unless there happens to be one on the desk to strike the whole section—on the basis that I feel that it is legislative in nature and has no place in the constitution.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the amendment. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of this amendment to strike out of line 12 the word "reliable," the yeas are 31; the nays are 87.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is not adopted. Are there any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. T. S. Brown has an amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 7, after "licenses,", by inserting "and to which the state is a party in interest,".

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Brown.

MR. T. S. BROWN: Mr. President, members of the convention, again, a synopsis of what I mentioned the first time in our committee of the whole. This amendment would have the net effect, I think, of meeting the objections of most of us who were concerned about the scope of this review, and most of us who were concerned especially about the workmen's compensation section. It would retain the essence of what is good, in the minds and hearts of all of us, I think, in the one version of this particular proposal—and we did want to protect individuals who appeared before the state and state agencies—in that it would be applicable only to those situations in which an individual or a corporation or a partnership or anyone appeared in a situation vis a vis a state agency; and would preclude this type of broad appeal in a situation where the state was only acting as an arbitrator, and where you did not have a state agency directly involved as a party. It would, therefore, not inject the state as a party in what would otherwise be a private contractual matter and a matter of private litigation. I demand the yeas and the nays.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The yeas and the nays have been demanded. Is the demand supported? There is a sufficient number up. The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Brown. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed—

MR. FORD: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I would like to offer a motion at this time, in light of what has been said from the other side of the floor, and the possibility of settling a very controversial matter in this convention, to postpone further consideration of this matter until Thursday morning, or until we complete the rest of the judiciary article, whichever occurs first.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Ford. Mr. Ford, would you repeat your motion, please?

MR. FORD: The motion is to postpone further consideration of Committee Proposal 95 until Thursday morning, or until we complete the judiciary article, whichever occurs first.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Ford, would you make your motion definite, either one way or the other?

MR. FORD: Mr. Danhof assures me we won't be through Thursday, so I'll make it until Thursday morning.

MR. LUNDGREN: Mr. President, a point of order.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Lundgren.

MR. LUNDGREN: Hasn't the vote already been called for?

PRESIDENT NISBET: The motion is in order since the Chair had not completed calling for the vote before it was made. The motion is by Mr. Ford to postpone action until Thursday. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion does not prevail. The question is on the amendment of Mr. Brown. Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: I just want to make a last ditch plea here that all the people, especially from the rural areas, who have expressed the problems they have been faced with before administrative agencies, will not be affected by this amendment.

MR. BOOTHBY: Point of order, Mr. President. I believe the vote has been called for.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Hodges may make his remarks. The vote was not completely called for.

MR. HODGES: I just again point this out. This strictly helps to affect these areas of compensation where the state is not a party and is not oppressing the small individual, be he a farmer or small businessman. Again, I just ask and solicit the support of those from the rural areas that are not affected by this. This still meets the genuine problem that you face, without affecting and making detrimental the procedures with regard to the workingmen of this state.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is now on the amendment. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. T. S. Brown, the yeas are 32, the nays are 83.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Bledsoe and Krolikowski offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, following line 4, by striking out all of section a, lines 5 through 13.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment as offered by Mr. Bledsoe and Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. President, I call for the yeas and nays.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The yeas and the nays have been demanded. Is the demand supported? There is a sufficient number up. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I hope everyone realizes that we are at a very important point of this convention in the view of a number of delegates here. Some of us are in a position where we are making a decision that could very well be determinative of much more than the importance of what appears to be the reason for this section. Now, I tried to get this deferred, in line with what Mr. Martin suggested: that we ought to get our heads together if we are seriously interested in trying to work out something. But if we're going to go ahead and be bullheaded about it and insist on voting on this, and we vote down this amendment, we had a ruling this morning that we can't get it back before this convention again. And I submit that we are about ready to take a step that is important enough so that we ought to be cautious.

Now, we are in a parliamentary position where I don't know of any other way, if we don't defer this thing, to leave the door open to work this thing out between the 2 parties. There is no doubt in anybody's mind right now that it is a partisan issue. If you want to work out this thing and you want to try to work in a spirit of compromise, let's do it. I urge you to do something at this point towards that end, and not insist on taking a vote here that is going to preclude any further consideration of the possibility of compromise in this area. It is a very vital thing to many of us here now. I don't think there can be any doubt in anyone's mind about that. One way we can accomplish the possibility of working on this would be to vote for the amendment, leaving no section in here, and then adding it in as we go through the judiciary article.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Mr. President, the amendment is based on the recognition that the committee proposal in its present form compels review de novo on the record of all administrative findings and decisions. Secondly, that the equating of judicial or the equating of adjudicative and legislative acts in the light of the Brown amendment will undermine the entire regulatory process of administrative agencies.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. President, I move the previous question.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The previous question has been demanded. Is the demand seconded? There is a sufficient number up. The question now is: shall the main question be put?

MR. NORD: Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Am I correct in assuming that when the previous question is moved, that there are at that point available a number of other motions that take precedence—about 6 of them, or thereabouts—and that each one of these could be moved if we were so inclined?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Nord, the previous question has not been ordered yet.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, I would like to move that we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed, no. The Chair is in doubt. Those in favor of adjourning will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion to adjourn, the yeas are 48, the nays are 71.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The motion does not prevail. The question now is: shall the main question now be put? Mr. Walker.

MR. WALKER: Mr. President, in that I cannot believe that this is a sincere effort to shorten the procedure here, but merely another form of a gag rule, I ask the yeas and nays, so we might see who is who.

MR. IVERSON: Point of order, Mr. President. It is not debatable.

PRESIDENT NISBET: He is just asking for the yeas and nays, Mr. Iverson. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, a preferential motion. I move that the debate on the pending question be limited to 15 minutes.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen to limit debate to 15 minutes. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. The debate is limited to 15 minutes. The Chair recognizes Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. President, fellow delegates, I'll be very brief. I just want to correct one error that Mr. Krolikowski made. He said that this provides for a review de novo. Obviously it doesn't, and I'm sure he knows that. And I would yield to him if he wishes to speak at this time.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Mr. President, I believe that the statement I made was that it would require, as a minimum, review de novo on the record. And I still stand firmly on that position. I say it is review de novo on the record.

MR. KING: On the record.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: That's review de novo on the record, and in light of the words "reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record."

MR. KING: Mr. President, it does provide for a review on the record, but the words "de novo" are very misleading here. Perhaps Mr. Krolikowski could tell me what review is not review de novo on the record?

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Well, as counterdistinguished from a trial de novo, I say there is a review de novo on the record.

MR. KING: Thank you, Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Let me reaffirm that this is the minimal requirement.

MR. KING: I understand that. Then let me again state that we are obviously not talking about de novo review as most people understand it. We are talking about a review on the record, and how the words "de novo" got in there I have no idea. But I would suggest that at this time—I don't want to protract this debate—I think all of the pros and cons have been heard on the thing. I can't really believe that anyone would refute the right of a review, which takes away by judicial or quasi judicial hearing substantive rights of the people of the state of Michigan.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mrs. Hatcher.

MRS. HATCHER: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I'm not sure that what I have to say at this time will mean anything to any other delegates, but it certainly does mean quite a bit to me as a citizen of this state. For many reasons, I feel moved to rise at this time and to say that this Committee Proposal 95 is a subterfuge, and certainly I support the things that Mr. Marshall said a few moments ago concerning this particular proposal. I also want to take this opportunity to compliment the proponents of this amendment for their serious forecast in setting forth this amendment to strike out the entire Committee Proposal 95. I sincerely believe that the state and the citizens would benefit by the deletion of Committee Proposal 95 of this committee's report.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. President, members of the convention, I think that we should clarify something that Mr. Ford said a moment ago. He said that, in effect, you are doing something which cannot be undone. As a practical matter, the amendment conceivably could not come up for reconsideration as it presently appears, but a nullity could be written into the present proposal, or in lieu of the present proposal, which would accomplish exactly what the present amendment wishes to do. Therefore, I think that what he has said should be considered in the light of the explanation, and if there is to be a getting together, so to speak, as he has suggested, it is no more precluded now than it would be if the amendment passed or did not pass.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, a certain delegate has repeated on the floor 3 times today that he can't believe that anyone can be against Committee Proposal 95. Many of us here have voted against Committee Proposal 95 and against various pieces of it over and over again. Therefore, I think he should be able to believe that some of us are against it, and I say to him: believe, believe. (laughter).

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the amendment. The yeas and nays have been ordered. Those in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. President, may I understand clearly what I am voting on?

PRESIDENT NISBET: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Krolikowski and Bledsoe offer the following amendment which is now being voted upon, amend the body of Committee Proposal 95 by striking out all of section a.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Messrs. Krolikowski and Bledsoe, the yeas are 35, the nays are 85.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is not adopted.

Committee Proposal 95, as amended is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 95 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. All final decisions, findings, rulings and orders of any administrative officer or body existing under the constitution or by law, which are judicial or quasi judicial and affect private rights, privileges or licenses, shall be subject to direct review by the courts as shall be provided by law. This review shall include, as a minimum, the determination whether such final decisions, findings, rulings and orders are authorized by law, and, in cases in which a hearing is required, whether the same are supported by reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 96, A proposal pertaining to general and special provisions relative to the courts of the state. It has adopted one amendment, has considered another amendment thereto, and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on legislative powers, subcommittee 1, will meet in room H today immediately following the session. The subject: the legislative auditor. Mr. Richard Kuhn, chairman of the subcommittee.

We have the following requests for leave of absence: Mr. Arthur Elliott requests leave of absence from next Monday's session to attend a church meeting which has been scheduled for several months, and Mr. Madar wishes to be excused from the sessions of March 12, 13 and 14 due to a conference in Chicago which was arranged 1½ years ago.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they are excused.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: Mr. President, I move we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails and we are adjourned until tomorrow morning at 9:30.

[Whereupon, at 5:20 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 9:30 o'clock a.m., Wednesday, March 7, 1962.]

NINETY-FOURTH DAY

Wednesday, March 7, 1962, 9:30 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation this morning will be given by Dr. Paul F. Elliott, president of the Owosso College.

DR. ELLIOTT: Let us pray. Father God, into Thy presence we humbly bow this morning with a heart filled with praise and thanksgiving and gratitude to Thee from whom all blessings flow. We recognize that every good and every perfect gift cometh from Thee. And at this season of the year, the opening of Lent, Ash Wednesday, we say in the words of the Psalmist David, "Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me and know my thoughts."

We come to Thee this morning in prayer, knowing that Thou art interested in each one of us. We thank Thee, as we enter this season leading to Easter, that we are reminded again and again of Thy great love and Thy thoughtfulness for us in providing for us a Redeemer. And as we enter the season of Lent, may we do so with a heart of prayer asking for divine guidance.

As we confess to Thee our need, especially do we pray today for this assembly. And as Thou, O God, did guide that early constitutional convention in the formation of the constitution for this great nation, I pray that Thou would give divine wisdom and understanding to this faithful, devoted group of delegates that have assembled today. May they receive that understanding and wisdom that only comes from God. May Thy blessing and benediction be upon each of our lives today, for we ask it in the name of our Lord. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present please vote aye. Have you all recorded your presence? If so, the secretary will take the roll.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave:

Mr. Hood requests temporary leave. He is unavoidably detained; Mr. Lee Walker wishes to be excused from today's session; Mr. DeVries phoned in that at 6:22 a.m., a 7 pound 11 ounce baby boy arrived. (applause) This is the fourth boy. He reports mother and son doing fine.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Incidentally, he is not doing so well. (laughter) The baby was born at 6:22. He got there at 11:30. (laughter)

Without objection, the requests for leave are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Anspach, DeVries, Donald Doty, Hood, Murphy, Pellow, Tweedie and Walker.

Absent without leave: Mr. Norris.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, Mr. Norris is excused.

[During the proceedings, the following delegates entered the chamber and took their seats: Messrs. Donald Doty, Hood and Norris.]

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on rules and resolutions, by Mr. Van Dusen, chairman, reports back to the convention Resolution 80, A resolution requesting that religious bodies of this state offer prayers for the success of the convention; with amendments, recommending the amendments be agreed to and that the resolution as thus amended be adopted.

The following are the amendments recommended by the committee:

1. Amend the first resolving clause, line 4, by striking out the semicolon after "convention" and inserting a period.

2. Amend the first resolving clause, line 5, by striking out "and be it further".

3. Amend the second resolving clause by striking out all of the language.

Richard C. Van Dusen, chairman.

For Resolution 80 as offered, see above, page 1325.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, a few brief remarks on the amendments first. The only purpose of the amendments was to strike matter which the rules committee felt was perhaps a little bit redundant. It does not in any way change the substance of the resolution, which requests organized religious groups to seek divine guidance for the work of the constitutional convention. For a further explanation of the resolution, I would yield to Mr. Bentley who, with Vice Presidents Hutchinson, Downs and Romney, are the sponsors of the resolution.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, there have been times during the last few weeks when the actions of the constitutional convention somewhat remind me of the words of that beautiful old spiritual, Standing in the Need of Prayer.

Mr. President, I think the resolution is self obvious. I think the fact that the 3 vice presidents were kind enough to join with me in cosponsoring this resolution speaks for itself. The fact that all of us, I am sure, can appreciate the need for divine help and guidance at times indicates that this one, I am sure, would be accepted and acceptable to everybody in the convention. I do not intend to make any further remarks because I think any remarks of mine would be superfluous at this time, but I would, Mr. President, just like to read a very brief editorial regarding this particular resolution that appeared in the Detroit News on March 1, which says:

> A resolution proposed in the constitutional convention asks delegates to urge all members of organized religions in the state to "offer prayers for divine help and guidance" in their work.
> The delegates appear to be in need of help and guidance from whatever good source there might be.
> And noting that the resolution sponsors are the convention's 3 vice presidents, Edward Hutchinson, George Romney and Tom Downs, plus Delegate Alvin M. Bentley, whose idea it was, we suspect that any intervention which could help just these 4 gentlemen to reach agreement on the issues would solve most of con con's problems.

(laughter) Thank you, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendments as recommended by the committee on rules and resolutions. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendments are adopted. The question is now on the resolution as amended. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

Resolution 80, as amended, is adopted.

Following is Resolution 80 as amended and adopted:

A resolution requesting that religious bodies of this state offer prayers for the success of the convention.

Whereas, The people of the state of Michigan are greatly desirous of the success of this constitutional convention; and

Whereas, The people of our state and our nation are a deeply religious people, being accustomed to seeking divine assistance in times of trial and trouble; and

Whereas, It seems appropriate to seek such assistance and intercession from almighty God through the medium of prayer on behalf of the work of the constitutional convention; now therefore be it

Resolved, That the delegates of the constitutional convention respectfully request and urge all members of organized religious bodies within the state of Michigan to offer prayers for divine help and guidance in their work and looking toward the ultimate success of the convention.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the only standing committee report, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Report of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: Under the order of unfinished business, the president lays before the convention Resolution 72, A resolution amending rule 57 of the rules of the convention; which was reported from the committee on rules and resolutions on Monday and under the rules laid over for 2 days.

For Resolution 72 as offered, see above, page 1067.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, the purpose of this rule change is to eliminate from the rules the automatic reference of committee proposals to the committee of the whole immediately prior to their consideration on third reading.

The order of consideration of committee proposals, as the delegates all know, under rule 57 is that when they are referred from the substantive committees which propose them to the convention, they are immediately placed on the order of general orders and considered in the committee of the whole. From thence, they go to the committee on style and drafting, and they come back to the convention where they are considered by the full convention in the order of second reading. They are then rereferred to the committee on style and drafting, and thence back to the full convention. Under the rules as they presently stand, at that point they would again automatically be considered in committee of the whole before being considered by the full convention on third reading.

It is the opinion of the rules committee that because our exploration of committee proposals in committee of the whole at this stage of our proceeding has been so complete and thorough, and because it has been so lengthy, and because we have frequently found it necessary to repeat the debate immediately after the committee of the whole rises, that it would be desirable to eliminate the automatic reference to the committee of the whole prior to consideration of proposals by the convention on third reading. This would not prevent, of course, any delegate from appropriately moving the convention resolve itself into the committee of the whole with respect to any article or section of the new constitution before its consideration on third reading, but it would simply eliminate the automatic reference to the committee of the whole at that point.

The committee on rules and resolutions was substantially unanimous. I believe we had one abstention in reporting this rule change to the floor. We urge its adoption.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the resolution to change the rules. Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, I would like to make it clear that the abstention was not my abstention. I voted in accordance with the resolution. I believe that we will have approximately 3 months of debate, from the looks of things on the first reading, and if we were to consider the possibility of repeating that on the third reading, it would be an absolute catastrophe.

As Mr. Van Dusen has pointed out, we can go back into the committee of the whole when the majority of the people see fit to do so, but we don't need to go automatically. And I call your attention, delegates, to the schedule that we have had put on our desks this morning. From this you will see that this looks forward to an adjournment on April 14 but if you look at the dates between that date and today, you will see that, in my opinion, it is utterly fantastic that we can meet that deadline, because there are only 2 days between the first 2 deadlines and so on. There are very, very few days between each deadline. It seems to me impossible that we can meet this much, even, and it is not a bit unlikely that it will take another month at the least, even if the resolution before us now passes. That would bring us to May 15. May 15, I understand, is the last day that delegates will be paid.

I am not in accord with those that think that the convention can appropriate money or get money in any other way, and my feeling is that there will be a great many delegates disappearing if the money should run out. I think the delegates will run out the same time as the money runs out, and I believe at that point it will be impossible to get 73 votes for anything, even for the present constitution. This would be a real catastrophe to the people of the state, not even to have the opportunity to vote on whatever our deliberations may result in. Therefore, I think it is absolutely indispensable. I see no way out. I am not enthusiastic about it, but I think we must do it and that is the only reason I voted in accordance with the committee's report.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the resolution. Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I would like to ask a question of Mr. Van Dusen through the Chair. I understood that the rules that were adopted were based upon the experience of previous constitutional conventions. Was this particular item which we are being asked to delete now a procedure that was used effectively in other constitutional conventions? Or could you just give me some basis as to why this was originally used as part of our rules.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I don't know the answer to your precise question, Mr. Faxon. However, the experience of the 1907-1908 constitutional convention in the order in which it proceeded is somewhat different than the manner in which we have been proceeding. That convention went almost directly from first consideration in committee of the whole to second reading on proposals. We are, as you know, proceeding completely through committee of the whole before we get to second reading. That, I think, is an important substantive difference and justifies the difference which we propose in our rules.

MR. FAXON: Excuse me. I just want to ask one more question. I thought that perhaps this might have been the practice in the constitutional conventions that were more recently held in the new states of Alaska, Hawaii, or perhaps in Missouri or New Jersey, that this type of procedure had been proven to some extent. Do you have any reference to that?

MR. VAN DUSEN: I would suggest, Mr. President and Mr. Faxon, that our rules are based very largely on the rules which applied in the 1907-1908 constitutional convention in the state of Michigan. We worked, in the committee on permanent organization and rules, from a draft prepared by Professor Pierce, of the University of Michigan, and he worked initially with the 1907-1908 rules and with the rules of the Michigan house of representatives.

MR. FAXON: Well, Mr. President, I just want to make one statement then. I have looked upon this area, the third reading, as the most vital portion of our proceedings when it comes to finally understanding what our work is, and at this point, when we have taken all this time, it would indeed be unfortunate if we were to attempt to expedite business to the detriment of our understanding exactly what it is that is being done. So I, for one, would prefer to see the present rule stay, in the hopes that the delegates would exercise sufficient restraint and only question those areas where there is need to question, but at the same time we are capable of preserving the rules that we have been working under all this time. Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I want to add to what Delegate Faxon said and speak against the resolution. A moment ago here we adopted a resolution that called upon all of the religious denominations to pray for the success of the convention, and I am wholeheartedly in favor of that. We could have added to that also that we ask them to pray for the delegates that they can lay aside their selfish, narrow interests and remove politics from this convention and get on with the task of writing the constitution. Committee of the whole on third reading is one of the most important parts of the rules. I do not want to have this convention go on any longer than any of the rest of you, but the only place where there is any lengthy debate is where there are very serious basic disagreements.

There have been many proposals on the floor of this convention which we have gone through rapidly. On legislative powers, one day here we went through 7, 8, 9 or 10 proposals in about 6 or 7 minutes. I don't want to see a situation develop where, when we come to third reading and there are 1, 2, 3 or 4 major issues where there is sincere and honest and basic disagreement among the delegates, we have the situation where we have happen what happened here yesterday, where we spent all morning, practically, debating on some minor amendment that was offered by the majority; then have someone get up and move the previous question without even giving the sponsors of the minority report an opportunity to be heard. I do not believe this is in good taste, and it has been used of recent date on several occasions. On one occasion it was used where the delegate had not been recognized by the Chair, where there were other people ahead of him seeking recognition, and he jumped up out of nowhere and moved the previous question. And I asked a question on a parliamentary inquiry on another occasion, "How do you get the floor in this convention? Do you walk up to the microphone as a gentleman, address yourself to the Chair in an orderly fashion and request recognition? Or do you do, as has happened on 1 or 2 occasions, jump up out of nowhere, or jump up on my desk and scream for recognition or 'I move the previous question'"? I don't think we do it in accordance with the last procedure.

I want to forewarn the delegates I do not wish to accuse the sponsors of this resolution of attempting to apply a gag rule. I can see their concern for wanting to conclude the convention as rapidly and as speedily as possible. But also I want to bring to your attention the 1 or 1½ weeks of haste and waste we had in writing our committee reports; that we would have been much better off there had we spent less time on public hearings and listening to political scientists tell us what was in the text books, and spent a little more of that time on our deliberations in writing the committee proposals. Had we done that, I do not believe it would have been necessary to have had some of the long and lengthy debate that we have had here on the floor of the convention, because there have been proposals that have come before this convention that the committee itself didn't even understand and couldn't explain after we had written it in the committee. That was solely because we did it, in some of these committees, in 5 days, 6 days or 7 days, and in some cases even 2 or 3.

I don't believe that I have abused my privilege in the committee of the whole. I do not intend to abuse that privilege. But I object to being put into a situation where, after we complete second reading and we are then prepared to proceed to third reading—and you would narrow these differences and disagreements down after you go through the committee of the whole on second reading. You won't have as many on third reading. But there might be 1, 2 or 3 major basic disagreements. And I feel that if there are, in the interests of a sound document, in the interests of whether or not it is going to be accepted by the people of this State, we should not adopt this resolution and make it permissible to apply a gag rule on third reading. At this time, Mr. President, I would like to move that we table the resolution.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question on the motion of Mr. Marshall that this resolution be tabled is not debatable. Those in favor say aye. Those opposed, no.

The motion does not prevail. The Chair recognizes Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. President, members of the convention, I have just 3 comments to make on this as a member of the committee who voted in favor of this resolution. First of all, to Mr. Marshall's comments, I would like to say that all good things must come to an end, including unlimited debate. The second thing I would like to say is that on third reading, if something comes up which is unusual and does require extended informal discussion, we can at any time by special motion resolve into committee of the whole for the consideration of that item. Finally, I would like to say that when I voted in favor of this resolution, I did so in the firm conviction that every delegate at this convention was here to stay here until the job was done, whether his pay kept going or not.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. President, could I ask through the Chair a question of the chairman of the rules committee?

PRESIDENT NISBET: If he cares to answer.

MR. DOWNS: In case the convention wishes to consider dividing the document that is presented to the people—and I do not believe we can do that until we have at least gone through second reading—I wondered if the chairman of the rules committee would apprise me at what time he thinks that can best be handled, and whether it would best be handled in committee of the whole or the full convention.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President and Mr. Downs, I think Mr. Downs' question seeks an answer which it is perhaps too early to give. I would think that when a motion was presented or a resolution was presented asking the convention to consider the method of submission of the document, that at that point, with the motion or resolution before the convention, the convention would have to make a decision as to whether it should resolve itself into a committee of the whole for the purpose of considering that resolution or not. I think it is just too early to give any answer to your question, Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Could I just ask, related to that, Mr. President—and I know we are looking ahead; in a sense it is a hypothetical question—would you consider that would be in order during third reading or not until after third reading?

MR. VAN DUSEN: I would think, Mr. Downs, that at any point that a resolution was submitted, it would be in order in the ordinary course of our business. As a matter of sound handling of such a resolution, I would think that either after the completion of second reading or after the completion of third reading might be an appropriate time, because only then will we have the entire document before us, and only then could we make an intelligent appraisal of what parts might conceivably be divided.

MR. DOWNS: Thank you. Mr. President, for whatever it is worth, I agree that probably the time to do that, if the convention so desired, would be after second reading and very likely during third reading as these matters came up. For that reason, I think there would be an advantage of keeping that in the committee of the whole if we so desired, understanding that if there was no wish to present the document in separate packages, we could then dispense with committee of the whole and proceed handling the document as a unit. For those reasons, I would urge that we continue the rule with the committee of the whole, with the understanding that that could be dispensed with if the convention so desired at a future date.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Young.

MR. YOUNG: Mr. President, I believe that it is entirely premature for us to attempt at this date to forecast and to project, based on speculation, when this convention will adjourn and what time it will take us to debate matters which have not even come before us to be questioned. Certainly many parts of the constitution which we are now deliberating on and our consideration of those parts will be determined or even changed after we get a look at the shape of the final document. I think that we are dodging the issue here. What we have to make up our minds about is, do we intend to take the necessary time to write a proper document, or shall we be plagued by deadlines?

Now, I am not worried as to whether or not the constitutional convention will be granted sufficient time, as Dr. Nord said, to complete the document. I think that the voters of Michigan have waited 50 years for a new constitution. And if it is necessary, I feel the legislature, as a body responsible to those people, will allocate the necessary time in order to complete the document. But we here should determine to take the time to write the document and not attempt to tie our hands in advance on the basis of some speculation. Certainly if we are to make any determination at all on whether or not we shall go on to third reading, that determination should best be made as we approach third reading.

And in line with the remarks that Delegate Downs made, I would like to here move that we lay on the table any consideration of this resolution until after the completion of second reading, when we will be in a better position to determine what our needs are timewise in regard to third reading.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on Mr. Young's motion to postpone action on this until following second reading. Those in favor of the motion will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion does not prevail.

DELEGATES: Division.

PRESIDENT NISBET: A division is requested. Is there support for a division? A sufficient number up. So there will be no misunderstanding, the vote is on the question of Mr. Young's motion that consideration of this resolution be postponed until after second reading. Those in favor of Mr. Young's motion will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no.

MR. GOVER: Mr. President, I do not want to vote. I want to abstain from voting.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion to postpone consideration, the yeas are 49; the nays are 82.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The motion does not prevail. The Chair recognizes Mr. Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. President and delegates, I do not believe that I have abused my privilege either, as Mr. Marshall points out for himself. Using his words, I have not been "spenorious." I think that we have had ample time for advance study on basic constitutional material. We have had 6 months now. We have had committee proposals for a number of weeks. Everybody by now should have read thoroughly the committee proposals if they are doing their job. They should have studied them. They should have analyzed them, and they should have made up their minds by now if they felt the committee proposals were right or wrong.

There has been a great amount of repetition in debate. I think I have probably been in the observer class rather than the debating class of this convention. It has been very interesting to me to hear the different points brought to the floor, but I could see a great number of points being repeated that were absolutely unnecessary. Some people, I think, just like to hear themselves talk. If proper time is spent on the committee proposals, I am sure that all of this can be eliminated, and when I say "proper time," I mean proper time of study. And as soon as you hear your point raised on the floor, that should mean to you it is not necessary to bring it up again.

Mr. Marshall mentioned that he didn't feel that proper time was given in the committees to develop the committee proposals. I happen to be on one of the committees he is on, and I feel that we gave ample time. In fact, our committee proposal hasn't been debated on the convention floor yet, so we have had 6 months to work on our committee proposal. I don't know how much more time you need. I have also noticed that there are cliques, call them, of delegates in both parties, and they keep driving through amendment after amendment with the same meaning but just different words. This is absolutely unnecessary. They can see the first or second time that their idea isn't going to go through in the convention regardless of party or minority or majority group. This is a thing that we should observe and try not to do.

I believe that the proposed rule change can help us to proceed in a responsible orderly fashion. Therefore, I would support this change.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Allen.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. President, I think that the convention faces a situation which is more serious, in terms of the time deadline which May 15 forces on us, than we appreciate, and it is for this reason that the rules committee, of which I am a member, is bringing in this rule change at this time. Now, it isn't any desire to make the convention end sooner than May 15, though I think if this could be reasonably done, we would all be for it. It is simply that realistically looking at the situation and the calendar, we are put in a position where I don't think and the rules committee doesn't think that we can finish and go through a committee of the whole on the third reading.

Now, let's look at it in a little more detail. I expect that it will take the balance of this week to finish the judicial article, if we even finish it the balance of this week, and that will be almost 3 weeks that we have been on this article. We will then go to the problems of the executive committee. And I would say if the judiciary is any example, the problems we have on the executive committee will force us to run probably a week and a half on the executive committee proposals, and perhaps 2 weeks. That leaves us apportionment. I am sure apportionment will take about one week. It may take a week and a half. And by that time, you see, we are past April 1. Well, we still have ahead of us after April 1 then the problems of eminent domain. We still have a couple of sections, which I know are going to cause extended discussion, on civil rights. We have the problem of internal improvements, and we have all of the other sections of miscellaneous provisions. So, as a practical matter, what it means is that we will have about 3 weeks or 3½ weeks left at the best estimate we can make — unless we hurry up in committee of the whole on first reading — to go through all of our second reading and all of our third reading.

I don't see how it is possible in 3 weeks—or even if we say it is 4 weeks—to go through some 230 sections twice. And I am sure that after style and drafting reports, we are going to have on second reading some serious, well thought out amendments proposed. I think they would be proposed even if style and drafting made no style and drafting changes, but I expect that when they do make some changes, some additional questions will be raised. In other words, what we are faced with here is a very practical problem. How can we, in about 3, or at best, 4 weeks go through some 230 sections twice and do it without such haste that there isn't a lot of feeling that we have acted too quickly and some hard feelings left in the convention?

Now, I think — and the rules committee feels — that in view of this calendar situation, this time situation which is a fact that we had better recognize, it is better to make the decision now to abolish committee of the whole on third reading rather than to wait until we get right up to it, because we can do it with a little less emotion now than we can do it if we wait until the end of second reading, because whoever loses out at the end of second reading on his or her strongly favored proposals is going to feel if the rule is then imposed that it is more of a detraction to them than it would be if we do it today. In other words, I think we could do it a little more calmly and coolly today. And I think the calendar, just by necessity, dictates that we do it.

Now, it isn't any desire on the part of the rules committee to be arbitrary by any means. It is just simply the fact that we have gone a lot longer on our first reading in our committee of the whole than we ever anticipated. Therefore, I think in order to bring this convention to some orderly conclusion by the date that we have to meet, May 15, that this is something that we are going to have to do even though we may not want to do it, and therefore I hope that this recommendation of the rules committee will be agreed to.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: Mr. President, I would just like to get the answer to a parliamentary question which I asked before. I would like to know, before you can make any motion, must you get recognized from the Chair in your turn?

PRESIDENT NISBET: I don't quite understand the question, Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: Well, the question is: if it is my time, if I have the floor, can someone stand up and make a preferential motion and be recognized?

PRESIDENT NISBET: You can't be interrupted, Mr. Chase tells me, after you have been recognized, Mr. Barthwell, except for a point of information or a point of order.

MR. BARTHWELL: Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. President, in our debate this morning, I noticed that some people got rather loose with their verbiage (laughter) and I just thought that I ought to put some of them straight a little bit. To begin with, I, for one, will guarantee you that come May 15, if we are still here and there is no money to pay me on May 16, I won't be here. (laughter) I don't happen to be an attorney who lives in Lansing. I live in Detroit. I have to maintain a second home here. I am here at a cost to myself because with what I make in Detroit and for what I get here, believe me, I am losing money. If anybody can show me how they can do it any better than I am doing it, paying $60 a month for a room, which is mighty cheap, I would sure like to know how they do it.

Now, about getting up on the floor, if you haven't got anything to say, you just keep sitting there, unless you are afraid your head might rattle when you get up. (laughter)

I am not going to say that Mr. Elliott, our chairman, didn't give us time to consider things. He did—I was more fortunate than Mr. Marshall was—but I will say one thing, there was a lot of time wasted. It wasn't wasted here on the floor so much as it was in some of those committee meetings, because we didn't have to have some of those people down there talking to us for hours on end, because I don't think there is a man or a woman here who didn't know as much about politics and government as some of those who came in to talk to us. Now, you can have your own feelings about that and your own thought about that, but that is the way I feel about it.

And I just hope, too, to get some other things straightened out around here. Rule 22 says that we shall not mention names here or talk about anybody, say anything derogatory. Now I wonder, Mr. President, if it couldn't be possible for you or someone else to tell those who are sitting in their chairs at the time someone is up here speaking to keep their snotty remarks to themselves. We don't want to hear them.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I rise in opposition to the proposed resolution basically because under the rules that we have today, we automatically go into committee of the whole. Now, in the past in committee of the whole where we have been in agreement on items, we have gone through these things even faster than we should have in view of the fact that we were in agreement on them. The new rule as proposed would permit us to go into committee of the whole on majority vote of the delegates assembled. Now, this so far is all right.

But we have something in between here that is beginning to bother me, and with all due deference to Mr. Cudlip and all of his eager workers on his committee, we have the committee on style and drafting. Now, what is happening as I see it, is we have items that are being debated on the floor to the point of punctuation. We are sending these items to style and drafting, putting in our commas, semicolons and so forth and leaving few items up to them. This committee, as I see it, is making changes, bigger changes than a lot of us anticipated.

Now, on second reading, when they come back from style and drafting, we will not have a committee of the whole. And in fact, as I understand it, we couldn't have if we wanted one then. On third reading, as it stands now, we will automatically go into committee of the whole. If there is any disagreement about changes made in style and drafting, everyone will have an opportunity automatically to debate these items or these changes.

As it stands under the proposed change, we would need a majority vote of the people on the floor to go into committee of the whole obviously in anticipation of debating something that is coming back to us on third reading. Now, if you have a majority vote to go into committee of the whole, you are going to decide it by possibly the same majority. If you don't have a majority vote to go into the committee of the whole, you are not even going to voice your objections or have an opportunity to voice your objections. Basically, for this reason I would be opposed to this resolution.

At the same time I have a feeling that this resolution is geared toward setting a deadline on the convention here at May 15. Now, whether or not I will be here on May 16, with or without money, was decided by me a long time ago. I said from the outset that I didn't think that this convention could get its work done in 7½ months, and I didn't think that we would get paid after 7½ months. Knowing this, I volunteered to run for this position and came up here anyway with or without money after May 15.

I would like to take issue with my good friend Glenn Allen when he mentions that we have problems with eminent domain. Frankly, I don't see any problems there at all. (laughter) We have allocated 30 minutes on the schedule for this whole item. (laughter) Don Lawrence says it is 25 minutes too long, so we have saved almost a half hour there. For these reasons I would be opposed to the resolution.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Snyder.

MR. SNYDER: Thank you, Mr. President. For the past several weeks I have been sitting back and listening to other orators present their points of view because I felt that if I waited long enough, my point of view would be expressed. However, in view of the fact that there may be a limitation on third reading, I will feel compelled, if the change does go through, to get up and speak my piece while I still have the opportunity. And I would like to ask a question of the chairman of the committee if I may, Mr. President, in regard to some of the conduct I must observe if the motion is passed. I would like to ask, question 1, under our present rules, is it mandatory that we go into the third reading?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Yes.

MR. SNYDER: My second question is, then, if the convention does take action to eliminate this section, will we have, as delegates, still the matter of right to go in upon request or, having waived this question, will it be necessary for us to garner a majority of the delegates to support our request to go into committee of the whole?

MR. VAN DUSEN: It would require a majority vote.

MR. SNYDER: In other words, by an affirmative action upon this vote, we will be relinquishing the automatic right that we have in committee of the whole, and it will be necessary for us to garner a majority vote of the delegates. In so doing, I feel that we would be giving up one of the basic rights. I feel that here we have a question of personal discipline, that we ought to confine our remarks to what is relevant and germane to the subject matter on the floor.

I think it would be catastrophic, ladies and gentlemen of this convention, if we would give away one of the basic and fundamental rights that we have at this convention when we should be setting an example for the state of Michigan. It is our duty and obligation here to protect the basic right of the presentation of thoughts, and an affirmative action upon the proposition that we have would be taking away from the rights that we already have.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the resolution. Mr. Gover.

MR. GOVER: Mr. President, I want to abstain from voting.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Would you read it over again.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The resolution will be read by Mr. Chase.

SECRETARY CHASE: Resolution 72:

[The resolution was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 1067.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President, I wish to abstain from voting, and I will explain my reasons in writing for the record. Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Point of information, Mr. President. I notice that the resolution starts by saying that we are amending the rule, and then winds up by saying that we are striking. Is this the same as suspending?

PRESIDENT NISBET: This is striking from the rule, Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Would this be something more drastic than suspending a section of the rule, or equal?

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair would think it would be. This is striking from the rule completely.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, then could I have an interpretation of the rules as to striking?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, I would like to refer Mr. Mahinske to rule 68, which says, "The rules of the convention—"

MR. MAHINSKE: This is the one I have reference to.

MR. BENTLEY: "—may be amended by a majority vote."

MR. MAHINSKE: Right. But then it winds up by saying they may be suspended by a 2/3 vote. This is what I would like to find out, if we are in reality suspending here rather than amending.

PRESIDENT NISBET: It is the Chair's understanding that we are striking sections 9 and 10 from the rules, which is an amendment to the rules, not suspending.

MR. MAHINSKE: I thought the answer was yes to my question about suspension and striking, whether they were equivalent or one was of a higher level than the other.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase will make a statement.

SECRETARY CHASE: As the secretary understands the situation, Mr. Mahinske, the elimination of these 2 items from the rule will cause the rule to be permanent in regard to this particular matter. A suspension of the rule by a 2/3 vote of the delegates that are voting on the immediate question will suspend the operation of the rule for the consideration of that particular item at that particular time only.

MR. MAHINSKE: So then a simple majority vote is required at this time rather than a 2/3 vote.

PRESIDENT NISBET: That is right. Those in favor of the resolution—Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. President and fellow delegates, there has seemed to be in the debate some implication to the effect that on third reading people would not have an opportunity to participate in the debate or to take the matter up fully. It is my understanding that on third reading we will be permitted to debate the matter clearly and fully, but of course a person is limited in the number of times he can speak—I think it is once for a delegate who is not chairman of the committee who is reporting it out—except by unanimous consent. But I think if a person has his wits about him, he can make his statement, and everybody can express themselves and we can come to a sensible conclusion without the unlimited debate that we have been participating in in committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: Mr. President, I don't think that Delegate Powell is relating a true fact, because a motion for the previous question prevails with a majority vote. So—let's face it—I don't have the same right and the same opportunity to carry a motion that the majority of the delegates have here. If we suspend this rule—let's face it—only the delegates of the majority party can prevail to go into the committee of the whole. Only they can prevail to move for the previous question. So it isn't a matter that each delegate will get the same right to speak, because I have been standing here in the convention in one instance as the next speaker, and then someone gets up and shouts that he moves the previous question, and it was put. This is why I asked my question before, you see. There are some realities about this thing. Now we should face it fairly and squarely. If we alter the rules of this convention, then we are not giving the minority delegates the same opportunities.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Radka.

MR. RADKA: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I think the most timely argument for voting for the proposed change is, just look at what has been happening this morning during the past hour.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Richards.

MR. L. W. RICHARDS: Mr. President, I would like to make a comment along the lines that my good friend Delegate Barthwell made when he referred to the majority party.

Sid, I would have to disagree a little bit along that line because, coming from the U.P., a lot of our majority party people don't see the problems that exist in the U.P. anymore than some of your fellow delegates do. I cannot have the assurance that my party that I am representing would feel the same as I would on some of the issues there.

I am a little disturbed. I feel on third reading—like a lot of other delegates, I haven't taken the time—I realize a lot of the subjects have been covered very thoroughly in discussion. I couldn't add or detract from some of them too much. Therefore, I might be definitely interested in a third reading, as much as you would or any of the minority party.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the resolution. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Has everybody voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the resolution, the yeas are 91; the nays are 37.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Resolution 72 is adopted.

For Resolution 72 as adopted, see above, page 1067; for rule 57 as amended, see above, page 135.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the only item under unfinished business, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders. Mr. Van Dusen. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. President, I have what I think is a preferential motion to Mr. Van Dusen's motion.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Make it.

MR. FORD: I move that we reconsider the vote on amendment 3 to Committee Proposal 94 adopted by this convention yesterday, the vote by which it was adopted.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on Mr. Ford's motion to reconsider the vote. Will you state that again, Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I think it can be found at the bottom right-hand corner of page 712 of yesterday's journal. I hope I have the right section there. That, as I understand it, was the vote on the minority report amendment to Committee Proposal 94.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase, can you locate that?

SECRETARY CHASE: This was amendment 3 to Committee Proposal 94, which amendment read:

3. Amend page 1, line 14, after "dependents" by striking out the comma and "except as otherwise provided by law".

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Ford to reconsider the vote on this amendment. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. President, briefly, I would just like to call the attention of the delegates to the fact that with 135 delegates present, this vote was only 9 votes apart. In other words, it carried by 9 votes, a bare 72 carrying it, not the majority of the delegates elect. In view of the fact that we had already voted in favor of the minority report amendment in committee of the whole after 7 hours debate and yesterday morning when we came in here with a number of delegates who had not participated in committee of the whole we proceeded in a manner that some of us considered quite summary to take this vote, I would like to have this matter brought back before the convention by this motion to reconsider.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Ford to reconsider the vote. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. President, members of the convention, we had considerable debate in committee of the whole. We had additional debate upon the floor of this convention. We had excellent statements made both pro and con, and in particular I recall the statement which would be in favor of the original recommendation of the judicial committee made to you by Mrs. Judd. Without going into all the ramifications, I think we have debated this matter thoroughly. I think if there is a change of mind, this can be done upon the second reading by failure to concur. I think we would be wasting the time of this convention and the committee of the whole to reconsider this matter at all. I would urge that you vote against the motion for reconsideration, and we proceed with the deliberations of the remaining portion of the article.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Point of order, Mr. President. Did not this go to style and drafting yesterday? Is it in order then to reconsider?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Elliott, it was referred to style and drafting, but a motion to reconsider the next day is in order. Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, as I understand it, Mr. Danhof feels that we are going to go back into debate on this, Mr. Danhof, through the Chair?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Danhof, would you care to answer?

MR. DANHOF: Do you mean go back into debate today?

MR. MAHINSKE: Yes.

MR. DANHOF: Well, I would imagine if we vote to reconsider, then the amendment again comes back before the convention, if I am not mistaken, upon concurring in the recommendations of the committee of the whole. Would that be correct, Mr. Chase?

SECRETARY CHASE: That is correct.

MR. MAHINSKE: Would this be debatable, Mr. Chase?

MR. DANHOF: In which case we would go back, and everybody would have a chance to at least speak once upon concurring or not concurring in the recommendation of the committee of the whole, and we would proceed to, I would imagine, go back over a lot of ground that we plowed before. We would not go back into committee of the whole and discuss this, but we would be back to the convention concurring or not concurring in the recommendations of the committee of the whole, upon which we voted yesterday. At least that would be my understanding of the rules. Consequently, everybody would be entitled to get up and speak at least once, and probably go back into asking questions and things like that, all of which we have covered before.

I think we had a good discussion. And so far as the vote was concerned, 135—or whatever it was—out of 144 isn't a bad average if you consider all the illness. Therefore, I would think that we would just not be spending good time in this particular session, and therefore I would oppose the motion.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, I will stand corrected if I am wrong on this but, as I understand it, there were a number of people around here yesterday who felt that it was quite regrettable that the previous question had been moved on this committee proposal before the proponents of the minority report had had any opportunity to speak on this. And also in view of the fact that we have had a ruling from the Chair that this motion would not be in order on second reading, I would concur in the motion to reconsider here.

The only other available step on this proposition on second reading, as I can see it, is a move to strike the entire section a of Committee Proposal 94. This has been done already so this, by the same ruling, would be out of order on second reading. So I feel that now and only now is the time that we can move in this direction and give the people who have gone to the trouble of drafting up a minority report at least their day in court here. And for these reasons I would support the motion for reconsideration.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I think this matter, Mr. President, was fully debated in committee of the whole and thoroughly considered. I think it is obvious that the mover for reconsideration has no new arguments. He merely wishes to see if perhaps a few people may have changed their minds, and for that reason, I move the previous question.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The previous question has been called for. Is the demand seconded? Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. President, I have just been informed by people who are vitally interested in this that there are several people off of the floor on convention business who are vitally interested in this matter. I, for that reason, would like to withdraw the motion to reconsider at this time and reoffer it this afternoon when they can be present.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The motion has been withdrawn. General orders. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I move the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering matters on the calendar of general orders.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no. The motion prevails.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The committee of the whole will be in order. Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, could I have the pleasure of introducing a distinguished visitor from abroad who is here as the guest of the state department, Brigadier General of Police Memet, who is the director of the office of personnel affairs for the Republic of Indonesia. General Memet. (standing ovation)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: General Memet, we are pleased to have you with us, and despite the fact that Professor Pollock's introduction violated the rules of the convention, we are particularly pleased to welcome you this morning. (laughter)

The matter before the committee is Committee Proposal 96, A proposal pertaining to general and special provisions relative to the courts of the state. When the committee last met, we had considered the first sentence of section a and had adopted one amendment thereto. The pending business is an amendment to the second sentence of section a offered by Delegates Radka, Pugsley and Rajkovich.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 96, see above, page 1478.

The secretary will read the pending amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The pending amendment is:

1. Amend page 1, line 10, after "courts" by inserting "of record"; so the language will then read:

> Except as authorized otherwise by this constitution, justices and judges of the courts of record of this state shall be lawyers licensed to practice law in this state, and shall not be elected or appointed to a judicial office after reaching the age of 70 years.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will advise the committee that his notes as to those delegates who might have been seeking recognition on this question last night have been cleared away by an effective housecleaner, and that therefore anyone seeking recognition on the question should do so this morning. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, at the time that we arose last night from the committee of the whole, we heard from the proponents of the amendment and also from Mr. Everett, who gave the report of the majority of the committee. I should like at this time, if he has any further remarks, to yield to the delegate from Battle Creek, Mr. Everett.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett, do you have further remarks?

MR. EVERETT: No.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett has no further remarks at this time, Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: In that case, we yield for questions or to any other persons who wish to speak.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question, Mr. Danhof and members of the committee, is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Radka and others, which the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment is:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss Donnelly, do you desire to be recognized on the amendment?

MISS DONNELLY: I believe at this time we might slow down a minute and consider when we insert these words "of record" where they have been offered, we are also going to have this "of record" affect the next line, the line referring to the 70 years of age. This proposition of 70 years of age is not new. It is new below the circuit court. However, to my mind and to most of the committee, the idea that after 70 years they should be retired seemed to be most important for the lower levels. If it is reasonable for the circuit court and upward, it is reasonable that there must be a time when the individual holding the position of a member of the bench should retire. Many are very effectual past that time, of course, but sometimes it is wise to cut off and allow other people to take the burden of presiding.

Another problem, I think, that is presented here is that of municipal courts, which are not courts of record. However, almost all of the charters, I think, require that an individual who will sit on the bench of a municipal court be admitted to practice in the state of Michigan. The individuals who voted this requirement in their charters seemed to feel that this level of justice and administration thereof was vital to them.

To insert this leniency, this deletion of the requirement of the membership in the bar to sit on the bench will affect them in many ways. It might endanger their feelings and make the validity of this requirement questionable.

Before we go forward and decide that we do not want attorneys administering justice from the bench, that we want laymen to do this job, I think we should anticipate the problems that come before these lower courts. Because an individual has perhaps some small monetary consideration does not mean that individual whose case is being tried doesn't feel that this is probably the most important case he has ever had. To suggest that they have a second class justice, I think, violates our basic principle. To have cheap justice, in effect, because of the amount of money involved is in many ways worse than justice delayed or justice denied, but to have an individual not have a proper presentment of his case, a proper decision on his case, renders him in the position of having to spend more money for appeal or to give up because he can't afford it.

The problem seems to be that outcounty and small areas feel that they can't afford to support a court with a lawyer. To me, this is a weak argument, because I believe that by having a lawyer administer justice from the bench, they will have a better court. We cannot delegate to the individuals in lesser populated areas a lesser degree of justice and administration, in fairness. So I think that we should go most slowly in inserting this provision in this instance in this section. It imputes many things that do not bring forth the best for all citizens in this state. Therefore, I naturally rise to oppose the amendment and ask that everybody really consider this insertion most seriously at this time.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, without any attempt to insult my fellow members of the bar, I don't believe that anyone is going to argue that with a law degree or admission to the bar a person is instilled with any more compassion, human understanding or understanding of the problems of people than he had before. Now, in the part of the state that I come from, southwestern Wayne county, we have not very many nonlawyer judges left, because this is a problem that tends to solve itself.

Mr. Everett states that as a lawyer, he feels that, as a matter of principle, no one should sit as a judge unless he is a lawyer. I agree with Mr. Everett when he says no one should sit as a judge unless he is a lawyer if he means that, where possible, this should be one of the considerations in what makes a good judge. I don't think that this consideration alone wipes out all other considerations when you get down to the local level and realize the real concept of what a local judge is, whether you call him a justice of the peace or a municipal judge or whatever name he might have after this constitution is amended and the legislature acts. He is still a part of the local picture and he deals with problems of little people, and little people may be wealthy or they may be poor, but they are little people in the sense that they go direct to this court for their justice.

I think that as a matter of principle I would like to see every coroner in this state be a doctor, but we don't require that every coroner be a doctor. Many of them are not. And there is good reason why we don't. We just don't have enough of them to go around.

Now, down in Wayne county over the last 10 years, I have observed that never, when a qualified lawyer has run against a nonlawyer for a judicial post, has he failed to make the office. One by one the nonlawyer judges have gone by the wayside because the people have expressed a preference for an otherwise qualified man who has, in addition to his general qualifications, the qualification of being a member of the bar. The local bar association to which I belong and other members of this convention in the down river area, took a position in September of 1961, before this convention convened, that indicated that the 160 lawyers we were representing felt satisfied with the local court system that we had in some 15 communities with 160 lawyers represented, and a resolution adopted by something in the neighborhood of 86 lawyers present, unanimously, to continue the system we have down there, including the right to continue the existing nonlawyer judges in office. Now, as far as our part of the state is concerned, it is only a question of time until we have no nonlawyer judges for the reasons I have already stated.

But in talking to people from outstate, it is apparent that there are many parts of this state that are a long way from having an adequate supply. And Mr. Habermehl, who isn't here on the floor at the moment, when he appeared — pardon me, Mr. Habermehl; I was looking at the wrong row — made what I thought was a very telling argument in front of the judicial committee when he pointed out that in his part of the state and others of similar circumstances, what this kind of a provision might be tantamount to is saying that lawyers who do not actually practice law — they may be actually real estate men or insurance men who have the right to practice law but haven't done so for many years — or lawyers who might not otherwise meet the other standards that their peers in the community would place upon them for public office would have an advantage that might lead to putting people on the bench that the people would rather not have there, but you might be creating a situation where you say that since there is such a shortage, any fellow who wants to move in and throw his name in the hat automatically gets the job.

Now, this has happened with respect to prosecutor's jobs around the state. The people haven't had any choice of selection. Nobody is arguing that prosecutors shouldn't be attorneys. This would be an impossibility. But I think here is an example of what can happen when you have a job that requires an attorney and you have a shortage of attorneys. Although there are 9,000 attorneys in Michigan, almost 5,000 of them are down in Wayne county.

Now, Miss Donnelly indicated that this is not a problem for the municipal courts. It may not be a problem in her municipal court, but there is one delegate here who comes from a city that has a municipal judge who very recently was returned by the people of that city to the bench by about a 4 to 1 margin, and he is not a lawyer. And I have never heard a lawyer of my acquaintance — and I have practiced quite actively in that area — complaining that that court is not a good court because the judge doesn't happen to be a lawyer.

There isn't any one of us who doesn't believe that the epitome of success would be if we had a well rounded supply of people with proper legal training available who were willing and able by other reasons to serve in these capacities to fill them. I don't think this is the case in the state of Michigan, and I think that here is a place where we can supply a little flexibility again. I think we ought to reel out the flag and say this morning we trust the legislature. I think that if we back up here a little bit and realize what we are doing, we are, for the first time in this state — and insofar as I know, we might be unique in this — saying in the constitution that judges must be lawyers. Now, it has only been a matter of some 10 or 15 years at the most since we have required circuit judges to be lawyers. I don't believe it is 10 years. We do this by statute, and we have been handling this problem for some time. I don't know why we should go beyond the courts of record in a constitutional provision and why we can't leave it to the legislature to provide the standards for holding this office below the courts of record.

When you are talking about the courts of record, there is a vast difference. It is my understanding that there are someplace in the neighborhood of 1,200 or 1,300 of these local courts throughout the state actually functioning at the present time, when you lump together the justices of the peace and the municipal courts. However, when you start counting the courts of record you find that you have a much smaller number, because we have only 42 or 43 judicial circuits at the circuit level and 1 probate judge for all of the counties except the 2 large ones. I think that this could conceivably, by constitution, create a very difficult problem for the outstate people, and this, in turn, is going to have a very direct effect on the rest of us who travel outstate and who depend on the outstate having a competent and a reliable judiciary as a part of our state judicial system.

If we leave it to the legislature, and the legislature should elect to require that all judges at all levels must be lawyers and then they discover that there are parts of the state that are deprived of a truly efficient or effective judicial system as the result of this, they can at the next session of the legislature change this or modify it. But if we freeze into the constitution a requirement at the local level, it is there for all time and there is very little that, as a practical matter, can be done about it. For that reason I urge you to support Mr. Radka's amendment, not because Mr. Radka's amendment says that for all time courts will be staffed by nonlawyers, but because Mr. Radka's amendment would make it possible for us to pass a constitution without for all time saying something that may be premature at this time and place in the development of the state of Michigan.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, I should like to direct a question to someone who has some knowledge on this question. This morning I received on my desk a copy of a list of cities with municipal judges called "special statutory courts" of which there are some 74. I would like to ask, are these courts courts of record?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: To my knowledge, Mr. Yeager, they are not.

MR. YEAGER: In other words, if we adopt this amendment, then any of these courts in any of the cities listed here could be nonlawyers under this provision unless otherwise provided for by the legislature?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: My answer, Mr. Yeager, would be either by the legislature or by the charter of the city. In other words, under the present constitution, the municipal court act leaves it basically to the city charter to provide whether they should be attorneys or nonattorneys. In Mr. Sleder's case in Traverse City, you recall, it said "attorney."

I would imagine that if the legislature should feel, in its wisdom, that in cities over a particular size there would be enough lawyers to make it mandatory that all municipal courts created in cities over 50,000 people, we will say, should be lawyers, they could do so. Basically, it is left to the city charter under the present constitution, and I do not think any of them are courts of record. Now, it is possible that in the future some of these courts might become courts of record if the legislature should so designate, as we have provided in the first sentence of section a.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Yeager, not being a lawyer, would you yield further to Mr. Everett for a response?

MR. YEAGER: Yes, certainly.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Yeager, I am not certain that Mr. Danhof is correct. I am not saying he is incorrect, because I honestly don't know. But if this language is inserted in the constitution, I am inclined to think that the courts would then have to say that the legislature could not set any standards which were not fixed by the constitution. They could get around this by creating some of these courts as courts of record, but I am inclined to think that they could not set qualifications for the judiciary which the constitution did not set. This has always been the law. And when the legislature endeavored to set qualifications for circuit court, the supreme court struck it down, saying "You may not go beyond the constitution."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Well, further, I just wanted to ask Mr. Danhof one more question. Is this question of judges being lawyers or nonlawyers properly a subject of charters, as a general thing?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I had been interrupted, Mr. Yeager. Would you repeat, please?

MR. YEAGER: I said, is the question of whether judges should be lawyers or nonlawyers properly a subject for charters? Is this generally taken up in charters?

MR. DANHOF: The city charters of a number of cities provide that the municipal judge to be elected must be an attorney. I think some require he has to live within the confines of the city. Some may not, but most of them probably do.

Now, in response to Mr. Everett, after conferring, as we say, with counsel here, what Mr. Everett referred to was only the constitutional courts that have been created; in other words, the idea that the legislature could not set the qualifications of a lawyer for a circuit judge as they tried to do — and it was found to be unconstitutional and therefore required a constitutional amendment — refers to courts that are created as constitutional courts and, of course, municipal courts and the recorder's court and other courts are statutory courts and not constitutional courts. I am quoting Mr. Hutchinson, who I think was in the legislature when they tried to set the qualifications for the circuit judge, and he has advised me in this regard.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, as a member of the judicial committee that framed the proposal, I rise to oppose this amendment.

Although there have been many nebulous claims about there not being enough attorneys to man the bench in such instances, it seems to me that this is actually the last dying attempt of the justice of the peace association to try to keep the present system, which is certainly not a credit to the people of this state. I am sure you have all heard the situation discussed. I know that without exception, at least among those I talked to during the campaign and since, the one thing that should be done is improve the quality of the administration of justice at the justice court level and make it no longer a court operated by laymen who are not familiar with the law and who have caused the situation to exist. I ask you to oppose this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Rajkovich.

MR. RAJKOVICH: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, it sounds as if the proponents of this amendment are opposed to attorneys as judges. We are not opposed to attorneys as judges. Any time we have an attorney who wants to run for a judge, he is most welcome to run for a judge. The problem is that in many areas you don't have any attorneys. We do have counties of 1, 2 or 3 attorneys. Kalkaska county, I believe, has 2 attorneys. That is all there are. Antrim county has 3; Leelanau county has 4; and if you look around the rest of the counties up in the northern part of the state, you just don't have that many attorneys. And we want justice. I am not opposed to them. I think we should have them. However, if they are not there, we still do need these judges. And furthermore, I see no reason to state in the constitution — and freeze it in here — that all of these people have to be attorneys. They don't have to be attorneys. We do not set up qualifications for anything else.

It was mentioned to us yesterday that you certainly would not want to have anybody take your appendix out who is not a doctor. However, you know as well as I do that there are cases where this is done; people who are not doctors do these things. We would rather they didn't, I will agree with you. However, sometimes we have to do things that we wouldn't normally do. And in this case, I do believe that we have to make a provision for these people to render justice where all the attorneys are not available.

Now, Miss Donnelly mentioned here the question of 70 years retirement. I am sure there was never that intent. It wasn't my intent and it was not Mr. Radka's intent that 70 years should be affected at all by this.

Now, in any county or any area where we do have an attorney running against a layman, if this attorney cannot win against the layman, he shouldn't be a judge anyway. At least that is the way I feel about it. It takes other qualifications besides merely being an attorney, and I am sure the people will make their decision where there are a lot of attorneys and where there are a lot of people. But in sparsely settled areas, there just are not enough attorneys to go around. If you have one attorney, he is going to be a prosecutor. Perhaps another one is going to be a judge of probate. Then is there anybody going to be in town who is going to practice law? And there is not a great deal of money involved here anyway, so I wish that you would support this amendment to give these people outstate an opportunity to have justice that we do have in these other heavily populated areas, because if we have to have attorneys, I am afraid we won't have them. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I don't think anyone would quarrel with the notion that, other things being equal, it would be desirable to have the judges of all our courts as attorneys. Someone has said that extreme justice is injustice, and an extreme application of even a good principle can sometimes do more harm than good.

I would like to call your attention to the fact that the committee on the judiciary has recommended that even as to judges of probate, nonlawyers be permitted to be eligible so far as those who are now in office are concerned. We are here dealing with a question of judges for courts of limited jurisdiction. This argument seems to be based on the theory that every lawyer will make a better judge of a court of limited jurisdiction than any layman would make. The situation has been recorded sufficiently. Those of us who are familiar with the situation know that there are many counties where the shortage of attorneys exists, and when we go into a store to buy a suit, we prefer the store where we have some choice, and freezing this requirement into the constitution would in numerous cases result in the people being compelled to accept someone who chose to move into the community, regardless of what the reasons might be for his having left his old home or for coming into the new one. Because he is the only attorney available, they would have no choice. I think if we can, for the reasons that have been mentioned, make some exceptions on the much more important probate court, it is entirely reasonable to suggest that, for the time being, to meet these emergency situations, we might extend the same consideration to these communities we have been talking about. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: Mr. Chairman, at the time that I was seeking recognition, I was afraid that the recess had been called and I hadn't heard it, and I was still sitting here. And I would like to make a suggestion when this thing happens that the secretary ring the bell and bring the delegates back in so they can hear what is going on.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Your point is well taken, Mr. Perras. The Chair thinks that the private recess period appears to be over. Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. Chairman, delegates, because the position I took before the judicial committee was mentioned, I would like to expand on it just a little bit. My aim before the judicial committee and at this convention is to set up an adequate court system, a court system that will serve the people of the area. It was my position and is my position that if we do a proper job of organizing these courts, this matter of whether or not an attorney is the judge will be taken care of by the people of the district. I feel that if the court has a broad enough jurisdiction, a high enough jurisdictional amount, that people will recognize that an attorney is needed as a judge of that court. I am not in favor of freezing in the requirement. However, I am willing to trust the good judgment of the people of the district.

As has been mentioned, until just relatively recently, there was no requirement that a circuit judge or a supreme court justice in the state be an attorney. The good sense of the people made sure that they were. To that extent, while I agree wholeheartedly that no one really should ever act as a judge of his fellow man without some training for the job, I would not care to see a requirement in the constitution that he be an attorney. This is not a matter of trying to create a closed shop for attorneys. My position is simply that I am willing to let the people judge the qualifications of the judges that they elect.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I wouldn't presume to take any of your time on this except for one thing, although I may mention some others since I am up. The thing that brings me to my feet is the inference that we have just had that anyone taking the position that this amendment ought to be adopted is trying to do something for the justice of the peace association. In my case that is absolutely not true. I have no connection with them. They have no influence on me. Yesterday and the day before, we had a similar inference as to probate judges, that if you were for certain amendments or against certain amendments, you were trying to protect the probate judges. There are a lot of delegates here who are making up their mind on what to do on these amendments and on these propositions on the basis of what they think will work out best, not that they are trying to protect somebody.

Now, the idea that attorneys are going to be too scarce in some of these counties is not a nebulous idea. As I said to you the other day when I was talking somewhat facetiously, this is not a problem with me. I represent 4 counties. In each of those counties we have several attorneys. I have no doubt that a competent attorney can be found in each of those 4 counties who will be willing to be judge of some inferior court such as the legislature sets up. I would hope that the legislation, when passed, will be such that a lawyer will be required in each of my 4 counties.

But there are counties much smaller than mine, and the lawyers just aren't there. It is said we can bring them in; put up a proper salary and they will come. Who will come? Somebody who is an alcoholic and trying to escape temptation? Somebody by reason of age and infirmity who is no longer a proper person to be a judge? Some youngster just out of law school? There won't be any choice. Nine times out of 10, or maybe 19 out of 20, there will be no choice in one of those counties. If you get a lawyer to run, he will be the only one running and you will take him, whether he is qualified or whether he isn't qualified.

We are not deciding that there will be courts not requiring lawyers. We are just letting the legislature decide. Let the legislature decide what the rules shall be, where those courts may be. And certainly we are not in position to properly say to those little counties in the north "You must have a lawyer." They certainly would like one if they can get a proper one, but some of them can't do it and we know they can't do it. I think this amendment ought to be adopted.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I oppose the amendment. It seems to me that the amendment is either too broad or too narrow depending on what it attempts to achieve. I certainly don't think it is correct in the form that it has been presented.

First of all, I think the principle that has been mentioned in favor of the amendment is quite wrong. The principle that has been put forward is that it isn't necessary, it isn't indispensable, let us say, that in order to be a judge, you should be a lawyer. In other words, in order to be a judge, it is not indispensable that you should have a license to practice law or that you should be legally qualified and certify that you have studied the law. Now, I believe if we compare this principle with many other principles that we are quite familiar with, we will see that the principle cannot stand. There are many activities in this state which do require a license, and they are much less important than administering justice.

For example, to be a barber, it is my understanding you have to have a license. You can't cut somebody's hair, as I understand it, unless you have been examined by somebody who can say that you are qualified to cut hair. I know that in order to drive an automobile you must have a license. And they don't say there are any ifs, ands or buts about it; you just simply must have a license, because you can do harm if you don't have qualifications.

When you come to the question about whether somebody is going to administer the law, apply the law to specific cases, how can we come out with a conclusion that that person doesn't need to have any qualification whatever? He need have no qualification whatever. He need not have a license to practice law. He need not be certified so that people will know that he has ever even studied the law or had the slightest inkling of what law is. It seems to me that the principle is a very bad principle. Not only that; I don't believe that that principle can be pushed to the limit or is being pushed to the limit. If that principle were correct that it isn't necessary — it is just nice but not necessary that anyone who is a judge have a license to practice law, then why do we have in the rest of this section the requirement that he does have a license to practice law except if it is not a court of record?

It will still say in section a, if this amendment is adopted, "Except as authorized otherwise by this constitution, justices and judges of the courts of record of this state shall be lawyers licensed to practice law. . . . " We certainly don't think that we ought to leave that question wide open. We think we should leave it wide closed. In other words, we don't think that that principle that has been announced here — that it isn't important, in fact indispensable for a man who administers the law in a specific case to be licensed — is good enough. As a matter of fact, we have stated the exact reverse: that he should be a lawyer.

Now, the amendment, therefore, is too narrow if it seeks to establish a principle that a man does not need to be a lawyer to be a judge, because he does need to be a lawyer in most courts of the state under this amendment. On the other hand, the amendment is too broad if the object is to make an exception only in case of emergency or only in case of sparsely settled areas.

The amendment does not go to either one of those cases. It goes broad spread to the entire judicial system. It doesn't say in sparsely settled areas of some sort or other, or where there is no choice. It doesn't say where there is no other choice, he doesn't need to be a lawyer. I could understand that. But this applies to all courts of the state which are not courts of record, including the most densley populated parts of the state. It doesn't say only in case of emergency or only in case of sparsley settled regions. That kind of an amendment, it seems to me, could be supported. But this is too broad in that respect and too narrow in the other respect.

It has also been urged that this ought to be a question for the legislature; it ought to be a matter of flexibility. Again, it seems to me that point is not well taken. If that is your position, why do you permit the rest of the section to say, "Except as authorized otherwise by this constitution, justices and judges of the courts of record shall be lawyers licensed . . . ."? That is not flexible. Therefore, it seems to me that a lot of people in discussing this want to have their cake and eat it. They want to say that this amendment isn't too broad and it isn't too narrow, but as a matter of fact this amendment is very badly conceived, in my opinion.

I think we should start out with the principle that you cannot be a judge of any court unless you are licensed. We shouldn't lower the courts below the barbering profession or the business of driving an automobile. We should put that in as a principle. Then if we find there are reasons why some exceptions should be made, we can put those in. And I believe there could be some. Grandfather clauses, for example, would be all right, or where there is no attorney who is willing to run for office or something like that. You could put those in. But the amendment we have here is, as I say, ill conceived, can do damage to the judicial system, and I believe on that basis, unless it is changed to satisfy these problems, it ought to be defeated.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mrs. Koeze.

MRS. KOEZE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to say here that on the sheet you have before you is the town of Wyoming. Most of you think that I am from Grand Rapids, but I really am from Wyoming, Michigan. Now, this is really and truly south Grand Rapids, the fastest growing part of Kent county. And I just want to tell you an instance about our municipal court down there.

We established one when we became the city of Wyoming, Michigan, and we waited for months to get a lawyer for this municipal court. Believe it or not, in this 6 square miles of Wyoming, Michigan, we couldn't find a lawyer and finally had to waive a clause in regard to his residency so that we could get one from the city of Grand Rapids. So I just want to point out to you that this is not only a problem of sparsely settled areas.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. William Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, I happen to be a justice of the peace in a township, South Muskegon. But what Mr. Ford has alluded to and what some of the other men have referred to is a problem within Muskegon county. We have one of the best run municipal courts in the city of Muskegon, and we have one of the worst run municipal courts in the city of Muskegon Heights. Now, the difference between the 2 is simply that in Muskegon we have a large number of attorneys willing to run for the job. In Muskegon Heights, because it is an older city and has not expanded as the greater Muskegon area has expanded, we have a situation where the people are offered no choice when it comes to municipal judges. We now have a municipal judge who works approximately from 11:00 to 11:30 and 2:00 to 3:00, and his help does likewise.

Some of our best run courts are justice of the peace courts by laymen in the surrounding townships because they work full time at this job. Mr. Nord has referred to the situation of a barber, but at least I don't face a jurisdictional question and I am not compelled to go to a certain barber, but I may go where I feel there is a competent barber without regard to municipal lines. This is not true with the courts. I am forced to go where the legislature tells me to go. Secondly, if I try a case in justice court, I have an appeal and I can have my case retried. But it is a little difficult, if I get a poor haircut, to immediately turn around and get another one, and there are some delegates here where a poor haircut could be quite embarrassing, because there isn't very much to cut. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are you raising personalities? (laughter)

MR. W. F. HANNA: I am not referring to you, Mr. Chairman. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hanna, the secretary and the Chair would both appreciate your indulgence. Some of the delegates have complained about the glare. (laughter) Mr. Garry Brown once suggested that during this article, perhaps the Chair should be provided with a robe, and the Chair thought maybe a wig would be additionally appropriate. (laughter) You may proceed, Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: I, too, am joining your class very rapidly. But actually what is needed is fewer justices of the peace or fewer local courts. With regard to cities, they have their choice. They may adopt by charter a municipal court, and the legislature has said in that case he must be an attorney, and they have set the jurisdiction somewhat higher for municipal court. But a city also can have a layman judge, and the jurisdiction there is somewhat lower, at least in dollar amount.

I believe that if we are to develop an intelligent court system, of necessity we must allow the legislature the power to develop a court system of limited jurisdiction, and to require lawyers in those counts of limited jurisdiction where there are sufficient lawyers to give the people an intelligent choice.

I would equally oppose putting the township justices of the peace back in the constitution, because I am convinced that in some of the smaller townships, they should be joined together in a judicial district, and if population is sufficient or if there is a sufficient choice of lawyers, those judges should be lawyers. But when you have the situation where a man has a monopoly on the office of judge only because he is an attorney and only because he is the only attorney within that municipality, be it county, city, township or village, you have the situation where the public does not receive justice, but they have a man who is living on a semi pension, and if he is ambitious, he practices law, and if he is not ambitious, he looks for a retirement long before he is 65.

I certainly would urge the convention to allow the legislature, with regard to courts of inferior jurisdiction, to set requirements as to whether or not they should be lawyers based upon the availability of lawyers and the population of that municipality. Equally, I would urge this convention not to require every city, township, village or county to elect a justice of the peace.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, are there a great many people lined up to talk?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair has one layman, one lay woman, and one lawyer in addition to yourself, Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: It seems like the laity is in the majority this morning. The reason for asking that question was that I don't consider myself an orator of such persuasive character that I could persuade many people to change their minds, and if there aren't too many lined up to talk and we are going to vote pretty soon, I won't say very much and I will just keep quiet.

I find myself in strange company this morning. Generally, over in this corner I am considered so extreme that I have been accused of carrying a John Birch card. And now I find myself in sympathy with Mr. Ford, who is generally of the opposite point of view. (laughter) In general, I support the idea of training and education to provide competence, but horrible examples can be found in all fields to prove that this isn't exactly true. And I think if we consider this question of whether we have licensed attorneys for justice of the peace, we have to be a little bit practical. A lot of testimony has been heard this morning to prove that in metropolitan areas where there are lots of attorneys available, in most cases attorneys fill the judge's positions. We must be practical, because in our outstate area, this condition doesn't exist, and it doesn't make good economic sense to force something on somebody when it just isn't, in a sense, practical from an economic point of view.

Some arguments have been made this morning with regard to doctors removing appendix. "Do you want a doctor to do it rather than somebody else?" I would like to suggest if we are going to think along these lines, we require in the constitution that nobody shall be permitted to service an automobile except a licensed automobile dealer and no gas station or alley garage service, Mr. Farnsworth, because those people can do irreparable harm to an automobile, as you know, by putting it back together wrong, and it costs, lots of times, more money. An automobile is worth $3, $4, $5 thousand sometimes, and these alley garages just do a terrible job, you know, so we should have only licensed automobile dealers practicing on this valuable piece of machinery. But you know it is impractical that we force that on people because they should have a right to choose what they can afford to pay for and buy what they can afford to pay for, and this same thing, I feel, in a sense, should apply to justice. This isn't an unusual analogy to make because of the costs involved in some other fields as compared to law and justice—

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Excuse me, Mr. Hubbs. The committee will be in a little better order, please.

MR. HUBBS: The costs of machinery and things that lots of times unlicensed and untrained people work on are just as damaging to people as poor justices would be. And considering this whole justice of the peace question, I have heard a lot of static about the fee system and the high cost of justice to people in that sense, but I would like to point out the high cost of justice when you have to hire an attorney to go into court for you. And maybe it would be a good idea, since justice is such an important thing to people, and of such a fragile quality that only attorneys in some instances can handle it, that we socialize the justice system and require that all attorneys be employees of the state and work for a flat fee and that justice be available to everybody—just like education—since it is so valuable, we should get it free. And in this way, everybody would get justice. It would probably be very mediocre but we would get it and we wouldn't have to pay for it, and all attorneys would get exactly the same fee. Then I would go along with making all attorneys judges and setting up the monopoly for them under that system whereby the state took care of it.

Mr. Ford makes some very good points. The people will finally elect attorneys. And even in our area, I myself will always vote for an attorney if he is available and qualified. One thing that I would like to persuade you to with regard to this particular thing is this: the public reaction to 57 attorneys setting themselves up with a legal monopoly over the justice system and the legal business of the state is not going to be a good public reaction. And I am going to tell you right now that you are not being practical; you are being ivory tower theorists when you think you can cram that down people's throats. They won't buy it. And I am talking about intelligent, educated people who will not accept this kind of a proposition, because they would like to be practical just as I would.

Now, as far as the future of the justice of the peace system is concerned, it is my hope that when the legislature gets around to dealing with this, the evils that do exist in the justice of the peace system will be cleaned up by setting up proper educational requirements. I think that possibly a man should at least have gone through high school and that he be able to read and write (laughter) and the reason I set up these bare minimums is because there are a lot of intelligent people around who have been educated in the hard school of life who I would take a back seat to any time, even with any degree that I might possess, because they know far more than I do from hard learning, and that is why I say the minimum requirement. But I think that the legislature, when setting up this court that we hope to achieve where we will not absolutely be required to have attorneys, can say in effect that after you get elected, if you cannot demonstrate competence within 2 years to pass a test which will determine whether you have tried to be competent or not, then you will not be eligible to run again. And I think that by legislation we can set up proper safeguards over this thing and be practical about giving us inexpensive justice in outstate Michigan. And I don't think that the metropolitan areas will be hurt in the least, and I think that in the long run if you force, arbitrarily, lawyers as judges on us, you are going to hurt the constitution.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I just wonder if any of you are aware that there are counties who don't have a lawyer in them. There is one county in the upper peninsula that doesn't have a lawyer. And I notice in section b here if a judge is removed from his domicile beyond the limits of his territory, he shall be deemed to have vacated this office. In this one county, the prosecuting attorney lives in another county. I don't know just how they would have any judge of any sort if they were depending on a lawyer. And in another county in the upper peninsula there are only 2 lawyers, and 1 is a prosecuting attorney and 1 is a probate judge.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Beaman.

MR. BEAMAN: Your Honor and ladies and gentlemen of the jury, I rise to a point of prerogative writ (laughter) to endorse the amendment. And I would like to say to Mrs. Butler that if she has a county up there in the upper peninsula, the chamber of commerce should make some publicity of that, because I think maybe I would like to move up there after this convention. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Spoken with your usual economy of language, Mr. Beaman. (laughter) Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I think that perhaps we are dealing with this problem somewhat out of order. As the committee reported out this proposal, it says "except as authorized otherwise by this constitution." I think perhaps at this time we ought to vote on this amendment and then consider section i, which is the J.P. section. Of course, it is related. Also section e, which requires the incumbent designation for all judicial offices. I am sympathetic to the problem of the sparsley settled areas, and I think that at that time I could certainly support some means of taking care of this question.

Mr. Hanna points out that people have a choice of barbers, which of course they do, and I am sympathetic to the statements he made, because when I get to be Mr. Chase's age, I may lose my hair. (laughter) People do, of course, have a choice of the repairmen for their cars, and they even have a choice of their doctors and lawyers. But people do not have a choice of their judges, and I think that this is something we ought to consider. Mr. Hubbs thinks that J.P.s should be able to read and write. I think where possible, they ought to be attorneys.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. McAllister.

MR. McALLISTER: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I don't think Mr. Hubbs is correct in his remarks in regard to the 57 lawyers here being opposed to this amendment. I think most of the lawyers here are familiar with the problems that exist north of Bay City in many counties and realize that attorneys cannot always be obtained to fill offices to serve the people insofar as justice is concerned, and I am sure that he will find it is not true when the vote is taken.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mrs. Cushman.

MRS. CUSHMAN: I am not a lawyer, nor is any member of my family a lawyer. I realize, furthermore, that a law degree is not a guarantee of a good judge, but I don't think that I would have as good a chance for justice in appearing before a man who is not a lawyer as I would before a man who is a lawyer. As a layman, I think my chances are far better of hitting a good judge if he is guaranteed to be a lawyer, and for this reason I would like to support the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I would just simply like to echo what Mr. King has said. I find that I must vote no on this amendment not because I am out of sympathy with it, but because I think this is the wrong way to tackle the problem. I think we certainly need an exception for the problem that has been demonstrated here, but I don't think the amendment that is before us now is the solution, and for that reason I must vote no.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Radka, Pugsley, Rajkovich and others to the second sentence of Committee Proposal 96, section a. The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment reads:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Radka requests a division. Is the demand supported? It is supported. Those in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment, the yeas are 87; the nays are 31.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is adopted. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, I move the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof, would you withhold that briefly. Mr. Farnsworth was seeking recognition.

MR. DANHOF: I will withhold it.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. Chairman, this will only take a moment. I wondered if the Chair would consider at this time advancing Delegate Hubbs to the junior class and letting Mr. Beaman take his place in the sophomore class. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Without objection, it is so ordered, Mr. Farnsworth. (laughter) Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I move the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof moves the committee do now rise. Those in favor of the motion will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The committee will rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration several matters of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 96, A proposal pertaining to general and special provisions relative to the courts of the state; has adopted one amendment thereto and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Are there any announcements?

SECRETARY CHASE: We have the following note that was received this morning:

> To the delegates and staff:
> Your kind expression of sympathy in our recent bereavement was greatly appreciated. Please accept our grateful thanks.
> Sincerely, Alice and Cliff Perras.

The committee on style and drafting will meet in room K at 8:00 o'clock this evening. Mr. Cudlip chairman; and the meeting of the committee on administration which was scheduled for today has been postponed until tomorrow.

Mr. Hoxie wishes to be excused from the session of this afternoon and tomorrow afternoon; Mr. Hatch asks to be excused from tomorrow's session; and Mr. John Hannah requests leave from tomorrow's session because the council of state college presidents of the Michigan coordinating council for higher education and 2 of the important committees of the legislature will begin an all day meeting at the Kellogg Center.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the excuses are granted.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Page.

MR. PAGE: Mr. President, I move that the convention recess until 2:00 o'clock this afternoon.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Page. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. We are recessed until 2:00 o'clock.

The convention will please come to order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering matters on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Van Dusen.

[Whereupon, Mr. Van Dusen assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The committee will be in order. When the committee last sat, we were considering Committee Proposal 96, A proposal pertaining to general and special provisions relative to the courts of the state. We were considering the second sentence of section a of that proposal. The secretary will read the next amendment to that sentence.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Ford and Danhof offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 12, by striking out "shall not" and inserting "no person shall"; so the language will then read, "and no person shall be elected or appointed to a judicial office after reaching the age of 70 years."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Ford and Danhof. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, in view of the amendment adopted earlier by the committee of the whole inserting the words "of record" after "courts," and in line with the statement made by Mr. Rajkovich, one of the sponsors of the amendment, putting in the words "of record," in order that there would be no confusion—and as Miss Donnelly had pointed out, that the matter therein regarding the age qualification would have been limited to courts then of record—Mr. Ford, the vice chairman of my committee, and myself offer this amendment so as to make sure that the 70 year age requirement is maintained within the constitution.

Mr. Rajkovich stated it was not their intention to disturb this but simply to limit the requirement that the judges be licensed to practice law to courts of record, and in line with that, Mr. Ford and I offer this amendment to maintain this provision as the committee wrote it in the light of the amendment adopted by the committee of the whole. We urge the adoption of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Ford and Danhof. Does any delegate desire to have it read again? If not, those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is adopted. The secretary will read. Are there further amendments to the second sentence, Mr. Secretary?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Sleder, Plank and Radka offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 10, after "judges" by inserting a comma and "except probate judges,"; so the language will then read:

> Except as authorized otherwise by this constitution, justices and judges, except probate judges, of the courts of record of this state shall be lawyers licensed to practice law.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Sleder, Plank and Radka. The Chair will recognize Mr. Sleder.

MR. SLEDER: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, we definitely appreciate the work of the judicial committee relative to their effort in attempting to improve the probate courts, and I fully realize that this provision that they have placed in the report of making the probate judges attorneys as a requirement of holding the office is in the hope of being able to improve the probate courts. I should like to point out, however, that in the past 60 years that we have been operating under the Constitution of 1908, which does not have this provision, it has been pointed out that there are about 1/3 of the probate judges who are nonlawyers, and about 2/3 are lawyers. We are confining our remarks to principally 30 or 35 judges.

I think we should take into consideration the fact that the work of the probate court deals in several functions. Probably the 2 large functions are the juvenile work and the probating of estates. It is, I feel, quite evident that other types of qualifications can well serve as a basis for a probate judge—such as we could consider a CPA would be very well qualified in the handling of probating of estates, or that people trained in juvenile work would be qualified in some areas as a probate judge. I do agree and admit that as to the laws which they operate under, probably an attorney is best trained.

The fact, I think, was brought out very well this morning when we were speaking about the courts of record relative to the requirements and the availability of the attorneys in the more sparsely populated counties, and of course I think we will find when we make a survey of the 35 nonlawyer judges we have that most of them are located in the northern part of Michigan, and of course we have made this provision as of yesterday where it is possible for the legislature to combine counties and with the hope, I am sure, that if the provision is put in there, then these counties could better afford an attorney if there were 2 or 3 counties combined. I should like to point out several problems, on this basis, that will evolve, and that is the fact that it will be difficult when one county is without a judge and it may adjoin a county such as Wexford county where the probate court there has a full load and they cannot join to that, the other counties surrounding it are well satisfied with their jurisdiction, and here we will have one county left without a probate court and possibly no lawyer within that county that will be willing to accept the job. This, I think, will bring about complications if this is written into the constitution.

So I come to one of my main points, and that is I feel that this provision should be a part of the work of the legislature. When the legislature combines these counties, at that time if they so wish and so see fit that these probate judges should be attorneys, I feel then they should have the right and the privilege of putting it into the statutes. I don't feel that we should put it into the constitution and hope that the plan that has been well thought out and devised by the committee will work out. I think as the time goes on and the counties are combined, as the legislature may do, they then may stipulate, if they so wish, in these areas to have attorneys.

Certainly this brings about the next point. I feel in the past and in the future we must have and should have the control and the decision by the people on the county level. Certainly the attorneys, where they are available, can run for the position. Laymen who feel they are qualified likewise can run. Let the people determine who they themselves feel should be best qualified to hold the position. Certainly in the areas of local and home rule, we have given this jurisdiction to the people to decide. I think we can do it in areas of our court structure or our court qualifications of men who are seeking the position. I feel that this decision as to who should serve in the probate court can be well testified to by the election of the people, and I think if we look back over history, as I said, we find that now 2/3 of the probate judges are attorneys. This has been decided by the people. Certainly there is only 1/3 of the judges left. I think as the population grows in the sparsely populated areas, the people there, too, will decide and will choose attorneys for the positions, as they have in the southern part of the state, without the requirement in the constitution that they be attorneys.

And in conclusion, I should like to point out that this is not a structure change in the courts of the state of Michigan; it is only a stipulation as to the qualifications of who may serve as judge. I, therefore, would recommend that you give this amendment very serious thought and vote in favor of it. And, Mr. Chairman, I should like to relinquish to Delegate Plank.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will recognize Delegate Plank.

MR. PLANK: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, contrary to some feeling, I really am in favor of the attorneys when we sponsor this amendment, mainly because I think I have more confidence in them then you do. My confidence comes in believing that the people will choose a man who is better qualified if he runs. The only thing I object to is fixing it so no one else can run, and therefore a man who perhaps had a law degree 50 years ago and could run on that today, wouldn't be nearly as qualified as a good layman. Along the same type of thinking, you might say it is necessary to be an attorney to be a probate judge. Then why not write into the constitution that you must be a teacher to be on the school board or a professor to be on the university board of regents.

If there are no appeals, then I would say that perhaps you should stipulate that we have a man schooled in law to be a probate judge, but today in all our courts if you are not really satisfied, you can take the appeal to a higher court and even more qualified individuals sitting on the bench. Therefore, I recommend that you vote for our amendment, and recommend that you not freeze into the constitution something that might be difficult to live with in some of the smaller counties in the state of Michigan. I would like to yield, Mr. Chairman, to Delegate Radka.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Radka.

MR. RADKA: Mr. Chairman, delegates, I believe that we heard all of the arguments this morning. These arguments that related to our problem of lack of attorneys in the northern part of the state and in the upper peninsula lead to our putting in this amendment relating to probate judges. The difference is, of course, here—and we recognize it—that we have now passed a provision which will allow the creation of districts for probate courts. This, of course, makes the problem somewhat different. I recognize that. But I would like to point out that in the year 1955, a constitutional amendment was passed by the people. Prior to this time, a supreme court justice and circuit judge were not required to be attorneys, and because of a situation which arose in the state, everyone became excited. A certain probate judge decided to run for circuit judge, and he was not an attorney, and I think that this sparked the impetus for the passage of this particular amendment. It is very interesting to note that the people passed this amendment in 1955, and this amendment required that supreme court justices and circuit judges be licensed to practice law. It is interesting to realize that they did not at this time include probate judges.

I submit to you that the reasons which existed in 1955 which the legislators were aware of still exist today, and I would say that I would rather allow the people to determine the qualifications of their probate judge rather than have 144 delegates or part of 144 delegates determine the qualifications the people's probate judge should have.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, I have long since given up the notion that the only qualification for a judge in the state of Michigan should be the ability to get elected. Thirty-eight of the 50 states in their constitutions put in the requirements for being judges, and the minimum requirement is that they are licensed to practice law.

I agree with the gentleman who talked about haircuts this morning that if he goes to one barber and gets a bad haircut, he can go to another one next time, but he is the only person who is concerned and the only one hurt because he got a poor haircut. But when you are representing a client before a court, you don't want to be forced to appeal to overcome the deficiencies of the judge that you are trying your case before. It is expensive business for your clients, and you would rather try your case before a person at the lowest level who has the legal ability to try it and answer the questions involved.

I have given this illustration. We dealt with justice courts this morning. I take it, however, it fits our situation now. One of the cases in Michigan which is a landmark in municipal law involved a justice court decision involving a $10 note. It was appealed to the circuit court and went to the supreme court. The justice of the peace, the circuit judge and the members of the supreme court all had the same identical question to answer. If it had been answered in the proper manner at the first instance by the justice of the peace, no appeals would have been necessary. Now, if you want probate judges who are not lawyers, I submit that you are going to have them for quite a while, because the provisions that we have written in this constitution, if they are adopted, put in a grandfather clause, and we are not going to hurt any of the present nonlawyer judges.

It happens that 38 years ago I began to work for a member of the 1908 convention who was on the judicial committee. He told me many times that they did not put in the qualifications for judges because they didn't think anybody would ever have the temerity to run for the supreme court unless he was a lawyer, nor would anybody ever have the temerity to run for a circuit judgeship unless he was a lawyer. The probate judges, he said, would take care of themselves because as the state grew and the lawyers grew in proportion, there would be lawyers running for the jobs and they would get them. We still have 33 counties in which the judges are not lawyers.

Now, you have seen the bar poll. I can assure you that the probate and trust law section has been working on this for years. The probate judges association has been working on it. And the consensus of opinion throughout the state among people who deal with the probate courts is that the probate judges—and this applies also to some of those lay judges that you are trying to protect—should all be lawyers and we would then have a fine court system. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messers. Sleder, Plank and Radka to the second sentence of section a of Committee Proposal 96. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I have to oppose the people I have been voting with earlier in the day on this. I don't think that the same reasoning that prevailed with respect to the statutory courts—and all of the courts below probate are going to be statutory in the future if this document is adopted—applies here.

We have to understand that the only way that a probate judge could be required to be an attorney in the future would be by a constitutional amendment, since we are talking about a constitutional court. This is not the case with respect to the courts we talked about earlier. And for that reason, I felt that we shouldn't freeze into the constitution a requirement at this time, but leave it to be handled by the legislature in such a manner as not to cause inconvenience throughout the state.

If the proponents of this measure would ask for the same kind of flexibility that we have asked for with the lower courts—in other words, to put language in here that would permit the legislature to impose upon that part of the state or all of the state at that time, when it thought wise, a requirement that judges be lawyers—then I would be constrained to support them. But when they take from the constitution any authority for the legislature to place such a requirement on the probate courts in the future, then I feel that we have to support the committee and vote against the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Sleder, Plank and Radka. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, the requirement here that the judges of probate be attorneys is based upon the idea that we have done many things which will alleviate the present system.

First of all, if you will read ahead in Committee Proposal 96, you will find what is known as a grandfather clause in section f, which will allow nonlawyer probate judges to continue to seek reelection as often as they can convince the voters that they should be elected to their office.

I think, however, that we all agree that the time is fast approaching when, due to the complexity of the probate nature of the court, the legal questions that are therein involved concerning the administration of the states plus the fact that almost 40,000 juveniles were arrested—and, as Mr. Norris pointed out the other day, it is in this field that the civil rights are probably ignored as greatly as in any particular field—the idea of judges being lawyers is an important one.

Judge Coleman came before us, and she is an attorney. She emphasized that in her court at least, she is recommending more and more attorneys be appointed to represent juveniles, for the simple reason that they do have some rights and that it is necessary that they be protected by an attorney. Now, it is mandatory that if that be done, at least the judge be there to recognize the problem when it is approaching, and for that reason the committee recommends and urges that this amendment be defeated and that the judges of the courts of record of this state be made to at least have, as a minimum, a license to practice law.

I agree there are other qualifications which should enter in. We have allowed for the districting of counties. We allow for the grandfather clause to continue, so that this will not be an overnight change. It allows for freedom, and for the legislature to study the problem and to provide for the districting when and if judges who are not attorneys have retired or, if they do stand for election, are defeated or resign, or there is a death in the office. Therefore, the committee very strongly feels on this matter and urges that the amendment be defeated.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I want to underscore the excellent points that were raised by Mr. Danhof as chairman of the judiciary committee. I do want to stress 2 fundamental propositions, both based upon the major premise that all people have an interest to see that the judicial power is used in the advancement of justice—this is its function—and that this justice is a high value in the public interest, all of the public in all sections of the state including those areas now serviced by probate judges who are not lawyers. Now, how do we get this, not only in terms of getting people who are attorneys of quality in the community, but persons who have specific training for the job at hand?

There is no question in my mind but that this is one of the most complicated areas of law. It is a body of law which goes back to Anglosaxon law for several thousands of years and requires a person who is schooled and trained to see that the words are properly construed and that justice is served, and I don't see how this can possibly be done by a person other than one who is licensed to practice. It is one of the anomalies, too, of that same position that a person who comes before that court must be licensed to practice. The person who practices before that court must have a license. And yet the person who is to make the judgment need not have a license to practice law. This is a fundamental inconsistency, and it seems to me we ought to give that appropriate weight in our judgment with regard to this. And the third point I wish to make, Mr. Chairman, is that we have in a previous section indicated that the probate judge shall have exclusive jurisdiction over juvenile matters. The courts have upheld the idea that a person who is a juvenile does not have the benefit of the protections of the constitution of the state of Michigan or of the United States. A juvenile does not have a right to counsel. He does not have a right to have the nature of the charge given to him in detail. He does not have the right by the constitution to cross examine and to confront witnesses and to avoid many of the pitfalls of hearsay and speculation and conjecture.

Now, with the absence of those rights, you are also going to compound the felony by saying the person who is going to protect the interest of the juvenile in the community need not be a lawyer, a person who doesn't even recognize that there are certain constitutional rights which are being constitutionally denied, so that he is not moved to exercise the kind of overseeing of this matter, the kind of examination that is necessary to protect the rights of the individual and the community that is before him in a given case. And it seems to me that here we have an excellent opportunity to elevate the standards of judicial performance in this state. This is one of the needs that experience has demonstrated since 1908, and we ought to give this the kind of weight it deserves in our decision in this matter.

I am certain in my own mind that the people who have been speaking here with regard to this matter ought to reexamine their position in the light of the debate and in the light of our function here to see that in operation a constitution ought to be dedicated to raising the elevation of the performance of judicial power and not minimize. I urge that we defeat this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I must say that it is with stupendous regret that I have to speak on this subject at all. I feel that it is almost an uncouth subject to talk about. It is such a blow to hear anybody stand on the floor and make remarks to the effect that a layman who feels he is qualified could do a good job as a probate judge. I know there are some probate judges who are not lawyers. In fact, I have some of them as students in my class—and that doesn't reinforce my opinion that they are qualified. My opinion is they need to become qualified, but not that they are qualified.

The definition by law in this state of a person qualified to practice law is that he has passed the bar examination or otherwise been admitted to practice by reciprocity, by having been admitted in some other state. Otherwise, by law he is disqualified from practicing law. He cannot practice in a court of law unless he is licensed to do so, as has been pointed out by Mr. Norris. If he cannot practice before the court, if he is as a matter of law disqualified—may I proceed?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may proceed, Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, the matter before us is no drop in the bucket, and if people will insist on reading newspapers when this is going on, or having other private conversations, they can be expected to vote wrong on this subject.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Your point is well taken, Dr. Nord. The committee will be in order.

MR. NORD: As the saying goes, "Ah appreciate it."

The point I was making—and I may have to start from the beginning, I believe—(laughter) the point I was making is that laymen are by law not qualified to practice in a court of law. Therefore, it follows quite clearly that they are not qualified to be the judge in that court of law. Therefore, let us not get mixed up and say that some laymen are more qualified than others. As a matter of law, none of them are, and as a matter of fact, in my experience, the same thing is true.

When a judge of the probate court gets matters before him connected with the probate of a will, this is no easy matter. He has to know the doctrines of estates and land, for example. And let me ask you, who are the laymen who feel you may be qualified, a few questions. Let me ask you whether you recognize any of these words which have to do with estates which may be in a will and which a judge of probate must understand, must know what they mean. What is a fee simple? What is a fee simple absolute? What is a fee simple defeasible? What is a fee simple determinable? What is a fee simple subject to conditions subsequent? What is a fee simple subject to executory limitations? What is a life estate? What is a life estate pur autre vie? What is dower? What is a reversion? What is a remainder? What is a contingent remainder? Don't all answer at once. (laughter) What is the possibility of reverter?

When you get to the perpetuity rule that was pointed out by Mr. Norris, that is one of the most exciting rules—there is no doubt about it—and mathematical type rules that there are in law. My students have great difficulty in mastering that, and by good luck all the bar examiner expects the students to know is the rule, not how to apply it. It is too hard to apply—but just to know how to recite the rule.

Now, when you get to wills, the doctrines involving wills are no easy matters either. What do the laymen who say they may feel qualified think about questions like this? What is the effect of mistake in the inducement on a will? What is the effect of mistake in the execution? Can a will be partially valid? What is a holographic will? Does a will need to be published? What is meant by incorporation by reference? What does the doctrine of dependent relative revocation mean?

Mr. Chairman, I believe this matter is extremely serious. I regret very much that what we see here is a step by step attack on the whole idea that we should have justice in this state and that it is our business to make sure that we have justice in this state. First we pick a little piece here. That goes pretty well. So we say, let's pick a bigger piece. If we keep that up, we can't afford to let even the first little piece get into these texts. But that is what we have been doing, a little bite, a bigger bite—pretty soon nothing is left. I say we have gone too far. Let's not make the same mistake twice. Once in a day is sufficient. Let's defeat the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Dell.

MR. DELL: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, following these qualified speakers on this subject, I may be getting into foreign territory, but trying to apply it to the upper part of the state—and I being at the head of a finance department of a county, have been for many years—our judge of probate has never been an attorney and I think the office has been well taken care of during this period by qualified men. But our present judge is going to retire, and therefore this grandfather clause will take effect at once, as far as we are concerned. We have 3 attorneys in the county. One is already prosecuting attorney by default because no one else wants to run for the office. Now we are going to have to accept 1 of the other 2 for probate court and probably fill that office by default.

Now, I wonder whether it is better to fill these positions by default rather than taking someone who is not an attorney who would be qualified. Under the circumstances—they say that we can likewise consolidate counties. I don't presume that we should try to decide this by the finance—but I am certain that under the circumstances, if we consolidate, it is going to cost us more money than our present system. For these reasons I must support the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Shanahan.

MR. SHANAHAN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, this is a question that comes quite close to the district I represent. There are 4 counties. Charlevoix county currently is served by a probate judge who is not a lawyer; the same applies to Benzie county and to Leelanau county. Antrim county has a lawyer as a probate judge.

Now, we have heard quite a bit about the grandfather clause as being a palliative, perhaps, or a solution or something that will take care of the interim, and insofar as the incumbent is concerned, that is so. It is not my purpose to be defending them. The constitutional convention has already made provision for them as long as they satisfactorily perform their duty and can get reelected. But what of the county—what of the area—if we go into a district, what of the district that is not able to get a lawyer who is willing to so serve?

Now, contrary to maybe some thoughts here, the lawyer who presents himself as a candidate for judge of probate because of his training has, should I say, the inside track. He has a tremendous advantage to being elected, so that it is not necessary to write into the constitution in this particular office that not only would he have the inside track, but that he would have the absolute guarantee if he is the only one who was willing to present himself for that office.

I am saying again that I am pleading for the consideration of the people in the small communities, in the small counties. If the nonlawyer is not competent, he can be voted out of office, but how difficult it does get when the field is confined to maybe one person and you want to vote him out of office and there is nobody that will be able to qualify to replace him. I am very strongly in favor of this provision being written into the constitution that will allow the small counties to exercise their rights of self government by electing the man that they think is the best qualified for the job, be he lawyer or not.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I hope my remarks will be interpreted as being in opposition to the amendment. I am not in a position to talk for all experts in the state outside of the legal profession, but I do feel somewhat qualified to speak for the 3,000 certified public accountants who are licensed to practice accounting in the state of Michigan.

It is my view—and I think I can speak on behalf of the CPAs—that laymen, including certified public accountants, are not qualified to practice law or to make judicial decisions involving legal matters. Accountants do find it necessary to involve themselves in the interpretation of laws where taxation is involved, but even there they will do it to a minimum. I think that accountants generally spend more time studying the laws relating to the liability of accounting practice than they do any other type of law. CPAs do serve as members of the team involving estate and tax matters, but lawyers are members of these teams. Actuaries and investment counsellors are members also.

It is my personal view that admission to the bar should be a requirement for not only practice before a court but also certainly for presiding over a court. And I would like to say further that if it is necessary to use horrible examples of experts who might be qualified to preside over courts, I would prefer you not use the CPA. Use the plumber (laughter), the barber, notaries public or some other experts. I am opposed to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I hadn't intended to say anything about this matter, but I cannot let the impression go by that the only place in Michigan that you have good nonlawyer probate judges is in northern Michigan, because that just isn't so. In Allegan county we have a very, very good one—at least my people think so; they vote for him quite regularly and put him back by good majorities—the fact is, without any opposition. We like him. He is doing a nice job. He happens to be a Methodist minister. Incidentally, he defeated the incumbent judge that was a lawyer.

I came to the convention definitely with my mind made up that if this kind of an amendment came up, I would vote for it. But the lawyers' arguments certainly have convinced me that we in Allegan county have indeed been fortunate that we had a layman that was that good. I don't want to take the chance in the future, even for my own county, to let it pass here without supporting the committee on the stand they have taken. I am against the amendment wholeheartedly, and I hope that you support the committee by voting the amendment down.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Mosier.

MR. MOSIER: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I have been on the judicial committee, and this question of the matter of judges being qualified by at least being lawyers has had the serious consideration of the judicial committee. It is something that we have discussed frequently and given good attention to. Some of us have been able to make a contribution to that committee by reason of our experience. Over a period of some 50 years, I have observed the probate courts in my corner of the state, and I want to speak of VanBuren county in particular.

Some 50 years ago the judge of probate in that county was in the office of the judge of probate one day a week. The rest of the time he spent elsewhere. He had one register. The 2 people ran the office. In the last 50 years the population of VanBuren county has increased about 10,000 in population, but the work of the probate court has increased materially, to the extent that there is now a personnel of some 6 or 7 in that office every day. It isn't all clerical work. The judge of probate is frequently called upon to make decisions that involve legal points, questions such as Dr. Nord has suggested, and I am convinced that a judge of probate who is a lawyer and has had legal training is in a much better position to give a correct decision than one who is not a lawyer. We have come to the conclusion that the enhancement and the building up of the virtue of our judicial system in Michigan must be bettered by insisting that persons who hold judicial offices be judges. There seems to be a demand for that throughout the entire state.

Just as an example, let me call your attention to the questionnaire that was sent out by the state bar of Michigan this winter. They asked this question, "Should probate judges be required to be lawyers?" And the answer came back: yes, 4,998; no, 54. Out of some 5,000 lawyers, it is almost unanimous that judges of probate should be lawyers.

Now, as a member of the judicial committee, we felt that it would be unfair to the 1/3 of the judges of probate of Michigan to instantly pull the rug out from under them, some of these nonlawyers serving in various counties. In fact, in my own home county we have a nonlawyer who is a judge of probate. He has done a good job. He has been reelected. But we feel that the transition period that we have provided for in our probate procedure and the election and maintenance of the office of the judge of probate is well taken care of to protect those nonlawyers who are holding the office of judge of probate in the smaller counties. Those nonlawyers can be reelected. They can hold the office as long as the people of that county want them to hold it. But if the time comes that there is no lawyer in that county who is able or is willing to be judge of probate, then we have provided, as you will note by our proposal, that the legislature could then step in and combine 2 or more probate courts into one court to be served by a judge.

In my opinion, I think that the proposals of our committee have been eminently fair, that they are far looking—and they should be far looking—into the future to see that the judicial work of Michigan is conducted by people who are qualified and certified to do that type of work. Personally, I oppose the amendment and stand by the committee's proposal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Sleder, Plank and Radka. Does any delegate desire to have the amendment read again? If not, those in favor of the amendment will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to the second sentence of section a? If not, the secretary will read the third sentence.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. King has an amendment to the second sentence.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment reads as follows:

1. Amend page 1, line 10, after "courts" by striking out "of record"; and in line 11, after the second word "state" by inserting "except that the legislature may create courts of limited jurisdiction in counties under 25,000 population, which law may provide for the election of nonlawyer judges.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. King, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I hope that we won't get into extended debate on this, because I think everything that can be said has been said. I think that we all recognize that what Dr. Nord said was true, of course; that being a judge is more than just an honor. It requires a little more than compassion and a little more than the ability to read and write. An understanding of the law is essential. But there are situations in the state of Michigan where this just seems to be impracticable, so therefore I would like to offer, as a possible solution to this knotty problem, the idea that in those small counties the legislature can continue to provide for courts of limited jurisdiction without the requirement that the judges be lawyers, and in the rest of the state the citizens can have the best justice which can possibly be made available to them.

I think that we all realize when a lawyer talks on this subject, he is not talking for himself. I have no desire to be a JP or anything that replaces a JP, but I do have a real desire to represent my client when I go into court. I have had some sad experiences and I don't care to take your time relating them because I don't think this is the place for it, but I think that the very least that you ought to be able to hold out to your client is that his case will be heard by a man who understands the law; that he won't have to rely on the police officer and the prosecutor to tell him what the law is. I have had JPs tell me, "Well, you can always get a trial de novo if you don't like my understanding or lack of understanding of the law." Well, of course you can, but these things cost money. They mean fees for the lawyers. Every time a lawyer appeals a case, this is another fee, and maybe we should be happy about this, but frankly I am not. I would rather get justice the first time out.

I think that this proposal is reasonable. It takes into consideration the fact that there are extenuating circumstances in some of the smaller counties in the state, and it follows up the remarks that I made earlier with regard to handling the problem at this particular time.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Madar, did you seek recognition on the King amendment?

MR. MADAR: I just wanted to say, Mr. Chairman, that this morning we discussed at great length trying to reintroduce amendments, and I hope that we won't have to listen to this one all over again like we did yesterday and the day before. I hope we get to a vote quickly.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: May I ask Mr. King a question?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer, Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. King, would you object to your amendment being amended so that it read, "except that the legislature may create courts of limited jurisdiction not of record in counties under 25,000"?

MR. KING: No, I would have no objection to that whatsoever.

MR. LAWRENCE: I wonder if it might be so considered.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Without objection, the amendment will be so revised. I hear none.

[Following is the amendment as revised:

1. Amend page 1, line 10, after "courts" by striking out "of record"; and in line 11, after the second "state" by inserting "except that the legislature may create courts of limited jurisdiction not of record in counties under 25,000 population, which law may provide for the election of nonlawyer judges.".]

The question is on the amendment, as revised, offered by Mr. King. Mr. Danhof, do you desire recognition on the King amendment, as revised?

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, my own personal opinions might be in favor of supporting Mr. King, but again I am faced with this particular proposition: as I have argued before, I am not in favor, particularly, of writing numbers into the constitution, and we took them out when it came to the probate courts. I think that we have before us a matter which could well be considered when the legislature, as we hope they will do, will establish these courts of limited jurisdiction.

As Mr. Hanna pointed out, it may well be that they will not just consider population alone, because the mere fact that you may have a number of people residing in a particular area does not necessarily mean that there are available the attorneys to staff the judiciary. It is sometimes more important to look at the lawyer population or the active lawyer population than it is the number of bodies that happen to be occupying a particular area of real estate.

I agree that we should obtain the best justice that we possibly can, but I am not sure that writing in an arbitrary figure such as we have here will do it. I favor the report of the committee. I voted that we have lawyers in all courts. But I don't like to begin to carve it up within the constitution. For the reason that I there stated, trying to put my personal feelings aside, which might be a little difficult, I admit, I shall oppose this particular amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, while I myself had used such a figure of 25,000 in another proposal, I would not want it understood that I favor this one at this time. I feel that we should support the committee in this particular matter and leave this to the legislature. I think this is basically a legislative matter. I believe that if we maintain the articles that the committee has already adopted, we have given the legislature sufficient flexibility for the development of a court of limited jurisdiction which can serve the needs of the people throughout the state regardless of locality, and in the long run the development of such a sound court of limited jurisdiction will ultimately produce a type of court with sufficient business that these courts can be filled by legally trained people. I think that this is a legislative matter. I oppose it—although if I were in the legislature, I might support it. I think we have given the legislature, as of now, in the articles we have passed, sufficient flexibility to solve the problem.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment, as revised, offered by Mr. King. Does any delegate desire to have the amendment read again? The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The revised amendment offered by Mr. King:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Those in favor of the amendment will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to the second sentence of section a? If not, the secretary will read the third sentence.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, I want to ask a question.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I would like to ask a question on the second sentence. Is that all right?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You are in order, Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Danhof, through the Chair, on this part here where it says "except as authorized otherwise by this constitution," and then in section f where you state that those people who presently serve will continue to serve, was any thought given to whether this might better be included in a proposed schedule rather than being incorporated into the constitution as such, since the matter would expire after so many years?

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Faxon, in answer to your question, we would have no objection to where it is finally placed as long as it is there. We agree that maybe this is a scheduling provision. On the other hand, we had to provide for it in this particular article. We have another provision in here that is strictly scheduling, section j. We quite agree that this might not belong in the judicial article either, but it should be in there. Wherever it may be placed is no particular problem as long as it is there and gives the protection that we intended for the sections to do. We have no preference as to where it goes.

MR. FAXON: Then the committee on style and drafting could make any such adjustment as would be necessary to comply with this and yet not include it in the specific language which you have here?

MR. DANHOF: Well, Mr. Cudlip has served on the judicial committee. He knows what we intended. He is chairman of that committee. I am sure he will put it in the right place.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary will read the third sentence of section a.

SECRETARY CHASE: Beginning in line 13:

[The third sentence of section a was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 1478.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to the third sentence of section a? Are there any further amendments to section a? If not, it will pass.

Section a, as amended, is passed. The secretary will read section b.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section b:

[Section b was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 1478.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, for the committee report in this particular section, I would like to yield to the delegate from Bad Axe, Mr. McAllister.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. McAllister.

MR. McALLISTER: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I don't believe that this section needs much of an explanation. It means just what it says. If a judge moves out of the district in which he was elected, then, of course, his office is deemed vacant and he is deemed to have vacated the office. I recommend that this section be adopted.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to section b? If not, section b will pass.

Section b is passed. The secretary will read section c.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section c:

[Section c was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 1478.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: The speed with which the last section passed simply amazed me, Mr. Chairman. (laughter) In regard to this particular section, I should like to call upon the delegate from Oakland, Mr. Woolfenden.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: I hope to be able to do as well as Mr. McAllister, because I think this section likewise should not be the subject of any controversy. I can give you briefly the background of the section. In section 9 of article VII of the Constitution of 1908—and in turn that language comes from the Constitution of 1850, substantially—there is this language, interpolating so that it is intelligible: circuit judges shall be ineligible to any other than a judicial office during the term for which they are elected and for 1 year thereafter. This provision or one substantially identical is almost universal in the country. The Canons of Judicial Ethics of the American bar association, last amended August 31, 1933, has a similar provision that any incumbent judge cannot be a candidate for any other than a judicial office during his incumbency. That canon has been adopted by the Michigan supreme court for the regulation of the problem in the state of Michigan, Canons of Judicial Ethics.

Now, the language proposed in proposed section c is substantially identical with the provisions I have mentioned from the Constitution of 1908 and the Canons of Judicial Ethics so far as objective is concerned. I should point out the distinction to you that the language in the committee report limits the office to which an incumbent judge of any court in Michigan is ineligible to an elective office other than a judicial office for the period of his service as a judge and for 1 year thereafter. That was considered fully by the committee, and it was felt that the possibility of abuse of an incumbent judge's position by his candidacy for another office would be for an elective office. It would be his campaigning for some office other than a judicial office that would be against the best public interest, so it was limited to elective office only. I would be glad to respond to any questions if there are any from any delegate.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to section c? Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Woolfenden a question. Perhaps he did cover this. I tried to listen to him, but I was interrupted here 2 or 3 times. Did you also point out this distinction, Mr. Woolfenden, between the proposal and the present provision, in that the present provision apparently would make a judge ineligible for anything but a judicial office for the entire term for which he was elected? For instance, if he had been elected for a 6 year term, then during that entire 6 years plus 1 year thereafter, he would not be eligible for other than a judicial office, whereas in your proposal, suppose he had been elected to a 6 year term. He could resign, presumably, at the end of a year, and then wait a year and then run for another office.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Hutchinson, I had not pointed that out, and I appreciate your having done so.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to section c? If not, section c—Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Woolfenden or any other member of the committee why this change was made. It seems quite clear, the purpose of providing that a judge should not run for a public office during the term for which he was elected or appointed or for 1 year thereafter. What was the reason for removing that qualification and making it possible for the person to advance politically much more rapidly through the means of serving on a court than is the case under the present constitution?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Wanger, taking the example that Mr. Hutchinson suggested where a judge, for whatever reasons appeal to him personally, resigned after 1 year of service on an 8 year elective term, the committee could see no reason why he should be debarred from consideration for other public office for a period of 8 years from his resignation. It seemed that was an unreasonable delay to debar his candidacy for any other office for the balance of the term, which would be 7 years plus 1 year thereafter, and we felt that one year after the period of his service was ample protection of the public interest.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: At least one effect, then, of the change which the committee proposes from the present constitution would be that it would make it easier for persons to use the judicial office as a political stepping stone than is presently the case; isn't that true?

MR. WOOLFENDEN: I would not agree that this is so, because I think that political popularity is a very volatile thing, and I think after a man had been off of the bench for a year, the fact that he had previously been a judge would not be particularly helpful to him in advancing a political candidacy.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If there are no amendments to section c, section c will pass.

Section c is passed. The secretary will read section d.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section d:

[Section d was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 1478.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, for the committee report on this particular section, I would like to yield to the delegate from Ypsilanti, Mr. Lawrence.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, as is pointed out in the report of the committee on section d, this is a substantial change from the former provision. The former provision was in section 20 of article VII, and it provided:

> When a vacancy occurs in the office of judge of any court of record, it shall be filled by appointment of the governor, and the person appointed shall hold the office until a successor is elected and qualified. When elected, such successor shall hold the office the residue of the unexpired term.

In other words, in effect, it provided for the filling of vacancies in the office of a judge of a court of record by appointment of the governor. That has been one of the criticisms that we have found have been leveled at the existing system. The fact that the present system allows the unresticted appointment of the judge of a court of record, when it is to fill a vacancy, by the governor without any accountability to anyone has been the subject of much talk, debate and discussion.

The present provision, in effect, retains the philosophy of an elected judiciary. Actually, the former system provided, as far as filling vacancies is concerned, the appointment system, but the committee adopted this view that the elective system was what the people of the state wanted. The effect of it would be that when a vacancy occurs, it would be temporarily filled by an appointee of the supreme court that the supreme court would choose from the list or panel of retired judges throughout the state. This retired judge would serve, if it was necessary to have the vacancy filled, until an election is held. The election would be provided by law—in other words, by the legislature—as to when it would be held and so forth. Of course, the retired judge would not be eligible to be a candidate at that election. The election would be held, the vacancy would be filled, and the new judge then would take the bench.

Now, this applies to all courts of record throughout the state, and the feeling is that this would give the people the opportunity of making the initial selection of the judge as well as the selection or the retention of the judge at a later date. The second portion, having to do with the filling of the temporary vacancy, I have already touched on. I wonder if there is any question that any of the members have in mind.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Shackleton, the Chair believes, has a question, Mr. Lawrence. The Chair will recognize Mr. Shackleton.

MR. SHACKLETON: Mr. Chairman, a question of Mr. Lawrence, through the Chair, please.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. SHACKLETON: Would that mean that a judge who retired because of having reached compulsory retirement would be ineligible to be used? It says "voluntarily retired."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: I don't know that I can answer that, Mr. Shackleton. It was my understanding that it was only to eliminate those who resigned, in the sense of not, say, filling out a term or before retirement age. But it was also my understanding that any retired judge, and I think that is what the word "voluntarily" means there, whether due to age—and it would be, of course, due to age if he didn't resign—or if he refused to run again, he wouldn't be voluntarily retired, so I think it would only apply to those judges who had reached retirement age. Is that your understanding, Mr. Danhof?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence yields to Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Shackleton, the word "voluntarily" is correct as Mr. Lawrence uses it. We realize that maybe the judge doesn't actually retire voluntarily when he is over 70 and his term expires. They say, "Well, we would want to go on." Perhaps you might have a compulsory voluntary. But as Mr. Lawrence pointed out, what we intended certainly was that judges who had reached retirement age, who had retired, were drawing their retirement pay, could be called back for temporary service during the time that the vacancy would occur. This would not be of a permanent nature.

We quite agree that legislation might be needed in the adjustment of the pension laws, and naturally they would only serve if they wanted to. We certainly aren't going to force anybody. There isn't even a requirement here that the supreme court has to take them. They may, in effect, decide not to do this, and if there is a vacancy, they would assign another judge from another circuit. There is nothing mandatory about it. It would simply provide that for the judges who have retired, if the call were made and if they were willing to serve a month or 2 months or 3 months to fill the vacancy, pending the election of the successor, that this judicial manpower could be utilized.

The word "voluntarily" was not meant in the sense that you have assumed here, and if there are other words that can be inserted, certainly we would welcome them. But we did not desire the judge who might have resigned for one reason or another or not completed the full time to retirement age. We only wanted judges that had completed their active service and were in a retired status.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Shackleton.

MR. SHACKLETON: If the word "voluntarily" were removed, wouldn't that take care of it?

MR. DANHOF: It might well be. This has been suggested to us, and it probably could be removed and "those who are retired" substituted, and they probably won't be retired until they get to 65 or 70 anyway to draw their pension.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hatch? Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Lawrence what the situation would be in this hypothetical situation. Let us say the probate judge in a county dies. Now then, I take it that it would be up to the supreme court to fill the vacancy. But there are no retired probate judges or any living former probate judges in the county, nor are there any retired circuit judges in the county. I take it then that there would be no alternative to the supreme court moving in a retired judge from some other part of the state in order to serve as the probate judge of that county.

If that is a true assumption of the only solution to the problem, my query is whether the committee honestly thinks it would be good public policy to move into a county to act as its probate judge someone completely unfamiliar with the county, no roots in the county, no background in the county and so on in order to perform that. Is that better public policy than to provide, somehow or other, for the temporary appointment of at least a resident of the county to act as probate judge?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Hutchinson, I don't know whether it is better, but it certainly wouldn't be a tragedy. I can speak from personal experience on that. When Judge Payne, who was a probate judge in Washtenaw county, died there was a period of well over a month—I think about 6 weeks—before his successor was appointed, Judge Conlin. During that time we had a rather anomalous situation. Part of the time the circuit judge acted as probate judge which, of course, the circuit judge can do. But we brought in Judge McAvinchey for several days at a time. We brought in other probate judges from outside the county. That can be done now. As a temporary proposition, if the workload is sufficient for a man full time, I think it is as important to have a man who is familiar with the practice, even though he lives outside the county, as it is to put a person unfamiliar with the practice—let's say a lawyer who has had no judicial experience—in there for that short period of time even though he lives in the county.

You notice that the committee report does not say that these judges have to have served in the same kind of a court. In other words, as the committee proposal reads, if you had a vacancy in the supreme court and there were no retired supreme court justices available, it would not prevent the supreme court from appointing a former circuit or probate judge or of any court of record as a temporay proposition until the vacancy could be filled by an election by the people.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: One further question of Mr. Lawrence. Assuming that we will be having elections not oftener than once every 2 years in the state, it could be that such an appointee could serve for almost 2 years; is that right?

MR. LAWRENCE: That would be true if the legislature so provided, but the last part of the first sentence says, ". . . it shall be filled at a general or special election according to law." So if the legislature so provided, it could provide for a special election.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Thank you, Mr. Lawrence.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Snyder, did you desire to direct a question to Mr. Lawrence?

MR. SNYDER: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Hutchinson has covered the bulk of the matters that I had proposed to inquire about. Again it appears to me that the logic advanced by the committee to support section d is in complete reversal of the logic that was used by the committee members when they presented section b. I just can't help but feel that if it is wrong for a judge to vacate his office because he moves in one instance, it is certainly just as wrong to appoint a judge who is not a resident of the circuit or district to fill a vacancy. I don't think that the logic advanced by the committee members in section b and the present section is consistent.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Snyder, I understand your reasoning there, but remember that Judge Pugsley was sent to Wayne county when he was an active circuit judge in his own circuit for a period, I believe, of several months, was it not, Judge Pugsley? Two years, Judge Pugsley tells me. That has been the practice, when the situation demanded it, to be able to bring outside judges in. However, Judge Pugsley still retained his judgeship and probably served on occasion in his own community to take care of matters during that period.

There is a difference between that and having the judge pull up his roots and permanently leave the community in which he is elected to serve, and I think that that, Mr. Snyder, is really the basic thing behind it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett, did you desire to participate in this discourse? The Chair recognizes Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I think we may be losing sight of the main purpose of this whole proposal, which is to fill vacancies by election. Now, we recognize that there may be situations where, in order to have proper judicial administration pending that election, it may be necessary to call somebody in temporarily to fill the vacancy. But when you talk about the supreme court filling vacancies by appointment and so forth, what we are saying is that judicial vacancies should be filled by election; if the judicial business is so great that you can't wait for that time, then a temporary expedient is used by calling upon qualified men to fill this office temporarily until the election is held. But the tenor of the proposal is that instead of having an appointive system to fill vacancies in the judiciary, we now are saying that there must be an elective system as there is, for example, in the legislative branch, and that is the heart of the proposal, the use of retired judges simply not to permit all judicial business to come to an end while we are waiting for the election.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: I might say that if you read the second sentence of that paragraph, it could even apply to the situation where a retired judge could, if contacted by the supreme court, say: well, I can serve for 2 weeks or a week or 3 weeks — but if the vacancy continued beyond that, they could bring in another judge. In other words, it is merely the present system, as far as that is concerned, something we have lived with, something that has met with our approval, that we have liked for years, and that is bringing outside judges in for special situations.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Pursuant to their minority report, Messrs. Ford, Garvin, Bledsoe, Miss McGowan, Messrs. Ostrow, Krolikowski and Barthwell have submitted an amendment which the secretary will read. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I understand that Mr. Lawrence was holding the floor for questions, and I had some questions I wanted to ask before we went into the minority report.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may proceed, Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Lawrence, for the benefit of all the delegation, could you tell us what the average retirement age of a supreme court, circuit and probate court judge is in the state of Michigan.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Ford, I cannot answer that question. As I recall it, there has been some activity in that field recently, and I don't know just what the situation is now. It was 70 years, I believe, here awhile ago.

MR. FORD: That is the age at which they can retire, but did you make any inquiry at all in preparing this recommendation as to what the actual age of retirement is in the state of Michigan?

MR. LAWRENCE: I'm sorry, Mr. Ford, would you repeat that?

MR. FORD: Understanding that the present requirement is that a judge must retire at the end of the term in which he becomes 70 years of age, it is understandable that they don't all retire on their seventieth birthday. Did you make any inquiry of what the actual age of the judges retiring from our courts is?

MR. LAWRENCE: I did not. But we have, Mr. Leibrand informs me, 5 retired judges in this convention. Perhaps one of them would be able to answer Mr. Ford's question.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair sees no one who desires to answer your question, Mr. Ford.

MR. LAWRENCE: Then I don't feel badly about not being able to do it either.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may proceed, Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: The second question. In investigating and preparing the material for this recommendation to us, did you make any determination of how many voluntarily retired circuit judges are now available and physically and otherwise able to serve from the supreme court, for example?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: No, I did not, Mr. Ford. You were on the committee and I believe you would recall as well as I would about that. I can't answer that.

MR. FORD: I never have advocated this so I didn't do this kind of research. I thought you would have — if you were going to advocate that we use these people — been able to tell us whether or not there are any available. Now, how about the probate judges? Do you have any idea how many of them are available?

MR. LAWRENCE: I don't see that it makes, Mr. Ford, any particular difference whether they are retired circuit, supreme or probate court judges. The supreme court can fill the vacancy from any of them.

MR. FORD: Is it fair then that you assume that the supreme court could take a retired probate judge and make him a supreme court judge?

MR. LAWRENCE: That is what the provision says, and it seems to be perfectly consistent with reason.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford, do you have further questions?

MR. FORD: Yes. Do you have any information on the number of retired circuit judges that are available?

MR. LAWRENCE: No, I do not. I know there are 5 in this convention.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The committee will be in better order, please. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Since you have no idea now, did you make any attempt to determine how many might be available on an actuarial basis or on the basis of experience in any period 5 or 10 years from now?

MR. LAWRENCE: No, except that I understand that because of this retirement provision which has been put in, the number will increase as time goes on; that is, assuming the atomic bomb doesn't fall or something like that, it should increase.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: That is all of the questions I have.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Downs, do you desire to propound a question to Mr. Lawrence with respect to the committee proposal?

MR. DOWNS: Yes, if I am in order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You are in order.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Lawrence, I was going to ask about the hypothetical situation where there might not be a judge available, but I won't. Instead of that, I would like to raise the question that I believe those who have advocated the appointive system of judges have argued at some length; that that meant the people would have a chance to review the work of the judge temporarily filling that position, and be able then to vote for that person or against that person.

Am I correct that this system of filling the judicial vacancy by the retired person precludes the people from having the advantage of voting for or against the person as a result of his experience in this temporary position?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Well, I would say in part. And in part it would prevent the appointment of someone who they had no selection of to fill the vacancy, yes. Mr. Ford, I have been informed by our good delegate, Mr. Erickson, that there are 34 retired circuit judges in the state of Michigan.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair takes it, Mr. Erickson, it was for that purpose that you sought recognition earlier?

MR. ERICKSON: Yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Lest that statistic hang in the air, my question wasn't how many are retired. How many of them are retired and physically and otherwise able to fill these vacancies?

MR. LAWRENCE: I have not made any physical or mental examination to this end. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Erickson.

MR. ERICKSON: I believe, from my knowledge of many of these retired judges, many of them would like to have a proposition like this and many of them would like to get back on the bench for a short time.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is now upon the amendment offered by Mr. Ford and others pursuant to their minority report, which the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment reads as follows:

1. Amend page 2, line 5, after "Sec. d.", by striking out the balance of the section and reinserting the language of article VII, section 20 of the 1908 constitution, which language reads as follows:

"When a vacancy occurs in the office of judge of any court of record, it shall be filled by appointment of the governor, and the person appointed shall hold the office until a successor is elected and qualified. When elected, such successor shall hold the office the residue of the unexpired term.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Ford and others. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: For those who are interested, you can find our explanation of the minority report in the journal in the lower left hand column of page 581. The effect of this amendment is to replace in the proposed constitution the language of present section 20 of article VII. It has just been read to you by the secretary. To read briefly from our reasons:

> The proponents of this minority report believe that the majority's recommended prohibition against the filling of vacancies by gubernatorial appointment would create a unique problem that could conceivably result in prolonged vacancies on the bench.
> The majority proposes that pending the occurrence of an election to fill a judicial vacancy, the vacancy could be temporarily filled by retired former circuit judges. An examination of the number and location throughout the state of retired judges available for this service casts strong doubt on the practical value of this method to meet the problem.

I might indicate that in the county of Wayne, I am informed that we have only 2 retired circuit judges who are still residents of the county, and both of them are well past 80 years of age.

It is apparent from many years of experience with the present system that judicial vacancies have been filled by the governors of this state on a careful and considerate basis.

I want to emphasize this. I don't think that we have had anyone appear before the judiciary committee who has criticized the quality of the appointments made by any governor of this state. I am sure that there are members of this convention who are not at all happy about the large number of appointments that were made during the past 10 years, but this is an unusual circumstance, and we should bear in mind that during the early '50s there came into being a mandatory retirement provision with respect to circuit judges that resulted in a large number of circuit judges retiring in a more or less simultaneous manner. In other words, during a very short period of time we had an unusually large number of judges retiring simply because this act came into effect. Now, since it is now in effect, and since many younger men have been put on the bench, it is not likely that we will have the large supply or relatively large supply of retired circuit judges in the future that we have had during the past 8 or 10 years. Some of the problems that have arisen with respect to retirement would indicate that the general cause for retirement during the past 10 years has actually been this compulsory age factor which came into effect, I am informed by Judge Dehnke to the best of his recollection, about 1952.

It is apparent to us that from the many years of experience with the present system, judicial vacancies have been filled carefully and that men of very high quality have been selected. We feel that this has been borne out of the frequency with which the people have chosen, regardless of the political affiliation of the judge before his appointment, to return the judges to the bench when they next come up for election, and this is something that you can't cut down on party lines, because this has been true of both Democratic and Republican appointments, whether they were appointing Democrats or Republicans to the bench. In the vast majority of cases the judges that have been appointed have met the approval of the bar and met the approval of the people and have been returned to the bench when they went before the people for reelection.

Now, some people would indicate that there are a lot of reasons for this percentage of people being returned after appointment in the first instance. I think that Tom Downs put his finger on the fact that those who have been advocating an appointive system all along want a method of determining whether you are going to get a chance to vote just in a straight popularity contest or get a chance to vote for someone who has had a short time on the bench and has been exposed to the judiciary to some extent so that people have an opportunity to appraise him in context with the position they are trying to elect him to or trying to prevent him from being elected to. We feel that the present system provides this additional feature, a desirable feature, in the elective process. We feel that the present system has produced a good judiciary and that statistics indicating that a large number of our judges reached the bench in the first instance by gubernatorial appointment and are retained there is evidence of the fact that good selections are made and that they have inspired confidence, and that the people do have confidence in the kind of people that have been selected.

The language of the present section 20 of article VII of the 1908 constitution is essentially the same language that was contained in the previous constitution of this state, and by tradition the governor has had the power and the authority to fill vacancies in courts of record when vacancies occur between elections until the next time that there was an election so that the people can ultimately make the selection. This tradition has served the state of Michigan very well over the years and, as I have indicated before, has produced a good judiciary. And I haven't yet heard a strong and compelling reason for abandoning it at this present time. No one has indicated to us the advantage to the judicial system of temporarily appointing people from outside of a county to come in perhaps a month or 2 months at a time and then someone else comes in for a month or 2 months, and you fill the vacancy for a year, a year and a half or 2 years by having a series of temporary appointments of nonresident judges who at great inconvenience to themselves come into a circuit and attempt to take care of the problem.

We feel that in the absence of some compelling reason for departing from this traditional method which has proven to be effective and worked to the best interests of the state of Michigan, we shouldn't abandon it for something that has nothing to recommend it except that it is different. This is truly a "change for the sake of change" proposal on the part of the majority of the committee, and there may be other reasons for wanting this in the constitution, but none of them have been stated on the floor thus far. I would like at this time to yield to one of my cosponsors on the minority report amendment, Mr. Harold Bledsoe.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford yields to Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I served on the judiciary committee when this question came up. I couldn't bring myself to any reason, nor with any suggestion made, in my judgment, to furnish any valid reason for bringing back the old judges. Frankly, when a judge has served his period to retirement, I think that it is almost like double jeopardy to resentence him to the rigors of hard and laborious work and life and dedication that he undertakes when he has served 35 to 40 years on the bench. I think it is unkind.

Of course they will come back and serve. It is just like an old fire horse that some of you know about if you have lived that long. When you retire an old fire horse, when that bell rings, if you don't hold it in the stable, if you just open the door, he will follow the wagon to the fire. It has become habit. And they are men of fine responsibility and men of delicate sensitivity, and of course they are not going to decline to serve a public that they love and that they have served so many years. Bringing back old judges to serve does not offer anything advantageous to the public or to the electorate. What does it do? This is simply a device. That is all it is. It is a device to do away with the so called temporary appointive system. That is all that it does. The electorate or the public doesn't get any benefit from it as against what they get from the appointive system, because it is a temporary appointive system.

When this matter came up and was argued before the committee, we lawyers thought — I want you to get that — it was unfair to the competing candidate who might run against an appointive representative of the appointing authority and that the fellow who didn't get the appointment would suffer a certain disadvantage because, they went on to say, the majority of the lawyers, once they were appointed, seemed to get reelected by the public. So, really, the tears that were shed down in the committee among the 20 some lawyers indicated that we were in sympathy with a lawyer who didn't get the appointment and who, because he didn't get it, had run to a certain disadvantage. So in order to help that lawyer out for the race that he had to run, the idea was that they would start off at a better advantage.

Now, with that I agree. That was the argument down there. So in order to keep that out, we said "We will let them get to the mark and all start at the same time." Now, that reason that was discussed among us lawyers around the table, as against the idea of the temporary appointment, would give the lawyer who got the appointment, after he had met the qualifications that made his appointment imminent, or temporarily, anyway, a chance to go through a period of trial and error. Now, who benefits from that? The public, not the lawyers. If the vacancy occurs for a period of a year or 2 years or less, we get a chance to see just what kind of judge that fellow is going to make. Who benefits from that? The public.

If it appears that he is going to be a good judge and that the appointing authority acted wisely in appointing him, if the public becomes so impressed after this period of trial and error, the public then has an investment in that appointment.

The lawyers begin to say around the courts — if you will pardon me for using this expression — "Gee, this fellow looks like he's going to make it; a pretty decent guy." The lawyers begin to speak about him, and immediately the rumor begins to get through the community. Who benefits from this? The public. And if he doesn't get this type of recommendation during that trial and error period, the word gets out, "Let's beat this guy. He isn't right." That gets down through the community too. And it isn't every judge who is appointed that gets reelected. Who benefits from that? The public. You get a chance to try.

I hate to use this illustration because it isn't a good comparison, but the bachelors spoke here about marriage the other day and said that you can never tell how a wife is going to work out until you actually marry her. I believe that was uttered here on the floor the other day. The same way with your judges. Let's not stop the trial period of marriage for the judge for that interim appointment, because it is the public who benefits. I believe that that interim period for the temporary appointment made by the governor gives the public a chance to look the judicial prospect over and, as a matter of fact, it gives the public a chance to see just what type of administrator or public faith and public confidence the public may expect from him.

I therefore feel that the proposed change of bringing the elder judges back and then suddenly putting in untried lawyers without any judicial experience or an opportunity to see what they might do temporarily during that interim period is certainly a benefit that the public ought to have if it were available to them, and if we don't do that, we are denying the public the benefit of the trial and error period where they will have an opportunity to see what kind of men they are going to elect for anywhere from 6 to 8 years. That is exactly what we are giving up when we bring back the older judge and setting men on the bench to be elected for the full term without having any opportunity of a trial and error period.

I am against the committee report that would recommend doing away with this procedure. I say that change for change's sake is unworthy in so important a thing as electing your judiciary.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair would state, looking about our sparsely settled chamber, that over the course of the last 2 weeks, he has empirically evolved what may come to be known as Van Dusen's law to the effect that in any unlocked chamber, the size of the audience tends to vary inversely with the length of the preceding speech. (laughter) Mr. Higgs.

MR. FORD. Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I don't want to foreclose Mr. Higgs, but I yielded to Mr. Bledsoe.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair is in error. You retain the floor, Mr. Ford. Do you have further presentation?

MR. FORD: There are other sponsors, and I would like to yield to them if they would like to add to it. Mr. Ostrow, I believe, is next.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I will only take one minute to point this out. The present system has worked well over the last 50 years. You look back over the quality and caliber of the judges that we have had for the last 50 years, and it has been a good workable system. Now, if you look at the possibilities for the next 50 years, if we obtain the same caliber and quality of judges that we have in the past, the people of the state of Michigan should be well satisfied. From my own viewpoint, the present system justifies itself if for no other reason than it enables a man like Raymond Starr to be appointed to the Michigan supreme court bench. I am sure there will be others like him appointed.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford, have you further presentation?

MR. FORD: I would like to yield to Mr. Garvin.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford yields to Mr. Garvin.

MR. GARVIN: Mr. Chairman and delegates, much has been said here, even since we have been on the judiciary committee, about the various persons throughout the United States, particularly Wisconsin, Minnesota, Illinois, New York, New Jersey and representatives from the judicature society appearing before this body, and there is one thing that you have to keep remembering: that regardless of the proposals of the committee, regardless of who proposes amendments, nobody has had complaints against the judiciary of the state of Michigan.

Now, it is nice to change to be changing — it is a great thing. That is the very reason we are here, I believe some think, to change the constitution, each and every word. In fact, in the judiciary, we took out the whole article and started from the beginning. This, regardless of the fact that it is admitted that we have a good judiciary in the state of Michigan.

The "why" of it is hard to say. When you go over the committee report reasons given by Mr. Lawrence, you can't find a reason. If you will look at your reasons for the committee proposal, you can't find a good reason excepting the governor appoints them. Is that a good reason to make a change? I submit that it is not, because the record over the past 50 years says that it is not. The record over the past 50 years practically, by proof, shows that article VII, section 20 has worked well and shall continue to work well.

You know, there is one thing we forget about when we are talking about just everybody running for a judicial office. You are faced with a situation of unknown persons, of name candidates, of popularity contests to go on the judiciary — perhaps someone who has been practicing law maybe 4 or 5 years; perhaps someone who has not practiced law at all; perhaps someone whose judicial temperament has not been tested or investigated by the governor or his aides or by whomever might be assigned that job.

I submit to you that the best way that you can get a good judge after proper investigation is by appointment by the governor, just as it has been. For the 40 years or 35 years prior to this convention, there hasn't been too much criticism about the way judges were appointed, and they got a good judicial system then.

I won't read it for you unless somebody requests it, but in the December Fortune magazine there is a very detailed study of courts throughout the United States. I was rather proud when I read that the other states are following the examples of Michigan, New Jersey and California. Only 3 states were mentioned as having the type of judiciary which is honored and respected throughout the United States. I submit to you that the constitution as it stands now has given us an unblemished judiciary. And just remember that appointees do get defeated. I have witnessed it myself and you, too, have witnessed it. They can be defeated.

It is not strictly an appointive system. It is an appointive system after there has been sufficient investigation of the proposed appointee, and then if the people don't like him, they can still defeat him. I submit let's not change to be changing. Let's take this good judiciary of the state of Michigan that has been mentioned over and over again without any complaints against it. I am against the committee proposal and I am for the minority report amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford, the Chair believes you still retain the floor.

MR. FORD: Also sponsoring the minority report is Miss McGowan. I would like to yield to her if she has anything to add.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss McGowan passes, Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Barthwell.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Barthwell passes.

MR. FORD: That concludes the presentation by the sponsors of the minority report.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will recognize Mr. Higgs. Mr. Higgs being absent from the chamber, the Chair will recognize Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, delegates, I am not fully prepared to answer the oratory with which I have been recently bombarded on this question, but I do feel perhaps that I have a few answers. And I rise in support of the committee report and in opposition to the minority amendment.

For 112 years the state of Michigan has indicated its preference for the elective system of judges. I think that the preliminary votes that have been taken in this convention show beyond question that that preference for electing judges continues down to this moment. But if you are going to have an elective system, whatever system you have, as a matter of fact, should be a fair system, and I believe the people want it to be a fair system.

Now, I don't know that these opinions were expressed in the minority report or in the reasons for the suggested change, but they are reasons for my action in supporting the majority report. I feel that the present system which the minority, Mr. Ford and his associates, want to retain has worked in an unfair way. In the first place, a gubernatorial appointee to any judicial office is invariably a candidate to succeed himself at the next election. And I don't know what the experience of others may have been, but my experience has been that that appointee spends most of his time between the appointment and the next election in campaigning for himself rather than in the performance of his judicial duties. In other words, it puts the appointee in the position where he conducts his campaign at public expense while his opponents have to dig down into their own pockets. Another thing it does — and I believe that this violates the principles of fairness — I feel that when there are any candidates for public office, whatever those offices may be, those candidates should be on an equal basis. They should start from scratch. If you are going to have an elective system, let the people decide upon those candidates who do start from scratch. Now, the appointee, by virtue of the very fact that he is an appointee, has an advantage over his opposition. The very fact of incumbency gives the incumbent that advantage. And then you add to that what we have had in the past and which I presume it is the intention of my fellow committeeman Ford and his associates to return. We have had in the past the matter of the incumbency designation being granted to the appointee.

Now, my recollection is that before our committee there appeared the no less respected witness than Justice George Edwards, who gave the conservative estimate that the incubency label that went along with an appointee gave an initial advantage to the appointee of about 25 per cent in the forthcoming election, and if it gave the appointee an advantage of 25 per cent, it gave the opposition a disadvantage of 25 per cent. And, delegates of this convention, I don't feel that in any fair American contest it is fair to start one of the contenders off with hobbles of 25 per cent around his ankles.

Now, let's take something else. Let's take the matter of time. The appointee may have — and usually does have — whether that appointee be circuit judge or supreme court justice or probate judge, months and maybe time running over and above a year or more in which to campaign. Under the convention system, as it has applied to the supreme court, the nominee of the opposing party, if the judicial election is in November, has 66 days in which to organize his campaign, to raise his money, to get into 83 counties of this state. And if the election to fill the vacancy happens to come in the April election, the nominee of the opposite party has 37 days, while his opponent, the appointee, has been out beating the bushes for months and months and months and months. That, again I say to the delegates here, is not a fair election. It is a loaded election.

I think the majority proposal here providing for interim appointments, if they so desire, by the supreme court is a big step in inaugurating a truly elective system of judicial officers in Michigan. Now, it isn't mandatory. The supreme court, at least so far as circuit courts and probate courts are concerned, may still, through their court administrator, assign judges from other districts to take care of this vacancy. This is only a stopgap system to assure that the basic principles of fairness and honesty in the election of judicial officers are preserved and perpetuated and increased and enhanced in Michigan. Delegates, I strongly oppose the minority report amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. Chairman, perhaps this would be in the nature of a personal report or a personal privilege communication. The papers have carried the story that in the judicial committee, when they came to a vote on an appointive system of supreme court justices, I stood alone, and I wonder where all these people who are now so strenuously arguing the merits of the appointive system were back then.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Krolikowski.

MR. KROLIKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I think that the weakness of the majority report lies in the fact that it fails to center responsibility. No problems arise when an appointee performs nobly while in office. What happens, however, if the appointed judge is guilty of gross misconduct while in office? Whom do we blame? Do we blame justice A, B, C, D, E or through I? Or can we look more properly to the governor who appointed him?

Secondly, once we have ascertained what justice or group of justices made this gross error, must we wait 8 or 10 years to properly make them account for this error, or can we more readily look to the govenor who is required to face the public every 2 or 4 years? I believe that the failure to center responsibility is the weakness of the majority position.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I would like to address a couple of questions to Mr. Ford, if I may.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. G. E. BROWN: First of all, Mr. Ford, I would like to ask if you consider this to be an elective system with appointment to fill vacancies in connection with section e of the committee proposal which is coming up.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I think it is just as elective as any other office that is filled either by the governor or the board of supervisors, the supreme court or anybody else. All you are doing is begging the question, Mr. Brown, when you say is it more elective if the governor appoints him than if the supreme court appoints him.

MR. G. E. BROWN: I expected a yes or no answer but I —

MR. FORD: You can't get a yes or no answer to a question like that.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, a further question to Mr. Ford. How many members of the present supreme court were elected to that office, Mr. Ford?

MR. FORD: They have all been elected except Mr. Otis Smith, as I understand it.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Originally to the office.

MR. FORD: You mean how many were appointed in the first instance?

MR. G. E. BROWN: Yes, sir.

MR. FORD: I think Mr. Kelly ran originally. I don't know how Mr. Dethmers got there the first time. Mr. Hutchinson said Mr. Dethmers was appointed in the first instance. I guess 3 of the Democrats and 2 of the Republicans were appointed in the first instance.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, a further question of Mr. Ford. Do you agree with the suggestion that was made by Judge Leibrand to the effect that the incumbency label amounts to maybe a 25 per cent advantage in running at a future date or after an appointive term?

MR. FORD: I didn't want to interrupt Judge Leibrand while he was trying to becloud this section by arguing the next one that comes up in Committee Proposal 96, but I don't think that that question or Judge Leibrand's comments in that regard are germane to the section we are here discussing.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Ford, I would —

MR. FORD: I will answer that and debate it with you, Garry, when we get to the section that covers the question of incumbency designation.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I'm sorry. I am trying to stick to the present amendment that is under consideration here, but I think it is essential that we consider what happens when we apply a proposal such as this for the filling of vacancies.

MR. FORD: If you look at Committee Proposal 96, section e, you will see that the committee covers the question of the incumbency designation very clearly and distinctly as a separate proposition from the one here presented.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Brown?

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Ford, I was particularly interested in the tying of these 2 together due to the fact that I checked with the secretary and I don't see that you have an amendment on file to do away with section e to provide for elimination of the incumbency label.

MR. FORD: We will worry about section e when we get to it, Mr. Brown.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Brown, the Chair will have to ask you to confine your questions to the section under discussion.

MR. G. E. BROWN: One further question, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Ford, do you believe that the amendment which you propose lends itself more to an independent judiciary or less to an independent judiciary, and more to a partisan affiliation of the judiciary or less to it?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I think that the proposal is consistent with a system that has produced an independent and a very good judiciary for Michigan.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: I assume then that your answer is that the present amendment does lend itself more to an independent judiciary. Is that your answer?

MR. FORD: I think the present amendment is superior in all respects to the committee proposal. (laughter)

MR. G. E. BROWN: You prefer not to answer then; is that correct?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Brown, the Chair would appreciate it if you would conduct your cross examination through the Chair. (laughter)

MR. G. E. BROWN: I have no further questions, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: I also was going to ask a question of Judge Leibrand, but I don't intend to cross examine the judge.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Perhaps this again should be saved for section e, but, Judge Leibrand, would you favor the complete elimination of any designation regardless of whether it is at the appointment or subsequent elections? It seems to me this way we would really have a competitive system.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: I am not too set on the question, but I believe that I would go along with a designation after a judge has once won election in his own right. I would not favor it when such honors as he has attained have been forced upon him or given to him by others.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Binkowski. The Chair will note, as he did in the case of the colloquy between Messrs. Brown and Ford —

MR. BINKOWSKI: I have no further questions of Judge Leibrand, Mr. Chairman. Thank you, Judge. The only point that I would like to make is that it seems to me that this particular advantage of 25 per cent is probably increased to 50 per cent at later dates as long as he has the incumbency designation, so I don't know if that is a particularly valid argument. As a young attorney, I certainly would be interested in this designation aspect, though.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will ask the delegates to confine their discussion, if possible, to the question immediately at hand, which is the amendment offered by Mr. Ford and others. Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak in favor of the minority report and the amendment. First of all, I would like to discuss the comment made by one of the members of the convention who said that the present system works in an unfair way. If it works in an unfair way, I would oppose it. Therefore, it is an important thing to discuss. But I note in looking up the legislative history of this particular provision that it is not a new thing. I had the idea when the statement was made that it must be a new thing that had just been tried out and has not been very good, has worked in an unfair way. But in looking up the complete legislative history, I find that this is not a new thing. As far as I can make out, it was adopted in the 1850 constitution. Now, if I am correct about that, we have had it for about 110 years. We have had an entire constitutional convention in the meantime and a great many constitutional amendments in the meantime, and therefore it occurs to me if it had been actually unfair, somewhere along the line something would have been noticed about it during that period. And I will not ask any specific delegate a question, but I will ask this rhetorical question: if this system is unfair, when did it start to become unfair?

Now, the reason I ask that question is that I have examined a number of subjects in connection with the convention, and I found out that there have been many systems in effect for long periods of time, whether they had to do with the judicial or the executive or the legislature, that have been in effect for a long time, maybe 100 or 150 years such as this one, 100 years, and they have always been considered to be great. One constitutional convention after another has accepted them. Never has there been any thought of an amendment in any of these cases. They have worked great. But at some stage of the game, all of a sudden we hear from the Republicans — and I will say that that is the case — that the system is, all of a sudden, unfair. It is not working right. Not only that; we should turn it around and make it work in the opposite direction.

Now, when these charges are made that a system which has been in effect for a long time should be replaced because it is unfair, I think we have a right to know exactly when it became unfair, what it was that changed that made it unfair. The only unfairness that has been pointed out that I know of by a delegate was that that the contestants don't start from scratch. It seems to me I don't really give a damn whether the contestants start from scratch or not. I didn't think this was a horse race. I apologize for that word "scratch" or whatever the word was I said. (laughter) I don't care whether the contestants start from scratch because this is not a horse race. It isn't correct to take the view that we should get those 2 candidates on the mark and start them going at the same time and that that is the way we should elect our judges — who can run the fastest is the best judge. For example, we do not put handicaps on them. The first thing we do — and we have done it today — is to say they must be lawyers. There is a handicap. And we had a lot of trouble with this. Some say they shouldn't be lawyers. There is an unfair advantage to lawyers. But we also said when we adopted that provision — to the extent that we did — that that is not the only qualification for being a judge, and all of us have agreed that is one qualification. Maybe there are others. Everyone thinks there are others. And maybe somebody might consider what those other qualifications are and weigh them in connection with a certain person.

Now, that is what happens when there is an appointive system. And I say perfectly frankly that our system is basically an appointive system, that it is basically that. I don't think we should kid around. That is basically what it is. Most of the judges originally get on the bench by appointment. I would have no objection if every one of them got on by appointment. I think it would be better, in fact, than to have a horse race starting from scratch. I would like to make sure that they are lawyers and that somebody has looked them over to find out if they are a little bit more than just lawyers. Now, that somebody under the present system is the governor. The governor is elected by all the people. He is not responsive just to 1 or 2 or 3 or a committee of 6; he is responsive to all the people. If somebody has to screen him, the system that we have had for 100 years, as I say, has said, let it be a man who is representative of all of the people. Let it be the man who is governor. Now, that is a system that we had in the past. And we have had the system in addition that the term for which he can select is a short term because it is a vacancy only, and therefore in the end there will be advice and consent of the people. I will recall to you that one of the delegates to the convention said he was in favor of appointment by the governor provided there was advice and consent of the people, and I suggested at that time the way to have advice and consent of the people is to have a short term appointment followed by an election. Now that is exactly what you really do have. You have it. And you have had it for 110 years.

Someone else raised the question, where were we all when the appointive systems were discussed. How come all of a sudden we are in favor of appointments, and before this, when the appointive systems came up on the floor or wherever it was, we were against it. Now, I can't speak for everybody, but I will call to your attention that I did take the floor over and over again and stated that I did favor an appointive system. I didn't say that was the only way, and I don't think it is the only way, but it is a fair system. It is fair provided there is advice and consent of the people; in other words, provided there is a short term, such as an unexpired term, and then there is advice and consent of the people. Therefore, it seems to me that the system that we have has worked for a long time, and it appears to me that if somebody says that it is now unfair, it is their duty to state when it became unfair and what it is that is unfair about it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Well, Mr. Chairman, I had originally intended to speak on this question, but I think we have reached a point, after listening to all the lawyers, that I will now not speak on the question and wait until later. It just reminds me, though, of a statement that someone made here the other day about lawyers; that most of them start out life giving $500 worth of advice for $5, and they end up giving $5 worth for $500, and I think we have about reached that point, and maybe we can vote pretty soon.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: We may vote, Mr. Marshall, after we have heard from Messrs. Downs, McAllister, Perras and Wanger — the Chair hopes. (laughter) Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: With that introduction from my good friend, Delegate Marshall, I hesitate to speak as long as I had planned to. (laughter) I think, very briefly, it has been pointed out by Delegates Ostrow, Garvin and others that our present system has worked. It has worked not only for 50 years, but back from 1850. And being one who usually is in the role of advocating change, I say that the burden is on those who advocate change, and I think the burden is 3 fold: first, to show what is wrong with the status quo; second, to show a preferable method; and third, to show there is a reasonable chance that the cure is not worse than the disease. I charge that none of those statements has been made to advocate a change from what we now have.

I think it is no accident that our Michigan judiciary, regardless of what person is in the office of governor, has been distinguished for integrity. I think nobody here has shown that any court has been superior to our Michigan courts, not only in integrity but in the administration of justice, whether it is the juvenile court of Wayne county or the time lag of circuit court hearings; the record is one that is enviable. Therefore, I would urge us to be very cautious in making a change.

I do agree with our distinguished circuit court Judge Leibrand that the appointive system — and we have a combination of appointive and elective — does give the individual who is appointed an advantage. But more important than that is the effect on the public at large, and the public does have a chance to review what the person has done, and does have a chance to see that he hasn't too much of an advantage because running against him is not just his record but a live candidate who has been nominated in one way or another to run against that position. I think the actual result has been one that we should be proud of in our judicial system, and I do not think that those who advocate change have supported their burden of proof of showing the need for that change. I therefore urge support of the minority report amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. McAllister.

MR. McALLISTER: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I have heard quite a few speaking here in behalf of the minority report amendment. It seems that I have heard the majority of those same gentlemen talk against the appointment of state officials. I am not in favor of the appointing of judges by committees, but in this instance I have changed my view because the committee of the whole in the entire community where the judge is to be elected will vote on the selection of their judge. And in conclusion I read a statement from the Declaration of Principles released by the Democratic delegates on February 17, which reads as follows:

> . . . that the people should elect those who exercise a judicial power in this state. Each judge on the supreme court should be elected by all the people of the state voting on a statewide basis.

So I say that on the viewpoint expressed by the Democratic delegates in their statement of principles, we should reject the minority report amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Perras. Mr. Perras passes. Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I want to say briefly that the implications which have been raised that a purpose behind the majority report is one of a partisan nature is without foundation in fact. It has been said we have had the present system such as is advocated by the minority report amendment for filling vacancies for over 100 years, that nothing has changed, and that, therefore, there must be some partisan consideration if we want to change the system. That is incorrect. I think it is well known that the very important consideration of the incumbency label on the ballot did not appear on the political scene in Michigan until about 20 or 25 years ago.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I want to get this issue straightened out, at least in my own mind, as to what this is and what this isn't. This isn't a question of an incumbency designation, nor is this the question of the election of the judges, and I think both of these issues have been raised to becloud the real thing here which is being dealt with, which is, namely, the filling of vacancies. Now, I don't know how anybody could possibly advance the idea that this position is arrived at as a result of some party considerations now. I don't know how anybody could arrive at this same position in 1908 or in 1850. And in supporting this report, I do so with the full realization that I am advocating a conservative position — a basically nineteenth century conservative position that the person who shall fill vacancies shall be the person who is elected by the people of the state.

Now, we have not as yet made the determination as to how the supereme court shall be composed, but we have had a long tradition not just in the state of Michigan but in all the states in this country. We have had a tradition that goes back to the colonial days that the governor fills the vacancies that are left. We have already acknowledged this position with regard to the filling of vacancies that may occur in the educational boards. We have already acknowledged that the governor shall fill these vacancies. I fail to see where this represents any great departure from that tradition which we have already advocated.

I urge the delegates here once again to adhere to the conservative principles which many of them profess and to recognize and realize that this position is not a partisian position; it is one which the Republican party took a very strong position on in 1908. It is a position which has worked in Michigan for a longer period of time than anything else. It is a position which has overall served to the best interests of the state. It is not a position which is arrived at all of a sudden. It is one which we ought to look at and give very careful consideration to. I urge the support of this traditional position.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I wasn't going to get up at all on this particular question until I heard partisan politics brought into this. (laughter) I know, I would laugh too, and you have a right to laugh. But it has been brought up and considerably, as you know.

You know, it is rather strange that one of the things that you have been talking about isn't even up there on the wall, and that is this incumbency designation. It isn't so many years ago that the Republican party — the bar association, which was predominantly Republican — and don't tell me it wasn't so because I was a member of your party for 34 long years. And you also got the newspapers to go along with you, and you sold a gullible public —

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Madar, the Chair trusts you will return to the subject in due course.

MR. MADAR: I am through with that particular portion of it, so now I will go back to this particular amendment. Frankly, I think that you younger attorneys who I have overheard speak out in the corridor have been led down the wrong path. You are now showing very little faith in the candidate whom you have for governor, and you are afraid you won't get an appointment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, perhaps we can try to consider this thing and get all of the points wrapped up and get a vote on it. First of all, let's consider that if you believe in a philosophy of an elected judiciary, then section d is consistent with that particular philosophy. If you wish to elect judges, then let's be able to elect all of the judges. We have no control on the appointment. We have had no control over the appointments. And if the judge is to serve a particular area, then best we have a special election, as we do to fill the office of representative or state senator or any other office that becomes vacant. This, in effect, would eliminate the old cliche that a judge in this state is a lawyer who happened to know a governor, and in that, the essence of this particular proposal lies.

And I will agree that in section e we have been consistent. A majority of the committee has limited the incumbency designation to an elected incumbent justice or judge, and we submit that we have been consistent in this regard. Now, it seems that the minority is willing to request a screening when it comes to filling a vacancy, but there is no screening when we are adding additional judges. When judges retire at the end of their term and someone must be picked in their place, we hear no advocacy of screening or of going over the particular candidate to make sure that the best man is found. And I, too, do not personally favor an appointed judiciary

The essence of this particular proposal, as Mr. Everett has said, is the filling of vacancy by election. The use of retired judges on a temporary basis is basically of a secondary nature. I might state that I have the statistics, and they were obtained from the judges retirement office. Mr. Erickson was high. There are approximately 21 right now. They range in age from 70 to the considerable age of 85 or 90, but the bulk of them are in the middle 70s as are the retired judges in this particular convention.

Mr. Wanger pointed out that in 1850 and 1908, we did not have nonpartisan elections and we did not have any type of designation upon the ballot, so when they ran upon a party, there was a particular way in which the particular candidates running to fill a vacancy could be selected. I submit to you that in essence what we are talking about right now is the probate court and the circuit court, since we have not yet determined our supreme court — and if there is any change in that, we will probably have to come back here and amend this section to make it conform, if that is needed.

I submit to you that if you believe in an elected judiciary and not one that is half elected and half appointive — and there is no appointive system which operates in this country that has the unrestricted control that we have here in Michigan where there is simply a selection by one man — then I submit that this proposal is a valid consideration, one that is good; and that if it is good to elect your judges in the beginning, then it is good that the vacancy in that particular office likewise be filled by the election of the people in the circuit or the district or the county which may be involved. Therefore, I would urge the defeat of the amendment and the acceptance of the majority report.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Ford and others pursuant to their minority report. Does any delegate desire to hear the amendment read again? If not, those in favor of the amendment will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: A division is requested. Is the demand supported? It is supported. Those in favor of the amendment offered by Mr. Ford and others pursuant to their minority report will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Ford on behalf of the minority, the yeas are 38; the nays are 78.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to section d?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Wanger offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 8, after "retired" by inserting "or others"; and in line 10, after "qualified" by changing the period to a semicolon and inserting "but no such appointee shall be eligible to be a candidate for election to any public office for 4 years after his incumbency.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger to section d of Committee Proposal 96. The Chair will recognize Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, while not changing the basic intent of the committee report, in my opinion, this does fill a need which the committee report does not provide for.

The chairman of the committee has just pointed out that there are about 20 or 21 retired judges available to fill vacancies. Let us remember that this section applies to vacancies not only on the supreme court in Lansing but in any court of record in the entire state.

The seats of these courts where the temporary appointees would have to preside daily may be from Monroe county in the southern part of the state all the way to the Keweenaw peninsula. It may be possible that no retired judge will be available to sit daily in the particular district in which the vacancy occurs. Therefore, my first change would be to add the words "or others" after the word "retired" so that the sentence would read:

> The supreme court is empowered to authorize persons who have served as judges and have voluntarily retired, or others, to perform judicial duties for the limited period of time from the occurrence of the vacancy until the successor is elected and qualified.

Therefore, the court could appoint and recognize a distinguished senior member of the bar to fill the vacancy in the alternative to a retired judge. The last sentence which I have added is to guarantee that such appointee will not be able to use this appointment as a stepping stone to future political activity.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Very briefly, I would like to ask Mr. Wanger if he honestly believes that any lawyer worth his salt would be willing to comply with the Canons of Ethics of our profession and of the judiciary, giving up entirely his practice of law to serve for a period of 6 months or perhaps a year with no hope of continuing in that office.

MR. WANGER: Absolutely. I think the answer is yes. There would be many particularly distinguished —

MR. FORD: I said any lawyer worth his salt. By that I meant somebody with a law practice that would have to make a substantial sacrifice to take the job in the first place.

MR. WANGER: Yes, I think very definitely. I think some lawyers would view it as an honor to fill such an appointment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: I am opposed to the Wanger amendment because it follows in the same line of argument that Judge Leibrand stated when the same issues came up in our committee. It appears that the lawyers want to run this thing to suit themselves. They don't seem to have any thought of what this thing means to the public, and I think we ought to think of that. I am therefore opposed to it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger to section d of Committee Proposal 96. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, partially for the reasons advanced by Mr. Ford, also for the fact that most of these vacancies will be of a very short duration, probably as long a vacancy as we have in the elective office of some representative or senator, I think that this present proposal would be too restrictive and go too far. I therefore would oppose the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I think we have primarily 2 distinct thoughts here. I wonder if we could divide the question.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Mahinske requests the question be divided. It will be divided. Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: This is the first time that I have heard objection made to a proposition on the basis that it would be too restrictive and at the same time go too far. The amendment quite clearly, in my opinion, Mr. Chairman, should not be divided, because to divide it would entirely separate my intent in presenting it in the first place.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: That may be the case, Mr. Wanger, but under the rules any delegate is entitled to have the question divided if the 2 portions comprehend separate propositions, which, in the opinion of the Chair, is the case.

MR. WANGER: I agree that they may so comprehend, and I would like to ask the Chair then if we are considering adding the words "or others" only at this time?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The first question to be put will be the insertion of the words "or others" after "retired" in line 8.

MR. WANGER: I want to make the posture of this situation very clear. If you will all look at the amendment, I urge you to vote yes upon both of these, but in no event to vote yes on number 1 and then no on number 2.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger. Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask a question of Delegate Wanger.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer, Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: What is your reason for wanting to stop a man who has been appointed to this judgeship from running for 4 years after? What is your reasoning for that?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: My reason for that is that I think there is always a temptation when vacancies in this type of office are to be filled to fill them with an eye to the political future of the appointee. I think this is particularly bad when it would apply to the judiciary, who should be, as far as possible, independent from such considerations. It is clear, of course, that no retired judge is going to consider himself to have a political future. It is also, however, clear that there may be cases when it is impossible to find a retired judge who is available for the vacancy. I think, therefore, that the addition of this language would make it possible for the supreme court to appoint a distinguished senior member of the bar when he would be available rather than a retired circuit judge, and that this would be all to the good, because it would make it possible to fill a vacancy until the next election, which vacancy might otherwise have to remain without being filled if the amendment was not adopted.

MR. PERRAS: Another question, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: Then, in other words, you feel that, as you told Delegate Ford, a person taking this appointive position should do it strictly for the honor that is in it?

MR. WANGER: No, not strictly for the honor that is in it.

MR. PERRAS: What if a person was appointed who never did have any aspirations to get into politics, but after he was in it—got his feet in the trough—he liked it? (laughter)

MR. WANGER: Well, in that case, that is exactly what I am trying to prevent, you see, by adding the second line.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hatch.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if it would be in order to move that the committee consider the second portion of the amendment first.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: It would be in order, Mr. Hatch.

MR. HATCH: I so move.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hatch moves that the second portion of the amendment be considered first. Those in favor of the motion made by Mr. Hatch will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The question is upon the second portion of Mr. Wanger's amendment, which the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment reads:

1. Amend page 1, line 10, after "qualified" by changing the period to a semicolon and inserting "but no such appointee shall be eligible to be a candidate for election to any public office for 4 years after his incumbency.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on Mr. Wanger's amendment as so put. Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would like to direct a question to Mr. Wanger through the Chair—

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. MAHINSKE: —and ask him to define what he means by "any public office."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, I do not recollect the context in which I used that term, and if Mr. Mahinske would refresh my recollection, I might be able to answer him.

MR. MAHINSKE: In your amendment on the wall up there in front of you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: "But no such appointee shall be eligible to be a candidate for election to any public office."

MR. WANGER: I think the term speaks for itself.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, I think it may be saying a little more than you intend it to say, then.

MR. WANGER: In what respect?

MR. MAHINSKE: Do you consider "any public office" any elected position?

MR. WANGER: Yes.

MR. MAHINSKE: Would this include precinct delegate?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I do not know legally whether it includes precinct delegate or not, but if it does include precinct delegate, that would not affect my support of my amendment in any way.

MR. MAHINSKE: Then your intent would be that this person should not for 4 years run for any office, on your own interpretation here, from precinct delegate up to possibly—I am assuming you are talking about state offices—governor of the state.

MR. WANGER: Yes, I think that is correct.

MR. MAHINSKE: And could include congressman or U. S. senator.

MR. WANGER: Yes, indeed.

MR. MAHINSKE: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the second portion of Mr. Wanger's amendment. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I withdraw the first half of my amendment. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The balance of Mr. Wanger's amendment is withdrawn.

MR. MAHINSKE: Point of order, Mr. Chairman. This was offered initially as one amendment. It was divided. I don't feel that it is 2 amendments. It is the property of the committee at this time.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will consult the secretary. (laughter) The secretary advises that the withdrawal of the amendment is in order, Mr. Mahinske, and it is withdrawn. Are there further amendments to section d?

SECRETARY CHASE: None on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If not, it will pass.

Section d is passed. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, section d having passed, I would move the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof moves the committee do now rise. Those in favor of the motion will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The committee will rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Van Dusen

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration one proposal, of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 96, A proposal pertaining to general and special provisions relative to the courts of the state; considered several amendments thereto, and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Kelsey.

MR. KELSEY: Mr. President, if I am in order, I would at this time like to move to reconsider amendment 3 to Committee Proposal 94.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Kelsey, may we announce one request before you make that motion? Thank you.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mrs. Hatcher had previously filed with the secretary a request to be excused from the balance of this afternoon's session.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The request will be granted. Now, Mr. Kelsey, your motion, please.

MR. KELSEY: Mr. President, I move that we reconsider amendment 3 to Committee Proposal 94 which was taken up yesterday.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Kelsey that reconsideration be given. Mr. Chase.

SECRETARY CHASE: Reconsider the vote by which amendment 3 from the committee of the whole to Committee Proposal 94 was agreed to on yesterday.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Kelsey. Mr. Marshall.

MR. KELSEY: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Kelsey.

MR. KELSEY: At this time I would like to change my name to Wanger and withdraw my motion. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: The motion is withdrawn. Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President, I would just like to make a parliamentary inquiry. I am not too sharp on parliamentary procedure and we have gotten some rather sharp rulings the last couple of days here on 1 or 2 occasions rather arbitrarily. If an amendment is offered and someone moves that the question be divided, that does not make it 2 amendments. Then you commence to vote on the amendment. Is it permissive—and what rule governs it—to permit the withdrawal of it after you have taken a vote on one portion of it after it has been divided? Now, I could be completely and totally in error, but in my limited experience with parliamentary procedure, I don't recall any rule that permits that.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase, do you want to answer the question, or do you want to tell me and I will answer it? (laughter) I think it would be clearer if Mr. Chase answers the question.

SECRETARY CHASE: Frankly, Mr. Marshall, I can't say that I can put my finger on the particular authority for this. It would seem to the secretary, however, that since the amendment that was offered was in 2 separate parts and was merely presented as a composite amendment and under the rule a request was made that the amendment be divided, that by that process it became, in effect, 2 amendments. Also under our rules, the offerer of any amendment, before it is voted upon, has the right to withdraw it.

MR. MARSHALL: All right. But it had been voted upon though. That is the point. May I read rule 46?

> After a motion has been stated by the president or read by the secretary, it shall be deemed to be in the possession of the convention, but may be withdrawn at any time before being amended or put to a vote.

And my point that I raise—and again I am not trying to make too big an issue but I want to get this straight because it can happen again—the question was divided and a vote was taken. Therefore I think, Mr. President and Mr. Secretary, that it was illegal to permit Mr. Wanger to withdraw the other one after you had taken the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: Well, the point of the matter is that it was not a motion to divide; it was a right to divide under the rule. That having been done, in the opinion of the secretary—

MR. MARSHALL: I won't take anymore time of the convention. I will discuss it with you. I won't invite you outside, like I did Mr. Van Dusen, to discuss it, because some people get the wrong impression when I do that. (laughter) I will talk to you in your office and see if we can't come to an understanding.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you, Mr. Marshall.

Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The meeting of the committee on administration which was scheduled tomorrow is canceled.

We have the following requests for leave of absence: Mr. DeVries called and asked to be excused from tomorrow's session; Father Dade requests leave from the session of Monday and Tuesday morning, March 13; Mr. Stamm asks to be excused from the tomorrow morning session; Mr. Durst requests to be excused from the session of tomorrow, Thursday; Mr. Bonisteel requests to be excused from Thursday's session to attend a meeting previously scheduled; Mr. McCauley asks to be excused from the session of Friday and Monday to attend meetings of the board of supervisors and to fulfill a speaking engagement; Mr. Yeager wishes to be excused from the session of next Monday; and Mr. Suzore wishes to be excused from the session of tomorrow.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they are excused.

Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I would like to make a parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President. Originally I understood that if we were to have another opportunity to consider the matter that Mr. Kelsey made his motion on, we would not be able to do it on second reading because an amendment to that effect had been voted down in the convention yesterday. Unless we made a motion to reconsider at this time, we couldn't consider it at all. And we based this or predicated it upon the answer given by the Chair to a question that was asked from the other side of the room yesterday in this regard.

However, since that time, Senator Hutchinson has indicated that his view is that since what we were actually voting on yesterday in the convention was a question of concurring in the recommendation of the committee of the whole, that this would not preclude us on second reading from offering the minority report, which is amendment 3 of the committee of the whole yesterday, as an amendment on the floor of the convention, and we would like to be assured that this is true before leaving our last opportunity here to bring the matter up.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Hutchinson, would you care to comment, seeing that you have been involved in this?

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, I think that the Chair correctly ruled yesterday that when, after the committee has arisen, an amendment is offered to a proposal and the convention votes it down, that then the convention is on record as having passed upon that matter, and that the same amendment offered on second reading could be ruled out of order.

However, my recollection is, with regard to the matter that Mr. Ford is now involved in, that here was an amendment made to the proposal in the committee of the whole, and when the committee of the whole did arise, the question was upon concurring in the amendments made by the committee of the whole. The convention itself was then simply concurring at that point, and there had not been an independent offering on the convention floor of an amendment. So it seemed to me the 2 situations were different, and I suggested that possibility to Mr. Ford.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Our parliamentarian, Mr. Hutchinson, does agree with your interpretation as you gave it. Mr. Chase, that was the situation as it occurred, was it not?

SECRETARY CHASE: It was, yes, sir.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Under that interpretation, would you say then that Mr. Ford may present his amendment on second reading?

SECRETARY CHASE: I would agree.

PRESIDENT NISBET: That will be the ruling of the Chair then, Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you, Mr. Hutchinson, for straightening us out.

One other announcement.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mrs. Conklin has sent her committee picture around for autographs. She would like to be sure it gets back to her desk. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Perlich.

MR. PERLICH: I move we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. We are adjourned until tomorrow morning at 9:30.

[Whereupon, at 5:00 o'clock p.m., Wednesday, March 7, 1962, the convention adjourned until 9:30 o'clock a.m., Thursday, March 8, 1962.]

NINETY-FIFTH DAY

Thursday, March 8, 1962, 9:30 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

I am sorry that our minister has not arrived this morning. Will you please rise. We will have the invocation.

We thank Thee, our kind and gracious heavenly Father, for the opportunity that is ours to make a contribution to the welfare of our state and the welfare of its citizens. Give us guidance and strength and courage to do that which is best for us all. May we use good judgment and kind consideration in all of our dealings with each other. We ask this in Christ's name. Amen.

The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present please vote aye. Have you all registered your presence? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the attendance.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave: Messrs. Kelsey and Liberato, temporarily, from today's session; and Mrs. Hatcher, indefinitely, commencing today, for business reasons.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the requests will be granted. They are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Bonisteel, DeVries, Durst, J. A. Hannah, Hatch, Mrs. Hatcher, Messrs. Kelsey, Liberato, Murphy, Pellow, Perras, Stamm, Suzore and Tweedie.

Absent without leave: Mr. Marshall.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, Mr. Marshall is excused.

[During the proceedings the following delegates entered the chamber and took their seats: Messrs. DeVries, Durst, Kelsey, Liberato, Marshall and Stamm.]

The Chair recognizes Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, a matter of privilege. I would like to ask Mr. Madar not to jump out of his seat on a point of order until I finish. (laughter)

I note in the morning paper that the governor of this state has been slightly critical of one of the political parties represented in this convention. It is perfectly apparent that the governor does not read his Detroit papers with sufficient care and understanding. If he did, he would know that when anything is not done in this convention that ought to be done, or when anything is done that ought to be done, or when anything is done that ought not to be done, the blame belongs to the "courthouse gang." We don't want the Republican party or any other party, nor any governor, trying to crowd us out of our place in the sun. (laughter) I would greatly appreciate it if Mr. Ford or some other representative of the governor's party would so inform him, so that he shall not make this error again. (laughter and applause)

see also p. 1478

PRESIDENT NISBET: It is my understanding, Mr. Brake, that the "courthouse gang" was officially installed yesterday. (laughter)

Report of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: No committee reports, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications.

SECRETARY CHASE: None:

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: No resolutions on file.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. President, yesterday I had the honor of presenting one of the members—and perhaps the founding member—of the "courthouse gang" with his badge of office, and if he keeps being mean to our Johnny, we're going to take it back. (laughter and applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen, you are off to a good start this morning. (laughter)

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering matters on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Van Dusen.

[Whereupon, Mr. Van Dusen assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The committee will be in order. When we concluded our business yesterday, we were considering Committee Proposal 96, A proposal pertaining to general and special provisions relative to the courts of the state. We had gone down through section d. The matter before the committee at this point is section e of Committee Proposal 96, which the secretary will read.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 96, see above, page 1501.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section e.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: For an explanation of the section, the Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee on judicial branch, Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, for an explanation of this particular section, I should like to yield to the delegate from Wayne, Mr. Cudlip.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof yields to Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I, like the rest of you, have been inured with the judiciary. Not long ago I was reading an article in the American Bar Journal. Justice Whittaker of the United States supreme court, as you know, is a Kansas City gentleman, and he spoke before the American bar in St. Louis last summer. The subject of his address was reminiscences. He told about sitting in the supreme court chamber waiting his turn to argue a case, and one of his learned brothers was ahead of him. This lawyer kept quoting Judge Tompkins, Judge Tompkins. Finally one of the learned justices leaned over and said, "Sir, who is this Judge Tompkins?" "Oh," he said, "he's the justice of the peace up in my end of the state." (laughter) The learned justice said, "Now we've had enough of those rulings and decisions of Judge Tompkins, but you may proceed." He said, "You know, Your Honor, it's funny you mention that, because that's what he says about your court." (laughter)

Section e of Committee Proposal 96 is reported in the journal on page 474. We are talking now, of course, about elections of justices and judges. Essentially all that was done there was to provide that there be printed upon the ballot under the name of each elected justice or judge the designation of that office. That is the incumbency provision. The change is that the person who uses the word "incumbent" on the ballot must have earned his office, must have been elected. Today any judge or justice may use it, appointed or elected. Some of my lawyer friends say if you want to get your son on the Supreme Court of Michigan, you should call him "Incumbent" at birth. (laughter)

The idea when this 1939 provision was incorporated in our present constitution for elected and appointed judges was to further insure this ideal of stability of the courts, their independence, to give them some reasonable tenure, and to secure able lawyers. We felt in the committee that perhaps that was a very worthy thing because we do want an independent judiciary and we want the guardians of your liberty to be the best. But we did feel, to repeat, that perhaps a justice or judge should not have that privilege unless he had been once before the electorate. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Thank you, ladies and gentlemen.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there amendments to section e of Committee Proposal 96? Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: May I direct a question to Mr. Cudlip?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Cudlip, is it the intention of the committee that this section e shall apply only to the judges of those courts recognized in the constitution, or would this, in your opinion, be broad enough to provide for incumbency designation of elected incumbent justices or judges in statutory courts?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Well, it is my understanding, Mr. Hutchinson, that we refer to judges of courts of record and to justices of the supreme court. And if I am wrong, I will yield to Mr. Danhof. That is my understanding.

MR. HUTCHINSON: So that this would apply to the judges of courts of record only?

MR. CUDLIP: And justices. We use the 2 words.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Justices of the supreme court—but the supreme court is a court of record also.

MR. CUDLIP: That is right. That is my understanding.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to section e of Committee Proposal 96?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Downs offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 13, after "each" by striking out "elected"; so the language will then read:

> There shall be printed upon the ballot under the name of each incumbent justice or judge, who is a candidate for nomination or election to the same office, the designation of that office.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Downs, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this amendment would essentially restore the provisions of the present constitution. I think the previous speaker very properly pointed out that the recommendation would change what we now have. I think there are 2 arguments for the amendment and, frankly, this is not the most important part of the constitution we are drafting, but I think the one argument is that the status quo, to my knowledge, has proved to work satisfactorily in this field. Nobody yet has demonstrated any evil or any need for the cure.

Now, I am the first to admit that the incumbency designation does give an advantage in most cases to the incumbent; but I feel that when the governor—who is elected to represent all the people—fills a vacancy, regardless of his political party he does have as one consideration what he thinks will meet the needs and wishes of the voters. I think when we are talking about elected judges, there is an advantage to the voter in knowing who is the incumbent and who isn't.

I think that while we have discussed almost a matter, somebody said, of a horse race as to which candidate would have an advantage, we may have overlooked the need for the voters to know whether they are voting for or against an incumbent. The fact that incumbents tend to win, in my way of thinking, is not necessarily bad. I am inclined to think that it indicates that, on the whole, the voters are satisfied with the judiciary as it is established. I do feel that we should have the protection of the individual running against the incumbent rather than just running on his record. I therefore urge the support of the amendment. It will restore the principle of the present constitution which I think has worked admirably well. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Downs. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, in passing section d yesterday, to be consistent, section e included the word "elected" incumbent. As the arguments indicated yesterday, we felt that one who has been elected, who has been before the people is entitled to a designation for the reasons stated by Mr. Cudlip. Therefore, I would urge the defeat of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Binkowski, do you desire recognition on this amendment?

MR. BINKOWSKI: Yes, but if there are others, I will pass.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Binkowski passes. Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, this provision that you find in section e was given rather lengthy discussion in the judicial committee. One of the difficulties that we have had in connection with the incumbency label and the use of it has been that an appointed judge could use it at the time of his first appearance before the voters. Now, the purpose of the incumbency label is to give security to judicial officers who might otherwise not be induced to run. When I say that, I say that rather broadly. It is not an effort to give an advantage, or shouldn't be an effort to give an advantage, but it should be one that a judge has earned, one that a judge has shown his ability to have. And the way for him to show that, of course, as far as an opponent is concerned, is by having earned it in an election and not because he happened to be the favorite choice of the governor, who can make his appointment without any responsibility to anyone. The result has been that because of the situation in connection with judicial elections, a person who has in no way earned that designation has been allowed to use it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, you will notice that every member of the committee who gets up to justify the action of the committee is going to be very circumspect about the reasons for the change from the present language. It has been urged upon us with regard to other sections of the present constitution that since they were added to the constitution by amendment—and somewhat recent vintage—by the people, that they shouldn't be disturbed, and that is what we are talking about here. We are talking about a principle that was put into our constitution not in 1908 but very recently, and was put in by a vote of the people. It was not put in as a part of a package deal. It was not buried under anything else. It was a direct decision made by the people involving the judiciary. And the reasons for the incumbency label, if they are valid at all, are just as valid for an appointee appointed by a governor, even a Democratic governor, as they are for a person who is elected in the first instance.

Now, it has been indicated to us by people from outside of our state and people from inside of our state who have made a study of the judiciary system here that one of the strengths of our system has been the fact that we do give our judges, who we run on a nonpartisan basis, this incumbency designation. It should be noticed that the incumbency designation is relatively recent, because the nonpartisan aspect of the election of judges is relatively recent, and the incumbency designation came in with and as a result of the transfer of the judiciary outside of the party system. There are very good and sound reasons why, when you ask a man who is worthy of appointment or election to the judiciary to give up his law practice, you should give him some assurance that he is going to be able to continue in the judiciary, and you do this by giving him an advantage.

Mr. Lawrence says that on the one hand he feels that this should be given to a judge to give him security, but this should not be given to a judge to give him an advantage in an election. This to me makes very little sense. No one pretends that the incumbency designation does not give the incumbent judge an advantage, but this is the only merit that it has. You are not talking about the ordinary public office, such as a con con delegate, where we can continue to occupy whatever legal position we have and still be here. You are talking about a situation where a man is compelled to give up completely all of his contact with his profession, and whether he is appointed for a short term or whether he is elected for one term, he should have an opportunity to have presented before the people his name without the same necessity of campaigning as other public officials. If you think that a judge should spend all of the time during his period on the bench campaigning for the next election, then you should take the designation away entirely, because this brings us to another reason that is advanced by many people who are giving judges a designation.

We do not believe that it is proper for our judges—who first run as nonpartisans and second occupy a position that depends upon a certain degree of dignity that many of us hold above ordinary public office—to campaign in the same manner as other people, and the designation makes it possible for this judge to successfully carry on a restrained, if you will, campaign for reelection with enough advantage to offset the disadvantage he has by being a member of the bench. A member of the bench cannot go out and do the kind of things in a campaign that his opponents can do. He cannot participate in the kind of political rallies that his opponents may be free to participate in. And plain and simple, this gives the incumbent an opportunity to get even with the fellow who has more latitude and more freedom, who can go out and say and do just about what he pleases as a candidate for public office, while the incumbent, as a member of the bench, has to respect the dignity of his office and has to campaign in a restrained fashion.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Garvin.

MR. GARVIN: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise to support the amendment to strike out "elected" for the reason that I believe, from experience and history of the judiciary over the past 100 years or more, that any judge should have the right of the designation of incumbency.

When a judge—up until now—is appointed, sometimes he has to run for office within a very few months. He should have the right of incumbency if he were appointed or whichever way this convention decides that he comes into that position. That is particularly for the reason of the similarity of names. If he did not have the designation of incumbency, anyone could run with a similar name and the voters would be voting for other than the person that they know. They go to the polls saying, "Well, who is the judge at the present time?" If it is a similar name, they seek to find out who is the incumbent, if he has been a good judge. If he has not been a good judge, they still seek him so that they can vote against him. But it will be impossible unless the incumbency designation is thereon.

Furthermore, I notice in the supporting reasons for the committee proposal that this method is utilized to provide tenure for those judges who have previously qualified, gives stability to the judiciary. I submit that it gives no stability to the judiciary when you do not know who the incumbent judge is at the time that you go to the polls to elect a judge. It lessens any stability whatsoever if you do not know who is in office at that time. And "previously qualified;" of course, if we get back to that, we go back to section d, and I do not intend to go back to that point at this time. But I will say, in reference to the supporting reasons, that the judges who have previously qualified still mean the judges at this time, the way the constitution is now, who have been investigated and have had the opportunity of going before the people and their decisions and their action in office observed, and those people are entitled to the designation of incumbency. I am for the amendment to strike "elected."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I wish to say that our good colleague Mr. Lawrence, I think, brought out a very good point, and that is that under the present constitution where the word "incumbent" is, the voter does not know if that means incumbent by virtue of appointment or incumbent by virtue of election. As I said earlier, my theory on this is that the voter should have a maximum of information. And while I don't have the exact language, if Mr. Lawrence would care to join me or perhaps later in the day or by second reading, I would be glad to submit an additional amendment which would differentiate incumbency by election or appointment. I think in doing this, the voter would still have that added information that he is entitled to.

And while it seems to me there has been some belittling of the matter of appointment by the governor, I ask us to think in terms of the office of the governor and remember that this office does represent all the people, that that person is responsible to all the voters and, as we have tried to get across, historically governors have appointed people whose competency is shown by their general reelection and by the fact that our Michigan courts have been free of taint of improper action that has been shown in other states with other methods. So perhaps Mr. Lawrence's point, I wish to say again, does have some merit, and I would be glad to try to work out an amendment for later on or by second reading. I understand one of the other delegates may have an amendment on this line which I would be glad to support.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I think Mr. Downs and Mr. Garvin have both made very excellent arguments against the election of the judiciary. They have stated, in effect, that people don't know who the incumbent is when they get to the polls. Now I would like to ask: if we go to the polls and don't know who the incumbent judge is, how are we expected to make a judgment on qualifications of the judges to be voted on?

As I stated the other day, I think the ballot designation is an election gimmick to give the weight of incumbency to the incumbent judge at the disadvantage of whoever may be running in an election. My concept of an election in a democracy is that both sides have an equal start at the beginning. If we are going to have ballot designation in this constitution, then, as far as I am concerned, the committee proposal is far the best, and I urge the defeat of the Downs amendment on that proposition. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Follo. Mr. Follo passes. Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I rise to support the Downs amendment. The remarks of Mr. Yeager and, of course, the remarks of the distinguished jurist from Bay City yesterday really set me thinking. If I may proceed in somewhat of a jocular manner —really serious, but I have reasons for attempting to be somewhat jocular—Judge, there are a great number of us down in Wayne county who really believe in this free enterprise competition in contest business with respect to the judicial system, and I think if we go back and review very briefly the history of the rise of the designation, perhaps the judge and many of the other members here of the committee will realize why I speak in this vein. Of course, I would like to remind you that in today's Free Press, a jurist was quoted as saying that candidates should start from scratch, on an equal basis, and I think that this certainly has some merit, and I borrowed the long ballot that Mr. Lawrence has been showing to the various members of the judicial committee and others in the convention, and I don't know if he pointed this fact out to you, but this ballot was the primary election of Monday, March 4, 1935. It is the Democratic party ballot. And I think he has pointed out—if not, I will—that there were 181 candidates at that time, only 18 to be nominated. And as Mr. Danhof has already commented—and I think most of you here are old enough to realize that—this was the rise of Roosevelt and the Democrats in the early 1930s. Mr. Elliott has already quoted that famous saying of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, "You have nothing to fear but fear itself."

It seems that some of our judges in Wayne county had nothing to fear except the minority groups and the Democrats in those 1930s, because as a result of this 1935 election, although every one of the 18 incumbent Republican judges were renominated, I looked at the "red book," the secretary of state handbook of 1935 and find, as was borne out by many of the older members of the advocates club—and the advocates club of Detroit is a bar association consisting of attorneys of Polish descent—back in 1935 there were 8 Poles and 7 Irishmen nominated and on the Democratic ticket. I think it became pretty evident that the Democrats would come in. The judges at that time seemed to think that there was some reason for changing the rules of electing people and, of course, being very near it in law, I don't think they had to go very far to look to the law books. I think the reason for this was the basic law, and that was the law of self preservation. And, of course, with the change from nonpartisanship into the addition of designations, here we are today.

Now, this logic kind of escapes me, and this is the reason why I am trying to find out why all of a sudden we believe in contests and free competition and so forth and starting from scratch on one hand, but now, of course, with the designation there is no question that this gives the incumbent a head start. I for one cannot see the logic in not giving it to him in the initial instance upon appointment of a governor, but giving it to him once he is elected. Maybe there is some reason. I can't find it out. It just seems to me that some people are a little unhappy as a result of G. Mennen Williams being in office for 12 years, as there were some people who were unhappy in the 1930s when the political situation changed. I may be wrong. I don't know. I just raise a question. Maybe somebody can point this out to me. But it seems to me that once the conservatives begin losing, they want to change the rules of the game. I don't know.

The second point that I would like to raise with this incumbency designation—and please don't misconstrue my remarks. I believe in the incumbency designation. I certainly am supporting it. But we also have a distinguished representative from Muskegon who has been praised for his political fortitude in pushing a certain idea, and I certainly respect his right to do so. I would just like to pose a question for him, and he doesn't have to answer at this time. It just seems to me that this incumbency designation is the closest thing to a guaranteed annual wage. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, may I ask your indulgence just one minute to illustrate the point I wish to make by a story. Apparently this is the morning for it and I assure you it will be short. In the first place, my feelings are somewhat hurt. For the last 2 days, because I happen to be on the committee and happened to have spoken, I have been referred to indirectly and directly, and certain implications have been made of the statements I have made. I got to the point where I feel much like W. C. Fields in one of his favorite scenes—I mean to show you how unjust it is. In this scene he was sitting in a diner on a stool eating, and he had before him a piece of meat that evidently was quite distasteful. And over him was standing a waitress who was just about to do him in, and he was evidently trying to explain. He said, "Madam, I didn't say anything about the quality of the meat you serve here. All I asked you was what became of that old horse you used to keep tied out in back." (laughter)

I assure you I had no such motive. All that the committee has been trying to do is to make an improvement that, if we are going to have an elective system, will make the election better. It is an effort to keep a device from being used by a nonelected judge. I urge you to vote no as to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: I would just like to remind the members of the majority party that there is a slight possibility in the history of this constitution that we may have a Republican governor in the next 50 years, and quit running against the specter of G. Mennen Williams.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Downs to strike the word "elected" from line 13. Does any delegate desire to have the section further read? Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: I would like to say to Mr. Binkowski in answer to his question whether there were a few people in the room who were unhappy about G. Mennen Williams, I think there are about 99 of us here who were unhappy. (laughter)

MR. BINKOWSKI: Thank you. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Downs. Those who favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to section e?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Shackleton, DeVries, Sterrett and Seyferth offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 12, by striking out all of section e, lines 12 through 14.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Before the Chair recognizes you, Mr. Shackleton, the Chair would note that Mr. Binkowski, with his penchant for matters of this nature, has gotten us into some discussion of personalities, which the Chair hopes that we will—

MR. BINKOWSKI: Can I get that printed in the journal? (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: —hopes we will be able to avoid during the balance of the session. Otherwise, the Chair will have to request a longer gavel. (laughter) Mr. Shackleton.

MR. SHACKLETON: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, there are more Monday morning quarterbacks than there are quarterbacks or all the players put together. I have not yet found any Monday morning quarterbacks suggest that the one that is winning should have 8 yards to make in 4 downs instead of 10. That would be 20 per cent. Nor have I heard anyone suggest that the winner of a ball game should have the privilege of starting the batter out from first base instead of having to go all 4.

Mr. Lawrence spoke about true elections. I believe true elections would mean free and competitive elections. Evidently practically everyone here has conceded that the designation of incumbent after an office holder's name would give him 20 or more per cent advantage toward his election. This, obviously, would not be a true, free, competitive election. It has been suggested that because a judge had performed well, he should have this advantage. There are a lot more constitutional officers holding office in this state than there are judges. They, too, think they hold their office well. Maybe they should have the same advantage—supervisors, sheriffs, clerks, township officers. To be consistent then, we should give that privilege to all office holders, not just to judges.

It has been suggested that judges give up a good deal—their practice, their career. There seems to be no evidence that they were forced to do it. No one, certainly, put a gun to their head and said "You have to run." They did it willingly, of their free accord, the same as other office holders; and other office holders give up a career oftentimes. And most other officers think they are making a career when they are elected because they rerun for office too, year after year, until they are defeated. Discrimination in favor of lawyers or judges in this respect is truly discrimination, not warranted to be considered by any sound group of people that want true, free, competitive elections.

I certainly would urge the adoption of this amendment to delete section e in the interests of fair play, of wanting free, true, competitive elections, not similar to the type of elections held in Russia. At this time I would like to yield to Mr. Sterrett.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Shackleton yields to Mr. Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I won't go into this point much further regarding the title of incumbent. I think it was covered very well bipartisanly on the last amendment. My feelings are completely in juxtaposition with Mr. Shackleton. However, it was always my thinking that the legal profession was against advertising, and I think this is what the title of incumbent does. I would like to read a paragraph from a letter here from a very fine circuit court judge of the state of Michigan. He states:

> Section e again reflects the specialized treatment of judges that I object to. If judges are entitled to designation on the ballot, all elected officials should have the same treatment.
> The advocates of this provision are among the most vehement in contending that election is the only method for selecting judges properly, and yet they seek to stack the deck in favor of the incumbent at the time of reelection.

I would like to urge you to vote for this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Shackleton, the Chair believes you retain the floor.

MR. SHACKLETON: One of our ex judges, a delegate in this convention, Judge Dehnke, the other day reported a hearsay conversation. I thought hearsay was not permitted in court. The gist of that conversation was that men built ceilings as an arena for flies to walk on. I submit to you that flies are very dangerous because they carry disease affecting 8 million people, perhaps, and not 8,000 lawyers. Chemists have tried to develop DDT and other chemicals to destory the flies, but they have developed an immunity against it. The fly menace may get worse. It may be necessary in the next 50 years to have an official fly swatter for each county, a fly exterminator. For health reasons, that could be very important and necessary. Then we certainly should let the fly swatter have the privilege of the advantage of his office and designate him incumbent. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I would like to support this particular amendment and recall for Delegate Lawrence another famous saying of W. C. Fields, and I think the committee must have had this particular quip of Fields' in mind when they attempted to put this in, because W. C. Fields also said, "Don't ever give a sucker an even break." (laughter) And anyone who would run against an incumbent judge with the incumbency designation on the ballot, in my opinion, would be a plain sucker. I heartily support the amendment and hope you give it full consideration.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Shackleton, DeVries, Sterrett and Seyferth. Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose this amendment very vigorously. The reason: if we were just looking at giving up a career or something like that, this would apply equally to other offices and other persons running for office, and I would say that they should be treated equally. But there is a very fundamental difference, in my mind, between the judge and other office holders. Basically what we want, I think, in this country and in this state are judges of integrity who are able to decide the case on its merits and not on what the public opinion is. I think this is fundamental to our system. If we are going to have political judges who have to be swayed by the popular opinion at a given time, we are not going to get justice from our courts. This is one method of isolating the judge to some extent so that when a case comes up, he is able to decide the case on its merits and not on the basis of what the popular opinion at that time is.

We wrote a bill of rights into this constitution to protect, to a great extent, minority interests and the rights of the individual. If we want these rights to be truly enforced, we are going to have to have judges who are able to stand up and support these even in the face of public opinion. To my mind, this is one of the fundamental things that is necessary if we are going to have justice in the state. One way of doing that is to give some advantage to that judge so that he knows that by making an unpopular opinion, he is not going to be swept out of office so easily at the next election.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Seyferth.

MR. SEYFERTH: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I rise to support the amendment now before us. I speak as a nonlawyer. And in supporting the amendment to section e, I am directly answering Delegate Binkowski's question of a moment ago. It seems that we can all appreciate the reason for the incumbency designation for judges and justices. It has been stated that it gives a 25 per cent lead, approximately, to the incumbent judge or justice. We can fully appreciate that. I think where we separate our thought processes is why, then, does this not apply also to other elected offices of the state? By inference, I think, we are saying that the other offices of the state and officeholders are not necessarily as competent or need to be as competent as our judges and justices. I take exception to this position and mainly for this reason: we should either apply the incumbency label to all elected offices of the state or not apply it to any elected offices of the state. And because of the amendment now before us pertaining to section e, I strongly support the amendment as presented.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Walker.

MR. WALKER: A couple of questions for Mr. Shackleton. First, in the office that he speaks of, that of fly swatter for each county, would he advocate that the office be filled on the basis of one man, one vote? In other words, that each man is created equal? And, second, would he have him elected on a partisan or nonpartisan basis?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The questions are out of order, Mr. Walker. The Chair will recognize Mr. Norris.

MR. WALKER: Is the question any more out of order than the remark, Mr. Chairman? Why is it different for one than the other?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I am moved to ask a question of the chairman of the judicial committee, if I may, through the Chair.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may proceed, Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: The argument has been advanced here that there are no differences in the campaigning between those who may be running for constitutional offices generally as against those who campaign for judicial office, and I just wondered, Mr. Danhof, whether or not in fact the Canons of Judicial Ethics impose certain restrictions upon the quality and quantity of the campaign engaged in by a person campaigning for a judicial office which may lend some credibility to the committee proposal in this matter.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Norris, members of the committee, it is my understanding that the Canons of Judicial Ethics prohibit the judge from engaging in activities of a partisan nature, and they very definitely have, since they were adopted by the supreme court in the 1940s, limited or endeavored to limit and, of course, if the judge would violate them, he would be subject to censure and perhaps disciplinary action by the violation thereof. The answer is definitely yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Leppien.

MR. LEPPIEN: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I have viewed over the years with a great deal of interest the elections as conducted in the state of Michigan, and one of the things that impressed me was the fact that we have—and I think wisely—taken the judiciary offices out of the partisan field and made them nonpartisan. We did that for the purpose of highlighting the fact that they were different. We separated them from the other offices in the same election. It seems to me, having done this, the idea then of going further and putting the incumbency label to that office is going way too far. I urge you to support the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Shackleton and others. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, we have heard a number of arguments about fair play and about having elections equal for judges as everybody else, but I must take issue very vigorously here with my fellow delegate from Muskegon. There is a need in the judiciary of any state or of any country for stability, for confidence of the public. And this is arrived at in but one of two ways. In the federal system, they appoint, and they appoint for life. And those of you who have read or have heard about The 58 Lonely Men know that it was only the stability of the appointment in the southern states that gave courage to those judges.

Now, in an elective system, to achieve stability and to achieve tenure of office, we have developed a system of giving to the incumbent judge a designation, and there are good, sound reasons for this. In the first place, it is in the interest of an orderly society that we have a stable judiciary, that we have an independent judiciary. And whatever may have been the reasons at the time, we have taken them out of the field of partisan politics, and they cannot and they do not have a political party or the political machinery—at least on the surface—available to them. They have trouble raising money for a campaign. They have trouble securing workers in a campaign. When there is a partisan campaign afoot, most of the people are engaged in that particular activity. By the granting of the incumbency designation, we have eliminated the perpetual campaigning on the part of a judge.

Envision, if you would, what would happen if there was no incumbency designation. A judge as he approaches his last year in office, if he is in a circuit that has more than one judge and it is his turn to come up for election, would be endeavoring to grab ahold of and scrap for those cases which would give him publicity before the public so his name would be known. It has been 6 years since this judge has faced the voters of his circuit. A tremendous number of people may have moved in or moved out since the last time he appealed to them. And then envision, if you would, a judge who has spent 12 years upon the bench, who has done a good job, who has served adequately the people of his circuit—but judges don't usually attract a lot of publicity unless they happen to get a tremendously big case that attracts notoriety within the newspapers, and so he has gone on day by day administering justice to the people of his circuit, and now it comes time for him to face election, and in this day and age of growing population, there suddenly rises up before him a name candidate. If there are various religious or ethnic groups in the particular locality, there rises up a hotshot prosecutor who has had a case that has attracted considerable notoriety and who in the future might be judicial timber but at the time is not, and so when the election comes along, you have a man who has reached his sixtieth or sixty-first birthday who has put in 12 years of good hard service to the people of his circuit; and simply because he doesn't have the right name or because of the publicity given to an opponent, he is defeated.

Now, perhaps in the one judge circuits this would not create a particular problem, but I submit that in those circuits that have even 2, 3 or 4 judges and more, the incumbency designation gives stability and gives tenure to the bench. This is the way, in an elective system, that you give some stability. The argument will be made that this may freeze in a bad judge. The only thing I can answer that with is that it keeps in many, many more good judges. Any judge who has done a reasonably decent job after 6 or 12 or even 18 years on the bench should have the opportunity to be retained in that office.

If you want to put your judiciary on a perpetual campaign entirely for the last year of their office where they are going to have to go out and campaign at picnics and rallies and county fairs, and if you are going to drive them back into the political arena so they have to take sides—and maybe it happens now, and I am not denying that it does to an extent, but if you want it to happen even more so, then you will vote for this particular amendment. There will be nothing that will destroy the confidence of the people, will destroy the judicial stability, will destroy the ability of the judges and will do more harm to the good name that has been developed in this state than to pass this particular amendment. Judges are not like fly catchers. They don't have a political party behind them. We have been striving for years to remove them from the political arena.

Now we have stated that we will fill by election and this, I think, is a fair, consistent philosophy. But once a judge has been elected and he has done a good job, then we should give him stability. We should make sure there is tenure in the office. And failure to do this and the striking of this particular proposal will do more harm to the judiciary and to the courts and to the administration of justice in this state than anything else that could be accomplished. For these reasons, I urge strongly the defeat of this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I agree with Mr. Danhof in everything he said about fair play, and for that reason I urge you to vote for the amendment. If we are going to talk about fair play, let's talk about fair play. We have decided that some judges should have a ballot designation because it is good for some judges to have a ballot designation and this serves the people of the state. It is not good for other judges to have a ballot designation. No difference has been explained to me except for the manner of their selection and perhaps the person that made the appointment.

If there is any justification to this thing at all, it has been explained by several people here that when you put a man on the bench, you are asking him to forego his profession in order to take the position. You know, when a judge is appointed in Michigan to fill a vacancy, the maximum period for which he can be appointed is 2 years. Most generally it is some period less than that. So we say to a man, "Please accept this appointment and serve for something less than 2 years. Give up your law practice. And then when you run for office the next time, you are not going to run for the regular 6 year term like other circuit judges; you are going to run for the balance of the unexpired term." We ask him to run twice as often for his first 6 years as anyone else, and we ask him now, with what has been done, to run without a designation. So let's be fair and let the other judges who are going to be on the ballot with him face the same kind of a risk. I think perhaps if we vote for the amendment we may ultimately come to realize that, as has been stated before, in an attempt to roast the pig we have burned down the barn, and in a headlong attempt here to do something that perhaps has satisfied the aggressive tendencies of the members of the majority party on this question of appointment, we have taken a very strong step toward destroying one of the most important parts of our elective system.

We have been told by every expert that testified before us that the ballot designation is an integral and important part of the whole picture, and when you start taking away a little piece of this picture, it is no longer a whole picture. The system works the way it works now, well, because it is all there, but it is like an automobile: when you take one of the spark plugs out, it just doesn't function the way it did before. It may not function at all. At least it is not going to function as efficiently as it did before. We have already taken one of the spark plugs out. Perhaps if we vote yes on this amendment and take some more spark plugs out so that we stop this automobile, we will all stop and take a look at what we have done here this morning and go back and correct it and put the judiciary system in Michigan back in the condition it was in before we started tampering with it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Shackleton, the Chair would advise that there are 9 speakers seeking recognition, of which you are the fifth in line. Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: I oppose this amendment. I am primarily in favor of retaining the language of the present constitution, but if we can't have that, at least I would like to have the committee proposal adopted. I don't share the view of some of the speakers that this is a question of which of the 2 candidates for a particular judicial office has an edge by reason of the designation. I think the important thing is what is better for the judicial system and for the people, and I think that the designation is better for the judicial system and for the people. At least the people know that whatever other qualifications any of the candidates have, this particular candidate at least has had some experience as a judge in that particular office.

Now, this provision in our present constitution was put there not by the lawyers but by the people. And the question has been asked, why should these judges have this security and not other people? Well, I submit to you that we have given very, very many people security in our constitution: civil service, the colleges, education, certain tax provisions. Whenever the voters have seen fit, they have put into the constitution, along with designation, certain guarantees, certain securities for various types of functions, commissions or boards, and I submit that on that basis the amendment should be defeated.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Thank you. Mr. Chairman and fellow members of the committee, I realize that anything that any lawyer may say in connection with this matter is necessarily somewhat to be discounted on the basis of presumed selfish interest on the part of members of that profession. I do think this matter ought to be put in context. What we are speaking about is a ballot designation of incumbency.

May I submit to you that every other candidate than those running on nonpartisan tickets has a ballot designation. At the head of the ballot appears Republican or Democrat or Socialist or Farm Labor or whatever. Fundamental in our system of democracy is the existence of party systems and, with that, party support. When that party support in 1939 was taken away from our judges by the establishment—and I think very wisely—of a nonpartisan judiciary, the ballot designation theretofore existing for the members of our judiciary was taken away from them too, and in place of it the people in their wisdom said that those who were incumbent were entitled to that instead of a party label, so that when their names appear on a nonpartisan ballot, however large or however small, they have something to identify them to the voter. This is in place of and was a part of the change from one ballot designation to the other one that we are now discussing. I oppose taking this designation away, and I oppose the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. McAllister.

MR. McALLISTER: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I believe that judges should be entitled to respect after they are elected to office. I have previously stated my high regard for the judiciary. I am an attorney myself; however, I do not feel that judges are entitled to preferred treatment.

I wish to support the Shackleton amendment because I believe a judge should be able to win on his record. Most of the people in his area either know the judge by name or reputation, and if he doesn't have a good enough name or a good enough reputation, then he shouldn't be reelected.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Garvin. Mr. Garvin passes. Mr. Shackleton.

MR. SHACKLETON: Mr. Chairman, the 2 previous speakers, the chairman of the committee and Mr. Ford, would naturally infer that all of the other officers, which are greatly more numerous than the judges, would not necessarily have to be men of integrity. I maintain that any office holder should be a man of integrity, should try to protect his position, naturally. And there are more people out of our nearly 8 million in Michigan that come in contact with these other officers than ever come in contact with the lawyers or the judges or the courts in this state. And whether lawyers like it or not, and with all due respect to the 56 lawyers in this convention, from 42 years' experience in dealing with masses of people coming to you with their problems and their troubles, and you know they should consult a lawyer and you try to refer them to a lawyer and they are shy of them just as they are shy of dentists, doctors, bankers and almost any other smaller group, the main reason being because of a lack of respect. I think lawyers are held in awe, no question about it, but they are not always respected. They think that going to a lawyer is apt to get them into more trouble.

Most of you who have dealt with clients will realize that if your clients had come to you sooner, you could have kept them out of trouble instead of getting them into trouble. That is too bad. But apparently it is human nature. I maintain that the judiciary should not have any more advantage than any other office holder in the state, and that if we want free, competitive, true elections we will not have them if we give someone a 20 per cent or more advantage when they are running for office.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I believe I will adhere to my statement of yesterday and pass, but I would like to call for a division on the vote.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Sterrett requests a division on the amendment. Is the demand supported? It is supported. Mr. Romney.

MR. ROMNEY: As an individual delegate, I don't want to prolong this discussion or this constitutional convention, but there is one matter that hasn't been mentioned that, it seems to me, bears on this proposal, and that is this: this proposal obviously is not unrelated to what we will do later with respect to the selection of the supreme court, and whether that process is to be by appointment or by election, it seems to me that one of the most important improvements we can make in the judiciary article is to free the members of the supreme court from the necessity of going back to either the governor or the party convention for renomination and the opportunity to continue their service on the bench. It seems to me that this is one of the most iniquitous aspects of the present judicial article. Now, I personally hope that when we come to that area, we will provide for the automatic right of the incumbent to renominate himself and to run on a nonpartisan basis. I am not one who believes that we should limit—this is related, Mr. Chairman (laughter)—I am not one who believes that this is unrelated to the matter we are acting on here.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair has some questions about it, though, Mr. Romney. (laughter)

MR. ROMNEY: All right. I will come to that point. (laughter) The reason being that if the incumbent is to renominate himself, in my judgment, he should not run against the record but he should rather run against opponents that either party can put up or that the citizens nominate by petition. The relationship here, Mr. Chairman, is this: if the incumbent must face one nominated with organized support as would be the case in either alternative, either if nominated by the convention or if nominated by petition, then the incumbent has to run against one who has organized support even though it is on a nonpartisan basis, and I submit that the incumbent needs the designation of incumbency to offset that handicap, and particularly where the incumbent has been the fearless type judge we need who has been capable of disregarding the considerations that might develop the type of organized support he had earlier. Therefore, I favor the retention of the proposed committee language and the defeat of this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. McLogan.

MR. McLOGAN: Mr. Chairman, in matters of justice, independence of thought and action are 2 qualities that people look for and have a right to expect. In my thinking, it would follow that anything that detracts from that precept is wrong. Certain ramifications of a hard campaign may detract from that. I think it is to be preferred that we provide this independence of thought, and I think the incumbency label would so help. I would therefore oppose the amendment and prefer the position of the committee.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Mr. Chairman, I don't agree with the points of view as expressed by Mr. Danhof and others who have expressed support of the committee proposal. It seems to me that our whole concept here is one to give the people a right of free choice, and that whenever you give to any official a ballot preference you are, to a large degree, taking that freedom of choice away from them.

Mr. Danhof spoke of the problems of campaigning and that a judge would be campaigning during his last year. I would only point out that in any event, whenever you have elected officials, they must be faced at some time or another with the problem of going back to the people in a campaign technique to see whether or not the efforts that they have put forth for them are justified and worthy of support. Judges do not campaign in a vacuum and neither do their opponents, and therefore they are faced with the same campaign techniques as their opponents are. He also mentioned the problems of many judges being faced with reelection at the same time in some of the circuits. As I understand the procedures we have followed here, we will be, I hope, moving into a staggered term proposition which will reduce this and make it possible for the people to recognize those men who have served them well.

A third thing that has been said is that a designation of incumbency does give a judge a head start of 25 per cent or of some such figure, and I only wonder whether or not this means that when he does campaign, 25 per cent isn't enough. He has to get 51 per cent of the vote to win. Does he only campaign ¾ as hard, or just exactly what does he do in the way of campaigning? He must be faced with exactly the same problems as his opposition, those who are opposing him in seeking the office. And as I mentioned in my original remarks — and this is the remark which I think is most directed to this point — when any public official goes back to the people for review of his activities, they need to have an opportunity of review with freedom and without campaigning on the ballot, and I therefore support the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I will be brief. I would not like to think that we would be confused in this particular question on this particular amendment that we are concerned with lawyers as such; we are concerned with judges. It might actually be more to the benefit of lawyers who are not judges to remove the incumbency designation than it would be in other aspects. I think that this is a highly important matter. I think it is very necessary to the stability of the judicial system as it has existed in Michigan.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, at the time that I spoke on this matter very briefly before in addressing to the chairman of the judiciary committee a question regarding the Canons of Judicial Ethics, I did not have in my possession the Canons of Judicial Ethics related to this matter. I now have them and I would like to bring them to the attention of this body because I think they give to the public an idea that the standards and methods of campaigning for judicial office are different from those campaigning for other offices. It seems to be the major contention here that if you provide an incumbent designation for elected judges, you ought to provide them for all or none at all, and it seems to me we have to remember that the judicial power, the honor, integrity, independence of the bench is what is necessary in the public interest in the administration of justice, and to promote that end, the Canons of Judicial Ethics provide as follows. I will just read them very briefly with regard to the matters before us. One with regard to partisan politics, canon 28, Canons of Judicial Ethics of the American bar association:

> While entitled to entertain his personal view of political questions and while not required to surrender his rights or opinions as a citizen, it is inevitable that suspicion of being warped by political bias will attach to a judge who becomes an active promoter of the interests of one political party as against another. He should avoid making political speeches, making or soliciting payment of assessments or contributions to party funds, the public endorsement of candidates for political office and participation in party conventions.
> He should neither accept nor retain a place on any party committee, nor act as a party leader, nor engage generally in partisan activities. While, however, it is necessary for judges to be nominated and elected as candidates of political parties, nothing herein contained shall prevent the judge from attending or speaking at political gatherings or from making contributions to the campaign funds of the party that nominated him or seeks his election or reelection.

You have limitations, then, with regard to the partisan quality. In addition to that, in canon 30, candidacy for office, the following standards are prescribed:

> A candidate for judicial position should not make or suffer others to make for him promises of conduct in office which appeal to the cupidity or prejudices of the appointing or electing power. He should not announce in advance his conclusions of law on disputed issues to secure class support, and he should do nothing while a candidate to create the impression that if chosen he will administer his office with bias, partiality or improper discrimination. While holding a judicial position he should not become an active candidate, either at party primary or general election, for any office other than a judicial office.
> If a judge should decide to become a candidate for any office not judicial, he should resign in order that it cannot be said that he is using the power or prestige of his judicial position to promote his candidacy or the success of his party.

And I wish to underline the next paragraph:

> If a judge becomes a candidate for any judicial office, he should refrain from all conduct which might tend to arouse reasonable suspicion that he is using the power or prestige of his judicial position to promote his candidacy or the success of his party. He should not permit others to do anything in his behalf which would reasonably lead to such suspicion.

I think the kind of standards which the bar associations in the public interest have sought to advance for judicial positions, in my judgment, qualitatively distinguish the nature of a campaign for judicial office from other constitutional offices, without in a sense demeaning or deprecating the importance of the other offices, because of the nature of the judicial position. These standards of judicial campaigning have been set forth, and I think they justify the committee proposal, and I am against the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I rise to support the committee proposal and oppose the amendment but I would like, Mr. Chairman, if there is no objection, to speak out of order very briefly. This is the first and last time that I will rise to my feet during the consideration of the judiciary committee proposals, and I do so merely for the purpose of advising the committee of the whole that we are only a few months away from a most important anniversary. At 11:00 o'clock, on February 22, 1962, 2 weeks ago today, we began debate and discussion of the proposals from the committee on the judiciary. (laughter) At 11:00 o'clock, which will be 5 minutes from now, we will be entering the third week of the consideration of the judiciary committee proposals. I don't know what it was about Washington's birthday when we started the debate on this committee's proposals that has so inspired the floods of eloquence that we have been listening to in the past 2 weeks except perhaps an overwhelming desire to tell the truth. Unfortunately, some of us don't always agree as to what the truth is.

But I, more seriously, Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, would ask the committee to keep in mind as that magic hour of 11:00 approaches, the consideration — and perhaps I might even suggest that those who so feel inclined offer up a little silent prayer in their hearts — for the continued well being and sustenance of 2 distinguished gentlemen: one, the gentleman from Muskegon, the chairman of the committee on the judiciary; the other, the present occupant of the Chair, the gentleman from Birmingham, Mr. Van Dusen. I am sure that we should, most of us at least, agree that both of these gentlemen deserve a respite — if not immediately, at least sometime in the reasonably near future, and I hope very much indeed that all of us will cooperate in seeing that this anniversary is not repeated on March 15 (laughter) another week from today, because it sometimes puts me in mind of those famous words with which Oliver Cromwell dissolved the long parliament, and which I hope will never be said to this body, and that is "You have sat here too long for the good of any of us. Therefore, be gone."

With those few words, Mr. Chairman, I will not speak again on these proposals. But I do hope that all of us, lawyers and laymen alike, will cooperate in seeing that you and Mr. Danhof and all others who have borne this burden so ably and nobly during the past few weeks get your well deserved rest from the committee on the judiciary and we move on to equally important subjects as speedily as possible. Thank you. (applause)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bentley, the Chair is sure that Mr. Danhof joins in thanking you for your remarks and calling the attention of the committee to this anniversary, and the Chair would suggest that the only fitting manner in which to observe the anniversary would be with a moment of silence. (laughter) Mr. Faxon. (laughter)

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, I was just thinking to myself while sitting there that I certainly would feel sorry for the next person who gets up to speak. (laughter) But I intend to speak on the amendment in full realization that the judicial article has taken time. It was 2 weeks ago today, I recall, that a memorable section was defeated also on this same day, and I think we have every reason to take time on an article of such importance as the judicial article because we are dealing with a very, very important branch of government, so I don't make any apologies for the remarks I am about to say.

I have been advocating generally a conservative point of view, and I don't intend to deviate from this in my support for this amendment which has been submitted. I have heard it said, in opposition to the amendment, that judges would make unpopular decisions; they ought not to be thrown out of office. As a Democrat — little "d" as well as big "D" — I think that judges ought to be responsive to the people when they make decisions, and I am sure that if this were 1800 or 1840 or 1850, the people of this state or the people of this country would not have seen fit to keep within their judicial branch of government judges who were making decisions that were not responsive to the people. And if judges attempt to usurp those powers, then these judges ought to face the consequences of decisions which are unpopular, and our method of doing this in this country has been by not reelecting them.

I don't believe the incumbency designation ought to be there. It wasn't there in the nineteenth century. It is something of a recent innovation. It doesn't respect the intelligence of the people. And although some people may doubt this intelligence, I think a fundamental concept in democratic government means that we ought to respect the judgment of the people. It has been alleged that the judges in the federal system have stability, and I have said once before that the judges in the federal system have in the past sometimes had too much stability and have been able to go far beyond the mandate of their respective office in certain decisions which they have put forth.

It has been asked who will the judges have behind them when they run for office? And I suggest that the judges should have people behind them when they run for office, and the people don't have to be of any one political ilk. But certainly people may have political affiliations, and this doesn't make them any less respectable in terms of their support for or against a particular candidate.

I suggest to you, members of the committee, that we ought to go back to some of these fundamental concepts in the belief in democratic government and look upon judges as human beings. And I would, in taking away incumbency designations for judges, do the same thing for any elective official. It is up to those people who serve in office to make themselves known to the people they are serving and to reflect adequately their own feelings and the people's feelings. I see no great danger in asking judges to campaign for office. I think there is nothing more fundamental and basic to our concept of democratic government than having judges go out and campaign. Whether they go to political meetings or whether they go to church meetings or wherever it is, they ought to go and meet the people and let the people meet them. I don't believe in any of this that I have heard suggested that they should refrain from conduct to promote their candidacy. I think their conduct should be to win the support of the people, and if this means going out and campaigning, that is good. I don't think any judge should stay in his own private quarters and not meet the people on occasion. I think this is healthy. I think the incumbency designation has a tendency to make some people awfully comfortable in their positions. I think there is nothing more sacred than letting them get out, meet the people and not feeling the security of knowing that with that little old designation, they can sit back and relax for the balance of their lifetime. Let's give people a chance to make the determinations.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I intend no disrespect to any member of the delegation. However, I have turned on the green light on the board. That is an indiciation that I am ready to vote, and I would very much appreciate it if anyone now desiring to speak would think 3 times about whether or not he can add something new to the considerations presented. I would like to ask the rest of the delegates, if they are also of this opinion, to turn on their green light, and perhaps that will be some indication to those who are desiring to speak on the floor.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The committee will be in order. Mr. King, do you desire recognition at this time?

MR. KING: Just very briefly. Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I don't want to take a lot of time, but some of the remarks which have been made indicate that there is a basic lack of understanding of our judicial process. Some of these remarks were made by laymen and some of them were made by lawyers. I think the question here is do we want a bench that is making popular decisions or do we want a bench that is making right decisions?

Now, I would ask you laymen who are here, how many of you know what the doctrine of stare decisis means? It is Latin for "let the decision stand." It means that a circuit court judge when faced with a precedent making case, whether that decision be popular or unpopular, is bound to uphold the precedent. Only the supreme court of the state and of the nation really has the authority to make new law. I think that there is an old adage in judicial circles: hard cases make bad law. That means that every now and then a case comes before the bench which is fraught with unhappy circumstances for the individuals involved, and yet it is absolutely essential to the well being of our way of life that the decision in this case be consistent with decisions in other cases, and in the long run that makes for a system of justice which you can rely on and which I can rely on as a lawyer. It means a continuity which is absolutely essential.

Now, this may seem far from the point, but I don't think it is. What we are really saying is that we want our judges in a position where they can make right decisions. Naturally, if those decisions are not right, if they are way out of line, then the people will have their opportunity at the polls to reflect their wishes. But this little bit of advantage which is given to the incumbent judge is the sort of thing which keeps our judiciary above politics, and, frankly, I think that is where it ought to be. I hope that you will consider very carefully your vote in this area because it is extremely important. This is the only thing we have left. We have decided as a committee, as a group, that we don't want a pure independent judiciary, and perhaps properly so. I didn't personally agree with that decision, but maybe it is right. But for goodness' sake, let's not put in a situation where guys with the name of King will want to keep their initials but maybe change it to Kelly or Kavanagh or Kaufman or something like that just so they can get up there and do the kind of job that they think is best when in fact they perhaps are not qualified. The incumbency designation is extremely important. It is all we have left of an independent judiciary.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Shackleton, DeVries, Sterrett and Seyferth to strike section e of Committee Proposal 96. A division has been ordered. The secretary will ring the bell. Those in favor of the amendment offered by Messrs. Shackleton, DeVries, Sterrett and Seyferth to strike section e of Committee Proposal 96 will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment to strike out section e, the yeas are 36; the nays are 59.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is not adopted. Mr. Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: There are a number of delegates that are not on the floor and that have not been excused from this session. I would request that we ask for their vote when they return.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: It is not in order, Mr. Sterrett. Are there further amendments to section e?

SECRETARY CHASE: None on file.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If not, it will pass.

Section e is passed. The secretary will read section f.

SECRETARY CHASE: The following is section f:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: For an explanation of section f, the Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee, Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, for an explanation of this particular section and also to explain an amendment which is on the secretary's desk, I should like to yield to the delegate from Hillsdale, Mr. Prettie.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Thank you. Mr. Chairman and fellow members of the committee, this is a grandfather clause. There was considerable competition among the numerous grandfathers on the judicial committee (laughter) as to who should have the privilege of presenting the explanation of this particular section. Eliminated from that competition were Miss Donnelly and Miss McGowan. (laughter) But after eliminating them, we still had numerous grandfathers left, and I was the fortunate one.

As originally drafted, this section was prepared with the language of the committee proposal in section a of Committee Proposal 96 before us in which it was contemplated that both justices of the peace and probate judges would be required to be lawyers. By the amendment adopted by this committee yesterday which limited the application of the requirement for practice of law to the probate judges, the present section is now not accurate because of the reference therein to justices. So I would like to have the secretary read an amendment submitted by Messrs. Danhof and myself on behalf of the committee to clarify this language.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment offered by Messrs. Danhof and Prettie, on behalf of the committee on judicial branch:

1. Amend page 2, line 16, after "any" by striking out "justice or judge" and inserting "judge of probate"; and in line 19, after "constitution" by striking out the balance of the line and inserting "requiring him to be licensed to practice law in this state."; so that the language of section f will read:

> Any judge of probate serving at the time this constitution becomes effective may serve the remainder of the term and be eligible for reelection to his present office regardless of other provisions in this constitution requiring him to be licensed to practice law in this state.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Danhof and Prettie. Mr. Prettie, you have the floor.

MR. PRETTIE: The purpose of this proposal now as amended is simply to protect in office for their present term and for reelection, so long as they may desire to run for reelection, judges of probate now incumbent who are not licensed to practice law in this state. The limitation with the revised language as to age limit of 70 years which is applicable to all courts of record, the qualification as to residence within the district or the county in which serving, would still be applicable. All that we are doing here is preserving the right of incumbent nonlawyer probate judges to continue to serve their term and to run for reelection until such time as they either vacate by removing their residence from the jurisdiction or attain the age of 70 years, after which they may not again be elected. Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Danhof and Prettie. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no. Mr. Radka.

MR. RADKA: I would just as soon ask Mr. Prettie personally, and then if I am satisfied, I won't waste your time.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is adopted. Mr. Danhof, has the committee further explanation of section f?

MR. DANHOF: No. I think it has been handled, Mr. Chairman, by Mr. Prettie. It is very simply a grandfather clause for the probate judges in regard to the legal qualifications for the office. I might state that as it was originally written, it was pointed out by a very eminent member of this group that there was a hole in it a mile wide regarding the age qualifications and the residence which we had to correct and which I think we have now done to conform with the intent of the committee.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any further amendments to section f? Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Prettie a question, please.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Prettie, under the provision of this particular section as now amended, do I understand that the probate judges that are now presently in office are now forever protected, but the justices of the peace may be abolished by the legislature and they are not protected?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: I think that would be a fair construction of the amendment, yes. Of course, we have subsequent provisions dealing with the justices of the peace and empowering the legislature to make provision for their continuance, abolition, classification or what have you. I don't think the question is particularly germane to the problem we have here.

MR. BOOTHBY: The reason why I ask the question, Mr. Prettie, in case you have any further comment, is that under the prior provision of section f at no time could the legislature abolish the office of the justice of the peace so that the present incumbent justice of the peace would be abolished, but with this present amendment to section f, the legislature may now abolish the office and also remove or prevent the incumbent justice of the peace from being elected; is that correct?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: They may, yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Radka's question which he presented to me privately was based on this hypothesis: let us assume that under proposals previously adopted we have 2 or 3 counties joined in a probate district, in one of which there is a lay probate judge and in one of which there is a probate judge who is a lawyer. Now, the question as I understand it is whether they would be eligible to run one against another.

I hadn't given this question any thought, and perhaps other members of the committee will not agree with my off the cuff personal opinion, but it would be that this provision would protect the nonlawyer probate judge in his right to run for reelection unless, of course, the legislature — in setting up the probate districts as we have empowered them to do — should otherwise provide by law.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If there is no further discussion with respect to section f, it will pass.

Section f, as amended, is passed. The secretary will read section g.

SECRETARY CHASE: The following is section g:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: For an explanation of section g, the Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee, Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, for an explanation pertaining particularly to the first paragraph — and I would ask, if we might, Mr. Chairman, that we consider this particular section paragraph by paragraph; they are related but they also have separate problems — I should like to call upon the delegate from Detroit, Mr. Iverson.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, the explanation of this is found in the journal on page 474.

The provisions of this section are designed to assure uniform salaries for all judges within a certain district. It likewise removes the restrictions of section 3 of article XVI which, as it now stands, prohibits the increase of salaries of any supreme court justice during his term of office. We now have justices whose salaries vary as much as $7,000 per year. The committee believes that this discrimination should be abolished. However, due to the requirement of staggered terms for circuit judges and probate judges it became evident that some other method should be devised if a salary reduction ever became necessary. Accordingly, the proposition was adopted that a salary reduction could be obtained for the judiciary only if general salary reduction were made in each of the other branches of the government. This would eliminate the danger of the judiciary being singled out for salary reduction.

I think the proposal on the stabilization of salaries is self explanatory and I think most of the delegates are aware of the disparity in salaries of the supreme court presently, particularly with respect to a new judge who was elected getting $7,000 more than one who had perhaps served 10 or 12 years on the bench. We felt that this was not a good situation to exist, and I believe that this provision that is suggested by the committee takes care of this situation.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: In accordance with Mr. Danhof's suggestion, the section will be considered paragraph by paragraph. Are there any amendments to the first paragraph of section g?

SECRETARY CHASE: None on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Mahinske, do you have something with respect to the first paragraph?

MR. MAHINSKE: Yes. Mr. Higgs was trying to give me the answer, but possibly Mr. Danhof or Mr. Iverson have this. How are the salaries of the judges handled in the present constitution? Are they in the judicial article?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Mahinske, they are not.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, this brings up this question: the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule in Committee Proposal 124 has taken care of this. There is an obvious conflict here. I don't know whether we should act on this at this time, or if action on this at this time will preclude action on Committee Proposal 124.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Mahinske, perhaps a little history in this particular case will be illuminating to the committee. There is in the constitution at the present time — and which was assigned to the miscellaneous provisions committee — a general prohibition against increase or decrease. At the time this matter came forth I contacted Mr. Erickson, the chairman of the miscellaneous committee. He stated that this matter was within the province of a subcommittee headed by Vice President Hutchinson. I went to Mr. Hutchinson who advised that the subcommittee had considered the idea and was at that time of a mind that each branch of government should handle its own salary restrictions; that is, the executive would write in the executive article their salary restrictions; the legislative, theirs; and the judiciary, theirs. As a consequence, the judicial committee took the matter up insofar as the judiciary was concerned, and we arrived at the conclusion as pointed out by Mr. Iverson. I have now been advised that apparently the miscellaneous committee decided that a general provision was needed. And I would submit that if there is a conflict — and I will be frank to admit that I have not examined the miscellaneous provision in detail — it will probably have to be ironed out when both have been passed and referred to style and drafting.

But it was upon those instructions that the judiciary committee proceeded to handle the salary provision insofar as the judiciary was concerned, and in that regard we arrived at this particular provision to make salaries uniform, to allow them to be increased but not decreased so that we don't have the specter as we have on the supreme court where 2 judges are drawing $6,000 to $7,000 more a year than the remainder of the bench and relative to the general reduction. Now, if there is conflict, Mr. Mahinske, I don't think we should try to remove it out here on the floor, but I give you the background as to why our committee proceeded as we did.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Mahinske yields to Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, first I think I should like to make it clear and apologize to any of the other members of my subcommittee who may have gotten an impression from Mr. Danhof's remark that this was the decision of the subcommittee. I am the first to say that it was not. This is simply my own idea. I noted the present Constitution of Michigan and I noticed that the proposals that are out with regard to the executive branch provide for the compensation of the governor and other officers in the executive branch; the present Constitution of Michigan provides for the legislative salary and so on in the legislative article, and the new proposals will do the same thing. If the judicial article will take care of the judiciary, then really all we have left to be concerned about is something with regard to local government, and that could just as well be taken care of in the local government article.

Since the miscellaneous provisions matter is coming up at the end after we see what the convention wants to do in all of these other fields — except local government; I concede that it hasn't been taken care of in local government yet — maybe the miscellaneous provisions matter should at that time be amended simply to take care of the local governmental picture, because there isn't any real good reason that I can see of having something in the miscellaneous article having to do with salaries when you take care of them, as I say, judicial in the judicial article, and executive in the executive article, and legislative in the legislative article. There isn't any use of having this thing in the miscellaneous section. But the only thing I can suggest is that we wait until we get there and see what has happened in these other areas, Mr. Mahinske.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. Chairman, my point actually was that if we act on section g—I would like a ruling on this—pertaining to salaries, and then when we get into executive, if we act on their section pertaining to salaries, whether they are amended or not on the floor, will this preclude us from going into salaries in Committee Proposal 124 with reference to the judiciary and possibly the executive branch? Because, frankly, I like our article better. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Mahinske, it seems you are asking for a ruling on hypothetical matter, on which the Chair is reluctant to rule.

MR. MAHINSKE: I don't think it is quite hypothetical, because we are dealing with the same topic in the same area right now that is covered in another committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The committee proposal which is before the committee now is in order. A later proposal dealing with substantially the same subject matter, so long as it was not couched in identical terms, would similarly be in order.

Under the resolution defining the functions of the committee on style and drafting, it is one of its functions to call to the attention of the convention, and to attempt to resolve within the scope of its authority, inconsistencies. Certainly it would be within the province of the committee of the whole, or of the full convention at the time of subsequent consideration of similar matter, to attempt to resolve inconsistencies. As long as the matter presented by a subsequent proposal is not the identical matter which is here disposed of, it could be considered in order at that time.

MR. MAHINSKE: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Is there anything further with respect to the first paragraph of section g? Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I think one word of explanation might be in order for some members of this committee who may have received communications from the municipal courts. There has been received and forwarded to me the idea that municipal judges or judges of courts of limited jurisdiction should be herewith included. I should state that it was not our intention to deliberately exclude anyone. However, the courts of the municipalities and other statutory courts are creatures of the legislature. If the prohibition of the present 1908 constitution regarding increase in salary is removed, there is nothing which will prohibit the legislature in the municipal court act from adopting a statute consistent with what we have done here for the constitutionally named courts.

We were reluctant — and I have conferred with other members of the committee, not the full committee — to name herein any statutorily created court, and therefore they have been omitted, not because we are discriminating against them, but because we feel that they can be handled in the legislature. They are creatures of the legislature. And if we name them herein, we might indirectly be creating a constitutionally recognized municipal court, and this we do not want to do. And we feel that when the across the board prohibition that applies to all public officers shall be lifted — and we hope that it would — that then the legislature can amend the municipal court act or any other act that they have creating courts of limited jurisdiction and allow language such as we have "may be increased but shall not be decreased" to be included.

I know the municipal judges from my area have contacted me in this regard. This is the explanation for it. It is not to single them out for any discriminatory treatment, but because they are creatures of the legislature, we feel it can best be handled in this manner. On that basis we do not feel that an amendment to insert them or language thereto would be appropriate.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to the second paragraph of section g?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. McAllister offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 27, after "receive a" by inserting "minimum"; and after "salary" by inserting "of $18,000.00 per year,"; so that the language will then read, "Each of the judges of the circuit courts shall receive a minimum salary of $18,000 per year payable monthly."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. McAllister. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: The explanation of the committee has not been made on this particular section as yet.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Excuse me, Mr. Danhof. The Chair had assumed that Mr. Iverson had made his complete explanation. If not, Mr. McAllister, would you withhold your amendment until we have had the explanation?

MR. McALLISTER: Yes.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, in view of the fact that we have an amendment, we might just as well start fresh after we have had a chance to have lunch, and therefore I would move the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof moves that the committee do now rise. Those in favor of the motion will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The committee will rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration one proposal, of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 96, A proposal pertaining to general and special provisions relative to the courts of the state; has considered several amendments thereto; and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

We have some requests for leave of absence. Mr. White wishes to be excused from the afternoon session to attend a funeral; Mr. Douglas requests leave from the afternoon session, due to a commitment made a year ago to attend a meeting in Philadelphia; Claud Erickson requests permission to be absent June 18 through June 21, inclusive; (laughter) Mr. McAllister requests leave from tomorrow's session because of an emergency matter; and Professor Pollock asks to be excused from the session of Friday in order to attend a meeting in Pittsburgh of the governmental affairs institute, of which he is a director.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the excuses will be granted. They are granted. Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. President, I rise to a question of privilege of the convention. My question of privilege relates to this body and its members in such a manner as affects its proper functioning. Furthermore, I believe this question involves the dignity and integrity of the proceedings of this body. My understanding of the task before this body is that it is of the most solemn and serious deliberative nature.

Yesterday afternoon during a period in this convention when a motion to reconsider a portion of the judiciary article involving the jurisdiction of probate courts was in order and discussed, it is my understanding that a number of probate judges of this state appeared at convention hall and met with certain delegates to this convention to discuss the precise matter involved. I am satisfied that such judges did not come here for that specific purpose, but rather that such an appearance was coincidental. However, it is my understanding that a number of the delegates to this convention were invited from the floor by other delegates to be introduced to said judges while other business of the convention was under debate and that attempts to persuade them were made.

Aside from the rules adopted by this convention with regard to lobbying which may have been violated, it seems to me that such conduct by delegates tends to interfere with the deliberative function of this body and the dignity and integrity of its proceedings.

The proper time and place for hearings of witnesses has passed. Representative testimony from the persons involved was presented to the judiciary committee with proper opportunity and questioning and the weight of such testimony given due deliberation both by the judiciary committee and this convention as a whole. This is brought to the attention of the convention in the hope that repetition of this procedure may be avoided in the future and in the hope that delegates will exercise caution in this matter.

It is to the credit of our delegates that not sufficient minds were changed in this matter to move forward with a motion to reconsider at the time. However, I would not like to think that such an important aspect of our judicial article would be decided in this way.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, this matter will be referred to the committee on rules and resolutions in case any attention needs to be given to it.

Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Higgs rose on a matter of personal privilege. It didn't appear to me, Mr. President, that this related to personal privilege at all. But since he was permitted to make a statement along those lines, it seems to me it is also worth saying that people who appeared here yesterday were citizens of the state of Michigan; that they were certainly entitled to come to this convention hall; that if there were friends of theirs, persons who knew them, among the delegates who wished to have other delegates meet them—and I knew nothing about this matter whatsoever—there is certainly nothing improper in their doing so. It seems to me that the implications of Mr. Higgs' statement are that this was an impropriety and they had no business being here at the constitutional convention. This is a constitutional convention in which all of the people of the state can take part, and I see nothing improper whatsoever in judges or anybody else appearing in this convention hall if they wish to make known their views to the delegates.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Garvin.

MR. GARVIN: I think it is rather unfortunate that a delegate would consider attendance at this convention in such a manner as Delegate Higgs. I didn't personally know that there was anyone here until I read it in the paper and I found out that they were in Lansing for another matter not concerning the constitutional convention. And it seems to me that the delegates should be inviting people here to look at the convention and see what is going on instead of condemning people for coming here and seeing what is happening in the convention. It is very unfortunate that such statement was made about any judges or probate judges or any citizen, for that matter. As far as I know, I don't know of any rule that says that people cannot come and observe the convention and meet people that they know.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Young.

MR. YOUNG: Mr. President, if there is any merit to what Delegate Higgs just said, I think his remarks come a little late. I wonder where he was several months ago when the police department sat in on this convention during the discussion on search and seizure.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. President, delegates, I think one point at least that is justified by Mr. Higgs' remarks is that relating to delegates being invited off the floor of the convention while it was engaged in its work to communicate with these individuals. I don't understand Mr. Higgs' remarks to protest against people coming and visiting the convention in the gallery or being around the building any other place or visiting with delegates or being introduced to other delegates by those whom they already know, but I personally feel that the remarks of Mr. Higgs are justified to the extent that it related to delegates being invited off the floor of the convention for the purpose of being interviewed by those who had strong opinions about some of the pending proposals. Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Dade.

MR. DADE: Mr. President, I have noticed in past months that occasionally we become very sensitive sometimes to what is put in newspapers or sometimes what happens off the convention floor. In a few moments we will be going to our lunch and yesterday began the season of Lent. Most of us think of Lent as a time to observe fast and be careful of our eating, where our tongues might be appreciative of taste.

I wonder if we couldn't exercise during Lent another choice in our tongues, and observe our tongues in not saying things sometimes that reflect on the sensitivity of others, and when we feel that we have been touched, to refrain from saying these things and get along with the business. After all, all of this is costing the taxpayers money, and certainly it is not really germane to our business at hand.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Miss McGowan.

MISS McGOWAN: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I rise to state that I am very proud of Mr. Higgs. He is being very realistic. We are here to write a constitution for all of the people of the state of Michigan. And I was very unhappy and disturbed about what happened in the hall yesterday, and I want to commend Mr. Higgs for making his statement. Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. President, fellow delegates, I feel something like Canon Dade does in that we ought to have charity in our souls these days. I think we need it. And I think that whenever we start to criticize, let's think about what is being done otherwise too. And I have watched 2 of the speakers or 2 of the delegates so far who have watched certain things happen here. One just a moment ago was turned facing—unless he couldn't see, unless he was blind at that particular moment, he didn't see something that just transpired in the gallery. These are disturbing things. This was not convention business. This has occured on quite a few occasions.

There have been pictures taken. There have been delegates from this group who have gone over here and said, "I want you to meet so and so and I want you to meet so and so," and this during our deliberations. I didn't once get up about this, because so far as I am concerned, that is fine. But I just hope that the delegates who had the temerity and the gall to get up and criticize one or another to remember that he might criticize some of his own friends and some things that he feels about. Don't let him just criticize somebody else that did something that he didn't like.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Plank.

MR. PLANK: Mr. President, I trust this will be palatable to those in attendance. I move we recess until 2:00 o'clock this afternoon. (applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Plank. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed, no.

We are recessed until 2:00 o'clock.

The convention will please come to order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: Before we read this request for leave of absence, Father Dade and one other delegate report that his habit and a hat has disappeared. If anyone has knowledge thereof, it would be appreciated if it would be returned.

Delegate Hood asks to be excused from part of the afternoon session and all of the session for tomorrow, Friday.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, he will be excused. The Chair hears none. He is excused.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering matters on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Van Dusen.

[Whereupon, Mr. Van Dusen assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The committee will be in order. When the committee sat this morning, it was considering and is still considering Committee Proposal 96, dealing with general provisions relating to the courts of the state. The matter under discussion is the second paragraph of section g of Committee Proposal 96. I believe before we had proceeded to the second paragraph, Mr. William Hanna had sought recognition.

MR. W. F. HANNA: I have a question on the second paragraph.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hanna, you are recognized at this time.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, a question to Mr. Danhof. Throughout the local government and again in the judicial article there seems to be some confusion between referring to counties as a legal entity and the board of supervisors. My question, Mr. Danhof, is whether or not in style and drafting we have the liberty to say that the county may pay supplemental salaries rather than the board of supervisors, because it is the county who pays supplemental salary.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Your question relates to the second paragraph, Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Are we on the second paragraph?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The first paragraph is passed. I thought your question related to it. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Hanna, if the committee on style and drafting desires to be consistent, which I think would be very proper, then we have no objection, where these words have been used in the past interchangeably from "the board of supervisors" to the "county", to going to the legal entity known as "the county," I am sure, just as long as the intent has not been changed. Does that answer your question?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof, I believe you have yielded to Mr. Iverson for explanation?

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, we had gotten through the first paragraph of section g and, as I understand it, we are now on the second paragraph regarding the counties being allowed to supplement the salaries of the particular circuit judges.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: That is correct. That is the posture of the committee, Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: At this time, if I could, I should like to call upon a delegate from Detroit to give us some words as to the reasoning of the committee in retaining this particular section in this regard, the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Bledsoe.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, the action of the judicial committee when it came to discuss this matter followed the general practice that has been engaged in in permitting the supplementing of the judges' salaries by the counties and that practice, of course, it was suggested and thought, would be adhered to. However, that still leaves the question open as to possible inequalities of the judges' salaries, because it then still leaves the possibility that possibly the less rich or less wealthy counties will not equalize their contributions that would make the salaries of the judges equal. We are still left with that problem. But it is thought wise—and I think you all agree with me—that this, after all, will be better handled through legislative procedures and certainly does not come within the purview of the constitution except possibly from a basic level because there will probably be some differences.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: That is all we have at this time in the way of committee explanation, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there amendments to the second paragraph? Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I have a question for the chairman of the committee or for Mr. Bledsoe, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may proceed, Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: The question is, do I understand correctly that the second paragraph of this section is presently identical with section 12 of article VII of our present constitution?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Unless I am in error—and I assume you are looking at the same thing I am—I would say it was identical. I think you will find it on your sheet.

MR. WANGER: Well, it appears to me to be the same, but I just wanted to ask.

MR. BLEDSOE: It is identical.

MR. WANGER: My second question here is, doesn't the legislature have the power to provide for additional compensation on a county basis for circuit courts without an express constitutional provision for it?

MR. BLEDSOE: I would think so. I would think so.

MR. WANGER: Since it has been established for so long and I think most everyone agrees that it is quite proper to have it that way, is there any real need for that second paragraph to be included in the constitution then? Isn't it really more a legislative matter that we can now leave out?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: I believe I would yield that question to our chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bledsoe yields to Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Wanger, it is very possible that what you say is absolutely true, that the legislature could provide that the counties within the circuit could supplement the salary granted by the state, which is now $12,500. It also is true, however, that they could prohibit this. You see, it isn't a grant, if you want to put it on that basis. It is not a grant of power, because the constitution doesn't grant the legislature anything anyway, but it is a prohibition against the legislature prohibiting the contribution by counties within a circuit.

MR. WANGER: I am sure we all realize that this has been a practice since—oh, I think it was in the Constitution of 1850 and of course in our present one. I just raise the question, isn't it well enough accepted now so that merely leaving this provision out of the constitution would result in no change in the present system, but it would result in removing something from the constitution which now really is no longer needed, like our shortening of the exemptions article, for example?

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Wanger, I agree with you that the concept is pretty well accepted, but it seems to me that it was not too long ago that there was attempted to be imposed a maximum salary, if I'm not mistaken. Maybe some of the delegates from Wayne county can recall that a little better than I could, but it seems to me that it was not too many years ago that the legislature endeavored to limit what could be contributed by the counties and it was found to be unconstitutional. It came about, I think, with the grant by the county of Wayne of $1 more than the salary, when they tried to pass a statute which would prohibit any county from contributing more to the base salary than was being received by a supreme court justice. It seems to me there was some legislative enactment attempted in that regard. It was either attempted and failed because of this prohibition, or if it did pass it was found to be unconstitutional.

This gets down to strictly a matter of local payment. I suppose if the state salaries were raised to a sufficient amount, the boards of supervisors would be able to cut out the supplementation. If the state salary were raised to $25,000 maybe the county of Wayne could see fit that that would be a sufficient amount and they wouldn't contribute anymore. I am sure they probably wouldn't give them $25,001 so they could stay under the pension plan, because this would make a $50,000 a year judge, and that would be pretty high. We just struggled with the problem and we came back with the idea that the best thing we could hope for was the legislature to raise the base pay and allow this particular section to stand.

MR. WANGER: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Madar, did you desire to be recognized for a question with respect to the second paragraph of section g?

MR. MADAR: I want to be sure of what I understand here. Delegate Danhof, am I right in thinking that you feel that the state should set a salary here for the judges and that this be the same salary throughout the state and nothing else be given to the judges except this salary from the state? I am asking Delegate Danhof this question.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Delegate Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: This is not the intention of the report of the committee, Mr. Madar. Quite the opposite.

MR. MADAR: I am just asking. I want to be sure.

MR. DANHOF: We only state that the county may supplement. I said we considered whether or not there should be one salary for all circuit judges, and the conclusion of the majority of the committee was that we could not set in the constitution and should not set in the constitution a set salary. We just felt that that was an improper constitutional provision, and the results of the committee were simply the opposite. Mr. Ford here states he might want to talk in this regard. I would yield to him, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof yields to Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: This language is essentially the same, if not identically the same, as the language of the present constitution, and it is the language that gives us the constitutional sanction for what is called supplementation of the circuit judges because you have to conceive of them as state officers rather than county officials, and although it has been indicated here that maybe this could be done by legislation, some of us feel that it should be in the constitution because it is questionable whether the legislature could set up a pay scale that was not uniform throughout the state, and there is also serious doubt as to whether or not you could supplement the salary so that a state officer serving in one part of the state gets a different salary than a state officer serving in another part of the state if the constitution didn't provide for it. I think we should support the committee recommendation.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to inquire with regard to the first sentence of the second paragraph, lines 27 and 28, where it says that "Each of the judges of the circuit courts shall receive a salary payable monthly." I would like to inquire as to the importance of that language there. I dare say that the judges, if they receive vouchers from the state, get them more than monthly now. They probably get paid at least twice a month, so I don't suppose that this is an actual reflection even of the present practice. But suppose that this sentence were stricken out entirely? Would anything be lost?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: The answer from my own personal opinion is, Mr. Hutchinson, probably it would not. Now, if you say they are being paid monthly, are you implying that they are violating the constitution?

MR. HUTCHINSON: No.

MR. DANHOF: I don't either. I don't know how they are being paid.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof and Mr. Hutchinson, the Chair would advise that there is a pending amendment which would strike the words "a salary payable monthly" and insert "an annual salary as provided by law." That is an amendment offered by Messrs. Garvin and Gadola which we will reach in due course. The present business is the amendment offered by Mr. McAllister which the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. McAllister's amendment:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. McAllister. The Chair will recognize Mr. McAllister.

MR. McALLISTER: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, all of our circuit judges throughout Michigan perform similar services. I believe they are all of fairly equal ability and have a fairly equal work load. In Wayne county the judges receive a total of $25,100. It varies throughout the state according to the supplemental pay awarded by the board of supervisors.

It seems to me that it is very unfair to have one judge getting $25,000 and another one getting $12,500 performing the same work, and my recommendation is that the state pay to all judges the sum of $18,000 per year. It is my opinion that any lawyer competent enough to be judge would earn as much or more than this amount of money, and the legislature presently has set the salary at $12,500 and after the retirement pay is taken out and withholding, they get approximately, I think, about $800 a month. While it is a good salary for ordinary type of work, considering the qualifications of the judges and what they could earn in private practice it would seem that the minimum salary that they should receive is the amount that I recommend. Therefore, I ask the committee to adopt this amendment. It will not affect supplemental pay. If any county wishes to give supplemental pay to its judges, it can still do so. And it shouldn't affect the salaries in the Wayne county area or any other area where the judges are now getting supplemental pay that, with the state salary, amounts to more than $18,000 per year. I ask that you approve this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: On the McAllister amendment, the Chair recognizes Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I am sorry that I have to get up and oppose Mr. McAllister's amendment, but I am grieved that an amendment like this would be offered because it is so obviously a matter of pure legislative policy. As Mr. McAllister mentioned, the circuit judges now receive a state salary of $12,500. This has been set by the legislature. The legislature from time to time has been increasing that salary. The last time it increased it—let the record show if it must—I introduced the bill which raised it up to its present $12,500. I don't doubt but what there is increasing demand, pressure and justification as time goes on for further legislative increasing of that salary, but I can assure you that the legislature will increase it.

What Mr. McAllister wants this committee to do right now is to raise that salary constitutionally. I see the word "minimum" there. He wants to write a floor in there, but the floor is a floor which is almost 1/3 higher than the present state ceiling. And I would remind Mr. McAllister of this problem that we always run into when we talk about the salary of circuit judges, and that is that whatever the state decides to pay them down in Wayne county, Wayne county has to match it plus one in order to keep those judges under their retirement system. So that what we would be doing would be setting a floor, practically, in Wayne county of $36,001. I don't think it is good policy to write a thing like this into the fundamental law, a very poor policy indeed.

The value of money, I guess, as a long term proposition continues to depreciate, but nevertheless we have gone through times when an $18,000 salary as a floor would be quite exorbitant in comparison with what the government could afford to pay other public officers. So I trust that the committee will not be swayed by this desire to raise the circuit judges' pay and to think that it is the legislature. Let's leave to the legislature the things that are legislative, and let us concern ourselves with things constitutional.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. McAllister. Mr. McAllister.

MR. McALLISTER: According to the information I have, the last time the circuit judges received an increase in pay was in 1953. We are all aware of the fact that the inflationary trend has existed since that time. I don't think that we are particularly concerned about whether the people of Wayne county want to raise the wages of their judges further. This is a state matter. And the thing is that it just seems to be very unfair to have men doing the same type of work with one of the groups receiving half the pay that the other does.

Now, everything has increased. The legislature hasn't seen fit to increase the circuit judges' salary in 9 years and it doesn't look as if they will. I recall when I was 12 or 13 years of age that people got $1.50 a day, and that is peanuts today, and every year it goes up a little more, so they have a constantly increasing inflation which is certainly not going to stop for any time in the foreseeable future, so that each year under the present setup the circuit judge is actually getting less dollars than he can use to pay his bills and obligations, while attorneys in private practice are earning more and more money because of the inflationary tendencies.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. McAllister. Does any delegate desire to have it read again? If not, those in favor of the amendment will say aye. Those opposed to the amendment will say no.

The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read the next amendment.

MR. McALLISTER: Mr. Chairman, let the record show that I voted yes. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Thank you, Mr. McAllister. The secretary will read the next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Garvin and Gadola offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 27, after "receive" by striking out "a salary payable monthly" and inserting "an annual salary as provided by law".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Garvin and Gadola, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Garvin.

MR. GARVIN: Mr. Chairman and delegates, this is merely an amendment to change the language and not the effect. It is noticed, I believe, that circuit judges are not paid monthly as set out in the constitution, and their salary is also by the year. It is merely a statement of the way that we are setting it up. They do receive an annual salary and it is not paid monthly. I believe it is paid semimonthly at this time. So we are asking that that language read "an annual salary as provided by law," so that it may be paid monthly or semimonthly or weekly, any way that the legislature sees fit to pay it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Garvin and Gadola to strike out "a salary payable monthly" and insert "an annual salary as provided by law." Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, reading the amendment, I see no objection to it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Those in favor of the amendment will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is adopted. Are there further amendments to the second paragraph of section g?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Barthwell, Everett and Tubbs offer the following amendment to section g:

1. Amend page 3, line 3, after "therein.", by inserting "No judge or justice of any court of record in this state shall engage in the practice of law during his term.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Barthwell, Everett and Tubbs. The Chair will recognize Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I am merely following through with my deep seated philosophy that all judges should be lawyers. Further than that, I have a feeling that the judges should not have a conflict of interest, and I think that when a judge practices law on the side, he definitely has a conflict of interest. I believe that he is basically a servant of the people in all the state, so I think when he takes specific cases, that he is taking cases that conflict with his duties to the public as a whole.

Our committee mentioned this question but we did not vote on it. We thought about it, and we tried to establish a framework by which such a condition as this could be established. We provided in there that where the counties are small and they don't have sufficient work, the legislature could create districts. Further than that, I realize that this question of where the money is coming from is coming up. I am of the opinion, on the basis of the studies and testimony that has been presented to our committee, that more and more of the states are recognizing that the salary of a judge is a state responsibility. Therefore, I feel that we can enlarge the districts. We can give proper consideration to the state assuming its proper function so that we can project the constitution to serve us over the period of years that we hope it will be necessary. So I want to ask the delegates to give this very serious consideration because I think it is in the best interests of the people of the state.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Barthwell, Everett and Tubbs. Does any delegate desire to have the amendment read again? If not, those who are in favor—Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: May I propound to the makers of the amendment this particular question: whether or not they have now made this provide that any judge or justice of any court of record—now, I assume they understand that this would include some of the probate courts which are now functioning and probably will continue to function in individual counties even for quite some time after the adoption of this particular constitution, and I submit that it may be some time before the case load or even the districting would take place to put in a judge who would have enough to do full time and which would allow the county to pay him—or even a district—a sufficient wage so that he could be attracted and devote his full time to it.

Now, I am in complete sympathy with the end that is endeavored to be obtained. We all know that our circuit judges don't practice law. They are just too busy. We know the supreme court justices don't practice law. They are too busy. We are hopeful that our court of appeals judges will likewise not practice law, and I think that it may be a matter which will, in and of itself, be handled as the work load would increase. What you are striking at here is probate courts in the less populated areas where they have a probate judge whom they pay a salary of perhaps $5,000 a year. He is a lawyer, and perhaps he spends 2 or maybe 3 days a week on the bench and this adequately, for now, handles the legal business and the court business. In the meantime he is free to engage in the practice of law so that he may supplement his judicial salary to such an extent that he can receive a decent living wage to support himself and his family as if he were engaged full time in practice.

I feel inclined to agree with the objective that is sought, but I am not sure that it is something that should be written into the constitution at this time. I therefore would feel that at this time I would oppose the amendment, simply on the grounds that we might be handicapping, for the beginning and for perhaps some period of time to come, the probate judges or judges of other courts of record if the legislature should so desire to designate any of the courts of limited jurisdiction.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: The only thing I wanted to say was this: I thought he asked me if it did refer to the courts of record. It does refer to courts of record. And I would like to say to my chairman I am sorry that he or Mr. Iverson couldn't have found fit to say they saw no objection to this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Sleder.

MR. SLEDER: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, it is difficult for me to understand what Delegates Everett and Tubbs are attempting to do. First they were successful in requiring that all probate judges be attorneys—and we people who represent some of the counties that are sparsely populated objected very strenuously to this and put forth the problems that would be faced by the boards of supervisors in attempting to employ attorneys—and now they are compounding the problem by restricting him to only the probate work when they so ably pointed out to most of the delegates—and probably it must have been very effective—that the work in the probate court is not sufficient in some of these counties to take the full time of a judge.

Therefore, I would very, very urgently urge you not to vote in favor of this amendment, because we have already created enough problems for the probate courts in some of the areas of Michigan without compounding them more, and it will come to the point that we will definitely have to rush to Lansing for some help in order to meet the financial crisis we will find ourselves in in our probate court areas.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman, delegates, I hope the delegates realize that judges of the circuit court are now by statute barred from practicing law. I don't think there is any difference of opinion as to the supreme court, the court of appeals, if it is created, and the circuit court, because they are full time officers. But this language mentions "all courts of record," and yesterday we put in the power of the legislature to designate even municipal courts as courts of record, and we do have a real problem there. Many probate judges could not afford to serve in that office at the present time unless they had the privilege of practicing at least to a limited scale in the circuit court. I think this amendment goes too far and should therefore not be adopted.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, first of all I want to apologize. I had to leave the floor to answer the phone and consequently what I say may already have been said. But that doesn't usually stop many of us and won't stop me in this instance. (laughter) The purpose of this is to implement what we have been trying to do, and that is create a full time judiciary. To me, this thing cuts both ways. If you are going to say that you will attract and hold good judges and pay them adequately, then I think that they should be obligated to devote their time and attention to this function and to nothing else.

I think Mr. Sleder probably has pointed out a weakness that we recognized was there that this full time judiciary will not come about overnight and maybe this idea ought to be delayed. And possibly Judge Dehnke has given us an answer in saying that the legislature may do it, but if we are going to be consistent in suggesting that the judiciary is entitled to certain benefits, which I certainly think they are, and at the same time suggesting that people are better served by a full time judiciary, then I think we should carry this a step further and assume that those who are going to assume this role are going to devote their time and energies to it. I don't know whether this point was made before or not. This matter was discussed in this committee and it was never voted upon one way or the other. I don't think there is any official committee position on it one way or the other. It was one of those things which kind of got lost in the shuffle of the final few days' work.

As to the comment of Judge Dehnke that this could extend to municipal courts, we recognize that it could. In that case we feel that the legislature would use discretion in designating which municipal courts would be courts of record and therefore served by full time lawyer judges who would be required to devote their time to that office alone, and which municipal courts would be perhaps part time jobs and therefore not courts of record. I think this is consistent with what we have done to try to elevate the judiciary, and I think that we are entitled to ask that you vote in favor of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Howes.

MR. HOWES: Mr. Chairman, we would lose many, many excellent probate judges in this state if this amendment were adopted, and therefore I urge you to oppose it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I think the matter of the probate judges has been adequately covered, but in our county I believe that outside of the city of Detroit, out of some 30 municipalities there are only 3 communities that have full time municipal judges, and we have a number of very able practicing attorneys who are municipal judges on a part time basis. Most of the small cities are not in the position to pay the kind of salary that would be necessary in the first instance to attract the quality of the judges that we now have on a part time basis to a full time job. Secondly, if they were able to pay for them in many of the small cities, they couldn't keep them busy on a full time basis. So if we are talking about putting something here in the constitution with this test involved, what actually could happen is we would prevent the legislature from at any time in the future giving municipal courts powers of a court of record or any kind of powers that could be construed to make this municipal court a court of record, because we would immediately be by indirection, in giving them powers of a court of record, saddling them with the requirement of a full time judge who had to give up his law practice to take the position. I oppose the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Spitler.

MR. SPITLER: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I would also like to oppose the amendment. In one of the counties that I represent we have an attorney who is a probate judge. When he ran in the campaign, he ran with the understanding that he would devote 2 full days to that work and that he felt that it could be done efficiently. I think the people of that county feel that it has been done and is being done efficiently. The question that I would like to ask the sponsors of this is, what would they do in this particular county?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Does one of the sponsors of the amendment care to respond to Mr. Spitler's inquiry? Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Spitler, we have already made provision in Committee Proposal 94 to permit either the districting or the combination of activities of that court, and our idea there was to create a full time court so that we could attract men who wanted to be occupied all the time and pay them accordingly. We are simply here saying that if that is the kind of man you want to attract—and I think all of us do—that he must not then devote part of his time to other activities.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Spitler.

MR. SPITLER: Thank you. But in answer to that, I would say until such time as we arrive at that, we would have to be taken care of in this county.

MR. EVERETT: Maybe we just want to nudge the time ahead a little bit.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Spitler, will you yield to Mr. Tubbs for further response?

MR. SPITLER: I will.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Spitler yields to Mr. Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, I think I can't answer the question any more than it has been answered, except that we find the same emotional responses here from the same people who defended the 33 nonlawyer probate judges yesterday. If there are 33 nonlawyer probate judges, you already have 33 probate judges who can't practice law. I doubt very much if in the small counties there are many more probate judges who might be permitted to practice law if there were no prohibition against it, but either they are lawyers or they aren't, and if they aren't, they can't practice. I think this, Mr. Chairman, will work out. It may take a little time, and I am sure we can handle it in the long run.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Spitler.

MR. SPITLER: Mr. Chairman, I would like to answer that. I was not one of those who supported the nonlawyers for probate judges.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Spitler, do you desire to yield to Mr. Sleder for some comment?

MR. SPITLER: Yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Sleder.

MR. SLEDER: I believe Delegate Tubbs was referring to my remarks. I was looking to the future when we did adopt the fact that all probate judges must be lawyers, and we have counties there that eventually and within the next 3, 4, 5, 6 or 7 years will have to employ as their probate judge a lawyer, and I cannot see any possible way whatsoever of getting a lawyer to assume the work of the probate court in some of those areas unless they are given the privilege of practicing law besides their probate work.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Spitler, do you yield the floor at this time?

MR. SPITLER: Yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, there are 2 evils that this amendment would tend to correct that don't seem to have been touched on. In the counties where the justices of the peace are attorneys, since they can't hear their own cases you often find the situation where one of them, the J.P. or the municipal judge, will be sitting as judge, the attorneys representing the clients are surrounding municipal judges and justices of the peace, and in the afternoon he goes over and tries, as an attorney, a case before the man or one of the men who was before him as an attorney in the morning. You have the same situation as to the probate judges. If they are going to be handling cases of people in their counties as attorneys, the adversaries who may also be before the probate judges may feel prejudiced. So I think that is one thing you should think of. This is designed to correct a real and existing evil, and I urge the adoption of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I think I see one evil that this amendment might create, and before I make the assertion, I better ask a question. I would like to ask one of the sponsors of the amendment if I am correct in assuming that probate judges need not be lawyers. Is this correct?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Would one of the sponsors like to respond to that? Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: I think that we adopted that probate judges of the future, except the ones that are nonlawyers now, must be lawyers.

MR. AUSTIN: There seems to be a tendency here to discriminate then between those who are nonlawyers. It would appear that a nonlawyer serving as a probate judge could carry on whatever activity he normally engages in.

MR. BARTHWELL: He is already discriminated against. He can't practice law anyway. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, the point I was making is that a probate judge who is a nonlawyer would be able to carry on whatever his normal activity is as well as carry on as a probate judge, but if he should happen to be a lawyer, he would not be able to carry on in his field of activity.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I may as well bring it out in the open. Mr. Austin is my accountant. I have never been able to win an argument with him, so I certainly would like to win this argument. (laughter) But further than that, going back to what Delegate Lawrence said, when I went with the education committee in the upper peninsula, I was just standing too close to the conversation of another delegate and one of his friends who told him, "Man, I never had it so good. I'm the only lawyer in this county, and we have a justice of the peace who is not a lawyer, and whenever he gets to a case of law, he stops and says, 'Just a minute,' and asks me, 'How am I supposed to rule now?'" (laughter)

You see, one of the things that impressed me tremendously in this law committee was the fact that of all the outstanding people that were brought before this committee from the country over, including Mr. Winters—I just want to use this word too so you can find out that I learned how to say "judicature society" so I'm qualified for the law, you see (laughter)—who was the chairman of the judicature society, admitted, when I asked him a direct question if he considered that our courts were bad and if he knew of any instances where we have had any record of corruption, that we hadn't experienced such things. So I think since we are writing the constitution for the future, we have to remember that even these courts that are not courts of record are courts, and so far as I and the public are concerned, if they become corrupt and bad, then we are going to establish a reputation for our courts which I hope that we can escape, and if we do nothing more here than discuss it to the point that the legislature might sometime feel that they should take this action, I think we will have accomplished a useful purpose.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair is tempted to state that the question is on the argument between Messrs. Austin and Barthwell. (laughter) Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, I didn't realize you would get to me so quickly when I stood up. I have 3 objections to this. I don't believe that it should be included in the constitution because it is something that really doesn't need to be there. It is statutory, if it is even that. The second reason that I object to it is that it does interfere with the operation of the probate courts in our area, as has been stated. But the third reason, and the one that I consider most important, and the reason that I basically got up to talk about it, is this: I feel that any judge who is serving in a court of record such as the circuit court or an appeals court or the supreme court would be violating the ethics of the bar association if he were to practice law while holding one of those offices. And I have been informed that the bar association does have a strong code of ethics that they engage in policing their own activities. I know that the lawyers in this room will testify that if any judge practiced law unethically, the association would see to it that he got removed from office and was properly taken care of. I would suggest you vote against this amendment and that we also at the same time put a vote of confidence in the lawyers of this state.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hubbs is getting closer to graduating every minute. (laughter) Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, I would only rise to say this: while this was not the intent of the amendment, it has succeeded in bringing forth the first words of praise most of us have heard in 2 weeks, and it certainly has been one of the finest amendments which has been offered in 2 weeks. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Barthwell, Everett and Tubbs. Does any delegate desire to have the amendment read again? If not, those in favor of the amendment will say aye. Those opposed will say no. The Chair is in doubt.

MR. BARTHWELL: Division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Division is requested. The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Barthwell, Everett and Tubbs. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment, the yeas are 37; the nays are 70.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is not adopted. Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I don't want to be accused of trespassing on Dr. Anspach's domain, but we have been talking about judges of probate who are not lawyers and we have been talking about lawyers, which reminded me of a certain judge of probate who was not a lawyer and had developed a very poor opinion of lawyers. One morning a friend came into his office and said, "Judge, Lawyer Jones died last night. He doesn't have a cent in his estate. We are taking up a collection with which to bury him and we wondered if we might strike you for a contribution of $10." And the judge said, "Ten dollars to bury a lawyer? Here's $100; go bury 10 of them." (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Follo.

MR. FOLLO: A little more of this facetiousness. I can't top the one that the judge just told, but I am reminded by all this talk of judges about the time that Supreme Court Justice Harlan Stone was talking to Robert Maynard Hutchins when he was dean of the law school at Yale at 28 years of age. He said, "I suppose, Mr. Hutchins, you tell all your young men at Yale that all judges are fools." And Hutchins said, "No. We let them find it out for themselves." (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any further amendments—Judge Gadola.

MR. GADOLA: Mr. Chairman, I am not going to be facetious, but on behalf of the present circuit judges, I want to thank this committee for one thing in adopting section g as they did. If you read the last line of section g, you will find that these outstate judges that receive very little salary will be pleased to serve in Wayne county and help reduce the case load there.

You know, years ago the legislature passed an act that the visiting judges would receive the same pay as the local judges. The supreme court declared that unconstitutional. We have put it in this constitution, for which the present judges will be thankful.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any further amendments to the second paragraph? If not, it is agreed to as amended. Are there any further amendments to section g?

SECRETARY CHASE: None on file.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Section g, as amended, is passed, and the secretary will read section h.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section h:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: For an explanation of section h, the Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee, Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, for the committee explanation on this particular section I should like to call upon the delegate from Bay City, the vice chairman of the committee, Judge Leibrand.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof yields to Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman and delegates, we shouldn't have any difficulty with this one. (laughter) Section h has been transported bodily from the Constitution of 1908. It appears in the old constitution as section 6 of article IX. Article IX deals primarily with impeachments. A very similar provision as we find in section h was also found in the Constitution of 1850 and in the Constitution of 1835.

Judges in Michigan have never been subject, I don't believe, to recall, that is, to removal by vote of the people. They have been subject to impeachment. However, impeachment connotes some wrongdoing or corruption in office in connection with official duties or official actions. You have another possible situation, however, which is covered by this section h. Maybe you have several situations, but the outstanding situation which you may encounter and for which a remedy is required is a situation where a judge becomes mentally or physically incompetent during his term of office. That is particularly aggravated, because if he is mentally incompetent, he couldn't resign if he wanted to. He wouldn't have the capacity to resign and the public might be stuck with a judge for 6 or 8 years who couldn't, because of mental or physical disabilities, attend to any of the duties of his office. Section h would permit removal, by 2/3 vote of the members elected to each house, of a judge who was in such condition, or removal for some other cause which was not sufficient for impeachment. Over half of the states of the United States have similar provisions in their constitution. We have had it here, as I say, for 130 years in our constitutions and we feel it should be continued.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to section h of Committee Proposal 96?

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, we had an amendment at one point to this section which would have given the power of removal to the supreme court. However, when Mr. McAllister's amendment to section c of Committee Proposal 91 came up, at that time it included a prohibition not only against removal by the supreme court, but against suspension by the supreme court, and the committee struck out the prohibition against suspension, thereby making it clear that in the superintending power of the supreme court and its disciplinary power it had the power to suspend the judge. In view of this fact, I see no necessity for offering an amendment to section h since it has been made clear that the supreme court does have the right to maintain discipline in the judicial system through its power of suspension.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to ask a question, I suppose of Judge Leibrand. I would just like to know on line 9 what they mean when they say "at length in such resolution".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: This is a rather common phrase. I would say that it means that the complete nature of the charges or reasons should be set forth.

MR. BARTHWELL: Thank you.

MR. LEIBRAND: In other words, not simply the word "senile" or the words "awful sick" or anything of that sort. (laughter) The complete nature of the situation should be set forth.

MR. BARTHWELL: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: There being nothing further with respect to section h, it will pass.

Section h is passed and the secretary will read section i.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section i:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: For an explanation of section i, the Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee, Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, for the explanation of the majority of the committee regarding this particular section, I yield to the delegate from Battle Creek, Mr. Everett.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this is a new section. It actually incorporates 2 separate ideas in the 2 separate paragraphs. The first paragraph provides for a period of 5 years in which the legislature can adapt to the situation of creating the new courts of limited jurisdiction. We recognize that there is a need for a transition period. To make this effective on the effective date of this constitution would not permit a sufficient time for an orderly transfer of duties and functions from one court to another. Within our own committee we discussed at some length the idea of creating a county court system. We recognized that it was a difficult matter and that it was not going to be done overnight. We also recognized the question of whether municipal courts should continue or be incorporated into a new system was a matter which was going to require a good deal of discussion and debate within the legislature, so we felt that 5 years was not too long a period to permit this development of a new system of courts of limited jurisdiction.

The second paragraph. As has been pointed out in connection with other matters, there are a number of special statutory courts in existence today. All the municipal courts have been created by statute. The recorder's court and common pleas court of Detroit, the superior court of Grand Rapids, the court of claims—all of these courts were set up by the legislature and of course can be changed by the legislature as time goes along. Recognizing, again, that in some of these courts at least there was a conflict between Committee Proposal 90, which said that the legislature may create courts of limited jurisdiction, and the action already taken by the legislature preceding this constitution, we felt that we should specifically point out that we were not interfering with the statutory courts as they exist. The legislature created them, the legislature has the power to abolish them, and we are specifically indicating that they shall continue until such time as the legislature may act.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to section i?

SECRETARY CHASE: Pursuant to the minority report of Messrs. Ford, Ostrow and Garvin,

Mr. Ford offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 3 by striking out all of lines 11 through 17; and in line 18, by striking out "special statutory" and inserting "Sec. i. All"; and in line 20, after "unless" by striking out "they" and inserting "such powers"; and after "are" by inserting "modified or"; so that section i will read, beginning in line 18:

> Sec. i. All statutory courts in existence as of the time this constitution becomes effective shall retain their powers and jurisdiction, except as provided by law, until and unless such powers are modified or abolished by law.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Ford, Ostrow and Garvin pursuant to their minority report. The Chair will recognize Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: The explanation of the minority report is on page 582 of the journal. Very briefly, the effect of our amendment is to take out the death penalty and leave completely in the hands of the legislature the ultimate disposition of the justice of the peace and the circuit court commissioner. It may be that in some parts of the state this court is obsolete and of no service. It may well be also—and I think we should be broad minded enough to admit as a possibility—there may be part of the state where this court serves well and may continue to serve well in the future where the people might prefer to keep it.

I can see no justification for continuing the justice of the peace as a constitutional office, because it hamstrings us; it works to the disadvantage of parts of the state where some other system might work better. The committee started out to provide ostensibly for flexibility, but actually they approached this thing from the negative point of view of how can we abolish the justice of the peace, and came to this language. They didn't want to abolish him forthwith so they said, "Well, let's do it 5 years from now."

Here is what they have actually done. If we agree that it is not right for the justice court to be frozen into the constitution and for its jurisdiction to be frozen in—and we have already agreed to the exclusion reports that will take the jurisdictional provisions with respect to justice courts out of the constitution—then why wait 5 years? What you are saying if you adopt the committee report is that we are going to leave it to the legislature, but we are not going to leave it to the legislature to provide an alternative for this court until 5 years from now, because the first sentence says, "The office of circuit court commissioner and justice of the peace shall continue to have, for a period of not to exceed 5 years from the date this constitution becomes effective. . . ." The only way that the legislature can make a change in this within this period without affecting the entire state is if you take them out of the constitution entirely and leave to the legislature the question of whether there should be a justice court. And then by our amendment we add language that indicates that the present powers—whether they are statutory or by constitution—that these courts have will continue until the legislature does something to extinguish them.

This has, in addition to the function of continuing the court, another function, which is that if you start to look at all of the statutes that refer to the justice of the peace and his duties, you will find that it is a very exhaustive problem to try to find every one of the statutes that mentions him and make the changes necessary to replace the powers in some other court, and it is conceivable that a number of mistakes might occur. So what we are simply doing here is providing for some continuity so that we don't have a vacuum of authority and so that jurisdictional changes will actually only occur by deliberate action of the legislature rather than by the failure of the legislature to act.

I submit there is nothing magic in the 5 year term for this provision, and we have had enough experience with deadlines around here to know that when you say to the legislature that they should do this in 5 years, what you are inviting them to do is argue about this until 4 years 11 months and 20 days from the constitution's adoption and then quickly throw together some kind of a patchwork system. I think that we would do better if we allowed the legislature to forthwith provide, for example in Wayne county, that townships could have a municipal court instead of a justice court with a lawyer as a judge and with a salary, et cetera, et cetera, if the people wanted it there. We can't now have this sort of local option because of the constitutional status of the justice court. By the same token, I think we should let the people in northern Michigan or rural Michigan continue the present system just as it is if that is what they want, with the exception of the changes that we have made to kind of clean it up a little bit.

For this reason we find ourselves on the side of the angels pleading for that all wonderful thing called flexibility, by saying, "Today we ought to trust the legislature," and the Democratic minority on this particular issue is ready to go sled's length and trust them all the way. We will see whether the majority wants to trust the legislature today or not.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Ford, Ostrow and Garvin. Mr. Everett, did you seek recognition on this amendment?

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, apparently Mr. Ford and I have different ideas of what trust involves. To me, to tell them that they have 5 years in which to develop this plan and then for him to say they will do it in 10 days does not exhibit very strong trust in the legislature. I don't think that it will take any 5 years for them to act, but I recognize that it will take time. We are not telling them what they are to do in Wayne county as to townships or municipalities or any other part of the state.

He suggests that the justice of the peace has many duties beyond judicial duties, and this is certainly true and we are not interested in taking those from the justice of the peace. For that matter, if the legislature wants to leave those duties with the justice of the peace or the township supervisor or any other area, they have a perfect right to do it. We are really not talking about the nonjudicial functions of this office, although we clearly stated that all of their powers would remain until they acted. He has suggested that there would be a vacuum of authority, and it is for this very reason that we have put in the 5 years period. What he is really saying is not that there will be a vacuum of authority, not that the nonjudicial functions cannot be changed, but that the system will remain untouched.

Yesterday, without debate, without amendment, without a word being offered in its defense, we said that the fee system of paying any judges would die now, with this constitution. We in the committee recognize that even this would have to live for some period of time, and that is why we considered 5 years. But Mr. Ford is now saying that what no man would defend yesterday, today he would seek to do without telling us that he is doing it. There is no necessity for us writing in this provision at all if we don't intend to live up to what we said yesterday, that the fee system will die. If you wish to perpetuate it, then let's say so and fight it out on that line.

The amendment which they offer has no purpose for existence except to modify what we have already done. I submit that the committee proposal was fair. The vote was taken after deliberation. It was taken after examining other possible areas in which to move. It is a compromise between the extreme of saying "Tomorrow you must have something new" and saying "You need never have something new." I think it is a fair and an adequate compromise. I would wholeheartedly support the committee position and ask that you defeat the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I would like to ask Mr. Everett a question through the Chair. Mr. Everett, what language in my amendment would vitiate the section we have already adopted abolishing the fee system?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Your language would say that all courts in existence at the time this constitution becomes effective shall retain their powers and jurisdictions and so forth.

MR. FORD: Is the fee system a power or jurisdictional matter with the court?

MR. EVERETT: It is a method of paying the courts in existence.

MR. FORD: Does it have anything to do with the court's power or jurisdiction?

MR. EVERETT: Of course not.

MR. FORD: Then why were you trying to create the impression with these people that we are trying to sneak the fee system in the back door?

MR. EVERETT: Because, Mr. Ford, I had that honest impression. If you are saying to me that this will not do that, fine, let's say so on the record.

MR. FORD: Well, Mr. Everett, you and I have discussed this on numerous occasions, and you know full well what the import of this amendment is.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, if I may address this question to Mr. Ford, if it is not your intention—and I hope that it is not, and if I have read something wrong in it, I apologize to you—to perpetuate the fee system, then a simple statement to that effect on this record would certainly set my mind at ease.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: It is my understanding that we have already abolished the fee system. It is also my understanding that the fee system could never in any way be construed as either a power of a justice court or a jurisdictional matter with the justice court. The fee system is simply the method whereby the county reimburses the justice for the services he performs as a justice of the peace. In the future I assume that he is going to be reimbursed in the form of a salary that cannot be based on the fees collected by his court.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, if I still maintain the floor, inasmuch as Mr. Ford will not tell us this is the purport of his amendment, unless some of the other sponsors of the amendment are willing to say on the record that this will not be the effect of the amendment, then I shall continue to oppose it and ask that we support the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I don't know how clear I can say it. We have abolished the fee system, and this does not in any way affect the fee system. I don't want it in here.

MR. EVERETT: Thank you, Mr. Ford. You have now said it clearly, which is all I was asking you to do before. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Ford, Ostrow and Garvin. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I think, apart from the fee system, there is something else that enters into this thing. If not directly, then it does indirectly. The committee proposal provides that the 2 offices, which are now in, of the courts of limited jurisdiction shall cease to exist with their powers and jurisdictions within 5 years after the adoption of this constitution. This will eliminate from the scene, assuming the adoption of the constitution, what were previously constitutionally recognized offices. Now, the committee, in view of what transpired before relative to section a, where we inserted "courts of record," is well aware that what might transpire is the adoption by the legislature of a statute simply recreating statutorily what previously was done constitutionally. But that is exactly what this particular section wishes to accomplish. If the courts are to continue and if the legislature is to set the qualifications, then the majority of the committee is of the opinion that they should become statutory courts, no more, no less, to be changed upon the will of the legislature. The second section seeks to specifically point out that the special statutory courts such as recorder's court shall not in any way be affected.

Basically the main difference is that what the minority report amendment intends to do is to lump together the statutory courts—that is, the municipal courts and the recorder's court—with previously constitutional courts, so that what you will have are courts which derive their power from the 1908 constitution are indirectly being continued in the new constitution. I am afraid what the majority of the committee is concerned with is that you are now indirectly continuing a constitutionally recognized court of limited jurisdiction, and that the legislature will not take the necessary action which we feel they should take even if they begin to do nothing more than establish by statute what was previously constitutional. We hope, of course, they will make a considered study and that they will begin to classify, and that by the time 5 years goes on, they will have a very definite plan which will be of benefit to all areas of the state considering their location, considering their size, considering their economic condition. This is what we visualize and what we are trying to have accomplished, that something is done in 5 years, if nothing more than perhaps to combine areas, eliminate justices, give them another name if they want to or give them the same name. We feel that there should be action; that 5 years is a sufficient time to make a study; and that we should not by indirection allow all courts in existence to continue with a blanket such as that.

For the 5 year period the majority and the minority are in accord. The full question becomes whether or not you believe some action should be taken within 5 years. The majority believes that there should be. I would hope that the majority of this committee would agree, and for that reason I oppose the minority report amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Pugsley.

MR. PUGSLEY: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, in anticipation of the adoption of the committee report, which purports to give a 5 year period of time within which a statutory court may be created to take over all of the functions of the present justice court and also the circuit court commissioners, there has been prepared and will be submitted to this convention as a supplement to the report of the committee a provision for the creation of a statutory court to take effect at the end of the 5 year period. It is not anticipated in the preparation of this proposal that the statutory courts which are in existence will be in any way disturbed. The proposal which you will subsequently receive will give an opportunity and place a duty with the legislature to fill the vacuum which otherwise might appear, on the face of it, to exist.

I think it is only fair that in considering the amendment which has been proposed, that you have the knowledge of what is within the anticipation of many of the delegates here to follow the article which is before you, so I therefore at this time rise to ask the defeat of the amendment, with the idea in mind that you later have an opportunity to supply, through the amendment which will later be proposed, a proposal which I believe will cover any vacuum that may have been created through the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Heideman.

MR. HEIDEMAN: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I meant to speak yesterday in connection with the justice of the peace. I refrained from doing so because I wanted to be as open minded and as flexible in my thinking as possible with a view particularly to the problems of northern Michigan. I might call this "confessions of a former justice of the peace" and also before that, for some 8 or 9 years, a professor of American government and state government at Michigan Tech. During this 10 years I had a good deal of firsthand experience with justices of the peace and the system as it operates; as a matter of fact, since then also, since going back into the practice of law in '57 in defending people.

The system, in my judgment, has reached a point where we not only should, but I think must, do something about it. Of course we have so far in that we are taking the justices of the peace as of now out of the constitution. I would like to say that perhaps some naivete or, should I say, simple mindedness is a good thing so that one can, with a straight face, aim one's sights upwards and not down in order to write a better constitution but to go forward to meet and cope with the problems of the future. And I would like to make some observations concerning the system which I think are applicable to it as a whole whether in the upper peninsula or in the northern part of the lower peninsula or downstate, the rest of the lower peninsula.

I think, of course ideally, that we should, if possible, have some such thing as a county court paid, if necessary, by the state and manned by persons trained in the law. But there again I believe in flexibility. I don't like to foist something on someone else that they feel they shouldn't have as I don't like to have things foisted on me that I, in deep conviction, think should not be foisted on me. But there are certain basic things I think, that, reach the root of the question of justice here in this lowest echelon of judgeships as well as in the higher graduations. We all think, I think ideally, of justice in terms of the famous goddess of justice holding the scales even for everyone, weighed down on either side only by the evidence or —the legal term—the weight of the evidence. And if it is beyond a reasonable doubt, we find a person guilty. If it is by a preponderance of the evidence, which is somewhat less, a plaintiff wins his case. Another thing we think in terms of is the famous expression, "to render justice without fear or favor." That is, I think, what we all would like to do. At least I hope so.

Now, as for specific comments, the justice of the peace system as it is today in effect might be said to be a loaded court, loaded in the sense of justice, not in some other sense or lack of it, rather, and it is loaded in favor or weighted in favor of the plaintiff — I think by virtue of the system of itself, this is practically a truism — in a civil case, and again of course in favor of the police in a criminal case. In the civil case, by virtue of the fact that there are many justices of the peace and you can select your forum, the bill collector or someone else — and I am not against collecting legitimate bills, the manner in which it is done and so on — if he doesn't like your operation can just make an end run and go to another J.P. court and leave you high and dry. In the case of the police — and in this respect there is an impartial attitude on their part whether by the state police or the local police or the sheriff's department — I am not speaking in any sense personally. Again I am trying to speak as the system operates. I am not being personal in any way as to the justice of the peace because many of them I know personally who are friends of mine. But if the police in criminal cases don't like the way you operate, they just go to another justice of the peace. I was even given messages to the effect that I should try to be more reasonable if I expected to stay in business in a practical way. So that it is, in effect, a loaded court, and this is not just the case, as someone has said, of a bad apple. This is applicable to the system as a whole. So there is the opportunity for court jumping, end runs around the court. I don't think that is a very good basis upon which to operate justice.

Furthermore — and this dates back to the days not only of theoretical but practical experience over 10 years — on the question of appeals, the students of Michigan Tech used to come to me. They knew I was a member of the bar, and it seems that these police have the reputation of liking to pick on college boys, but whether that is true or not, many of them did come to me to see what could be done. Well, there was always the question of an appeal, but because it was a small matter they didn't feel that the expense was justified so that for all practical purposes, the appeal was really out the window to start with. Finally, the fee system itself: it is difficult to understand how anyone —

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Heideman, the Chair thinks the previous discourse has indicated that the fee system is not a part of the current discussion, and I will ask you to confine yourself as closely as possible to the point.

MR. HEIDEMAN: The fee system was raised quite pointedly, and that is why I wanted to say a word as to it if I may.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair thinks, Mr. Heideman, the fee system is not before us at this point, and I will ask you to confine yourself to discussion of the amendment offered by Messrs. Ford, Ostrow and Garvin.

MR. HEIDEMAN: Well then, if I have the assurance that there is no intent here on the part of either the amendment or in the other position to restore the fee system, I will be satisfied.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford, do you desire to repeat your assurance? Mr. Heideman has asked the question as to whether there is any intent here to restore the fee system.

MR. FORD: Are you talking about the upper peninsula fee system or the one the rest of us use? (laughter) I noticed in the newspaper the other day apparently their fees are about twice what we charge in Wayne county. But no, it is my intention that the fee system should die and fade away with the 15 mill limitation. (laughter)

MR. HEIDEMAN: Delegate Ford and fellow delegates, that is not really germane, because whether it is an upper peninsula system or a lower peninsula system or any other system, it is the fee system that I am talking about, and it does make a big difference in the doing of justice whether it is high or low or little or big.

MR. FORD: Well, I take exception because you were quoted in the newspaper, perhaps improperly, but most certainly quoting the wrong fee for the kind of case that was handled.

MR. HEIDEMAN: Your comment, nevertheless, doesn't change the fact of the operation of the fee system. Well, I wanted to say a word as to this, but if that question comes up again, then I would like to reserve my remarks until that time.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the fee system comes before us, Mr. Heideman, you will be then in order.

MR. HEIDEMAN: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Ford, Ostrow and Garvin. Does any delegate desire to have it read again? Mr. Radka.

MR. RADKA: I think it would be proper to read the actual amendment, which is on the secretary's desk, to amplify the words that Judge Pugsley delivered to us just a few minutes ago. The proposed amendment is a new section. The substance is, "Within 5 years from the date this constitution becomes — "

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Radka, the Chair takes it that the amendment that you are now reading is not the amendment currently offered by Messrs. Ford, Ostrow and Garvin, but is the one to which Judge Pugsley earlier referred, which will be offered at a later time?

MR. RADKA: This is correct, Mr. Chairman, but I am reading the substance of it because we oppose —

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may proceed, Mr. Radka. The Chair simply wanted to make it clear what was being read.

MR. RADKA: We oppose the amendment and ask that you vote for the committee report. And those who are supporting the committee report are doing so with full sympathy of what Mr. Ford is trying to accomplish, and the reason that we would be opposing his amendment is because we are going to offer this as another section. I think it is only proper that the other delegates and Mr. Ford know what is on the secretary's desk:

> Within 5 years from the date this constitution becomes effective, the legislature shall establish statutory courts of limited jurisdiction inferior to the circuit court with a definition of their powers and jurisdiction, the location and number of such courts, the qualifications of the judges who shall preside therein, the method of their election and tenure of office and the amount of their salary and by what governmental units the same shall be paid.

If you will recall, when I offered the amendment to section a where we added "of record" to the section, which required that all judges and justices be attorneys, I said that we were offering this amendment in anticipation of another amendment which would be brought up later in the proposal. The problem that we have in northern Michigan was recognized when we discussed section a, and we are, in proposing this new section, disposing of the problem of the establishment of an inferior court not of record which we feel will meet our problem in northern Michigan.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Ford, Ostrow and Garvin. Judge Gadola, did you desire recognition on this question?

MR. GADOLA: Yes. If the Chair please, and members of this delegation, I am here to advance the theory, perhaps the first time openly, with their solicitation, that I have been in this position, I am representing the labor unions of the city of Flint. They have cussed me for years, but now I am here. They are part of my constituents, and they are thoroughly in favor of the abolition of the justice courts, and that just as speedily as we can do it. If you have a body malignancy, you excise it as speedily as you can.

We have today this proposition that always presents itself: the urban against the rural, the thickly populated against the sparsely populated. And that exists here in this question. The people of outstate don't realize the conditions that exist in our urban areas, in our manufacturing areas, and don't realize the abuses that arise from the courts as they are presently constituted. If you have that malignancy in your body, you immediately ask for an operation. You don't ask to wait for a month or 2 months or 5 years to do it. You say, let's do it as speedily as we possibly can. And if we have that malignancy existing in our courts today, why should we wait for 5 years to cure that malignancy? And there is your equation. I think, of course, they wouldn't be in favor of the striking out of that as proposed by this amendment, but I would say that we should figure out some way to shorten up that period. You are making statutory courts. And when you make statutory courts, to some degree you make political courts. But that is necessary. We must trust the legislature in these problems, and I am not adverse to doing that. But I say we should lower that period and get it closer down and change it more speedily than the provision as now stands asks for.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would like to direct a question to Mr. Ford through the Chair.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer, Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. Ford, I have been going over this, and as I understand the intent and the effect of your amendment, what we will be doing here is taking the constitutional status away from present J.P.s, putting their existence into the legislature, and then we will have a situation — you correct me if I am wrong here — where from time to time on the local level the J.P. court system can be abolished either by the legislature or by a request of the people at that local level, and until such time it will remain in force subject to any modifications imposed by law.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I think it is correct. And perhaps I didn't mention, Mr. Mahinske, when I was presenting it before, but if you look at the present constitution, section 15 of article VII is the one that provides that not more than 4 justices of the peace will be elected in each township, and that is exactly what creates the constitutional status in the existing constitution and requires the existence of this office. This has been excluded. We have already voted on an exclusion report to take that out. Section 16 is the one that gives them their civil and criminal jurisdiction, except that it provides that they will have such criminal jurisdiction and duties as the legislature may provide, and that has also been excluded.

The effect of my amendment would be exactly the same as the effect of the committee's proposal. There is only one difference, and the one difference is that the committee proposal presupposes the necessity for complete abolition at this time.

If you believe in complete abolition being a necessity, then you should vote for the committee proposal. If you want to leave it to the legislature to abolish them in part or over a period of time or in most parts of the state where the people want to abolish them, then you should adopt the minority report amendment, because the justice of the peace will then under no section of this constitution have constitutional status or constitutional recognition of any kind. He will cease to exist as a constitutional officer. But his duties will not be automatically terminated in 5 years. The legislature will have to deliberately terminate it. It won't just happen. And that is the only difference. The 5 year death penalty is the only difference between the 2 provisions.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: On the basis of these remarks and on the basis of the fact that I don't go for these 5 year stays of execution here, plus the fact that there may be areas in the state that would want to abolish their J.P. system prior to a 5 year period, plus the fact that we are taking the existing constitutional status away from J.P.s which leaves them open to abolishment by the legislature, I would be inclined to vote for the minority report amendment that we have here.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Ford, Ostrow and Garvin. Those in favor of the amendment will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: A division is requested. Is the demanded supported? It is supported. Those who are in favor of the minority report amendment offered by Messrs. Ford, Ostrow and Garvin will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Messrs. Ford, Ostrow and Garvin, the yeas are 36; the nays are 70.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to section 1?

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If not, it will pass.

Section 1 is passed. The secretary will read section j.

SECRETARY CHASE: The following is section j:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: For an explanation of section j, the Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee, Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, I shall not yield on this one but explain it myself. This particular section relates only to what has previously been passed in regard to the setting up of staggered terms for circuit judges and probate judges which we passed in Committee Proposals 93 and 94. This is the scheduling provision therein. It requires that the legislature shall implement, by the time of the next election for those particular offices, terms of varying length, with this proviso: that none — and I repeat, that none — shall be shorter than the basic term provided herein for the office. The question may be raised whether or not this is a provision which should be in this particular proposal. I will submit that if it is found that this should be in the scheduling provisions, we are most willing that it be included therein. It is also possible that there will be some conflict between this and a provision put out by the committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedule. This can likewise be resolved should we find such a conflict.

The only basic provisions here are, one, that this be done by the next election for the circuit judges and the probate judges, and when they provide for the terms of varying lengths, the shortest one cannot be shorter than the basic term provided, which we have agreed shall be 6 years in the case of those offices. If there is anything that we provide in Committee Proposal 91 or 92 that needs scheduling, this would again likewise apply. Perhaps there would be some amendment or some change which would be needed depending on what we do on the supreme court. This is a scheduling provision in essence, and that is all that is contained herein, but it must be done by the next election.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I would like to address through the Chair a question to the chairman of the judicial committee, if I may.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. KING: Delegate Danhof, how is this thing to be implemented specifically? Could you give me an example? At the present time we have 5 circuit judges in my county whose term all expire in April — or they come up for reelection in April, 1965. Could you give me some idea what will happen at that time? Will all 5 of them run, first of all?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, Mr. King, in the first place, depending on whether we have an April election or not, they probably will not come up in April. But assuming they come up that fall or the fall prior to April, depending on which one we finally conclude, I would anticipate that they would run and that this provision would be set up. You have 5. I give you this as an example: 2 would be elected for 6 years, 2 for 8 years, and in the next case, maybe 1 for 10 years. When and if Oakland county gets a second circuit judge, he would fall in where you have the 1 provision.

Who would get the long term and who would get the short term? We had many varying proposals. One could be the highest number of votes. This might not necessarily be the right way, but this is the way the legislature would do it. The judge getting the largest number of votes could have his choice or get the longest term. Two, if they didn't want to do it that way, the judge elected then, certified as elected, who had the longest seniority on the bench they could provide his choice. They might do it by lot. But no one would get a shorter term than 6 years.

It was pointed out, why the seniority idea? It is possible that a judge who might be relatively close to retirement might not want the longest term. Maybe he would be perfectly happy to have just a 6 year term and leave it to the younger members of the bench to take the longest term. This is merely an example of what I envision that the legislature could do to begin to get this operation rolling. Then the next election as they would come up would be for the basic term of 6 years and, as judges were added, they could be added equally as the time went on, and you aren't going to always have this same number when you have an odd number, like you have, with 5, but once the rotation were established, this is the way they would fall in.

This is the way it has been done, as I understand it, with the probate judges where you have more than one. They do not run together. They run every 2 years on a 4 year term. So you have one up every 2 years. And for the probate judges it would probably be easier, because in those cases where you have existing probate judges, they already are running every 2 years. They don't run together anyway. Their term would merely go up to 6. That is the only scheduling provision you would have therein. So that the next time they come up for election, instead of running for a 4 year term, they run for a 6 year term. And there might be a time when you don't elect the probate judge for 4 years and then one 2 years thereafter. That is the way it possibly could work. I assume that is what you want.

MR. KING: Well, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Danhof, just to clarify one point, I think I understood you to say that they all would run for reelection the next time up.

MR. DANHOF: I would imagine they would have to. There is no other way. Their terms expire all together. You can't run them earlier than this, so you would set it up that they would run, but the implementation would be that at the next election, they would set up the varying terms, that the following time they would not begin to run all together or in a pack, so to speak. This is the way I visualize it. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Shackleton, did you desire to be recognized?

MR. SHACKLETON: No.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to section j?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Ford, Garvin, Ostrow, Bledsoe, Barthwell and Miss McGowan offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 3, line 24, after "implemented" by striking out "at the next election".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Ford and others, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, at this point, on behalf of the Wayne county delegates, I would like to plead with our colleagues from outstate to show us the same forbearance with our problem down there that we have shown you earlier today and the last couple of days with problems that you have outstate.

When we are talking about the staggering of judges' terms, we are talking really about Wayne county primarily at the present time and 2 other counties with multiple judge circuits, and all that this amendment would do would be to leave the legislature free to implement a staggering system over several elections rather than trying to do it at one election, because you can go around and around, but with the language of the committee, this is what it means for Wayne county at the next election: 18 circuit judges will come up for reelection. Actually, it is my understanding that 2 of the circuit judges will not be eligible to run again because of age, but let's assume that we take the 18 vacancies and implement this at the next election, as the language of the committee proposal would require. This means that 6 of the judges would run for 6 years, 6 for 8 years and 6 for 10 years. You could not reduce below the 6 year term, and the only way that you could get them staggered into any method at one election where you could get them staggered without reducing it would be to increase terms. One other alternative would be to take approximately ¼ of them and run them for 6 years, approximately ¼ for 8 years, approximately ¼ for 10 years and approximately ¼ for 12 years. Don't you realize when you look at this kind of a term of office what a problem it creates down there? If you go beyond breaking it into 3 groups, you are going into a 12 year term, and the committee language freezes us into that kind of a situation.

There are other possible ways that over a period of time this could be implemented in Wayne county, and one would be where the legislature could provide that each time a vacancy occurs in the future, at that time, according to a schedule that they have established, the term of office for which that vacancy has occurred would be changed, so that instead of saying that the present judges would run for terms longer than 6 years, they would say, for example, that those 2 vacancies that come up where an incumbent isn't involved could be 4 year terms. And if there are new judgeships created down there, then assuming there are 5, as the senate has passed, those 5 could be set up in the first instance on a staggered basis, and one by one as these vacancies occur, you could stagger the terms. But to do this all at one election creates exactly the situation that I have outlined for you, and there is no alternative to it because of the language of the committee proposal, and I am pleading now for Wayne county. We just are not anxious to reelect our judges at the next election for 12 year terms on the local level. We would like to have the opportunity to work with the legislature in implementing this over a period of time so as not to create this kind of a situation.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Ford and others. Mr. Everett, do you desire to be recognized?

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I am sorry. I would like to yield to Mr. Garvin, a cosponsor of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford yields to Mr. Garvin.

MR. GARVIN: Actually I suppose the committee meant this, but just to say it very short, what Mr. Ford said is that it is impossible to stagger the terms at the next election and none being shorter than the basic term provided herein, whether it be 6 or 8, unless you do have some of them elected for a period of 12 to 14 years or more, it is just an impossibility. Therefore, we are striking out "at the next election" so that the staggering can be better devised than just saying that this must be done at the next election and none shall be elected for a shorter term than the basic term. It is impossible to do suddenly.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the last time Mr. Ford and I were on the opposite side of the question, I read an implication into what he said which was unfair. I was corrected about it. I apologized to Mr. Ford before personally, and I do now want it on the record that I unwisely read something in which wasn't there. In correcting what he has just said now, I do it simply by way of indicating that even the best of us can make mistakes. This does not involve a matter of 2 or 3 counties. This involves 14 counties which now have more than 1 circuit judge per county. As time goes on and counties grow, there will undoubtedly be more, so we are not talking about a very few instances.

What we have suggested in the committee is simply that we set this up on an orderly procedure. We recognize at the first election some judges will be elected to a long term. We don't feel that this is a fatal thing. Most of them get reelected over and over again anyway. So we are simply easing them off for maybe 2 or possibly 4 years. We can't extend their term to 12 years because if you do that, you come back into the old term, to the men going out again, so the most we can extend it to would be 10 or possibly 11 years if you got into a different year for election. We did this for 2 reasons. One, to prevent any judge being cut down in term so you had men running for a 2 year term, which we felt would be definitely unfair; and, secondly, because we felt if the principle of staggered terms is valid, then it ought to come into existence at the next judicial election. I would oppose the amendment and support the committee position.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Ford and others. Mr. Garvin.

MR. GARVIN: I just wanted to mention and remind the delegates and the proposers of this majority proposal that if a judge is 69, he may be 89 or 90 before his term is up.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Ford, Garvin, Ostrow and others. Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I would like to ask a question of Delegate Ford, if I may, through the Chair.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer. Mr. Ford.

MR. HIGGS: In offering this amendment, it would be my understanding that you do not intend to require the legislature to wait for a vacancy in all cases, do you?

MR. FORD: No, no, Mr. Higgs; simply we are not forcing them to do it at the next election or at one election. They might do it at the next election. They could still do it that way. But if they decided over there that they could come up with another way of doing it, it would still be available to them.

What the committee proposal does, as I see it now, is actually it dictates the exact method of rotation for the next election by saying it has to be done all at one election and at the very next election. It wouldn't matter when it was done. If you say that it all has to happen at one time and that you can't reduce below 6 years, then what you are doing is talking about 6, 8 and 10; or 6, 8, 10 and 12 year terms.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: One further question then. Would it be your thought that what you actually intend is that it shall be implemented as soon as reasonably possible?

MR. FORD: Yes. I don't tamper with the language that says the legislature shall implement this thing.

MR. HIGGS: I have been listening very carefully to the argument of Delegate Ford here today and I feel that there is certainly considerable merit to the argument. I would be inclined to support the minority report amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: I would like to ask a question of Delegate Ford, if I could.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. STAIGER: In Committee Proposal 93 we already have set the term for circuit judges at 6 years. You mention in staggering we might go up to 12 years. Somebody else mentioned 14. I cannot conceive how you would be at 12 years in staggering, or you would be meeting the first group that ran for 6. Isn't 10 the maximum or 11 the maximum you would go to on a 6 year term?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: You would never get to an odd number like 11.

MR. STAIGER: If you ran some each year rather than each 2 years?

MR. FORD: If you assume you are going to have a judicial election of some sort every year. But it is my understanding that the present intention is every 2 years.

MR. STAIGER: All right. Assuming 2 years. Then 10 would be the maximum that any judge would be elected for if the term is 6 years and the first time around to stagger the terms. You suggested you might elect ¼ of them for 4 years—

MR. FORD: I think you are correct. What it does is dictate that the maximum breakdown you could make would be in thirds, 1/3 at a time.

MR. STAIGER: So you would be 6, 8 and 10 years, and 10 years would be the longest you would be electing any judges.

MR. FORD: That is correct.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Ford and others. Does any delegate desire to have it read again? If not, those who are in favor of the amendment will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Is the demand for the division supported? It is not supported.

The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to section j?

SECRETARY CHASE: None on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If not, it will pass.

Section j is passed. The secretary will read section k.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section k:

[Section k was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 1479.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, for the explanation of section k, I would like to call upon the delegate from Detroit, Miss McGowan.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss McGowan.

MISS McGOWAN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Danhof and members of the committee, this is a new section and is recommended for the purpose of empowering the supreme court to furnish advisory opinions to the governor and each house of the legislature on important questions of law and solemn occasions. By this provision it is felt that more effective governmental operation is made possible. This is a nonadversary proceeding, or in other words, a proceeding in the nature of a hearing. We feel that the supreme court will provide for notice and hearing in proper cases. The matter of advisory opinions was brought to the attention of the committee on judicial branch by Mr. Justice Black in his testimony before the committee.

A memorandum from our research and drafting department prepared under the direction of Dr. Joiner points up the fact that the constitutions of Colorado, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and South Dakota provide that the supreme court shall give their opinion when requested upon solemn occasions. In addition, the constitutions of Florida and Rhode Island provide for high court opinions whenever requested.

By a solemn occasion the constitution means some serious and unusual urgent need. It has been held to be such urgent need when either branch of the legislature having some action in view has serious doubts as to their power and authority to take such action under the constitution or existing statutes. An example of this would be our 4 cent sales tax which was passed and in a short time thereafter was declared unconstitutional.

We feel that the adoption of this provision would facilitate the effective and efficient operation of our state government, and we therefore urge the adoption of this provision.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I would like to ask a question of the proponents of this section. I understood that the definition for "solemn occasion"—or maybe that is the way I understood it from what I heard—was that a 4 cent sales tax question was considered a solemn occasion. Am I correct in my understanding here? This is through the Chair to Miss McGowan.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss McGowan.

MISS McGOWAN: The definition that I gave of "solemn occasion" was some serious and unusual urgent need. It has been held to be such urgent need when either branch of the legislature having some action in view has serious doubts as to their power and authority to take such action under the constitution or existing statutes.

MR. FAXON: My feeling was that the important questions of law would cover the type of instance which you have just defined under the other. Isn't there some tendency to be redundant here? Actually I am a little bit puzzled over "solemn." It injects an atmosphere in the section which I am not quite certain of. Wouldn't "questions of law" take into account what you have just described?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss McGowan.

MISS McGOWAN: Mr. Faxon, the definition I gave you was taken from a case, and the case is found at 290 Massachusetts 601. (laughter)

MR. FAXON: I don't want to get into the Massachusetts constitution, but those of you who are familiar with the Constitution of Massachusetts know that there is a very strong flavor of religious sentiment expressed in the old constitution, and I don't know that the word "solemn" has the same connotation today as it might have had when it was first introduced in the Massachusetts constitution. I frankly fail to appreciate the additional 3 words at the end of this section.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, just a question to the chairman of the committee or Miss McGowan. I understand from this that the court itself would have the right to decide whether an opinion should be rendered or not. In other words, the court would have the right to decide whether this was an important question of law or a solemn occasion and therefore to decide whether this was a situation where an opinion was proper and desirable. May I get clarification on that?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss McGowan.

MISS McGOWAN: Mr. Chairman, to Mr. Martin, that is the proper interpretation.

MR. MARTIN: Thank you. Then, Mr. Chairman, I want to support the committee on this, because this privilege of asking the court for an opinion, if the court has the right to decide whether it should issue an opinion or not is a very important provision in that it gives the legislature and the governor on really important questions an opportunity to get a decision rather than to plunge ahead regardless of what the legal outcome may be.

In some cases, having to do that necessitates the passage of legislation which would involve, for example in a tax matter, the setting up of a large tax section in the revenue department and the expenditure of large amounts of money, perhaps the collection of large amounts of money which later might have to be refunded, and it enables us to settle questions of that kind in advance without the necessity for going through all the agony of setting up divisions and departments and then having to dismantle them and refund large amounts of money. I am sure it would save the public a great deal of money in the long run.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I have 2 questions that I should like to direct to the committee on this matter. First, under federal law there must be a case or controversy before the judicial power may properly be exercised. What we are having presented here is that an advisory opinion on questions of law may be rendered by the supreme court without an actual case or controversy. Does that mean that as far as this committee is concerned, they do not wish to preserve the traditional notion that there must be a case or controversy presented before the court may exercise its judicial power?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof or Miss McGowan, do you wish to respond? Miss McGowan.

MISS McGOWAN: Mr. Chairman, to Mr. Norris, the committee felt, as I said, that this would be beneficial to our state governmental operation. And also I would like to point out to you a Michigan case in this regard is the case of Connor vs. Herrick, found at 349 Michigan 201, in which 3 of the justices in that case said, "When and if the constitution authorizes issuance by this court of advisory opinions, we of course will cheerfully comply with the people's directive."

MR. NORRIS: Then there is a disposition here to depart from that proposition and get into the advisory field. Now, let's suppose that the supreme court with regard to an important question of law renders an opinion for the guidance of the executive departments. Let's suppose then that a case or controversy with regard to that matter subsequently arises. Now you have a matter that comes up before the Michigan supreme court upon which it has already rendered an opinion and there is a question of whether or not the merits of the case are already prejudged by the court itself.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss McGowan.

MISS McGOWAN: Mr. Chairman, to Mr. Norris, I don't know if that is a question or a statement, but I think the thing that you should keep in mind is that the supreme court will determine what cases they will render advisory opinions in. That is the best I can answer that.

MR. NORRIS: Well, I appreciate that. I am just raising a question. I haven't fully made up my mind with regard to this. It is a matter that has been debated in judicial circles for some time. But one of the problems it has posed is the question of giving an advisory opinion and then having a case or controversy which involves an interpretation of the same opinion presented to the same tribunal. If you went to a circuit judge and asked him for his opinion with regard to a matter and then got an opinion and then acted upon it, and then you were subsequently a litigant and went before that same court, I think you would have a disposition to believe which direction the court might move, and I am not so sure that this enhances the administration of justice.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I had some qualms about this when it first came before the committee on judicial branch. We had presented 3 delegate proposals in which the doctrine of advisory opinions was suggested: 1252 by Messrs. Austin and Barthwell; 1269 by Mr. McCauley and Miss McGowan; and 1288 by Messrs. Lawrence, Cudlip and Bonisteel.

The words "solemn occasion" bothered me a little bit as they bother Mr. Faxon, but we do have a legal doctrine that when a statute or a constitutional provision having been construed in other jurisdictions is adopted by another state, you take with it, at least in the normal case, the decisions that have construed and interpreted that language. For that reason I felt that although a solemn occasion might in my jargon be a funeral, (laughter) perhaps the language that Massachusetts and other courts have used in their constitution and have construed would be safer language in giving us guidelines as to the meaning of this.

The point that Mr. Norris has raised also bothered me, but I anticipate that the court will make very strict rules concerning the manner in which it will assume jurisdiction for advisory opinions; that it will undoubtedly request briefs amicus curiae from persons or groups that might be interested in those opinions and that it will give careful consideration even though the matter is not presented as an adversary proceeding. Should the court, after such thorough briefing by interested parties or groups after public hearing that undoubtedly would be provided for, reach a decision, and should there subsequently come before the court an actual controversy, I think the court, with its present view toward the doctrine of stare decisis, might quite reasonably upset its advisory opinion in a subsequent adversary proceeding coming before it.

In any event, I think this would be something, as Mr. Martin and others have pointed out, that would help to save money for the taxpayers of the state that would perhaps be limited in use but that would be greatly needed when on rare occasions the need arises, and that the language, being language already construed, is language that we should adopt in toto if we adopt the doctrine at all.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett. Mr. Everett passes. Judge Mosier.

MR. MOSIER: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, Mr. Prettie has answered in a way some of the things that I had in mind of saying, but I will go just one step further, and that is to call the attention of the delegates to a procedure that we have had in Michigan for some time—it was put there by the legislature which gives the courts the power, and our supreme court has sustained it—of applying to the courts, not in a case where there is an actual litigation pending but in the case where there is a justifiable dispute between parties and in which the parties ask for the advice of the court and it results in what we call an advisory judgment, a judgment that advises the parties of their legal rights without their having reached that point where a lawsuit involving acrimony and all the things that go with a closely contested case sometimes follows. Therefore, we have had for some time in Michigan the state policy of deciding in advance a justifiable question, and I believe that for the benefit of the legislature, which would be given the right under this amendment to call upon the supreme court for that advice, it would be most helpful, and I am in favor of the proposal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Gadola.

MR. GADOLA: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I will answer Mr. Norris' question to some degree. I have quoted this before, that celebrated decision that I remember so well, "The thinking of the court hasn't changed; it is the personnel." That will answer your question on that. And then someone else said something about stare decisis. In that same opinion the court said, this opinion is so recent that it is no good as stare decisis. I would like to ask Miss McGowan one question.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the lady cares to answer.

MR. GADOLA: It is simply this, isn't this getting pretty close to putting legislation in the hands of the supreme court?

MISS McGOWAN: In my opinion, it is not.

MR. GADOLA: My opinion is, it is. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: That is what makes horse races. (laughter) Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I just want to make one more point on this. It seems to me that we are differentiating the requesting of an opinion on questions of law from requesting opinions upon something other than questions of law. In viewing the Massachusetts constitution, I think we should keep in mind that this constitution to which this was referred, these few words, was written in 1790, and I think it may have had a difference at that time than we are talking about in 1962, and it seems to me that the historical concept of a supreme court is to request opinions on important questions of law.

Is this something other than questions of law? And if it is, is this something upon which the supreme court is to make the determination? My only point is that we are setting up 2 different things here, and we are handing over on the one hand law, which is agreeable to the supreme court, and on the other hand something other than something of law which is not a part of the historical function of the supreme court of this state. That is all I care to say on this.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I think this is a very important provision, and I would like to correct 2 errors which have been made by previous speakers speaking in support of the committee proposal. First of all, I will correct what I believe to be an error or perhaps a misstatement by Mr. Prettie when he stated that there is a legal doctrine that when you adopt a provision which is like a provision in some other state, that you thereby adopt their interpretation of that provision. That is not the case. I think the interpretations in other states would be received at most with respect by the court, but in no sense as authority. Secondly, I wish to correct an impression which may have been left by Delegate Mosier when he said that this is nothing more than our advisory judgment act, or declaratory judgment act as it is perhaps more frequently called. Under the act which provides for declaratory judgments it is true you do not have to have normal litigation, but you do have to have an actual controversy between individuals and you do have an adversary type of proceeding in most cases. This provision proposed for the constitution goes much farther, and it allows the governor or either house of the legislature to ask the court for an opinion upon any subject whatsoever.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to section k?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Wanger has filed an amendment to section k:

1. Amend pages 3 and 4, by striking out all of section k, lines 28 and 29 on page 3 and line 1 on page 4.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger. The Chair will recognize Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I would like first of all to speak about and describe the nature of this provision. The words "advisory opinion" may be somewhat misleading because it is not merely for advice that the governor or either branch of the legislature would ask. It is rather something which would be used as a device for accelerating the judicial review of important constitutional questions or legal questions of any nature which the request might be made for to the supreme court. The attorney general or any other counsel can give advice upon these questions, but it is a matter of determining them which is before us at this time.

As a practical matter these opinions by the court are used as precedents. I quote from an article in the 1949 edition of the Indiana Law Journal, volume 24, page 216, by Professor Oliver Field, as follows:

> Advisory opinions are used as precedents by the bar, by the courts, and by the public. They are cited in briefs, in opinions by the courts, and despite the fact that they are sometimes carefully distinguished from judicial decisions, they are relied on as fully as decisions are, so far as precedent is concerned.

There may be some advantage to accelerating judicial review, accelerating the final constitutional determination, as a practical matter, of many issues. However, there are also 2 serious disadvantages. I firmly believe that these disadvantages outweigh the advantages. Here are the disadvantages.

The first one is that it adversely affects the separation of powers doctrine and is contrary to the entire judicial tradition of the United States and contrary to that of 4/5 of the states of the union. It facilitates an abdication by the legislature and the governor of their duty to make a judgment on the constitutionality of a pending statute or action independently of that made by the courts. After all, every public officer in the executive branch or elected to the legislative branch swears to uphold the constitution and to take actions only which in their own opinion are constitutional and not to pass the buck to somebody else to make that decision for them. The people are much better protected under such a development. And I quote now in support of this from a statement made in the Harvard Law Review many years ago by Felix Frankfurter, who said as follows in 37 Harvard Law Review at page 1007:

> Perhaps the most costly price of advisory opinions is the weakening of legislative and popular responsibility. It is not merely the right of the legislature to legislate; it is its duty. Let legislatures inform themselves as best they can; but the burden of decision ought not to be shifted to the tribunal whose task is the most delicate in our whole scheme of government—the power of the judiciary to set limits to legislative activity within those ultimate but vague bounds which are undefined and a priori undefinable.

It has been stated in support of the committee position that the court would only render decisions, in the opinion of the proponents, on matters which were very solemn, which were very, very important. And I would like to say that while I respect the desires of the people who said that, there is nothing in this language which would require that.

It was stated that other states have issued certain rules by judicial construction which might insure this, and yet I would point out that in the other states there is in some cases a conflict between these rules and, furthermore, my examination of the 7 constitutional provisions which allow for advisory opinions shows that none of them are identical with the provision which has been proposed by the committee. For example, the provision proposed by the committee would authorize the supreme court to answer a question which the governor would propose regarding a bill which had not even been passed by the legislature. It is possible that the legislature or either house could submit a question on a course of action contemplated by the governor, or perhaps the legislature could submit a question or the governor a question on a proposed or contemplated action by a constitutional convention. These are possibilities. The court would determine, of course, whether or not it would give an answer.

The second basic reason which I believe to be a disadvantage to adopting this into the constitution is that it provides for the determination of constitutional issues and other vital legal questions under conditions which are poorly suited to reaching the best result. It has been admitted, of course, that these proceedings are nonadversary. That means you do not have people contesting for their rights before the court. You merely place a matter to the court and ask for their legal opinion upon the subject. I quote from volume 69 of the Harvard Law Review, pages 1302 and 1303 in 1956, which is the most recent annotation I found discussing this subject, "In rendering these opinions the justices are usually unassisted by briefs or arguments." The second reason why these conditions are far from ideal for rendering correct results is, then, that under the advisory opinion practice, judges will be deciding hypothetical cases rather than actual ones in many cases. Their opinions will be based therefore on abstract legal thinking. Under this practice the justices must form an opinion when a statute, for example, has not become operative and has not been applied to a specific fact situation.

When a court decides the constitutionality of a statute in the course of litigation, it is functioning as an agency of sober second thought which reviews, in the light of experience under the statute, the determination of policy made by the legislature and executive at a time when the effects of a statute could only be predicted. Mr. Frankfurter, who of course all of the lawyers and I think most everyone else realizes now sits on the Supreme Court of the United States, said in this article regarding the giving of advisory opinions as follows:

> The whole milieu of advisory opinions on proposed bills is inevitably different from that of litigation contesting legislation. However much provision may be made on paper for adequate arguments (and experience justifies little reliance) advisory opinions are bound to move in an unreal atmosphere. The impact of actuality and the intensities of immediacy are wanting. In the attitude of court and counsel, in the vigor of adequate representation of the facts behind legislation (lamentably inadequate even in contested litigation) there is thus a wide gulf of difference, partly rooted in psychologic factors, between opinions in advance of legislation and decisions in litigation after such proposals are embodied into law.
> Advisory opinions are rendered upon sterilized and mutilated issues.

Then Mr. Frankfurter goes on to discuss the practice of advisory opinions in his state of Massachusetts itself which is, of course, one of those that has had a tradition in this regard:

> Let anyone, for instance, compare the adverse opinions of the Massachusetts supreme court upon the constitutionality of municipal coal and wood yards with the opinion of the supreme court sustaining such legislation; the adverse opinions of the Massachusetts court on prohibition of trading stamps with the opinion of the supreme court sustaining such legislation; the adverse opinion of the Massachusetts court on the state's power to provide for dwelling houses with the opinion of the supreme court sustaining such legislation.

Mr. Justice Frankfurter closes his article with the words that I will use to close this presentation:

> It must be remembered that advisory opinions are not merely advisory opinions. They are ghosts that slay.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: On the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger, the Chair will recognize Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I oppose the Wanger amendment and support the committee proposal. If this committee proposal had been part of the 1908 constitution, we might now have an opinion which would save us from sweating out the question of whether we have to meet the April 1 deadline.

I don't visualize that either branch of the legislature is going to be rushing into the supreme court every day to get advisory opinions, and even if they do do so, I can't visualize the supreme court rendering them. We have had in Michigan a declaratory judgment statute, the one that Judge Mosier referred to, for many years, over 30 to my knowledge. The same fears that were expressed regarding this provision were expressed when the declaratory judgment statute was first passed. None of those fears came to be realized. If you go through the Michigan reports, there are very few declaratory judgment actions. This provision that is contained in the committee proposal can on proper occasion do a lot of good. I can't visualize it doing any harm.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: On the Wanger amendment, the Chair will recognize Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I rise to support Mr. Wanger's amendment and I am very happy to know that I am in such illustrious company as that of a lawyer on this.

I have been looking at that language and it has been bothering me for some time. A conservative point of view, it seems to me, would indicate that we should be wary of any violation of the separation of powers. Where there is the need for an opinion as far as law is concerned, at least I thought that was the function of the attorney general's office, and we have often made use of attorney general's opinions, but not to the point that we feel that this represents the law itself.

Mr. Wanger has stated the case very clearly as far as I am concerned, and that is namely that this would be prejudging a case that ordinarily would have to go through a whole procedure. The supreme court in most cases is an appellate court. Here the supreme court would be going ahead and judging on something which hasn't even actually been put into practice, and would be making a judgment which would in some way influence, I fear, the executive and legislative branches of government. Keep the courts out until they are requested to be brought in.

This is a radical departure from our tradition of the separation of the courts here in Michigan. It would only infuse the courts with additional needs and requests at a time when this should not be the case at all. I would fear the results of what would happen if the governor were to start using the courts by going in and requesting opinions to substantiate what he would like in legislation in the legislature or the legislature doing the same thing the other way around. Let's not get the courts involved in legislative matters. Let's keep the courts in their traditional function here in Michigan. Let us give considerable thought to Mr. Wanger's amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: I will ask the committee to be in a little better order, please. Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I herewith enlist in the forces of Gene Wanger and Jack Faxon. (laughter) I was a member of the committee of judicial branch, and as such I joined in the majority report which sent this section k to the floor of this convention and this committee. At the time I did so I hopefully anticipated that we would here in Michigan within a short time have a completely nonpartisan supreme court. As of this date that anticipation is dimming. We may end up with a political party dominated supreme court or one completely appointed by the governor, according to the present state of things. I cannot vote for a proposition that might give to a supreme court the power to make virtual law at the request of the governor who appointed them. I support the Wanger amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I rise to support that fighting conservative, Jack Faxon, (laughter) and that great liberal, Judge Leibrand. (laughter)

We are indeed contemplating a very serious change in what I think to be the history and the tradition of justice in this country. Mr. Wanger has pointed out the troubles that the Massachusetts supreme court got into when they allowed themselves to leave the theory of case and controversy. They have allowed themselves to enter into the legislative process by rendering decisions without knowing how the legislation is going to be applied in the world of reality. I too should like to quote from Justice Frankfurter. He has said, speaking of these justifiable contests before courts:

> The stuff of these contests are facts and judgment upon facts. Every tendency to deal with them abstractly, to formulate them in terms of sterile legal questions is bound to result in sterile conclusions unrelated to actualities. Legislation is thus deprived of its creative function. The history of modern legislation is rich in proof that facts may be established in support of measures although not previously in existence. The accidents of litigation may give time for the vindication of laws which, a priori, may run counter to deep presuppositions or speculative claims of injustice.

Now, this is a very appealing thought. Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could go out to the people of Michigan, say, and ask "If we pass this in the constitution, would you buy it or wouldn't you?" Maybe we could hire Dr. Gallup, who conducts opinion polls. But, don't you see, this would be a very dangerous thing to do. You never know how the public is going to accept this document until they have seen the whole package, until they have had a chance to think about it and read about it and hear argument pro and con, and we are actually expecting the supreme court to do the same thing.

We are going to take a sterile piece of legislation, unsurrounded by facts, unargued by proponents of one side or the other, and ask them to pass judgment on it ahead of time. I submit to you that this would be an extremely dangerous thing to do, contrary to what our beliefs are, what our understanding of the separation of powers is today, and frankly it to me would leave the door wide open to a great deal of mischief. I think we have established through the English common law and our adherence thereto a system of justice, a system of separation of powers which has proven itself, and I think we ought to be very reluctant at this time to try something new.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I would like to speak against the Wanger amendment, but not because I am in total sympathy with the language of the committee's proposal. There are 2 amendments on the desk, one by Mr. Habermehl and one by myself which I think would at least introduce the kind of language which I think ought to be introduced to improve on what the committee has done.

I am intensely interested in having a provision of this sort included in the constitution because I had quite a bit of experience with the 1959 law to increase the sales tax by way of a very peculiar means, through the use tax, to 4 per cent. Subsequently it was declared unconstitutional and there was well over $20 million of moneys collected from taxpayers in small amounts that could not be refunded to them. It was collected from them unconstitutionally, but it could not be refunded to them because there were administrative problems involved. And I certainly would not like to see a recurrence of this kind of affair. I joined with Mr. Barthwell in submitting a delegate proposal which would provide for the review of tax legislation after it had been enacted into law but before the effective date of the tax law. This would do what I think needs to be done. It would first require that both houses of the legislature pass on the legislation and even the governor sign the bill so that we do have a law which the court can rule on, at least as to the constitutionality of it, but at least give the court a chance to look at it before it becomes effective and taxes are collected under the defective law. So I am hopeful that we will vote down the Wanger amendment and then see if we can't improve on the language of the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, I want to second Mr. Austin's remarks—except for the part about the other language because I don't know exactly what it is—in voting down this amendment. I think he has clearly illustrated primarily what we were interested in in the committee and that is these situations where the constitutionality of legislation is in doubt. The issue is not decided in one case that it is constitutional because the facts were thus and so and in another case it was unconstitutional because the facts were thus and so. It is one way or the other because the court applies a principle and determines whether the legislation fits within this principle or not, and you don't have it operating on one set of facts and inoperative on another set of facts. It is that type of situation to which we are addressing ourselves.

We feel certain that the court will have good sense not to become an assistant attorney general and simply give opinions. This is not what we intended and we are certain that they are not going to take upon themselves this function. We feel that in a given case, and only in a very few instances, we the people are entitled to know,—before this operation of governmental activity goes into effect—is this proper? Is this constitutional or not? And if it is not, let's stop it now before the process begins and not after it has been in effect.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger to strike section k of Committee Proposal 96. Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman, I urge a yes vote on the amendment to preserve the adversary system of law. I would call for the yeas and nays at this time.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Boothby requests a division. Is the demand supported? The demand is supported. Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Point of information, Mr. Chairman. Does this mean that if the Wanger amendment prevails, further amendments to perhaps take into account some of the argument that is now contained in the amendments before the secretary would then be out of order?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The further amendments which are pending would, in the form in which they have been submitted, be out of order, Mr. Norris. Presumably they could be altered to reinsert the thoughts embodied therein. Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, voting yes for this amendment in no way forecloses considering other language, but let's vote yes on this amendment because this committee language is clearly out of order as far as the interests of the people are concerned.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Those who are in favor of the Wanger amendment to strike section k will vote aye. Those who are opposed will vote no. Mr. Danhof, for what purpose does the gentleman rise?

MR. DANHOF: If the vote has been called for, never mind. Go ahead.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger, the yeas are 39; the nays are 66.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to section k?

SECRETARY CHASE: There are 3 on file, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Habermehl offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 4, line 1, after "occasions.", by inserting "Such opinions shall relate only to questions of constitutionality.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Habermehl, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, the language used by the judicial branch committee here would apparently authorize either the governor or the legislature to request the opinion, just purely the opinion, of the supreme court on either one, apparently, of 2 bases: upon an important question of law or upon a solemn occasion.

If we consider that this opinion would be asked for before legislation was enacted, it would, of course, be an interference with the powers of the legislature, a violation of the separation of powers. If we consider that the opinion would be asked for after the enactment of the legislation, if the opinion is not restricted to the question of constitutionality, we would be in effect giving the supreme court a veto over matters of legislation.

I would not have too serious qualms about the supreme court simply rendering an opinion as to whether or not a proposed statute or an enacted statute was constitutional. Anything beyond that I certainly would have grave doubts about. And we must remember that if we are to restrict the power of the supreme court, there is only one place that that can be done and that is in the constitution itself.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Habermehl. Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to support the Habermehl amendment. I would like to ask one question of Mr. Habermehl, though, through the Chair, if he will answer.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Habermehl, would it be possible for us to add some language to indicate that this should be done by the supreme court only after the legislation has been enacted into law? This, of course, would simply prevent the supreme court from getting involved until the legislative process was completed and they would be working with a law rather than some bills or proposals for legislation.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABEMEHL: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Austin, you spoke to me about that, Mr. Austin, and I think it is a very excellent suggestion. I would be happy to accept your amendment as an amendment to mine.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Austin revises, with Mr. Habermehl's consent, Mr. Habermehl's amendment. The secretary will read the amendment as so revised.

MR. AUSTIN: I am wondering if we can just find a way to add this, Mr. Chairman. Just a moment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair thinks, Mr. Austin, having the amendments here, the 2 are not inconsistent. You would simply put your amendment in ahead of Mr. Habermehl's, Mr. Habermehl's being a separate sentence. Is this not correct, Mr. Habermehl?

MR. AUSTIN: I think that would be all right. I struck the words "on solemn occasions" but that can stay in since Mr. Habermehl refers to it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair would advise Mr. Austin and Mr. Habermehl that Mr. Faxon has an amendment to strike the words "and upon solemn occasions." You can pick up some support if you can incorporate that (laughter) and we can dispose of this all at once. Mr. Habermehl, would you accept that further amendment?

MR. HABERMEHL: Do I understand, Mr. Chairman, that that would just strike the words "on solemn occasions"?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The words "and upon solemn occasions"; that is correct, so that the section would then read:

> Each branch of the legislature as well as the governor shall have the authority to request the opinion of the supreme court upon important questions of law in connection with legislation after it shall have been enacted into law but before its effective date. Such opinions shall relate only to questions of constitutionality.

MR. HABEMEHL: I would accept that, yes.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I will accept that change.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Faxon, do you agree to the incorporation of your amendment?

MR. FAXON: Yes, I will accept that.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is now, then, upon the amendment, as revised, offered by Messrs. Habermehl, Austin and Faxon, which the secretary will read again.

SECRETARY CHASE: The composite amendment:

1. Amend page 4, line 1, after "law" by striking out "and upon solemn occasions.", and inserting "in connection with legislation after it shall have been enacted into law but before its effective date. Such opinions shall relate only to questions of constitutionality.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: On the Habermehl-Austin-Faxon amendment the Chair will recognize Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, I want to say 2 things. First of all, it is quite clear that my amendment was soundly defeated upon this division, and I would naturally wish to support an amendment to this which would to some degree mollify the dangers inherent in the original, and I think this proposed composite would do so but only with one execption. That is, I believe that the words "on solemn occasion" should be reinserted. I realize we have had a combination here, and I can see that some delegates realize there may be some humor in the parliamentary situation, but believe me, this is a very, very serious matter as far as the welfare of the people of Michigan is concerned. So I would urge you to support this amendment, but further, upon its adoption, to reinsert the words "upon solemn occasion" after that fact.

Secondly, I would like to say that I have noted the tendency upon a yes vote for those voting yes not to vote as loudly as they might, and I would urge everyone to clear their throat. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is upon the amendment offered jointly by Messrs. Habermehl, Austin and Faxon.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. Chairman, I request a division on the question.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Habermehl requests a division. Is the demand supported? It is supported. Those in favor of the amendment offered jointly by Messrs. Habermehl, Austin and Faxon will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the composite amendment, the yeas are 82; the nays are 23.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is adopted. Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I now move to reinsert the words "and upon solemn occasions."

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Wanger offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 4, line 1, after "law" by inserting "and upon solemn occasions,".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is upon Mr. Wanger's amendment. You may proceed, Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, these words, while they are naturally to some extent vague, are, nevertheless, most important. It has been emphasized by everyone supporting the advisory opinion practice that the courts will exercise restraint, that they will be very careful not to answer every question that is asked but merely to answer those which are of a very, very vital nature.

The other constitutions, or some of them, keep these words "on solemn occasions." It is in New Hampshire's constitution, in Massachusetts' constitution, in Maine's constitution and in Colorado's constitution. And South Dakota also has this requirement of solemn occasions.

What these words do is give the court sound legal doctrine for hanging their hat on in refusing to give an opinion. It is absolutely vital that this language be in there. That is the reason why I support this and remind you, of course, that it was in the committee's original proposal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger to reinsert the words "and upon solemn occasions" in section k of Committee Proposal 96. Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I would like to address a question to someone who might care to answer it. Is anyone of the opinion that the supreme court would have the right to refuse these requests without these words? The language as it now reads of course is quite indefinite about that. It just says: each branch may request. It doesn't say whether they have to get an answer or not. Does anyone consider this a constitutional mandate?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger, do you care to answer?

MR. WANGER: Yes, I can answer that, I think, quite clearly. The reason for it is simply this: Mr. Prettie stated that other courts had construed the language, and I mentioned the ones here in constitutions which have this requirement of solemn occasions. In exercising restraint, their opinions construe the words "solemn occasions" to authorize their refusal or to excuse their refusal in answering these questions. Without these words it would be difficult to adopt the decisions rendered in these other states as decisions which should apply to our own state in this regard. Therefore, I think there is sound legal reason for putting these words back in.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Thank you. Mr. Chairman, Mr. Wanger. Well, if that is the case, then it obviously is extremely important that these words go back in there, because otherwise we have created a real Frankenstein's monster here. The governor can very easily play politics with any issue he wants by merely submitting the question to the supreme court, and of course they are not going to have the benefit of any fact situation or of any adequate argument before the court. This is an extremely dangerous thing, so by all means we should put these words back in there to give the court the right to decide for themselves whether they ought to intervene in the legislative process. At best, this is second to Mr. Wanger's amendment, but I certainly support it with the hopes that we can do as little harm as possible here.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, in viewing the previous constitutions that have incorporated this language—and I am speaking against Mr. Wanger's amendment—we can look at New Hampshire, the constitution was written in 1784; Massachusetts' constitution was written in 1790; Maine, 1820; and the most recent of the states that I have been able to yet determine where this language was used was that in South Dakota's constitution in 1889.

I am aware of Mr. Wanger's point, but the way the language reads, I don't believe it accomplishes what he thinks it sets out to do. It says "important questions of law," thus leaving the word "important" in "and upon solemn occasions." That "and" is something else, and this is the point that I had reference to earlier. I feel that the problem we are getting into now is not one where there is a difference in meaning, but a difference in expression, and I think that we would be wise in permitting the committee on style and drafting to incorporate that language which will give meaning to what we are trying to say now, which is that the supreme court will only render decisions where there is a very important question to be solved, but it should be a question of law, and the way the wording reads, just by inserting these words you don't accomplish that purpose. So I would advise you to vote down the amendment and leave it to the committee on style and drafting to come up with the language that will take into account the meaning upon which we were all agreed earlier.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, may I only say that the committee inserted this language by reason of the very statements Mr. Wanger has put forth. We do not intend that the court would render an opinion upon the request. They certainly would turn it down. And it is upon those words "solemn occasion" that they have the right to turn it down and they will turn it down when they don't want to do it, which we would imagine would be most of the time, and because of that, they use that to state, no, this is not a solemn occasion, even though we might have an important question of law. It is best that this come up upon an adversary proceeding. And very definitely this does put, at least in language, an admonition to the supreme court that it is desirable that this particular power be exercised very sparingly and, just as we mean, only upon the most solemn occasions upon very important questions of law. You can hardly word it any stronger than that, and I would urge that the words be put back in.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I am a little bit confused by Mr. Danhof's remarks. I would like to underscore something Mr. Faxon said. On page 4, line 1, I would like to call everyone's attention to the fact that the "solemn occasions" is added in this way: it says "upon important questions of law and upon solemn occasions." It does not say, these important questions of law must be solemn occasions.

The reason why we were dubious about the "solemn occasions" was because we didn't know exactly what the solemn occasions were. We knew what important questions of law were. And the reinsertion of this language would add something that has not been cleared up for me, and I think that we would best leave it out. It doesn't clear up anything. I think it tends to confuse.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Austin, would you yield to Mr. Wanger for a response?

MR. AUSTIN: Yes, I will. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Austin, I merely wish to point out that other constitutions which we have cited here use the words "and upon solemn occasions." Maine has it: "and upon solemn occasions." Massachusetts has it: "and upon solemn occasions." New Hampshire has it: "and upon solemn occasions." South Dakota has it: "and upon solemn occasions." We should have it: "and upon solemn occasions."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I think that this could be strengthened if we struck out the word "and" so we made it clear that these things should be "upon important questions of law upon solemn occasions;" that you have to have a solemn occasion in every event. I think that is what I understood Mr. Danhof to say the intent was. I rather think that is what Mr. Wanger intends, that there should always be a solemn occasion and that it must also be of an important question of law.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Do you yield to Mr. Wanger, Mr. Hutchinson?

MR. HUTCHINSON: I yield.

MR. WANGER: Would you suggest then that perhaps we withdraw the word "and"?

MR. HUTCHINSON: That would be my suggestion, Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I will agree.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger revises his amendment by eliminating the word "and"; so the amendment now is to insert the words "upon solemn occasions." Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: I would like to support that change.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Wanger's amendment now is:

1. Amend page 4, line 1, after "law" by inserting "upon solemn occasions,".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Young.

MR. YOUNG: I want to address a question to Mr. Wanger through the Chair, if I may.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. YOUNG: I wonder if the amendment as revised is now broad enough to cover the type of occasion that Mr. Ostrow referred to, such as whether or not this convention has the authority to determine when its results shall be placed on the ballot.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: That would be up to the decision of the supreme court with regard to the phrase "solemn occasions." The court would have to make that determination itself. We would hope, I am sure, that the court in a future constitutional convention would construe it to deny the rendering of such an opinion regarding the work of a constitutional convention.

MR. YOUNG: Do you feel then that without the inclusion of the words "solemn occasions" the court would not have that authority?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Without the words "upon solemn occasions," the court would have much less upon which to base a refusal to render an opinion which it would deem ill advised to render.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I think the question that has been posed here and most of the discussion and debate has gone to the question of the separation of powers. It seems to me that the basic problem when you look at the giving of advisory opinions by the supreme court relates to the executive and not to the legislature.

Basically we know that the court should interpret laws, should determine the constitutionality of them and other construction matters. Basically the executive should administer and enforce the laws, not project roadblocks into the enforcement or administration of that law by requesting opinions. It therefore would seem that the logical thing to do would be to limit the advisory opinion to the legislature and not to the governor.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Brown, the Chair notes that you have an amendment pending to that effect. The Chair would hope that you might confine your remarks on this occasion to the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger which seeks to insert the words "upon solemn occasions."

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I shall attempt to abide by the ruling of the Chair, and I intended to. It seems to me, however, that the question of solemn occasions is taken care of if the matter is limited to the legislature by a concurrent resolution thereon of both houses. The necessity for a solemn occasion is met by this test, I believe, and therefore it isn't essential that the solemn occasion be put back in, because you will not have the opportunity of having the executive request these at a time to bypass or to prevent rapid and orderly enforcement and administration of the law. So I therefore would say that I don't think the solemn occasion is necessary to be put in there, and in view of the fact that an amendment limiting it to the legislature is pending, that we view this amendment in the light of the amendment which will presently come before the committee.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I would like to support the Wanger amendment and the committee position in this regard. I think it is very important that we do. But in offering this support, I would not like to be on record as concurring particularly in the interpretation of the power of the supreme court with regard to the election. I would not like the record to stand without objection as to such a construction at this time.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. Chairman, I believe that the deletion of the word "and" would satisfy any objection that I had to the inclusion of the words "and upon solemn occasions." It is rather surprising how much the deletion of one little word can mean, but now both of those clauses would be limitations on the power, so I would support the Wanger amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger to insert the words "upon solemn occasions" after "questions of law" in line 1 of page 4, section k. Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: I ask for the yeas and nays.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Boothby requests a division on the question. The demand is supported. Those in favor of the Wanger amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

MR. HEIDEMAN: Mr. Chairman, let the record show that I didn't vote because I didn't understand it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: That will appear in the record, Mr. Heideman.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment, the yeas are 104; the nays are 2.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is adopted. Are there further amendments to section k of Committee Proposal 96? Mr. Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: Point of privilege. I would like to say to Mr. Faxon, this is a solemn occasion. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary will read the next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Garry Brown offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 3, line 28, after "Sec. k.", by striking out the balance of the line and inserting "The legislature, by concurrent resolution of both houses"; so that the language will then read, "Sec. k. The legislature, by concurrent resolution of both houses, shall have the authority to request the opinion of the supreme court."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Garry Brown. Mr. Danhof. Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I would only repeat that which I said before, that I believe that the advisory opinion question is primarily created when the governor has the right to request such advisory opinions. You do have here then the right of the executive not to enforce the laws that have been passed by the legislature until he has had an opinion of the court. In order to make this effective so that there will not be the sin worked upon the people of the millions of dollars spent and so on, in order to have the law not operate and cost the taxpayers this money, there must be a suspending of the effective date while this opinion is being rendered. If this is true, the very thing you are attempting to avoid is going to be accomplished.

The executive, being obligated to administer and enforce the laws that are passed by the legislature, should not have the right to interject the judiciary into the question and thereby negate this obligation to enforce the laws at this time. If there is a question that the legislature feels is desirous to have an opinion on, the governor can request such an opinion of the legislature, and the legislature by its resolution may get the opinion from the court. I think that this way the problem of separation of powers is not made so pertinent to us and so obvious and that the legislature in turn could ask the court to interpret the law or to determine the constitutionality of the law as is the proper judicial function.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I would only state that I think this would be a limitation. We have provided that the law will have to be enacted and that it can only be upon the constitutionality of it. If the legislature passes it and if the governor has grave doubts about the constitutionality, I can see where he should have the right to obtain a ruling. We have limited what it will be on. He does not want to enforce an unconstitutional act, and it is possible that he will not be able to obtain a concurrent resolution of both houses. I think that with the amendments passed, this would in effect take away what might be the most desirable feature. I would urge the defeat of this particular amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, if we are not careful, we are going to put the attorney general back in business here. I support this amendment. I am only sorry that Mr. Wanger's was not last instead of first because we are getting closer all the time. But I think that it is very important that we get the governor out of what could be a very embarrassing position for him and more likely a very embarrassing position for the supreme court of the state, so I would endorse this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I believe that the Brown amendment overlooks one very important fact, and that is that when the legislature passes this law, it provides for the effective date, and I don't believe the governor can change the effective date that has been established by the legislature. And it would appear the governor would have the right to ask for an opinion as to the constitutionality, and if he has doubt about it, it would be wise for him to do so, but I don't see how the effective date can be changed. The best he can hope for is that the supreme court will render a decision before the effective date. I would oppose this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: I wanted to ask Mr. Danhof a question through the Chair, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. YEAGER: What would happen if within the next 25 or 50 years there should develop a feud between the houses of the legislature, and they were to use this method as a means of embarrassing the other house or getting the court on one side or the other? Do you foresee any possibility in that regard?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I would trust the judgment of the 9 good men that they would not allow themselves to become engaged in such a conflict, Mr. Yeager.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, in reply to Mr. Austin, I think it is apparent that if the opinion did not come down before the effective date of the law, that in order for the opinion to have any effect whatsoever—supposing it is going to be an unconstitutional opinion—the court is going to have to suspend the effective date of the law, or else the very evil which we are attempting to avoid by the advisory opinion will take place; that is, the law will become effective, the money will be collected, we will have the millions of dollars that we have talked about already in the hands of the government and it won't be returned to the taxpayers. Therefore, it is obvious that you must suspend the effective date of the law if you are going to have this advisory opinion if it is not going to be rendered before the effective date. So I think that this answers the Austin question.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that if this is dependent upon concurrent resolution of both houses, you really destroy the practical effect and usefulness of this whole provision. You have very severely limited the usefulness of it by the changes which have been made, but if you further insert this language, it seems to me it will be almost completely useless. I hope that the amendment will not carry.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Answering Mr. Martin, Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that it is apparent that for a bill to go through the legislature, it must have the concurrent resolution of both houses. This bill must have been passed by both houses. It doesn't impose any great hardship to have the legislature adopt a concurrent resolution to ask for an advisory opinion.

I would also direct my remarks to what Mr. Ostrow said a minute ago to the effect that this convention possibly could have received an advisory opinion. If this convention wanted an advisory opinion of the supreme court, it would have had to go through either the legislature or the governor. If the advisory opinion provision had been in the present constitution, we could not do it ourselves.

Now, if the governor wishes to have an advisory opinion, the governor may request the legislature to seek this opinion, and I believe that the legislature, if there is a serious question of law and if it is a solemn occasion, will pass such a concurrent resolution to get such an advisory opinion from the court. I sincerely urge the adoption of this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Garry Brown to strike the first line of section k and insert the words, "The legislature, by concurrent resolution of both houses. . . ." Those in favor of the amendment will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Division is requested. Is the demand for division supported? It is supported. Those in favor of Mr. Brown's amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment, the yeas are 17; the nays are 88.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to section k?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Wanger offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 3, line 28, after "Sec. k.", by striking out "Each branch of"; so that the language will read, "Sec. k. The legislature as well as the governor. . . ."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger. Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I think this solves the real problem which was suggested by Mr. Brown and those that supported his amendment, but it has this effect: it does not prevent the governor from asking for such opinions as his amendment would have. It is just as simple as that. I think it would be a big improvement if such a section as amended is to be put in our constitution.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger. Mr. Danhof, do you desire recognition?

MR. DANHOF: No.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger to strike the words "each branch of" so that the first line of section k will then read, "The legislature as well as the governor shall have the authority" and so forth. Those in favor of the amendment will say aye. Those opposed will say no. The Chair is in doubt. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment, the yeas are 37; the nays are 68.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to section k?

SECRETARY CHASE: None on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If not, it will pass.

Section k, as amended, is passed. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, I had hoped perhaps we might have taken care of one more matter, but in view of the hour—as Dr. Anspach said, it is getting to be a solemn occasion—I move that the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof moves that the committee do now rise. Those in favor of the motion will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The committee will rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration one proposal, of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 96, has adopted several amendments thereto; and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. President, may I inquire through the Chair of Mr. Danhof, the chairman of the committee on judicial branch, when he expects to bring section g of Committee Proposal 91 before the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. President, Judge Leibrand, it was my understanding that upon action of this convention or the committee of the whole—I can't recall exactly—consideration of Committee Proposals 91 and 92 were postponed until we had finished the remaining sections of the judicial article. I may state that insofar as committee proposals are concerned, there is one additional section of 96 to consider, and I understand there is an amendment, as referred to by Mr. Radka and Judge Pugsley, to add a section. Unless there are further amendments, this would complete 96, would complete the judicial article, except what we have covered, and we would return to Committee Proposal 91, section a or g, whichever is before the committee of the whole at that time, which involves the selection of the supreme court, and I would hope that would be sometime tomorrow morning.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. President, may I inquire, through the Chair, of the secretary, how many amendments, substitutes or alternates there are on file to section g of Committee Proposal 91.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are presently filed with the secretary and pending 4 amendments.

MR. LEIBRAND: I wonder, Mr. President—this is a pretty important and complicated question—if we might have copies tomorrow morning of at least the amendments or substitutes that have been filed to a and g both. Would that be possible?

SECRETARY CHASE: Judge Leibrand, you mean the amendments that are pending?

MR. LEIBRAND: Yes, anything that has been pending affecting sections a or g of Committee Proposal 91.

SECRETARY CHASE: We can provide that by tomorrow morning.

MR. LEIBRAND: Thank you very much.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: It has been suggested by Mrs. Conklin that due notice be given of the fact that Delegate DeVries has returned to the convention. (laughter and applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Does Delegate DeVries care to be recognized?

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President, fellow delegates, my wife and I thought we had plan A, B and C organized to take care of the event that happened yesterday. However, our plans failed. I arrived an hour and 10 minutes late, after the baby was born. As a matter of fact, when I got there, she was eating breakfast and told me that I had another boy, the fourth one, which I can only attribute to poor administration. (laughter) This was the fourth boy; and, as my colleagues around me know, we have been discussing girls' names at this end of the convention hall for a good deal of time. Mr. Brake suggested that perhaps we ought to put it on general orders and talk about it for 2 days but he said or somebody else said that in the end it would just be rereferred to the committee on emerging problems anyway. (laughter) In any event, we have a fine boy. For some obscure reason my wife wants to name him after me, and I have no serious objections to that. In any event, we thank God for this fine boy. We thank you for your interest and your best wishes. Thank you. (applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: She may want to name it after you, Walt, because she hopes that will be the end of the line. (laughter) Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on style and drafting will meet in room K at 8:00 o'clock this evening.

The following suggested announcement has been presented to the secretary: Mr. Bentley will be on TV, channel 3, at 10:30 tonight as he faces Michigan. His appearance is scheduled as chairman of the constitutional convention committee on education.

We have the following requests for leave of absence: Father Dade wishes to be excused from tomorrow's session; Mr. Norris from the session of tomorrow morning; Mr. T. S. Brown from tomorrow's session; Mr. Figy from the session of tomorrow afternoon; and Mr. Davis from the session of next Wednesday, March 14.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they will be excused. There being no objections, they are excused.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all the announcements and requests.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. President, I just wanted to say that probably Mrs. DeVries thinks maybe a more appropriate name would be Caboose. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. President, I move the convention do now adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

We are adjourned until 9:30 tomorrow morning.

[Whereupon, at 5:30 o'clock p.m., Thursday, March 8, 1962, the convention adjourned until 9:30 o'clock a.m., Friday, March 9, 1962.]

NINETY-SIXTH DAY

Friday, March 9, 1962, 9:30 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation this morning will be given by one of our own delegates, Ray Plank, of Ludington.

MR. PLANK: O God, who hast called our nation to a place of trust and responsibility throughout the world, we humbly thank Thee for all the ways in which Thou hast blessed and guided us unto this day. We confess before Thee with shame all that has been evil in our action, and all that even now makes us unworthy to be called a Christian nation. Take from us, we pray Thee, all pride and greed and injustice, and grant to us the spirit of unselfish service which alone can make us great.

Bless the delegates, protect them from vain complacency, from foolish compromise, from false enthusiasm, from loss of respect for human dignity. Give them unflinching courage to humbly and effectively translate responsibility into dedicated work, to the final accomplishment of the unfinished task which they have so nobly begun. And may the love of Christ be so truly shown forth among us, that his name may be glorified among all nations; through the same Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. All present, please vote aye. If you are present, please vote aye. Have you all recorded your presence? If so, the secretary will take the roll.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave: Mr. Stamm, temporarily, from today's session; Mr. Lundgren, from today's session because of duties previously arranged; and Mr. Sterrett, from the session of today and March 12, 13 and 14 because of illness in the family.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. T. S. Brown, Dade, Follo, Mrs. Hatcher, Messrs. Hood, Lundgren, McAllister, McCauley, Murphy, Norris, Pellow, Perras, Pollock, Stamm, Sterrett and Tweedie.

Absent without leave: Mr. Wood.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, Mr. Wood is excused.

[During the proceedings, the following delegates entered the chamber and took their seats: Messrs. Stamm and Wood.]

[In commemoration of the sixty-fifth birthday of Secretary Chase, all persons present in the convention hall sang "Happy Birthday" and gave him a standing ovation.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mrs. Conklin.

MRS. CONKLIN: Mr. Secretary, it is with deep affection that the delegates present you with a cake — temporarily — on your birthday because during the day the girls in Mr. Chase's office will have the cake in there and we all are invited in for cake and coffee. At this time I am going to make you real nervous Mr. Chase; we have invited Mrs. Chase here to watch you work today. Mrs. Chase would you stand up please? (applause)

I'd like to yield the floor at this time to Mr. Herb Turner.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Turner.

MR. TURNER: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen, I would like to pay tribute to a man well known.

'Twas a day like this on March the ninth in 1897
That a great big bird swooped from the sky with a package sent from Heaven.
It landed at the home of Chase, at least that's what they said,
And when they found what the package was, they quickly named him Fred.
Like most all others of his day, he grew up on a farm
And to me he proves that pitching hay is a way of building charm.
'Twas in this town of Lansing after high school and vacation
That he found the job of wheeling books for the board of education.
But since he was strong, it wasn't long before his uncle — pen in hand —
Wrote: "Fred Chase, you are wanted, as a defender of this land."
He took his place amongst the rest and soon he won the pennant,
With shoulders broad and stature tall, he bore the name —Lieutenant.
He came back home to settle down and study female students,
But it wasn't long before he fell and asked for the hand of Prudence.
He soon was working for the state with a man named Dennis Alward,
And at this job he proved his worth and was known as a stalwart.
When he left the town of Mason, Ross Hilliard shed some tears.
Because he went to Washington as parliamentarian—3 full years.
He was secretary of the senate from '30 'til '33
When the Democrats took over and set our hero free.
But not for long, for in '35 they quickly got him back
They needed his wealth of knowledge to keep them on the track.
He held this job for years and years — for 29 in fact,
No one had the strength to win from a man so firmly backed.
While Fred was struggling with his work, his wife had lots to do
Because they made expansion in their family by 2.
First, there came another Fred, and very soon a girl
And in the eyes of Daddy, Elnora was a pearl.
Then after waiting 3 long years, there came a son named Don
And while Pa danced around with glee, Ma finished up with John.
Now they've recognized inflation, there's been added 15 more,
That always say "Hi Grandpa" when they enter through his door.
Fred I. Chase, the con con mainspring, who this day is 65
This man of great integrity is very much alive.

Thank you. (applause)

SECRETARY CHASE: If I might use the vernacular, why don't youse guys lay off? How do you expect me to get anything past this lump in my throat? Frankly, I don't see how any man can deserve all the encomiums you have heaped upon me, but gee, I love it.

You know, no man could accomplish the things that he does without the help that he has, at home and on the staff, and I would like this morning to pay tribute to the staff of this convention, my own staff in particular, and to the help that you — each one of you — as delegates, have given me. This little lady at my left, Lynn Nethaway, the last week that we had proposals reported out of committee, put in 71 hours here on the job, with no complaints; and the rest of the staff put in long, long hours which you all know about. It's unswerving loyalty and devotion of this kind to a job that makes a fellow like me look good and I want to pay my tribute to them for the help that they have given me.

In addition I would like to thank you delegates, because of your cooperation, your willingness to be of help on every possible occasion. There have been so many times that you have detected some things in the journal that needed correction and I want to thank you for this. You know, together we keep the record and it's your help in this regard that helps me do the job that we do.

And so, to wind it all up, I can't help but be reminded of a statement that old Uncle Ben Franklin made on one occasion. He said, "Kindness is something that you can't give away; it always comes back to you". Well, I have tried my best on occasion here and there and now and then to give away a little smidgen of it, but gee, you don't need to wheel it back by the truck load. I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart. (applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Just in order that you may all be able to participate in this cake, one of the page boys may remove it now to Mr. Chase's office, where I hope you all will see it sometime during the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: I have one announcement before we go into the business this morning. On each of your desks you will find a biographical sketch blank. During the week, in your leisure moments, would you please fill that out and turn it in to our office before next Friday so that we may have all of the necessary information in order to compile the final record of the convention in the form in which we would like it to be presented.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Report of standing committees.
SECRETARY CHASE: None.
PRESIDENT NISBET: Report of select committees.
SECRETARY CHASE: None.
PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications.
SECRETARY CHASE: None.
PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.
SECRETARY CHASE: No resolutions on file.
PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.
SECRETARY CHASE: None.
PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.
SECRETARY CHASE: There are no special orders.
PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I move the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering matters on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Van Dusen.

[Whereupon, Mr. Van Dusen assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The committee will be in order. The business before the committee is still Committee Proposal 96, A proposal pertaining to general and special provisions relative to the courts of the state. When we rose yesterday we had completed consideration of each section through k.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 96, see above, page 1531.

I am advised that there are amendments on the secretary's desk purporting to add additional sections and the secretary will read the first such amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Danhof, on behalf of the committee on judicial branch, offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 4, following line 1, by inserting a new section to read as follows:

"Sec. 1. Any justice or judge of a court of record desiring to become a candidate for election or reelection to a judicial office then held by him, may, in lieu of nomination as provided in this constitution or by law, nominate himself by affidavit filed in the office of the secretary of state not less than 90 days prior to the date of the primary election or election as the case may be, which is applicable to the office to be filled.".

Following are the reasons submitted in support of the amendment:

Mr. Danhof, chairman of the committee on judicial branch, submits the following reasons in support of the committee amendment to Committee Proposal 96:

At the present time candidates for election to the supreme court are nominated at party conventions although they run for office in nonpartisan elections. Those running for circuit and probate judgeships are nominated by petition.

Incumbent supreme court justices should not be dependent on partisan politics for nomination.

Incumbent circuit and probate judges, especially in more populous areas, have to devote too much time in getting petitions signed, or must rely on others to circulate petitions thus putting judges under some obligation, or the judges are required to pay those who circulate the petitions, which can be expensive.

While this section does not prevent an incumbent from using the other methods for nomination, it will enable an incumbent to be nominated without incurring obligations or expense and thus be able to devote his time to his duties.

Following is the minority report to the committee amendment to Committee Proposal 96 as offered and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

Messrs. Ford, Barthwell, Bledsoe and Garvin, a minority of the committee on judicial branch, submit the following minority report to the committee amendment to Committee Proposal 96:

A minority of the committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

All primary elections and elections of justices of the supreme court, judges of the circuit court, judges of probate courts and all county judicial officers provided for by the legislature under section 21 of article VII of the constitution shall be nonpartisan and shall be conducted as prescribed by law. All elections at which candidates for said judicial offices are nominated are designated "primary elections." Nominations for justices of the supreme court shall be made as now or hereafter provided by law; nominations for all other said judicial offices shall be made at nonpartisan primary elections. Except as in the constitution otherwise provided, all primary election and election laws, including laws pertaining to partisan primaries and elections, shall, so far as applicable, govern nominating procedures, primary elections and elections hereunder.

There shall be printed upon the ballot under the name of each incumbent judicial officer, who is a candidate for nomination or election to the same office, the designation of that office.

Messrs. Ford, Barthwell, Bledsoe and Garvin, a minority of the committee on judicial branch, submit the following reasons in support of the foregoing minority report, which accompanied the committee amendment to Committee Proposal 96:

The minority believe that the present section 23 of article VII of the 1908 constitution is preferable to the amendment to the committee proposal. The present language of section 23 now permits the legislature to specify the method of nomination for election or reelection. The committee amendment to the proposal would freeze a particular method of nomination for judicial offices into the constitution.

The present constitution leaves such details entirely to the legislature subject only to the restriction that all elections of judges must be nonpartisan.

The proposed method of nomination of any and all justices or judges for reelection is taken from the principle features of the so called "Missouri plan" method of judicial selection, and is a rigid departure from long accepted practices in this state. The minority believe that any such radical change should be made in the form of a statute and not by a constitutional provision.

Finally, the minority believe that the more flexible provision in section 23 of article VII is more desirable than any method which might be detailed and frozen into the constitution.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof on behalf of the committee on judicial branch, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman and members of the commitee, this section will be found in the journal on page 579. You will therein find the text as read by Mr. Chase, together with a written committee report. For an explanation of the committee report, on behalf of the majority, I would like to yield at this time to the delegate from Ypsilanti, Mr. Lawrence.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof yields to Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, the purpose of this amendment is to free incumbent judges and justices of political obligation and expense, and to enable them to devote their time to their duties. I assume that you have before you the amendment or that you can read it on the board.

In the past, as far as supreme court justices are concerned, it has been necessary for an incumbent justice, when up for reelection to be nominated or renominated by a political party at a political convention. The inference from that is that when time for reelection comes up, the obligation to the political party is renewed and in fact, may be present at all times during the time the justice has been serving. And that, we feel, is not a good thing. If a man has been once selected by his party for the position of supreme court justice, he should be able, by virtue of his record, to either be successful in a campaign for reelection or not, and it should not be dependent on party politics. He runs in a nonpartisan election and the people alone should judge his fitness.

In connection with the judges in the other courts, specifically the circuit and probate courts, they have been renominated, so to speak, by petitions. In certain areas, obtaining these petitions is not too difficult. But specifically in the more populous areas it has been a real burden and a real problem for an incumbent judge to get sufficient signatures. In some instances they have been obtained by the judge personally to a large extent and through friends, acquaintances and members of the bar. It is my understanding that in Wayne county, for instance, it has become a custom to send petitions to members of the bar with a request that they obtain the necessary signatures on them. This, of course, has the inference that the judge comes under some obligation to the persons from whom he solicits assistance, and it is to avoid that that is one of the purposes behind this amendment. In other instances, signatures are obtained by, you might call them professional solicitors, who work for so much per signature, and that can amount to considerable expense. Since it is almost axiomatic that an incumbent judge, if he desires to run for reelection, will get his petition by one means or another, it is really a useless thing to require that time, effort and expense on the part of the judge when he might otherwise be spending it in the performance of his duties.

It is my recollection that not all of the people who testified before the committee, or spoke to the committee on judicial branch were asked specifically whether or not they felt that an incumbent judge or justice should be allowed to, in effect, self nominate himself. But of all those who did speak and who were asked that question that I heard, each one was in favor of it and thought it was a proper step forward and an advancement. For some reason or other — I think it was in the rush and hurry of meeting the deadline of January 31 — this was not originally included in the Committee Proposal 96 or in any other provision. It was subsequently discovered and a meeting of the committee was called. At that committee meeting, 18 of the 21 delegates were present. When the matter was called to their attention, each one of the members of the committee present voted in favor of it. It was a unanimous approval by those who were present. For that reason we urge the adoption of this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof on behalf of the committee on judicial branch. Mr. Leppien.

MR. LEPPIEN: I'd like to ask Delegate Lawrence a question. If I read or heard the amendment correctly, it says the office of secretary of state. Shouldn't that also have a proviso in there "or other officers provided by law"? Because a good many of the counties are districts of themselves, and then it would be the county clerk's office.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: I can't answer for the entire committee but I can say that the discussion I heard was that there should be a central place somewhere, where all of the judges and justices could file and where a proper record would be kept and anyone inquiring could find out the facts regarding it. It was therefore thought that the office of the secretary of state rather than that of the various county clerks would be more advisable. The question I had heard regarding that is that it is entirely conceivable that when we get to the executive branch there might be some change in the situation regarding the secretary of state. However, it would seem to me that that would be a matter that is in the future, if it ever occurs, and could be taken care of in style and drafting without changing the intent.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to ask Delegate Lawrence the question with reference to the words "election or". I think I understand the reelection part, but what is the implication of "election or"?

MR. LAWRENCE: Frankly, I don't know the answer to that. Maybe some other member of the committee does. I think, looking at it and just standing here on my feet, it obviously is the intent that any justice or judge of a court of record desiring to become a candidate for election or reelection to a judicial office then held by him necessarily implies that the party is an incumbent and it has to be for the same judicial office. My feeling on that would be that again it is a matter for style and drafting. I think the effort was to cover the waterfront completely and by putting both words in, there would be no question as to the ability to do it. Here is another thing. There is a possibility there could have been an appointed judge. Now I've got it. There could have been an appointed judge who would be up for election the first time. We don't know just how this is going to end up yet.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I would like to ask Mr. Lawrence a couple of questions. Mr. Lawrence, there has been a little confusion in my discussion with members of the committee, some of whom voted for this. It is clearly understood that what you are saying is that for example in Wayne county, with the 18 vacancies, the 18 incumbent judges do not run in the primary election but anybody who wishes to run against them must be nominated in the primary election before he can get on the ballot at the general election?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: I don't know exactly whether it is clearly understood but I'll try to answer that. Let's take first — stay away from Wayne county — the case of a supreme court justice.

MR. FORD: Mr. Lawrence, I have some questions about the supreme court. I am trying to find out if this would be the effect of this amendment of Wayne county's circuit bench or any other circuit bench, for that matter.

MR. LAWRENCE: May I proceed, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may, Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Thank you. In a case of a supreme court justice —

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I asked Mr. Lawrence a question specifically regarding the effect of this on the circuit court.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Your point is well taken, Mr. Ford.

Mr. Ford has the floor and he has yielded to you for a response to a particular item, Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: I understand that. I am trying to explain it. I feel that in order to do it that we should set out the situation regarding the supreme court justice because it relates to the other.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair hopes you will be able to couch your answer in terms which will satisfy Mr. Ford and the Chair that you are responding directly to his question.

MR. FORD: Mr. Lawrence, the supreme court does not now have a primary election. The circuit court does. What I'm interested in is, who runs in a primary election after this section becomes a part of the constitution?

MR. LAWRENCE: I don't know who runs in a primary election. This states what the situation is regarding the incumbent judge. How the legislature provides for others to run I don't know.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Lawrence, with respect to the supreme court, isn't it true that the plan that you are suggesting, could now be used for nomination in the supreme court without any change from the present language of the 1908 constitution?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: It is my understanding that the present situation is statutory; my recollection is that there is nothing specifically on it in the constitution "except as provided by law".

MR. FORD: In a case such as this, do you think that it's wise to include in the constitution a specific manner of nomination as a constitutional matter where we have handled it in the past as a statutory matter?

MR. LAWRENCE: In this instance, I do.

MR. FORD: Is this because the legislature has been given an opportunity to pass on this method and has refused to do it?

MR. LAWRENCE: I do not know.

MR. FORD: Do you know if anybody has ever given the legislature an opportunity to implement this new experiment?

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Ford, I do not know. You were on the committee. You probably have as much knowledge or more than I do on that.

MR. FORD: Is it fair to assume that no matter what method — excuse me, Mr. Chairman — no matter what method is used to select candidates other than incumbents, such as a primary election now used in circuit court, for example, that the incumbents would simply file an affidavit of intention to run and then everybody else who wanted to run against them would run in a primary election to determine who was going to oppose the incumbent?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Are you referring now to circuit courts alone?

MR. FORD: The circuit court and the probate court are the only ones that I know of that now have the primary election.

MR. LAWRENCE: My understanding is that this merely takes the place of a petition and that the incumbent judge would run in a primary election along with any other candidates.

MR. FORD: That's what I have been told by several members of the committee who voted for this amendment, Mr. Lawrence but as I examine this it says that he may nominate himself by filing this.

Now, when we discussed this in the committee and when we have discussed it before groups of circuit judges, these people were asked how they felt about filing a statement or a filing fee in lieu of nominating petitions. But now we have language from the committee that goes much further. It not only replaces the nominating petition as a manner or method of getting onto the ballot; it replaces the ballot and excuses the judge from facing his opponents in the primary election. That's the way this reads.

MR. LAWRENCE: Well, Mr. Chairman, I would respectfully disagree with Mr. Ford and also with his conclusion. A party who has previously taken out a petition takes out a nominating petition and when he files that petition, properly filed, he is nominated.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I would like everybody who has the journal in front of them to take a look at the righthand column of page 579 that has the language in it and reads:

> . . . a candidate for election or reelection to a judicial office then held by him, may, in lieu of nomination as provided in this constitution or by law, nominate himself by affidavit filed in the office of the secretary of state not less than 90 days. . . .

Now, this is from the Missouri plan and this is nomination; it is not putting himself on the ballot. It is bypassing the primary election. There is no primary election in Missouri, where this language comes from. If you can find a distinction between this and the self renomination language of the Missouri plan and the ABA plan, why, then, you're going to have to do it by semantics because the intent and purpose is no different. And what you are being asked to adopt here is not a plan that bypasses any other method of nominating a judge; you are not simply being asked to excuse a judge from the responsibility of circulating petitions; you are being asked to excuse him from the responsibility of facing the voters along with his opponents in the primary election. And the language says that clearly. If you can get another meaning out of that, Mr. Lawrence, I wish you would clear it up for me because it doesn't say anything about filing a statement in lieu of nominating petitions. Its says "in lieu of nomination". It seems to me that "nomination" contemplates a lot more than filing a petition.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman, if the delegates do have that before them and will read the last 2 full paragraphs of the explanation — for those who don't, I will read it:

[Paragraphs 3 and 4 of the supporting reasons for the committee amendment were read by Mr. Lawrence. For text, see above, page 1554.]

Now, the only intent at any time — at least on my part, and I feel that I can speak for other members of the committee — was to have this take the place of a nominating petition. It is so expressed.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I am happy to hear Mr. Lawrence say that, and I think we ought to do something here to make it clear in the language itself and not rely entirely on an explanation which seems to be in conflict because I've examined this very carefully and discussed it with several lawyers present in this convention and the language itself is very clear on its face as an indication of this being a substitute for any other nominating procedure which would include a primary election. If we are going to say that all we are trying to do is save the judge the trouble of filing nominating petitions, I think we ought to say so. And that could be said very simply, I am sure, by saying directly what we are after. But Mr. Lawrence knows — and so do other people here who advocated the ABA and the Missouri plan — that this basic language is taken from their plan where they don't contemplate a primary election. Now it may be just coincidence because these people have been working so long with the language and I assume that that's the case. If we were only talking about this one limited facet of it, let's pin it down to that before we leave this convention.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford, do you yield to Mr. Lawrence and Mr. Everett for further comment? Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: I merely want to ask Mr. Ford a question. I wonder if Mr. Ford is aware how these nominating petitions are worded. They start out, "We hereby nominate so and so for the office of judge."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford, would you yield to Mr. Everett for a comment?

MR. FORD: Yes. I'm through.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Ford, I am certain that Mr. Lawrence has stated what was the intent of the committee, that we are not trying to bypass the primary. If there is any question in Mr. Ford's or anybody else's mind and it would be cleared up by substituting the words "nominating petition" in place of "nomination", then let's do it because we all have the same intent. We are simply saying that he may get into the primary — if there is one — by his own affidavit and not by petition. And of course if he has no opposition, then he very obviously gets into the final election. We are not trying to — certainly, no member of the committee wanted to — avoid a primary race for the judge if there is to be one.

MR. LAWRENCE: May I just take up 2 points, Mr. Chairman, one of which I tried to take up and was stopped?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: It seems to me again that if there is a question in view of the explanation which accompanies the provision, that again, style and drafting can take care of it because it would not be changing the intent. The other thing is regarding the supreme court justices. I wanted to bring it out in order to give the full picture and then in the discussion neglected to do it. Since the party conventions are held more than 90 days prior to election, and which it is contemplated they will continue to be, it would enable an incumbent judge to wait and see what happened at the party convention. If the party convention did not renominate him, he would still have time because you will notice that 90 day provision — he would still have time to self nominate himself.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Now I do have another question. If Mr. Lawrence and the other members of the committee are now agreeing with me that the committee really only wants to provide a method for a judge who formerly ran in a primary election to avoid the necessity of filing nominating petitions to put his name on the ballot, then what is the application of this section to the supreme court, where no nominating petitions of any kind have been required in the past? And isn't it true, Mr. Lawrence, that you are providing here that a supreme court justice may in fact nominate himself without any other procedure, regardless of what the legislature might say?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Yes, expressly so. As a matter of fact, there aren't any primaries now for supreme court justices.

MR. FORD: All right. If that's the conclusion we come to with respect to the supreme court — that we are talking about nominations and not nominating petitions — how in this language do you distinguish between the circuit court and the supreme court when you apply the language? There is no distinction in the language of the constitution and in an attempt to do this for the supreme court you are doing the same thing for the circuit and the probate courts because you don't make any distinction in this language.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: I respectfully disagree with Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Well, show me the distinction, please, in the language. It says, "Any justice or judge of a court of record." Period. And I assume that means everybody from a probate judge to a supreme court justice.

MR. LAWRENCE: Well, Mr. Ford, the explanation follows the amendment. I suggest that if it does not clearly state that, it is a job for style and drafting. I can't make it any clearer than that.

MR. FORD: Well, at this point, Mr. Chairman, I'd like to move to amend — I haven't had an opportunity to write this down, and I don't have the green copy, so I am reading from the journal — in the sentence that reads, ". . . a candidate for election or reelection to a judicial office then held by him, may, in lieu of nomination" strike the word "nomination" and insert "filing nominating petitions" —

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment — excuse me.

MR. FORD: — so it will read, ". . . may, in lieu of filing nominating petitions as provided in this constitution or by . . ."; and where it starts off a new line, ". . . law, nominate himself by affidavit filed in the office of the secretary . . ." in place of the word "nominate", "cause his name to be printed on the primary election ballot by affidavit filed in the office of the secretary of state," making it clear that we intend to permit the judges to file this affidavit in lieu of nominating petitions.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment to the amendment offered by Mr. Ford. Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: I think this is a good example of these "off the top of the head" amendments which could be taken care of by style and drafting. What Mr. Ford's amendment does, as I understand it, as I heard it — we all heard it — would mean that since you don't have any nominating petitions in the supreme court, it would eliminate the right of a supreme court justice to self nominate himself.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger, do you desire recognition on the Ford amendment?

MR. WANGER: I wish to ask Mr. Ford a question, Mr. Chairman. The question I propound is this: would not the second change accomplish his purpose entirely and wouldn't it be just as well to leave off the part of "in lieu of nominating petitions" since after all, the nomination might be by party convention and this wouldn't cover that? Wouldn't your fundamental objection be solved by your second change, which is merely to strike out "nominate himself by" and inserting "cause his name to be printed on the ballot"?

MR. FORD: It would if we were dealing with the supreme court differently than we do with the other courts as the present constitution does, Mr. Wanger. In the present constitutional amendments you will notice that they finally came to the conclusion you had to deal with the supreme court differently than the others, so we used different language. But here is this one. We lump all the courts together and talk about the same method of nomination. Now, if the district plan is passed by this convention so that there is a primary election in the district and then the election of the supreme court justice by district, this section here will then work very well because it will provide that in a district the supreme court judge files a nominating petition instead of running in the primary election with the other people running for the office. And when this was written by the people who wrote it, the same people who in some instances supported the district plan, they are contemplating its effect on the district plan because if the district plan is adopted, then the method of nomination by primary election would be the same in all of the courts in the state. That's why this language is not consistent at this point unless we assume the existence of the district plan and further assume that if you go to the district plan you want to let the incumbent judge nominate himself instead of running in the primary election. I had hoped to keep the district plan out of it but we might as well face it. This is all tied together and this is part of it and this sentence here does not say it and you can't say to style and drafting, change it; because we are not saying what Mr. Lawrence says we mean. If we're talking about nominating petitions, let's restrict it to that; but we are not doing that. We are nominating judges here and I think that the convention could conceivably be confused by this method of approaching this thing.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford, the secretary has requested —

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Madar, would you wait until you are recognized? Mr. Ford, the secretary has requested that you send your language up in writing. It will be of great assistance to him.

MR. FORD: Do we have green copies of this? I don't seem to have one.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair would be glad to give you his copy, Mr. Ford, of the amendment as projected. Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, the language is not here but it does seem to me that Mr. Ford's amendment should be divided because —

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, I'm rising for a point of information from the Chair.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Will you kindly wait until you are recognized, Mr. Madar?

MR. MADAR: Yes, but I wanted you to know why I'm here.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair is very well aware of your presence, Mr. Madar. Mr. Wanger, the amendment will be divided when it is presented in accordance with your request.

MR. WANGER: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Now, Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: I wanted to get up so I could get this thing started off and we wouldn't be speaking for 15 or 20 minutes without knowing what we're doing. Is it possible now to move that we recess for 10 minutes until we get this amendment so that they won't be speaking from the top of their heads, as Mr. Lawrence says, so the rest of us will know what this amendment is?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: As Mr. Hutchinson will point out if the Chair does not, Mr. Madar, a recess is not in order in the committee of the whole. The secretary now has the amendment in writing. The Chair will recognize Mrs. Judd.

MRS. JUDD: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, it seems to me that Mr. Ford was a member of this judicial committee. He must have had ample notice about this provision. He had ample time to bring in his amendments and have them in front of us. To try to consider these things, as Mr. Ford says, is very confusing and I don't think we can make an intelligent decision off of the top of our heads or off the top of his. I think Mr. Lawrence is right, that this is a matter for style and drafting. He has described the intention of the committee very well and I don't think we should be asked to vote on this kind of an amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Before proceeding further, the Chair will ask the secretary to again read the 2 amendments offered by Mr. Ford.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Ford has offered the following amendments to the amendment:

1. Amend the amendment, after "in lieu of" by striking out "nomination" and inserting "filing nominating petitions".

2. Amend the amendment after "or by law,", by striking out "nominate himself" and inserting "cause his name to be printed on the primary election ballot".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair thinks it may be helpful, in considering these 2 amendments if we divide the debate on them as well as divide the putting of the question. Therefore, the Chair will recognize at this time speakers who seek recognition with respect to the first amendment offered by Mr. Ford, striking the word "nomination" and inserting the words "filing nominating petitions". Miss Donnelly, do you seek recognition on that?

MISS DONNELLY: I seek recognition on a motion that we pass over this. It seems to me that this can be done very readily with 2 redrafts, but any amendment thrown in quickly will not do it. You're going to have to remove one word and throw it in the next section. It can be done in redrafting in 5 or 10 minutes very readily. And there is no sense in arguing this thing when we can take care of Mr. Ford's point and Mr. Lawrence's and the committee's point very readily by simply a redrafting measure. If we don't want to go to style and drafting, we can do it here so I would suggest we file over — I yield to Mr. Danhof.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss Donnelly yields to Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, it appears obvious here that we have run into a question which I think cannot at this particular time be answered. It depends on what system for the election or selection of supreme court justices that we agree upon. If we agree upon a particular plan, then the language herein contained relative to supreme court justices may not be needed or if it is, we can clean it up. I would therefore move at this time that further consideration of this proposed section of Committee Proposal 96 be passed until we have completed action on Committee Proposals 91 and 92.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the motion of Mr. Danhof to pass further consideration of the proposed amendment offered by him on behalf of the committee on judicial branch until following consideration of Committee Proposals 91 and 92 in the committee of the whole. Those in favor of the motion will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails and it is so deferred. Does the secretary have further amendments to Committee Proposal 96?

SECRETARY CHASE: There is an additional amendment to Committee Proposal 96, following this proposed section 1 by adding another section to be known as section m now offered by Messrs. Pugsley, Radka, Rajkovich, Prettie, McAllister, Turner, Sleder, Howes, Leslie Richards, J. Burton Richards, Plank, Farnsworth, Thomson, Boothby, Lundgren, Dell, Dehnke and Shanahan, said new section to read as follows:

"Sec. m. Within 5 years from the date this constitution becomes effective, the legislature shall establish statutory courts of limited jurisdiction inferior to the circuit court with a definition of their powers and jurisdiction, the location and number of such courts, the qualifications of the judges who shall preside therein, the method of their election and tenure of office and the amount of their salary and by what governmental units the same shall be paid.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Judge Pugsley and a number of other delegates, on which the Chair will recognize Judge Pugsley.

MR. PUGSLEY: Mr. Chairman and delegates of the convention, this amendment is offered for the purpose of taking recognition of the fact that the judicial article which has been submitted to you contains a provision that at the expiration of 5 years, the offices of justices of the peace and circuit court commissioners will no longer be in existence. That means that in the interim, between now and then, there will be a responsibility resting with the legislature to provide a court or courts to take the place of these 2 constitutional offices which are eliminated from the present judicial article. This is intended to take cognizance of the fact that there are many counties in the state in which without the exercise of authority by the legislature there will not be a magistrate or any court of inferior jurisidiction which is the court, as we all recognize, existing at present on the lower level.

I believe that the language of the amendment is quite self explanatory. As you all know, the present constitution contains a provision for the election of 4 justices in each township. This was later changed, I believe, to now only 2 are required to be elected. As we all know, the Constitution of 1908 was passed at a time when means of transportation by automobile was not available. In other words, it goes back to the horse and buggy days, so to speak. I think we all recognize now that the election of 2 justices of the peace or 2 courts of limited jurisdiction in each of the townships in each county of the state is quite unnecessary and quite impractical. However, I do think that we all realize that there is the necessity for a court on a lower level for matters of less consequence so far as dollars and cents are concerned but nevertheless important to the individuals who are interested to have their day in court. It is also necessary that a magistrate or someone with a magistrate's authority be located where he may be conveniently reached if a complaint is to be made or a warrant is to be issued.

I don't think it is necessary to go on in detail. This is intended to fill a vacancy which I believe should be done. While it might not be necessary perhaps to make particular mention of it in the constitution but rather to pass it and leave it entirely to the legislature, I feel that we will find ourselves, as delegates, being criticized for having entirely omitted and failed to take any action or recognition of the importance of the court of the lower level. With that thought in mind, those of us who have sponsored this amendment submit it to you for your favorable consideration.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Judge Pugsley and others. Mr. William Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, if I may ask Mr. Pugsley 2 questions.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer, Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Judge Pugsley, the first question is: would you interpret the language of your amendment to allow these local courts, so called, to be classified so that in townships or counties of certain population, a different requirement for a judge and a different monetary jurisdiction could be allowed?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Pugsley.

MR. PUGSLEY: I think that is true. That is the intent. In other words, it was intended to be flexible enough so that the legislature might make it possible for the establishment of courts of limited jurisdiction to be established wherever they are needed throughout the state of Michigan.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, my second question goes to the term "limited jurisdiction inferior to the circuit court." Now, at present, there is some overlapping jurisdiction between the present justice courts and municipal courts with the circuit court, with which I am sure the judge is familiar, and when we use the term — which is I believe new, though we lawyers quite often use it — when we say "limited jurisdiction inferior to the circuit court," can we then provide for a local court system which has concurrent jurisdiction with the circuit court as we have at present in the municipal court act and in fact, in justices of the peace in cities?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Pugsley.

MR. PUGSLEY: I think that's true. I appreciate your point. As we all know, the justice court is looked upon as a court of inferior jurisdiction at the present time. However, we do know that under the present law there is a concurrent jurisdiction existing between the justice court and the circuit court in matters in which the consideration involved is $100 or not more than $300. In some instances that has been raised to a higher amount. In other words, the whole spirit of this amendment is intended to leave flexibility, and it is intended that there will be an appeal available from the action of the court of limited jurisdiction to the circuit court or to any higher court that may be provided, depending on the language of the legislature in its attempt to meet the situation.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, if I may then ask Judge Pugsley and the sponsors of this a third question. Would we not clarify the right to this concurrent jurisdiction if we struck out the term "inferior to the circuit court"? I recognize that this court would be under the supervision of the circuit court, being a local court not of record. But if we say "statutory courts of limited jurisdiction," then I believe we would clearly allow concurrent jurisdiction in certain fields, either in dollar amounts or in specialized types of action.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Pugsley.

MR. PUGSLEY: Let me answer your question by asking you one. Do you feel that the inclusion of the language as used raises a question that might be confusing to the legislature?

MR. W. F. HANNA: It does in my opinion, Judge, because I think the "inferior" goes to the "limited jurisdiction". If you will put the "inferior" over behind "statutory courts", "inferior to the circuit court with limited jurisdiction", then the phrase "inferior to the circuit court" is clearly tied with the statutory courts. But when you put it after "jurisdiction" you seem to say that the "jurisdiction" must be inferior to the circuit court.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Pugsley.

MR. PUGSLEY: I haven't any pride of authorship that would say that that could not be done. I have no objection if it doesn't destroy the purpose and intent of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN. Mr. Hutchinson. Mr. Higgs, did you seek recognition?

The question is on the amendment offered by Judge Pugsley and others. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, naturally, this is not a committee proposal but I can state that in view of the action that this committee has taken regarding section a of Committee Proposal 96, that is, the limitation to the requirement that attorneys only be in courts of record, together with the action that we have taken under section i, which is the 5 year provision for the justices of the peace and the circuit court commissioners, I shall support this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I feel that Judge Pugsley and the other sponsors of this amendment have done a very fine job in filling the vacuum which is created by the action of the committee. I think that this is a very clear direction and will serve a useful purpose and I will support it.

From the standpoint of style and drafting, I feel that Delegate Hanna raised a very good point and that that matter can be taken care of. Further, I'd like to, along the same line for clarification here with regard to statutory courts of limited jurisdiction — in the original statement I understood Judge Pugsley to say that the legislature would have the power to establish a court or courts of limited jurisdiction. Now, in this connection it is my understanding that the intention is to create a court at the so called fifth tier, with divisions much the same as our other courts at the other tiers sitting in locations where the need may be established and further, that in locating the various divisions, we nevertheless will have an opportunity to have developed a court system at this level with some uniformity of practice, jurisdiction and procedure. This also, I understand, is not to preclude the setting by the legislature of perhaps differing qualifications for the judges sitting in those courts with regard to the possible population or area factors taken into account so that the varying needs of the state can be met and the widest range of flexibility permitted to the legislature. Would I be stating the intention more or less correctly, Judge?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Pugsley.

MR. PUGSLEY: I think so, Delegate Higgs. This matter received a great deal of consideration in our committee and we realized that if we were to take the time and try to spell out and to detail the functions of these counties and try to pick out the localities in which one court of a certain amount of jurisdiction should be provided, that a provision that we might make that might fit in counties of my district perhaps would not fit in some of the larger places. It might not even fit in the smaller ones. We tried to prepare language broad enough and flexible enough so we believe the legislature can take over where we have left off.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Gover.

MR. GOVER: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I want to say at the outset that I am in agreement that we need some sort of a court of this nature. I just have a question about conflict between Committee Proposal 90 and this section here. I wouldn't want to get this one in and have that proposal mixed up on that and I want to call attention that Committee Proposal 90 says 2/3 vote of the members of each house, and I didn't want there to be in conflict between these. It doesn't do it. It just says, "Within 5 years from the date this constitution becomes effective, the legislature shall establish. . . ." That was the question I had on that, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Pugsley, do you care to respond to Mr. Gover's question? Mr. Gover inquired whether there is a conflict between this proposed section and the provision of Committee Proposal 90 requiring a 2/3 vote of each house of the legislature for the establishment of the court.

MR. PUGSLEY: In answer to that, I don't think that that will be a real obstacle. If it is to be construed as requiring a 2/3 vote, I can't conceive that the legislature would not do it. I'd be quite satisfied if it was only a majority.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I respectfully oppose this amendment to the committee proposal. In doing so, I do not do so because I disagree with the intent of those who propose it, because we obviously do need courts of limited jurisdiction which are sometimes colloquially referred to as "poor men's courts" in this state on the level of the courts which the present justice of the peace occupies. However, I oppose this amendment for other reasons. Those reasons are 4 in number.

First, this language gives the legislature no additional power whatsoever under the proposals as adopted by this committee from the committee on the judiciary. The legislature can do everything set out in this language without the authorization of the language itself. And therefore, this language would serve no useful legal purpose in the constitution.

The second reason why I oppose this amendment is because this language can be reasonably interpreted as an exception to the requirements set out in Committee Proposal 90, that such additional courts should be established by a 2/3 vote of the legislature rather than a majority vote of the legislature. Therefore, it could be reasonably interpreted to permit these courts to be established by a mere majority.

The third reason why I oppose this is because this language could be reasonably interpreted as an exception to the last sentence of section a of Committee Proposal 96 which says:

> No judge or justice of any court in this state shall be paid from the fees of his office nor shall the amount of his salary be measured by the fees or other moneys received nor by the amount of judicial activity.

In other words, it could be reasonably interpreted as allowing the legislature to establish a salary which was, for example, measured by the amount of his judicial activity.

The fourth reason why I oppose this amendment is the reason suggested by Mr. Hanna in his presentation when he suggested the language might actually act as a limitation upon the power of the legislature to prevent it from giving to this court any concurrent jurisdiction with the courts above it, and that this would certainly be an unreasonable rigidity to put into our constitution.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Judge Pugsley to apply his judicial experience in the interpretation of this language and advise me whether a fair reading of this language, couched as it is, might not be construed to give to the legislature, shall we say, a one shot power; that is, it has the power to establish these courts and to do all these things, but after it has done all these things, its power might be thereupon exhausted. Now, if we didn't say anything about it at all in the constitution, of course, the legislature could establish, it could amend, it could alter, it could abolish, it could make any kind of adjustment it wanted to, if nothing was said in the constitution. But now if we write this language into the constitution, couched in this phraseology, Judge, do you not believe that it might very likely be construed to give to the legislature this responsibility of setting up this system and then its whole power is exhausted in the field?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Pugsley.

MR. PUGSLEY: It had not so occured to me, Senator Hutchinson. Of course, you know better than I do what the legislature may do and how far it may go. We have some confidence left, I believe, in the legislature, and I believe they will make a reasonable construction of this. It is the intent of this amendment to make it possible for the — I shouldn't use that language because I don't construe this to be a grant of power; I think they have the power. But we are offering this amendment because we feel the importance of this court, which has been a part of our constitution for so many years. And I feel that the convention will leave itself open to criticism if we define a supreme court, a superior court, a circuit court and a probate court and then stop there. They'll say, "Why? Aren't these lower courts of some importance? Should they not be recognized in the constitution?" We believe they should be recognized, not necessarily as justices of peace or as circuit court commissioners. We're leaving it to the legislature to establish the courts that are necessary and with a provision that we believe is flexible enough for them to do the job to meet the needs of the entire state.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, in answer to Judge Pugsley, I might say it was deemed competent in the Constitution of the United States not to mention any court other than the supreme court. All of the rest of the courts are created by law. Now, I go back to the basic proposition that every provision of this state constitution must be interpreted as a limitation upon the legislature. If you are going to say anything at all about a matter in the constitution, you must couch it in such phraseology as not to be unduly restrictive or to restrict the matter further than intended. If it is the intent of the sponsors here that it was not thought of at all that the legislature should be directed to set up this system and then its power be exhausted, undoubtedly in the process of writing this constitution, both in style and drafting and on second reading and so on, this section can be rephrased in order to remove any doubt in that field.

I just wanted to get the views of the sponsors as to whether they intended that the legislature should do it on a one shot proposition or whether the legislature should have continuing power. I am afraid that this language here could be construed — and I call Judge Pugsley's attention to the fact that it isn't going to be the legislature that construes this power; it's the courts that construe the power — the legislature may set up a court system under this language and then find out that the supreme court, upon an appeal from some case or other, would hold that because of the language of this section, the legislature having acted, it could not alter the system; it would require a constitutional change. I don't believe that is intended by the sponsors and I think the language should be reworked in order to remove the doubt. I am simply raising the doubt at this point. I don't have the language that I would suggest to correct it.

MR. PUGSLEY: Thank you, Senator Hutchinson. I appreciate your comments. It is not our thought to tie the hands of the legislature by language included in this amendment which would prevent them from making changes and alterations and establishing other courts in various places that might from time to time be needed. I, for one — and I think the other sponsors of the amendment will go along with me in this — want to make it flexible and elastic enough to meet conditions of the future, and I am sure we would appreciate — if you have some contributions to make that will clarify the situation or aid in the administration of justice, we'll be very happy to have you do so.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Downs, the Chair would advise that there are 3 delegates seeking recognition; the Chair will put you in line. Mr. Ostrow.

MR. RADKA: Mr. Chairman, I believe Judge Pugsley yielded to me.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Excuse me.

MR. RADKA: I merely wanted to point out through the Chair to Senator Hutchinson the words "the legislature shall establish statutory courts". It was our considered opinion that a statutory court, once established, would not be a one shot deal; that if they were established by law and were referred to as statutory courts, that the legislature would have continued jurisdiction to change the laws which they passed to establish statutory courts.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: I oppose this amendment for the reason that the provisions that we have already made for these lower courts will do a better job than this present provision. We've provided in Committee Proposal 90 for courts of limited jurisdiction to be established by the legislature. That provision is in the broadest general terms so that it can adequately serve the needs of the people as they may arise at any time in the future. In Committee Proposal 96, section 1, we've disposed of the justices of the peace and the circuit court commissioners and we have retained the special statutory courts. At the present time there are about 85 of these special statutory courts in every part of the state, the upper peninsula, the western part, the northern part, the eastern part. The difference between those statutory courts — and they are courts of limited jurisdiction — and this provision is that in each case of every one of these special statutory courts, it was the people of that particular community who decided they wanted that particular type of court. There are some half dozen statutory provisions which permit courts of this type. The people could pick the particular type of court if they were eligible under that provision and decide if they wanted it, what their qualifications were to be and the salaries to pay. And I submit that when you get to this level of courts that the people locally know better what their problems are than we do, and the provisions we now have are much more flexible and will do a better job for the people locally — and these are purely local courts — than this provision will.

Now, when it comes to this question of uniformity, there are some stages where uniformity is desirable. But these courts are so close to the people and are so localized in their work generally that it is more important that they serve the needs of the local community than that they be the same as a court in some other part of the state. For that reason I think we should vote against this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I too rise to oppose this amendment in this language. I am sympathetic with the intent to a limited degree. However, I can't agree that we haven't handled the situation. In Committee Proposal 96, after having 2/3 to establish lower courts of inferior jurisdiction set up in the first part, we go on and say that we have handled this; we haven't left it, until the time within this period they are established "or their jurisdiction and powers are transferred to, or invested in, other courts that shall be established in accordance with this constitution." Then we go further to say special statutory courts in existence at the time this constitution becomes effective shall retain their powers and jurisdiction except as provided by law and until and unless they are abolished by law.

We have many, as Mr. Ostrow has pointed out, statutory courts of inferior jurisdiction. We have these municipal courts that have been set up under the county home rule provisions, city home rule provisions that they have done. The vacancy that Judge Pugsley is concerned with does not in my opinion exist. The legislature already has the power under our previous proposals to set these courts up. This amendment, I think, is unneccessary and is confusing. It has already been handled once and to spell it out now imputes that it should perhaps change everything that has been done first. And I ask, what will happen to the municipal courts already established? I don't think, if Judge Pugsley would care to answer, that this was their intent. I don't think they wished to do this. Did you, Judge?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Pugsley.

MR. PUGSLEY: It is not our plan to be destructive and I fail to see anything in there that is. I think I have a cognizance of conditions out over the state that some of the practitioners whose practice is confined to the city of Detroit fail to appreciate; and we who live out in the sticks, so to speak — as I was designated once when I was assigned to Detroit to hold court, as the "judge from the sticks" — I think that some of the people who don't live in the sticks don't appreciate some of the problems that lay out there.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Downs. Excuse me, Miss Donnelly, the Chair takes it that you have further comment.

MISS DONNELLY: I submit that the question I asked I don't think was answered by the judge. I was talking about municipal courts and, Judge, I don't think you have ever presided in a municipal court, have you?

MR. PUGSLEY: No, I have missed that experience, Ann.

MISS DONNELLY: I'm worrying about the statutory municipal courts that we already have now and I am sure this isn't what you're trying to do.

MR. PUGSLEY: No, I don't think there's a thing in there that conflicts with them.

MISS DONNELLY: Because you have here that it "shall establish statutory courts of limited jurisdiction inferior to. . . ." This is in the future within the next 5 years. This imputes, to me, that they must do this. What they have done in the past, it seems to me they must have to change.

MR. PUGSLEY: No. We are recognizing the fact that the legislature does have power to do that which they have already done and to which you have called attention, only they've only partly done the job and we're inviting them to finish it so it will extend over the entire state of Michigan where we are leaving a vacuum at the present time which should be filled.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: If I may, through the Chair, ask the Judge one more question.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MISS DONNELLY: Didn't we already say, "their jurisdiction and powers are transferred to, or invested in, other courts that shall be established in accordance with this constitution."? Hasn't the vacuum been filled?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Pugsley.

MR. PUGSLEY: If it's a matter of emphasis, I'm willing to emphasize it. It is not intended to be a conflict.

MISS DONNELLY: I oppose it for these reasons. I think it is going to give us confusion and not aid. I'm sure the judge wants to give it aid but I think it's going to give confusion.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Now, Mr. Downs. The Chair apologizes for the earlier false start.

MR. DOWNS: I'll be unusually brief, Mr. Chairman. I just wish to call attention that in Committee Proposal 90 we did make provision for other courts of limited jurisdiction to be established by a 2/3 vote similar to the present constitution. I hope when this is reworded, those working on that will consider that part. I think the point Senator Hutchinson made about the danger of setting up a one shot court system is very valid and I hope that whatever is worked out would be in conjunction with Committee Proposal 90, which I do think makes a more fluid opportunity for setting up additional courts in the future.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Several people have emphasized the fact that this language becomes restrictive because we have already given the legislature almost unlimited power to establish courts inferior to the courts of record and now we are saying that they must do certain things in establishing the court. There is presently being discussed over in the legislature house bill 81, which is an amendment to the new judicature act and is intended to clear up some jurisdictional problems wherein Mr. Wanger's problem that he raised is brought right to the fore because the purport of this bill would be to give municipal courts countywide civil jurisdiction concurrent with the circuit court up to the monetary jurisdictional level that they establish. It seems that this language might prevent that. In addition to that, although we have adopted language that protects all of the special statutory courts presently in existence, it would seem that this might say that a city that incorporates after the effective date of this constitution would not, as it presently has, have the right to establish the exact amount of compensation, either by a city council or a city charter, but would have to rely upon the legislature to set the amount of compensation for its municipal judge.

Everything that is in this section that the legislature shall do is something that the legislature already has the power to do and some of them are things that we think perhaps the legislature might not necessarily do. For example, there are at least 3 basic municipal court acts now that leave a number of the matters contained here to the voters of the local areas. The qualifications of the judges are usually set by city charter: the amount of salary; the length of term of office; the method of election; and all of these things are presently set by the people in our own locality to fit the pattern of what they think is best. And what we are asking the legislature here to do is create a super system — Mr. Hutchinson has called it a one shot court — that would have to be applied with some sort of uniformity throughout the state and the problems of establishing municipal courts in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb county are perhaps different — and in fact are different — than they might be in other counties throughout the state. I feel that we should leave this matter as open as it has been in the past. There has been no abuse by the legislature in establishing these lower courts in the past that has caused serious comment in this convention or been brought to the attention of the committee. And it would seem to me that we ought to let the legislature continue as they have in the past to meet this problem on an individual basis and to leave a lot of the details that are spelled out here to the people in the local communities to decide for themselves.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, my particular interest in speaking arises out of my participation in the committee on style and drafting. As I said before, I am sympathetic and support this provision. I feel that it is worthwhile. I so far fail to find any valid objection to the principle. I would like to call attention to the provision of section 1. The last sentence I think answers the questions raised by Delegate Donnelly and Delegate Ford, that all "courts in existence as of the time this constitution becomes effective shall retain their powers and jurisdiction, except as provided by law," et cetera. I don't see any conflict here coupled with the power of the legislature established in Committee Proposal 91, which gives the legislature the power to establish other statutory courts.

Now, with regard to the objections raised by Delegate Wanger and emphasized by Delegate Ford, I'd like to yield to Delegate Wanger for an answer to a question, if I may.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. HIGGS: Delegate Wanger, your second and third objections were based upon the possibility that this language could be interpreted as an exception to the 2/3 requirement and as an exception to Committee Proposal 96, section a. Do you have available any particular authority for the rule of construction that the court, in the face of an express provision, could reasonably construe some other provision to the contrary?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, my answer to the question would be very simply this: the court, in construing language in the constitution is governed by a rule of law or a rule of construction which says that every word in the constitution is presumed to have meaning and was not presumed to be put in for anything except a particular legal purpose. Taking this language, it merely says "the legislature shall establish statutory courts," and so forth, of this nature; and that language taken alone would very clearly mean that the legislature by a majority vote would be able to do that. It further says that the legislature may fix their salary, the amount of their salary, and that language taken alone would allow the salary to be based upon the amount of judicial activity or the amount of fees received.

Now, admittedly there are 2 other places in the constitution where this has been prohibited, but nevertheless a conflict has been created between the 2 by adding this language here. The court therefore in light of the doctrine that everything has a particular legal meaning could reasonably construe the language of this section as an exception to the limitations set forth in other sections. There is very clear legal authority for this possibility.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, I think Delegate Wanger has done what he charged Delegate Danhof with doing some time before. He has not answered the question. The question was whether or not in the face of an express prohibition there is any rule of construction available to the courts that could reasonably interpret some other provision to the contrary. We have a very express prohibition in Committee Proposal 96, section a, that the salaries shall not be measured by fees or other moneys received nor by the amount of judicial activity. Inasmuch as the proponents have used the word "salary" here, there is no inconsistency whatsoever and I just fail to understand that. I fail to understand any inconsistency or any conflict or any rule of construction that would permit such an argument. I think Delegate Hutchinson raised a valid point, as did several others, that it can be handled in style and drafting and I urge you to support this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I am not going to endeavor to add anything to the legal complications of this particular paragraph but I would like to ask the committee to look at it from this particular angle. Now I am assuming that Senator Hutchinson and Delegate Wanger and the rest of you can clear up the legal implications so that we don't get into any trouble about a one shot proposition or salary or fees and so forth. But for the people in outstate Michigan who realize that they are going to lose their justice of the peace courts, I think that we need, in selling the document, something that we can put our finger on and actually show them that there is going to be another court to take its place.

Now, certainly, in this convention we all understand that if you didn't put this in that that will be done because the legislature certainly will do it. But I say to you that we do need a selling tool when we are out endeavoring to sell the work of this convention. We need it particularly in this area of lower courts in our rural sections. I don't care so much what you say in it. I hope you will clear the thing up so there is no one shot proposition, so that there are no fees involved. But I do hope that you will go along with this and leave that paragraph in there in some form so that when they say to us, "You have given the death sentence to our justice of the peace courts," that we can literally put our finger on it and show it to them, "Here it is." We need it, ladies and gentlemen, for a selling tool. And that is my appeal to you. Just give us this one selling tool, if you please.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, in reply to the plea by Delegate Farnsworth, I would make this plea. Let the sponsors of this amendment take upon themselves — and they have very able lawyers in that group, as well as very interested laymen — let them take upon themselves the burden of correcting and improving this language so that the more substantial objections which have been raised against it will be solved and let them then present it in the proper form. Do not send to style and drafting a proposal about which so many objections have been validly raised. And do not burden the committee on style and drafting with additional material of this nature. And bear in mind that once the matter comes from style and drafting, with all of the work that they have to do, it will take more votes to change it than it does to solve the problem here and now. It will take 73 votes to change it, if my understanding of the rule is correct, when it comes back from style and drafting.

I say let's have the burden upon those people who propose it. Let them do this particular work on this section.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Never in my life before have I been in an area where I had so much free legal talent available to me. Now, it would be hoped that the lawyers on this floor beginning right now would attempt to amend the paragraph — Senator Hutchinson, for instance, to overcome his objection, and Mr. Wanger to overcome his objection. I have seen no reluctance in the past to freely amend these things as they are up here on the wall. It would be hoped that the legal talent would begin to do that here and now without deleting the paragraph.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Pugsley, did you desire further recognition on your amendment?

MR. PUGSLEY: I am willing to let the matter stand as is. I believe the legislature can take this and give something to the people. I am impressed by what Mr. Farnsworth has said. I believe the people of the state of Michigan are going to be very much disappointed when they read the judicial article if they don't find at least a gravestone over the head of the justices of the peace.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: Mr. Farnsworth wants a sales campaign and this is the reason he wants us to rewrite language that's here. We already have language, "their jurisdiction and powers are transferred to, or invested in, other courts that shall be established in accordance with this constitution." They are not going to be left without anybody. It is clear. This other language confuses the issue and will do more harm than they want it to do good. He's got his sales campaign right there. It seems to me everybody gets too excited on section 1 and reads the first 2 sentences and they don't read all of section 1.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Dr. Nord, are you seeking recognition? Mr. Danhof. Excuse me. Mr. Lesinski.

MR. LESINSKI: I'd like to know if are we putting selling tools into this constitution or good language? I think that is the issue.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: To whom do you direct your inquiry, Mr. Lesinski?

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. Chairman, I'd be glad to answer it.

MR. LESINSKI: All the gentlemen and ladies of this convention.

MR. FARNSWORTH: I would simply remind you, Delegate Lesinski, that you are going to need some selling tools and it makes no difference what section of the state you're in, you are definitely going to need some selling ammunition when you go out on the line to sell this document and I, for one, am personally willing to sell it in my area regardless of what we come out with, but occasionally here I think we have to take into consideration that there is going to be a selling job to be done. And when you have a selling job to do, don't leave your tools at home. Take them right with you.

MR. LESINSKI: Yes, but don't put them into the constitution.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, at the time I sought recognition, I wanted to make the point that Mr. Farnsworth made. He has had much more experience in being a salesman that I have. I would simply concur and that that I wholeheartedly agree with him. I think that Mr. Hutchinson has brought up a valid point which according to Judge Pugsley is not the intent of the sponsors. I think that a provision such as this will give added emphasis and direction to what we have previously done. I concur with Mr. Higgs in his interpretations thereof. I think that we are straining on occasion to state that the courts would fly in the face of the direct prohibitions that have been written in here. I would hope that we could pass this amendment and move on to Committee Proposal 91.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Judge Pugsley and a number of other delegates to add a new section m. Does any delegate desire to have it read further? Mr. Howes.

MR. HOWES: Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this amendment. It has been said that the perspective of the onlooker is determined by his background. Our judicial committee says that they have studied these issues very carefully for 4½ months. They have not just studied many of these issues for 4½ months, but have worked with them all their adult lives. I believe the judicial committee, after careful study, have brought out to the convention the best article which it is humanly possible to achieve for the best interests of the people of Michigan from an attorney's point of view. We of other professions in this convention must agree that on most issues this article as brought out is best for the people of Michigan, but we must be extra watchful for sections where the viewpoint of the committee may clash with the viewpoints of the average citizen of Michigan.

I believe that this proposal, if approved as it is written without this amendment, will clash with the views of the average citizen with a sound which will be heard from the southern boundaries of our state to the end of the Keweenaw peninsula. The average citizen wants the justice of the peace or some similar office where not all are required to be attorneys. We agree they must have more restrictions and more supervision. Possibly the fee system should be abolished. But if the committee believes that every justice court in the state of Michigan should be operated only by qualified attorneys, then I think another poll should be taken, not of the bar association of Michigan, but of the average citizens of the state of Michigan.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary advises that he now has an amendment to the amendment, which the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Wanger offers the following amendment to the pending section:

1. Amend the amendment, after "effective,", by inserting "and subject to the limitations contained in Committee Proposal 90 and section a of Committee Proposal 96,"; so that the language will then read:

> Sec. m. Within 5 years from the date this constitution becomes effective, and subject to the limitations contained in Committee Proposal 90 and section a of Committee Proposal 96, the legislature shall establish statutory courts of limited jurisdiction . . .

and so forth.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment to the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, this amendment is offered for 2 reasons. One, because it appears that the sentiments of the delegation may be in favor of this amendment and secondly, because of Delegate Farnsworth's invitation to try to clear up a couple of these major problems which have been raised. If you vote yes on this amendment you will be expressing your views that definitely you think these courts should be established by a 2/3 vote of the legislature, as we have provided and as the intent of the proposers is, and solve that difficulty. You will also make it clear that no salary of these inferior courts is to be based on the amount of the judicial activity, which is also one of the problems which has been raised.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment to the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger. Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I'd like to thank Delegate Wanger for his contribution. Certainly for my own part, I would say that if the courts cannot muster a 2/3 majority of the legislature, that we shouldn't have them anywhere in Michigan and the fact that they should be paid by salaries with no relation to fees, I can accept 100 per cent. Thank you very much.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman I'd like to ask a question of Mr. Wanger, through the Chair.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer, Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Wanger, I assume that you anticipate that style and drafting would change that language?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I beg your pardon?

MR. STEVENS: I anticipate that you intend that the committee on style and drafting would change that language after the constitution is completed?

MR. WANGER: Yes, indeed. It is contemplated that the words "committee proposal" and the section of the committee proposal are merely for identification purposes for the committee on style and drafting.

MR. STEVENS: I assumed that's what you meant. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment to the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger. Those in favor of the amendment will say aye. Those opposed will say no. The Chair is in doubt. Those in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger to the amendment offered by Judge Pugsley and others to insert the words "and subject to the limitations contained in Committee Proposal 90 and section a of Committee Proposal 96" in the second line after the word "effective". Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment to the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger, the yeas are 59; the nays are 36.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is adopted. The question is now on the amendment offered by Judge Pugsley and others, as amended. Does any delegate desire to have it read again? Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I wish to oppose the amendment and urge the delegates to vote no.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Those in favor of the amendment, as amended, offered by Judge Pugsley and others will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is adopted.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: A division is requested. Is the demand supported? It is supported. Those in favor of the amendment, as amended, offered by Judge Pugsley and others will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Judge Pugsley and others, as amended, the yeas are 74; the nays are 31.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is adopted. Are there further amendments to the body of Committee Proposal 96?

SECRETARY CHASE: The pending amendment that is remaining is the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof, on behalf of the committee of judicial branch, to amend the body of the proposal following line 1 on page 4, by inserting a new section 1, which has been read and to which Mr. Ford has offered 2 amendments.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Under the action previously taken by the committee, consideration of that amendment and the amendment thereto has been deferred until the committee of the whole has completed its consideration of Committee Proposals 91 and 92 and therefore, pursuant to that action and the prior action of the committee of the whole, we will now return to Committee Proposal 91. Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Before returning to Committee Proposal 91 and before Committee Proposal 96 as a whole is adopted, I didn't hear you say —

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: It will not be passed, Mr. Higgs, until we have completed consideration of the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof, on behalf of the committee on judicial branch, and the amendments thereto offered by Mr. Ford.

MR. HIGGS: I presume then that it would be not in order to make any statement with regard to any other section of this?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: It would be in order at this time, Mr. Higgs, if you desire to do so.

MR. HIGGS: With regard to section e, there was previously a question asked and an answer given with regard to whether or not the incumbents' designations were to apply to justices or judges solely in courts of record. Now, I am not certain what the application of this was previously in the constitution, but at the time of the committee action it was my understanding that this applied to all justices and judges. In other words, I would like to object to the interpretation placed upon that section with regard to the question and answer between Delegates Hutchinson and Cudlip. I raise that at this point because if it is the intention to so restrict it, the action should be taken by the committee of the whole because I do not believe that that was the action of the judiciary committee.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If there is nothing further at this time with respect to Committee Proposal 96, the committee will return to consideration of Committee Proposal 91, A proposal pertaining to the supreme court. Every section of that proposal has previously been passed except sections a and g.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 91, see above, page 1354.

Are there amendments to section a?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Kuhn has filed with the secretary the following pending amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "The supreme court shall consist of 9 justices. They shall be elected for 8 year terms, and not more than 3 justices shall go out of office at the same time.

Justices shall be nominated and elected at nonpartisan elections, conducted as provided by law. The legislature may provide for nomination and election by districts. Incumbent justices may secure their nomination by filing an affidavit of intention to run as shall be provided by law.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment to section a of Committee Proposal 91 offered by Mr. Kuhn, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, to me this seems like a compromise on what the committee reported out. As we all are aware, the committee reported out that we have a district plan for the supreme court. Some people are not of the opinion that a district court is necessary and yet, I think most of us believe that we should have a nonpartisan supreme court. This would allow us to have a nonpartisan supreme court. It would also allow us that if it could not be worked on a statewide basis to the satisfaction of our legislature, that they would have the power spelled out to set up districts. In other words, this is very flexible. It seems every time we have a problem we leave it up to the legislature. As far as the last sentence goes, this has already been taken care of in another provision and there is no need to have it here. I would therefore suggest that that could be deleted where it says incumbent justices may secure their nomination by filing an affidavit of intention to run as shall be provided by law.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Kuhn, the Chair would remind you that no action has been taken upon the amendment dealing with that subject offered earlier this morning by Mr. Danhof.

MR. KUHN: I see. That is true. It was passed over for the time being. But I think we are all in agreement that the intention is, as Don Lawrence said, you are nominated now when you get your petitions filled out. I don't think anybody wants to bypass the primary election with this type of a provision.

Actually, if you look at the results of the state bar, I think you'll find that the lawyers preferred a nonpartisan election for our supreme court justices. They also preferred that they be nominated on a statewide basis, 2,852. Therefore, I think that it is quite evident that this would be their choice. I know there is an argument that it is too costly. I can only remind you that it would be too costly to run for governor and therefore we only have the governor for the rich. It's a question that must be decided. I personally am one that thinks that we should do away with politics in our supreme court. I ran on the proposition that it was a fraud to nominate them at a convention and run them as a nonpartisan. I don't think the people like it. I think they want this corrected. This way we could correct it.

There is also the provision that they could automatically renominate themselves in another section. I am in complete agreement with this. To me, this would clean up our supreme court. We would not have to worry, as some say, who the DAC was or solidarity house, to use the both extremes. Therefore, I offer this as a compromise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND; Mr. Chairman and delegates, there are many good things about Delegate Kuhn's proposed amendment with which I am in sympathy. However, there are 2 things that I question very strongly. The amendment says that the legislature may provide for nomination and election by districts. Now, we all know that for the second year the legislature has been attempting to create an additional congressional district and has been unable to come to an agreement. Now, if they can't agree on 1 congressional district, how is the legislature ever going to agree upon several judicial districts? The second thing that I am worried about is the cost of this statewide nonpartisan nomination and election. Estimates before our committee were that such a statewide run costs from $30,000 to $50,000. Here we have 2 statewide runs, one in the primary and one in the general election. Now, that is absolutely beyond the financial ability of the ordinary lawyer or judge. The only way that he can campaign twice on a statewide basis is to get the support of some pressure group, and that isn't the kind of judge or justice of the supreme court that we want. This situation of nonpartisan election is not comparable. Statewide nonpartisan election is not comparable with the cost of being elected governor because governors run on a party basis and have the financial backing and the manpower of the party behind him. Here are judges all alone and forlorn trying to put on 2 statewide campaigns in 1 year at a cost of $60,000 to $100,000. I feel that it is impractical. There are good things in Mr. Kuhn's proposed amendment but I feel for the reasons stated, I could not support it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Kuhn to section a of Committee Proposal 91. Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to ask Mr. Kuhn a question if he would care to respond. Remembering what Judge Leibrand said about the task of statewide nonpartisan campaigning, suppose that an amendment were offered to your amendment to strike out the words "at nonpartisan elections" and simply say that justices shall be nominated and elected as provided by law, leaving it then to the legislature and recognizing the absolute impracticality of a statewide nonpartisan nominating system, the legislature then in effect would have to decide whether our judges are going to be nominated and/or elected partisanly or whether they are going to set this state up into districts in order to insure a nonpartisan election. In that case, we would be leaving it to the legislature and recognizing that there would be these 2 alternatives. Because I think that we'll all agree that a nonpartisan statewide election is an impracticality, at least so far as nomination is concerned and I should like to have Mr. Kuhn's reaction to that suggestion. Would he support any such amendment or would he object to it?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: As I understand it, Mr. Hutchinson, you would merely leave it to the legislature to decide the method of whether it should be a partisan election — on a statewide basis we are discussing now?

MR. HUTCHINSON: That is right, Mr. Kuhn. It would be left to the legislature whether it would be partisan or nonpartisan; recognizing, however, that from a practical standpoint that if it is going to be nonpartisan, the state would have to be divided into districts and that if they're not willing to divide it into districts, that there would have to be the continuation either of nomination at party conventions, as we have it now, and a nonpartisan election, as we have it now, or to go to a straight partisan system.

MR. KUHN: I wouldn't mind leaving it to the legislature if we took the one alternative out that you lastly stated, I believe: let them be nominated on a partisan basis and then run on a nonpartisan. I think this is the greatest evil. I will concede that I would allow them to make it straight partisan because then I think we're being honest with the people. I wouldn't fight that. And then if the legislature decided to make it nonpartisan, they could set up the districts. I'd be willing to go that far. I think those are 2 good alternatives but I would not want to get into the situation we are in today, on which we are being so justly criticized, as I see it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would invite Mr. Kuhn's attention and the attention of the committee that as the present constitution now stands, the method of nomination of justices of the supreme court is now vested in the hands of the legislature and the legislature has been wrestling with this problem ever since it was handed to it for the very practical reason that a nonpartisan primary campaign statewide for the office is impractical. I don't know whether the idea, up until this convention met, ever was presented to the legislature about establishing the state in districts for the purpose of nomination, but I suppose that you can say that that wouldn't be very practical or if you're going to divide it into districts for nomination, it will have to be divided into districts for election as well.

I suggest that the fact that the legislature has not altered the system which we have so far as nomination is concerned — their problem is the same problem that has plagued this convention for the last 2 weeks. I think that a solution to the matter — we've demonstrated we haven't been able to solve it and obviously it's one that is going to take a lot of time. I think the only thing to do is to leave it to the legislature. I think your amendment would be in excellent shape, sir, if we struck out that reference here to nonpartisan elections. This would not prohibit nonpartisan elections, would not prohibit nonpartisan nominations, would not prohibit nonpartisan statewide nominations except that we know that those things are impractical.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Hutchinson, may I ask you one question? Would you agree with me that it's possible we could put a further limitation in to protect the people, and as you know and so many times have told this convention that we can only put limitations in for the legislature, that they could not provide a system where we have a partisan nomination and then run nonpartisan? In other words, it should be consistent, the method of nomination and the running for the election as far as their party goes. I'd be willing to go along with something like that.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, as I understand, that would leave the legislature 2 alternatives — either district the state for nonpartisan purposes or provide for the partisan nomination and election of justices for all practical purposes.

MR. KUHN: I think that would be true and I don't see anything wrong with it. I think it would be a good solution.

MR. HUTCHINSON: I have no amendment prepared at the moment one way or the other. I just wanted to ask Mr. Kuhn to find out what reaction I'd get if I offered an amendment like I suggested in the first place.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will ask that the committee be in a little better order. Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Replying for a moment to Senator Hutchinson, the reason why I don't think it should be left to the legislature is the people don't want it left to the legislature. In 1939, by a vote of 376,000 to 241,000, they voted to take the power, so far as the election process was concerned, away from the legislature, and I don't think they've changed their minds since 1939.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Kuhn to section a of Committee Proposal 91. Does any delegate desire to have the amendment read again? The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment is:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Those who are in favor of the amendment will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read the next amendment.

Mr. Higgs requests a division. Is the demand supported? It is not supported. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, I move the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof moves the committee do now rise. Those in favor of Mr. Danhof's motion will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The committee will rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration several matters, of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 96, A proposal pertaining to general and special provisions relative to the courts of the state; has adopted one amendment to this proposal, has placed this proposal at the foot of the calendar of proposals from the committee on judicial branch and has taken up consideration of Committee Proposal 91, A proposal pertaining to the supreme court; has considered an amendment thereto, and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Any announcements?

SECRETARY CHASE: Will the delegates please take note of this for your spouses. It is requested that you please inform your wives again of coming to the luncheon on next Tuesday at 12:15. There have been 55 reservations so far. Mrs. Tubbs would like to have other reservations as quickly as possible. You may make these reservations with her or with the president's secretary.

We have the following requests for leave: Mr. Baginski, Mr. Dehnke, Mr. Stopczynski, from the afternoon's session; Mr. Romney wishes to be excused from this afternoon's session to fill a speaking commitment to the Detroit adcraft club on the convention; Mr. Upton wishes to be excused from the Monday's session and the first part of next Tuesday's session, for a speaking engagement regarding the convention; and Mr. Heideman wishes to be excused from the sessions of next Monday and Tuesday.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they are excused. Anything else?

SECRETARY CHASE: Those are all the items on the desk at the moment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, apparently the message didn't get in yet. I also make a request to be absent from Monday's session and the morning session on Tuesday in order to fulfill a speaking engagement.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, it is granted. Mr. Pugsley.

MR. PUGSLEY: Mr. President, I move that we recess until 2:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Pugsley. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. We are recessed until 2:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 11:40 o'clock a.m., the convention recessed; and at 2:00 o'clock p.m., reconvened.]

The convention will come to order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, recognizing that the secretary might have some announcements to make, I would like to state that immediately after the noon recess, at the rostrum at a meeting between Mr. Downs, President Nisbet and myself—let me start a little bit beyond that. Just before we recessed this noon, Mr. Downs came over and mentioned the condition of the roads and the weather forecasts and the fact that this was Friday and that everybody was getting weary and that the matter of how the supreme court was to be selected is the matter before us and it very obviously would not be concluded this afternoon anyway, and suggested the advisability of adjourning rather than recessing for an afternoon session. In the meantime the convention did recess. So as I say, we went up to the president's desk and as a result of the conference we agreed that recognizing all of these things, that as soon as the convention met at 2:00 o'clock we would adjourn.

Based upon that the word went out, at least among some delegates, that we were going to adjourn and I suppose some of them left, expecting that no action would be taken this afternoon. I therefore would move that the convention adjourn. I would recognize the right of the secretary to make some announcements before the motion is put.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase.

SECRETARY CHASE: I have the following requests for leave: Mr. Haskill wishes to be excused from Monday night's session to attend a business club in Lapeer; Mr. Wilkowski wishes to be excused from Monday's session; Mr. Suzore wishes to be excused from the session of Monday; Mr. Seyferth requests absence from Monday afternoon's session; Mr. White wishes to be excused from Monday afternoon's session to be absent on convention business; Mrs. Cushman requests to be excused from this afternoon's session to attend a funeral of a member of the family; Mr. Yeager wishes to be temporarily excused from Tuesday morning's session; Mr. Youngblood wishes to be excused from the sessions of Monday and Tuesday of next week; and Mr. Kelsey and Mr. Liberato wish to be excused from Monday's and Tuesday's session.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they are excused. The question now is on the motion of Mr. Hutchinson. Mr. Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. President, may I demand a division on this motion?

PRESIDENT NISBET: A demand for a division has been ordered. Sufficient number up. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. President, I have a preferential motion. I move that the convention stand adjourned until 6:00 p.m. on Monday evening.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Ford that when the convention adjourns, it stand adjourned until Monday at 6:00 o'clock. Those in favor of that motion will say aye. Those opposed, no. The Chair is in doubt. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion to fix the time to which to adjourn, the yeas are 33; the nays are 60.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The motion does not prevail. The question is now on the motion to adjourn. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote. Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I'm just standing here. (laughter)

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion to adjourn, the yeas are 47; the nays are 49.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The motion does not prevail. Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: There are many people who have left because of road conditions and other reasons in anticipation of adjournment. I move a reconsideration of this vote and I demand the yeas and nays.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Wanger for reconsideration of the vote for adjournment. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed, nay.

The motion does not prevail.

MR. WANGER: Mr. President, I demanded the yeas and nays and it seems to me that that's the question.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the demand for the yeas and nays. Sufficient number up. Those in favor of reconsideration will vote aye. Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Are we now voting by roll call vote on the question of reconsidering the previous motion?

PRESIDENT NISBET: We are voting by roll call vote on reconsidering the vote on the motion for adjournment.

MR. WANGER: Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the reconsideration of the vote. Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, in order to make this clear, we are now voting on the reconsideration of the vote on adjournment, Mr. Wanger's motion. Those in favor of reconsideration of the vote will vote aye. Those opposed to reconsideration will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The motion prevails. We are adjourned until—Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President, I would like, for the record, to change my vote from aye to nay and explain the reason.

MR. A.G. ELLIOTT: Mr. President—

MR. MARSHALL: I still have a right to explain my reason, Delegate Elliott. This morning there were very few people in the hall and there was considerable discussion among the delegates that because of the condition of the roads and the long distances that some had to travel, that they would adjourn early in order to permit these people an early start home. However, I note this afternoon that we do have a large group of people present in the constitution hall that were not here this morning. Therefore, I would change my vote from aye to nay and I'm willing to stay in session. (applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: We are adjourned until 4:00 o'clock Monday afternoon.

[Whereupon, at 2:15 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 4:00 o'clock p.m. Monday, March 12, 1962.]

NINETY-SEVENTH DAY

Monday, March 12, 1962, 4:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation today will be given by one of our own delegates, Mrs. Conklin. Will you please rise.

MRS. CONKLIN: Our heavenly Father, we turn to Thee this day with thanks for the blessings of health and strength and understanding. We thank Thee for our fellowship with one another during these past months and we ask Thy continued blessings upon us. Fill us with the confidence we need to do our work. Inspire our efforts, bless us all with a sure vision of our purpose, and guide us that we may understand Thy will and fulfill Thy purpose. May the words of our mouths and the meditations of our hearts always be acceptable in Thy sight, O Lord, our strength and our redeemer. Through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present, please vote aye. If you are present, please vote aye. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will record your presence.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: No special orders.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering matters on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen. All in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Van Dusen.

[Whereupon, Mr. Van Dusen assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The committee will come to order. When the committee of the whole last sat considering the judicial article, we had before us Committee Proposal 91, A proposal pertaining to the supreme court. We had considered one amendment to section a of Committee Proposal 91. There are other amendments pending. The secretary will read the first proposed amendment to section a of Committee Proposal 91.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 91, see above, page 1564.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. William Hanna offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "The supreme court shall consist of 9 justices to be elected for 10 year terms on a nonpartisan statewide ballot. Commencing at the first regular statewide election following the adoption of this constitution each political party at party convention may nominate 1 candidate for each position to be filled. An incumbent judge whose term is to expire may become a candidate by filing an affidavit of candidacy with the secretary of state not less than 180 days prior to the expiration of his term. Any person qualified to be a supreme court justice may also become a candidate upon the filing with the secretary of state a nominating petition signed by qualified electors in number equal to 3 per cent of the total vote cast for the office of governor at the last previous election. Vacancies shall be temporarily filled until the next statewide election by appointment of the governor until a successor is elected and qualified for the balance of the unexpired term but no such appointee shall be eligible to be a candidate for election to any office for 4 years after the temporary appointment.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment to section a of Committee Proposal 91 offered by Mr. Hanna, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, in view of our action last week I request that commencing with the word "Vacancies" in the amendment, "Vacancies shall be temporarily filled" be striken as we have covered that in the other proposal concerning vacancies, and it should not now be a part of this. So I should like to request at this time we strike that part.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: In accordance with your request, Mr. Hanna, that portion of the amendment will be withdrawn. The question is on the amendment as revised offered by Mr. Hanna. Do you wish to be recognized with respect to your amendment, Mr. Hanna?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, just a brief explanation. This would provide that incumbent judges whose terms were to expire can file an affidavit of candidacy and not be required to go back to their political parties. However, if a political party wishes to nominate an opponent, they could. They do not have to. Thirdly, if a person felt that someone who was nonpolitical, so to speak, or not able to secure the nomination of a political party, wanted to run, they could file petitions and become a candidate. This would seem to come as close to a nonpartisan election as we could get.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Hanna. Those who are in favor of the amendment, as revised, will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment, as revised, is not adopted. Are there further amendments to section a?

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: A division is requested on the amendment offered by Mr. Hanna. Is the request supported? It is supported. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: In deference to the fact that we are still trying to get organized with all this new material on the desk, I hope you can slow down a little bit because some of us who wanted to support the Hanna amendment were caught asleep at the switch.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair is afraid that your slumbers lasted too long. Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, could the amendment be read again?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will ask the secretary to read the amendment again. Mr. Garvin.

MR. GARVIN: Mr. Chairman, do we have a copy of that amendment in all of our pile of things here?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Yes. The amendment is on the desk of every delegate as a part of a 3 sheet item captioned, Amendments Pending to Committee Proposal 91, 3-9-62. It is the second of those amendments. The secretary will read the amendment.

MR. GARVIN: We are kind of rushed here.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. William Hanna has offered the following amendment as revised:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "The supreme court shall consist of 9 justices to be elected for 10 year terms on a nonpartisan statewide ballot. Commencing at the first regular statewide election following the adoption of this constitution each political party at party convention may nominate 1 candidate for each position to be filled. An incumbent judge whose term is to expire may become a candidate by filing an affidavit of candidacy with the secretary of state not less than 180 days prior to the expiration of his term. Any person qualified to be a supreme court justice may also become a candidate upon the filing with the secretary of state a nominating petition signed by qualified electors in number equal to 3 per cent of the total vote cast for the office of governor at the last previous election.".

Mr. Hanna has withdrawn the balance of that amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: For what purpose does the gentleman rise, Mr. Lawrence?

MR. LAWRENCE: I think I would like to request that this amendment, as now revised, be divided into 2 questions. The first sentence being one, and the remainder of the amendment being the second part.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Your request is in order, Mr. Lawrence. The question will be divided. Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Are you putting up for a vote now the second half that was striken by the proponent?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: No. Mr. Lawrence requested that the remaining portion of the amendment, after its revision, be divided into the first sentence, which reads "The supreme court shall consist of 9 justices to be elected for 10 year terms on a nonpartisan statewide ballot" be put first, and that the balance be put second. Is that correct, Mr. Lawrence?

MR. LAWRENCE: Yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the first sentence of the Hanna amendment. Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, may I ask Mr. Hanna a question?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Only with unanimous consent, Mr. Iverson.

MR. BENTLEY: I object, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: There is objection. The question is on the first sentence of the Hanna amendment, which the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: The first sentence is:

[The first sentence of the amendment was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 1569.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: For what purpose does the gentleman rise, Mr. Ford?

MR. FORD: It seems that we are now talking about something we spent several hours with the other day and had to leave because we couldn't come to a solution.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford, debate is not in order at this time.

MR. FORD: I am not going to debate. I am going to make a motion that we reconsider this so that we can discuss this matter before we dispose of it summarily. This is the keynote of the whole judicial article.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Is there objection to reconsidering the vote with respect to the Hanna amendment?

MR. BENTLEY: I object because there has been no vote yet.

MR. FORD: There has been a vote and a ruling by the Chair.

MR. BENTLEY: Division has been asked for.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Division has been asked for and ordered. The secretary advises that the motion is in order. The question is on the motion of Mr. Ford. The Chair suspects no motion is actually necessary, Mr. Ford. If there is no objection—

MR. BENTLEY: I object.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bentley objects to debate. The motion, however, is in order. Those in favor of reconsidering the vote by which the Hanna amendment as revised was not adopted will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion to reconsider prevails. The question now is on the Hanna amendment as revised. Debate is in order. Mr. Ford, do you desire to be recognized?

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I am still trying to find my copy of the Hanna amendment. If somebody else has a question, I would like to defer to them.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Iverson, I believe that you had a question.

MR. IVERSON: You mean I am safe to ask a question now, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: It is in order now, Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Hanna, may I ask you: in qualifying "by a candidate with petitions," would you foresee any possible difficulty with respect to holding a primary, or what was your plan on that?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Iverson, having circulated petitions on a nonpartisan ballot, I conceive of this to be a very difficult job, and especially when statewide. Three per cent of the vote cast for governor is quite a sizable number of signatures for a self starter. I did not conceive that it would be necessary to have a primary, though it is conceivable that you could have the incumbent, 1 judge from each political party, and 1 or 2 filing by petition and have 5 men running for 1 vacancy.

MR. IVERSON: Well, then, you did not provide for the partisan conventions if they so desire to nominate a candidate in each such instance?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Yes. They may. I did not require them to. Each political party at party convention may nominate 1 candidate for each position to be filled.

MR. IVERSON: Oh, yes.

MR. W. F. HANNA: I would assume that that is where the nominees would come from.

MR. IVERSON: Then, Mr. Chairman and Mr. Hanna, as far as the man who desires to run, if he obtains 3 per cent of the total vote cast for governor, or if there were 3 or 4 who were able to obtain that many signatures, they would all be listed on the primary election ballot?

MR. W. F. HANNA: No.

MR. IVERSON: Not the primary, but the general election?

MR. W. F. HANNA: General election ballot.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Could I ask Mr. Hanna a question?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Hanna, I notice the figure 9. Nine is just 1 more than at present. I can understand the reason for making it an odd number, but why wasn't it 7 instead of 9?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Practical politics, Mr. Pollock. I did not want to deprive any of the incumbent justices of the privilege of running, other than so that they wouldn't have to run against other incumbents.

MR. POLLOCK: Actually the needs of the situation do not require an extra justice?

MR. W. F. HANNA: No, sir. This was political expediency.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: May I inquire of Mr. Hanna?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. LEIBRAND: As I understand it, Mr. Chairman, the question has now been divided so that we would first be considering only the first sentence, is that correct?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: That is correct, Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Then, as I read the sentence, Mr. Hanna, that would continue in effect just what we have now, except that the number of justices would be increased from 8 to 9 and the terms would be increased from 8 years to 10 years. Am I wrong in this viewpoint of the first sentence of your amendment?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Leibrand, you are correct.

MR. LEIBRAND: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, just one question to Mr. Hanna. This amendment doesn't contain anything with respect to an incumbency designation. Are you leaving that out because it is being dealt with somewhere else, or what is the situation?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, I believe this was dealt with elsewhere. We have already said that any incumbent judge was entitled to the incumbency designation. This was under, as I understand it, the general provisions of Committee Proposal 96; applied to all judges and justices.

MR. MARTIN: Would this apply to a justice who had been appointed as distinguished from a justice who had been elected?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, I am assuming that no judges will be appointed as we have now proceeded, but that we are now proceeding along the line whereby vacancies which exist will be temporarily filled by the supreme court, and the vacancy permanently filled not by appointment but by election.

MR. MARTIN: So that in an election where a vacancy was being filled, there would be no one running with an incumbency designation, am I right?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Unless one of the current members of the supreme court saw fit to resign and run for a new term, and I suppose he would be entitled to an incumbency designation.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Downs, were you seeking recognition?

MR. DOWNS: No.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me, in reading over this first sentence, the answer Mr. Hanna gave to Judge Leibrand was not correct, because as I read the last part of the sentence it does include the right of an incumbent to qualify by filing an affidavit. Is that right?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Iverson, Judge Leibrand's question was directed only to the first sentence.

MR. IVERSON: That is right, and that is included in the first sentence, is it not?

MR. W. F. HANNA: The first sentence stops after "statewide ballot."

MR. IVERSON: That's in 2 parts.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the first sentence of the amendment offered by Mr. William Hanna. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, we had some opportunity to look at this the other day. Although this is somewhat of a departure from the language advocated by the minority of the committee in its minority report to the committee's proposed amendment to Committee Proposal 96, there is nothing new here in this language that is too startling except the 10 year term. No one has talked about a 10 year term before now. The committee has recommended the 9 judges. Mr. Hanna was not a member of the committee when the recommendation was made, or when we discussed the reasons for it. There were reasons other than political expediency. I think the chairman of the committee gave several of them when we started to discuss section a on the day that we finally passed over it.

Although this is a departure from the present procedure, in that it permits an incumbent judge to renominate himself without reference or recommendation of any of the political parties in the state, it certainly seems preferable to any of the other proposals that have been made on the floor and elsewhere here, and I would urge support of this amendment, making it very clear that from where I stand I consider this a retreat in the form of compromise in an attempt to get something that will serve the state of Michigan, and it may not make all of the members of either of the 2 parties represented here happy, but at least we are now openly—and I am speaking for the members of the minority on the committee—making an attempt to compromise on this very important part of the judicial article, in an attempt to resolve a very knotty problem. I think that we should look at it very carefully and give it consideration with that thought in mind.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, before I would be in a position to support this amendment, I have very serious concern about increasing the number of justices to 9 because we have listened in the committee at the work load of the court now, and I am of the opinion that if we get an appellate court, I doubt very seriously if we would need the 9 justices, and I don't know what we are going to increase the number for.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the first sentence of the amendment offered by Mr. William Hanna, which the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: The first sentence is:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "The supreme court shall consist of 9 justices to be elected for 10 year terms on a nonpartisan statewide ballot.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Division has been ordered. Those who are in favor—Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask a question, if I may, of Mr. Danhof, chairman of the judicial committee.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer, Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: I gather that serious attention was accorded the matter of the number of justices on the supreme court by your committee, and that relevant data regarding the work load was of appreciable moment to the committee. Could you help us with regard to what the thinking was of your committee and of the justices regarding the work load in the event that there would be an intermediate appellate court?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Norris, let me start with this particular statement: we first agreed that we should go to an odd number. We felt that with the court of appeals, the supreme court should consist of an odd number of justices so that we wouldn't have 4 to 4 decisions, which seem to be undesirable, at least to a lot of people. Then you reach the problem of whether it should be 7 or 9. The reason that we reached 9 in the original committee proposal was because of the district system which, from a geographical and from a district setup, was ideally suited. That is, it should become 9, considering Wayne county, and if you are going to elect by districts it should be 9. As Mr. Barthwell pointed out, we had considerable discussion concerning whether we should go back to 7 or leave it at 8, or go to 9. Because of the fact that we reached the district system, we put in 9.

From a work load, it is somewhat difficult to ascertain. The present work load of the court would seem to indicate that 8 is sufficient, and they could probably do it with 7, assuming a court of appeals; that is, they could handle the work. I don't have any doubt about that. I think we get back to what Mr. Hanna points out—political expediency, acceptance by the public, and so forth. My own personal views are that I would rather increase to 9. It seems this is what we have in the U. S. supreme court. I think the people somewhat expect it, and I think that 9 would be a preferable compromise rather than 7. From the work load standpoint, the work load is not such, I do not think, that it could not be handled by 7, but we would hope that they would continue to improve the consideration that they give to cases, and my own personal recommendation would be 9.

I submit, Mr. Norris, there is nothing magical about the number. You can go either way, and I think you will get a good court, a court that can handle the business. I think the best consideration is the idea of the political expediency and the fact that the terms are so set so they will be running at regular intervals. Now, of course, with the 9 from the districts it worked out fine. Mr. Hanna's plan is 9 on a 10 year term. How would this work out? You are going to elect some every 2 years. You would have 2 every 2 years and 3 on the one election. If you have 7, then you probably would have to reduce the term to less than 10 years.

Mr. Ford just handed me the results of the bar poll, and the question was, "How many members should the supreme court have?" For 8, 3,147; 9, 4,286; and 321 for any other number, which we will mark as 7. So it appears that the majority of the attorneys, at least, is thinking of a court of 9. I think perhaps it is just history that they think 9 more than anything else, and 5 to 4 decisions they are used to, and things like that. That is about the explanation that I can give you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: In connection with that first sentence, it seems to me we ought to give a little more consideration to the increasing of the number of justices before definitely deciding. For that reason, it seems to me we should vote against the first sentence. After all, the United States supreme court—handling the work of 50 states, and I don't know how many circuit court of appeals—has 9 men. It hardly seems to me that if we provide a court of appeals for our own state, from which appeals can only be taken by leave to appeal, that it would be necessary to saddle the people with 2 extra judges; in other words, from 7 to 9, if 7 could do the work.

The problem of how to reduce the number from 8 to 7, I will be very frank with you, I think presents something for consideration, and that is why I am wondering if it might be possible to vote against this at this time and see if something couldn't be worked whereby maybe the present number could continue until such time as there was a retirement or a person who would not be running again, or an incumbent judge who did not run again, and in that way reduce the number without hurting present justices. For that reason, it seems to me that a little more time should be given before adopting this.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWN: I have a point of parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman. Could we divide the sentence by leaving out the figure 9 or the figure 7 so it would read, "The supreme court shall consist of justices to be elected for a 10 year term," and so forth? If that could be done, I would like to request a division of the sentence and then speak on it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair takes it, Mr. Downs, that the purport of your request is that we will vote first on the question of the supreme court consisting of justices to be elected to a 10 year term on a nonpartisan statewide ballot, and then on the question of the number of justices.

MR. DOWNS: That is correct.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is so divisible, Mr. Downs, and if you request it it will be so divided.

MR. DOWNS: I request a division accordingly, Mr. Chairman. I would like to speak briefly on it. The reason for that is I do believe that we are coming to considerable agreement on this very important judicial section, and I think Delegate Ford indicated that perhaps it is not the first choice of any delegate, but perhaps it is one that is the second choice of an overwhelming number of delegates, and I would not like to see the first sentence fall because of the difference over the number of justices. I think there is considerable merit in this. As it now stands it provides we should have an elected supreme court for a 10 year term, a nonpartisan ballot and a statewide election, and I would hope that people can support this who might differ on the number of justices, and then we could handle that question separately. I therefore urge support of the amendment as it has been divided.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is upon the portion of Mr. Hanna's amendment which reads as follows:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "The supreme court shall consist of justices to be elected for 10 year terms on a nonpartisan statewide ballot.".

Mr. Danhof, do you desire to be recognized on that question?

MR. DANHOF: Well, we are referring to the number. I think that would be in order.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The number is not before us at the moment, unless you want to discuss it generally. The question as put will not include the number.

MR. DANHOF: Whether it be 9 or 7, when we get to that I can further get some information to Mr. Norris.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: We will get to that later, Mr. Danhof. The question now is upon the Hanna amendment which reads, "The supreme court shall consist of justices to be elected for 10 year terms on a nonpartisan statewide ballot." Division has been ordered. Those who are in favor of that portion of the Hanna amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the first sentence of the Hanna amendment without the number of justices, the yeas are 56; the nays are 52.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: That part of the amendment is adopted. The question is now upon the second portion of the first sentence of Mr. Hanna's amendment, inserting the figure "9" before "justices". Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I support Mr. Hanna's amendment to have 9 justices of the supreme court, and I am at a loss to understand this committee quibbling about the services of 2 people. The state of Michigan spends $5 million a day. We have 1 commission, the civil service commission, which has as its constitutional budget 1 per cent of the entire state payroll. We have provided for 80 people to set policy for 10 universities, when those universities are equipped with presidents, deans, assistants to the presidents, and an unlimited number of policy making people, including the highest paid state official in the state of Michigan. Under those circumstances, to quibble about the services of 2 justices is just not understandable to me.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will ask the committee to be in a little better order, please. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, in further answer, perhaps, on this number, and to answer Mr. Norris' inquiry: Mr. Norris, from 1930 to 1957 the average case load per opinion per justice was 45.3. Now, as you have noted before, this was extremely high during the depression years, '31, '32, '33. It went down to a low of about 32.2 in 1946. In 1960, from the information we obtained from Justice Souris, the opinion load per judge was 32.8. In 1959 it was 30.1, and in 1958 it was 35.9. In 1957, by the way, it was 29.6. So it reached a low in the middle '50s, and now has been seemingly climbing back to a more substantial number. Now, if you reduce this to 7, and assuming a relatively same case load, although it could be lightened considerably by reason of the fact that we have a court of appeals, you can find the per opinion.

For the information of the committee I have here the number of members of the supreme courts over all of the states in the union. There are 5 states that have 9 members on the supreme court, to my best account. There are 23 states that have 7 members on the supreme court. Then the remainder of the states go down from 7 through 5 to 3, with the more sparsely populated states having but 3 justices; Alaska being the last to set up a court having 3 justices. Iowa set up a 5 man supreme court. The largest number of states do have 7 members in their particular supreme courts. For those of you who are interested in surrounding states, Illinois has 7, Indiana has 5, New York has 7, Pennsylvania has 7, Ohio has 7. The states with 9, for your information, are Washington, Texas, Oklahoma, Iowa, and there is one more. This is for the information of the committee as you vote upon the numbers. My own personal opinion is, I would support Mr. Ostrow.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I urge you to very seriously consider this matter and cast your vote in favor of the number 7 rather than in favor of the number 9. I think that other things being equal we can all see that a court of 7 can operate more efficiently and more rapidly on matters than can a court of 9. With respect to the question of expediency, I would think it would be quite expedient for the convention to demonstrate that it is possible to reduce the number of office holders in a particular branch of government when the logical arguments would indicate that would be desirable. Therefore, I urge you to vote against the number 9 so that the number 7 may be adopted.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I would subscribe to the idea that there ought to be 9 justices in accordance with the original Hanna amendment for 2 reasons. First, I think we can anticipate, as a result of the provision which we have thus far adopted regarding administrative tribunals, a very sizable number of appeals which would go all the way to the Michigan supreme court. I think the kind of tests which have thus far been looked upon with favor, namely, that the tribunal ought to evaluate evidence on the basis of reliability, probativeness and substantiality will mean that the courts will be the basis for a considerable volume of increased business. I think if that is the intent of the convention, then we ought to provide for that contingency. The second reason that I subscribe to the number 9, because of an increased volume of business, is because it can reasonably be anticipated that a sizable number of criminal appeals which will go to the intermediate appellate court might also by leave be entertained by the supreme court, and if we are interested in seeing that this process be accorded all the way up, it seems to me we ought to be thinking in terms of providing the judicial means for this anticipation. I think that these 2 reasons can be amplified, Mr. Chairman, by other types of things which we are doing in this convention which will increase the work load of the courts and increase the work load of the appellate court. I would therefore urge the support of 9 as the number of Michigan supreme court justices.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Point of information, Mr. Chairman. I understand there was no amendment offered to insert the number 7. I understand some people are talking about voting for 7. Is there an amendment for that?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question before the committee is inserting the figure "9" before the word "justices" in the first line of Mr. Hanna's amendment.

MR. FAXON: And there is no amendment?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: There is no amendment for the number 7 currently before the committee, Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman. If the number 9 is to be used, is this an amendment? As I understand, the committee proposal presently reads 9.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Hanna amendment, Mr. Brown, is a complete substitute for section a.

MR. G. E. BROWN: However, the first sentence, Mr. Chairman, is the first sentence of the committee proposal in section a.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Brown, the Hanna amendment is, as the Chair stated, a complete substitute for section a of Committee Proposal 91 as it has been divided. The committee has now adopted a sentence reading as follows, "The supreme court shall consist of justices to be elected for 10 year terms on a nonpartisan statewide ballot." The question now is inserting the figure "9" before the word "justices".

MR. G. E. BROWN: I accept the ruling of the Chair.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Division has been ordered. Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: To clear up any question on it, the proposed amendment to Committee Proposal 91 filed by Mrs. Judd, Mr. Tubbs and myself, which was, in effect, the ABA plan, and the part on section g was voted down, contained at the top a substitute for section a, which has in it that there shall be 7 justices. So there is an amendment in to that effect. That was not voted on.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the portion of the Hanna amendment which inserts the figure "9" before the word "justices" in the first line. Division has been ordered. Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I just think it is interesting to note that at the time the federal constitution was adopted back in 1789, and they approved the number 9, the population at that time was less than 2 million people. I support 9. I should think there is reasonable division behind that number.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Those in favor of the Hanna amendment to insert the figure "9" before the word "justices" in the first line of section a will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the number of justices at 9, the yeas are 84; the nays are 27.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is adopted. The question now is upon the balance of the Hanna amendment as revised, which the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: "Commencing at the first regular statewide election following the adoption of this constitution each political party at party convention may nominate 1 candidate for each position to be filled. An incumbent judge whose term is to expire may become a candidate by filing an affidavit of candidacy with the secretary of state not less than 180 days prior to the expiration of his term. Any person qualified to be a supreme court justice may also become a candidate upon the filing with the secretary of state a nominating petition signed by qualified electors in number equal to 3 per cent of the total vote cast for the office of governor at the last previous election.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Those who are in favor of that portion of the Hanna amendment as so read will vote aye. Those who are opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment, the yeas are 52; the nays are 59.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to section a of Committee Proposal 91? Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Point of inquiry, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: State your point, Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Now that we have voted on this whole section, is it in order to offer as an amendment any one sentence of that?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You mean any one sentence of the Hanna amendment?

MR. DOWNS: For example, would it be in order to offer the second sentence, "Commencing at the first regular statewide election?" Could that be offered as an amendment now that we have voted on the 3 sentences?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: In the opinion of the Chair, Mr. Downs, that would be in order.

MR. DOWNS: Well, I will —

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: There may be other pending amendments, however.

MR. DOWNS: Oh, I am sorry. If there are others — I don't have it written. I just want to know if that would be in order. Are there other pending amendments, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Secretary, have you further amendments to section a? Mr. Lundgren.

MR. LUNDGREN: Point of order, Mr. Chairman. It seems the other day when we had some amendments here, and they were both ruled by yourself that they were the same thing to each other, and when one was defeated the other one could not be brought on the floor. I presume this follows the same course?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The situation is a little bit different here, Mr. Lundgren, in that had one of these sentences been offered alone and defeated, in the opinion of the Chair it would not then have been in order unless so completely combined with the other provisions as to make a new thought. Where, however, several ideas are presented at once and defeated as a package, one of those ideas which stands alone independently, and would have a different meaning if divided, would, in the opinion of the Chair, be in order.

MR. LUNDGREN: Is that the "judge's" ruling?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: That is the "judge's" ruling subject to the appeal which is always available, Mr. Lundgren. Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman. Have we not carried the first sentence of the Hanna amendment but none of the rest of it?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Section a now reads, "The supreme court shall consist of 9 justices to be elected for 10 year terms on a nonpartisan statewide ballot." Are there further amendments to section a? There are no further amendments to section a, Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: May I offer the amendment from the floor? What we have before us—it would be the first sentence of what we just voted on, "Commencing at the first regular statewide election following the adoption of this constitution each political party at party convention may nominate 1 candidate for each position to be filled."

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Downs offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "statewide ballot.", by inserting the second sentence of Mr. Hanna's amendment which reads as follows, "Commencing at the first regular statewide election following the adoption of this constitution each political party at party convention may nominate 1 candidate for each position to be filled.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman, point of order. The question was not divided. It is identical language. I question the amendment is in order.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The identical point was just made by Mr. Lundgren, Mr. Hoxie, and it was the opinion of the Chair that because the language might have a different meaning if combined with the remaining sentences than it has standing alone, it is in order as a separate amendment at this time.

Those who are in favor of the amendment offered by Mr. Downs will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to section a? If not, the secretary will —

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Ford offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "ballot.", by inserting "Nominations for justices of the supreme court shall be made as now or hereafter provided by law.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Ford, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: You can find this language in the present Constitution of 1908 on page 23 of the little volume. If you want to find it quickly, it is section 23 of article VII, and it is found in about the middle of the section.

This came about as a result of the fact that in 1939, and again in 1947, and again in 1955, the people of this state adopted a series of amendments to the constitution establishing nonpartisan elections, and it was apparently determined at that time, or at those times, that the method of nomination of the supreme court could not be frozen into the constitution, become a rigid system. Now, the language that is proposed in this amendment would permit a district plan of nomination. It would permit a nomination by partisan primary or by party convention, as is now conducted, or it would permit a statewide nomination. It would permit, in other words, a nomination in any way that the legislature might see fit to establish in the future and, of course, as I indicated the other day, we felt that this might be preferable to trying here to arrive at a specific method of nominations, because if a method is arrived at by the legislature and found to be unsatisfactory, they can change it and do something else. But at least this is a step toward the direction of allowing the legislature latitude to work out the best possible system that might be used in the state of Michigan from time to time without saddling the state with a specific system which can only be changed by constitutional amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: On the Ford amendment, the Chair recognizes Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, could I offer an amendment to Mr. Ford's amendment from the floor?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Without objection, Mr. King, and in any event the Chair would request that you submit it in writing at the earliest opportunity.

MR. KING: What I have in mind is: in line 3 of Mr. Hanna's amendment I would follow the wording of Mr. Ford's amendment by putting in the words "however, provided that," and then line 3, "an incumbent judge whose term is to expire may become a candidate by filing an affidavit of candidacy with the secretary of state not less than 180 days prior to the expiration of his term."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Does the secretary have the amendment?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. King offers the following amendment to the amendment offered by Mr. Ford:

1. Amend the amendment, at the end thereof, after "law" by changing the period to a colon and inserting "Provided however, That an incumbent judge whose term is to expire may became a candidate by filing an affidavit of candidacy with the secretary of state not less than 180 days prior to the expiration of his term.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. King to the amendment offered by Mr. Ford, and on the King amendment the Chair would recognize Mr. King.

MR. KING: Speaking very briefly, Mr. Chairman, I would just state that this part of Mr. Hanna's amendment, I think, appeals to a lot of us. If Mr. Ford's amendment passes, there is no reason to believe that the situation in the future will be any different than it is at the present time; which might be all right. I am not seriously objecting to that, but I do think that an incumbent judge ought to have the right to nominate himself without going back to a party convention. This I conceive to be one of the primary evils in the present system, and for that reason I would urge the support of my amendment to Mr. Ford's amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Delegate King a question through the Chair. Then, if an incumbent judge is a member of one party, would the party have a right to nominate another candidate also?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. King.

MR. KING: I would see nothing in my amendment that would prevent that.

MR. BARTHWELL: Okay, thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Downs, do you desire to be recognized on the King amendment?

MR. DOWNS: Yes. Mr. Chairman, I wish to speak against the King amendment, and not for — well, perhaps more for the argument of consistency. I did vote for the provision of the Hanna amendment that would provide for the 3 systems of nominations; that is, by convention, by affidavit and by petition. However, since the committee did turn that down, as well as my attempt to start this piecemeal — I would have put the other pieces in, Mr. King, if the other had passed — I think that we should be consistent and either provide completely for the method of nomination or do as Mr. Ford's amendment does, leave it entirely up to the legislature. I think by leaving that up to the legislature, the legislature, if it wishes to, could include the amendments suggested by Mr. King, it could include the other systems suggested by Mr. Hanna. I, therefore, more on the basis of consistency, which I think on occasion has arguments in its favor, suggest that we vote the King amendment down to be consistent with our other section and leave it simply "as provided by law," with the first sentence already adopted.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman, I think this should be passed at this time. Actually this part that is being brought up now is the same thing, different wording, that we attempted in Committee Proposal 96, section 1, and which, as Miss Donnelly pointed out, should be held off until after we decided on the method of selecting supreme court justices, and it was favorably voted on by this committee. This is exactly the same proposition, and should be put over along with the section 1 of 96 to be considered after the supreme court method of selecting judges has been decided.

I am in favor of Mr. King's amendment, the self nomination or filing of a candidacy affidavit by an incumbent. I don't believe that it should be left to the legislature or we will have the same thing we have had in the past, which brings politics every so often back into the court. Therefore I would move that this be passed, along with section 1 of Committee Proposal 96, until after consideration of Committee Proposals 91, I believe it is, and 92, if those are the ones for the supreme court and the appellate court.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the motion of Mr. Lawrence to defer further consideration of the King amendment until after Committee Proposal 91 has been finally acted upon. Has the Chair correctly stated your motion, Mr. Lawrence?

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman, things have been going so fast here that — the proposal that I am referring to is the method of election of the supreme court and the method of election of the appellate court, if an appellate court is provided for. We are on Committee Proposal 91. I am not assuming we will keep an appellate court; for some reason I am assuming, maybe irrationally, we will keep a supreme court. Yes, it would be after completion of 91 and 92.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the motion — Mr. Romney.

MR. ROMNEY: I rise to support the Lawrence motion to postpone, in line with our consideration the other day. On the other hand, if we are not going to postpone consideration of this, I think it imperative that we approve the King amendment. The most indefensible aspect is the matter that the King amendment deals with.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the motion of Mr. Lawrence to defer further consideration of the King amendment until after the committee has dealt with Committee Proposals 91 and 92. Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak against Mr. Lawrence's motion simply for the reason that I don't know how to vote on Mr. Ford's amendment unless I have at least this much protection against this evil which I foresee in the present system, and for which I have no reason to believe will be changed in the future by the legislature. So I would urge that you defeat the Lawrence motion and then pass the King amendment, and then do as you see fit on the Ford amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence, did you desire to correct the Chair's statement of your motion?

MR. LAWRENCE: Yes. I am tempted to defer both Mr. King's amendment and the Ford amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence's motion is to defer further consideration of the King amendment and the Ford amendment until the completion of consideration of Committee Proposals 91 and 92. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Well, I think that the delegates ought to have a look at what 96 1 is that Mr. Lawrence is talking about. It is on page 579 of the journal. When I asked Mr. Lawrence the other day if it was his intention that this provision meant the nomination of a candidate for judge, he said "No, it means simply a substitute for the filing of nominating petitions." He also said — and this section 1 refers to all judicial offices, lumps the circuit court together with the supreme court and probate court — that he did not intend that the primary election provision for the circuit court or probate court now in effect would in any way be affected by this; that this would merely provide a method of getting your name on the ballot in the primary election, as distinguished from getting you nominated for the office. If that is correct, then there is no reason at this point to defer consideration of our method of nomination for the office, and for the consideration of how you will get your name on the ballot in the primary election.

Now, Mr. Lawrence, I assume that I asked the question directly and got a direct answer from you, that you did not intend, and that the committee did not intend section 1 to be a substitute for any other method of selection, but merely a substitute for nominating petitions.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford, the Chair believes that the question must be confined at this point to the Lawrence motion, which was to defer further consideration of the King amendment and the Ford amendment until following action with respect to Committee Proposals 91 and 92. Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman, that is exactly the point that I was making. When section 1 of Committee Proposal 96 came up and we voted to defer, it was for the purpose of meeting the objections, the points that Mr. Ford raised, and those were the points that are involved in the present Ford amendment as proposed to be amended by the King amendment. And that is why action on that should be deferred, and why I have made the motion.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: I oppose the Lawrence motion. I believe that if we keep on deferring this question until we have decided another one, and then defer that one until we have decided another one, we can fix things up so we can never end. That is about the position we are maneuvering ourselves into. We have deferred this several times. I cannot understand why anyone should argue that we should defer action on 91 until we have completed 91. This doesn't make any sense. This is Committee Proposal 91 that we are dealing with. Let's finish 91, and then when we finish 91, and if you wish to finish 92, then we can go on to whatever has been deferred. But if we defer 91, then we can never finish. Let's finish this one, then we will finish 92, then we will finish 96, and then we will finish all the rest of them and we can go home.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Point of information, Mr. Chairman. What is there remaining in Committeee Proposal 91 for us to consider that we already haven't considered? I thought that we had taken care of all the other sections of 91 outside of this supreme court. Is there something else in 91?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Secretary, have you further amendments to either section a or section g or the body of Committee Proposal 91 currently pending?

SECRETARY CHASE: We have another amendment to section g and an amendment to the body of the proposal, Mr. Chairman.

MR. FAXON: So then, what would happen is that if we passed over this, then we would go on to these amendments which are pending to section g?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: That is right, and further carrying out of the motion of Mr. Lawrence, we would then proceed to consideration of Committee Proposal 92, and would then return to the Ford amendment and the King amendment thereto.

MR. FAXON: I am against passing over this now. I don't think we have that much on this question that we already haven't discussed. We are ready to talk about it now.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the motion of Mr. Lawrence to defer further consideration of the King amendment and the Ford amendment until after the completion of Committee Proposals 91 and 92. Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, I would agree with Dr. Nord and oppose this motion. To me, we can never get back to 96 1 until we divide the question, which we are now about to do. The difficulty when we were there before was there was confusion as to how you nominate supreme court justices and how you nominate the others. Now there is an effort being made to eliminate that confusion. If we adopt Mr. King's amendment we will have eliminated the confusion, and when we do get back to 96 we will be able to consider then only circuit judges and probate judges. Without eliminating that confusion, we will never be able to decide 96 1, and we will never be able to decide this. Furthermore, in answer to Mr. Lawrence's suggestion, if we defeat his motion to pass this over, and if we adopt these 2 amendments before us, we will have decided how to elect the supreme court. There won't be anything left to decide in that regard. We will, of course, have to consider the amendments pending, but if we agree that Mr. Hanna's amendment as amended is the answer, we won't have to come back to it. So I would oppose passing over it, feeling we ought to decide this issue right now.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the motion of Mr. Lawrence to defer further consideration of the King and Ford amendments. Those who are in favor of Mr. Lawrence's motion will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion does not prevail. The question is now on the King amendment to the Ford amendment, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Romney.

For what purpose does the gentleman rise, Mr. Iverson?

MR. IVERSON: I move that the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Iverson moves that the committee do now rise. Those who are in favor of the motion will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion does not prevail.

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: A division is requested. Is the demand supported? It is supported. Those who are in favor of the motion that the committee do now rise will vote aye. Those who are opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion that the committee do now rise, the yeas are 67; the nays are 45.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The motion prevails. The committee will rise. Dr. Nord, you will be in order as soon as the president resumes the Chair.

MR. NORD: It would be too late. I was going to move we reconsider.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the motion of Dr. Nord that we reconsider the vote on the motion that the committee do now rise.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, may I address myself to that point?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may proceed, Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, on Friday we had a rather abortive session. We took up half the day in order to come here to settle this question. We came here. We are about to settle this question. Now we are going to chicken out some more. Now, we haven't had any debate on whether we should rise, but rising at ¼ past 5, obviously only after an hour or so of debate, just when we are about to finish the question, it seems to me is absolutely unjustified. We have got to end this convention some time or other, even if it isn't what we like there. As somebody said, "All good things must come to an end," and as somebody else has said, "And this too shall pass away." Either way you look at it, we must terminate this convention, and we must make decisions. I object to having such an easy afternoon of it. I think we should stay here and solve our problems.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the motion of Dr. Nord to reconsider the vote by which the committee agreed to rise. Those in favor of Dr. Nord's motion to reconsider will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Division is requested. Is there support? It is supported. As many as are in favor of Dr. Nord's motion to reconsider the vote by which the committee agreed to rise will vote aye, and those opposed will vote no. The secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion to reconsider the yeas are 47; the nays are 64.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The motion to reconsider does not prevail. The committee will rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration one proposal of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 91, it has adopted an amendment thereto; has considered an amendment; and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Are there announcements?

SECRETARY CHASE: There will be a Republican meeting immediately following this session in rooms B and C. (laughter)

The committee on administration will meet tomorrow, Tuesday, at 1:00 o'clock p.m. Walter DeVries, chairman.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: Mr. President, when the secretary told about Judge Mosier's accident, I felt very sorry for several reasons; mostly, of course, because he was hurt. But a few weeks ago I had the privilege of sitting next to him at dinner, and he said he had been paying insurance, car insurance, since 1912 and his insurance company had never had to pay out a cent for him. At the same time he told about taking a trip in this beautiful Ford he had from Dowagiac to Paw Paw, and on a sand road, and on the way, halfway between, his fan belt broke, and he didn't know what he was going to do. He was a long way from anywhere, and there were no garages. So Mrs. Mosier was with him, and she got in the car and undressed and took off her corset string and made a fan belt out of it, and he got home. And I was just thinking of that today; what a cute story that was. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Dr. Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: Point of order. I would think that would be quite appropriate, of course, for the purpose of holding things together. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President, I move that when we recess, we reconvene this evening at 7:30.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Hoxie that when we recess, we stand in recess until 7:30. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed, no.

The Chair is in doubt. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote. Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I just want to ask a question, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: All right, Mr. Marshall, while we are doing it you ask the question.

MR. MARSHALL: Doesn't this necessitate a change in the rules we adopted when we adopted the rules to reconvene at 8:00 o'clock on Monday night, or am I incorrect?

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair is informed this has been done by motion right along, Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Of course I am incorrect.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion to recess until 7:30, the yeas are 43; the nays are 72.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The motion does not prevail. The Chair recognizes Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. President, I move that we do now recess until 8:00 p.m. this evening.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Prettie. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed, no.

The motion prevails. We are recessed until 8:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 5:25 o'clock p.m. the convention recessed; and, at 8:00 o'clock p.m., reconvened.]

The convention will please come to order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering matters on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Those in favor of the motion please say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Van Dusen.

[Whereupon, Mr. Van Dusen assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The committee will be in order. When the committee rose this afternoon we had been considering Committee Proposal 91, A proposal pertaining to the supreme court. Specifically, we had under consideration section a of that proposal, and had adopted an amendment thereto reading, "The supreme court shall consist of 9 justices to be elected for 10 year terms on a nonpartisan statewide ballot." The pending business was an amendment offered by Mr. King to an amendment offered by Mr. Ford adding certain language to section a of Committee Proposal 91 as so amended. The question is now upon the amendment offered by Mr. King. Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, at this time I would like to withdraw my amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. King withdraws his amendment. The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Ford to section a of Committee Proposal 91. It has been requested that the secretary read the amendment. The secretary will do so.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. King has offered the following amendment to add to the language of section a the following: "Nominations for justices of the supreme court shall be made as now or hereafter provided by law.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Ford which the secretary has just read. Mr. Garvin.

MR. GARVIN: Did the secretary say Mr. King?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary was in error, and the Chair hopes corrected it. You are quite right. The amendment is the amendment offered by Mr. Ford. The secretary will read the amendment again.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Ford's amendment is:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Those who are in favor of the amendment so offered by Mr. Ford will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The Chair is in doubt. Those who are in favor of the amendment offered by Mr. Ford will vote aye. Those who are opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Ford the yeas are 38; the nays are 78.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to section a?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Higgs has filed the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "ballot.", by adding a new paragraph to read as follows:

"Justices of the supreme court shall be elected at statewide partisan elections. Incumbent justices of the supreme court may become candidates for reelection by filing a declaration of intention as provided by law. Other candidates may be nominated by state party conventions. No candidate shall be nominated by the convention of a party to oppose an incumbent which it originally nominated and who has filed a declaration of intention. Persons nominated at party conventions shall be listed on the ballot under the party name and label of the party nominating them. Incumbents filing a declaration of intention shall be listed on the ballot under the party name and label of the party originally nominating them. No vacancy shall be filled by appointment.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: I will withdraw that amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs withdraws his amendment. Are there further amendments to section a?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Dehnke, Iverson, Hoxie, McAllister, Rood, Pugsley and Prettie offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "The supreme court shall consist of 9 justices, to be elected by the electors of the state. The term of office shall be 8 years. Not more than 3 terms of office shall expire at the same time.

All primary elections and elections of justices of the supreme court shall be nonpartisan. There are hereby established 7 judicial districts, constituted as follows:

Judicial district 1, comprising Wayne county.

Judicial districts 2 to 7, inclusive, comprising all other counties of the state, shall be established by the legislature by joining together contiguous judicial circuits into a judicial district comprising as nearly as possible 1/9 of the population of the state. The districts so established may be changed from time to time by law to the end that each such district shall comprise as nearly as possible 1/9 of the population of the state. No such change shall have the effect of removing a justice from office.

There shall be nominated and elected 3 justices from judicial district 1, and 1 justice from each of the judicial districts 2 to 7, inclusive.

Except as in this constitution otherwise provided, all primary election and election laws, including laws pertaining to partisan primaries and elections, shall, so far as applicable, govern nominating procedures, primary elections, and elections hereunder.

All justices of the supreme court holding office on the date this constitution shall become effective, shall serve out the term for which they shall have heretofore been elected or appointed.

Any justice holding office on the date this constitution shall become effective, who is not otherwise disqualified for reelection, may be a candidate for reelection in any district without regard to his place of residence.

Any candidate for election as justice of the supreme court who is not holding office on the date this constitution shall become effective, may be a resident of the judicial district from which he is a candidate, or may become a candidate in any other judicial district.

Transition from the present established law for the election of justices of the supreme court to the method herein provided shall be provided by law, including the order of rotation in which elections shall be made from each of the foregoing judicial districts.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment to section a of Committee Proposal 91 offered by Judge Dehnke, Messrs. Iverson, Hoxie, McAllister, Rood, Pugsley and Prettie.

MR. NORD: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Dr. Nord, state your point.

MR. NORD: It appears to me, Mr. Chairman, that we have already determined the issue which is now being presented to us. This afternoon we voted to have a statewide ballot. We are now faced with an issue which says we should not have a statewide ballot, but a ballot broken down into districts. I also would like to point out that we reconsidered that question, and it could not be presented to us now even in the form of a motion to reconsider. Therefore I suggest, and request a ruling from the Chair, that the amendment which is now being presented is out of order.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will rule, Dr. Nord, that the amendment is in order. It contemplates a different method of selecting supreme court justices than any which we have acted upon heretofore; though it is similar in nature to the proposal of the committee which was rejected some 2 weeks ago.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I believe I have not made my point clear. The point I make is this: that what we have adopted this afternoon is a statewide ballot. That point is decided, as far as I understand. We cannot change that at this point. But the amendment that is now before us would present something which is not a statewide ballot, but the reverse; a ballot in districts. That being the case, I can't understand, as the saying goes, how we can have both at the same time. Is my point understood?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Your point is understood, Dr. Nord. We could not have both at the same time. The amendment which is offered by Judge Dehnke and others would strike out the plan which was adopted this afternoon and would substitute a different plan. The merit of the plan, of course, is for the committee of the whole to determine. The Chair would rule that the amendment is in order.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I appeal the ruling of the Chair.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lesinski.

MR. LESINSKI: Mr. Chairman, I would like to find out the merits of the plan. Could I have a copy of the full amendment, and possibly all the other delegates, so that we can evaluate this intelligently?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair is sure, Mr. Lesinski, that the secretary will see that the delegates have a copy of it. It is being projected on the walls.

MR. LESINSKI: When it was read it sounded like 2 pages, and you have a few paragraphs there.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question, Mr. Lesinski, at the moment is: shall the judgment of the Chair with respect to the point of order made by Dr. Nord stand as the judgment of the committee? Those who are in favor of sustaining the decision of the Chair will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The decision of the Chair is sustained. Now, Mr. Lesinski, the secretary will, the Chair is sure, make an effort to provide copies of the amendment which is currently before us. Mr. Lesinski, the secretary suggests that it would be possible to project one page on one side of the hall and one on the other, if that would be helpful to you.

MR. LESINSKI: I would like to see the whole story instead of half the story.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Garvin.

MR. GARVIN: Do I understand now that the ruling of the Chair this afternoon, when it was stated, "The supreme court shall consist of 9 justices to be elected to 10 year terms on a nonpartisan statewide ballot," that was divided, and it was my understanding at the time that that was part of whatever was to come after that, because it was voted on by this committee—do I understand now that the ruling of the Chair differs from this afternoon?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: No, Mr. Garvin. The Chair believes that the ruling with respect to points of order made this afternoon and the point made this evening are consistent. The current amendment is a complete substitute for section a. The committee of the whole adopted this afternoon a substitute for section a. It is now proposed that the committee of the whole adopt a different substitute for section a. The current amendment is in order.

MR. GARVIN: Then this is a substitute for the entire section?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: For the entire section, that is correct. Mr. Lesinski, the secretary advises that there will be 100 copies available within a matter of 15 minutes. The Chair is confident the debate may take long enough so that within the period before you are called upon to vote upon it you will have it before you.

MR. LESINSKI: You say there are 100 copies. There are 144 delegates. If we are going to vote on something that no one reads, just says aye on it, how can you vote intelligently?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lesinski, copies will be made available, the secretary advises for all of the delegates. Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee recess until the copies are available.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Barthwell, as it happens, a recess is not in order in committee of the whole; a point which Senator Hutchinson made prudently.

The Chair would suggest that the proponents of the amendment proceed to discuss it while the first page is being projected on the wall. The Chair will advise all of the delegates that the question will not be put with respect to this amendment until copies are available for all of the delegates, and all of the delegates have had an opportunity to read the amendment. Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: I was about to suggest that the secretary might now reread the amendment, and that the portion being read might be up here so we could watch it as the words are read. When it was read the first time I was trying to follow along in the printed material to see where these various ideas came from, and I don't know whether this was on the wall or not at that time. But it is available now, and our projection machines are working splendidly, and I thought if we could have it read as we watched it there, that then we would know quite conclusively just what the amendment is.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Powell, the Chair thinks your suggestion is a good one, and will ask the secretary to read the amendment once more. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: It might simplify things, and I move that we divide the question and consider the first paragraph, which is the same. The only essential change being taking out the statewide nonpartisan aspect and the term of years from the balance of the section, and consider the first section first.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford requests that the question be divided, and it will be divided. Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Have you ruled?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Well, any delegate, Mr. Higgs, is entitled to request a division, and a division will be ordered if the question as divided comprehends separate propositions which, in the opinion of the Chair, is the case.

MR. HIGGS: This is precisely the problem. I note in reading rule 51—and I had taken it upon myself to consult with Mr. Chase before the session this evening—that in dividing questions we must be very careful in making such a division and voting in divisions that we don't dig ourselves a pit.

I would question whether a substitute amendment such as the one we are voting upon can be divided in the way comprehended under rule 51 without running into the problem I originally raised; that we may find that we want to vote for part of it—that is, we might want to vote for the total plan without being compelled to vote individually, because it is a component whole. If you vote upon it in parts, we may find ourselves in difficulty. I had this feeling, myself. For instance—and I am raising this question—I may choose to vote in favor of a nonpartisan election, but this is conditioned that it be by districts, and I find it impossible to divide this type of a question and vote intelligently upon it.

I call this to the attention of the Chair because we have had a ruling that this amendment is in order. But if it is divided, we will have to face the same—if the question is divided, we will have to face parliamentary rulings again on each division, and inasmuch as the original ruling of the Chair was that this was in order simply because it was a totally new plan, I feel that there would be some hazard in dividing it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs, the Chair is indebted to Mr. Bentley for calling to his attention the last sentence of rule 51, the fact that a motion to strike out and insert shall be deemed indivisible, and the current amendment is to strike out the entire section and to insert a new section. The Chair would therefore advise that the question is indivisible under rule 51. Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Point of information, Mr. Chairman. Would you advise me as to what is the status of the amendment which we adopted this afternoon, Mr. Hanna's amendment with regard to the same section? I was trying to follow along with what you were saying before, but what is the status of that as far as the committee of the whole is concerned?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Currently, Mr. Faxon, the committee of the whole has adopted a substitute for section a of Committee Proposal 91 to the effect that the supreme court shall consist of 9 justices to be elected for 10 year terms on a nonpartisan statewide ballot. That is the present posture of section a. It is now proposed by the amendment offered by Judge Dehnke and others to strike out that section and substitute the amendment which is projected on the wall, and which the secretary has read.

MR. FAXON: Well, wouldn't it be necessary, in order to strike it out, to have then a motion to delete that or to reconsider the vote by which that was put in?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment offered by Judge Dehnke and others is to amend page 1, line 6, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the section and inserting the language projected on the wall.

MR. FAXON: Then, we don't take any action upon what we have already acted upon this afternoon?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Faxon, if the committee of the whole would adopt this amendment, it would substitute the proposed new language for the language which was adopted this afternoon. So that the action of the committee would necessarily affect the language which was adopted this afternoon. But no action will be taken independently with respect to that language. Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: With reference to your current ruling here, the proposition that bothers me about rule 51 is, it seems that we have 2 rules in 1 here. The beginning of rule 51 states that if a motion is made to divide and there is still a substantive proposition left after division, that the question shall be divided, and then it goes on to say that in the event of a motion to strike and insert it is not divisible. I think we have a conflict within a rule here, and our procedure to date has been to divide even on all of our prior substitution and insertion amendments.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You are quite right, Mr. Mahinske, that our procedure has been to divide whenever it has been requested, and the Chair had proceeded in that fashion until the last sentence of rule 51 was called to the Chair's attention. The Chair thinks Mr. Bentley's point to the effect that this is a motion to strike out and insert was well taken. The Chair would suggest that perhaps the discussion of this point of order has consumed enough time so that by the time we are through discussing it the entire amendment will be on everyone's desk and Mr. Ford's point will be accomplished.

MR. MAHINSKE: Then the essence of your ruling is that there are no divisions which will be properly entertained on this amendment? It is an all or nothing shot?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: That appears to be the case, Mr. Mahinske. Mr. Garvin.

MR. GARVIN: Mr. Chairman, would it not be true even under this ruling that the sentence that was adopted by the committee this afternoon, the only time that could come up again would be on second reading? Because it is something definite and concise at this moment, and the only time that that sentence could come again would not be in this first reading but would be on second reading.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Garvin, your point is well taken.

MR. GARVIN: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: That particular sentence could not be offered again in committee of the whole. It could be offered after the committee rises.

MR. GARVIN: I am talking about something to change that sentence.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Well, the precise point which you make is not currently before us because the sentence is not currently before us, and the Chair is reluctant to rule on it in advance of it being presented. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I want to withdraw the request to divide the question. As you have already observed, we have probably accomplished our purpose, but I want to make it clear that I disagree with the ruling of the Chair, and I hope we get this cleared up before it occurs again. Because my concept of a motion to strike and insert contemplates striking and inserting a part of something so that you are not in fact voting on a complete substitute. If we set a precedent here that by simply offering a complete substitute for something you can force the convention always to vote on a package deal without any opportunity to divide a question when there are several subjects contained in one amendment even though it be a substitute, then I think we are placing in the hands of the convention a device that would always preclude in the future a division of these questions for intelligent discussion of their various components.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford, the Chair would state that your point is well taken, and the question should be given further consideration. It is necessary, as you well know, to rule on these matters as they arise, and the ruling of the Chair was, of necessity, precipitate. But the Chair thinks it is a matter which deserves further study. The question is upon the amendment offered by Judge Dehnke and others to substitute the language which the secretary has read for the present language of section a of Committee Proposal 91. Judge Dehnke, do you desire to be recognized?

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if these copies have now been supplied to all the delegates.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair doesn't believe they have been yet, Judge Dehnke. If there is any portion of it you would like to have read, the secretary will be glad to read it.

MR. DEHNKE: I think I can cover it generally without going into specifics. Briefly, this proposed substitute, Mr. Chairman and delegates, proposes to elect justices of the supreme court from 7 districts, the first one of which shall be composed of Wayne county, and from which 3 justices shall be elected. The balance of the state is to be divided into 6 additional districts by the legislature from time to time, composing as nearly as possible 1/9 of the population of the state in each district. The basis of the amendment briefly is this: this convention seems to realize that the people of Michigan want the justices of the supreme court elected by popular vote, and if that is to be on a statewide basis the candidates are faced with the expense and burden of a statewide campaign.

There are 2 possible alternatives for nomination that have been suggested. One is nomination by political conventions, to which a great deal of objection has been raised. The only other alternative that seems to be in sight is a statewide primary election, and this, we all realize, presents for the average lawyer and judge who might be offered as a candidate for the supreme court an insuperable and impossible obstacle financially and otherwise. To put on a double statewide campaign is out of the question for, I suppose, 99 per cent of the attorneys and judges of the state. The only way such a candidate could maintain a double campaign would be by putting himself under unconscionable obligations to those who might be willing to supply the finances necessary to enable him to put on that kind of a campaign. So the first objection I think we must all recognize to a statewide double campaign is that it bars the door to many judges and candidates who might be considered well qualified for the position. Second, it is unfair to the public; not only unfair to the candidates because few have established a statewide reputation, but unfair to the public because it limits the opportunity of the public to become familiar with the qualified timber for supreme court positions. The other disadvantage is to the public itself, because it is difficult for any lawyer or judge to establish a reputation on a statewide basis, whereas a judge or lawyer, a circuit judge or judge of the court of appeals in any given district could depend upon having a districtwide reputation which might persuade the voters that he is qualified for advancement to the supreme court, which he would not have on a statewide basis.

Briefly, I think this plan solves the problem that is presented by a statewide election, and I think on the whole would be acceptable to the public and work well in Michigan as it has in some other states. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Chairman, fellow members of the committee, I first of all regret that the parliamentary situation became clouded and perhaps may affect the judgment of the delegates on this plan which is now before you. Ten days ago Delegate Nord announced that he was going to bury the district plan, but at this season of the year our thoughts are on the glory and promise of the "resurrection."

For several days you listened to protracted debate, repeating some of the things that the committee on judicial branch heard over a period of months as to possible methods of improving the selection of supreme court justices in the state. Chairman Danhof of the judicial branch committee was quoted in the Detroit News on February 28 as saying that we are finding out what we don't want. This committee early determined that it did not want the Missouri plan by a vote of 25 to 90, or over 3½ to 1. We have also determined that we do not want the governor to appoint the justices of the supreme court with the advice and consent of the senate. This was by a vote of 30 to 95, or a little over 3 to 1. We have over the past 2 weeks determined that when vacancies occur we want merely temporary appointments of retired members of the judiciary until vacancies can be filled by election, and in its editorial of March 9, 1962, the Detroit Free Press strongly endorsed and commended the action we have taken in this matter. We have had this afternoon under consideration some other proposals which did not meet with the concurrence of the majority of the committee.

Now having determined what we do not want, I think we have arrived at the point where it is incumbent upon us to determine what we do want, and I submit that what we all want is to provide the best possible judicial caliber for the high courts, and all courts of the state. I fully respect the strongly held views of Mr. Lawrence and Mrs. Judd and others, who firmly believe that this could only be accomplished by an adoption of the Missouri plan or some adaptation of it. But their views we have rejected. I fully understand the philosophy of those who think that the governor should appoint the members of the court as well as other state officials, but at this point this committee has not agreed with that philosophy, and the appointment with advice and consent has also been rejected.

As one analyzes the votes that we have taken, it would appear that a majority of the delegates to this convention are at this point agreed on certain fundamental principles. First, that our judiciary should be elected. So should they at all levels. Second, that they should be at least elected on nonpartisan ballots, and as to the circuit court and probate court we have at this point determined that they should be nominated as well as elected on a nonpartisan basis. Third, we have determined that vacancies in judicial offices should be filled by interim appointment, and then follow an election to fill a vacancy. We have determined that the incumbency designation is to be earned only by election, and not by appointment to judicial office. And I believe we have determined that the incumbent members of the judiciary should be given the right of self nomination.

Having agreed on these multitudinal ideas, where then are we still at odds on the matter of the election of the justices of our supreme court? Actually the issue is between 3 choices: a maintenance of the status quo with its hybrid inconsistency of partisan nomination and nonpartisan election; a second choice, a provision for statewide nonpartisan primary election; or, finally, the choice that this amendment now presents to you. Our work of the past 2 weeks has reduced our choices from many diverse plans to just these 3, as I see it at this time.

I do not want to repeat the many arguments that have been made on this floor. I merely want to summarize very briefly a few points. It has been said by many of the delegates that the status quo is simply not honest. A candidate cannot be both partisan and nonpartisan. He cannot seek nomination as a member of a political party and then inconsistently present himself with any honesty as a nonpartisan candidate. Second, as Judge Dehnke just pointed out, it has been freely admitted that the expense of statewide nonpartisan primaries and statewide nonpartisan elections would prohibit the candidacy of many capable men whose service the state is thus deprived of. The nonpartisan nomination and election of our justices is consistent. It is in accord with what you have approved for the circuit court and probate court. It reduces the financial obligation of the candidate sufficiently to attract competent men who would otherwise never run in a statewide campaign, first for nomination and then for election. It would provide, I submit, an orderly and a consistent method of truly nonpartisan election in our trial courts, with advancement to the probably to be created court of appeals, and finally, if preferment is given, advancement, still nonpartisan, to the high office of justice of the supreme court.

I ask to you to look again at the journal, pages 467 to 469, and review the detailed arguments advanced in support of the plan when first proposed by the committee on judicial branch; weigh them against the arguments that have been presented during the past several days in support of any other plan. If on the weight of the evidence you cannot agree with the several proponents of this plan, you should vote against it and try to find something better. In months of study the proponents of this proposal have been, in all honesty, unable to find a better solution than the one we have presented.

It is our duty here to improve our constitution and correct such apparent defects as the one we have had under discussion in this prolonged debate. This was the avowed purpose of the league of women voters and members of the junior chamber of commerce and other groups who assisted in bringing about the calling of this convention. This is what the citizens of the state of Michigan expect of us while we are here. This amendment offers you the opportunity to carry out this mandate of the people.

Now, how does this plan differ from the one that was submitted to you in the committee report as it came before you over 2 weeks ago? In the first place, it reinserts in identical language the language of the committee report in place of the language adopted this afternoon providing for statewide nonpartisan election. So in that first paragraph it differs not at all. From that point on it differs in 2 major respects.

It does not spell out the exact counties comprising judicial districts 2 through 7, but leaves it to the legislature to establish the boundaries of these districts and to revise them as population changes may require, to the end that the population in each district, aside from district 1, shall be as nearly as possible equal, having regard to circuit court boundaries. This meets the point raised in earlier debate by Delegate Hatch, who pointed out that by tying the districts to Wayne county and having them either not less than ¼ nor more than ½ of Wayne you might have an artificial standard. That point was well taken, and so this revision has been made in the plan as originally presented to you by the committee. It should be observed in this regard that the circuit court boundaries and zones are established by statute, and so the legislature is given double flexibility. The legislature can change circuit boundaries, they can change the boundaries of the judicial district, but still conforming to circuit court boundaries so that no one circuit would have appeals to a different area. The second major change from the original plan is—and this will appear on page 2 when it is distributed to you, and if not, when it is projected—that this plan as now revised will permit any person to be a candidate from any district regardless of his place of residence. This in the original plan was extended to incumbent members of the court, and now it is extended to all.

One final word, and in this I give you my sincere pledge that it is my view. This amendment is not politically motivated. It was evolved and it was developed over many months by delegates long before they actually were delegates to this convention, and was with the one end in view of how can we best solve this hybrid inconsistency and elect the most competent men best known to the voters to the supreme court of this state. I submit, fellow delegates, that we cannot at this time know or even guess what may be the political result of this plan. This will depend upon the temper and the wisdom of the voters in this state in the years ahead, and who can know today what this may be? I ask you to put aside conjecture as to the present or possible future complexion of the court, and to vote only your own conviction as to whether, on the basis of pure logic, the arguments, the discussion that you have heard over the weeks, whether in your sound judgment this plan will provide for the supreme court of this state men of the highest obtainable judicial caliber.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. William Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, I would like to address a question either to Judge Dehnke or to Mr. Prettie.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If either of the gentlemen cares to answer. To which of them do you prefer to address your question?

MR. W. F. HANNA: I will address it to Mr. Prettie. Mr. Chairman, Mr. Prettie, if I read this amendment correctly, district 1 for all time would be Wayne county. Is that correct?

MR. PRETTIE: That is correct.

MR. W. F. HANNA: And district 1 would for all time elect 3 justices from district 1?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: That is correct.

MR. W. F. HANNA: This would be true even though Wayne county only comprised 18 per cent of the state population?

MR. PRETTIE: Well, I think this is a fair hypothesis, but it now has over 33 per cent. But if you anticipate a possible atomic bomb, or something of that sort, that remote contingency might arise, but I don't think we should try to look into such a dire future.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, I would object to this plan, then, on that basis, because a study of the population trends in Michigan clearly shows that Wayne county will have a smaller and smaller percentage of the total state population, and to give Wayne county 3 supreme court justices without at least 1/3 of the state population would be giving Wayne county entirely too much control of the supreme court of this state over the next 100 years, and I would therefore urge the rejection of this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Garvin. Mr. Garvin passes. Professor Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I deplore the necessity to discuss this matter again after it was soundly defeated once in committee, and I can't understand why it has to be brought up again and hashed over and waste our time. I thought it had been pointed out to be a thoroughly defective plan. It shows, of course, the division in the committee. The committee, being unable to agree upon a forward looking plan, regurgitated their differences to the assembly here, and we have been hiccuping ever since. But once you are beaten it doesn't mean you can't join others in a constructive improvement. Unless we can vote for something which is an improvement over what we've got, we might as well keep what we've got.

As far as I can see, and although Mr. Prettie alleges no political motivations, if the motivations aren't political, they are certainly naive; and if one considers what it means to have 1/3 of the people elect 2/3 of the judges—if that isn't political I don't know what is. In any case, it seems to me that the supreme court, like the governor and the legislature, should represent all the people, and the legislature is divided into districts for the purpose of getting representation from all of the small areas of the state. I haven't found any sound argument that said that the supreme court had to represent the different areas of the state, and represent them in the same way in which a circuit judge is supposed to represent his circuit. It seems to me the same idea which I have heard some delegates talk about—my circuit court and my circuit judges, as if I put him in there, he is to represent me—it almost seems as if the same idea is to be carried over to the supreme court. I think, therefore, ladies and gentlemen, that this plan having been proved to be defective should be voted down and voted down this time so soundly that it won't be brought up the third time.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, my point was somewhat covered by Mr. Hanna so I won't belabor it, but just point out a few statistics. In the decade from 1940 to 1950 Macomb county enjoyed a 71.8 per cent increase in population; 1950 to 1960, 119.4. My county of Oakland during the '40s increased 45.9 per cent, and during the '50s, 74.3. During this period Wayne county was increasing during the '40s 20.8, and during the '50s 9.5 per cent. Now I don't think this thing is politically motivated by the Wayne county delegates. It doesn't appear to be the case, anyway. But certainly they would be one group which would stand to benefit by any such a device as would present in the constitution 3 supreme court justices from that county, which obviously it not growing as fast as many of the other counties in the southeastern part of the state. For that reason, I would have to be opposed to it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Delegates will be pleased to know that Mr. Hanna and Mr. Pollock have said almost everything I have to say. Dr. Pollock; excuse me. It is seldom that I get an opportunity to agree with both of these eminent social scientists simultaneously. However, there is one additional fact, and this is the one that Ken, Mr. Prettie, talked about, on page 2. He indicated, and I think perhaps he misspoke himself, that any person running for the supreme court can run in any district regardless of his residence, and as I read it only the present incumbents, or the incumbents at the time that the constitution takes effect would have this privilege. In examining this we also find that the judicial districts for the supreme court are tied to the judicial circuits, which indicates that circuit lines could not be broken in establishing the districts 2 through 7 in the first instance, and thereafter on a reapportionment.

I think that the one thing that members of the reapportionment committee or the committee that dealt with the reapportionment or apportionment of the legislature, did agree on, if my information is correct, it was unfair and somewhat naive to expect a body to reapportion itself. This is what Mr. Prettie's plan does by indirection, because Committee Proposal 93, section a, would have provided that the number of judges may be changed and circuits may be created, altered and discontinued by law, and the number of judges shall be changed and the circuits shall be created, altered, discontinued on the recommendation of the supreme court to reflect changes in the judicial business. So the upshot of this would be that the supreme court would be placed in the rather indelicate position of recommending to the legislature the composition of the judicial circuits which in the end would determine the composition of the supreme court districts. So we are on the one hand agreeing that it is not right to ask a body to reapportion itself, and then coming around in the judicial article and asking the supreme court in the future to recommend the manner in which the districts for the election of its judges shall be established.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, may I, through the Chair, direct a question or two to Dr. Pollock?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may if the gentleman cares to answer, Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Dr. Pollock, you spoke about the district plan having been soundly defeated in this committee of the whole. Has it ever been directly presented to the committee of the whole? I have been absent on a few occasions.

MR. POLLOCK: Yes. I voted against it once. I can't remember the exact date, but it was fairly decisive.

MR. LEIBRAND: Was not your vote for the Ford amendment which would have deleted section g of the committee proposal?

MR. POLLOCK: What was the Ford amendment?

MR. LEIBRAND: That is what I believe you voted on, Doctor, in getting the district plan off the floor.

MR. POLLOCK: I beg your pardon. I didn't happen to be here to vote for the Ford plan.

MR. LEIBRAND: May I continue, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may.

MR. LEIBRAND: Perhaps I am confused here.

MR. POLLOCK: I think you are.

MR. LEIBRAND: Well, I will say to this committee, I will give you my thoughts on this. To my memory, and I have been in this convention every day except 3 since it started, the district plan has never directly reached the floor of this convention for a vote. It was deleted from consideration on February 27, 1962, by an affirmative vote on the Ford amendment, which directly deleted this portion of the committee report. Dr. Pollock has stated it was soundly defeated. Even on this indirect defeat the vote was 69 for the Ford amendment and 58 against it, according to my records. A change of 6 votes would have entirely changed the status of the district plan. For the first time tonight, in my memory of this convention, we are faced directly with the merits or lack of merits of the district plan.

I further would like to direct one more question to Dr. Pollock. He stated that under the district plan 1/3 of the people would elect 2/3 of the judges. I never got very good marks in mathematics, but I can't get such a result from the language of the Dehnke amendment, and if any delegate can prove the truth of that language to me I would be very happy to accept it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman and Judge Leibrand, I haven't had the time, of course, to figure this up in the new language which has been presented, but I made a careful analysis of the original proposal, and I shall be glad to show my analysis to the judge, if he would like to have it. I, too, am not too good at arithmetic and this was an approximation, but the point, regardless of whether it is 1/3 or what it is, it shows that the great majority of the people of the state would elect 1/3 of the judges, and the smaller minority of the state would elect 2/3 of them. The main thing is, regardless of whether it is a majority or a minority, it is having judges elected by a portion of the people instead of being elected by all of the people whom the judges are supposed to represent.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I have listened to this in the committee, as I have stated before, when we discussed this section in the article, and again I want to emphasize the fact that the committee never did agree as a majority committee on this plan that the committee reported out. We did compromise to bring it out, but I listened to Mr. Prettie, whom I have a great deal of respect and admiration for, very attentively in the committee. I have listened to him on the floor, and if ever he made a point that would have been inclined to have me favor this plan, I think he has contradicted it now. His strongest point so far as I have been concerned has been the fact that in the smaller area more people would know the candidates. But now when he states on page 2 in the second and third paragraphs that both incumbent and a new candidate can run in whatever district he wants to regardless of where he lives in the state, I don't see, to save my soul, how he is going to contend that this candidate is going to be better known by the people in a specific district in which he might choose to run.

So, again I don't think this plan offers any improvement over our present system, and therefore I still urge that the committee delegates vote against this plan. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Powell, the Chair would advise there are about 5 speakers ahead of you. Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Prettie in opening the debate — not opening it, but near the beginning of the debate, said this is a district plan which I had said we should bury, and at least we had tentatively buried. If that is the case, I assume it is the same plan as was before us once before. At the same time I heard Judge Leibrand saying that it isn't. I think we should face up to the fact that it basically is the same plan. There are enough differences, apparently, to avoid the point of order which I otherwise would make, that this has been considered and defeated. It has been buried once, and I believe that it deserves a decent burial, and I resent the idea that it is turning around in its grave and walking the floors of this hall. It is a zombie, in other words. It is a dead thing which doesn't know it. I think we should make it clear that it is dead and should be buried once and for all. As to the merits of this particular subject, Mr. Bill Hanna hit one of the points on the head right at the beginning, near the beginning of the debate, when he said under this plan that should Wayne county have 18 per cent of the population, or whatever the number, they would always have 1/3 of the supreme court judges. It may be that Wayne county may have more than 33 per cent some day in the future; it may be that they may have less. On the basis of the present trend we expect they will have less. I will go on the assumption that they will have less. Within the next 50 years quite possibly they will have only 20 per cent or 18 per cent. Now, suppose that is the case; the plan that we have before us says that forever there shall be 3 supreme court judges from Wayne county, and I would like to state, as I did the last time this plan was before us, we don't want them. We don't want 3 judges from any one particular place just because there is a line on the map saying, inside this is Wayne county. If you would give us 9 out of 9 we wouldn't want it. We don't want anything. We only want justice; not justice for Wayne county, but we want justice for all the people, and if you are giving us too much, for Pete's sake take it back. I won't tell you what to do with it, but don't give it to us. We don't want more than we are entitled to, and we don't want to be measured as to exactly how many judges we are entitled to. We are not entitled to any judges. The whole people of the state are entitled to a good supreme court.

Therefore I agree 100 per cent with Mr. Bill Hanna's analysis of the apportionment feature of this plan. There are other apportionment features of this plan which cause trouble, too. One of the main troubles with this plan is this: the legislature will have to set up the districts, and it is also stated that later on it is expected that they will reapportion the districts in order to keep the population as nearly equal as it may be. I would like to call your attention to remarks made by one of the sponsors of the original districting plan, Judge Leibrand, on Friday when Mr. Kuhn's amendment was before us. Mr. Kuhn's amendment said if the legislature sees fit, it can adopt districts for the supreme court. Judge Leibrand took the floor and said that it is a bunch of nonsense. In fact, he said the legislature can't even set up one congressional district. He said that if they can't set up 1 district, how are they going to set up all of the districts? How are they going to set up all of the districts for the supreme court? He said that it's impossible. I don't know whether it is impossible or not. I believe that it is impossible. But that is the statement of one of the proponents of the original measure who has taken the floor again and urged us to do what he told us on Friday was impossible.

We have other problems with the apportionment feature of this particular provision. It says it shall be as nearly equal as possible; 1/9 as nearly as possible, and that the legislature may—it doesn't even say that they shall reapportion, but only that they may. The last plan that we had said that they shall. This one steps back a little bit because they are afraid they might not do it. These words, "as nearly as possible," are famous words in the convention. In the apportionment committee we had those words before us a number of times. We were told by the majority group on the committee that those words are meaningless; that it is impossible to provide equal population districts by saying as nearly equal as may be. They say that's meaningless. If it is meaningless there, in the apportionment of the legislature, how does it get to be meaningful here? I suggest to you, and I believe it is perfectly obvious, that the apportionment features of this plan are impossible to fulfill, and they are not expected to be fulfilled. They will not be on a population basis at any time. Not only will the Wayne county figure always be the long figure, but there will be nothing to make sure the legislature will make changes, and if the legislature should violate the provisions, the supreme court will be required to determine whether its own districts are correct. This is certainly an untenable position for the supreme court to be in.

Mr. Prettie has argued on behalf of this plan by saying that everything else is no good; that, therefore, this is good. I don't see that that is a logical position. If everything else is no good, this could be no good, also. We can't be sure that we have eliminated enough when we stop one short of this plan. This plan should be eliminated, too. A plan that we back into by the process of elimination has not very much to recommend it. As Dr. Pollock says, this plan has been regurgitated, and it seems to me that that shows that it is an elimination type of plan.

One of the speakers on behalf of this plan said that a nonpartisan partisan plan, as this is supposed to be, this present plan, a plan that is nonpartisan and yet it is partisan, that that cannot be honest. I assume from what he said in that connection that that means that any person who is willing to go through that plan is dishonest, and that he says to the people—half the time he says he is nonpartisan and the other time he says he is partisan. If that is true, I haven't got a suspicious character, but every one of our supreme court justices is labeled dishonest by that speaker. I believe that is an improper view to take. I pointed out the last time this subject was up that there isn't anything inconsistent, whatever, in having nonpartisan ballots and a partisan campaign. The point is this: if you have a campaign and anybody helps you, anybody helps you with money or assistance of any sort, literature, setting up meetings, you can call him and the group that works with him, you can call him a party if you wish. It just hasn't got the same name. It isn't called a Democratic party, it isn't called a Republican party. It's a party. You can't have an important election without a party of some sort. It just isn't a party that has a label which you dislike. Any campaign is a party campaign of some sort. The only question is, do you know which party, do you know who it is that is behind the candidate. You can't stop important elections from being partisan. All you can do, if you wish to do it, is to take the name of the party off the ballot so that when the people vote that won't influence them. If you wish to do that, there certainly is no objection to it, but let's not kid ourselves and think that it is even possible to have an election of such an important nature to really be nonpartisan, and I see nothing inconsistent with the present system in that respect.

It has also been stated, Mr. Chairman, that this is a nonpartisan plan, but as I pointed out last time, it is basically a guaranteed annual wage for Republican judges. You can't avoid realizing, as many delegates have said, that this plan sets up a supreme court which will be permanently Republican in majority, as far as we can see. It is true that we might have atom bombs, and so on; it is true something might happen; there might be a revolution, and we don't know what, but in the foreseeable future this plan expects to set up a perpetual Republican majority of 6 to 3 or 5 to 4 in the supreme court, and this is done in the name of nonpartisanship. This could be suggested, it could be stated, it could be proven that some of the proponents of the original plan explicitly stated to people who they asked to back it that it was intended to be partisan, and that it was the only way to elect Republican judges to the supreme court. If any delegate challenges that, I would be glad to state the name, not on the floor, because that is against the rule, but off the floor. This is, in the minds of some people who have been in favor of this plan, politically motivated. I realize a lot of people who don't have political motivation have spoken on it, and I know that they don't, but you can't ignore the fact that that is the end result of this plan. It is not a nonpartisan plan, unless you want to call it a Republican nonpartisan plan.

Mr. Chairman, I ask that this amendment be defeated; that we return to the position in debate we were at before the panic bell was rung at 5:15 p.m.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. Chairman, I think for the first time I will agree with Bill Ford. He made my speech in the first 2 sentences. Then he wandered off a little bit and I kind of lost the thread of his discourse, so I am going to make one additional point and sit down. It is said that this plan is better than the one we now have. I think everybody has agreed, except 2 of the supreme court justices who testified before our committee, that the present plan is not too good, but at least when you get 2 political parties into conventions you have a condensation of the people of this state who can know better about the qualifications of the people who are seeking to be nominated as judges than the million or so voters in the state at large. Now, if you could just condense that further and get it down to a nonpartisan commission who would make the nomination to an appointive power, then you would have something.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise to support the Prettie amendment, although you have on your desk by this time a copy of an amendment to strike out and insert which I will offer if this fails. However, the district plan is my first choice, and I speak so that you will understand that the principal reason why I feel that we either should support the Prettie amendment or ultimately support mine is that if you believe in an elective system and you want an elective system which is truly nonpartisan, then I believe that it must be by district. Only in that way can a candidate offer himself to the electorate without becoming involved in campaign expenses that, according to testimony which was given before our committee, would involve expenditure of $50,000 at a minimum and upwards; only in that way, in running in districts, can we avoid this terrific expense of a statewide nonpartisan election. Otherwise a candidate running statewide may have support, although nonpartisan, but the support will necessarily be either out of his own pocket or out of the pockets of special interest groups. I believe that the district plan for electing supreme court judges is the only truly nonpartisan type of plan that is feasible.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Pugsley.

MR. PUGSLEY: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I should feel somewhat embarrassed to appear before you after listening to the remarks of a distinguished member of the University of Michigan faculty who has advised us in very many ways during this convention, if I did not realize that I am not standing alone in the position which I am taking here at this time as 1 of 6 of the has been judges of the state of Michigan. I should also be further embarrassed if I were the only 1 of the 6 who had the nerve to stand before you as an advocate of the district plan. I regret that one of the leaders of the exjurists is in the hospital at Dowagiac today. I hold in my hand a telegram which he sent here from his sick bed. He says, "Auto accident hospitalized Dowagiac. Please tell the delegates I am very much in favor of district plan on nonpartisan nomination and election. Carl D. Mosier." I am sure that we all regret this misfortune has come to Carl, and I am sure that you all join with me in a very high regard for him. He has many friends, and is a distinguished exjurist of the state of Michigan. There are also in this hall today 5 of us, at least, who are of one mind in a belief that the district plan is the most practical and the most feasible of any and all plans that have been suggested.

spend the time, neither can they afford the money that it would take in order to put on a successful campaign without leaving behind them an obligation to someone who may have supported them in the campaign. And we have often times heard it said, and quite properly so, that if there is anyone in public office that should be independent it is the one who occupies a position of trust on any of the benches in the state of Michigan.

I believe, my friends, that this plan is practical, and I believe it will work. I do not share the suggestion that has been made that any one of these candidates, if elected, will go onto the bench with the idea that he is to serve only some part of the state of Michigan. I say that with some feeling, my friends, because I have never, to my knowledge, known of any of the several judges who have served in various parts of the state ever having been accused of serving any particular part of the state at the expense of the state at large. Supreme court justices are selected to interpret the law, and as far as I have been able to interpret it, the law in Oceana county and the law in Wayne are absolutely the same when it comes to principles of law, and I don't believe that anyone that we may select under this plan would be addicted to any other practice than to follow the customs of those who have preceded him.

It has pleased me during this convention to note the respect and satisfaction that has been pledged by fellow colleagues to the circuit judges of the state of Michigan and beyond, and which they have personally accepted for the work they have done. I join, my friends, most heartily in endorsing this plan, and request that the delegates do likewise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bledsoe, there are some 5 speakers seeking recognition ahead of you. The Chair will be glad to recognize you in your turn. Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Point of information.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: State your point, Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: I would like to ask how many alternate plans are on the desk and whether or not we might have a copy of all proposed methods of selecting supreme court justices. I have distributed the ones that I have, but while we are debating, if we could have copies and know the number of other plans available, I think it might be worthwhile.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will ask the secretary to state how many amendments currently are pending to sections g or a.

SECRETARY CHASE: There is this pending amendment. There is one offered by Mr. Higgs and another one on file by Mr. Danhof.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If it is possible, Mr. Secretary, will you see to it that copies are made available to all delegates?

SECRETARY CHASE: I would be glad to.

MR. HIGGS: Copies of the Higgs amendment are on the desks, and the only one I don't have a copy of is the Danhof amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I hesitate to make this comment because to date I have been getting along very amicably with my esteemed and learned seatmate on my left, Dr. Pollock, but I feel constrained to comment on some of his remarks. He made a statement to the effect that this plan had been repudiated, regurgitated, and a lot of other things, which I didn't feel was at all justified or proven by the facts or by the experiences or by the record. But he did go on to make one statement which I think he proved quite conclusively when he said he was not a very good mathematician. He made a statement to the effect that under this plan some 1/3 of the people would elect 2/3 of the justices. Now, of course, the plan we have before us now is significantly different than the original plan, in that it leaves the districting outstate to the legislature. But if any of you really want to look at the arithmetic of the deal, right here in our journal, on page 467, there is listed what the population of the various districts would have been had the original districting as proposed therein been carried out. I want to submit that the smallest of those districts numerically speaking, district 2, would have had a population of 690,259, while the largest of the districts, district 5, would have had a population of 999,019, which is not significantly larger than the smallest district, and the average of the 3 Wayne county districts would have been 888,776.

This isn't very pertinent to the pending plan, because when we leave it to the legislature they might not follow the exact lines as laid down in the original proposal. But when someone tries to convey the idea that this is way off base and inequitable from the standpoint of the districts and their population, I think we ought to check up on that. Again if any of you want to look at those figures they are on page 467 of the journal.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Powell, would you yield to Dr. Pollock for a response? Mr. Powell yields to Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Powell, now that you are talking about figures I can use them also, and of course it doesn't bother me too much about the figures. I was giving only approximations, and I must confess to be a little bit irritated that this seems to be treated as merely a matter for lawyers and judges. It happens that the people are interested in the courts, too, but since judges have to come from lawyers, it is interesting, as I pointed out in a letter to Mr. Prettie on February 5, that out of 7,710 practicing law in the state, 4,215 reside in Wayne county. So that this plan would give 1/3 of the seats on the supreme court to approximately 55 per cent of the state's legal population. This is just another way of indicating the inequalities of this plan. Of course, another way, which isn't quite as exact as this, is to assume, as we do with congressional districts that there is one genius in every district. Now if you said a candidate could be a candidate in any district whether he resided in it or not, then, of course, it would be a little bit different. But, although I haven't yet found that in your proposal, it may be there. If you allowed a candidate from outside the district to be a candidate within the district, this would help a little bit.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: I hardly feel that those comments deserve any reply. We aren't trying to work out an arrangement to give a certain percentage of attorneys a job here. We are talking about districts that involve people. I gave you those figures there to show how this arrangement works out. I am sure there are ample numbers of qualified attorneys in the various districts, as far as that is concerned. But again I submit that this wasn't based on any arrangement to try to farm out positions for deserving members of the bar. And when he says this is a matter that has had too much discussion by the attorneys, I am sure that those involved in it right now aren't attorneys. We are speaking on behalf of our constituents and the people generally throughout the state from the layman's point of view.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, as a practical matter the district plan merely gives to the people a practice that has been followed for years by the political conventions. These conventions have consistently nominated candidates for the supreme court from areas which had no justices upon the court. This is not to say that these justices are representing the areas from which they now come, nor would it any other way mean that if they were elected by the people they would be elected as representatives in the sense in which members of the legislature represent their constituents. I do not feel that you need to worry about the matter of a member of the supreme court coming from a particular district of the state. Nothing in the history of the court tends to tell us that that makes any difference.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I have been listening to this debate for some time now, and I quite agree with Dr. Pollock that this is not a matter that we laymen should stay out of. I would like to ask, first of all, in general what are the objectives of the convention in writing the judicial article? As far as the supreme court is concerned, we are seeking quality justices who, in the eyes of the people, should not be aligned too closely with political parties, and therefore we have a real tough problem, because in the thinking of some people we have too much politics on the supreme court. As far as I am concerned politics, to me, is not a dirty word. I don't see anything wrong with politics. I like it, and I think politics serve a basic function. I could talk about that for a long time, but I am not going to any more. But I do, however, resent the charge that the judiciary should be above politics. Politics serve a fundamental purpose, and is fundamentally the service of the people of the state.

Dr. Nord charges that this plan is politically motivated. I say that this is not so. I say that this plan is motivated by a desire of some of the people here present to get a supreme court set up that will not be tied to politics, and in their effort to do that they have come up with this district plan which, in my opinion, is not a plan which is going to guarantee representation—not representation—is going to guarantee judicial quality from which the people can understand and know who they are voting for when they vote. The district plan, in my opinion, is merely a mechanical device to get people elected on a basis where they don't have to campaign on a statewide basis, nor be financed by a political party. The district plan is a mechanical device to avoid the burdensome expense of a statewide campaign, and to make it possible for supreme court justices to be elected on a nonpartisan basis. And that is why this plan was developed, to get away from politics, I believe; to suit those people who feel that politics is bad. I think that we should support the district plan.

There is one flaw in it, and I think I know why it is there. The flaw in the district plan is that we didn't set up 9 equal areas with no regard whatever to population, and elect justices from each district and forget population entirely. Then we would have been on solid ground. Then you would say in some of those areas, one of those 9 areas there wouldn't be enough high quality lawyers. I will grant that is true. And so probably the originators of this plan came up with the idea, well, we will divide this up into districts that are equal to a degree on a population basis so that the supply of lawyers would be sufficient to provide quality justices. And I can understand their logic. From my point of view, the weakness that we admit when we did that is the people then began to think we are developing a representative plan in the supreme court, and this is not the truth. We are only trying to develop a plan which will elect quality justices on a nonpartisan basis, and the only way that this can be done is on a district basis so that we can avoid the burdensome expense of a statewide campaign.

I suggest that we support the district plan for these reasons, and very seriously consider changing the thing to cover 9 judicial districts of equal area, and forget population.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Nord a question through the Chair, if I may.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer, Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: Mr. Nord stated that this was a political move, and that it would assure the outstate judges as being Republican. I wondered just exactly which districts he was so sure were Republican. I would really like —

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The gentleman does not care to answer, Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: Okay. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I just want to make a few very brief observations with regard to this matter. I concur with Judge Pugsley that there is no cutover land in the state with regard to judicial timber and that there is comparable material in all sections of the state. I think that we ought to develop, therefore, a statewide approach to the election of supreme court justices.

Much talk has been made here with regard to the program of the judiciary committee. As originally stated, Mr. Prettie began his talk by inviting our attention to the report of the judiciary committee, and one of the reports says that in this district plan "Balance would be maintained in the type of men sitting on the court between all parts of the state", between the type of men. I submit that the question before us is not so much the question of the type of men, but the question of judicial philosophy. What is before us in Mr. Prettie's judgment is an apparent defect. I don't know what defect is apparent to him, but the criticism which I have found that has been assessed by some is that the general trend of decisions of the supreme court as now constituted is not to their liking; it is not to their liking because it has a judicial philosophy which is different from the judgment of others in the state. I submit that the judicial philosophy is what we select when we select judicial officers. Yes, we wish men of the highest caliber; we wish men of competence, of reverence for law, of reverence for American institutions, of government of laws and not of men, of respect of all regardless of race, color and creed. These are vital components of views and of character. But I submit what is also important if we are thinking in terms of the next 50 years is developing the kind of means by which we can select those who exert the judicial power in such a way that it reflects the need for change and make law an instrument of justice, an instrument of adjustment in the collision between men and men and group and group.

I can only recite to you, if I may, not only a judgment of my own, but a judgment of President Theodore Roosevelt in an annual message to congress in 1908, in which he gave this as his philosophy of judicial philosophy:

> The chief lawmakers in our country may be and often are the judges, because they are the final seat of authority. Every time they interpret contracts, property, vested rights, due process of law, liberty, they necessarily enact into law parts of a system of social philosophy, and as such interpretation is fundamental they give direction to all lawmaking. The decisions of the courts on economic and social questions depend upon their economic and social philosophy, and for the peaceful progress of our people during the twentieth century we shall owe most to those judges who hold to a twentieth century economic and social philosophy, and not to a long outgrown philosophy.
> Of course a judge's views on progressive social philosophy are entirely second in importance to his possession of a high and fine character, but it also is true that judges, like executives and legislators, should hold sound views on all the questions of public policy which are of vital interest to the people.

I submit it is this kind of philosophy which we ought to share as a criterion for the development of a judicial article in our state. And I submit, too, that the article which is now in the 1908 constitution as amended is best calculated to produce that kind of judicial philosophy. And the fact is that in the last 10 or 15 years we have been getting that kind of judicial philosophy on the court, and it has been one that has enhanced Michigan's judicial stature throughout the nation, and it has been one which has given heart and hope to our citizens.

I submit that if we are going to have balance in the type of men, what we really need is balance in the type of judicial philosophy, and this judicial philosophy can only be selected by all of the people in all sections of the state voting for all of the judges. And I submit, as that is the principle, it would mean that we have faith in the democratic processes, we have faith in the people to select their judges, the kind of judges who in character and philosophy reflect their own, and by reflecting their own reflect the will of the sovereign people in self governing process. I urge that we defeat this amendment and return to the article as we now have it in the constitution.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I assure you that I shall not burden you with a long dissertation. I first, however, want to express my appreciation for the remarks made by Judge Pugsley. Those of us who have known him through the years—and there are many of us—have abiding faith both in his integrity and as a fine character both on and off the bench. Having worked with him and the other members of the judiciary committee, I want to say to you that I believe every one of us in the judiciary committee has faith that his presence and work there has been sort of a benediction.

I do want to say, however, that I don't believe that there is a person within the sound of my voice who will deny that he countenances or believes for one moment that the people from his district, that the people from this commonwealth don't have the right and the abiding desire to elect their judges, to vote for their judges. If there is anybody in here that disagrees with me on that, I certainly wish you would hold up your hand. I am going to look around and see. I don't see any hands. Oh, I see one, I believe. I see one.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bledsoe, the Chair hopes you will complete your sentences promptly and proceed in order.

MR. BLEDSOE: Here is what this district plan amounts to. It means simply this: you go back to your constituents and ask them to disfranchise themselves, suggest that they disfranchise themselves because we have committed ourselves up here in such a way that you will not be able to vote for your supreme court justices throughout the entire state. That is exactly what we are asking. That is the bill of goods we are taking back to our constituents. That is a tremendous inconsistency. I think it ought to be left right there, and Dr. Pollock has a complete answer to this matter. The people want to elect their judges not from the Escanaba district or any other single district, but they want to be able to vote for all of their judges on the supreme court of this state who have the final say over their life, liberty and property if it happens to get entwined into judicial processes. It is just that simple to me, and I think "Judge" Pollock has hit the nail on the head when he said we must not consider this matter just for judges and lawyers, but the people whom we represent here, and whose franchise and sovereignty we hold in the palm of our hands here in the nature of a trust are the first to be considered. And from what I have been able to gather, the people everywhere in Michigan want the right to vote for all of their supreme court judges.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Allen.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Chairman, I pass.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Allen passes. Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I presume it is needless to mention the fact that the district plan has been one of my choices since the beginning of this convention, and I make no excuses for it. I think I told this committee at one time that I had some idea that at one time perhaps an appointive system was the best system. I presume, as most lawyers, I had become discouraged or disgusted with something or other in the practice before the courts, and I presume that had something to do with my feeling at the time. I think you will recall that I said that I abruptly changed my mind, and since that time I have continuously felt that the election of the judges by the people, their being responsible to the people, was the best manner of electing judges. I further felt that they should be elected, if elected at all, on a nonpartisan basis, my feeling being that the courts should be as far removed from politics as possible. And you carry that a step further, and you attempt to determine what is the best method to bring about that situation. Well, of all the plans that I have heard here, or of all the plans that have been discussed over the years, I finally come to the conclusion that the only answer, especially so far as a primary was concerned, if you are going to elect the judges on a nonpartisan basis, the only solution was a district plan, and that is the reason I am one of the sponsors of this plan, and it doesn't make any difference whether I belong to one party or another I am still interested in seeing that we produce the best judiciary that it is possible for us to do.

For a few moments I would like to bring up some of the questions that have been raised by some of the other speakers here. The question, I believe, was asked by Delegate Hanna, and I believe it was posed by someone else, too, that this would freeze into the constitution 3 justices from Wayne county forever. I call your attention to something that has been brought up on this floor before—that Illinois has had a district plan in the election of their supreme court for, I believe, 50 or 100 years, and the only information we could get was that it had worked fine. Now, the only thing that had not changed with the times was perhaps the situation of change of population. The witness before our committee indicated that for years there was 1 justice of the supreme court from Cook county, and the rest of them, 6, I believe, from outstate. They also said that the new judicial article which was being proposed at this time was leaving the supreme court number at the same 7, but proposing 3 for Cook county and the other 4 from outstate. But still they swear by the district plan. They have no idea of changing it. They said it was utterly impossible to nominate anyone—if you wanted the judges elected it was utterly impossible to nominate them on a statewide basis. Therefore they were completely sold on the district plan. The only change they are making was granting in the new article 3 to Cook county and the rest from outstate.

Now I see no insurmountable task even though we suggest in this constitution that there be 3 from Wayne county. Assume for the sake of argument, that Wayne county were blasted off the map—and I hope it doesn't happen until I move out of there—but assume for the sake of argument that it happens. How long do you think it would take a constitutional amendment to correct any injustice that may be brought about by this situation? It may even be possible, if that happened, that the 3 supreme court justices from Wayne county might be involved in the holocaust too.

Now, Delegate Pollock raises a question about—at least refers to this as being similar to apportionment of the legislature. I think Mr. Pollock knows there is no such comparison here. In fact, I see no great difficulty as far as setting up the districts on a judicial circuit basis. In fact, I see no serious problem if the population in the various districts vary from time to time. I submit that presently, and for at least 25, 30 or perhaps 40 years, there have been changes in the population of the various circuit court districts, and yet there is no redistricting as such. It hasn't become necessary. The only thing that becomes necessary is when the case load becomes such that they need to increase the number of judges. I see no problem as far as that matter is concerned. I would like to call your attention, also, to the fact that Mr. Pollock raises the question that this plan bears no relationship to the lawyer population. I hope that before we are through with this debate somebody will call his attention to the fact that his attention was called to an analysis of the lawyer population in the districts as was originally proposed, and by the time you eliminated office lawyers, corporation lawyers, those who were not actually practicing law—and, incidentally, the most of them reside in the Wayne county area or the metropolitan area—that your lawyer population on a district basis was comparatively equal. And I can't pass without saying that I don't think Wayne county or any other district has any monopoly on smart lawyers. I exclude myself from that. But we have seen over the years many lawyers who you and I have concluded should have been on the supreme court, but because of our system of election have never had the opportunity.

Now, Mr. Nord raises the question about this plan being set up—I assume he hesitated short of making the accusation that it would guarantee a Republican court. I expect that perhaps the most of the minority, I hope some of them, might see the light here tonight, but I would assume most of the minority would be opposed to this plan based on that one thought of Mr. Nord's alone, whether it came from him or somebody else, that this plan would be a definite plan to elect Republicans to the court. I submit that those who are not interested in this plan are not particularly interested in creating a true nonpartisan bench. I submit further that that is exactly what the majority of this state want today. That is one reason, and the main reason, I am for it. I might say further that I am so firm in my conviction that we should have a nonpartisan court—and, as I have said before, I see no other way to do it except through this plan—that I wouldn't hesitate in the least to support a competent Democrat for that bench, and I think there are many lawyers around this room that would say the same thing.

Now Mr. Bledsoe made the statement that the people have an abiding desire to vote for their own judges, and that if you voted for this plan you would be in effect disenfranchising your constituents. Well, if that is what I am doing by voting for it, then I am disenfranchising the people that voted for me. But I say that my people never told me I should vote against this plan, nor did they tell me I should vote for any other plan. I think they relied on my judgment as to what I thought was best as far as setting up this bench was concerned.

I cannot go on without saying something further. Mr. Bledsoe used this argument in our committee, and I think it is rather significant. He praised Judge Pugsley, and I think rightly so, because I think Judge Pugsley, as are the other judges here sitting as delegates, are the respected members, and have been for years, of our bench, and Mr. Bledsoe stated specifically that if a judge were elected on a district basis, such as Judge Pugsley, he would have no hesitancy of saying that he would get a fair deal before Judge Pugsley, and he went on to say how he had tried a number of cases resulting from the Ferguson grand jury when Judge Pugsley sat in Detroit almost constantly for 2 years or thereabouts—a long period of time—and I don't think anybody raised a question at that time that Judge Pugsley was balkanized. And that raises another question. I am rather surprised that when this plan first was brought to the attention of this convention we were immediately accused of balkanizing the court. I wonder why we haven't heard the argument tonight. They must have decided that it was not such a good argument.

Along that line I would like to call the attention of many of the delegates to arguments that have been had on this floor with respect to what certain judges have done in the southern states—federal judges—with respect to civil rights, and it has been said here time and again that if it had not been for the fact that those men were federal judges they would not have advanced on civil rights as far as they had. I submit to you—and I am not arguing for the federal system of appointment of judges, because I am against it—the only reason for the appointment of federal judges was the simple reason given to us by Mr. Winters of the judicature society, which was that there was just no other way to do it. They couldn't elect them nationwide. But what I am trying to say is that regardless of that, will anybody in this room say that a federal judge is not appointed from his own state? Will anybody in this room say that those federal judges did not stand up to their authority, their convictions as a judge of the United States and not of that state when they passed upon some of these serious problems? I submit that if there is any basis for the accusation that there is balkanization in this district plan, then you might as well apply it to the federal court system itself.

Needless to say, I think I have answered most of the things which I wanted to, but I am very serious in this matter. I think that we have arrived at a time when, if the delegates desire very seriously to do what they know the people of this state want—that is, to place their courts strictly on a nonpartisan basis—then this is the way to do it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Iverson, would you yield to Mr. Ostrow for a question?

MR. IVERSON: Yes.

MR. OSTROW: Mr. Iverson, did I understand you to say that the district plan had worked successfully in Illinois?

MR. IVERSON: That is right.

MR. OSTROW: Would you then disagree with Action Journal 22 of the committee on judicial branch, December 7, 1961, which says:

> Appearing before the committee was Mr. Albert Jenner of Chicago, Illinois, and past president of the bar association, who commented on the court structure and judicial selection system of the state of Illinois. He made the following points:
> 1. The present court system of the state of Illinois, and in particular Cook county, is completely unworkable and has caused a breakdown in the judicial system in Cook county.

Then it goes on to say that in November, 1962, they are presenting a new judicial article which will provide for 4 judicial districts with 3 supreme court justices being elected from Cook county instead of the one that is now being elected from there.

MR. IVERSON: That is exactly what I said, Mr. Ostrow, and I agree with you entirely. He stated that the Cook county court setup was a monstrosity in effect, and that is the very thing which we have already done to prohibit any such a thing as happened there. I suggest that you have—I believe Mr. Prettie has at his fingertips—the testimony of Mr. Jenner in response, I believe, to questions asked by myself, and if you find that he said anything different than I did with respect to the supreme court I will apologize to you.

MR. OSTROW: I don't want your apology. I just want to get this straightened out. Didn't he at the same time say for years and years they were unable to get more than 1 supreme court justice provided for from Cook county because of the influence of the rural areas in the legislature?

MR. IVERSON: I think that is right, but they have got it now in this judicial article.

MR. OSTROW: You mean they are going to get it if the people approve it in November, 1962?

MR. IVERSON: I don't know why they wouldn't approve it if Cook county has 68 per cent of the population.

MR. OSTROW: Well, I mean, just for the sake of accuracy, they haven't got it. They are going to vote on it November, 1962.

MR. IVERSON: I would like the opportunity of furnishing that testimony to Mr. Ostrow, because it was as I suggest.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lesinski.

MR. LESINSKI: As a layman I would like to say a few words. The district plan refers to judicial circuits. Perhaps the movers of this amendment could supply charts showing the population of the judicial circuits and locations so we can see how this gerrymandering can be accomplished. Now I do have a districting plan coming up in another article to which I hope to receive the same argument in its support.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. McAllister.

MR. McALLISTER: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, most of the delegates of both political parties have expressed their desire to have the people elect their officials. We have passed an amendment allowing the people to fill the vacancies in judicial offices by their votes. It is my opinion this is one of the finest things that we have done, and it is very popular with the people.

The supreme court justices who appeared before our committee complained about the time required and the cost of campaigning statewide for the offices they hold. The claim of many is that the people are not acquainted with the candidates that they vote for. All complaints are solved by the district plan proposed. The cost of campaigning will be within the finances of the candidate. The people will know and have the opportunity to meet their candidate. Each area in the state will be represented on the court so that someone who has complete knowledge will be present when the case is decided in the area involved. The people in the state will have a greater knowledge of and interest in the supreme court. There will never be a possibility of having all justices from one area of the state. The court will be completely separated from political considerations. If there is not a candidate from the area acceptable to the people, any candidate running can run in that area where there is not a suitable candidate. If the justice does not conduct himself properly he can be more easily disposed of. One third of the people will elect 2/3 of the justices, and the remaining 2/3 will elect the remainder. Anything we can do here to give the people a greater part in the government of Michigan will make our government better and more secure. I recommend the adoption of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Blandford.

MR. BLANDFORD: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I feel that the real merit of the districting plan has not been covered this evening. In my humble judgment the district plan for the supreme court is a mere enlargement of the district plan which is now in effect for circuit courts and proposed for the appellate courts. Practically speaking, I can visualize deserving and qualified circuit judges moving up to the appellate court and finally to the supreme court. I like this movement up through the ranks. I feel that it insures qualified supreme court justices. It will insure, in my judgment, the election to the supreme court of judges who have had circuit and appellate court experience. This is not true today under our present system. In my judgment the district will assure the people of Michigan of the best qualified and experienced supreme court possible. Our supreme court for the first time will be composed of judges, not politicians. On this basis I heartily support the district plan.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: I don't want to disappoint Mr. Iverson, so I will make the charge that the court is being balkanized so we can get that out of the way. Mr. Iverson raised the point, which is probably not pertinent here, of the federal judiciary in the south and their courageous stand on civil rights, and the fact that if they were elected they probably couldn't have done this. However, I think Mr. Downs laid this argument to rest when he said this depends on everybody having the right to vote. Now, it seems to me that if we just take this field of civil rights for an example and relate it to Michigan, and see what would happen with a balkanized malapportioned court, it might result in the same thing we have in the state legislature, where for the past 10 years a malapportioned legislature hasn't seen fit to pass any meaningful civil rights legislation, and I think this might be projected in the views of the supreme court if—

MR. LUNDGREN: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lundgren, the Chair believes your point of order is well taken. However, the Chair has allowed considerable latitude on the part of prior speakers. Mr. Hodges, the Chair trusts you will —

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, I am trying to relate the question of a court set up on districts, and the only thing we have comparable is the state legislature, and I am just pointing this out as an example in saying I think the best type of court for all kinds is where all votes count equally and can be brought to bear on the court. I think that anything less than this allows more pressure from one side or one group than another set of voters, and I think we would be remiss in our duty if we allowed the court to be subjected to minority pressure of this sort. Therefore I speak against the plan.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bledsoe. Mr. Bledsoe passes. Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, in answer to Mr. Ostrow I would like to just read a few excerpts from the testimony of this witness referred to:

> Question. Do you find that the election of the supreme court justices on this district basis has any tendency to polarize or balkanize those judges in their thoughts on the supreme bench?
> Answer. No, and I can say this after 31 years of practicing law—and I am a litigation lawyer, and I am up in that court all the time. I suspect that I have briefed and argued at least 150 cases in that Supreme Court of Illinois—it has not balkanized those judges at all. One would think it might, but what happens is this: for example, Judge Bristo in our third circuit died about 4 weeks ago, and the governor has called a convention for the selection of a judge to succeed Judge Bristo in that circuit. That circuit runs from the Wabash river across—about dead center in Illinois—all the way across to the Mississippi river, or to the other side of the state; in any event, through our state capitol, Sangamon county, and so forth.
> The judge from that circuit, from that district has been, I think—this will have to go back to certainly before my time—has always been from some small county in that circuit. The 2 large counties are Sangamon and Macon on the western end of the circuit, and they just have not insisted, really. They could dominate the convention pretty well, but they have always selected a fine judge, and that is a fairly evenly balanced district. Sometimes it is a Democrat and sometimes a Republican.

Now, another question:

> Question. Do you find that the election of these justices of the supreme court on a district basis has a tendency to encourage better lawyers to run for the office?
> Answer. Very much so. For the reasons—first, let us take campaign expenses. In this day and age, campaigning through the state of Illinois is really a tough job and, for a judge to really campaign throughout the state of Illinois for judge of the supreme court, it costs a minimum of $45,000 to $50,000, an absolute minimum. You cannot do anything in the state of Illinois in a campaign. It will run at least $50,000.
> Let us say that Judge House—who is now the baron House, who is the judge from Nashville county from down near the Ohio and Mississippi river—he runs. He gets up to Chicago, he gets up to the northwestern part of the state, up around Galena where General Grant was born. The people up there do not know who Judge House is from a bale of hay, and we in Cook county—except some of us lawyers who keep alert on that sort of thing—they would not know; but they know who Judge House is down in the first district, which is the southern "little Egypt;" what we call "little Egypt" in Illinois.
> So that has a tendency to bring out in that area, and it is a pretty good population, a good man.

That is an example of what the testimony of this man from Illinois was.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. Chairman, I think it must be apparent to all the delegates here that the big problem is that there isn't any good way to select a justice of the supreme court, lacking Divine intervention, anyway. However, it seems to me that the best prospect we have here is to do the same thing we do in just about every other field of human endeavor, to try to find a well qualified man who has demonstrated his competence as a judge and attempt to promote him. That is what we follow in industry, in the school system and about everything else. If we can achieve a system which does that, and can guarantee that the justices of our supreme court will have judicial experience, we will have accomplished a great deal that the people of the state can thank us for. No plan actually in existence now, other than some sort of district plan, can accomplish that. Any time an appointment is made by an executive officer, the chief executive officer, his attention must be directed to the good that it might do his candidacy or his party. We have even seen that in the federal system where 2 judges that I think all lawyers look on with reverence, Judges Augustus Hand and Learned Hand—probably recognized by all lawyers as being the oustanding judges in the country—never were appointed to the United States supreme court, and never had a chance to be appointed to the United States supreme court. They simply were not political figures.

Here in this plan, it seems to me, are the best opportunities we have for the people of these districts to recognize a competent circuit judge and to provide for his promotion first in this intermediate court of appeals and then to the supreme court, if he demonstrates his competence there.

If this were a matter of trying to represent areas of the state, as Mr. Hodges would suggest, I am afraid I would have to be against it. If anyone will take a pencil and figure out what they say in this amendment, you will find that all of Michigan north of Bay City, which is approximately 3/4 of it, would constitute 1 judicial district. Well, I am from that area, and if I didn't believe that this plan had merit in securing to us a far better judiciary than any other plan that we might come up with I couldn't possibly back the plan. I think it is far less political than any other plan that we might hope to adopt, and that it will secure the best possible judicial talent.

In answer to Mr. Hanna, I find I must disagree with him. The idea of giving away 3 justices is only borne out by historical fact. Since 1910 Wayne county's percentage of the population of this state has run as follows: in 1920, 33 per cent; in 1930, 39 per cent; in 1940, 38 per cent; in 1950, 38 per cent; and in 1960, 34 per cent. Thirty-four per cent of the people live in Wayne county, will elect 1/3 of the justices of the supreme court. We can't get any closer. Sixty-six per cent of the people, the balance of the state, will elect 2/3 of the supreme court. Again we can't possibly get any closer. The great merit of the plan, however, is not particularly this matter of population, but simply the matter of the promotion of able, qualified and competent judges. I invite your attention to the judicial experience of the present supreme court.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Dehnke, Iverson, Hoxie, McAllister, Rood, Pugsley and Prettie. Does any delegate desire to have the amendment read again? If not, those in favor of the amendment will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The Chair is in doubt. Those in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Dehnke, Iverson, Hoxie, McAllister, Rood, Pugsley and Prettie. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment the yeas are 62; the nays are 64.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read the next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Higgs offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "The supreme court shall consist of 9 justices, to be elected by the electors of the state. The term of office shall be 8 years. Not more than 3 terms of office shall expire at the same time.

Justices of the supreme court shall be elected at statewide partisan elections. Incumbent justices of the supreme court may become candidates for reelection by filing a declaration of intention as provided by law. Other candidates may be nominated by state party conventions or by petition as provided by law. No candidate shall be nominated by the convention of a party to oppose an incumbent which it originally nominated and who has filed a declaration of intention. Persons nominated at party conventions shall be listed on the ballot under the party name and label of the party nominating them. Incumbents filing a declaration of intention shall be listed on the ballot under the party name and label of the party originally nominating them. Persons nominated by petition shall be listed on the ballot under no party name or label. No vacancy shall be filled by appointment.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Higgs. Do you desire recognition, Mr. Higgs?

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, you have a copy of this amendment on your desks, and I would like to call your attention to the 5 basic objectives that are sought to be accomplished by this amendment. First of all, it seeks to reinstate the language of the original committee proposal that the supreme court consist of 9 justices to be elected for 8 year terms. I think the amendment that we had adopted providing for 10 year terms is somewhat long, if you will bear in mind that we have an original proposal that permits a judge to run for office providing he is not 70 years of age. As the term gets longer it becomes permissible for a judge to sit on the supreme court that much longer. He could be 80 years old rather than 78. I think an 8 year term is long enough.

I would like to bring to the supreme court a truly elective system. This would be best accomplished by removing the incumbency designation and removing the appointive feature. As we all know, we do not have an elective supreme court. Of the 8 justices on the supreme court, 5 were placed there originally by appointment directly to the supreme court and a sixth began his judicial career by appointment. We have defeated a plan that I think would permit an elective system, nonpartisan by districts. We have seen objections raised as to the cost of campaigning statewide, and that if we want a truly elective system, nonpartisan, we would have to go to districts. But this has been defeated at the moment, and I believe that if we are going to have an elective system which is consistent we must go to a partisan election. And this, I think, is one of the most significant aspects of this particular amendment which is before you.

I propose that the judges be elected at statewide partisan elections. One of the greatest criticisms that we have heard through the years has been the criticism that candidates who are selected by partisan nomination are then expected to take a bath, cleanse themselves of partisan relationships and then run statewide nonpartisan. This is basically a fraud on our people. They go to the polling place, and they are expected to vote in a contest which allegedly is nonpartisan, but which we all know is truly a partisan race. Let us reconcile this inconsistency. I would like to reconcile it in favor of a nonpartisan nomination, but if we are going to have a nonpartisan election we just can't do it statewide at any reasonable kind of expense and without special interest groups financing the candidate, and unless he has a lot of money of his own. I think if we want a truly elective system we must remove the incumbency designation and, in lieu thereof, place the partisan label.

Fourth, one of the problems even in the system that we have today, which is allegedly nonpartisan, is the fact that the candidate, if he wants to be renominated, must go back to the party convention in order to run again. While he is on the bench, allegedly he is a nonpartisan. However, he must bear renomination in mind throughout his tenure—throughout the period that he sits on the bench—in making judicial decisions, many of which decisions are truly decisions which involve basic philosophy and policy, and some of which have been at least interpreted as partisan.

It has the appearance—at least in the minds of the people, I think—that judges who are sitting on the bench must keep in mind that they have got to go back to the party to run for office again. It just isn't consistent. If we can't resolve this inconsistency by making both the nomination and the election nonpartisan, then I suggest to you the only honest way to do it is to resolve the inconsistency by making both the nomination and the election partisan.

But my plan has another feature that I think is unique. While I would require that the candidate carry the partisan label, if the candidate nominated by his party is successful and is elected to office, then I would remove the partisan obligation by permitting him to renominate himself by affidavit and run again. In this way, I think we would combine the best features of the partisan type of election and the nonpartisan type. We would, I think, be requiring the candidate to run under the label of his party; we would, I think, provide a truly honest identification; but we would also permit this candidate, if elected, to be in a position where he can exercise his office with a spirit of independence; because once he is there it is only up to him to say whether or not he shall run again. I think that this has an advantage over any appointive plan in that in any appointive plan he runs simply on his record. Here he at least must face the electorate, and he must face a live candidate, and he must actively run, and I think that that is a worthwhile and sound proposition. Now, by making it a truly partisan election, this will permit candidates, regardless of wealth, to run in a statewide election without becoming involved either in a tremendous personal expense—as you have heard, it could run into maybe $45,000, $50,000 and upwards. It will also permit him to be independent of any support of any special groups unidentified which might contribute to his campaign in various ways.

I would urge that you give my amendment serious consideration. This is advanced most seriously. I do not see any reason to fill the vacancies by appointment. If we have 9 justices on the supreme court and a vacancy occurs, I don't know really why that court cannot operate with 8 justices until the next election inasmuch as the court is now operating with 8 justices, and, in addition to having 8 justices, at that time they will also be assisted because they will have an intermediate court of appeals if the committee proposal is adopted. I think that you have heard most all of the arguments both ways in both of these plans. It is not an easy question for any of us to answer. There probably isn't any perfect way of doing this, but let us at least remove this hypocritical type of approach where we nominate by party and we run nonpartisan. I think that the public will accept a truly partisan election, and in a much better spirit than they will if we continue basically the same type of selective process that we now have. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment to section a of Committee Proposal 91 offered by Mr. Higgs. Those who are in favor of the amendment will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to section a of Committee Proposal 91?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Danhof offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "The supreme court shall consist of 9 justices to be elected on a nonpartisan statewide basis. The term of office shall be for 8 years and not more than 3 terms of office shall expire at the same time. Each political party at party convention may nominate 1 candidate for election for each position to be filled. Any incumbent justice whose term is to expire may become a candidate for reelection by filing an affidavit of candidacy, in the form and manner as prescribed by law, not less than 180 days prior to the expiration of his term. Any person otherwise qualified to be a supreme court justice may become a candidate for election upon filing a nominating petition, in the form and manner prescribed by law, signed by qualified electors of this state in a number equal to 3 per cent of the total vote cast for the office of governor at the last previous election.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee—

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Point of information, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: State your point, Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Are copies of this amendment in the hands of the delegation?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair believes they are, Mr. Woolfenden. You may proceed, Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, we have had numerous votes which seem to demonstrate that we are probably not going to depart too greatly from the present procedure. I submit to you that the first 2 sentences here are basically of the committee proposal, section a. The remainder you may have viewed in essence this afternoon when we considered the amendment by Mr. Hanna. There have been some changes thereto in language and in shortening of the section. In essence it provides for 9 justices on a nonpartisan ballot. It provides that they may be nominated by party, an incumbent may file an affidavit for reelection, and any other individual who is otherwise qualified may become a candidate by filing nominating petitions with a number of 3 per cent. The form and the manner of the affidavit and of the nominating petitions are left to the legislature who will prescribe what type of petitions, where they shall be filed, and perhaps the idea that not more than such a percentage may come from any particular county.

I think that the committee of the whole and the convention have indicated a desire to elect. I take no tremendous pride in authorship. I have stolen, begged, borrowed and taken from numerous other plans. I submit that we have discussed this matter quite frequently at great length. This particular plan provides for live opponents. Nobody runs against a shadow or record. If you want live opponents, this is your opportunity. Perhaps we have had the anomaly of partisan nomination and nonpartisan election. We are opening up the primary and the nominating idea.

I would ask that we can perhaps speedily bring this matter to a conclusion for this evening, and ask for a vote on this particular matter.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Well, will Mr. Danhof yield for a question?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You have the floor, Mr. Woolfenden, if Mr. Danhof cares to answer.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Mr. Danhof, do I understand this correctly, that there is no primary election involved in this plan?

MR. DANHOF: Yes.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: There is none?

MR. DANHOF: That is correct.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Am I correct that it would be possible for any number of candidates that wanted to—let's call them self starters—there could be a dozen or 15 candidates run, and without a primary it would be legally possible under this language for the successful candidate to be elected with, let's say, 10 per cent of the vote?

MR. DANHOF: It is possible, Mr. Woolfenden, that you would have a successful candidate with less than a majority of the vote. You are correct. I submit that it probably is not probable, but it is possible, as you well point out.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: I take it that it would be reasonable to anticipate that the candidates on a ballot would include an incumbent justice who has self nominated himself; candidates nominated by the major political parties or perhaps all political parties, and the possibility that there be some individuals who ran so that you would have nominees coming from 3 different categories of selection, is that correct?

MR. DANHOF: It is possible that you could have the incumbent nominated by affidavit, and each of the major political parties will, say, nominate a different candidate. But probably, I imagine the usual procedure would be that the incumbent nominated by the political party would be renominated by that party even if he filed an affidavit. But the other is possible, yes, Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Thank you. Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I submit that this plan is ill considered. I think it would be inexplicable to our constituents if we went back to them and reported that the best we could come up with as a method for the selection of the justices for the highest court of this state would admit of literally a bed sheet ballot with many, many candidates on it. I think it is fantastic to contemplate such a thing, and I vigorously oppose it, and I urge the delegates to vote against this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Davis.

MR. DAVIS: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I rise to support the Danhof amendment. I think that there is considerable unanimity of thinking among the delegates as to the ideal qualifications which would go to supply us with the type of judges which we wish. I think that sometimes a principle which can be simply stated to accomplish this is sometimes difficult. I believe that any plan in which we provide for the election of supreme court justices is confronted with some obstacles.

I would make the conclusion based upon the testimony which has been given in this committee that there is no perfect plan for selection of supreme court justices to meet all of the ideal qualifications. I think that if there had been a perfect plan, that the committee on the judiciary would have presented us with a unanimous or a near unanimous report. This is not the case. I likewise submit that any plan submitted which received serious consideration in the committee of the judiciary or which has received serious consideration on this floor is not entirely bad. In other words, I feel that the issue with which we are confronted is not one which is black or white, but it is one which we refer to as a gray area. In fact, I doubt if there is any delegate in this convention, possessed even with great knowledge as many are, that could predict with accuracy which one of these plans over a 50 year period of time would give us the best supreme court justices. I think that implementation within a plan and factors other than the mechanics itself might well be of more importance than the plan itself. I will state that I do not speak from a position of knowledge or experience, and I don't make this statement to inform the delegates of something with which they are already familiar, but to state that I am aware of this fact myself. However, in my judgment, I feel that this is a good plan.

It has been stated by Mr. Danhof that it is somewhat similar to our present plan. It does rely upon party convention for nomination. I think that it is admittedly somewhat weak at this point. But as I have listened here as an observer, I am of the opinion that some of the alternatives to this plan are less palatable than this. I think that if either political party will attempt to place in nomination people of the highest caliber—which I should think that each party would want to do—that this plan is not as weak as it sounds, and if properly implemented can supply a source of competent people for this position.

I think that we have made an improvement in the filling of vacancies. I recognize that this was not agreed to by all, but in my judgment it allowed for a stamp of approval being place upon any judge by the people of this state before he could be permanently placed in office, and I think that the people of this state will favor this as an improvement. There are other, what I would call somewhat minor, improvements which are presented in this plan, and I submit that at the time this is presented to the people of the state, that in my judgment they will more aptly compare this with our present document than they will with the Constitution of the state of Illinois or Missouri or New Jersey or any other state.

Therefore, in summary, I would say that in my judgment this plan, properly implemented, can place competent judges on the bench. It is a plan which I feel there is no need to apologize to either party for as on a partisan basis. I would feel that it is a plan that either party can accept. It does provide for statewide election of judges, and I think that the people, as I mentioned before, will place their stamp of approval upon it. Compared with our present system, and presented objectively, I feel that this plan will meet with the approval of the voters of this state.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I once again raise a question of parliamentary inquiry. Is this amendment now in order? I would like to direct the Chair's attention to the fact that this is the William Hanna amendment in substance; almost an exact verbatim copy of the Hanna amendment which was voted down. The only change in it is that it is 8 year terms rather than 10 year terms, which was an amendment in itself.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Brown, the Chair would advise that he had consulted with the secretary with respect to the point that you make, and the secretary advises that the amendment is in order.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Why, may I ask? Is it not the same plan?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The plan, while in many respects similar to the amendment offered earlier by Mr. William Hanna which was adopted in part and rejected in part, is in many respects different from the amendment offered by Mr. William Hanna which was adopted in part and rejected in part. For that reason the Chair would rule that it is in order.

MR. G. E. BROWN: May I inquire in what respect it differs?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The language is in many respects different. The term of office is different. The Chair is not prepared to go through the 2 amendments line by line or detail by detail, but the differences are sufficiently significant to make the amendment in order at this time, Mr. Brown, in the opinion of the Chair.

MR. G. E. BROWN: I would then therefore move that the committee rise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Brown moves that the committee do now rise. Those in favor of Mr. Garry Brown's motion that the committee do now rise will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Brown requests a division. Is it supported? It is suported. Those in favor of Mr. Brown's motion that the committee do now rise will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, will you state the motion, please?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The motion is by Mr. Garry Brown that the committee do now rise. Division has been ordered. Those in favor of the motion will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion that the committee rise the yeas are 31; the nays are 92.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The motion does not prevail. On the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof, the Chair will recognize Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I am getting a lot of assistance over here, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The committee will be in order, and Mr. Ford will proceed without assistance.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I rise somewhat timorously to agree with my good friend Charlie Davis, and the only reason that I am a bit hesitant is that he is a candidate next month and I doubt if it would do him much good in his district if they knew he was agreeing with me.

However, I stated earlier this evening that we felt we had reached a stage where a compromise that may not make all of us happy, but which accomplishes substantially in the minds of many of us the best plan that we could come up with after a great deal of effort on the part of everyone who has worked at this, is better than no concrete plan at all. There are features of this plan that leave some of us with some doubts, but certainly the plan incorporates more positive good than any other alternative that has presented itself on the floor or elsewhere. For that reason I support the Danhof amendment and urge that you vote in favor of it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I feel constrained to oppose the amendment, and I point out just one thing. In the last sentence—which permits the nomination of candidates by petitions of 3 per cent of the total vote for governor—I made a quick computation and, as I say, I am not good in arithmetic, but I compute that under this section which is supposed to be, I suppose, an attraction, it would require, according to my computation, 98,661 good signatures on a petition to qualify a candidate. Why not take that sentence out?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, this wasn't my plan. I was for another system of selecting justices. I don't think this is the plan of those who favored the district plan, but we have gone all the way around the mulberry bush, and we are back to practically the wisdom or lack of wisdom of the 1908 convention, with some improvements. It seems to me that we have devoted all the time that we profitably can to this proposal, and that the time has come to settle on the best plan that we can find to bring about some consensus in this committee. I think this is it. It proves that the 1908 convention knew more than we realized, I think, and probably went through the same struggle we have gone through and came out just about where we have. I certainly favor the amendment of Mr. Danhof, and hope the committee will adopt it with a strong bipartisan vote.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I have an amendment on the secretary's desk which I would like to have read at this time.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary will read the amendment offered by Mr. King.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. King offers the following amendment to the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof:

1. Amend the first sentence of the amendment, after "elected" by inserting "by a majority of the votes cast for the office"; so the language will then read, "The supreme court shall consist of 9 justices to be elected by a majority of the votes cast for the office on a nonpartisan statewide basis."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment to the amendment offered by Mr. King, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, it seems to me that without this sort of an amendment, and in view of the committee chairman's response to Mr. Woolfenden's question, we are very clearly changing something which is inherent, I think, in our political way of life. I think that it is inherent in the election of any office that that man so elected be elected by a majority of the people voting on the question.

Now, I see no reason why we can't have a primary. Many times, and perhaps most of the time, there will not be more than 2 candidates. I agree with Judge Leibrand that it is pretty difficult to get 3 per cent of the people who voted in the last gubernatorial election to affix their names to a petition. I suppose that most of the time the incumbent will be assured of the support of the party which first nominated him. So perhaps only once in 50 years would the occasion ever arise whereby we would want and need a primary, but if that situation comes to pass, I think we ought to have a primary to narrow the field down to 2 candidates so that whoever we do elect as the supreme judicial officer, or 1 of the 9 supreme judicial officers of the state, will be there by virtue of the fact that he has received a majority of the votes cast for that office.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. King, will you yield to Mr. Danhof?

MR. KING: Yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. King, I would like to point out that this state has in the past, and probably will in the future, elect its governor with less than a majority vote; that the man who occupies the White House at the present time got less than a majority vote; that justices of the supreme court presently sitting have gotten less than a majority vote, since we have what in effect is cumulative voting, and you may vote for 1 or 2 but you don't have to vote for both, and nobody is quite sure how many votes are cast. I agree with you that you might have more than 2 candidates. I point this out. Judge Leibrand has very pointedly pointed out the number of signatures it is going to take. This was not put in to make it easy. This was put in to make it difficult, but possible. And I submit to you that to do this would require, perhaps, a special election simply for the supreme court justices when you don't even do it for the governor of the state.

Now we at the present time have 2 political parties. Fifty years from now we might have 4 political parties, and the man who is going to get one more vote than the fellow beneath him is going to be elected governor of this state. We at one time had 3 political parties, in the 1948 election, and it is quite possible that this would happen again. We would like to have a majority vote. I submit that in the past we haven't done it; that the possibility that you point out might be only once in 50 years, because if you have an incumbent he is probably going to run way ahead, and anybody who doesn't have the party—but it is possible that somebody without party help, of a sufficient personality to draw enough votes could be elected. This could be election by a majority.

I simply point out to you that if it is not done for other offices, I don't think it is needed in this particular case, and I think you would clutter up and add to the confusion by making a primary absolutely necessary. The more candidates you have active, Mr. King, the better off the incumbent is going to be. This is proved by history.

MR. KING: Mr. Danhof, I suppose any judgment on that should be reserved to find out who the incumbent is. That might be good and it might not be good. But here you have an unlimited opportunity for candidates to jump into this race; as many as can secure the necessary signatures. Now, as far as the presidential situation is concerned, I am not sure whether you are asking me to endorse the system or the results. But I am not here to endorse either one of them. I think that anybody who holds this office ought to be elected by a majority of the people voting for the office. I feel that way about the president of the United States, but it is not within my power to change it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: On the King amendment, Mr. William Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. King, in the past and in other elective offices, unless you want to bar completely minority parties from springing into existence and proposing to the public their platform, your amendment would effectively bar them. I don't believe that minority parties should be stopped from nominating supreme court justices any more than they are legislators or governors or anyone else. It is conceivable under the present constitution and the present statute adopted pursuant thereto that you can have 8 and 9 candidates, because each political party could nominate 1, and it would be impossible for 1 candidate to get a majority.

The second problem, raised by Judge Leibrand, 3 per cent of this total vote cast is a sizable number. If any of the delegates have had the pleasure of attempting to circulate petitions for nonpartisan office and to secure a sizable number of the total votes cast for governor, they will realize that there will be no self starters in this race for supreme court justice. This idea was not new or original with me when I first put in the amendment. This idea was originated by none other than Charles Evans Hughes, that it should be applied to all nominations and conventions to allow a dissatified person to enter the election as an appeal from the dictates of a convention bossed by a particular faction or group of people.

While this petition may never be used, it will serve 2 purposes. First, it will be a psychological sword hanging over the political party that if they nominate only political hacks the people and the bar of this state may rise up and nominate someone else. Secondly, there is no requirement that the political parties nominate. The word used in this is "may," and if some group feels that there must be opposition to the incumbent, they may circulate petitions. Three per cent is a difficult number, but to insist that you have a majority vote, whether you have 1 candidate from each political party or only 2 or 3 candidates, the minute you have more than 2 the insertion of the word majority makes impossible any elective system that we have in the United States or any of the several states.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I wish to oppose the King amendment. It has this additional effect—I agree with everything that Bob Danhof has said about it and what it would do to the language that we have already adopted is write this kind of condition into it. Two conditions, actually—first of all, the present amendment says we elect no less than 3 judges at a time, in effect. Now, in a multiple race of this kind it is impossible to determine the number of votes cast for the office, and there is one way to do it, and that would be for the judicial election to be held for the supreme court completely separate and apart from any other matter that might be on the voting machine at the particular time, and then to prescribe that if there are 3 vacancies the candidates would have to file for a specific vacancy and run head on head, as it's called, against a particular incumbent, for example. If you did these 2 things, then you can carry out the effect of the King language. There is no other way to implement it.

What Mr. King is asking you to vote for is a writing into the system of 2 more rigid requirements, and that is the head on head vote and the separate election which, you may well recognize, becomes a very expensive thing on a statewide basis. I urge you to defeat the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: I had a question of Mr. Martin, and not on the King amendment. Will you let me have it at that time?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You will be recognized at the appropriate time, Dr. Pollock. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. King. Does any delegate desire to have it read again? If not, those in favor of the King amendment will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted. Mr. Garry Brown has offered a substitute for the Danhof amendment, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Brown. The secretary will read the Brown substitute.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. G. E. Brown offers the following substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "The supreme court shall consist of 9 justices to be elected by the electors of the state. The term of office shall be 8 years. Not more than 3 terms of office shall expire at the same time.

Justices of the supreme court shall be nominated at party conventions for election on a nonpartisan statewide basis as provided by law. At the general election preceding the expiration of the term of office of any justice and every 8 years thereafter so long as he retains his office, every justice so elected shall be subject to approval or rejection by the electorate. The electorate of the entire state shall vote on the question of approval or rejection in a manner and form provided by law. Justices of the supreme court in office at the time this constitution takes effect as a result of having been elected shall be eligible to retain their office in accordance with this section.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: On the substitute amendment offered by Mr. Brown, the Chair will recognize Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, when I made the motion to rise previously it was with the idea that the delegates and the members of this committee had not had an opportunity to have a copy of this plan before them. It did not appear it would be available here this evening, and I thought it best that each delegate have a copy of this. Since we are going to get to the plan, however, I shall start to discuss it. I would like to have each of the delegates here reflect back to the commencement of this convention and to reflect back upon what his ideas were, what her ideas were regarding the selection of the judiciary, especially the supreme court. I think if you do reflect back at that time it was the consensus that we should seek a method to obtain the best qualified jurists. Second, that we should eliminate or at least lessen partisan control or effect on that judiciary, and third, the conclusion of these two, that we should have an independent judiciary plus tenure for good jurists.

Now we have had presented to us a district plan, an appointive plan and a so called Hanna amendment which is now in the form of the Danhof amendment before you. Let us compare these 3 plans on the basis of these tenets that we accepted before we met this evening and agreed upon some time ago. First of all, how do these plans compare with respect to the opportunity to select the best qualified jurists? With the district plan, certainly there is a good opportunity to select qualified jurists, but within a limited area. The objections to the district plan in this regard have been that conceivably within a district there will not be such a qualified or the most qualified jurist. This was of course corrected to an extent by saying that the jurists did not have to live within the district. The district plan people recognized this. Then we have the appointive plan. Now certainly this would be good on this score in that it did provide for a so called blue ribbon commission to select competent people who would be presented to the governor for appointment as justices of the supreme court. The objection to this plan, of course, everyone recognizes that a blue ribbon commission is not the way that the people of the state of Michigan want to select their justices. Thirdly, we have the Hanna or the Danhof plan. Now what does this do? It requires that each of the justices of the supreme court keep his eye on his party because he must go back to his party for his nomination or he must run against the party's money, because they can nominate somebody else. This, of course, is not present in the present plan, because he doesn't have to go back for nomination. He doesn't have to run statewide every 8 years.

The second point is, does it lessen the political or partisan control? The district plan being nonpartisan both in the primary and in the general election certainly does eliminate party control, and this scores high in this respect. The appointive plan, no, it does not eliminate the partisan aspects of it because the gubernatorial appointments very likely will be partisan in nature, and you would end up with a majority of the commission having a partisan influence on the selection of your judges.

What about the Danhof plan? This certainly doesn't eliminate the justices of the supreme court from politics, because it says to the justices you must go back to your party every 8 years to get its nomination. Or if you certify yourself for nomination you may find yourself running against your own party and your own party's money and, in addition, running against another party and another party's money; and you will be campaigning statewide—having certified yourself for nomination—against both parties, their people and their money.

Now do any of these plans provide an independent judiciary and offer at least the promise of tenure for good jurists? The district plan, for the reasons we pointed out therefore, does not. Does the appointive plan? Yes, the appointive plan scores high on this point, because the appointive plan provides for the various things so far as the future term of office, as does the amendment I have put before you. What about the Danhof amendment? Does the Danhof amendment do this? It does not. For, as has been pointed out, the justice must go back to his party; he must go back to the people every 8 years and campaign statewide.

Now it has been said here as an objection to the present plan that the idea of party nomination and running statewide in the general election on a nonpartisan basis is a hybrid, that this is bad, that the status quo is therefore bad and something must be done about it. I will admit that the amendment that is presently before you perpetuates this, so to speak, but let me point out to you it perpetuates this for the initial election and that one only. It removes the jurist from the partisan aspect of partisan politics after the first election. Assuming he is a good jurist— he has done a good job—he has a record that he can stand on.

Is it necessary to have this done at party conventions? I think that it is. A nonpartisan primary statewide is not much less than ridiculous, because of the nominees that you would have at a nonpartisan statewide election. This aspect has been before the committee, too; I think in the Kuhn amendment. The appointive system, in turn, precludes the voters from ever having a voice in the selection of their jurists. It certainly would seem then that at some time in the course of the tenure of the judge that he should have had to go to the people for his initial selection. Under the appointive system, of course, he does not.

Another objection is the statewide campaign discourages or precludes the most capable jurists, attorneys, lawyers from running. This I think is a very true statement, but this is perpetuated by the Danhof amendment. It is perpetuated by some of those that have come up before it. I would point out to you that the amendment that is presently before you would encourage the very best in the way of attorneys to run for the office of supreme court justice. He can be convinced to run for the office, and you can seek the very top people, because, in effect, you say to him that you must run statewide for this first election, but following your election you do not have to go back every 8 years. In effect, some might say that this says to the man that this is life tenure—life tenure, but once being selected by the voters.

Now, what are the advantages of the amendment that is presently before you? The people in the first place elect their jurists on a nonpartisan ballot after nomination by the party, but each of these candidates that is put up by the party will run statewide, but neither will have a headstart. There will be no incumbency label in the initial selection. The judges will run against their own ability. They will have equal chance before the voters. There will be no incumbency label. The best of the candidates are likewise encouraged to run in the first instance since they have an equal stature. They are not running against an incumbent. You have heard it said here often that to run against an incumbent is to not run at all. The promise of tenure in the office with a statewide election every 8 years will be a further threat to the jurists, since it once again depends upon going back to his party for his nomination and for its money or, if he doesn't get its nomination, to have another party put up against him. And the idea of putting a proposition on the ballot, should Justice So and so be continued in office, is an attempt to get the people to direct their attention to selecting supreme court justices according to the ability and to the judicial record of the individual rather than to the candidates in a popularity contest.

I would suggest to anyone here who has advocated obtaining the best jurists, and the attempt to get people to reflect upon the man for his ability as a jurist rather than his popularity, that you cannot in good faith adopt or support the Danhof amendment. It is a novel idea to run against a record, to have a proposition on the ballot, but is it better to ask a veteran jurist to run against another man and let popularity decide it? I have spoken too long, and I am sure that I will get much applause on this, but all I ask is that you think.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: On the amendment proposed by Mr. Garry Brown, the Chair will recognize Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if it would be possible for the secretary to provide us written copies of this by morning? I cannot carry the entire content of this amendment in my mind.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: They can be provided.

MR. LEIBRAND: In that event, Mr. Chairman, I move the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand moves that the committee do now rise. Those in favor of the motion by Judge Leibrand will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion does not prevail.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Division is requested. Is the demand supported? It is supported. Those in favor of the motion by Judge Leibrand that the committee do now rise will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion that the committee rise, the yeas are 61, the nays are 65.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The motion does not prevail. On the Brown substitute for the Danhof amendment the Chair will recognize Mr. Bonisteel. Mr. Bonisteel passes. The question is on the substitute offered by Mr. Garry Brown for the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I wish to oppose the amendment, and once again support the main amendment without such amendment, and urge you to vote no.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will ask the secretary to read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The Garry Brown substitute for the Danhof amendment is as follows:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Those in favor of the amendment offered by Mr. Garry Brown will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Division is requested. Is the demand supported? The demand is not supported.

The amendment is not adopted. The question is now on the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof, on which the Chair will recognize Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: It is a little bit late now, Mr. Chairman, but I understood Mr. Martin to say, if he would be good enough to answer this question, that the Danhof amendment got us back to the Constitution of 1908. I can't seem to recognize it in the original Constitution of 1908.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: It is getting pretty late to remember, but what I meant to say was it got us back practically to the system of election which we are now using, and with some important changes which I think improves it, particularly the change which allows the candidate for reelection to file an affidavit of candidacy, and the change which allows for the filing of a nominating petition with a relatively large number of signatures.

MR. POLLOCK: But Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, the Constitution of 1908, when you were talking about the wisdom or unwisdom of the convention you weren't talking about what transpired since. In 1908 they provided an altogether different system than the Danhof amendment provides.

MR. MARTIN: I was talking about the system which we are now using.

MR. POLLOCK: You recognize that it does vary from the original wisdom of the Convention of 1908?

MR. MARTIN: That is right.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I realize that it is very easy to become discouraged over this matter and accept something that no one really wants. So far on the Danhof amendment I haven't heard anyone say anything but words of extremely faint praise.

This matter that we are on I think you all ought to recognize is the selection of judges which constitute the court of last resort in just about 999 out of 1,000 cases. After the supreme court in almost all cases there is nowhere else to go, and it doesn't make any difference whether it is your life or at least your liberty for life at stake, or whether it is $10 million or what it may be. I suggest that if we accept some plan here on the basis of getting out of here and going to bed, that we are not exactly doing the duty for which we were elected. It seeems to me that 144 delegates here ought to be able to arrive at a plan that will serve the people of this state, and it need not be something that everyone accepts with a great deal of misgiving. For that reason I would oppose any plan just for the sake of getting a plan. It seems to me if we have to take a few more days on it, the importance of the subject ought well to deserve those few more days.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof. Mr. Bonisteel.

MR. BONISTEEL: Mr. Chairman and fellow committeemen, I support wholeheartedly what has just been said. We are dealing with a very important subject and one which we expect to last for a period of years. I can think of nothing that is really more serious than the plan which we adopt in this convention for the selection of supreme court justices.

I have been informed, whether rightly or wrongly, that we already have other amendments pending on the desk or are about to be placed upon the desk, and it seems to me that just to have a sense of urgency here, which it seems to me I completely sense here in this committee, that we have just got to do something in order to get a time limit placed upon what we are trying to do on a subject which I consider as important as any that has ever come before this convention, and that is the reason I got up a little while ago; because I agreed wholeheartedly this committee should rise, and we should go home and come back tomorrow, and maybe with some clear thought we can produce the kind of thing Mr. Habermehl was talking about a moment ago.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I do move that this committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the motion of Mr. Bonisteel that the committee do now rise. Those in favor of the motion will say aye. Those who are opposed will say no.

The Chair is in doubt. Those who are in favor of Mr. Bonisteel's motion that the committee do now rise will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. For what purpose does the gentleman rise, Mr. Cudlip?

MR. CUDLIP: I would like to ask how many amendments or substitutes are on the secretary's desk in connection with this matter?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair doesn't think the question is in order at this point, Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: I will withdraw it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Have you all voted? Mr. Cudlip, the secretary has advised there are no further pending amendments. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion that the committee rise, the yeas are 79; the nays are 43.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The motion prevails. The committee will rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration one proposal of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 91, A proposal pertaining to the supreme court; has considered several amendments thereto, and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. President, I just want to announce that tomorrow I intend to move in the morning that the delegates here take up the question following the completion of the judicial article of going to the article on legislative organization afterwards, and I just want to mention it to them now so they can think about it.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Follo requests to be excused from the session of Friday, March 16. He is scheduled to speak to an organization at 7:00 o'clock and must leave here Friday morning to be there on time.

The apples today are from Mr. Rush. (applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the request for leave will be granted.

The hour is late, but there is one other matter deserves our attention tonight, and I have just been informed that Mr. and Mrs. Bill Pellow are the parents of a brand new daughter. (applause) The Chair recognizes Mr. Radka.

MR. RADKA: Mr. President, it is with pleasure that I offer my plan for the convention. I move that we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. We are adjourned until tomorrow morning at 9:30.

NINETY-EIGHTH DAY

Tuesday, March 13, 1962, 9:30 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Through the courtesy of Dr. Anspach, our invocation will be given this morning by the Reverend Robert C. Smith of the First Methodist Church of Mt. Pleasant. Please rise.

REVEREND SMITH: Let us pray. Almighty God, who has again brought us to the beginning of this day, defend us, we pray Thee, with Thy Holy Spirit. For this quiet moment before the pressing concerns of a new day move in upon us, wilt Thou lift us from the confusion and bafflement of these desperate times into the unhurried, healing calm of Thy presence.

Today we come for light to walk by. Save us from the futile repetition of old errors. Let not ignorance nor mean partisanship nor selfish greed block the way to a new order in our state that we might demonstrate the way of peace, of brotherhood, of increasing opportunities for all Thy children. In an hour when such vast issues are at stake may those who are here, conscious of the great importance of their calling, rise to greatness of vision and soul, as the anxious eyes of all the people of the state are upon this chamber of freedom. For these things we pray in the Spirit of Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present will please vote aye. Have you all recorded your presence? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the attendance.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Absent with leave: Messrs. Dade, Heideman, Hutchinson, Kelsey, Liberato, Madar, Mosier, Sterrett, Upton, Yeager and Youngblood.

There are no unexcused absences.

[During the proceedings the following delegates entered the chamber and took their seats: Messrs, Hutchinson, Upton and Yeager.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: No reports.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: No resolutions on file.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering matters on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen. Those in favor say aye. Those opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Van Dusen will take the Chair.

[Whereupon, Mr. Van Dusen assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The committee of the whole will be in order. Before we return to our consideration of matters relating to the organization of the supreme court, the Chair is advised that Dr. Anspach has a message for us which may speed us on our way. Dr. Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, we have had some difficulty finding the right side of the street as far as electing justices of the supreme court is concerned. Therefore, this is to show that other people have had difficulty finding the right side of the street, and that you eventually find it.

This inebriated gentleman walked up to a policeman and said to him, "Where is the other side of the street?" The policeman said, "Over there." "Well," he said, "that's peculiar. I was over there a while ago, and I asked the same question, and they told me it was over here." (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Now that we know where we are, (laughter) we will return to our consideration of Committee Proposal 91, A proposal pertaining to the supreme court.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 91, see above, page 1577.

The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof.

For text of amendment, see above, page 1590.

The Chair will recognize Dr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I move we reconsider the vote by which the Brown substitute amendment failed of passage yesterday, for the reason that I don't think we had adequate time to consider it. It wasn't even projected on the wall. I would like to move reconsideration, that copies be printed, and that we have a chance to look at the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the motion of Dr. DeVries that the committee reconsider the vote by which the amendment offered by Mr. Garry Brown to the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof failed of passage. Those in favor of Dr. DeVries' motion say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion does not prevail. The question now—

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Division is requested. Is the demand supported? It is supported. Those in favor of the motion of Dr. DeVries that the committee reconsider the vote by which the Garry Brown substitute amendment failed of passage last night will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. For what purpose does the gentleman rise, Mr. Walker?

MR. WALKER: To ask that the voting machine be cleared before we take this vote. Everybody is voting aye to indicate their presence. I notice several around me have not been centered yet.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The delegates will clear the machine and vote again. The machine will be cleared, please. Those in favor of the motion of Dr. DeVries to reconsider the vote by which the Garry Brown substitute amendment was not adopted will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion to reconsider, the yeas are 47, the nays are 79.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The motion does not prevail. The question is now upon the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof to section a of Committee Proposal 91. Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, this morning I was discussing the Danhof amendment with several of the delegates, and they did not seem to know exactly what the Danhof amendment did. I would like to ask Mr. Danhof a question, if he would care to answer.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer, Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Danhof, just what is the difference between your plan and the present plan? There seems to be some confusion that your plan is identical with the way we are electing supreme court judges now. Will you kindly explain the difference?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Millard, I think, as Mr. Martin pointed out, we incorporate the present system, but we do 2 additional things. One, we allow the incumbent justice to renominate himself by filing an affidavit for a declaration of candidacy. Two, we allow any other qualified person to become a nominee by obtaining the prescribed number of signatures. So, in essence, we have opened up, so to speak, the nominating procedure.

Now, perhaps — I'm not sure whether this is part of the problem — but it should be borne in mind, Mr. Millard, that having previously adopted the sections in Committee Proposal 96, we have eliminated appointment by the governor and that appointee then running for the office with the incumbency designation. You will recall that we are filling vacancies in all courts of record, including the supreme court, by election either at general or special elections, and further that the incumbency designation is given only to an elected judge or justice.

Now, those, in essence—the first 2 that I have named — are the differences in particular regarding the nominating procedure; and of course the other relates to the fact that all vacancies will be filled by election, as has been pointed out by a number of speakers.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Danhof, is there any provision to fill the vacancies until the election occurs?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Yes. We have authorized the supreme court to use a retired justice or judge, if they so desire, during the interim period between the time of the vacancy and the election. This does not have to be done, and if the court should decide to continue operation with just 8 justices, they could do so.

MR. MILLARD: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G.E. BROWN: A question for Mr. Danhof, Mr. Chairman, if I may.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If Mr. Danhof cares to answer.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Danhof, in substance, the Danhof amendment and the Brown amendment are the same, except that in one case the man runs against his record, so to speak —a proposition is put on the ballot, "Shall Justice so and so be retained?" And then in the other case the justice will every 8 years go back for reelection; is that correct?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I think you are correct, Mr. Brown. That is one of the main differences. The other, I think, is in the method of original nomination. I think yours restricted it just to the party, and did not allow any other qualified person. But, apart from that, that is the main difference: that in your plan they run against the record; and in this one there would be an opponent at least from the opposite party.

MR. G.E. BROWN: A further question, Mr. Danhof. Another difference is the person must go back to his party for his nomination, or he may certify himself, is that correct?

MR. DANHOF: By either choice he may be renominated.

MR. G.E. BROWN: If he certifies himself as a candidate, the parties then in their political conventions may nominate their own people, is that correct, so there may be 3 in the race, plus any that might file individually?

MR. DANHOF: That is possible.

MR. G. E. BROWN: And then, Mr. Danhof, isn't it true, from a partisan standpoint, that the Danhof amendment as contrasted to the Brown amendment gives to the parties greater control over their jurists?

MR. DANHOF: That's your conclusion, Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Isn't that your conclusion, Mr. Danhof?

MR. DANHOF: You were going to ask me a question. I don't know. It's possible, I don't know.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Is your answer "I don't know"?

MR. DANHOF: If you ask if they're going to have control, I don't know if they'll have control or not. You ask me the questions, and then you draw the conclusions. I'm not sure I agree with your conclusion, but you made it.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Danhof, I was merely asking what was your conclusion then as between the 2 plans, and the partisan aspect of the 2 plans.

MR. DANHOF: As you pointed out, Mr. Brown, the party may nominate someone other than the incumbent. And, in essence, this is probably the greatest difference between the 2 plans. And if the incumbent decides to return to the party and ask for their nomination, I imagine that they will either grant it to him or not. On the other hand, he may file, and the party may just automatically go along. Now, whether that's going to give them more or less control I don't know. It's possible, I assume. And you have pointed out very adequately the contrast between the amendment that I offered and the one which you offered.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, may I inquire of Mr. Danhof?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may, if the gentleman cares to answer, Mr. Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: I note, Mr. Danhof, that your provision requires, or at least permits, an incumbent to give notice of his application for reelection not less than 180 days prior to the expiration of his term. That's 6 months that he is allowed to campaign. Am I correct in that, Mr. Danhof?

MR. DANHOF: Well, the time set upon which he would have to file his affidavit, yes.

MR. LEIBRAND: And that gives him a minimum. Now, as I recall the statutes, in the fall election the state conventions are held at least 66 days before the November election, and in the spring election at least 37 days before the spring election. That is, 66 days before the fall and 37 days before the spring. Now, if this is a convention nomination, the nominee doesn't know he is nominated until 37 days before the election in the spring or 66 days in the fall; is that correct?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: If the statute remains the same, that could well be, Judge.

MR. LEIBRAND: Well, it would seem, then, would it not, that an incumbent is given an undue advantage in the situation. And I oppose the Danhof amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof to section a of Committee Proposal 91. Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, I believe I have an amendment at the desk.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Is this an amendment to the Danhof amendment, Mr. Higgs?

MR. HIGGS: Yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: May the secretary inquire of Mr. Higgs, do you desire to offer it as a substitute for the Danhof amendment?

MR. HIGGS: No. I have an amendment to the Danhof amendment. I just inquired at the secretary's office, and I was advised that it had been presented. It is a sentence to be added after the word "filled."

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Higgs offers an amendment to the Danhof amendment:

1. Amend the amendment at the end of the third sentence after "filled" by changing the period to a comma and inserting "except no candidate shall be nominated by the convention of a party to oppose an incumbent which it originally nominated and who has filed a declaration of intention.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Higgs to the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof. The Chair will recognize Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: The purpose of this amendment is to fortify what I think is a merit in the Danhof amendment. And that is the proposition that an incumbent may, by nominating himself, secure a reasonable degree of judicial independence. However, this particular merit of the Danhof amendment is weakened by the fact that the party may, if this happens, nominate someone to oppose the incumbent which it originally nominated and who so filed such an intention. And I think that this defeats the purpose.

We have several things involved. First of all, it must be borne in mind that the Danhof amendment involves a statewide nonpartisan election. Consequently, an incumbent who has declared himself a candidate by filing a declaration of intention either must dig down into his own pocket for $50,000 campaign expenses, or he must rely on the party support. Now, if he is required to run against a candidate nominated by his own party, it removes all of the advantages that may be involved in the Danhof amendment with regard to relieving this particular situation. I think that it would offer a greater degree of party responsibility in the original selection of a nominee for the supreme court if that party in its original selection had in mind that if they were successful in electing this candidate to the supreme court, that they would thereafter be unable to oppose him at the election. This is something of a compromise between the situation where you have an appointee running on his record and an elective process.

I think you should bear in mind that one of the most serious criticisms of the present supreme court selective process is the fact that the incumbent justice, in order to be reelected, must first go back to the party for its nomination, and, secondly, he must rely upon that party for his campaign expenses in running for office. Consequently, I feel if we are to have the real merit of the proposition advanced by the Danhof amendment, which is to give the incumbent justice a greater degree of judicial independence by permitting him to renominate himself, in order to achieve that real merit, we must take this one step further and prohibit the party who originally nominated him from setting up an opponent to run against him. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Delegate Higgs a question through the Chair.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer, Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: My question is, if an incumbent renominates himself, does it necessarily follow that the party will pay for his campaign expenses? I don't know much about the party conventions and party habits, so maybe Delegate Higgs could answer that for me.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Barthwell, it is my understanding that it does not necessarily follow that the party will pay for his campaign expenses. We have no control over their budget. But if the party were permitted to nominate an opponent to run against him, then I think he would lose all advantage of having been originally the nominee of that party.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, Mr. Higgs' amendment would compound what I consider to be the most objectionable part of the proposal, or the principal part that leaves some of us uneasy, if we start off on the assumption that we are trying to take the judge away from improper pressure. Mr. Higgs' amendment would say that if a candidate chooses to renominate himself, that the party from whence he came originally is then foreclosed from being the sponsor of any candidate of superior qualifications that it thinks might be an improvement over the man they put on the bench before. Having now had an opportunity to see him on the bench and judge his judicial temper, the party responsible for placing him in that position would not be in the position of meeting the equal responsibility of removing him from the position by replacing him with someone better. And it seems that the party responsible for placing a bad judge or an inept judge or a judge who for any reason might better be replaced on the bench should have the primary moral responsibility for replacing him.

Now, I'm informed by a number of people with many years of experience, some of them twice my age, that in their recollection neither major political party in this state has ever failed to renominate the incumbent candidate supported by that party in the first instance when he went on the bench. Now, this being the case, this bogeyman about the terrible pressure of going back to the party for support after you're on the bench doesn't seem to me to be very serious. It certainly hasn't proven to be in the past.

There was a political scientist on a television program emanating out of Michigan State Monday evening who indicated that some delegates were bent on writing a constitution with certain people and certain specific conditions in mind. Mr. Higgs' amendment certainly aims itself at a 1 man situation. I don't direct this question directly at Mr. Higgs, but at everyone else who thinks that this self renomination is a way to remove the judge from pressure, and ask you this: if you permit a candidate to nominate himself without regard to any party support for reelection to the court, where does he then get the money that is necessary to wage a statewide campaign? To whom does he owe loyalty, if at all, after that campaign is finished? Would you prefer that he go to a few individuals and secure large sums of money to support his campaign, or would you prefer the present system, where he is supported openly and notoriously, if you please, by the 2 major parties? Everybody knows where his support is coming from. He has to account and the party has to account under the election laws for every penny that is spent in his behalf, and there are no questions about where he stands or who stands for him.

But when you say to a man, "Renominate yourself; you don't have to be endorsed by anyone," then the question that would be in my mind when this kind of a man ran, if his party decided not to support him, would be, one, in view of the long, long history of this state where the party had never repudiated an incumbent in the past, what is so serious in this man's background as a judge that would lead the party to take this position which by all tests of politics would be a bad choice? And two, if he decides, notwithstanding the lack of support by one of the major parties, to wage a statewide campaign, where is the money and the support coming from, and who is behind him? These are questions that arise when you get into this area of self nomination.

One thing that alarms me a little bit is the attitude that seems to creep into this thing that there's something immoral or improper about the major political parties in this state supporting candidates for public office. This is a basic part of the American democratic system—democratic with a small "d"—republican system, Mr. Iverson says behind me. But it is a basic part of our democracy. Now, if we start off on the assumption that it is wrong for the parties to take positions on issues and people, and to stand for something, then we should continue on down the road and make it ever increasingly difficult for the parties to support a candidate for public office, and thereby identify that candidate with a particular philosophy and platform. If we subscribe, on the other hand, to the theory that the parties are a proper exercise of the processes of democracy, then I think we should do nothing to make it more difficult for those parties to openly support candidates and let the candidate take the responsibility for the people by whom he is surrounded. Mr. Higgs' amendment should be voted down, and the Danhof amendment, without amendment, should be approved.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Higgs. Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, if Mr. Ford is alarmed, I am also somewhat alarmed to hear a great exponent of the free elective system state that the primary moral responsibility for replacing a supreme court justice lies with the party. I could hardly believe what I heard. It seems to me that the primary moral responsibility for replacing justices of the supreme court under an elective system should lie with the people. And this justice should have a certain degree of judicial independence in the exercise of his office.

In answering one further point of Delegate Ford—that he is disturbed by the idea that there is creeping into this the idea that there's something immoral in a party supporting a candidate for public office—I thought perhaps he was supporting my amendment of yesterday, because this I think is the reason why we should vote down the Danhof amendment. It has done nothing to correct the inconsistency between party nomination and nonpartisan election. If Mr. Ford is serious in being alarmed by that idea that there is something immoral in this aspect, then he should oppose the Danhof amendment; because it just does nothing to eliminate the partisan influence, and at the same time has presented to the people the false idea that the candidate is nonpartisan, when in fact he can be nothing but party supported.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to address a question to Mr. Ford. Mr. Ford, do you believe that a supreme court justice should espouse and promote his party philosophy?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Does the gentleman care to answer, Mr. Ford?

MR. FORD: If you will give me an example, and then put it in context of where, when, and under what circumstances, I'll answer the question.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Well, Mr. Ford, I think this is begging the question a little bit.

MR. FORD: Not at all. I don't think that the conduct of a judge as a judge and the conduct of a judge as a fishing companion are at all the same. If he wants to debate with me party philosophy while we are fishing, or having a lemonade, that's one thing. If he wants to debate party philosophy when he is on that bench, I'm opposed to it, whether he is a Democrat or Republican.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Then your answer is that you don't believe that a supreme court justice, operating as a justice, should espouse or promote his party philosophy?

MR. FORD: Not from the bench, or in any position in which he is placed as a member of the bench, no.

MR. G. E. BROWN: A further question, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Ford, do you in turn think that other public officers are in the same position as a jurist with respect to this party activity?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I don't think I can answer that.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Because you don't understand the question, or you don't know the answer?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Brown, the Chair will rule that the question is not in order. The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Higgs. Mr. William Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I would oppose the Higgs amendment for one very practical reason that I see. If we retain the balance of the Danhof amendment, we have allowed the incumbent to file by affidavit as a candidate. Assuming now that this incumbent is for some reason senile, semimentally incompetent, or otherwise, he can file, and the implication of the Higgs amendment is that the party which first nominated him would then be stuck with a candidate who might conceivably be a laughing stock as he ran. He may not be physically able to campaign. On a local level, we have elected judges who have been confined to mental hospitals. It seems to me that if a political party has an obligation, it has an obligation also to see that there are competent qualified members.

Now, a great many of us have disagreed with the political and economic philosophy of the current supreme court. I submit to you that of all courts that ought to recognize changing times—and you cannot recognize changing times without recognizing changes in economic and political circumstances—it should be the supreme court. The fact that I may disagree with the political philosophy of the supreme court or the economic philosophy of the supreme court does not mean that that supreme court should not espouse a political or economic philosophy and move along with the times. What it means is that I disagree with the economic philosophy it espouses. And to not let a political party, if it saw fit, nominate a man who recognizes the change in the times, or to force them to forego a nomination because some physically incompetent or mentally incompetent person had filed an affidavit, is to destroy the very thing that we are trying to have: competent candidates who can make an issue in an election.

I therefore oppose the Higgs amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Higgs to the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof. Does any delegate desire to have the amendment read again? If not, those in favor of Mr. Higgs' amendment to the Danhof amendment say aye. Those opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted. The question now is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof to section a of Committee Proposal 91. Mr. McAllister.

MR. McALLISTER: I would like a division on this.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. McAllister requests a division. Is the demand supported? It is supported. Those who are in favor of the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof to section a of Committee Proposal 91 will vote aye. Those who are opposed will vote no. Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Did you say the Danhof amendment?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof. The commitee will be in order. Dr. Nord, was your question answered?

MR. NORD: This is the Danhof amendment?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof to section a of Committee Proposal 91. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof to section a, the yeas are 82; the nays are 46.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The admendment is adopted. Are there further amendments to section a of Committee Proposal 91? If not, the section will pass.

Section a, as amended, is passed. The secretary will read section g.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section g has been deleted.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Section g, as amended, is passed. Are there any amendments to the body of Committee Proposal 91?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Bonisteel offers the following amendment to section f:

1. Amend page 2, line 21, after "fund.", by striking out "No justice of the supreme court" and inserting "Neither the supreme court nor any justice thereof"; so that the language will then read; "Neither the supreme court nor any justice thereof shall exercise any other power of appointment to public office, except as otherwise provided herein."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Bonisteel to section f of Committee Proposal 91, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, in looking over the amendment last night and this morning, if I properly understand it, I think it expresses the intent of the committee in other words, and I can see no objection to it at this time.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Does any delegate desire to have the Bonisteel amendment read again?

MR. DONALD DOTY: Yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Bonisteel's amendment is:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Those who are in favor of the amendment offered by Mr. Bonisteel will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment is adopted. Are there further amendments to the body of Committee Proposal 91?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Wanger offers the following amendment to section a:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, in the first sentence, after "consist of" by striking out "9" and inserting "7"; so that that sentence will read, "The supreme court shall consist of 7 justices, to be elected on a nonpartisan statewide basis."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger to section a, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I believe it has already been pointed out that there is no good reason why, in creating an odd rather than even number of justices on our supreme court, we must raise the total to 9 rather than lowering it to 7. It has been demonstrated that courts of nearby states do not need as many as 9 justices to do the work adequately and well. We know that 9 instead of 7 justices will cost a great deal more money annually; and we further know that other things being equal, a group of 7 will be able to operate more efficiently and more expeditiously than a group of 9. In closing this argument I would just reiterate the statement that has been made several times on this floor: justice delayed is sometimes justice denied. Let us have a court which can operate as expeditiously and efficiently as possible.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger, on which the Chair will recognize Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I would oppose the Wanger amendment. The district plan last night was defeated by the overwhelming majority, as Delegate Pollock would say, of 64 to 62. (laughter) The figure "9" was designed to fit in with the entire district plan, for which I still have high hopes. I would therefore implore the delegates to leave the figure "9" in there, because it fits in with the district plan. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Prettie.

MR. PRETTIE: Mr. Chairman, fellow members of the committee, not because of any relevance to the district plan, but because of competent evidence presented before the committee on judicial branch, I most respectfully oppose Mr. Wanger's amendment.

True it is that the decided cases of our supreme court at the present time is not as high as they were during the depression years. At that time, however, the court was not exercising great supervisory power; the court administrator's office did not exist; the administration of the probate court had not been undertaken. We have, in addition to the approximately 250 annual cases, a large case load of motions, interlocutory matters, applications for writs of habeas corpus, and that sort of thing, which did not previously appear in the reports, but which by action of this convention must now be decided by written opinion. We also have provided in this convention for an appeal as of right in every criminal case, and although we are having — or, if our action so determines, we will have — a court of appeals, which will hear some of these appeals as of right from the trial courts in the first instance, it is my firm belief that in the early operations of that court we will find the court of appeals perhaps arriving at opposite decisions, which must be reconciled by the supreme court. We also have by a disputed action, but nevertheless a majority action of this convention, provided for appeals from administrative agencies, which appeals perhaps in the first instance will be going to the trial courts, but which in some instances will find their way to the court of appeals and possibly to the supreme court.

I was not impressed with the argument of practical politics yesterday. I think we could well reduce our court from 9 to 7, disregarding political factors. But I do submit to you that the evidence before the committee on judicial branch, in my opinion, as one member of that committee, clearly established the fact, coupled with the actions already taken in this convention, that we must go in the direction of an enlarged and adequate court with adequate judicial manpower, rather than a step backward into a smaller court. For that reason, and for that reason only, I oppose the Wanger amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Prettie has spoken of evidence presented showing we had to have a court of 9. He has not offered any evidence on the floor of this convention, nor has anyone else. All that has been offered is speculation. I submit that this speculation does not show any probability that the burden on the back of the supreme court judges will be any greater under the convention's proposed plan than it is at the present time.

As a matter of fact, with the creation of the court of appeals, the only probability that is shown is that that burden will be less. None of the rights of appeal which we have created in the judiciary article go directly up to the supreme court. We have created a court of appeals, and undoubtedly other courts or other remedies will be created in that regard. As far as the administration of the court is concerned, we have provided a staff for the court to take care of that particular problem. And so I suggest that the objections to this argument do not have as great weight, by any means, as the argument in favor of this amendment. I would further suggest that even 2 judges on the court, with the facilities and the salary which they must consume, will probably amount to upwards of $100,000 a year, and that this expense is needless. And, finally, once again, that a court of 7 can clearly operate more efficiently and more expeditiously than a court of 9.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger to strike out the figure "9" before the word "justices" and insert the figure "7", so that section a will then read, "The supreme court shall consist of 7 justices. . . ." Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I request a division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger requests a division. Is the demand supported? It is supported. The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger to reduce the number of supreme court justices from 9 to 7, as provided in section a. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger, the yeas are 35; the nays are 87.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to the body of Committee Proposal 91?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Cudlip and Bonisteel offer the following amendment to section a:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, at the end of the first sentence, after "basis.", by inserting "Vacancies hereafter created as the result of the death, retirement or resignation of 2 incumbent justices shall not be filled.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment to section a offered by Messrs. Cudlip and Bonisteel, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, like Mr. Wanger and others, I feel that we will not need in the future 9 justices. We have 8 now, as you know. The testimony before our committee indicated, to a large extent, and conversations with other people that are versed in this art suggest that 7 men are enough to handle the work of our high court, especially in view of the fact that we are planning, subject to the will of this convention, for a court of appeals, an intermediate court.

You heard yesterday that 23 states, some of them much larger than Michigan — and most of which, if not all, had intermediate courts — have only 7 men serving on the high court. If we can eliminate 2, money isn't a complete factor, but it is $50,000 plus, a year. I don't think that the work load will demand 9. I like an odd number. I would rather cut it to 7. The Bonisteel-Cudlip amendment doesn't disturb the present justices. In other words, the idea here is that the change would not become effective until through death, resignation or retirement we got down to the level of 7. This is submitted to you for your consideration in view of the debate and comment on this question. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Cudlip and Bonisteel, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. DOWNS: I have a motion, Mr. Chairman.

MR. BLEDSOE: I wanted to ask a question.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Would you defer your motion temporarily, Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Yes, I will.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: You may proceed, Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Cudlip, before you submitted that amendment, had you taken into consideration the fact that when we passed the administrative article the other day, opening up the question of appeals, that that would also make more appeals to the supreme court possible?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Bledsoe, we did.

MR. BLEDSOE: I mean, had you taken it into consideration before you submitted this?

MR. CUDLIP: I said we did.

MR. BLEDSOE: What was your thinking on that?

MR. CUDLIP: The review by the courts of the decisions of our administrative tribunals? The supreme court, by rule and all, will control this load that it will take under the power we have given it, under the power which it now has. The United States supreme court, as you well know, Mr. Bledsoe, — and others in this room know, too — is very choosy about what it will review. The work is going to be left largely — I imagine by court rule — to the intermediate appellate courts, if they are set up. And if they are not set up this amendment of course isn't valid.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Just one other question. Then do I take it that you feel that the opening up of the question of fact review by the courts will not increase the court load?

MR. CUDLIP: It might increase the court load at the intermediate level. I think, as I said, that the Supreme Court of Michigan, under rules it now has and rules that we have affirmed, will have the power to control what it does review. And I find in 23 states, many of them larger than Michigan, there is no question in this respect, although I'm not aware of the extent to which they review the decisions of administrative tribunals.

MR. BLEDSOE: Well, at the supreme court level, won't these questions that can be appealed as a matter of right still keep the load up?

MR. CUDLIP: That is a criminal matter — the matter of right appeal. I was referring to the administrative tribunal decisions, and there of course the court will make its own rules. It will also make its own rules with respect to this matter of criminal appeal as a matter of right. But there will be some cases that will get beyond the intermediate court of appeals when we are in the criminal area.

MR. BLEDSOE: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Cudlip and Bonisteel. Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I move that we defer discussion of this until we have further consideration of Committee Proposal 96, section d. The reason for the motion, Mr. Chairman, is that that committee proposal specifically deals with the filling of vacancies. I think one reason that we handled this very involved matter today and the last few days was that we separated out the last sentence of the original Hanna amendment dealing with vacancies. I think it would be a more orderly presentation. I'm not speaking for or against the merits of this point, and I wondered if Mr. Cudlip would be willing to defer consideration until that time. The purpose of the motion is not to go into the merits, but to provide what I consider a more orderly handling of the problem.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Downs, this may have occurred during your absence due to illness, but the committee has already considered and passed section d of Committee Proposal 96.

MR. DOWNS: I was referring to coming back on second reading, where I assume that then the amendment could be made, and I think it would be more orderly at that time than at present.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Do you make a motion at this point, Mr. Downs?

MR. DOWNS: Yes, I made the motion.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the motion of Mr. Downs that the Cudlip-Bonisteel amendment be, I presume, tabled, Mr. Downs? That's the only form in which your motion could accomplish the purpose which you suggest.

MR. BARTHWELL: Point of order.

MR. DOWNS: Can it not be postponed until a time certain, the time certain being when we get to Committee Proposal 96 on second reading?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair thinks not, Mr. Downs. The second reading, after all, will be by the convention, and currently we are sitting in committee of the whole, so that your motion would not be—

MR. DOWNS: Then I will phrase it that the amendment be tabled.

MR. BARTHWELL: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Will you state your point, Mr. Barthwell?

MR. BARTHWELL: I don't think you can table anything in committee of the whole.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary advises, Mr. Downs, that if we lay the amendment on the table, we lay the proposal on the table.

MR. DOWNS: I will withdraw the motion. I did not mean to hold up the proceedings today, Mr. Chairman. May I then be on the order to speak on the amendment in the proper turn?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Downs, you are recognized to speak on the amendment at this time, if you so desire.

MR. DOWNS: All right. I had asked to make the motion out of order. Are there others on the list to speak?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mrs. Butler desires recognition, and her turn comes next, but you are in order, and you may proceed, Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: I see. Mr. Chairman, I do believe that regardless of the merits of this, that this whole matter of filling vacancies is a very key question; and that if we get into this again, I'm afraid it will further confuse the good work we have done today in resolving this very difficult question. I would urge the delegates to vote the amendment down, with the knowledge that on second reading the proponents of course could present it as an amendment to Committee Proposal 96, where I feel it more properly belongs.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Downs, your comments suggest to the Chair that perhaps the secretary should again read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment reads as follows:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask a question of either Mr. Bonisteel or Mr. Cudlip. Throughout this discussion they have been saying 7 men, 8 men, 9 men. I wonder if this precludes the idea that there might ever be a woman on the supreme court bench? (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Will either of the gentlemen care to answer?

MR. CUDLIP: I yield to Mr. Bonisteel. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bonisteel is recognized.

MR. BONISTEEL: Mr. Chairman and fellow committeemen, I am looking forward to the day when there will be a woman on the bench.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, I speak in favor of this amendment, and I have some evidence to present on the subject. The Michigan joint committee on Michigan procedural revision is the committee from whose report I am going to quote. This committee is the committee which proposed the revised judicature act, which has been adopted, and consists of members appointed by the courts, members by the bar, and members by the legislature.

In a report on Judicial Administration at the Appellate Level, Michigan, published at the law school of the University of Michigan in 1959, this committee says on page 11, under the subject, Enlarging The Court, as follows:

> There are now 8 judges on the supreme court. Would 15 help, or 12, or 11? No state has more than 9 judges on its court.
> Only a few states have 9; only 1, Michigan, has 8. The most common numbers are 7 and 5.
> While this is not controlling, it reveals a pattern of the American concept of a supreme court, a concept that involves a closely knit unit of wise men, all of whom participate in the decisions of the body. This concept should not lightly be discarded.

And then at page 47, under its recommendations, this committee does recommend an intermediate appellate court. And after having made that recommendation, the committee says:

> The size of the supreme court should be reduced to 5 judges, each serving for a 10 year term, one to be selected each 2 years.
> Present judges should remain in office and should be permitted to seek reelection as currently provided and for the terms currently provided.
> Vacancies in the court by reasons of death, resignation, or failure to run for reelection should not be filled until the court is of the size of 5.

I think these arguments clearly are applicable to reducing the court in size to 7.

I think this committee probably has heard more evidence and given more consideration to this subject and to the entire problem of judicial administration in Michigan than any other committee of its size in the state in the last 15 years, perhaps even including one of the committees at our convention, because it existed and operated for a much longer period of time. Therefore, I urge you, in the interests of efficient administration and in the interests of saving the taxpayers of Michigan at least $100,000 a year, and in the interest of showing the people that this convention is capable of taking at least one important state body and reducing it in size instead of increasing it in size, to vote in favor of this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Cudlip and Bonisteel. Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, may I inquire of Mr. Cudlip?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer, Mr. Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Cudlip, reference has been made to section d of Committee Proposal 96, which was passed by the committee of the whole on March 8 that provides:

> When a vacancy occurs in the office of an elected judge of any court of record, it shall be filled at a general or special election according to law. The supreme court is empowered to authorize persons who have served as judges and have voluntarily retired, to perform judicial duties for the limited period of time from the occurrence of the vacancy until the successor is elected and qualified.

My inquiry is this: does your amendment negate or defeat the intent of section d of Committee Proposal 96?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman, Judge Leibrand, I would simply say this: that the idea is to get this court down to 7 in the normal course of events, as described in the proposed amendment. And if section d of Committee Proposal 96 is in conflict with that — and I don't see that it is, offhand — why then there would have to be a reconcilement.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, may I have the Cudlip-Bonisteel amendment read again, please?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The following is the amendment:

MR. LEIBRAND: Thank you. I feel there is a decided conflict, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: On further reflection, may I say if that is a bothersome point, section d of Committee Proposal 96, which deals and treats with the subject that Judge Leibrand adverted to, if there is any inconsistency brought about, we can simply say at the proper time, "except as otherwise provided in this constitution," and that would exclude the amendment if it were adopted.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I think Mr. Cudlip has just answered my question. He has stated that the idea of this amendment is to get the bench down to 7. I wonder, in view of that, if this amendment is even in order at this point, seeing as we just voted down a straight vote for a 7 member bench.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair will rule that while your point is not without merit, Mr. Mahinske, the amendment is in order.

MR. MAHINSKE: Then I would like to direct a question to Mr. Cudlip or Mr. Bonisteel. In view of the fact that the idea here is to reduce the bench to 7, just what is the advantage that we gain by appointing an extra man and then waiting for 2 to disqualify themselves, and then coming up with a 7 member bench, aside from all the arguments we have heard about 7 people being a closer knit family, and so forth, from the other end of the room?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, it would be entirely agreeable if someone wants to amend the 9 to 8 in the language we have already adopted. We went on the premise that it was 9, and we wanted to cut it down. We have no objection if anybody wants to change the 9 to 8 in the language already adopted, and then the language would be from 8 to 7.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Then the effect of adopting this amendment would be appointing an additional man to the bench, and then waiting for 2 to eliminate themselves through one course or another?

MR. CUDLIP: Yes, Mr. Mahinske, unless someone makes another amendment.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, I would be opposed to the amendment on this basis. It's principally a 7 member bench amendment again.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I support the Cudlip-Bonisteel amendment. It has become unpopular here to admit that any of our votes have been dictated by political expediency, but I'm going to admit that I voted to raise this from 8 to 9 because I didn't see how we could put a man out of office, which is what we were going to do if we cut it to 7. I think Mr. Bonisteel and Mr. Cudlip have offered us a way out of our dilemma.

I think the facts, with an intermediate court of appeals, do not justify 9, and this is a means of getting there gradually without offending anybody and without stepping in the way of those who have already won their place by a vote of the people. I don't think we would have a right to eliminate them by a constitutional act when they have won their office through a vote of the people, and this way we are not doing it.

I think they have given us the answer, and I am certainly going to vote for it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Cudlip and Bonisteel. Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: For the reasons most succinctly stated by Mr. Everett, I too would like to support the amendment. But inasmuch as I basically think it should be 7, if it's proper at this time I would like to make the amendment that Mr. Cudlip suggested, to change the numbers from 9 to 8 and from 2 to 1, and they will get it to 7 by reducing them this way.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss Donnelly, the Chair would request that if you desire to make that amendment, you submit it to the secretary in writing.

MISS DONNELLY: I have a copy of the other one. It's just a substitution of the numbers.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Your amendment, Miss Donnelly, would be to strike "9" and insert "8"?

MISS DONNELLY: Which is what we presently have, yes. This is reducing our supreme court to 7 in a very proper, dignified and considerate form.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss Donnelly, would you withhold that amendment for the moment? You see, the amendment offered by Messrs. Cudlip and Bonisteel does not touch the first sentence of Committee Proposal 91, which would necessarily be amended by your amendment. Therefore, your amendment is partly to the proposal and partly to the amendment. If you will withhold it, it will be in order in due course.

MISS DONNELLY: All right. I'm sorry, I didn't see it written. I thought it was in effect.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Cudlip and Bonisteel. Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: As I understand it, the main argument that we hear from most people here for having a 7 member bench is the fact that we have created or are going to create an intermediate court of appeals which will cut the work load out from the supreme court. I think that Mr. Wanger was the loudest opponent to our permitting the supreme court to write or in fact ordering the supreme court to write their reasons for denial of an appeal. He claimed that this would overburden them, would put a lot of extra work on them, and so forth. Now, his argument would pertain to the 7 member bench. I just wonder what would happen to a 7 member bench writing all these statements of fact.

The argument has been made that the intermediate appellate court will take away a lot of the present work load of the supreme court. I don't feel that this is what is going to happen. We have given an absolute right of appeal in all criminal matters, and the presumption is that this would be to the appellate court. Now, many of these cases are going to find themselves out of the appellate court and up to the supreme court that wouldn't necessarily be there today. At the same time, we have liberalized the scope of review in the administrative tribunal area. The obvious assumption is that these appeals or reviews will go to the appellate court. For the very same reason, a lot of these reviews will find themselves out of the appellate court up into the supreme court. Fourthly, we have permitted the supreme court on solemn occasions, whatever this amounts to, to write opinions on nonjusticiable issues. Now, this is going to create more work for the supreme court, whether it be a 7 or 9 member bench.

All 4 of these items, the 3 that we have put through and the 1 that we are anticipating, as I see it, direct more work to the supreme court. We must also remember that in a lot of these criminal matters where there is an absolute right of appeal, there may be a direct certification of the record to the supreme court, bypassing the appellate court. Now, these are appeals that will go to the supreme court that would not necessarily go there today, for the simple reason that there would be no right of appeal.

For these reasons, and if you're talking about work loads, I think that the supreme court, with 9 members and with an intermediate court of appeals, will have more work under our proposed constitution than they have today. And this would, in and of itself, justify a 9 member bench, and I think possibly put our docket back with the 7 member bench. I would still be opposed to decreasing the number to 7.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I would simply like to remind the committee of the figures that Mr. Danhof gave you the other day from the poll of the lawyers of this state. On many of the issues upon which the lawyers were polled the votes were close. There were several votes on a single issue that were within, with reference to each other, no more than 50 per cent plurality. But on this particular one, with a little over 5,000 lawyers responding to the poll, 4,286 of the members of the bar of this state said that they thought we needed a 9 member court. And 347, a very small figure next to this one, wanted to retain it at the present 8. And 321 had some other number, which would include, 5, 7, 11 or any other number. So even if we assumed a majority of the other choices were for the 7 man court, less than 321 out of over 5,000 lawyers wanted to go in the direction of the Cudlip-Bonisteel amendment at this time.

I'm a little bit surprised to hear people talking about the judicial committee making decisions of this kind on the basis of political expediency. Because I thought that this was a committee that we had agreed from the outset was of such a caliber that there was very little political expediency practiced. And it has been indicated on the floor from the very beginning that we tried to stay away from making decisions on that basis. I trust that we will continue that same spirit into the convention, and that we will not now get into a round robin of soul baring confessions about how we voted for political expediency.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, I desire to direct a question to Mr. Ford.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer.

MR. WANGER: With respect to this bar poll, did the members of the bar on this questionnaire have an opportunity to vote on the specific number 7, or the specific number 5?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: The specific question is, "How many members should the supreme court have?" I should say that there are several questions concerning the supreme court grouped together, "8 members; 9 members; or any other number?" My recollection of this is that on each one of them, and I guess it's true as you look at it, on every question that was asked in the poll you were given choices, but you were also given an opportunity to express something beyond the choice that was presented by the committee.

MR. WANGER: Thank you. That clarifies the situation to me. It is very clear that the members of the bar were voting really on the difference between an even numbered bench and an odd numbered bench, and the question of reducing the court in size to 7 or 5 was not directly before them; only indirectly, if at all, by the little line and the word "other," which allowed them to express other preference.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Cudlip and Bonisteel to section a of Committee Proposal 91 to insert after the first sentence thereof the words, "Vacancies hereafter created as the result of the death, retirement or resignation of 2 incumbent justices shall not be filled." Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, may I ask Mr. Cudlip a question, please?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If the gentleman cares to answer, Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Cudlip, when the proposal was read by the secretary in the beginning, I got the impression that this was a temporary thing; that we would elect 9 justices, but in case of resignation, death and so forth, the vacancy would not be filled until the end of the term. Now, from the discussion, it appears to me that that isn't the correct interpretation. Is it the idea that this would be a permanent reduction?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman, Harold, yes, a permanent reduction.

MR. STEVENS: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Those who are in favor of the amendment offered by Messrs. Cudlip and Bonisteel will say aye. Those opposed will say no. The Chair is in doubt. Those in favor of the amendment offered by Mr. Cudlip and Mr. Bonisteel will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Cudlip and Bonisteel. Those who are in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment offered by Messrs. Cudlip and Bonisteel, the yeas are 46; the nays are 63.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to Committee Proposal 91? If not, the proposal will pass.

Committee Proposal 91, as amended, is passed. The committee will proceed to Committee Proposal 92.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on judicial branch, by Mr. Danhof, chairman, Committee Proposal 92, A proposal pertaining to a court of appeals. Amends article VII.

Following is Committee Proposal 92 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. THE COURT OF APPEALS SHALL CONSIST INITIALLY OF 9 JUDGES WHO SHALL BE NOMINATED AND ELECTED IN THE SAME MANNER AS THE JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT. THE SUPREME COURT MAY PRESCRIBE BY RULE THAT THE COURT OF APPEALS MAY SIT IN DIVISIONS, THE TERMS OF COURT AND THE TIMES AND PLACES THEREOF. EACH SUCH DIVISION SHALL CONSIST OF NOT FEWER THAN 3 JUDGES. THE LEGISLATURE MAY BY LAW INCREASE THE NUMBER OF JUDGES COMPRISING THE COURT OF APPEALS.

Sec. b. INITIALLY, 3 JUDGES SHALL BE ELECTED FOR A TERM OF 2 YEARS, 3 JUDGES FOR A TERM OF 4 YEARS, AND 3 JUDGES FOR A TERM OF 6 YEARS. THEREAFTER, THE TERM OF OFFICE SHALL BE 6 YEARS. THE TIME OF ELECTION AND THE ORDER OF ROTATION SHALL BE PROVIDED BY LAW.

Sec. c. THE JURISDICTION OF THE COURT OF APPEALS SHALL BE PRESCRIBED BY LAW AND THE PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE THEREIN SHALL BE AS PROVIDED BY SUPREME COURT RULE.

Mr. Danhof, chairman of the committee on judicial branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 92:

This proposal integrates the structure of a court of appeals heretofore created into the district plan for the election of justices. It provides for the election of 9 judges of the court of appeals from the same districts as the justices of the supreme court. It is contemplated that one division of the court of appeals would serve Wayne county; one division would serve judicial districts 2, 3 and 4 comprising the southeasterly ¼ of the state; and one division would serve judicial districts 5, 6 and 7 comprising the remainder of the state including the upper peninsula.

This plan is largely adapted from a presentation made to this committee by Justice Theodore Souris. This presentation was copiously documented with a study of the case load of the supreme court for a 4 year period. The districts proposed in this plan for the appellate court contemplated one such court to serve Wayne connty; one the eastern half of the lower peninsula, and another the western half of the lower peninsula and the upper peninsula. This plan was revised to bring it more nearly into correspondence with the case load and to integrate it with the 7 judicial districts of the state established for nomination and election of the justices of the supreme court.

A study of the potential case load resulting from the granting of appeals as of right and other matters that might be expected to reach such a court indicates an estimated annual case load for each division of this court of approximately 600 cases. The proposal further provides for initial election of the judges of this court; 3 judges for 2 years; 3 for 4 years; and 3 for 6 years; and thereafter for terms of 6 years. Flexibility is provided for the legislature to determine by law the time of election and the order of rotation.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: For an explanation of section a of Committee Proposal 92, the Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee on judicial branch, Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, section a provides for the manpower to operate the court of appeals. The committee has recommended the number of 9. At the time that we were considering a court of appeals, the question was brought up as to whether or not there should be an independent judiciary for the court of appeals, or whether perhaps the manpower of the supreme court and the circuit bench could be utilized. It was determined by a vast majority of the committee that if a court of appeals were to be established, it should have independent judiciary. Basically, the reason was this. We decided that if you utilized circuit judges, this would decrease the number of circuit judges available on the trial level, and would of necessity require an increase of circuit judges. Secondly, if a circuit judge were to sit for a particular period of time, he would naturally be called upon to rule upon decisions of his brethren on the bench, and perhaps some within his own circuit. When we inquired of circuit judges who appeared before us in this regard, they seemed to favor an independent judiciary.

I quite realize that at the time the committee adopted the first sentence to the section, the supreme court was to be selected by the district plan. By amendment taken in this committee of the whole to Committee Proposal 91, this is not now the case. My own personal conviction is that the first sentence of section a is still appropriate and should still be retained.

The second sentence prescribes that the supreme court by rule may designate that the court of appeals shall sit in divisions; the terms of the court; and the times and places thereof. This is procedure. It sets up the manner in which the court will operate, and provides that it may move around the state, as we anticipate, to hear various appeals. We provide that each such division shall consist of not fewer than 3 judges. This is to make 3 divisions of 3 judges each at the initial stage.

The last sentence is self explanatory. If the work load becomes such that more judges are needed, the legislature may by law increase the number of judges.

Section c, if you want to look ahead and try to anticipate questions, provides that the jurisdiction shall be as prescribed by law and the procedure as prescribed by supreme court rule. I will yield at this time for questions.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to section a of Committee Proposal 92?

SECRETARY CHASE: There are none on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If not, the section will pass.

Section a is passed. The secretary will read section b.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section b:

[Section b was read by the secretary. For text, see above.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: This, in essence, members of the committee and Mr. Chairman, is a scheduling provision to get the court operating. We leave to the legislature how and when the rotation shall commence, and the time of the election, and so forth. We provide for a term of 6 years. It was the considered opinion of the committee that if an 8 year term were in order for the supreme court, as we have provided, that 6 years would be sufficient for the court of appeals, as we feel there should be some differentiation from the supreme court. So we provide that 3 judges would have a term of 2 years, 3 a term of 4 years, and 3 a term of 6 years. Perhaps they will be chosen by lot, or by the highest number of votes, as the legislature may provide, to get the court into operation. Thereafter they will come up in regular rotation. Should the legislature see fit to increase the number of judges, they could fit them into the rotation as needed.

This is basically a scheduling provision. Perhaps it does not belong in this particular section, and can be moved to the schedule by the miscellaneous provisions committee, but it had to be included at this time.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to section b of Committee Proposal 92?

SECRETARY CHASE: There are none.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If not, it will pass.

Section b is passed. The secretary will read section c.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section c:

[Section c was read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 1604.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, this particular section is self explanatory. The legislature shall set the jurisdiction of the court. That is, the legislature shall prescribe what cases shall be appealed, what cases may be appealed, as a matter of right. I think that we are consistent herein with what we have adopted to the circuit court and the appellate practice—we amended that to read "by law"—and it was felt that the legislature should be the one in this regard to ascertain perhaps what cases as a matter of right can be appealed to the court of appeals. By the action taken by this convention, we have set up appeals in criminal cases as a matter of right. This would be one. I would imagine that the legislature would see fit to put a dollar amount on civil cases which might be appealed as a matter of right.

We realize we are going into something new. The majority of the committee felt that the jurisdiction should be set by law, and the practice and procedure therein provided by supreme court rule, as we have actually adopted in Committee Proposal 91, wherein the supreme court provides the rules and procedure for all courts.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to section c of Committee Proposal 92? If not, it will pass.

Section c is passed. Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? If there are no amendments to the body of the proposal—Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: We haven't got one written out.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The posture of the committee is that there are no amendments presently pending to the body of the proposal, and the Chair is eager to pass it, but reluctant to deprive any delegate of his right. Mr. Barthwell.

MR. BARTHWELL: Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to rise to a point of personal privilege. I wish to point out to the committee, since there's no politics in the court, how easily we are passing a section which is new, and in which no one has a personal interest.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Your point is well taken, Mr. Barthwell. Are there any amendments to the body of Committee Proposal 92?

SECRETARY CHASE: Miss Donnelly and Mr. Boothby offer the following amendment to section a:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "elected" by striking out "in the same manner as the justices of the supreme court.", and inserting "at nonpartisan elections as prescribed by law. The legislature may provide for the dividing of the state into districts for the purpose of selecting appellate court judges."; so that the sentence will then read:

> The court of appeals shall consist initially of 9 judges who shall be nominated and elected at nonpartisan elections as prescribed by law. The legislature shall provide for the dividing of the state into districts for the purpose of selecting appellate court judges.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Miss Donnelly and Mr. Boothby, on which the Chair will recognize Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman, as the committee is probably very much aware, this is a rather hastily drawn amendment, and it has been drawn to my attention that it might be more agreeable if we were to strike the word "shall" and insert the word "may"—that the legislature may. And if there is additional support for that striking of the word "shall" and insertion of the word "may," from the committee in particular, I would agree to that amendment. I'm wondering if Mr. Danhof has any—

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Do you make that amendment?

MR. BOOTHBY: I would like to hear Mr. Danhof's comments.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Boothby yields to Mr. Danhof.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Are we presently in order on this amendment? I thought that we passed section a.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: This is offered as an amendment to the body of the proposal, Mr. Woolfenden. It is in order. The Chair has been somewhat indulgent with the sponsors, but the gravity of the matter would seem to dictate that degree of leniency. Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: I just want to inquire from anybody who might know: is there a reason for this amendment? Wouldn't the legislature have that power?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Boothby, do you care to respond to Mr. Stevens' question?

MR. BOOTHBY: As I understand, the wording of the proposal as it now stands is that they shall be nominated and elected in the same manner as justices of the supreme court. Because of the change from the committee's original recommendation, it would appear that the legislature does not have this power, and that under this provision they must be elected on a statewide ballot. At least, that is my understanding.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: If I might direct 2 or 3 questions to the movers of the amendment—I would agree with Mr. Boothby that the present section would require a statewide ballot; I mean, if we say " . . . shall be nominated and elected in the same manner as the justices of the supreme court."

Now, as I get the purport of your particular amendment, Mr. Boothby, it would in essence allow this, if I'm correct: one, that the legislature could pass a statute saying the court of appeals shall be nominated and elected in the same manner as justices of the supreme court, if they wanted to do so?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Well, I believe that the amendment indictates that the legislature would have the power to do it either on that basis or on a district basis.

MR. DANHOF: I was getting to that. I mean, in essence, what your amendment does is leave the nomination and election entirely to the legislature, does it not?

MR. BOOTHBY: It encourages a district plan, I think, but it does not cause that to be the exclusive plan which the legislature would follow.

MR. DANHOF: In other words, the legislature could make districts—could make 3 districts, could make 9 districts, could make no districts—whatever in its discretion it would deem advisable?

MR. BOOTHBY: I think the insertion of the word "may" would allow that.

MR. DANHOF: And if they would decide that it would be more expedient to follow the practice of having them nominated and elected in the same manner as justices of the supreme court, whatever that might be, but assuming that the action of the committee of the whole on section a of Committee Proposal 91 would be retained, this likewise would be within the province of the legislature?

MR. BOOTHBY: I think under the wording of this amendment that would be permissible.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary will read the amendment again.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment offered by Miss Donnelly and Mr. Boothby:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would like to direct a question either to Mr. Boothby or Mr. Danhof through the Chair. In view of the amendments that we have adopted, especially the Danhof amendment, would this mean, under the present wording, exclusive of the proposed amendment, that the initial bench could be composed of people who would run on nominating petitions?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I think, Mr. Mahinske, that it is possible. The wording is, "who shall be nominated and elected in the same manner as the justices of the supreme court." So whatever manner is prescribed for nomination of supreme court justices would also be available for the court of appeals. I would so interpret it.

MR. MAHINSKE: So the nomination of appellate court justices would also be by party convention?

MR. DANHOF: As it now stands, I would agree with you, Mr. Mahinske. I don't know about Mr. Boothby, but this would be my interpretation. That those methods which we set up for nomination of the supreme court would be available to the court of appeals. Initially, of course, you wouldn't have any incumbents filing an affidavit to rerun, because there are no incumbents, until we get the first 2 years out of the way, assuming that that provision will stand.

MR. MAHINSKE: And then you definitely intend then to restrict these terms to the 6 years, as opposed to the 10 years for the supreme court?

MR. DANHOF: Well, the supreme court is now at 8, Mr. Mahinske. We felt that the supreme court justices should probably have a little advantage, so we give them an extra 2 years. Probably they will draw a little more salary, too, after the legislature sets it. But we felt that a 6 year term, on the rotation setup, was a reasonable length. It's either 6 or 8, and the committee felt it should be 6.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I think that confuses me a little more than I was before I started here.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Miss Donnelly and Mr. Boothby to section a of Committee Proposal 92. Does any delegate desire to have the amendment read again? The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment offered by Miss Donnelly and Mr. Boothby:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford, do you desire recognition?

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, this is a very apparent attempt to bring the district plan back to us. I think you first have to look at the decision the committee on the judiciary had to reach before it came as far as we had come in this recommendation in the first instance. It has been the subject of great debate throughout this state for quite a long time, and there are 2 factors that had to be determined. The first one was, do we need an intermediate appellate court? Having arrived at that decision, then we had to arrive at the decision as to whether or not, as a matter of constitutional law, we should prescribe the composition of the court, or simply prescribe that there be one, and let the legislature wrestle with the question of the composition of the court.

It then became apparent to many members of the committee who had spent some time with this, and also from testimony that was presented to us, that there's nothing close to unanimous agreement amongst members of the bench of this state and other people interested in this matter who have studied it and attempted to make recommendations, on how the court should be constituted. One method would be to have 3 circuit judges sitting en banc. Another method would be to have the 9 member supreme court break itself into 3 member banks, and as a 3 member bank be the intermediate appellate court. Another method would have been to use 2 circuit judges and 1 supreme court judge. Another method would have been to use a combination of retired circuit judges with supreme court judges, or with working circuit judges. And I want to say that each one of these plans has a considerable amount of support in the state. At least, this is my impression from what we have heard. Down in our own county, for example, I believe one of the things that our bench was unable to agree upon was how the court was to be constituted.

Now, there is a factor that comes into this that becomes very important. That is whether you conceive of the idea of an intermediate appellate court as being a truly appellate court, with a statewide vision and with a recognition and a compulsion for decisions that have statewide import, or whether this appellate court is conceived in your mind to be nothing more than a review board or a stepping stone toward the ultimate decision with a statewide viewpoint that we have now built into the supreme court. It is the view of some of us that in electing 3 judges from one particular territory—and let's assume for the moment that you go back to the original plan of the district plan people and you said that Wayne county or perhaps Wayne county and one of its neighbors were to have one of the appellate districts—then you would have the same 3 judges sitting constantly in that area reviewing the opinions from a limited number of circuit judges. Over a period of time, with a small bank of 3 judges, you would have the tendency of a dominant personality to emerge, and with a small number like this it becomes fatal.

The military, in setting up the uniform code of military justice a few years ago, had the advice of experts in the field of judicial administration. They have a review board system built into military justice now that is an exact duplicate of what is contemplated here with the intermediate court of appeals. And there is one very strong rule built into that system. That is that the 3 members of any given review board cannot sit together in perpetuity, but they are revolved. They do not hear the same kind of cases, and they do not sit with the same 3 people.

Now, you can't do this with the supreme court because they make their decisions in total, the whole 9 of them. But you could very well, in the intermediate court, secure what many lawyers think would be the epitome of a revolving court, or a court with a minimum of sectional, political, economic or any other philosophy built into it, in that you would be able to revolve the judges so that the 3 man bank was not always the same sitting in Detroit, not always the same in Grand Rapids, not always the same in Lansing, or Traverse City, or wherever they might choose to sit.

Now, if you go to a district plan of electing these judges, then you preclude acceptance by the public of the idea of electing on a district and then sending the judges from another section of the state. Much has been said here about sending in visiting judges. That's one thing. But when you're talking about electing judges from a particular part of the state who might sit for the principal part of their term in office in some part of the state where no person coming before them was an elector who selected them, this is something else again. And the decision on this depends on your first deciding what your concept of an intermediate appellate court is. If it is merely a screening process to see what is ultimately going to go to the supreme court, then there is no objection to the district plan. But if you really intend to have here a court that will be the ending place, the place where litigation comes to a final conclusion, then I think that you should adopt the same philosophy that has been adopted here this morning and build into this court the same statewide view of the matters coming before it. I urge the defeat of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Miss Donnelly and Mr. Boothby. Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: The purpose of this amendment is to not force statewide elections. If the supreme court were to decide that these individuals would sit in districts, to make them run statewide would seem ridiculous. You would have people from one part of the country having to sit someplace else, and if they are assigned to sit there for 6 years, it gets to be more than expensive for that individual member.

This is to give more leniency to the legislature. Originally, when this first thought of the intermediate court came to us—it was not the first thought, I presume—but the most forceful argument for it came from Justice Souris, who envisioned the court sitting in divisions of 3, which divisions would be set up based on the amount of judicial business that would probably come before that court.

Now, if the supreme court does divide the state—as it says, "The supreme court may prescribe by rule that the court of appeals may sit in divisions"—if it does decide to do this, and then to rotate these judges all over the state in the sense of having to sit for 6 years in one part of the state on this bench, as opposed to allowing them to just move whenever the supreme court decided that these individual people shall be moved, then we've got them locked into a place; and to require these people to go to a party convention, if they are only going to act in one part of the state, seems ridiculous. The purpose of this amendment initially is to allow more flexibility. And I ask that the question be divided; that the amendment be divided, and that we have a division vote.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss Donnelly, the Chair does not understand the manner in which you request the question to be divided.

[Whereupon, a consultation was had between Chairman Van Dusen and Miss Donnelly.]

The question will be so divided. Miss Donnelly has requested a division vote. Is the demand supported? It is supported.

MR. NORRIS: Point of information, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: State your point, Dr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: I wondered if we couldn't have the amendments as proposed put on the wall, the way we have been doing, at least, so we can have the complete text in front of us, so we can see what the divisions mean.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The copies have not been prepared as yet in form for projection, but the Chair will ask the secretary to read the 2 portions of the amendment as it will be divided. The first portion, as the Chair understands it, Miss Donnelly, is the question, "as provided by law". The second portion is the permission of the legislature to district the state. The secretary will read the 2 portions of the amendment, and then the Chair will recognize you.

SECRETARY CHASE: The first portion of the amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "elected" by striking out "in the same manner as the justices of the supreme court.", and inserting "as prescribed by law."; so that it will then read, "The court of appeals shall consist initially of 9 judges who shall be nominated and elected at nonpartisan elections as prescribed by law." The second part of the amendment would have the language, "The legislature may provide for the dividing of the state into districts for the purpose of selecting appellate court judges."

MR. MAHINSKE: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: State your point, Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: We had a ruling on this exact point yesterday, where we had an amendment to strike and insert, and it is not divisible.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Your point —

MR. MAHINSKE: I would favor a division here, but we might as well be consistent.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Your point is well taken, Mr. Mahinske. However, if you withdraw your objection, the committee can proceed without objection to a division of the question.

MR. MAHINSKE: No; I'll leave my objection in.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: In that event, Mr. Mahinske, the Chair will necessarily rule that the provision of rule 51 prohibiting the division of amendments to strike out and insert will prevail, and that the question cannot be divided. Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I think maybe I can possibly clear up one problem which might exist in the minds of the delegates after Mr. Ford made his remarks. One of his principal objections, apparently, to this amendment was that it would, as he indicated by his statement, force 3 judges to continually sit together in one particular area of the state, and would prevent them from sitting in other areas of the state, and from being divided up. I think this point is not well taken. As we well know, the circuit judges are moved about by the supreme court, and they are moved from one area to another. I do not believe that the wording in this amendment would prohibit the supreme court from taking the appellate judges and placing them in a particular division and having them sit, regardless of where they were elected from. I don't believe that Mr. Ford's point was well taken in that respect.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that this amendment is very much in order. The election of your appellate court judges by district is something which can very well fit into the judicial structure, even though the convention may have decided to elect the supreme court justices by a statewide election. Since the court will be divided and will be able to sit in divisions, it seems entirely in order to allow the appellate court judges to be elected by district, as was originally comtemplated in the committee proposal, which proposed that supreme court justices as well be elected by district.

I think there are some real advantages to this, in encouraging good judges to run in these districts for these appellate court positions, and in giving the public an opportunity to vote for people whom they know. I would favor the Boothby amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to rise in favor of the amendment, and just point out to some of the members of the committee who are not attorneys that there is a very practical problem that I think would be solved by the adoption of this amendment. When this came up in the committee, it was my hope that we would be able to provide—or at least provide the framework so that such a provision could be made—for a much less expensive type of appeal than an appeal to the supreme court is at the present time. And by adopting this amendment you would enable the state, by being divided into districts, to accomplish to some extent that hope. For instance, you may know that the United States district court in the state of Michigan sits mainly in Detroit. But the court sits at times in Bay City, and there also is another court established in Grand Rapids. Now, that is for the convenience of the people of the state, and also it enables people around the state to have their cases heard and tried at much less cost. And even the cost of traveling—say if it were one court sitting in Lansing, or in any one city—the cost of people traveling from all parts of the state to that one court would be considerable, plus having their attorneys, and the time the attorneys have to spend in traveling. If that could be avoided it would be a step in the right direction.

The second thing I would like to show, let me say to the lay men and women of this committee, is this little book that I hold in my hand. Now, that book is an appellee's brief. That is the printed brief that was filed in a case in the supreme court within the last month. That brief has 93 pages in it, and just to print it cost over $500. The record in the case consisted of 2 volumes of nearly 500 pages each, or nearly 1,000 pages of printed record, while this little brief that cost $500 only has 93 pages.

It was my hope that we could provide a means whereby maybe a much less expensive type of appeal could be made, perhaps by just typewritten briefs —

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence, the Chair is reluctant to interrupt, but the question is on the method of electing judges of the court of appeals, and the Chair will request that you return to that point by the least circuitous possible route.

MR. LAWRENCE: I will endeavor to do so. Just let me collect myself for a minute. The reason that I thought I was on that subject, I thought that the amendment stated that the state would be set up in districts, or the legislature would set up the state in districts; is that not correct?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: No. The Chair thinks the amendment deals with the method of election. The second sentence of the proposal as it presently stands states that the supreme court may prescribe by rule that the court of appeals may sit in divisions. That, however, is not before the committee at this point, Mr. Lawrence. The only question is the method of election.

MR. LAWRENCE: Then I will say this: I appreciate your forebearance. I hope you will remember what I have said, so I won't have to repeat it when the other point comes up. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, as is customary in this convention, the lawyers are divided on this question. I think this is one area where we laymen can excuse them for being so divided. This is a new area of court structure in Michigan. We have not had it before. And I would just like to make a couple of points on it.

This particular section that says—and which this would strike—that they shall be elected in the same manner as the members of the supreme court, is a pretty rigid restriction on the legislature. Now, we are going into a new area. The lawyers, the laymen—no one knows exactly how the thing is going to work. I submit to you that it's a mistake to leave that kind of a restriction in a proposed constitution.

Now, I think there is one other significant factor. You will find that one of the introducers of this particular amendment is a well known proponent of the district plan, and the other is a very well known opponent of the district plan. So this isn't a question of whether we are going to have a district plan or some other kind of a plan for the court of appeals. But we are entering into a new area and nobody knows how it is going to work. Certainly, here is an area where we should leave it to the legislature to provide the rules. I urge you strongly to support the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct a question to one of the sponsors of this amendment, if I may.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If either Miss Donnelly or Mr. Boothby cares to answer.

MR. HIGGS: The question is: would this permit the possibility of a partisan nomination and a nonpartisan election, as we presently have?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Boothby or Miss Donnelly, do you care to answer?

MISS DONNELLY: I'm sorry, I didn't hear it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Will you restate your question, Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: The question is whether this would permit a partisan nomination preceding the nonpartisan election.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: Well, certainly if it's not changed it would require a partisan nomination. By allowing this leniency, I think it could make it—as a matter of fact, I thought it said nonpartisan nomination and election, if the truth be known.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary will reread the amendment.

MISS DONNELLY: I thought the way I wrote it it said that.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Write in haste, repent at leisure, Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: Well, that's true. It is becoming very obvious.

SECRETARY CHASE: The following is the Donnelly-Boothby amendment:

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: Does that answer your question?

MR. HIGGS: Yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Miss Donnelly and Mr. Boothby to section a of Committee Proposal 92. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Then my initial question to Mr. Boothby is not the same as it was before. If this amendment would pass, then the legislature could not provide that the court of appeals could be nominated and elected in the same manner as the justices of the supreme court. Is that correct, Mr. Boothby and Miss Donnelly?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Apparently a party convention is a partisan affair. So, according to the wording, it would probably prohibit that. I would suggest that if this is giving some pause to some of the members of the committee, that the proper procedure would be that after this amendment is adopted, to consider that particular provision.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I just wanted to inquire of the movers whether or not they intended to restrict the method given to the legislature, or to leave it completely to the legislature. What was the intent of the amendment? As it stands now the legislature would be restricted from doing certain things. My initial thought was that we were going to give to the legislature carte blanche authority to nominate in the way they saw fit, and then to elect at a nonpartisan election. Now, that was my original idea of this. If I'm in error, it may change my thinking on this particular amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Danhof, to specifically answer your question, my original thought was to leave it pretty much to the legislature. What actually occured was that Miss Donnelly walked up to the desk with the first part of this amendment, I walked up with the last part of the amendment, and so, necessarily, there was not complete unanimity of thought on that one particular provision. But I do suggest that the proper method of handling this problem may be to offer an amendment to that one small portion of the amendment dealing with nonpartisan elections.

MR. DANHOF: From my own standpoint, Mr. Boothby, I could well support, perhaps, personally, a provision that would leave everything to the legislature regarding nomination, including the right to set it by party or to set it by district, whatever they would deem desirable; that the election would be by nonpartisan election; and that we would in effect be leaving to the legislature the method of nomination, but election by a nonpartisan ballot, by districts or statewide, whatever they would desire. I could probably support this type of amendment. As this one is now drawn, I'm afraid it is somewhat restrictive. And if you would wish to go in that particular direction, why, my own personal opinion would be to support you.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Well, my only reply is that I would agree to have the word "nonpartisan" stricken. I don't know what Miss Donnelly's thinking is on it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: It's going too fast for me. In other words, by striking "nonpartisan" and the legislature may make it partisan or nonpartisan? Is that the nature of your question, Mr. Danhof? In your opinion, that's what the draft would do?

MR. DANHOF: All I envision is, Mr. Boothby said he intended basically to leave everything to the legislature. The matter of nomination as it now stands would have to be, in effect, by nonpartisan primary. They could not be nominated in the same manner as the supreme court justices might be, by convention. I don't think there is much doubt that perhaps the majority of this convention is for a nonpartisan ballot to elect. My only question is whether you intended at the time to restrict the manner of nomination to a nonpartisan primary, or whether the import of the amendment was to just leave it to the legislature to establish the method by which they should be nominated and in fact elected, assuming election on a nonpartisan ballot.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof and Miss Donnelly, the secretary advises that the solution to your problem may be at hand. Mr. Elliott has offered a revised amendment. The Chair recognizes Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Mr. Chairman, would the secretary read the amendment and see if it's satisfactory to Mr. Boothby and Miss Donnelly.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Arthur Elliott offers a revised amendment as follows:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "elected" by striking out "in the same manner as the justices of the supreme court.", and inserting "as prescribed by law. The legislature may provide for the dividing of the state into districts for the purpose of selecting appellate court judges.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Boothby? Miss Donnelly? Which of you desires recognition?

MISS DONNELLY: Mr. Boothby, I think, has answered the question, have you not? Mr. Boothby wanted it removed in the first instance, so he certainly says yes.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman, I would be very happy to have Mr. Elliott's name added to this amendment, if that could be done by the striking of those words which he suggested.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Boothby accepts the revised amendment. Miss Donnelly?

MISS DONNELLY: Yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Miss Donnelly accepts the revised amendment. The question is now on the amendment offered by Miss Donnelly and Mr. Boothby, as revised at the suggestion of Mr. Elliott, to insert the words "as prescribed by law. The legislature may provide for the dividing of the state into districts for the purpose of selecting appellate court judges." The question is now upon the amendment so offered. Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: May I inquire of the sponsors if this amendment as it now stands would permit the nomination and election of appellate court judges on partisan ballots?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: As I understand the portent of this amendment, it leaves it completely within the discretion of the legislature.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, I would then oppose the amendment. It seems to me the people of the state of Michigan have pretty well indicated they want nonpartisan election of judges. And I think that we are going a long ways in creating a new court and at the same time putting it on party ballots, or possibly at party conventions. I oppose the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the revised amendment offered by Miss Donnelly, Mr. Boothby and Mr. Elliott. A division has been ordered. Those who are in favor of the amendment as revised will vote aye. Those who are opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Miss Donnelly and Messrs. Boothby and Elliott, the yeas are 61; the nays are 63.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is not adopted. Are there any further amendments to Committee Proposal 92? If not, the proposal will pass.

Committee Proposal 92 is passed. The secretary will read the amendment offered as section 1 to Committee Proposal 96, A proposal pertaining to general and special provisions relative to the courts of the state.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 96, see above, page 1554.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Danhof, on the behalf of the committee on judicial branch, has offered the following amendment:

1. Amend page 4, following line 1, by inserting a new section to read as follows:

"Sec. 1. Any justice or judge of a court of record desiring to become a candidate for election or reelection to a judicial office then held by him, may, in lieu of nomination as provided in this constitution or by law, nominate himself by affidavit filed in the office of the secretary of state not less than 90 days prior to the date of the primary election or election as the case may be, which is applicable to the office to be filled.". To which Mr. Ford has offered this amendment:

1. Amend the amendment, after "in lieu of" by striking out "nomination" and inserting "filing nominating petitions"; so that the language will then read, "may, in lieu of filing nominating petitions as provided in this constitution,"; and after "or by law,", by striking out "nominate himself" and inserting "cause his name to be printed on the primary election ballot"; so that the language will read, "cause his name to be printed on the primary election ballot by affidavit filed in the office of the secretary of state. . . ."

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendments offered by Mr. Ford. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I wish to withdraw those amendments. They were made the other day. There is a committee amendment that I feel should take precedence.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof, do you likewise withdraw your amendment? Mr. Ford's amendments to your amendment have been withdrawn.

MR. DANHOF: Is that the old one, or is that a new one? Yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof, without objection, withdraws his amendment. The secretary will read the amendment offered by Messrs. Lawrence, Danhof, Ford and others.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Lawrence, Danhof, Ford, Miss Donnelly, Messrs. Bledsoe, Krolikowski, Woolfenden, Miss McGowan, Messrs. Tubbs, Barthwell, Garvin, Everett, Cudlip, Higgs, Prettie, Pugsley, Iverson and Ostrow offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 4, following line 1, by inserting a new section to read as follows:

"Sec. 1. Any judge of a circuit court or probate court may become a candidate in the primary election for the office of which he is then the incumbent, by filing a declaration of intention at such time and in such office as provided by law.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Lawrence, Danhof and others. The Chair will recognize Mr. Danhof, and will then recognize you, Judge Leibrand.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, this amendment is simply to clear up the matter raised by Mr. Ford. It is endorsed by practically all of the committee on judicial branch. Inasmuch as we have handled the incumbent renomination of the supreme court and the court of appeals, this matter is now limited to the other 2 courts of record. We have shortened the language, and I think it is not mandatory; it is only permissive. If the judge desires to be nominated as a candidate by any other means provided by law, he may do so. It does obviate the necessity in the metropolitan areas of circulating petitions and endeavoring to obtain names. I think it is a provision which would facilitate the renomination of the bench, and eliminate the necessity of trying to gather up a group to obtain names by any and various means.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: On the amendment offered by Messrs. Lawrence, Danhof, Ford and others, the Chair will recognize Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, may I inquire of the secretary or Mr. Danhof if this proposed amendment is printed anywhere, either as a proposal or in the journal?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment is projected on the wall, Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Lawrence, Danhof, Ford, Miss Donnelly and others. Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I noticed that the wording of the last sentence here is not mandatory. Was it the intent that this should be mandatory on the legislature?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I said, Mr. Mahinske, that this will allow a judge to become a candidate by filing such a declaration as shall be prescribed. It is not mandatory that this is the only means by which a judge can get his name on the ballot.

MR. MAHINSKE: You missed my point, Mr. Danhof. You have in your last line "and in such office as shall be provided by law." I would like to know, is it your intent that the legislature shall provide by law that the self nominating application shall go into effect?

MR. DANHOF: Yes.

MR. MAHINSKE: This is not self executing, as I read it, and I think possibly we should reword it so it would be self executing.

MR. DANHOF: I think, Mr. Mahinske and Mr. Chairman, the legislature has to designate the office, the clerk or the secretary of state. If there's more than one county involved, they might have to set up the form of the particular paper or the declaration. That is, the manner and the form — that it has to be under oath, or something like that. We intend this to be mandatory, and that the legislature shall designate the office, whatever it may be — the county clerk, the secretary of state, or some other office.

MR. MAHINSKE: I don't think that this is self executing as it is worded now. I don't think that it makes it mandatory upon the legislature to go through the enabling acts here and set up who is to be the filing officer, or how many days prior, and so forth. It just doesn't read that way. And I'm sure your intent was that the circuit and probate judges shall have this right, and that the legislature is going to have to act to implement this right that you are conferring on them here.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: I would like, with your permission, Mr. Danhof, to answer Mr. Mahinske. I think you are absolutely right, Mr. Mahinske, on the intent. There's no question but that the intent is this. A judge is not compelled to use this method, but may. But the legislature shall set the time and designate the office, and that's all. In other words, I take it that a simple way for a judge to do this would be to simply write a letter saying, "I hereby declare my intention to be a candidate at the primary on such and such a date." Where he files it and within what time ahead of the primary is to be fixed by the legislature. Now, it seems to me it covers that. If the legislature did not act, it would seem to me that the candidate would probably be without remedy, unless you can mandamus some official to require him to file it. But that certainly was the intent. If you raise any question about it, I would like to know what you would propose.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Mahinske, do you desire to revise the last line by inserting the words "shall be" before "provided"?

MR. MAHINSKE: Between "as" and "provided". I think this may cure some of it, not all of it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the revision of Mr. Mahinske to insert the words "shall be" between the words "as" and "provided" in the last line of the amendment.

MR. LAWRENCE: There are 18 of the 21 members who signed this. As a minority of 1, I would have no objection to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I have none. Mr. Ford nods assent. I see a lot of hands going up saying yes. We will put "shall be" in there, Mr. Mahinske.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Without objection, the amendment is revised. The question is now upon the amendment, as revised, offered by Messrs. Lawrence, Danhof, Ford and others. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: As revised, the Lawrence, Danhof, Ford amendment reads as follows:

1. Amend page 4, following line 1, by inserting a new section to read as follows:

"Sec. 1. Any judge of a circuit court or probate court may become a candidate in the primary election for the office of which he is then the incumbent, by filing a declaration of intention at such time and in such office as shall be provided by law.".

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: When section 1 appeared the other day, presented by the majority members of the committee, we objected at that time because it might have been construed to substitute this declaration of intention for the primary election as far as an incumbent was concerned. I am not enthusiastic about the whole concept of self renomination, but recognizing that we can't have everything that we would like to have, and in the spirit of cooperation that we have all been exuding this morning, we did collaborate with Mr. Lawrence in bringing about language that was satisfactory to us on the basis that if we do have to have a form of this process in the constitution, this is its least objectionable form. And for that reason we would support the amendment that we have our names on.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, I would like to address a question to the sponsors of this amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: There are 18, Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Well, let's take Mr. Lawrence. He seems to be the head man. We have previously provided that in the event of vacancy in a court of record, the supreme court may designate a retired judge to fill that vacancy. It seems to me that this might be in conflict. Would the sponsors have any objection to inserting the word "elected" in the first line between the words "any" and "judge?"

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Judge Leibrand, I wish to thank you for designating me as the head man. But, frankly, with 18 on here, I would like to caucus before answering that.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Messrs. Lawrence, Danhof, Ford, Miss Donnelly, Messrs. Bledsoe, Krolikowski, Woolfenden and others who the Chair hopes may not be offended by not having their names read. Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Did I understand that Judge Leibrand proposed to amend that, or was that merely a question?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: I believe that was merely a question, was it not, Judge Leibrand?

MR. LEIBRAND: That was all, Mr. Chairman, at the time.

MR. HIGGS: If it were an amendment, I certainly would not oppose it.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I can understand the wisdom of permitting a supreme court justice to file an affidavit or a declaration of intention if he wants to continue sitting on the court, for the reason, as I understand it, it is possible that under the law he might, as an incumbent justice, otherwise have to go to a party convention and convince them that he should continue to be their nominee. But in regards to a circuit court judge or a probate court judge, as I understand it these judges all are going to be nominated at nonpartisan primaries. None of them will ever have to go to any kind of a party convention with their hat in their hand and ask for support. At most, without this language in the constitution, they might have to go around and get a few petitions. But I submit that even if this language were not in the constitution, the legislature could provide for this very procedure. This is a matter that can be handled by law. I can see no reason for writing it into the constitution, and so I oppose the amendment.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Those who are in favor of the amendment offered by Messrs. Lawrence, Danhof, Ford and others — Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Chairman, I was in the process of preparing an amendment. Since it is so simple, perhaps it could be made orally, without objection.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If there is no objection, Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: To insert the word "elected" before "judge" in the first line, so it would read "any elected judge." This was certainly my intention, and the intention of, I believe, a number of the sponsors, although not necessarily all.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the amendment offered by Mr. Higgs to the first line of the amendment offered by Messrs. Lawrence and others:

1. Amend the amendment in the first line after "any" by inserting "elected"; so the language will then read: "any elected judge of a circuit court," et cetera. Mr. Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: I would just like to speak, briefly, in opposition to this amendment. If I am correct, no appointed judge would be eligible to run for election to that office, as I understand the action we have taken in the past. So there is no need for the word "elected" in it. Judge Leibrand mentioned that the supreme court could appoint someone to fill a vacancy, correct. But, by its very terms, that provision says that that judge shall not be eligible to run for reelection.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. Lawrence, I think if that is our intention, we should so state it. Even though that may eventually become true, it is not necessarily true as of now. And I'm certain that it was the thinking of a few of the people on the committee that this particular provision should be extended only to elected incumbents. And there will be at the time, assuming that the constitution is adopted, there will be judges sitting who were not elected.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Those who are in favor of the amendment offered by Mr. Higgs to insert the word "elected" after the word "any" in the first line of the Lawrence amendment will say aye. Those opposed will say no. The Chair is in doubt. Those who are in favor of the Higgs amendment to the Lawrence amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Higgs, the yeas are 56; the nays are 53.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The amendment to the amendment is adopted. The question is now upon the amendment offered by Messrs. Lawrence, Danhof, Ford and others, as amended. Does any delegate desire to have the amendment read again? If not, those who are in favor of the amendment offered by Mr. Lawrence and others will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The amendment, as amended, is adopted.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Division is requested. Is the demand supported?

It is not supported. Are there further amendments to the body of Committee Proposal 96?

SECRETARY CHASE: A minority report on file by Messrs. Ford, Barthwell, Bledsoe and Garvin offers an amendment to strike out the present section 1 and insert a new section 1 to read—

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: I should like at this time to move the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof moves that the committee do now rise. Those in favor of Mr. Danhof's motion will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The committee will now rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, Vice President Hutchinson assumed the Chair.]

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Oakland, Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration several matters, of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 92, A proposal pertaining to a court of appeals. It reports this proposal back to the convention without amendment, and with the recommendation that it do pass.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The proposal will be referred to the committee on style and drafting.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Mr. President, I think there are amendments.

SECRETARY CHASE: I'm sorry. Mr. Arthur Elliott offers the following amendment—

MR. WANGER: Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: I move we recess until 2:00 o'clock.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Wanger moves that the convention stand in recess until 2:00 p.m. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The motion prevails, and it is so ordered.

[Whereupon, at 12:00 o'clock noon, the convention recessed; and, at 2:00 o'clock p.m., reconvened.]

The convention will be in order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present. When the convention recessed for lunch, there was pending the report on Committee Proposal 92 from the committee of the whole, to which Mr. Arthur Elliott had filed the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "elected" by striking out "in the same manner as the justices of the supreme court.", and inserting "as prescribed by law."; so the first sentence will read, "The court of appeals shall consist initially of 9 judges, who shall be nominated and elected as prescribed by law."

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: On the amendment, the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oakland, Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this amendment is an attempt to give the legislature the flexibility that I'm confident they should have, particularly in this court, which is a new court to our judicial system. I can see no reason why it wouldn't be consistent with everything that we have done to date to make it possible for the legislature in its wisdom, once this constitution has been adopted, to then draft and draw the type of statutory language that would adequately and properly set up this entire court of appeals.

[President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment. Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: May I inquire of Mr. Elliott, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT NISBET: If Mr. Elliott cares to answer.

MR. LEIBRAND: Now, I presume then the meaning and intent of your amendment, Mr. Elliott, is that a state convention down in Detroit could select the appellate judges or at least the nominees for appellate judges for these outstate districts? Is that what the purpose of your amendment is?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: No, that is not the purpose.

MR. LEIBRAND: Would your amendment permit that?

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: I think that my amendment would permit whatever the legislative branch of government established as the law under which the appellate court should be established. If you'll note, I think that what we now have in the committee proposal is a prescribed, rigid requirement that the appellate court be selected in exactly the same manner as the justices of the supreme court. What I'm trying to do is to strike that language and to make it possible for the legislature in its wisdom to establish the election and nomination of these judges in the manner which they feel is best.

MR. LEIBRAND: In your judgment, Mr. Elliott, would your amendment permit the election of these judges on a party basis? Would it permit the legislature to prescribe the nomination and election of these judges on a partisan basis?

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: My concept of the judiciary is a nonpartisan concept, but the language as I have offered it would leave to the legislature the freedom of determining whether or not the election should be either partisan or nonpartisan. It does not prescribe that it must be partisan, but it does not prescribe that it must be nonpartisan. It gives them that degree of flexibility.

MR. LEIBRAND: Thank you, Mr. Elliott. I feel that I shall have to oppose the amendment.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the amendment. Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. President and members of the convention I would like again to remind you that this is very, very important. I feel strongly about it. You are sailing now on uncharted seas insofar as a court in Michigan is concerned. You do not know. Here is the place to leave that flexibility, and to leave it to the legislature.

Don't be misguided by those people who would have you believe that because you leave this open to the legislature to decide, that they will necessarily saddle you with partisan elections. They are very, very apt not to do that. The people have pretty well expressed themselves on that in Michigan. And it would be only natural to assume that the legislature would keep it on a nonpartisan basis. But you do need the flexibility, and the Elliott amendment certainly does that. I again urge you to support it.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. President, I would also like to ask Mr. Elliott a question.

PRESIDENT NISBET: If Mr. Elliott cares to answer.

MR. TUBBS: Do you think your amendment would permit the legislature to set up a system of appointing circuit judges to the court of appeals?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Elliott.

MR. A. G. ELLIOTT: No, I don't. Because I have not struck the word "elected." I merely struck the language after the word "elected" and added "as prescribed by law." And "elected" I think would mean just that.

MR. TUBBS: I agree with Mr. Farnsworth, Mr. President, that we need flexibility at this point. This is something new, and we may have to experiment. There is one state not far away where the judges of this court are appointed from the lower courts, and then those lower court vacancies are filled by their regular system of appointment or election. And we might try that here. I would like to see this provision flexible enough to do it.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the Elliott amendment. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted. Are there any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Miss Donnelly has filed the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "nominated" by striking out the remainder of the sentence and inserting "as provided by law and elected on a nonpartisan ballot."; so the sentence will read, "The court of appeals shall consist initially of 9 judges who shall be nominated as provided by law and elected on a nonpartisan ballot."

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the Donnelly amendment. Does Miss Donnelly care to be recognized? Miss Donnelly, do you care to speak on your amendment?

MISS DONNELLY: You'll have to excuse me. I was with the ladies. I gather that Mr. Elliott's amendment —

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair might say, Miss Donnelly, in order for you to catch your breath — and the Chair was fortunate to arrive a little ahead of you — that Mr. Elliott's amendment has been adopted. Now we are voting on the amendment as suggested by yourself. Have you got your wind back?

MISS DONNELLY: This isn't the amendment that I placed on the secretary's desk before I left.

SECRETARY CHASE: It is.

MISS DONNELLY: I'm sorry, maybe I should — I'm not going to lunch again with the girls. The one I placed on the secretary's desk had inserted "who shall be nominated as provided by law and elected on a nonpartisan basis." That isn't what we just flashed. To me there is only one nuance of difference from Mr. Elliott's, and that's "nominated as prescribed by law." I'm not sure. If I could have a moment to see them both as written, I'll be able to make better sense of it.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Will the people in charge of projecting the amendments on the wall please see that Miss Donnelly's amendment is put on the wall. Miss Donnelly, can you proceed while they are getting the piece cut for the machine?

MISS DONNELLY: Yes. The only difference is, I have, in addition, "nominated and elected on a nonpartisan ballot." The only nuance of difference is the ending. And mine requires that it be elected on a nonpartisan ballot, whereas his just says "as prescribed by law." Mr. Hutchinson just asked me a leading question, and if I said yes it might be easier. All right, I will withdraw it.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is withdrawn. Are there any further amendments, Mr. Chase?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Boothby, Dehnke and Pugsley offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "nominated" by inserting "as provided by law" and after "elected" by striking out "in the same manner as the justices of the supreme court.", and inserting "at nonpartisan elections as provided by law. The legislature may provide for the dividing of the state into districts for the purpose of selecting appellate court judges."; so that the language will then read:

> The court of appeals shall consist initially of 9 judges who shall be nominated as provided by law and elected at nonpartisan elections as provided by law. The legislature may provide for the dividing of the state into districts for the purpose of selecting appellate court judges.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. President, I hate to bring down confusion. Nevertheless, there is on the secretary's desk another amendment which we had desired to have presented first. I am wondering if the secretary could read that.

SECRETARY CHASE: The other amendment that Mr. Boothby has filed is:

1. Amend page 1, line 5, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the line, all of line 6 and through the first "court.", in line 7, and inserting "The court of appeals shall consist initially of 9 judges who shall be nominated and elected on a nonpartisan basis from districts of the state as established from time to time by the legislature.".

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, the names of Judge Dehnke and Judge Pugsley should be added to this amendment. They are cosponsors of this amendment.

The amendment which is now before you makes no question as to the method of selection of appellate court judges which is sought. We feel that for the selection of appellate court judges the most feasible method of selecting these individuals would be on a district basis. This does not leave to the legislature the method by which to select these particular judges. It should be noted for those people who have some hesitation about the question of nonpartisan versus partisan election that this amendment calls for not only a nonpartisan election, but a nonpartisan nomination. I know of no other way to have a truly nonpartisan nomination than by a district basis. And this would allow for that to take place. It would also allow for a truly nonpartisan election. In other words, an election not dictated by a party or by any particular organization. Now, this has, I feel, a great deal of merit.

There has been some opposition, as we have seen, to a district basis for the selection of supreme court judges, and it was reasoned by some that the supreme court should not be placed on a district basis because the supreme court is hearing cases from all parts of the state, and that those people who preside over those cases should be elected by all the people of the state.

I would like to call to the attention of the convention that, as I understand, the intention of the committee on judicial branch which considered the creation of this particular intermediate appellate court was to create a court which would allow for divisions to sit in separate parts of the state. So it does contemplate a regional situation. Therefore, it would tie in with a district selection of judges for this particular intermediate appellate court. I would like to point out that we're going to have a great many problems if we have a situation occurring where both the intermediate appellate court and the supreme court justices would possibly be elected on a statewide ballot. We will have our hands full getting information out to the people of the state regarding the supreme court judges. But when we come down to the intermediate appellate court, I submit to you that it would be most difficult to acquaint the people of the state with the qualifications and backgrounds of the people running for the intermediate appellate court, which is essentially a regional court.

I think it should be further pointed out that we might very well have reluctant candidates for this office. Because I could conceive that the pay for the judge of the intermediate appellate court would be somewhat less than the pay for a supreme court judge. Nevertheless, if you had him run on a statewide basis, the cost of election would be at least as great and maybe greater than the candidate for the supreme court. I think that the district court basis has a great deal of merit for the selection of judges for the intermediate appellate court, regardless of what your feeling is on the selection of judges for the supreme court. I actually think it is 2 separate issues. And I would urge your support for this amendment, which would actually require the selection of intermediate appellate court judges on a district basis.

You will note that this amendment leaves to the legislature the determination on what these districts shall be. It is my own personal conviction that these districts should be created on 2 bases: one, on a population basis, and another, consideration should be given to a work load basis. Because, as we know, population may not be the only consideration which should be given; because the work load in certain areas of the state may be much greater than in another area, regardless of population. But this whole question would be left to the legislature.

The amendment is simple in nature. It would require that initially there would be 9 judges elected. And this falls into line with the committee's original recommendation. But, as you will note, the word is "initially," and the makeup of the court could be enlarged or lessened according to the decision of the legislative body. At this time I would yield to Judge Dehnke, if he has any comments on this amendment.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I think Mr. Boothby has covered the field pretty well. I might add a few words, but I have no new ideas. Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I would like to ask Mr. Boothby a question through the Chair, if I may.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Would you care to answer, Mr. Boothby?

MR. FORD: Mr. Boothby, do you contemplate any amendments to section b of this proposal? Section b provides that 3 judges will be elected initially for 2 years, 3 for 4 years, and 3 for 6 years.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: I frankly hadn't given any thought to that.

MR. FORD: Isn't it true that when you take section b into consideration, since we are creating a new court here and we are and we are freezing into the constitution the requirement that the districts be established at the time that the court is established, that when we at the same time provide for the staggered terms, we are freezing the districts for all time? Because you would never have a situation where all 9 judges left office at once, and it seems inconceivable—perhaps you can tell us how—that you would ever be able to change a district after you once got this snowball started downhill.

MR. BOOTHBY: In other words, you are questioning the word "initially" there? Whether that could be changed?

MR. FORD: No. I'm questioning whether you could ever change the district. You have language in there that seems to contemplate that there would be reapportionment of the judicial districts on the basis of population and work load, as you indicated. But isn't it true that when read in context with the other section, you would never to able to do it with the staggered terms without interfering with the term of office of people in office?

MR. BOOTHBY: In other words, you might have some suggestion that the incumbent judge, even though he didn't remain in that district, would continue to serve?

MR. FORD: Yes. Suppose, for example, that they determined to add Oakland county to Wayne county as a district, but the judges in Oakland county and the judges in Wayne county would not all be going out of office at the same time. How would you accomplish this without actually transferring territory of a judge who wasn't elected by the people? Your argument is that a judge should be elected by the people in the territory in which he serves.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Ford, we have taken care of this same problem at least 1 other time, I think 2 other times, by allowing that an incumbent judge may continue to serve even though his district has been taken away from him. In other words, he would not immediately be thrown out of office because his district was changed. The legislative organization committee has come upon this same type of thinking, when they suggested that if, on annexation, a representative district is changed so as to leave the representative in another district, it would provide that he could continue to serve in the legislature. He would not be disqualified. I think that the problem that you raise could be handled in the same way, by an amendment to the other section.

MR. FORD: Thank you. Mr. President, I would like to oppose the proposed amendment. Mr. Elliott has offered to us an opportunity to provide a clear, open field for experimentation, if necessary, with various ways of selecting this court by the legislature until a system that is in fact satisfactory is arrived at. The effect of this amendment would be to freeze in, for perhaps the next 50 years, a requirement not only of primary elections, but the district plan itself, which would preclude any other method of nomination and preclude any other method that the people of the state through the legislative body might think would be an improvement, short of a constitutional amendment.

I feel that everything that is sought to be accomplished here could in fact be accomplished by the language that we have already adopted, by adopting Mr. Elliott's language amending the committee proposal, because the legislature could in fact establish this method. But if it did establish this method and then discovered that there were reasons in the next 20 or 50 years why this was no longer a workable system, they could change it very readily to meet the changing times and needs of the state. For this reason I urge that you defeat the amendment.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I was called out of the room for a minute here. Possibly this question has been answered. I would direct this to either of the proponents of the amendment. As I read the amendment, you talk about their being selected and elected from districts. Now, will they also serve in these districts? In other words, is this an appellate court based on districts?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Judge Dehnke, do you care to answer the question? Mr. Boothby was called from the room.

[Mrs. Butler and Mrs. Koeze entered the chamber wearing hats depicting Miss Mackinac Bridge and Miss 1908. (applause and laughter)]

The Chair imagines that our delegates, Mrs. Butler and Mrs. Koeze, had the winning hats.

MRS. KOEZE: No, I'm just Miss 1908. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: If so, Heaven help us. (laughter) I was just looking at the cost factor.

MRS. BUTLER: I just want everybody to know that I'm Miss Mackinac Bridge. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Are you sure, Mrs. Butler, this isn't undue pressure on the convention? (laughter)

MRS. BUTLER: I swear it is not.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. President, I was going to suggest 2 thoughts, 1 in answer to Mr. Ford's question, and 1 in answer to Mr. Mahinske's question. This paragraph will continue to provide:

> The supreme court may prescribe by rule that the court of appeals may sit in divisions, the terms of court and the times and places thereof. Each such division shall consist of not fewer than 3 judges.

I think that clearly makes it proper for the supreme court to assign the judges as in their judgment seems best.

I observe that one of the handicaps of a good lawyer, Mr. President, is that he has such a lively imagination that if he took into account all of the possibilities of trouble that he can think of, he would never be in a position to tell his client what is safe and what is not safe for him to do. Mr. Ford is a good lawyer, and he suffers under that handicap. (laughter) I think the legislature could handle that matter very easily by determining in the statute from time to time when changes in the district should take effect. They could make those changes effective in accordance with the expiration of the terms then in office. Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Then I would like to direct a further question to Mr. Danhof. In the language of the committee proposal, did they anticipate that the phraseology with reference to the court sitting in different divisions referred to a district plan, or just setting up divisions of the appellate court, and possibly 3 members would sit in a division, although they would actually be a statewide circuit?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Mahinske, the question that you propound I think can be answered this way. Regardless of when or how the judges were elected, it was our opinion that the supreme court should be left the authority to prescribe the divisions, the terms of the court, and the times and the places thereof. For the reason that this is basically procedure. We did not necessarily envision that judges elected from a particular district or division would necessarily always sit in that division. We think it would be well perhaps if the personnel might change from time to time. This is why we left it particularly flexible. If you elected them statewide, they can be assigned into divisions in such way as the supreme court would see fit.

If the legislature—as we now have adopted it, "as prescribed by law"—should see fit to make elections by districts, and 3 judges would be elected from a particular district, I feel certain that the supreme court would provide that the court shall sit in the division, and probably those judges elected from a particular district or division would stay there. But we did not feel that we should make this mandatory. There may be times when they have to be moved around, for the best efficiency of the court. Occasionally a change of personnel is good. And it should not always be the same 3 sitting in a particular division. But I think if you elected by divisions, that the supreme court would certainly for the majority of the time assign 3 particular judges from that division to sit somewhere in that division. But not mandatorily.

MR. MAHINSKE: Then, as I understand it, the only difference between the committee's section a and the new proposed section a is that you also call for a district plan, although you choose to call it divisions, which is optional, and the amendment makes it mandatory?

MR. DANHOF: The amendment makes the nomination and election from such districts mandatory. I don't think that the amendment has anything to do with the fact that the court might not necessarily take the same 3 from a district and assign them to the same division if the language would stand.

MR. MAHINSKE: But I mean, it would be possible under the committee proposal for these to be statewide selections rather than district selections?

MR. DANHOF: Well, as the committee has amended it, this is the way it stands. This is the latest amendment, and it has been adopted. If the legislature should determine it will be by statewide election, then it will become statewide.

MR. MAHINSKE: And the amendment would make it mandatory that it will not be statewide?

MR. DANHOF: That you had better get from one of the proponents of the new amendment rather than myself, Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: That's what I'm trying to get cleared up—whether or not the district plan is mandatory under the proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Do you direct your question to Judge Dehnke?

MR. MAHINSKE: Yes.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: I think that's true, Mr. President.

MR. MAHINSKE: Thank you, Judge.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. President, fellow delegates, I rise to support the amendment. I opposed the district plan for the supreme court. To me this is an entirely different matter. The problem in the districting of the supreme court, to me, at least—and I know that others differ for different reasons—was that we had a statewide court which was to be elected from districts. This problem does not occur, however, in this intermediate court of appeals because its function is to apply the law which, in the final analysis, will be determined by the supreme court. So that if there are differences, I doubt very much if they would be differences because of region. There probably will be differences, because judges differ. These differences will ultimately be resolved by the supreme court, which will be a statewide court, and then will be applied in the same manner in every part of the state.

Before the judicial branch committee perhaps the most vocal spokesman for an intermediate court of appeals was Justice Souris, and he advocated that we write into the constitution a provision that there be at least 3 divisions to this court established by the legislature. We are not going that far. We are not saying how many divisions there should be. But we are saying there should be districts or divisions. Justice Souris was not too explicit as to whether they should be elected from these divisions, but he felt that it was imperative that they sit in divisions for speed of appeal, for reducing the cost of appeal, for reducing the cost of travel, and so forth. But he did say that the structure of the court should be left to the legislature. Now, basically we are doing that, with one modification. We are requiring the election from the districts. And I think Mr. Boothby's reasons are strong enough to compel us to support the position that they should not only serve within these divisions, whether it be 3 or more, but they should also be elected from them.

And I would remind you that the present provision, as it came out of committee, in effect said that there would be 7 districts, because we said they would be elected in the same manner as the supreme court, and at that time we said the supreme court would be elected from 7 districts. So it was not a novel idea to the judicial branch committee that they would not only serve in areas, but would be elected from areas.

Now, of course, the action of the committee of the whole has changed that, and we either must go along with keeping the 2 together, or go back to the idea—and it is going back to the idea—that they should be elected from a smaller portion of the state. I think that the amendment adequately takes care of that, and still leaves to the legislature the determination of how many districts or divisions there shall be, and where they shall be. I support the amendment.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. President, I would like to address 1 or 2 questions to the sponsors of this amendment, and then perhaps make a comment. My first question is: does not this particular amendment establish as a condition precedent to having an intermediate appellate court the establishment of districts by the state legislature? In other words, unless the legislature does establish these districts we do not then have an intermediate appellate court?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: I think, Mr. President, and Dr. Norris, that's probably true. There are no districts unless we set them up, and that would have to be done by the legislature initially.

MR. NORRIS: Now, the second question is: under this contemplated amendment, there would be election by district, but service throughout the entire state. Is that the contemplation?

MR. DEHNKE: I think that would be within the power of the supreme court to determine.

MR. NORRIS: I would like to make this comment with regard to it. We have gone to great lengths at this convention thus far to establish in our bill of rights section, in the rights of accused, a right of appeal as a constitutional right in a criminal case. The general theory behind that was that we would make possible a review by a high court of the trial court procedure with regard to a fair trial, and with regard to all the other accouterments of a just treatment.

I think we depreciate the status and function of an intermediate appellate court if we think of it on a district basis. For many people this appellate court would be the court of last resort. It ought to be accorded in the constitution a statewide conception. And I think this idea of having an intermediate appellate court elected on a district basis does not comport with that perspective.

In addition, I think there is this proposition. It is inconsistent to say they shall be elected from districts and serve in various parts of the state when you think in terms of the point I tried to establish before this convention yesterday that what is important with regard to the judiciary is the judicial philosophy of those in whose hands is the exercise of the judicial power. What is important is that all people in all sections of the state have a right to choose in the exercise of their sovereign will those people who will be the court of last resort. And for most people in most cases this intermediate court will be the court of last resort. I think the district plan is inconsistent with the provisions which we have for right of appeal in a criminal case. I think also that it tends to minimize what we have thus far accomplished.

I would also suggest that the idea of saying to the legislature that you shall establish the districts then puts politics in the court in a way that some of the people who are trying to keep the courts nonpartisan might not foresee. I think that there are implications to this that we ought to recognize. In the legislature there will be the questions arising out of apportionment and reapportionment of districts, the considerations of electoral possibilities will be engendered, and these will have an effect upon those who are running for office. It seems to me that what will happen here is that we will throw in the kind of political considerations in the selection of the judiciary that we wanted to avoid; and yet we would not get into the selection of the judiciary the kind of considerations we want to get in; namely, the consideration of qualifications and the consideration of judicial philosophy, which is, after all, the determining consideration here. I would oppose this amendment, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. President, I don't know whether we all want to put the power in the legislature to set up a court of appeals or not. I will say this: that for more than 100 years the legislature has had that power. They have not seen fit to set up a court of appeals, because no one in this state has proven the need of it.

Three members of the supreme court made some reference to a court of appeals, and thought it would be nice to have one. Nobody has said that we should have 9 judges on a court of appeals who has said it with any authority or with any experience with courts of appeals.

Here we are setting up a court with more judges than we have on the supreme court. And you want to have the people elect them. The people are going to be so confused by trying to elect judges to the supreme court and the court of appeals and the circuit court and the probate court and other courts that they won't know whether they are electing a dog catcher or something else.

Now, I suggest, Mr. President, that we should not be made the tool of those who want the legislature to do things which they won't do. And I don't think there has been pressure enough put on us nor the legislature to set up a system of a court of appeals. I think the feeling among the leading lawyers and judges of the state is that this is an experiment. And if it is an experiment, we ought to go pretty slowly when we attempt to write into the constitution the details of this court of appeals. I submit this whole section should be deleted.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, I would like to support some of the statements made by Professor Norris in opposing this amendment. I would say first of all I believe that the actions we are taking this afternoon are by no means equally deliberative with the ones we took in arriving at the positions in the committee. In the committee of the whole we deliberated at great length about what we should do, and then we debated some more about what we should do with the court of appeals, and then we came out onto the floor of the convention after lunch, and then I believe we began to adopt things without thinking.

It's just gradually dawning on us that some of the votes we have just given may not be right. We don't know whether they are right or wrong, really. For example, I believe that everybody here, or nearly everyone, is in favor of an intermediate court of appeals. And I believe we are in favor of it to the extent that we insist it be self executing; that nobody can stop it. Now, I notice that, as Mr. Norris has pointed out, there is a way for the legislature to prevent any court of appeals from existing. All they have to do is refrain or become incapable of setting up these districts.

I would remind you of what Judge Leibrand said last Friday on the exact same subject about setting up districts. These were districts for the supreme court, but anyway the point is, he said in view of the fact that the state legislature is unable even to set up 1 district for an extra congressional seat, that we certainly are relying on a weak reed when we ask them to set up all of the districts for any court system. And that is exactly what we are doing here. We are asking the legislature to set up districts. Based on our past experience, we know that they are not likely to be able to do it. Certainly we can't be sure that they will be able to do it. That means we throw into jeopardy—and I know we don't intend to, but it seems to me by accident we are walking into these booby traps; that we are going to set up an appellate court on paper, but no place else. We are going to have rights of appeal, and so on, but we won't be sure that there is an appellate court. I might add further that it occurred to me after Mr. Norris spoke that I believe we are in the same boat with Mr. Elliott's amendment, which we already adopted. It is not before us, but it seems to me we have the same problem there. If they don't provide for any means of election, there won't be any election of appellate judges.

Another point with respect to the amendment before us is this. It seems to me that if we want to set up a court system, we want it to be independent of the legislature as much as we can make it. We would like to have flexibility, probably, because we don't know all the answers. And yet we don't want the legislature to be the prime mover in the court system. We ought to keep the legislature out of the act, except when it is found that they are indispensable. The least we should do, it seems to me, is make up our mind how to set up the court initially. We should set it up initially. Then, if we want flexibility, we should put a provision in that says, "Provided however, the legislature can make the following change if they see fit." That will give you flexibility. At the same time it will give you a guaranteed court.

On the basis of this, there are 2 comments I would like to make. One of them is: although I can appreciate that there are merits to the amendment, and I'm not positive that I'm opposed to the principle at all, I do feel that it would be a mistake for us to adopt it as it is now presented. I think it ought to be presented later on second reading after we have all had a chance to think about it. But as it stands now it is full of booby traps, and should be opposed. And I would also like to give notice that for the reasons I have stated, as soon as this issue is disposed of, or as soon as I can get the floor, I'm going to move to reconsider Mr. Elliott's amendment, because I think we fall into a booby trap there, too.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I am willing to add Mr. Tubbs, Dr. Norris and Dr. Nord to the list of good lawyers, because they too have a lively imagination. I would like to point out that if the legislature is going to stand deliberately in the way of the creation of the court, they can do it just as well under the provision as it now stands as they would have it in their power to do if this amendment is adopted.

Now, with reference to the comment that has been made about district courts, this situation will be very much similar to the setup of the federal courts. We have district courts of appeal between the federal district courts and the supreme court. And those courts are made up of judges picked from the residents of that district, of that circuit, and those circuits were created by congress, the same as we are expecting the legislature to create these districts. Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. President and delegates, I merely want to point out, with reference to Professor Norris' remarks, that the committee on rights, suffrage and elections did not consider the manner in which any court would be elected in connection with our provision that everyone should have an appeal in a criminal case as a matter of right. We did recognize that this might be an added inducement to adding a court of appeals, but it was the general sense of the committee, I believe—in fact, at least it was pointed out—that our job was simply to provide that there should be such an appeal, and leave the matter of the courts to the judiciary committee. Therefore, I don't feel that that has any bearing on the way in which this court might be selected or in which the judges of the courts should be selected by the people. Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. President and delegates, answering for a moment Dr. Nord, I do not recall exactly what I said last Friday about the legislature, but this is Tuesday, and on Tuesdays I'm willing to trust the legislature. I am particularly willing to trust them on this subject, in view of what the committee on rights, suffrage and elections, of which the good doctor was a member, has done in the bill of rights. They have provided an absolute right of appeal in all criminal cases. And I apprehend that there will be such a flood of appeals, particularly from the free riders who are appealing at public expense, that the legislature is just going to have to do something to set up this court. I favor the Boothby amendment.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the Boothby amendment. The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Boothby, Dehnke and Pugsley have offered the following amendment:

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: I request a recorded roll call vote, Mr. President, please.

PRESIDENT NISBET: A demand for a roll call vote has been made. Is the demand seconded? It is supported. The question is on the Boothby amendment. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Messrs. Boothby, Dehnke and Pugsley, the yeas are 71, the nays are 56.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is adopted. Are there further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no further amendments to Committee Proposal 92.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Committee Proposal 92, as amended, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 92 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. The court of appeals shall consist initially of 9 judges who shall be nominated and elected on a nonpartisan basis from districts of the state as established from time to time by the legislature. The supreme court may prescribe by rule that the court of appeals may sit in divisions, the terms of court and the times and places thereof. Each such division shall consist of not fewer than 3 judges. The legislature may by law increase the number of judges comprising the court of appeals.

Sec. b. Initially, 3 judges shall be elected for a term of 2 years, 3 judges for a term of 4 years, and 3 judges for a term of 6 years. Thereafter, the term of office shall be 6 years. The time of election and the order of rotation shall be provided by law.

Sec. c. The jurisdiction of the court of appeals shall be prescribed by law and the practice and procedure therein shall be as provided by supreme court rule.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 91, A proposal pertaining to the supreme court. The committee of the whole reports the proposal back to the convention with several amendments thereto, recommending that the amendments be agreed to and the proposal as thus amended be adopted.

[Following are the amendments recommended by the committee of the whole:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "The supreme court shall consist of 9 justices to be elected on a nonpartisan statewide basis. The term of office shall be for 8 years and not more than 3 terms of office shall expire at the same time. Each political party at party convention may nominate 1 candidate for election for each position to be filled. Any incumbent justice whose term is to expire may become a candidate for reelection by filing an affidavit of candidacy, in the form and manner as prescribed by law, not less than 180 days prior to the expiration of his term. Any person otherwise qualified to be a supreme court justice may become a candidate for election upon filing a nominating petition, in the form and manner prescribed by law, signed by qualified electors of this state in a number equal to 3 per cent of the total vote cast for the office of governor at the last previous election.".

2. Amend page 1, line 14, after "assistants" by inserting "of the supreme court".

3. Amend page 1, line 16, after "shall" by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "perform such administrative duties as may be assigned by the court.".

4. Amend page 2, line 3, after "rule" by changing the period to a comma and inserting "it being provided that the supreme court shall not have the power to remove a judge.".

5. Amend page 2, line 11, after "decision" by inserting "and reasons for each denial of leave to appeal".

6. Amend page 2, line 15, after "control of" by inserting "the preparation of its budget recommendations and".

7. Amend page 2, line 21, after "fund.", by striking out "No justice of the supreme court" and inserting "Neither the supreme court nor any justice thereof".

8. Amend page 2, line 25, by striking out all of section g.]

The first amendment is the amendment offered by Mr. Danhof:

[The amendment was read by the secretary. For text, see above.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment of Mr. Danhof. Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, I would like to move that this question be divided, and that section a and section g each be voted on separately.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Boothby, the Chair is informed that's going to be done anyway the way they are being read to the convention. The question is on the Danhof amendment.

DELEGATES: Division.

PRESIDENT NISBET: A division has been asked for. Is the demand seconded? There is a sufficient number up. Those in favor of the Danhof amendment—Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. President, I believe that I must rise to oppose the Danhof amendment. I believe that what has happened is just what I spoke to last night. I believe if we adopt this amendment that we really will have something to explain to our constituents.

Prior to the convening of this convention I'm sure each one of us was aware of the criticism that was directed toward the present method of selection of the supreme court. Every organization, every group, the press, practically unanimously, ridiculed the fiction of maintaining a partisan nomination and a nonpartisan election of supreme court justices. All of the argument that we heard from any of the organizations particularly interested in the convening of this convention was directed to this matter. So we maintain the partisan nomination of supreme court justices. All of the argument that we heard directed here on the floor to the statewide campaign that a supreme court justice must make, the expensive campaign, the obligation that that candidate may incur which may affect his judicial decisions, because of the necessity of getting support from organized groups in order to hope to be elected, apparently is to no avail. We maintain a statewide nonpartisan election of justices.

We have added a few interesting complications. We now would permit the incumbent justice, regardless of what his politics might be or how he was originally elected, to nominate himself; and he would bear the designation on the ballot of supreme court justice. Both parties could then nominate another candidate—and this is not at all inconceivable, contrary to what Mr. Danhof says. I can think of one instance right now where it could happen. We would have at least 3 candidates then—not for nomination, but for election. In addition to that, any lawyer that might want to brag at some time that he was a candidate for supreme court justice could arrange to nominate himself by circulating petitions. The vote that the people of the state would have then on the election of this justice would be 1 vote only, the final election. If we had more than 2 candidates, a minority of the people of the state would elect the supreme court justice. That minority could in some instances be as low as 25 per cent of the people of the state who would elect the justice.

Now, what sort of effect would that have upon the incumbent justice? His party, by threatening to withhold the party nomination, could certainly affect his decisions while he was on the bench. It would be a most effective threat.

If we aren't going to pay any attention to the public opinion that has been expressed upon this question, I would direct the attention of every delegate to a preconvention poll that each one of you filled out and sent back in. At least, a majority of you did so. In that, by a great majority, these same criticisms were voiced by you as individual delegates. So now are we going to reverse our own thinking, even if we pay no attention to public opinion?

If you cannot buy this present amendment, if you do not believe that this is the proper method of selection of supreme court justices, regardless of what plan you might favor, you would in all conscience be compelled to vote against concurrence in this amendment. For if you concur in this amendment, you have locked it in so far as this reading is concerned and the matter will be referred to style and drafting. If you are not convinced then that this is the best method of selecting supreme court justices, I strongly urge you vote no on concurrence with this amendment.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. President, members of the convention, we are asked here to vote against what the committee adopted, but we are not given something better to put in its place. It seems apparent that this is designed to get us back by nonconcurrence with the amendments of the committee of the whole to the district plan. I urge you to vote for the committee of the whole's amendment, and I demand the yeas and nays.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The yeas and nays are demanded. Is the demand seconded? There is a sufficient number up. Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. If we do not concur in the recommendation of the committee of the whole by voting nay, then as I understand it we are left with section a of the original committee report, is that correct?

PRESIDENT NISBET: That is correct. Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. President, I would merely join the others that have spoken and urge nonconcurrence in the committee report and a nay vote on this proposition.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. President, members of the convention, I think again the issue is squarely before us. Mr. Wanger has stated it very succinctly, very quickly, and so will I. I am not sure that the amendment we adopted in the committee of the whole is the ultimate answer. But a vote of nonconcurrence will in effect leave you basically with nothing, unless you go back to the district plan in section g. We have heard all of the arguments pro and con for not 1 day, but at least 4. We know everything about all plans—appointive, elected, by any means or methods whatsoever. I would urge that we vote concurrence in the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Young.

MR. YOUNG: I have a point of parliamentary inquiry. Judge Leibrand says that a vote nay on the present question would take us back to section a. I would like to know if section a as proposed by the committee is in fact the district plan.

DELEGATES: No. No.

MR. YOUNG: Well, what is it?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Section a is Committee Proposal 91, Mr. Young. The Chair recognizes Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I would urge a no vote, for about the same reason as Delegate Wanger urged a yes vote. That is, he said if we throw this out we are right back to what the committee reported, which I think is where the majority of us want to be. Because if we have section a, then we set the stage for section g, which is the district plan. Now, on every vote that has been taken there have been more of us that wanted the district plan—and when I say "us," I say that advisedly, reading between the lines—than on any other plan that has been offered. And yet we have come short of getting it into actual operation. I think the very simple thing now is to vote no on the amendments that were made to section a and to section g, and then we will have what the majority of us have wanted, which is the district plan. I certainly would urge that we vote no on the pending amendment to section a.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. President, members of the convention, I have been brought somewhat reluctantly around to the position where it would leave no doubt in anyone's mind. I would urge wholeheartedly that we vote in favor of the committee of the whole's recommendation, affirming its action. I have already stated my fears and doubt before, but I feel that this is the best alternative that has been offered and the best way to resolve the problem.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Habermehl.

MR. HABERMEHL: Mr. President, 2 parliamentary inquiries. One, section a provides simply for a supreme court. Is that correct? A vote of nonconcurrence would leave section a as reported by the committee intact?

PRESIDENT NISBET: That is correct.

MR. HABERMEHL: The second question, if this amendment is not concurred in, is the committee proposal subject to further amendments?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Surely.

MR. HABERMEHL: Then this could not possibly have the effect that Mr. Wanger said.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Wanger?

MR. WANGER: Mr. President, I don't wish to abuse the privilege of speaking before the convention, which is only once, so I will pass.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I would like to support and urge that all support the committee proposal, section a, as amended by Mr. Danhof, after many hours of great work. To say that we do not concur will leave section a as it is, and then will get us eventually to section g as it is, which again will put you back to the district plan. Now, the issue is: do you want the district plan, more or less? And section a as written by this compromise under Mr. Danhof's name, with the support of numerous people in helping him draft it, is the best compromise that this committee has been able to reach. I therefore urge that we support the committee of the whole, and I move the previous question.

MR. MAHINSKE: A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: There has been much talk here that if there is a no vote adopted on the recommendations of the committee of the whole, we will be back to section a as submitted by the committee. I don't know that this is exactly true, because certain amendments were adopted to section a as supported by the committee, and then the Danhof amendment was adopted as a substitute for section a, as amended. Now, if the vote, in essence, is against the Danhof amendment here, are we going back to section a as submitted by the committee, or as amended as submitted by the committee?

PRESIDENT NISBET: We are going back to the proposed section a as submitted by the committee on the green sheet. The previous question has been demanded. Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Point of information, Mr. President. I am somewhat confused. Isn't it true, Mr. Secretary, that it was the Ford amendment, which we will get to eventually, that kicked out section g, and isn't there confusion that exists here at the moment, and there are people on this floor perhaps that think by nonconcurrence in the committee report they will automatically have the district plan back in?

SECRETARY CHASE: The situation, as the secretary understands it, at present is this. We are voting now only upon the question of concurring in the recommendation of the committee of the whole to adopt the amendment which was adopted in committee of the whole this morning by a vote of 82 to 46. The question on concurring in the recommendation of the committee of the whole as to section g will come up later.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The previous question has been demanded. Is that demand seconded? There is a sufficient number up. The question now is: shall the previous question be put? Those in favor say aye. Those opposed, no.

The previous question is ordered. The question is now on the Danhof amendment. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

SECRETARY CHASE: On the question of concurring in the amendment to section a, as recommended by the committee of the whole, the yeas are 72; the nays are 61.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is adopted. The next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The next amendment recommended by the committee of the whole:

2. Amend page 1, line 14, after "assistants" by inserting "of the supreme court"; so the language will there read, "The supreme court shall appoint an administrator of the courts and other judicial assistants of the supreme court as shall be deemed necessary...."

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment as recommended by the committee of the whole. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted. The next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The next amendment recommended by the committee of the whole:

3. Amend page 1, line 16, after "shall" by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "perform such administrative duties as may be assigned by the court."; so that the language will then read, "The administrator shall perform such administrative duties as may be assigned by the court."

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the amendment as reported by the committee of the whole. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted. The next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The next amendment:

4. Amend page 2, line 3, after "rule" by changing the period to a comma and inserting "it being provided that the supreme court shall not have the power to remove a judge.".

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on concurring in the amendment. Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: Mr. President, fellow delegates, I voted for this amendment in committee of the whole, and I intend to vote for it here. But at the time of the debate there were comments made by at least one of the proponents of the amendment which I think should not go unchallenged. If you will recall, we had before us a proposed amendment which said that the supreme court could not suspend or remove other judges. By amendment within committee of the whole, we struck out the word "suspend," which I think most of us recognize as an implication that the supreme court could suspend but could not remove. The comment was made to the effect that this meant that the supreme court could not conduct a hearing before arriving at this decision. Now, to me at least, there's nothing in this language which implies that there could not be a hearing. As a matter of fact, I would find it unthinkable that the supreme court would suspend a judge or advocate his removal without a hearing. I simply want the record to show that in supporting this amendment and voting for it, I do not do so for the reasons advanced by at least one of its sponsors.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the amendment. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted. The next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The next amendment:

5. Amend page 2, line 11, after "decision" by inserting "and reasons for each denial of leave to appeal"; so that the language will there read:

> Decisions of the supreme court, including all decisions on prerogative writs, shall be in writing and shall contain a concise statement of the facts and reasons for each decision and reasons for each denial of leave to appeal.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the amendment. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: The next amendment:

6. Amend page 2, line 15, after "control of" by inserting "the preparation of its budget recommendations and"; so that the language will there read:

> The supreme court may appoint and remove its staff and shall have general supervision of the staff of the court and control of the preparation of its budget recommendations and the expenditure of the funds appropriated for any purpose . . .

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on concurring in the amendment. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: The next amendment:

7. Amend page 2, line 21, after "fund.", by striking out "No justice of the supreme court" and inserting "Neither the supreme court nor any justice thereof"; so that that sentence will read, "Neither the supreme court nor any justice thereof shall exercise any other power of appointment to public office, except as otherwise provided herein."

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on concurring in the amendment. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: The next amendment:

8. Amend page 2, line 25, by striking out all of section g.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on concurring in the amendment. Mr. Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: I feel that I cannot concur with the report of the committee of the whole, and accordingly I shall vote nay.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on concurring in the amendment. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed, no.

MR. LEIBRAND: I would ask for a roll call vote.

PRESIDENT NISBET: A roll call vote has been requested. Is the demand seconded? There is a sufficient number up. Those in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. This is a roll call vote. Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. President, would you restate the question? This is somewhat confusing. I think it would be worthwhile if you would restate the question for the benefit of the delegates.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on concurring in the amendment. Do you want the amendment read, Mr. King?

MR. KING: Just in capsule form. The amendment is to strike.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment as proposed by the committee of the whole is to strike out all of section g.

MR. BLEDSOE: Would you have it read, Mr. President?

MR. FARNSWORTH: Point of information, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. President, again I'm somewhat confused. We are being asked now to concur or not to concur with the committee report, which was the Ford amendment to strike out section g. Now, am I right in assuming that if we do not concur, we will then have a judicial article with 2 means of selecting a supreme court?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Is that right, Mr. Chase?

SECRETARY CHASE: The convention has agreed, on a roll call vote, to the adoption of the amendment to section a which provides for the selection of justices; and presently the question is on concurring in the recommendation of the committee of the whole that section g be stricken from the proposal.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

SECRETARY CHASE: On the question of agreeing to the recommendation of the committee of the whole to strike out section g, the yeas are 82; the nays are 50.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Miss Donnelly, Messrs. Leibrand and McAllister offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 3, in the amendment, after "remove" by inserting "or suspend".

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no. The amendment is not adopted. The next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: That's all of the amendments on file, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: If there are no further amendments, Committee Proposal 91, as amended, is referred to the committee on style and drafting. (applause)

Following is Committee Proposal 91 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. The supreme court shall consist of 9 justices to be elected on a nonpartisan statewide basis. The term of office shall be for 8 years and not more than 3 terms of office shall expire at the same time. Each political party at party convention may nominate 1 candidate for election for each position to be filled. Any incumbent justice whose term is to expire may become a candidate for reelection by filing an affidavit of candidacy, in the form and manner as prescribed by law, not less than 180 days prior to the expiration of his term. Any person otherwise qualified to be a supreme court justice may become a candidate for election upon filing a nominating petition, in the form and manner prescribed by law, signed by qualified electors of this state in a number equal to 3 per cent of the total vote cast for the office of governor at the last previous election.

Sec. b. One justice of the supreme court shall be selected by the court as its chief justice in the manner and for the term provided by the rules of the court. He shall perform such other duties as may be required by the court. The supreme court shall appoint an administrator of the courts and other judicial assistants of the supreme court as shall be deemed necessary to aid in the administration of the courts in the state. The administrator shall perform such administrative duties as may be assigned by the court.

Sec. c. The supreme court shall have: a general superintending control over all courts; power to issue, hear, and determine prerogative and remedial writs; appellate jurisdiction as provided by supreme court rule, it being provided that the supreme court shall not have the power to remove a judge.

Sec. d. The supreme court shall by general rules establish, modify, amend and simplify the practice and procedure in all courts in the state. The distinctions between law and equity proceeding shall, as far as practicable, be abolished. The office of master in chancery is prohibited.

Sec. e. Decisions of the supreme court, including all decisions on prerogative writs, shall be in writing and shall contain a concise statement of the facts and reasons for each decision and reasons for each denial of leave to appeal. When a judge dissents in whole or in part he shall give in writing the reasons for his dissent.

Sec. f. The supreme court may appoint and remove its staff and shall have general supervision of the staff of the court and control of the preparation of its budget recommendations and the expenditure of the funds appropriated for any purpose pertaining to the operation of the court or the performance of activities of its staff, except that the salaries of the justices of the supreme court shall be established by law. All fees, perquisites and income collected by the clerk shall be turned over by him to the state treasury and credited to the general fund. Neither the supreme court nor any justice thereof shall exercise any other power of appointment to public office, except as otherwise provided herein.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole, Mr. President, has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 96, A proposal pertaining to general and special provisions relative to the courts of the state. It has considered several amendments thereto, and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President, a point of personal privilege.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Will you state it.

MR. HOXIE: This is an Ode to the District Plan.

When things go wrong, as they sometimes will,
When the road you're trudging seems all uphill,
When the funds are low and the debts are high,
And you want to smile, but you have to sigh,
When care is pressing you down a bit,
Rest if you must, but never quit.

Life is queer with its twists and turns,
As every one of us sometimes learns,
And many a failure turns about
When you might have won had you stuck it out.
Don't give up though the pace seems slow,
You may succeed with another blow.

Often the goal is nearer than
It seems to a faint, faltering man.
Often the straggler has given up
When he might have captured the victor's cup.
And he learned too late when the night slipped down
How close he was to the golden crown.

Success is failure turned inside out
The silver tint of the cloud of doubt.
And you may never tell how close you are
It may be nearer when it seems afar.
So stick to the fight when you're hardest hit
It's when things seem worst that you mustn't quit. (applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. President, may I have consent to offer the motion which I indicated I was going to offer today but was unable to this morning? I would ask the secretary to read it.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon offers the following motion: I move that following the conclusion of the proposals on the judicial branch, we move next to the report of the committee on legislative organization, and then to the executive branch, and then to the regular schedule.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, a point of order. Is Mr. Faxon's motion not out of order at this point? We had passed the order of motions and resolutions on the calendar this morning.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Van Dusen, your point is well taken. Mr. Faxon did ask yesterday for this privilege. He was not here this morning when the order of business came up. With unanimous consent Mr. Faxon can make his motion. Is there unanimous consent?

A DELEGATE: No. I object.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: On the advice of our parliamentarian, I move that we return to the order of motions and resolutions.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Ford, the Chair is informed that it will be necessary for you to move that the rules be suspended to return to the order of motions and resolutions. Is that your motion?

MR. FORD: Yes. Thank you for the correction.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The motion by Mr. Ford is that the rules be suspended and we return to the order of motions and resolutions. Those in favor of that motion will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The Chair is in doubt. Those in favor of that motion will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion to suspend the rules, the yeas are 62; the nays are 66.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Two-thirds of the delegates not having voted in favor, the rules are not suspended. The Chair recognizes Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering matters on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Van Dusen. All those in favor say aye. Those opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Van Dusen.

[Whereupon, Mr. Van Dusen assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The committee will be in order. When the committee rose this morning we had under consideration Committee Proposal 96. We had disposed of all of the sections of that proposal as presented by the committee, and had disposed of several amendments to the body of the proposal. Are there any further amendments to the body of the proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Ford, in accordance with the minority report of Messrs. Ford, Barthwell, Bledsoe and Garvin—

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: In view of the action previously taken by the committee, unless one of the cosponsors of the minority report to the committee amendment to Committee Proposal 96 objects, I would like to withdraw our minority report and motion at this time.

For the minority report to the committee amendment, see above, page 1554.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Ford withdraws his minority report amendment. Does Mr. Barthwell concur?

MR. BARTHWELL: Yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Bledsoe?

MR. BLEDSOE: I concur.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Garvin?

MR. GARVIN: Yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: With the consent of his cosponsors, the amendment is withdrawn by Mr. Ford. Are there further amendments to the body of Committee Proposal 96?

SECRETARY CHASE: There are none on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: If not, the proposal will pass.

Committee Proposal 96, as amended, is passed. The secretary will read the first exclusion report.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on judicial branch, by Mr. Danhof, chairman, Exclusion Report 2042, A report recommending the exclusion of article VII, sections 15, 16 and 21.

Following is Exclusion Report 2042 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on judicial branch recommends that article VII, sections 15, 16 and 21 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Danhof, chairman of the committee on judicial branch, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2042:

The committee has determined that the constitutional status of justices of the peace and circuit court commissioners make the inclusion of these sections no longer necessary. The reasons for the committee's determination are more fully set forth in connection with Committee Proposals 90 and 96.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The question is on the exclusion report. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, this eliminates the references to the justices of the peace, their jurisdiction, and the circuit court commissioners. In view of the action previously taken by this convention regarding those officers and the provisions made for them, this exclusion report would seem to be in order, and I urge acceptance.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to the exclusion report? Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: A parliamentary inquiry. Would you please read again the sections that are excluded?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: As they are printed in the exclusion report, sections 15, 16 and 21 of article VII.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to the exclusion report? Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I would like to support the committee on judicial branch, and urge a yes vote. I want to point out one word of caution, however, and that is that you should bear in mind in voting for the exclusion report—and I'm going to vote for it, and hope you do, too—that you are taking the last reference to a guarantee of a local court at the township level out of the constitution, and this should be borne in mind when we reach the other sections.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to the exclusion report? Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Is this divisible?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: It is not divisible unless an amendment is offered, Mr. Mahinske. No amendment has been offered. There being no amendments, the report will pass.

Exclusion Report 2042 is passed. The secretary will read the next exclusion report.

SECRETARY CHASE: From the committee on judicial branch, by Mr. Danhof, chairman, Exclusion Report 2043, A report recommending the exclusion of article VII, sections 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 17, 19, 20 and 23.

Following is Exclusion Report 2043 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on judicial branch recommends that article VII, sections 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 17, 19, 20 and 23 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Danhof, chairman of the committee on judicial branch, submits the following reason in support of Exclusion Report 2043:

The above sections are to be excluded from the new constitution for the reason that the subject matter of said sections is being included in a new judicial article.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, this is simply a matter of form. We presented our article basically as a new article. In order to conform with the rules of this convention, we were advised it was necessary to file an exclusion report for everything else. The new article having been adopted, this is now an academic matter. I urge the acceptance of the exclusion report.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Are there any amendments to the exclusion report? Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I ask that section 20 be divided.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Section 20, Mr. Downs?

MR. DOWNS: Yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Downs moves to strike section 20 from the exclusion report. The question is on the motion of Mr. Downs. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Is the motion now to exclude it?

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The posture of the committee at the moment, Mr. Danhof, is that if Mr. Downs' amendment to strike section 20 from the exclusion report were adopted, the substance of section 20 of article VII of the present constitution would be incorporated in the new constitution, as a proposal of the committee of the whole. Is the Chair correct in that, Mr. Secretary?

MR. DANHOF: The vice president behind me thinks he does not concur, and I will yield to him for his comments.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would simply, by way of argument, make this point: that by amending an exclusion report, which is a kind of anomalous thing anyway, I don't think that by that act we reinsert any part of the present constitution. It simply means that the committee of the whole, by failing to exclude, indicates that something of a substantive nature ought to be included in the new constitution. But I don't see how we can, simply by amending this exclusion report, by that act alone reinsert something into the new constitution.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Hutchinson, the Chair believes your point is well taken and believes if section 20 were stricken from the exclusion report, it would then be in order for Mr. Downs to move to insert the substance of section 20 of article VII, and action would have to be taken on that motion. The Chair was in error in its earlier statement. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, there is a minority report and an amendment pending to take care of the subject matter of section 20 when we get to Committee Proposal 96, section d.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I have read the minority report to Committee Proposal 96, which includes reinserting section 20, and will therefore withdraw my motion. However, in doing that, I do not want that to imply that I am not in support of the minority report, which I believe will be up in committee of the whole today.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Downs withdraws his motion. Are there any amendments to Exclusion Report 2043? If not, it will pass.

Exclusion Report 2043 is passed. The secretary will read. Does that complete the section on the judiciary?

Mr. Downs, the Chair would advise that Committee Proposal 96 has been passed, as Mr. Ford no doubt was aware, and the Chair presumes Mr. Ford intends to offer his report after the committee rises. Is that correct?

MR. FORD: Yes.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: The Chair's assumption was correct.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof, would you defer your motion momentarily?

The Chair would like to advise the committee that we have now completed, at long last, the work of the committee of the whole relating to the judicial branch of government. The Chair heaves an inaudible sign of relief, and suggests that perhaps Mr. Danhof and the Chair have earned the designation of incumbent in whatever positions we currently occupy.

There is a little bit of unfinished business. The Chair would like to extend his authority to confer upon Mr. Hubbs the degree of honorary barrister, the one he would share with Mr. Farnsworth.

The Chair would like to thank the committee on administration for providing for his comfort during the last 2½ weeks, and in particular for the stimulating refreshments occasionally provided. (laughter)

The Chair has some suggestions for the committee on administration which he wishes Dr. DeVries were here to listen to. Ah, here he is. The Chair thinks as we proceed forward with our work, the chairman of the committee of the whole might well be provided, as indicated earlier, with a longer handled gavel, with a stool with a back on it, and the Chair thinks it might also be in order for the committee on administration to consider equipping the seats of the delegates with seat belts. (laughter)

After achieving a degree of identification with the judicial branch perhaps unrivaled in this convention, the Chair would suggest that perhaps it might be in order for Mr. Danhof and the Chair, under the doctrine of the separation of powers, to be excused from the consideration of the executive branch and the legislative branch proposals.

Finally, and in seriousness, the Chair would like to thank the committee for its patience and forbearance in the last 2½ weeks, and Mr. Danhof's motion is now in order.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, I hope for what may be the last time that I do it, I move that the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN VAN DUSEN: Mr. Danhof moves that the committee do now rise. Those in favor of Mr. Danhof's motion will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The committee will rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, Vice President Hutchinson assumed the Chair.]

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes the delegate from Oakland, Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration several matters, of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 96, A proposal pertaining to general and special provisions relative to the courts of the state; and reports the same back to the convention with several amendments thereto, recommending the amendments be agreed to, and that the proposal as thus amended do pass.

[Following are the amendments recommended by the committee of the whole:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "designated" by inserting "as such".

2. Amend page 1, line 10, after "courts" by inserting "of record".

3. Amend page 1, line 12, by striking out "shall not" and inserting "no person shall".

4. Amend page 2, line 16, after "any" by striking out "justice or judge" and inserting "judge of probate"; and in line 19, after "constitution" by striking out the balance of the line and inserting "requiring him to be licensed to practice law in this state.".

5. Amend page 2, line 27, after "receive" by striking out "a salary payable monthly" and inserting "an annual salary as provided by law".

6. Amend page 4, line 1, after "law" by striking out "and"; and after "occasions" by changing the period to a comma and inserting "in connection with legislation after it shall have been enacted into law but before its effective date. Such opinions shall relate only to questions of constitutionality.".

7. Amend page 4, following line 1, by inserting a new section to read as follows:

"Sec. 1. Any elected judge of a circuit court or probate court may become a candidate in the primary election for the office of which he is then the incumbent, by filing a declaration of intention at such time and in such office as shall be provided by law.".

8. Amend page 4, following section 1, by inserting a new section to read as follows:

"Sec. m. Within 5 years from the date this constitution becomes effective, and subject to the limitations contained in Committee Proposal 90 and section a of Committee Proposal 96, the legislature shall establish statutory courts of limited jurisdiction inferior to the circuit court with a definition of their powers and jurisdiction, the location and number of such courts, the qualifications of the judges who shall preside therein, the method of their election and tenure of office and the amount of their salary and by what governmental units the same shall be paid.".]

The first amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "designated" by inserting "as such"; so the language will then read:

> The supreme court, the court of appeals, the circuit court, the probate court and other courts designated as such by the legislature shall be courts of record and shall each have a common seal.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon concurring in the amendment made by the committee of the whole. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The amendment is concurred in.

SECRETARY CHASE: The next amendment:

2. Amend page 1, line 10, after "courts" by inserting "of record"; so that the language will there read:

> Except as authorized otherwise by this constitution, justices and judges of the courts of record of this state shall be lawyers licensed to practice law in this state and shall not be elected or appointed to a judicial office after reaching the age of 70 years.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon concurring in amendment 2 made by the committee of the whole. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The amendment is concurred in.

SECRETARY CHASE: The next amendment:

3. Amend page 1, line 12, by striking out "shall not" and inserting "no person shall"; so the language will there read, ". . . no person shall be elected or appointed to a judicial office after reaching the age of 70 years."

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: On amendment 3, all those in favor will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The amendment is concurred in.

SECRETARY CHASE: The next amendment is:

4. Amend page 2, line 16, after "any" by striking out "justice or judge" and inserting "judge of probate"; and in line 19, after "constitution" by striking out the balance of the line and inserting "requiring him to be licensed to practice law in this state."; so the language will there read:

> Any judge of probate serving at the time this constitution becomes effective may serve the remainder of the term and be eligible for reelection to his present office regardless of other provisions in this constitution requiring him to be licensed to practice law in this state.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: On amendment 4, all those in favor will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The amendment is concurred in.

SECRETARY CHASE: The next amendment:

5. Amend page 2, line 27, after "receive" by striking out "a salary payable monthly" and inserting "an annual salary as provided by law"; so the language will then read, "Each of the judges of the circuit court shall receive an annual salary as provided by law."

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: On concurring in amendment 5 made by the committee of the whole, those in favor will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The amendment is concurred in.

SECRETARY CHASE: The next amendment:

6. Amend page 4, line 1, after "law" by striking out "and"; and after "occasions" by changing the period to a comma and inserting "in connection with legislation after it shall have been enacted into law but before its effective date. Such opinions shall relate only to questions of constitutionality."; so the language would then read:

> . . . upon important questions of law upon solemn occasions, in connection with legislation after it shall have been enacted into law but before its effective date. Such opinions shall relate only to questions of constitutionality.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon concurring in amendment 6 made by the committee of the whole. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is concurred in.

SECRETARY CHASE: The following is the seventh amendment:

[Amendment 7 was read by the secretary. For text, see above.]

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon concurring in amendment 7 made by the committee of the whole. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The amendment is concurred in.

SECRETARY CHASE: The next amendment is to add a section:

[Amendment 8 was read by the secretary. For text, see above.]

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon concurring in amendment 8 made by the committee of the whole. All those in favor will say aye. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. President, I wish to oppose this amendment, for the reasons that were stated when we debated it on the floor. The principal objection I have is to that portion of the language which says that the legislature will not only determine where local courts will be located, but it will determine the amount of their compensation. I think this is a matter for the local communities to handle on their own, and a matter that should clearly be left to them. We shouldn't direct the legislature to make this decision for them. I urge that you vote no on this section.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. President and members of the convention, I cannot agree with Delegate Ford that the legislature necessarily will tell the local people exactly where and how they are going to have their courts. They will set up the framework, to be sure, Delegate Ford, but they aren't going to say that you're going to have to put them in X village or city. There's going to be a certain amount of discretion, I'm sure. We are now trusting the legislature to do this. Members of the convention will recall that this is the particular provision that I specifically asked you to support in committee of the whole when this matter of salesmanship became injected into the convention. For the same reasons that I gave you the other day, we still need to retain it, and I would urge you to concur in the committee's recommendation. I ask for a recorded vote.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Farnsworth demands the yeas and nays on the adoption of amendment 8. Is the demand supported? The demand is supported. The yeas and nays are ordered. Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. President, I just want to reiterate one point. I didn't speak on this when it was in committee of the whole, but I do think when you look at the language you realize how clearly statutory it is. There's nothing there that the legislature can't do already. To spell out this kind of detail is not meaningful for a constitution. I would urge you not to support the recommendation.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would like to direct a question to one of the proponents. As I read this, it would be possible for the legislature to establish this court with the existing powers of the probate court. Is this correct or incorrect?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: To whom do you desire to direct your question?

MR. MAHINSKE: Any of the proponents — Pugsley, Rajkovich, Prettie, and so forth.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Well, the Chair doesn't notice any one of them seeking recognition to answer your question.

MR. MAHINSKE: On that basis, among others, I would be opposed to this amendment. Because, as I read it, this court is a court of inferior jurisdiction to the circuit court. The probate court today is inferior to the circuit court. And this new court amounts, as I see it, to nothing but a countywide court of limited jurisdiction, which we have voted down already. I would urge you to vote no on this amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. President, before the vote is called, would you please ask the secretary to restate the question, please.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The secretary will again read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment recommended by the committee of the whole is:

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: A point of information, Mr. President. Does this mean that the legislature, if they wish to, could replace the J.P. system?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Is that inquiry directed to the Chair?

MR. PERRAS: No, I was asking Mr. Danhof, or whoever wishes to answer.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: If Mr. Danhof wishes to answer the question.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Perras, I'm not one of the proponents of the amendment, but it would be my opinion, from reading this, that the legislature shall have the right to establish statutory courts of limited jurisdiction, and whether they call them justices of the peace, or magistrate courts, or township courts, or county courts or city courts would be entirely up to them. Yes, they could change it; they could modify it; they could amend it — and I think this is the general import of the amendment. If I'm wrong, one of the sponsors can correct me.

MR. PERRAS: Thank you.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Perras yields the floor. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. President, members of the convention, we debated this matter quite at length in the committee. I think all the reasons were put forth at that time. I would concur with the gentleman from Allegan and urge an affirmative vote on this question.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon concurring in amendment 8, which the secretary has read. Does anyone desire to have it again read? All those in favor of concurring will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

SECRETARY CHASE: The yeas are 84; the nays are 37.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The amendment is concurred in.

1. Amend page 2, line 12, by striking out all of section e, which reads:

"Sec. e. There shall be printed upon the ballot under the name of each elected incumbent justice or judge, who is a candidate for nomination or election to the same office, the designation of that office."

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment. The Chair recognizes Mr. Shackleton.

MR. SHACKLETON: Mr. President and fellow delegates, Lord Macauley is reported to have made the statement that many an army has prospered under a bad commander, but no army has ever prospered under a debating society. I have no desire of continuing the debating society. I certainly do not want to be as verbose as some of my colleagues, and certainly not as sickeningly repetitive as some of my colleagues. However, on the vote on this the other day there were less than 100 delegates voting. I still cannot see a horse race where one horse starts at the quarter mile post. And when this "incumbent" designation is used, there is an advantage of at least 20 per cent or more that is given to any incumbent running for this office. Also, inasmuch as one of the proponents of this amendment was not present the other day, I would like, Mr. President, to ask for a roll call vote, and yield to Dr. DeVries.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Shackleton demands the yeas and nays on the pending amendment. Is the demand supported? The demand is supported, and the yeas and nays are ordered.

The Chair recognizes the delegate from Kent, Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I have supported the appointive system for the supreme court judges, and still do. But I'm going to use the rationale of those in favor of electing judges to support this amendment to remove the incumbency designation. I think this is the way the rationale goes: people have been saying for days that elected judges as compared with appointed judges are closer to the people. Now, let's assume this is true. The second premise in the election of judges is that: people know their judges, and can evaluate their performance on the bench. Now, if these 2 premises are true, then I conclude that there is no need for the incumbency designation, because judges who are elected are therefore by definition well known and are doing a good job. Furthermore, the incumbency designation for any other purpose than differentiating similar names on the ballot is undemocratic. It seems to me the officeholder, by definition, has enough advantages over the challengers in any election.

In addition, it seems to me that we have killed the only rational way to select the supreme court, and that's by appointment; and that while we have made some good reforms, it seems we have created in this article a bonanza for the attorneys and judges and future attorneys and judges of this state. That's what we have done. We have created a new court and more judges. We require all judges to be lawyers. We've increased the size of the supreme court for more judges. We have brought more business to the courts and for the attorneys, with the passage of Committee Proposal 95. We have increased the attorneys' business, I think, by the language of this constitution. We have provided that judges can renominate themselves with the greatest of ease, while laymen of this state must work for their nominations to public office. Now we are asked to approve the incumbency designation for judges, and that's too much — at least for me.

I oppose the incumbency designation because it's not rational. I don't think it is democratic or in a spirit of fair play. It denies equal access to those who desire to run for public office, and this is contrary to everything in the American tradition. I urge the adoption of the amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Allegan, Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. President and members of the convention, you will recall that several days ago when this came up in the committee of the whole I spoke in favor of it. Now I'm going to urge you to vote against the amendment today. And for this simple reason. That since it was up before, we now have provided a means of selecting supreme court justices. We have provided that the man may renominate himself. We have also provided that the party can nominate a man against him. We have further provided that the third or the fourth or the fifth man can go out and circulate nominating petitions and run against him. I think that now he needs that incumbency designation more than he ever did before. I urge you to vote down the amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The gentleman from Wayne, Mr. Gust.

MR. GUST: As one of the attorneys, and apparently we haven't been heard from on this, I want to concur in what Dr. DeVries said. I think we have more than adequately taken care of the judicial needs of the state by the increase in the courts and the number of judges and their means of securing nomination.

I did have a delegate proposal in front of Mr. Danhof's committee substantially to this effect, which apparently must have been discussed by the committee; and I rise for 2 points, Mr. President. One, to state that I concur with Dr. DeVries, and urge you to vote yes. Two, I would like to know, as a point of information, if Mr. Danhof cares to answer, what treatment my delegate proposal did get when it was discussed in front of his committee, as I assume that it was.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Muskegon, Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Gust, I can't say exactly what the treatment was, but by reason of the proposal put forth by the committee, you can see it was not favorably adopted. My friends over here, including Dr. DeVries, are making motions as if it went into the circular file. This is not necessarily true. But, as long as I am standing here, I would like to speak a few moments on this particular amendment.

We talked about this in committee of the whole. Our committee came out with a vast majority that we put the designation under the name of an elected incumbent. Now, we debated this in committee of the whole. Dr. DeVries was absent that day on more important business. But as I stated then and as I will state now, nothing will serve to destroy the independence, the stability of the judiciary of this state, faster than this particular amendment. If there is one thing that the people demand, it is stability and tenure of office insofar as the judiciary is concerned.

It has been stated that other people go out and have to earn their nomination, and I will say this. That in the county where Dr. DeVries comes from, if you're fortunate enough to get nominated on one ticket, you've got a designation. And that designation will guarantee you almost for every election 52 or 53 or 56 per cent of the vote. And if you go into another county and you are nominated under the other ticket, practically regardless of your name you are guaranteed 58 or 60 per cent of the vote.

Now, when you run partisan you do have a designation. It is Republican or it is Democrat. And, at a minimum, it has been pointed out that 45 per cent or more of the vote goes with this designation. And, basically, all we are concerned with is less than 10 per cent of the so called swing vote. So I submit that when you take a judge off a partisan ticket, you have to give him a designation such as this. And nothing would disturb or create greater havoc in the judiciary, especially as our metropolitan areas develop, than to remove this particular designation. I would urge that the amendment be defeated.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The gentleman from Ingham, Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. President, members of the convention, this matter was thoroughly debated before. I agree with Mr. Danhof and Mr. Farnsworth, and I move the previous question.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Wanger demands the previous question. Is the demand supported? The demand is supported. The question now is: shall the main question be put? All those in favor will say aye. Those opposed will say no.

The Chair is in doubt. All those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? For what purpose does the gentleman rise, Mr. Perras?

MR. PERRAS: A point of information.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The convention will be in order please. What is your question, Mr. Perras?

MR. PERRAS: Are we voting now for the DeVries amendment?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: We are simply voting now on a division here. The Chair is in doubt as to whether the previous question was ordered. All those in favor of the previous question will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the total.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the vote on ordering the previous question, the yeas are 83; the nays are 37.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The previous question is ordered.

For what purpose does the gentleman rise, Mr. Ford?

MR. FORD: A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: What is the inquiry?

MR. FORD: I think this is the appropriate time to make the inquiry, because I had no feelings one way or another on that vote, but I have had them on similar votes. That is to the parliamentary propriety of a person getting up and speaking for or against a proposition, making a lengthy exposition of his views, and then finishing his speech by a motion to move the previous question. Is that sort of a tactic in order?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair would say that the tactic is in order, although sometimes, in some circumstances, some delegates might think it wasn't very ethical. But it is in order.

The yeas and nays have been ordered. The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Shackleton and others, which the secretary will again read, so that everyone will understand what it is.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment offered by Messrs. Shackleton, DeVries, Sterrett and Seyferth:

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: All those in favor of the amendment offered by Mr. Shackleton and others will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment to strike out all of section e, the yeas are 41; the nays are 85.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Ford offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 5, after "Sec. d.", by striking out the balance of the section and reinserting the language of article VII, section 20 of the 1908 constitution, which language reads as follows, "When a vacancy occurs in the office of judge of any court of record, it shall be filled by appointment of the governor, and the person appointed shall hold the office until a successor is elected and qualified. When elected, such successor shall hold the office the residue of the unexpired term.".

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: On the amendment, the Chair recognizes Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: We have debated this matter at great length in committee of the whole. It is not a new subject to the members of this convention. It is one of the few places that I feel that there is an overriding political consideration that nobody is willing to face, and I think that we are here demonstrating — and we have demonstrated it in the action taken by the committee of the whole — what was said by a political scientist last Monday night on television in reporting on the activities of this convention, that too many of us are making our decisions and attempting to write a constitution with our own views and our own posture in the political picture of the state of Michigan at the present time guiding our actions. No one on the judicial committee wants to admit it, and no one in this convention thus far has admitted it, but I am constantly compelled to the idea that if we had not had some 80 appointments to the bench in the last 12 years made by one political party as a result of having the governor, that we wouldn't be tampering with this section of the constitution. Now, we haven't had a Democratic governor of the state for very many years, and when compared with the total history of this state, a very small part of the life of the constitution and its predecessors from which this language was originally taken has been under this party.

It's my firm belief, and I state this as an individual delegate to the convention — I speak for no one but myself, and I hope that if I'm wrong my friends that I have made here amongst the Republican party will, after searching their consciences, attempt to convince me without too much force that this action in removing the power of the governor to appoint to fill vacancies is not politically motivated. There are a lot of reasons advanced for it, and there are a lot of people who advance the theory that the substitute that we have here — by asking retired judges if they are available to serve in these vacancies, or by leaving the vacancies empty — will serve the purpose. It has even been suggested that we might call special elections. I wonder if you folks realize what you are imposing on a county the size of Wayne county when you ask to call a special election to fill a vacancy for one judge on our bench down there. I also wonder if you realize what you are doing to us with our terribly overcrowded court docket when you ask us to wait as much as 2 years with a vacancy or perhaps more than one vacancy on that bench. There have been 11 judicial vacancies, I am informed, just in the short time that the present governor has occupied that seat. And I wonder if you honestly believe that at that rate of replacement we have a supply of people to fill these vacancies in the manner that the committee has proposed.

I don't suppose that anyone's vote is going to be changed by this approach to this matter, but I feel that I have exercised about as much restraint as I could in this regard in the committee and on this floor. As far as I'm concerned, this change in the constitution is motivated by pure politics and by pure reaction to a condition that has existed for a number of years as a result of the vote of the people of the state of Michigan, and I can't view it in any other light.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, I support the statement just made by Mr. Ford, and I support the amendment offered. The question was raised by Mr. Ford whether this is in fact a political question. We naturally are reluctant to admit in any case that we are motivated by political ideas rather than considering the best interests of the state.

I suggest that this is a political question and has been handled as a political question, and in proof of that assertion I will state to you that there can't be any question about it, because 2 Detroit newspapers have said so. This is rather miraculous. One of them blasted the Democrats for being political about this, and the other one blasted the Republicans for being political about it. Therefore, I'm quite certain that everyone around here is being political on this subject. I don't believe both papers could be right as to which party is wrong, but it is a political question, I'm quite certain of that.

We had the horse race theory before us a few minutes ago, and we were able to consider that and turn it down. Now we have the out in pasture theory of judges — judges who are out to pasture should be brought back into useful activities in society. It seems to me that's a rather backward approach to the problem. The problem isn't what to do with retired judges. The problem is how to get good judges in office.

One further statement to show why I state on the floor that this is a political question. I have stated to many people around the state — and I state to the delegates here — that there is a certain tendency among Republicans, and I want you to know that I think so, to cure problems after the disease has run its course. After you have seen something you don't like, and the situation possibly is about to reverse, you still, as they say, fight the last war. But, what's worse than that, you have a system here which has been in effect for 100 years. We have heard no complaints during that 100 year period from either Democrats or Republicans that the system was a bad system. It wasn't a bad system so long as nearly every judge in the state was a Republican judge. That is what seems to be the consensus. Neither side was opposed to it. But when the Democrats began to get into the act, and a certain number of judges became Democrats, the Republicans became horrified at the thought: how can a system be any good if Democrats can participate in it? That seems to be the thought. Therefore, you are changing the rules.

Now, I don't say that the rule you are changing to is a horrible system. I simply call to your attention that this is one of a number of changes you are making just for the same reason. You have a system that goes for 100 years or 150 years, whatever branch of government it is. You never make any complaints. Neither does the other party. But as soon as the system begins to work equitably, so that there is a chance for the public to kick one party out and put the other one in, and keep on doing that, then you begin to think some other system — any other system in fact — must be better.

You have to face up to the fact that you're going to be charged with that when you make changes of that type — changes which are the result only of the fact that the Democrats are participating in the act. I therefore charge that this change is not warranted, it is not necessary, and that it is politically motivated, and we should support the amendment.

MR. WANGER: Point of order.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: What is the point, Mr. Wanger?

MR. WANGER: The point of order is that the 2 previous speakers upon occasion in their remarks have reflected upon the motives of other delegates in the convention. Now, they may talk about matters being political issues, but when they speak of the motivations of other delegates they attack those delegates in their representative capacity.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Well, the Chair has not heard any delegate referred to, Mr. Wanger. The Chair next recognizes Mr. Gust.

MR. GUST: I just want to make 2 or 3 very short points. One, I would like to say — and I think this has been pointed out in previous debate — that there is a great deal of feeling among the delegates here, and I think among some delegates of the minority party, that perhaps the appointive discretion which now lies in the governor has been abused at some times in the recent past. Two, and probably more important, it makes in effect an appointive judicial system out of what we intended to be an elective judicial system. And 3, for the record, so there won't be any misunderstanding, I confess, Mr. Ford, that I am motivated about 95 per cent politically in my opinions here.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes Mr. Walker.

MR. WALKER: I, too, must agree with Mr. Gust. It is a rare occasion, I'm afraid. But in view of Mr. Ford's and Mr. Wanger's statements that none of the delegates will admit political motivation, I must say in this connection and in the last record roll call vote that I was partially motivated in changing my yes vote to a no vote by looking up on the board and seeing what my esteemed senatorial delegate had done. He voted no right along with me, and I had to change to agree with him. And I believe, whether you would want to call this politics or not, brother George is right sometimes.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes Mr. Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. President, Mr. Ford didn't have to ask me to be in his corner on this one. He knew that I am the only member of the judicial committee who has been for the appointive system from the beginning, and I'm still sticking to it.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Farnsworth.

MR. FARNSWORTH: Mr. President, members of the convention, I only want to clear up a couple of impressions that might have been left by Delegate Ford when he said, "Are you going to leave Wayne county with vacancies for a couple of years or so?" No one here, Mr. Ford, would leave you with a vacancy. Section d, which you are trying to replace, very definitely states that the appointment will be made immediately from a retired judge to fill that vacancy. The second impression which your talk might have left was when you said, "Are you going to require us to have special elections?" It clearly states in section d that it can be a general or special election. I just wanted to clear up those impressions.

Now, section d is part of a package that this convention has formulated to insure for all time henceforth our judges will be elected, and as just part of that package, we should not under any consideration delete it. I urge you to vote no on the Ford amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I rise to speak on behalf of the Ford amendment, and to speak against the majority report. At the outset, it seems to me, unless I have read the majority proposal incorrectly, that there seems to be a conflict between section a of Committee Proposal 96 and section d of Committee Proposal 96. Section a provides that a judge shall not be elected or appointed to a judicial office after reaching the age of 70 years. In Wayne county we only have at the present time, unless I am incorrect — and I don't believe that I am — 2 retired judges, both past 80 years of age.

I think we should examine also just when did this particular problem that we are discussing here today arise? Now, for 100 years or more the present system has been in effect and has been working. All of us know that there has been no great hue and cry for any change in this system until recent years. Unfortunately, I feel that we are living here or debating this topic with the ghost of G. Mennen Williams because he was popular enough to be elected governor of this state for 12 years, and as such made more judicial appointments than any other governor in the history of the state of Michigan. I would also caution you and advise that it's too late — too late — to run against G. Mennen Williams now by enacting this proposal.

I would have to agree partially with what my good friend Rocky Gust had to say about being politically motivated. I would also have to concede to you that some of my remarks are politically motivated, and I think they are pertinent and to the point. To adopt a system where you are going to call back a retired judge who has completed his career and his service to his state and to the people of the state and to place this additional burden upon him in my considered and humble opinion is sheer nonsense. And I'm sure that any industrialist will agree, who has been charged with the responsibility of running a manufacturing plant, that he would not want to call back a retired worker who had reached the age of 70, 74 or 75 and whose reflexes were not as good as they were when he was of a younger age and place him on a piece of highly technical automated equipment, where one slip or one lapse of memory could cost him literally thousands of dollars. And I agree with that. I think that when a worker has reached retirement age he has served his employer and is entitled to retirement. I believe the same is likewise true of a judge. And it seems to me that one of the big problems that you have — those of you in the majority who are living with this ghost that has been referred to in this convention — is that you are afflicted with "judgitis." And "judgitis" is that you happened to have had a governor of the opposite party for 12 years who made more appointments to the judicial spots. Now, I ask the question before I close: what is wrong in having a judge appointed to the bench, having him serve in the full glare of the public eye, where all of his judicial decisions are open to public review, and then have the people make the choice of whether they want him to continue to serve as a judge? Let them give the consent and advice.

We have a situation in Wayne county, for example, where under the proposal that you are adopting, where every Tom, Dick and Harry could run for supreme court justice — and I agree it would be hard to get the required number of signatures on a petition, but it could be done — and you could conceivably elect name candidates. Now, the situation that happens in Wayne county would not be as apt to happen on the state level, but it could in some of the lower courts. But we have a bartender who makes a practice or hobby out of running name candidates, and many of the times they are successful.

As I stated in the beginning, this is your decision to make — those of you in the majority. I would hope, however, that you bear in mind that when a judge retires, it means just that. He deserves his years of retirement. He deserves to live out the rest of his life in retirement and enjoy it. And no judge is going to refuse to come back and serve if he is asked to do so, even though his better judgment might tell him not to.

In closing, this will have to rest with you and your conscience. But do not let your affliction with the ghost of a former governor and your affliction with "judgitis" cloud your thinking in this issue. As I say, it rests with your conscience. And remember that no ear can hear or tongue can tell the tortures of that inward hell.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mrs. Judd.

MRS. JUDD: Mr. President, members of the convention, it seems to me that on this subject of selection of judges we kind of find a reverse English. As Mr. Gust pointed out, the 1908 constitution provides in name an elective system, but in fact an appointive system, the way it has worked out.

I favored every proposal that came up for an appointive system — the ABA plan, and the federal plan, and all the various modifications thereof — all of them being efforts to keep the appointive system, but to improve it and strengthen it. Now the tables seem to be turned. Those who opposed all of the various appointive plans up to this one are now very heatedly for appointment. And I and many of my fellow Republicans who were for appointment are now trying to be consistent with what we look upon as a bipartisan compromise and make the system truly elective. Now, I for one am going to try to stick by this compromise, and vote against this amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. President and ladies and gentlemen of the convention, so that I shall not be accused of indulging in personalities, in the first instance all I'm going to do is read an editorial from the Detroit News which was printed March 9, 1962. It's entitled Judgeship Stupidity:

> Republicans who voted to strike from any new constitution the governor's authority to fill judicial vacancies displayed a keener interest in petty politics than in the quality of Michigan justice. We hail the one Republican delegate, Robert S. Tubbs, who had the courage to oppose such blindness.
> The Republican plan is to let the supreme court appoint a temporary judge who could not run to succeed himself in the election. It is clearly another involvement of the high court in politics. Voters, without any previous measure of the candidates, would have to choose judges from herds of job hungry nominees.
> The record shows that in the absence of any qualified screening system for judicial candidates, those launched in careers on the bench by governors' appointments measure up well. Political primaries often are won by popular names rather than merit. A governor must base a judicial appointment on merit or hear from the voters.
> The system which permits governors, in the absence of a true merit plan, to appoint judges applies equally to Republican and Democratic governors. The citizenry now will be saying that Republicans feel inadequate to winning at the polls the right to name judges so they want to destroy the system.
> One way for the Republicans to overcome that feeling of inferiority would be to accomplish something for Michigan, like a judicial system based on merit appointment, and then lick the opposition on their record.

The point which has not been made, and the point that I would like to make about this present provision, is that regardless of the intention of the delegates, the result is that this present provision, if enacted and if adopted by the people in the new constitution, would result in discrimination against the minority groups, particularly those in Wayne county. It's unfortunate that many of you here are not familiar with the situation, particularly as it exists in Wayne county. And regardless of whether we talk about democracy and we talk about the elimination of prejudice and bigotry, we know that it exists. In spite of the fact, for example, that the negroes have had qualified attorneys for the last 50 years, there has been no negro elected in the first instance to the circuit court in Wayne county. I submit that if the governor is not given the right to appoint, with the subsequent designation on the ballot, that this situation will continue to occur in Wayne county.

Now, this situation as it pertains to negroes pertains not only to them. It pertains to other minority groups, such as the Poles, the Lebanese and the Greeks. This system of appointment by the governor has been a method which has given the governor the opportunity to appoint qualified individuals in particular minority groups who have been unsuccessful in attempting to serve the people on the bench. And I submit to you, again, that regardless of the intention, the result will be the same. This will result in discrimination against minority groups.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. President and delegates, while I do not take the credit for this particular proposal, I do feel I have some responsibility in this connection, inasmuch as Delegate Stan Everett and myself introduced a delegate proposal along this particular line.

I am deeply disturbed by many of the things that have been said here, many of the cliches that have been thrown out of a political nature. I believe that the overriding political consideration that one delegate charged no one was willing to face, either in the committee or on the floor, and failed to face himself, is a consideration we did face. And that is the simple fact that where appointments to the judiciary are available to a governor or a president, as the case may be, or any other political incumbent, the tendency is to make the appointments entirely from persons of his own political party, and load the bench, so to speak, with partisans of his own political faith. Now, this isn't a ghost from the past. This is experience from the present. And if this were of a selfish political motivation today, I think I would be on the other side of the fence. I think that there is certainly a good possibility that the tables will be turned in Michigan.

But this was not our motivation. We have nothing to gain, either the committee or this convention, politically, by adopting the committee proposal and defeating this present amendment. We have nothing to gain because we will truly let the people make the decision as to the incumbent. No one who has spoke charging politics or political motivation has faced that issue, but I think the committee did; and I urge you to support the original committee proposal.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: I move the previous question, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Iverson moves the previous question. Is the demand supported? The demand is supported. Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I would like to move to limit debate to 15 minutes, so that those people who have not yet had a chance to speak may have a chance to do so.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the motion made by Mr. Faxon that debate upon this amendment be limited to 15 minutes. All those in favor of limiting debate will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The motion does not prevail. The question reverts to the motion by Mr. Iverson for the previous question. The demand has been supported. The question now is: shall the main question be put? All those in favor will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The previous question is ordered. All those in favor of the — Mr. Ford, for what purpose does the gentleman rise?

MR. FORD: Mr. President, I request a roll call vote.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Ford demands the yeas and nays upon his amendment. Is the demand supported? The demand is supported, and the yeas and nays are ordered. For what purpose does the lady rise, Mrs. Hatcher?

MRS. HATCHER: Mr. President, I would like to have the secretary read the amendment again.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Ford has offered the following amendment:

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Ford, upon which the yeas and nays have been ordered. And the previous question has been ordered. For what purpose does the gentleman rise, Mr. Marshall?

MR. MARSHALL: I thought Mr. Ford demanded the yeas and nays on ordering the previous question.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: No, he ordered them on his amendment. All those in favor of the amendment offered by Mr. Ford will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Ford, the yeas are 39; the nays are 86.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Ford offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 13, after "each" by striking out "elected"; so that section e will read:

> There shall be printed upon the ballot under the name of each incumbent justice or judge, who is a candidate for nomination or election to the same office, the designation of that office.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Ford. The Chair recognizes the delegate from Wayne, Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. President and members of the convention, at first glance it might appear that this amendment has no effect, in view of the fact that we had the vote that just took place. However, we don't know yet when the constitution will become effective, if ever. And in the event that this constitution is approved by the people, there will undoubtedly be at that time a number of judges — perhaps only one — who reached the bench by appointment.

As was stated here the other day, when you ask a man to take the bench in a court of record in this state, you ask him to lay aside all of his connection with the practice of law. And you do this whether you appoint him or whether you elect him. The difference is that when you appoint him you never appoint him for more than 2 years. He has to run for election sometime within the ensuing 2 years. So he must make a choice of whether or not to accept this appointment in the first instance on the basis of what he thinks his chances of being elected are. And if he doesn't feel pretty strongly that he has an opportunity to win the election to the office after being appointed, he certainly, if he is a lawyer of the caliber that we would like to see on our bench, he is not going to give up his practice to take the appointment. If he has given up his practice to take this appointment, then I think it is only fair to allow him to run under the circumstances that obtained at the time that he made the choice and accepted the appointment. And whether we continue with the language that was just adopted or not, if we are going to be fair and if we are going to be consistent about all of the reasons that were advanced by the committee for the designation in the first place, I believe that we should afford the designation to all those judges who happen to be on the bench at the time this constitution is adopted.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Higgs.

MR. HIGGS: Mr. President and fellow delegates, this is just another attempt to preserve an appointive type of system. If you would like to have a truly elective system, I urge that you vote no on the Ford amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Ford. The secretary will read it once again.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment is:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 1629.]

MR. FORD: Mr. President, I ask for a roll call vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Ford, the yeas are 35; the nays are 86.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Ford offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 3 by striking out all of lines 11 through 17; and in line 18, by striking out "special statutory" and inserting "Sec. i. All"; and in line 20, after "unless" by striking out "they" and inserting "such powers"; and after "are" by inserting "modified or"; so the section will then read:

Sec. i. All courts in existence as of the time this constitution becomes effective shall retain their powers and jurisdiction, except as provided by law, until and unless such powers are modified or abolished by law.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: On the amendment, Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: This has been debated. Basically, this is a provision which would take back out the 5 year death penalty, self executing, that has been passed by the committee of the whole with regard to the justice of the peace and the circuit court commissioner, leaving the matter of their complete abolition or modification entirely in the hands of the legislature, with no strings attached. This is about as flexible as you can get. And all of the reasons that I might give are contained on pages 581 and 582 of the journal.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Ford. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The amendment is not adopted.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, I will ask that the board be cleared.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Ford, the yeas are 41; the nays are 79.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Mahinske offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 3, line 11, after "of" by striking out "circuit court commissioner and"; so that the first sentence of section 1 will read:

> The office of justice of the peace shall continue to have, for a period of not to exceed 5 years from the date this constitution becomes effective, all their respective powers and jurisdiction. . . .

and so forth.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: On the amendment, the Chair recognizes Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. President, members of the convention, I offer this amendment to strike the office of circuit court commissioner from the automatic death penalty clause here basically because of the tremendous work load that the circuit court commissioners carry. Now, there are 110 circuit court commissioners in the state — at least one in every circuit court. In Wayne county we have more than one because of the work load. I would like to point out what we would be doing if we abolish circuit court commissioners in Wayne county, and I think to a great extent this would hold true for Oakland, Macomb, Washtenaw, Genesee, possibly Bay and Ingham counties.

For the past 5 years the docket or the work load of the circuit court commissioners in Wayne county has been approximately 20,000 cases a year, plus something in addition to 4,000 writs that are heard, plus over 500 petitions that are heard, plus the handling of all chancery sales, plus all the circuit court referral work, which is all done on a current basis so that there's no backlog there, plus the fact that all of the above matters may be subject to jury trials, depending on whether or not the parties seek a jury trial here. Also in Wayne county you will be abolishing the circuit court commissioners bench, which is sustained on a salary basis by the county of Wayne itself. In other words, this amounts to a supplemental bench that we have in Wayne county that we pay for ourselves. There are no state funds involved here. As far as the outstate counties are concerned, I have no idea whether they are all contributed to by the state itself or if any of them are completely supported by their individual counties.

For these reasons, plus the fact that we have not provided for what is going to happen to this 23,000 or 24,000 cases a year by abolishing this court — we are going to throw them, as I see it, back onto the circuit court docket, which is some 24 months behind now in Wayne county, and up to 18 in most other counties — for these reasons I would strike the reference to the circuit court commissioners in section 1.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. President, members of the convention, Mr. Mahinske's objectives may be laudable, but I submit that what he is doing is that he isn't even giving the circuit court commissioners 5 years. If he takes them out of this provision, since we have nowhere else provided for them, immediately upon the adoption of this constitution they shall perish, because they have no basis in law or in the constitution. Unless the legislature would see fit in the interim between the time of the adoption of the constitution and its effective date to recreate them as a statutory office, they would cease to exist as of the date this constitution became effective.

Now, by this provision there is at least a 5 year time period during which the legislature, in its wisdom, may study the matter and make provision for this, even if it's nothing more, Mr. Mahinske, than to reenact either under the present name or some other name, as a statutory court, the circuit court commissioner or somebody or other to take their place. But I submit to you that if you strike them, then you have given them the death penalty not in 5 years, but immediately.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would like to point out, just to save further debate here —

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Mahinske asks unanimous consent to speak again on his amendment. There is no objection. You may proceed.

MR. MAHINSKE: I think a proponent has more than one opportunity anyway.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: You're right; you have 2. The Chair stands corrected.

MR. MAHINSKE: I have an amendment which I have not submitted yet which would exclude all reference to section 21 of the article with reference to the exclusion report, and I think this would take care of the objections Mr. Danhof would have. In the event that this would pass, the amendment to amend the exclusion report would put the existing language back in the constitution.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. President and fellow delegates, in view of the fact of the tremendous work load that we have in Wayne county, and which the courts have come before the judiciary time and again and complained of, and in view of the fact that under our present regulation that we'll be under, under the ruling of the circuit courts, which will have control, managerial and otherwise, over all of the courts of the circuit and other jurisdictions, I think unquestionably that Mr. Danhof is correct that there is some question as to whether or not they are carrying the work load that they should.

Certainly, under the probabilities of having a reorganization, and under the direction that they will be under, under the present contemplated system, it would simply be a matter of organization to harness them and get them into line and get work that will certainly be for the best interests of the people who have litigation coming up in those courts. And as Chairman Danhof has said, if we eliminate them now we foreclose that possibility.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would like to call for the yeas and the nays.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Mahinske demands the yeas and nays on his amendment. Is the demand supported? The demand is supported. The Chair recognizes Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. President, I would like to ask Mr. Danhof a question to try to clarify the point that he made. Mr. Danhof, it seems to me that every one of the present constitutional provisions are implemented by statute, and even if the office of circuit court commissioner were removed from the constitution, the existing statutes would still be in full force and effect until the legislature did something very positively about them; isn't that correct?

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Binkowski, it is my understanding that the statutes do not create the office. They may set forth the jurisdiction of the office, but they do not necessarily create the office. The office is created in the constitution. And as we have provided, there shall be a 5 year time during which these — and I use the word advisedly — inferior court offices will remain effective; and in view of the language adopted under section m, during this time there shall be established these courts of limited jurisdiction to take over these particular duties and the powers therein.

I'm not familiar with all of the statutes, Mr. Binkowski, but I would venture an opinion that they do not create the office, and I still think there is sufficient time, ample time, to handle the particular problem without excepting the circuit court commissioner from this particular section.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. President, I think that this point is very important, and I think it should be clarified. In other words, it is my understanding that every one of the provisions are implemented by statute, and I don't see how the statutes would be affected at all in the event that this convention recommended the deletion of the office of circuit court commissioner. It seems to me the legislature would have to do something very positive about it, in a very positive way. I think that this point is rather important on this question.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the amendment offered by Mr. Mahinske, on which the yeas and nays have been demanded. All those in favor of the amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Mahinske, the yeas are 28; the nays are 89.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is the last amendment on the desk, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Committee Proposal 96, as amended, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 96 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. The supreme court, the court of appeals, the circuit court, the probate court and other courts designated as such by the legislature shall be courts of record and shall each have a common seal. Except as authorized otherwise by this constitution, justices and judges of the courts of record of this state shall be lawyers licensed to practice law in this state and no person shall be elected or appointed to a judicial office after reaching the age of 70 years. No judge or justice of any court in this state shall be paid from the fees of his office nor shall the amount of his salary be measured by the fees or other moneys received nor by the amount of judicial activity.

Sec. b. Whenever a judge shall remove his domicile beyond the limits of the territory from which he was elected, he shall be deemed to have vacated his office.

Sec. c. A justice and a judge of a court of record shall be ineligible to be nominated for, or elected to an elective office other than a judicial office during the period of his service as a judge and for 1 year thereafter.

Sec. d. When a vacancy occurs in the office of an elected judge of any court of record, it shall be filled at a general or special election according to law. The supreme court is empowered to authorize persons who have served as judges and have voluntarily retired, to perform judicial duties for the limited period of time from the occurrence of the vacancy until the successor is elected and qualified.

Sec. e. There shall be printed upon the ballot under the name of each elected incumbent justice or judge, who is a candidate for nomination or election to the same office, the designation of that office.

Sec. f. Any judge of probate serving at the time this constitution becomes effective may serve the remainder of the term and be eligible for reelection to his present office regardless of other provisions in this constitution requiring him to be licensed to practice law in this state.

Sec. g. Salaries of justices of the supreme court, of the judges of the court of appeals, of the circuit judges within the county or circuit, and of the probate judges within a county or district, shall be uniform, and may be increased but shall not be decreased, during a term of office except and only to the extent of a general salary reduction in all other branches of government.

Each of the judges of the circuit courts shall receive an annual salary as provided by law. In addition to the salary paid from the state treasury, each circuit judge may receive from any county in which he regularly holds court such additional salary as may be determined from time to time by the board of supervisors of the county. In any county where such additional salary is granted, it shall be paid at the same rate to all circuit judges regularly holding court therein.

Sec. h. For reasonable cause, which shall not be sufficient ground for impeachment, the governor shall remove any judge on a concurrent resolution of 2/3 of the members elected to each house of the legislature; and the cause for which such removal is required shall be stated at length in such resolution.

Sec. i. The office of circuit court commissioner and justice of the peace shall continue to have, for a period of not to exceed 5 years from the date this constitution becomes effective, all their respective powers and jurisdiction until the time within this period that they are abolished or their jurisdiction and powers are transferred to, or invested in, other courts that shall be established in accordance with this constitution.

Special statutory courts in existence as of the time this constitution becomes effective shall retain their powers and jurisdiction, except as provided by law, until and unless they are abolished by law.

Sec. j. The provisions of this constitution requiring the establishment of staggered terms of offices in existence, shall be implemented at the next election for such offices by legislation providing for elections for terms of varying length, none of which shall be shorter than the basic term provided herein for the office.

Sec. k. Each branch of the legislature as well as the governor shall have the authority to request the opinion of the supreme court upon important questions of law upon solemn occasions, in connection with legislation after it shall have been enacted into law but before its effective date. Such opinions shall relate only to questions of constitutionality.

Sec. l. Any elected judge of a circuit court or probate court may become a candidate in the primary election for the office of which he is then the incumbent, by filing a declaration of intention at such time and in such office as shall be provided by law.

Sec. m. Within 5 years from the date this constitution becomes effective, and subject to the limitations contained in Committee Proposal 90 and section a of Committee Proposal 96, the legislature shall establish statutory courts of limited jurisdiction inferior to the circuit court with a definition of their powers and jurisdiction, the location and number of such courts, the qualifications of the judges who shall preside therein, the method of their election and tenure of office and the amount of their salary and by what governmental units the same shall be paid.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has also had under consideration Exclusion Report 2042, A report recommending the exclusion of article VII, sections 15, 16 and 21. It reports this back to the convention without amendment and with the recommendation that it be adopted.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon adopting the exclusion report. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed will say no.

Exclusion Report 2042 is adopted and referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Exclusion Report 2042 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 1621.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has also had under consideration Exclusion Report 2043, A report recommending the exclusion of article VII, sections 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 17, 19, 20 and 23. It reports this back to the convention without amendment, and with the recommendation that it be adopted.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon adopting the exclusion report. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed will say no.

Exclusion Report 2043 is adopted and is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Exclusion Report 2043 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 1622.

SECRETARY CHASE: This completes the report of the committee of the whole, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. President, it seems to me there's one thing that we still have left to handle under the judicial section. Now that Delegates Farnsworth and Hubbs have been duly installed as honorary barristers, I should like to nominate that long suffering Delegate Barthwell to this same rank of honorary barrister. I should also like to move at this time that we bestow upon the 20 lawyers who served on the judicial committee — and I had a hard time finding a suitable rank, but I looked through an old Naval Journal, and the ancient and distinguished naval rank of pharmacist's mate second class seems appropriate. (laughter)

MR. NORD: Point of order, Mr. President. Are motions in order at this time, Mr. President?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Motions as such are not in order, Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Then I gather that Mr. King's motion is not in order, am I correct?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair didn't accept it as a motion. The Chair took it as a rhetorical motion. Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: I rise to a point of personal privilege, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: What is the point?

MRS. BUTLER: I would like to speak on the disrespect for our retired judges shown this afternoon.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The lady may proceed, without objection.

MRS. BUTLER: I feel, with the political overtones this afternoon, that I really should start out by saying that I demand equal time. But I am appalled at the disrespect for our retired judges. We have here in the convention a number of brilliant retired judges, and I don't like to hear them spoken of as out to pasture, and other terms. For the people who so glibly talk about jealousy because of the 6 terms of Governor Williams and the insulting jackpot of the latest political maneuver of another Democratic governor, I would say that we are jealous, that's all right. But as far as the political overtones in wanting retired judges to serve, I would like to ask, what would you do with Eleanor Roosevelt? (laughter)

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes the lady from Wayne, Miss McGowan.

MISS McGOWAN: Mr. President, I rise to ask permission to speak.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Miss McGowan asks unanimous consent to make a statement. Is there objection? The Chair hears no objection. You may proceed.

MISS McGOWAN: Mr. President and fellow delegates, my statement deals with a fellow delegate — a fellow lawyer — whose party affiliation differs from my party affiliation. To use a trite expression, life has been good to me, and it has been my privilege, as I am sure it has been your privilege, to meet persons of integrity, inpartiality, professional competence, humility and Christian charity. Of the persons I have had the honor of knowing who fall in this category, it is my opinion that Mr. Robert Danhof, the chairman of the committee on judicial branch of this constitutional convention, takes his place high among these top echelon individuals. I feel that I would be remiss if I did not reflect upon the truth at this time.

You entrusted Mr. Danhof with a high honor and privilege — the chairmanship of the committee on judicial branch. I feel sure he can give an excellent accounting of his stewardship. He brought to the committee on judicial branch superior legal knowledge, professional competence and skill; yet, he exhibited complete understanding for each member of the committee and for every person who appeared before the committee. He exerted an incalculable influence for good. He not only has a great intellect, but a great heart. Mr. Danhof, a member of the majority party serving as chairman of the committee on judicial branch, was completely unbiased, and sought to and did utilize the abilities and talents of each member of his committee with the thought in mind of the greatest good for the greatest number, and that thought alone. He conducted the committee meetings and deliberations so as to encourage each member of the committee to search for judicial truth and judicial truth alone in order that we could recommend to the convention a judicial system which we felt could adequately and efficiently serve and protect all of the people of the state of Michigan. Searching for judicial truth with 20 lawyers and one nonlawyer at times became laborious; yet Mr. Danhof never lost his sense of humor or balance or love for his brother.

As you know, Mr. Danhof is a young man. I was tremendously encouraged, inspired, and impressed by the marked respect he showed for all of the members of his committee and especially the respect he showed to the members of the committee who had lived longer than he and achieved greater experience. It is heart warming to reflect upon the respect he showed to and for the retired circuit judges who are members of the committee — Judge Mosier, Judge Pugsley and Judge Leibrand.

I could go on acclaiming his excellence. In closing I would just like to say to you, thank you for giving us Mr. Danhof as chairman of the committee on judicial branch. He served well. We would wish for Mr. Danhof fair winds and smooth sailing. We would pray that almighty God would love him and grant him an even greater increase of the virtues of wisdom, justice, prudence and understanding. Thank you. (applause)

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes the delegate from the twenty-third district, Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. President, fellow delegates, as Dr. Nord said at one time, this, too, will pass away. I appreciate the kind words offered by Miss McGowan.

We have completed the judicial article. The committee did work long and hard. To the laymen of this convention, I apologize for the members of my profession occupying too much of your time. To my fellow lawyers, I thank you for the education that I have been given in this last 2½ weeks. To Mr. Van Dusen, I thank you for your kind indulgence. And to Mr. Bentley I can say only that we did not at least reach a third anniversary, for which I am most grateful. And now I can only say that I pass the mantle on to Mr. Martin, and he may assume this role. Thank you very much. (applause)

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Judge Gadola.

MR. GADOLA: I desire to thank Mrs. Butler for her kindness, but I will remind her that I do not resent the remark about the pasture at all, because the scriptures say something about lying down in green pastures. And, you know, as I have listened to the debate in this organization here, I don't know where I could find them much greener. (laughter and applause)

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The next order of business is announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on emerging problems will meet Wednesday, March 14, in committee room I on the third floor at 7:30 p.m. Mr. Frank Millard, chairman.

The committee on administration will meet Thursday, March 15, at 1:15 p.m. Walter DeVries, chairman.

We have the following requests for leaves of absence: Mr. Stamm requests to be excused from tomorrow morning's session to attend a funeral; Mr. Ostrow requests a leave from the sessions of Thursday and Friday because of urgent business which cannot be postponed; Mr. Rood requests to be excused from the session of Thursday. A previous commitment for a speaking engagement on the constitutional convention makes this necessary; and Mr. Bonisteel asks to be excused from tomorrow's session.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, the several requests will be granted. The Chair hears none, and they are so granted.

What is the pleasure of the convention? The Chair recognizes the delegate from Berrien, Mr. Richards.

MR. J. B. RICHARDS: Mr. President, I move that we adjourn.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate moves that the convention adjourn. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The convention stands adjourned until tomorrow at 9:30 a.m.

[Whereupon, at 5:10 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 9:30 o'clock a.m., Wednesday, March 14, 1962.]

NINETY-NINTH DAY

Wednesday, March 14, 1962, 9:30 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The convention will come to order.

The invocation will be delivered by Mr. Milton Gates, Jr., a former Reader of First Church of Christ, Scientist, Lansing.

MR. GATES: We will first observe a moment of silent prayer, after which I shall read appropriate verses from the Bible.

Hear my prayer, O Lord, give ear to my supplications: in Thy faithfulness answer me, and in Thy righteousness.

Cause me to hear Thy loving kindness in the morning; for in Thee do I trust: cause me to know the way wherein I should walk; for I lift up my soul unto Thee.

Teach me to do Thy will; for Thou art my God: Thy spirit is good; lead me into the land of uprightness. Amen.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. All those present will vote aye. Have you all voted? The secretary will lock the machine and record the attendance.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave:

Messrs. Garvin, Habermehl and Nisbet, from today's session; Mr. Page wishes to be excused from today's session because of illness; and Mr. Walker wishes to be excused today for the purpose of giving a speech.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, the several requests will be granted. The Chair hears no objection and they are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Bonisteel, Davis, Garvin, Habermehl, Madar, Mosier, Nisbet, Page, Stamm, Sterrett and Walker.

Absent without leave: Messrs. Barthwell, Bledsoe, King, Norris and Pellow.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, the delegates absent without leave will be temporarily excused. The Chair hears no objection and it is so granted.

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: No committee reports, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar for today.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Motions and resolutions. The Chair recognizes Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. President, I would like to offer a motion. The secretary has a copy, if he would read it. Does he have a copy?

SECRETARY CHASE: We did not bring the copy to the desk, Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Well, I will read it. I move that on the order of general orders following the conclusion of the proposals on the judicial branch, we next move to report of the committee on legislative organization, and then to the executive branch in the regular schedule.

I mentioned Monday night, and tried to bring this up yesterday, and the reason that I am introducing this motion is primarily because we haven't yet settled on a legislature, and here we are going to be dealing with problems which will be very pertinent to our considerations on the executive branch. It would seem in a proper, logical order that the legislative organization, once settled, would make possible more expeditious handling of the other committee proposals, and I would therefore urge your consideration of moving to legislative organization proposals so as to alleviate some unnecessary discussion with regard to the executive branch proposals. That is all I care to say on this, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the motion by Mr. Faxon that the agreed orders in committee of the whole be changed, and that the committee of the whole next consider the legislative organization proposals instead of the executive branch proposals as previously ordered. All those in favor of the motion will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The motion does not prevail.

DELEGATES: Division.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: A division is called for. Is the division supported? It is supported. All those in favor of Mr. Faxon's motion will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and total the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: The vote on Mr. Faxon's motion to change the order of consideration in committee of the whole, the yeas are 43; the nays are 83.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The motion does not prevail. Are there any further motions or resolutions?

SECRETARY CHASE: None on file, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: No special orders.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: General orders of the day. The gentleman from Genesee, Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering matters on the general orders calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the motion to resolve into committee of the whole. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The committee will convene and Mr. Millard will preside.

[Whereupon, Mr. Millard assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The committee will be in order. Is there anything on the calendar, Mr. Secretary?

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 1 on the calendar, from the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 46, A proposal pertaining to the executive budget and item veto. Amends article VI.

Following is Committee Proposal 46 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. THE GOVERNOR SHALL SUBMIT TO THE LEGISLATURE, NOT LATER THAN 21 CALENDAR DAYS AFTER THE CONVENING OF EACH REGULAR SESSION, OR AT A TIME FIXED BY LAW, A BUDGET FOR THE ENSUING FISCAL PERIOD SETTING FORTH IN DETAIL ALL PROPOSED EXPENDITURES AND ESTIMATED REVENUE OF THE STATE. PROPOSED EXPENDITURES SHALL NOT EXCEED ESTIMATED REVENUE. ON THE SAME DATE, THE GOVERNOR SHALL CAUSE TO BE SUBMITTED TO EACH HOUSE OF THE LEGISLATURE GENERAL APPROPRIATION BILLS TO EMBODY THE PROPOSED EXPENDITURES AND ANY NECESSARY BILL OR BILLS FOR NEW OR ADDITIONAL REVENUES TO MEET PROPOSED EXPENDITURES. THE AMOUNT OF ANY GENERAL FUND SURPLUS CREATED OR DEFICIT INCURRED DURING THE LAST PRECEDING FISCAL PERIOD SHALL BE APPROPRIATELY ENTERED AS AN ITEM IN THE BUDGET AND IN THE APPROPRIATION BILLS. THE GOVERNOR, PRIOR TO FINAL ACTION OF THE LEGISLATURE THEREON, MAY CAUSE TO BE SUBMITTED TO THE LEGISLATURE ANY AMENDMENTS TO THE GENERAL APPROPRIATION BILLS, AND SHALL CAUSE TO BE SUBMITTED ANY BILLS TO MEET DEFICIENCIES IN CURRENT APPROPRIATIONS.

Sec. b. GENERAL APPROPRIATION BILLS FOR THE SUCCEEDING FISCAL PERIOD SHALL BE ACTED UPON BEFORE EITHER HOUSE OF THE LEGISLATURE SHALL PASS ANY OTHER APPROPRIATION BILL, EXCEPT BILLS SUPPLEMENTING APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE CURRENT YEAR'S OPERATION. ANY BILL WHICH WILL REQUIRE AN APPROPRIATION TO CARRY OUT ITS PURPOSE SHALL BE CONSIDERED AN APPROPRIATION BILL. ONE OF THE GENERAL APPROPRIATION BILLS AS ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE SHALL CONTAIN AN ITEMIZED STATEMENT OF ESTIMATED REVENUE BY MAJOR SOURCE, THE TOTAL OF WHICH SHALL NOT BE LESS THAN THE TOTAL OF ALL APPROPRIATIONS PROPOSED IN THE GENERAL APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Sec. c. The governor shall have power to disapprove of any item or items of any bill making appropriations of money embracing distinct items; and the part or parts approved shall be the law; and the item or items disapproved shall be void, unless repassed according to the rules and limitations prescribed for the passage of other bills over the executive veto.

Sec. d. NO APPROPRIATION SHALL BE DEEMED A MANDATE TO SPEND. THE GOVERNOR SHALL REDUCE EXPENDITURES OF EXECUTIVE AGENCIES WHENEVER IT APPEARS THAT ACTUAL REVENUES FOR A FISCAL PERIOD WILL FALL BELOW THE REVENUE ESTIMATES ON WHICH APPROPRIATIONS FOR THAT PERIOD WERE BASED, SUCH REDUCTIONS IN EXPENDITURES TO BE MADE IN ACCORDANCE WITH PROCEDURES ESTABLISHED BY LAW. THE GOVERNOR'S POWER TO REDUCE EXPENDITURES SHALL NOT APPLY TO THE LEGISLATIVE AND JUDICIAL BRANCHES OR TO THOSE SERVICES FOR WHICH FUNDS ARE MANDATED BY THIS CONSTITUTION.

Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 46:

The purpose and intent of this proposal are to establish a constitutional executive budget process for the orderly management of the state's fiscal affairs. The executive budget system is common to 41 states, by statutory or constitutional provisions. Michigan has had some features of this type of system by statute since 1919. The responsibility of the executive for formulating, presenting, and eventually administering a periodic budget is recognized as a part of good management in public business. Executive budget provisions similar to those proposed herein are included in 3 of the 4 most recently adopted state constitutions (Missouri, Alaska, Hawaii) and are a key feature of the model state constitution. The 4 sections here proposed are deemed by this committee to embody minimum and basic essentials of an executive budget:

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

1) executive preparation and submission of the budget to the legislature;
2) embodiment of the executive budget in bill form for legislative consideration;
3) legislative action on the appropriation bills and enactment of fiscal policy, subject to executive veto, including the item veto; and
4) executive administration of appropriations and expenditures in accordance with legislative directives.

The present constitution does not clearly and completely embody the essential principles of an executive budget system. Provisions in the newer state constitutions, the emphasis on the executive budget in the majority of states, and the thinking among students of governmental finance have combined with the fundamental importance of budgeting in the conduct of responsible government to impel this committee to propose these 4 provisions for inclusion in the state constitution.

Sec. a. The first sentence of the proposal establishes that the governor shall prepare and present to the legislature a budget for the ensuing fiscal period. Twenty-one calendar days, or 3 weeks, give adequate time for preparation, and if sessions are to start as now on the second Wednesday in January, would mean (a) time for reappraisal of forecasts for the new year's conditions and (b) budget submission sometime between January 29 and February 4. This 21 day period also gives time for getting out of the way the normal organizational aspects of the legislature. Budget submission may be changed to "a time fixed by law", if it should appear at some future time that this was desirable, or that a different timing was more appropriate in the case, for example, of a governor elect. It is further required that the budget set forth proposed expenditures and revenue in detail, and that proposed expenditures not exceed estimated revenue, whether from existing or proposed new revenue sources.

To be a true executive budget, the proposed expenditures and estimated revenue must also be presented to the legislature in bill form for legislative action. This is the reason for the requirement that on the same date, bills embodying the budget plan and any proposed new revenues be introduced. Introduction in each house will allow a subsequent joint or concurrent consideration by the appropriate committees of each bill or its component parts, as may be determined by the legislature.

Provision is then made that the surplus created or deficit incurred during the previous fiscal period be included in the budget and appropriation bills for the next year. The words, "appropriately entered as an item" are used to avoid excess language while conveying the meaning that any surplus of the preceding fiscal year shall be a credit to estimated revenues, while any deficit of the preceding fiscal year would be a corresponding initial charge against expenditures.

The next requirement of the section does 2 things: (a) it allows the introduction of executive amendments to general appropriation bills prior to final action of the legislature (final passage by both houses) to cover contingencies such as omissions, oversights or emergency situations that may arise; (b) it requires the executive to cause bills for deficiencies expected to occur in current appropriations to be submitted. The further intent of both provisions is to emphasize initial executive responsibility for all matters relating to budget preparation and submission in bill form for legislative consideration.

Sec. b. The second provision is intended to accomplish 2 major points: (a) to focus legislative attention on the general appropriation bill or bills to the exclusion of any other appropriation bills, except those supplementing appropriations for the current year's operation; (b) to require the legislature (as well as the governor, by section a) to set forth by major item its own best estimates of revenue. The legislature frequently differs from executive revenue estimates. It seems only proper to require that such differences as exist be specifically set forth for public understanding and future judgment as to the validity of each.

Sec. c. This provision repeats verbatim the existing provision for the so called item veto, article V, section 37. It is deemed to be an integral part of an executive budget process.

Sec. d. The last provision contains a statement of policy in its first sentence that is in line with commonly accepted thinking in the field of governmental finance. It would also cover situations in which unforeseen efficiencies and economies might become possible. The second sentence requires executive control of expenditures in accordance with statutory directives "whenever it appears that actual revenues for a fiscal period will fall below the revenue estimates on which appropriations for that period were based."

Legislative directives for expenditure reductions in the past few years have not been adopted by the executive office because they were believed to be unconstitutional. The legislature, as the initiator of fiscal policy, should be able constitutionally to direct that expenditure reductions shall be made under specified conditions. This provision would remove any question as to the constitutionality of legislative control over general fiscal policy of the state, and would require current action to minimize impending year end deficits.

The final sentence protects the separation of powers doctrine by preventing executive reduction of expenditures for the coordinate legislative and judicial branches. In actual fact, expenditures for these 2 branches account for less than 1 per cent of the general fund, general purpose spending, the vast bulk of which is in the area of the executive branch. It would also prohibit the governor from making reductions in funds dedicated by the constitution for specific purposes.

Following is the minority report to Committee Proposal 46 as offered and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

Mr. Marshall, Miss Hart and Mrs. Daisy Elliott, a minority of the committee on executive branch, submit the following minority report to Committee Proposal 46:

A minority of the committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. THE GOVERNOR SHALL SUBMIT TO THE LEGISLATURE, AT A TIME FIXED BY LAW, A BUDGET FOR THE ENSUING FISCAL PERIOD SETTING FORTH IN DETAIL ALL PROPOSED EXPENDITURES AND ESTIMATED REVENUE OF THE STATE. THE GOVERNOR SHALL ALSO CAUSE TO BE SUBMITTED TO EACH HOUSE OF THE LEGISLATURE GENERAL APPROPRIATION BILLS TO EMBODY THE PROPOSED EXPENDITURES AND ANY NECESSARY BILL OR BILLS FOR NEW OR ADDITIONAL REVENUES TO MEET PROPOSED EXPENDITURES.

Sec. b. Strike all of section b of the committee proposal.

Sec. c. LEAVE AS IS IN THE COMMITTEE PROPOSAL.

Sec. d. Strike all of section d of the committee proposal.

Mr. Marshall, Miss Hart and Mrs. Daisy Elliott, a minority of the committee on executive branch, submit the following reasons in support of the foregoing minority report, which accompanied Committee Proposal 46:

One of the driving forces, if not the primary reason behind Michigan citizens calling a constitutional convention was the need to rid the state's constitution of the adminstrative detail that is limiting the discretion of the legislature and governor to such an extent that they cannot adjust and meet the needs of a changing society. Thus, it was hoped that steps would be taken to rid the new constitution of this detail, but the majority report will constitutionally freeze several matters that might better be left to legislative discretion. The inclusion of statutory items in the proposed constitution is a serious weakness in itself, but the majority report goes farther and in effect destroys the traditional separation of powers doctrine.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

Following is a discussion of the majority report by section which points out the several instances of statutory detail in this report, and the clear violation of the long accepted separation of powers doctrine.

Sec. a. There is no need to make reference to a submission date of 21 days after the legislature convenes. It would be better to leave sole responsibility for fixing a submission date to the legislature.

The same criticism can be made of the requirement that the governor submit on the same date, general appropriation bills to embody the proposed expenditures and new or additional revenues to meet proposed expenditures. There is no logical reason to include this requirement, and in fact this could cause procedural problems. Although the budget and revenue programs are developed concurrently, the physical job of readying the budget for the printer, drafting and printing appropriation bills, and writing special messages covering these matters cannot be coordinated so that they all are completed on the same day. Yet it would appear that in order to meet the proposed constitutional requirement this would have to be done. The existing method of the budget, appropriation bills, and revenue programs being submitted over a 1 or 2 week period makes more sense from an administrative point of view.

The requirement that the general fund surplus or deficit of the last preceding fiscal year be the first item of consideration is unsatisfactory in several respects. It apparently assumes that there are no surpluses or deficits in the other funds such as the school aid, aeronautics, trunkline funds, etc., or if there are surpluses or deficits, there is no need to be concerned with them. Secondly, the financing of the deficit or spending of any surplus would always be one year behind, and thus would be less than meaningful. For instance the 1962-63 budget which is currently being considered, can reflect the 1960-61 deficit, but can give no consideration to 1961-62 expenditures and their effect on the deficit. In other words, the previous year end surplus or deficit may have to be drastically modified to have any real significance, but no consideration is given to this necessity. The proposal assumes all the surplus or deficit is consumed or financed in one year. There is no discretion left to the legislature, even though situations could arise that would indicate it is in the public interest to take contrary action. For example, adverse economic conditions might warrant the incurring of a manageable deficit until it could be liquidated under more favorable economic conditions, but under this proposal any increase in state expenditures might have to be financed by additional taxes even though this may adversely affect economic recovery.

Sec. b. Traditionally, the legislature appropriates the remaining salary of a deceased legislator to the widow, but this would be impossible until all general appropriation bills had been acted upon under this proposal. It is difficult to understand what is accomplished by delaying appropriation bills such as the one described above, until general appropriation bills are enacted into law. Certainly such a prohibition does not belong in the constitution.

Throughout all of these proposals the emphasis always seems to be on the fact that revenues fell short of appropriations. Actually the state's current problems arise from the fact that appropriations have been in excess of estimated revenues. The control must be on appropriations. To accomplish what seems to be the goal in section b, there should also be a prohibition against any appropriations, outside action on the governor's budget, either by the legislature alone or in response to a special session call unless each such appropriation is accompanied by its own revenue measure.

Sec. c. The minority agrees to the desirability of including this section in the proposed constitution.

Sec. d. It is this final section that is the most objectionable. Assuming the aforementioned criticisms could be eliminated, the proposal would still be wholly unacceptable because of its sharp departure from the basic concepts of American constitutional government.

The first sentence is wholly unnecessary, and the implication that state administrations, past and present, spend for the sake of spending is contrary to existing evidence, and is, in fact, an insult to their integrity. As a matter of fact, the criticism is often voiced that departments do not spend what is appropriated, but instead lapse large amounts back to the general fund and consequently are not meeting the needs of the state's citizens.

The balance of the section would turn the American system of constitutional government upside down. In the United States traditionally the executive proposes and the legislature disposes, but the majority proposal would eliminate the legislature as an effective partner in this relationship.

Assume for a moment that revenues were in fact falling below original estimates. Should the governor decide whether mental health, welfare, education or corrections appropriations are to be reduced? There is no basis in our American history for assuming the governor is the proper instrumentality for making such decisions. The legislature should make these broad policy decisions, and it cannot be argued that they would not be in session when a decision to reduce appropriations would have to be made. Certainly, the earliest one could expect a pattern evident enough to justify such action as reducing appropriations would be January, and the legislature is in session at that time.

Allowing the governor the discretion of determining whether collections are commensurate with revenue estimates is placing power in the hands of the governor that again is unfounded in our history. Could this authority not be used to eliminate programs and even whole agencies that the governor finds objectionable for political or other reasons? In other words, one of the checks of the American system would be abolished.

Adoption of section d would worsen the present constitution. It is a step backwards. It is destructive of responsibility in government. The authority and the power to make appropriations and to tax are legislative and, inescapably, should be assigned to the legislature. Section 2 of article X of the present constitution recognizes this basic truth. It reads as follows:

> Sec. 2. The legislature shall provide by law for an annual tax sufficient with other resources to pay the estimated expenses of the state government, the interest on any state debt and such deficiency as may occur in the resources.

Here, authority and responsibility are joined together. The legislature is directed to provide taxes to finance the estimated expenses (the appropriations) of the government. On the other hand, section d, in its most simple terms, says "let's promote irresponsibility; let's enshrine the virtues of buckpassing." Section d would permit the legislature to make appropriations far above any realistic revenue estimates, knowing full well that revenues would be greatly less than appropriations. Section d has an escape hatch. The legislature can then direct the governor to reduce appropriations so that appropriations and revenues presumably will be in some kind of a balance. In short, the legislature can please the groups and agencies that want and need adequate appropriations and then give the governor the responsibility of reducing these appropriations.

The majority report fallaciously assumes that prohibiting the governor from cutting the appropriations of the legislative and judicial branches maintains the separation of powers doctrine. One of the basic tests of whether the separation of powers doctrine is being maintained is to take an inventory of the powers exercised by the 3 branches to ascertain if in effect each branch has the powers historically associated with that branch. The majority proposal will severely limit the control over appropriations, which is one of the fundamental powers of any legislative body. In other words, the guarantee that appropriations for the legislative branch will not be cut is only one factor in guaranteeing the traditional separation of powers doctrine, and certainly not the most important one at that. Yet, the majority report assumes that prohibiting the governor from cutting the legislature's own approprations ipso facto maintains a true separation of powers, and no concern is given to the fact the legislature will be stripped of one of its basic powers.

This last section of the proposal, in addition to the limitations previously discussed, can lead to the worst kind of legislative irresponsibility. One of the well established principles of business and public administration is, authority should be commensurate with responsibility, but this principle is also violated. Presumably the legislature will retain the taxing power, but will they be motivated to use it, even though revenues will not be equal to appropriations, when they can appropriate, knowing full well that it is the governor who will have to make the reductions in appropriations? It does no good requiring the legislature to itemize their sources of revenue, because it is nigh on to impossible to disprove revenue estimates for a fiscal period that will end some 18 months from the time the estimates are made, and that are based to a large extent on economic forecasts. Thus, an irresponsible legislature could further abdicate their responsibility and transfer any adverse political repercussions to the governor by refusing to provide necessary revenue, and leaving to the governor the onus of reducing or eliminating programs.

In summary the proposed section d would upset the American system of the governor proposing and the legislature disposing, undermine the separation of powers doctrine with the concentration of unwarranted power in the hands of the chief executive, and encourage legislative irresponsibility in certain political situations.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Grand Rapids, chairman of the committee on executive branch, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, we are commencing this morning the consideration of the proposals of the committee on executive branch. The first 3 proposals will be as outlined on your final calendar. We will take up the Committee Proposal 46 first, which is the executive budget and item veto proposal, and then we will move to Committee Proposal 78, which is the legislative auditor, auditor general, and then to Committee Proposal 71, which has to do with the powers of the governor and a reorganization of the executive branch.

You will find Committee Proposal 46, if you want to consult your journal, at page 400. In line with the past procedure, we will consider these sections one by one. There is a minority report which deals with each of these sections, and after we have made a presentation on the first section of this, my suggestion is that we then consider the minority report, insofar as it proposes to amend that section. I think that way we will get a better consideration of the proposal if we do it section by section, in that way, instead of the minority amendments as they relate to each section.

The general purpose and intent of this proposal is to establish a constitutional executive budget process for the orderly management of the state's fiscal affairs. The executive budget system is common to about 48 states by either statutory or constitutional provisions, and while we have some features of this system and have had by statute since 1919, it has never been a part of our constitution; but its importance has increased as the financial problems of the state have become more and more complex and the problems of administration have become more and more complex. For that reason, the committee reached the conclusion that it was important to include the provisions with respect to an executive budget in the constitution. The proposal deals with the responsibility of the executive—that is the governor—for, first, formulating the budget, second, presenting it to the legislature and, finally, carrying out the responsibilities that fall upon the executive as a result of the appropriations made by the 2 houses of the legislature.

Generally speaking, I think it is fair to say that every student of government recognizes the need for good management in public business, and this proposal is designed to effect that kind of close management. I should add that there are executive budget provisions similar to those which are proposed here in 3 of the 4 most recently adopted state constitutions, those of Missouri, Alaska and Hawaii, and these are a key feature of the model state constitution.

Very briefly, the 4 sections which are proposed here embody the minimum essentials of an executive budget, and they are, first, the executive preparation and submission of the budget to the legislature; second, the embodiment of the budget in bill form for legislative consideration because the legislature cannot act on a budget, it has to act on bills; third, the subject of legislative action on those bills, insofar as it has any constitutional bearing, and the use of the executive veto, the item veto which is a part of the present constitution; and, finally, the administration by the governor of appropriations and expenditures in accordance with legislative directives.

The present constitution, as I have said, does not spell these matters out, and the purpose of the proposal is to do just that. The proposal was also submitted for concurrence to the committee on finance and taxation, and generally, with respect to the item veto, was submitted for concurrence to the committee on legislative powers. When we reach the question of the item veto, I want to yield to the chiarman of the committee on legislative powers, but at the present time I would like to yield to Mr. Brake for any statement which he may care to make on this general subject.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The delegate from Stanton, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, this proposal with reference to budgeting took a lot of negotiation and a good many changes before all 3 committees were finally satisfied that it was what we want. In the form in which it is presented to the convention and to this committee, I think it is good. We have had the statutory provisions in the past. They have been, quite largely, disregarded perhaps by the legislature, and certainly by a succession of governors. Perhaps with constitutional provisions a little more attention will be paid to the directions. It does require, certainly if they follow the constitution, much more responsibility on the part of the governor and on the part of the legislature.

When a governor recommends expenditures in excess of his estimated income, he must specify how he proposes that the money shall be raised. That is good. He ought to take that responsibility. When the legislature appropriates more than it expects will come in, it has got to say what its estimate of revenue is, and of course the appropriations, and they are required to be balanced. That is good. I think it fixes responsibility on both the governor and the legislature and that should be a very good influence in the matter of state financing. Certainly, if it is followed, it will prevent the passing of the buck back and forth between the legislature and the governor as to who is to blame and who isn't to blame.

The other items, I think, are also good. The item veto is retained, as we have had it in the past. I think you understand that our practice there differs from the constitutional and national practice, where the president might have the power of item veto. I think the governor should have it. It is not used extensively by most governors, but from time to time it has been used. I think it is a very proper item to have in the constitution. The matter of reducing expenditures when the revenues fail to come up to expectations is placed in here subject to statute. In other words, the legislature shall provide how it shall be used. I think that is very proper. As long as that is there, it does not bring the governor into the legislative field so that he is, in fact, legislating. As a matter of fact, the legislature has been using similar language in the appropriation statutes now for several years.

Taking it all together, I think we have here a very definite improvement in the fiscal management of our state government.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to yield now to Mr. Karn to discuss the details of the first section.

MR. MARSHALL: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: State the point of order, please.

MR. MARSHALL: The point of order is, am I lead to believe that the committee chairman is going to now get into an explanation of the entire majority proposal, or are we going to take up the minority report?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: As the Chair understands, Mr. Marshall, we are on the first paragraph, section a, at this time, and as the Chair understands it, Mr. Martin has yielded to Mr. Karn to explain that particular section, after which the minority report will come up. Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, may I? I think Mr. Marshall had not come in at the moment when I made my first statement, and he will be handling the minority report. I wanted him to understand that I was proposing to have the minority report discussed section by section as we go along, but in order to do it in orderly fashion we need to have an explanation of what the majority position is on each of these sections.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Karn.

MR. KARN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, in order that we might have in mind, for discussion purposes, the thoughts and reasoning that was in the minds of the committee members when this was drafted, I would like to read the comments on section a, which are found in the journal on page 401.

[The reasons in support of section a were read by Mr. Karn. For text, see above, page 1636.]

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Karn, do you desire to yield to anyone further on that?

MR. KARN: I would like to yield at this time, if I may, to Mr. Rajkovich who will make some comments on section a.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Rajkovich.

MR. RAJKOVICH: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, Mr. Karn has already pointed out many of the things in section a that we are concerned with. In general I would like to say that over the last 50 years, maybe a little more than that, the states have adopted executive budgets in order to promote efficiency in government and to promote economy in government. That budgetary system has been one of the major government reforms, and in this system is an implicit recognition that the governor has positive responsibilities to perform and that he intends to perform these responsibilities.

The budgeting system that we propose in this section does clarify the responsibilities in government, whether the range of this government shall be wide or whether it shall be narrow. It makes those provisions. Also, we set up in this section very sound budgeting procedures, I believe, which state that the budget should be prepared by the executive and that he shall present this program of work for the fiscal period, whatever that might be. Also, it should include all estimated receipts and expenditures. This means all. This is very important. Not just part of the receipts or expenditures should be included.

Further, we propose that the expenditures should not exceed estimated revenues. This is a must in any good budget; the 2 should balance. We believe that the expenditures should be classified in the budget by various funds involved or specific services to be performed or the nature of things to be purchased. Finally, we believe that the executive should exercise large measure of control over the execution of the budget after it has been approved by the legislature. As a result of the feeling of this, I urge you to support the committee report.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, if Mr. Marshall wishes to have the minority report introduced now, then we can have that amendment on the first section in front of us.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Are you yielding the floor to Mr. Marshall?

MR. MARTIN: Yes.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Detroit, Mr. Marshall. Mr. Marshall, would you like to have your amendment read by the secretary?

MR. MARSHALL: Yes.

SECRETARY CHASE: Pursuant to the minority report of Mr. Marshall, Miss Hart and Mrs. Daisy Elliott,

Mr. Marshall offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "The governor shall submit to the legislature, at a time fixed by law, a budget for the ensuing fiscal period setting forth in detail all proposed expenditures and estimated revenue of the state. The governor shall also cause to be submitted to each house of the legislature general appropriation bills to embody the proposed expenditures and any necessary bill or bills for new or additional revenues to meet proposed expenditures.".

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Marshall for discussion of the minority report.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, in the beginning, I regret the action that was taken this morning on the Faxon motion because many of the issues that we will be discussing in the report of the committee on executive branch, as well as legislative powers and others will be directly related to apportionment. I, for one, have felt all along that that should be brought up as early as possible on the calendar and disposed of, but since the majority has not seen fit to do that, we will move on now to the minority report and cover section a.

Again, we are attempting here to legislate rather than to write the basic law of the state. The majority on the committee has submitted a 2 page proposal that is statutory and legislative in nature, taking away much of the discretion of the legislature and the governor to act in this area. One of the driving forces, if not the primary reason behind Michigan's citizens calling a constitutional convention was the need to rid the state's constitution of the administrative detail that is limiting the discretion of the legislature and governor to such an extent that they cannot adjust and meet the needs of a changing society. Thus it was hoped that steps would be taken to rid the new constitution of this detail, but the majority report will constitutionally freeze several matters that might better be left to legislative discretion.

The inclusion of statutory items in the proposed constitution is a serious weakness in itself; but the majority report, ladies and gentlemen, goes farther, and, in effect, destroys the traditional separation of powers doctrine.

In dealing with section a, there is no need to make reference to a submission date of 21 days after the legislature convenes. It would be far better to leave sole responsibility for fixing a submission date to the legislature. The same criticism can be made of the requirement that the governor submit on the same date general appropriation bills to embody the proposed expenditures and new or additional revenues to meet proposed expenditures. There is simply no logical reason to include this requirement and, in fact, this could cause procedural problems. Although the budget and revenue programs are developed concurrently, the physical job of readying the budget for the printer, drafting and printing appropriation bills, and writing special messages covering these matters could not be coordinated so that they are all completed on the same day. Yet, it would appear that in order to meet the proposed constitutional requirement, this would have to be done. The existing method of the budget, the appropriation bills and revenue programs being submitted over a 1 or 2 week period makes more sense from an administrative viewpoint.

The requirement that the general fund surplus or deficit of the last preceding fiscal year be the first item of consideration is unsatisfactory in several respects. I do not know at this time whether you are talking about the deficit for the previous year or whether you are talking about the accumulative deficit. It apparently assumes that there are no surpluses or deficits in the other funds, such as school aid, aeronautics, trunkline funds, et cetera, or if there are surpluses or deficits, there is no need to be concerned with them. Secondly, the financing of the deficit or spending of any surplus would always be one year behind, and thus would be less than meaningful.

For instance, the 1962-63 budget, which is currently being considered, can reflect the 1960-61 deficit, but it absolutely can give no consideration to the 1961-62 expenditures and their effect on the deficit. In other words, the previous year's end surplus or deficit may have to be drastically modified to have any real significance. But no consideration is given to this necessity by the majority report. The majority proposal assumes all the surplus or deficit is consumed or financed in one year. There is no discretion whatsoever left to the legislature, even though situations could arise that would indicate it is in the public interest to take contrary action. For example, adverse economic conditions might warrant the incurring of a manageable deficit until it could be liquidated under more favorable economic conditions. But under this proposal or the committee proposal, any increase in state expenditures might have to be financed by additional taxes, even though this may adversely affect economic recovery. I therefore ask the delegates to support the minority report amendment and vote against the majority report.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: You yield the floor then, Mr. Marshall?

MR. MARSHALL: I am sorry. I intended to yield to Delegate Austin for any remarks he might have, if you will permit me. I am sorry, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Thank you, Mr. Chairman and Mr. Marshall. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I am certainly inclined to support the minority report amendment because I too am a little worried about the amount of legislative detail that we are writing into our constitution, or attempting to write into our constitution in connection with this executive budget. There are a number of problems that I see here that worry me, and I would just like to ask some questions of the proponents of the majority report, just to illustrate my concern. I am wondering if, through the Chair, I could ask—I suppose I should direct my questions to Mr. Karn.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If Mr. Karn wishes to answer.

MR. AUSTIN: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. First of all, Mr. Karn, I am concerned about the language on line 1, "not later than 21 calendar days after the convening of each regular session, or at a time fixed by law,". If we are going to permit the legislature to fix a time, why do we need write "21 calendar days" into the constitution? Just to elaborate a little further, let's consider the hypothetical situation that the legislature might decide that 18 days is a better time than 21 calendar days. What would then be the significance of the 21 days written into the constitution?

MR. KARN: The thinking of the committee, Mr. Chairman, and Mr. Austin—and this was based on discussions with some of the legislators—was that the 21 days was an adequate time for the final preparation and clearance of the budget. The preparation of the budget, of course, starts as early as July before the convening of the legislature in January. The thinking here is that the 3 weeks, approximately, would give the legislature time to get some of their procedural and organizational matters behind them, and with the submission of the budget, then they could devote more time to it, and the 21 days was considered reasonable for this.

The clause, "at a time fixed by law," was inserted here so that if anything unusual might arise in any given year, this date could be changed. For instance, one thing that the committee had in mind was the thought that a governor just elected in the fall might like more time than this to become familiar with the budget and some of the things that were before him, and there he might request, and they might set a new date for such purposes. Normally, however, it was the thinking of the committee that the 21 days would prevail.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Karn, we do have legislation now which governs the submitting of the executive budget. Is that not correct?

MR. KARN: Yes. There is nothing too certain about it as far as dates are concerned.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, is there any reason to believe that the legislature would not fix a time if we left the 21 calendar days out of the constitution, to leave it flexible for the legislature to examine this matter from time to time and make the determination based on experience?

MR. KARN: Well, that might be true, Mr. Austin, but let me give you another reason I don't think that should be done: it is history, I believe—and the gentlemen in our committee who have been in the legislature, I think, will support the statement—that unless you have some definite procedure for the filing of the budget, you will find that a good part of it will continue through the session and come up in the last week or two for consideration, when not too much thought can be given to it. The committee thought that the setting of a date certain when the budget should be submitted would mean that it would be in early, and the provision of this section which would implement the consideration of it at an early date, rather than to let it go until the end of the session when other important things were to be considered.

MR. AUSTIN: Further, Mr. Chairman, if the governor should find that 21 days are actually not sufficient under certain circumstances—I am assuming that under normal circumstances 21 days may be all right, but under some circumstances he may find that he needs more time than 21 days. If the legislature does not act, he would then be compelled, under any circumstances, to get the budget in within the 21 days. Is that correct?

MR. KARN: I think that is correct, and I think that the budget would be prepared. They work under a schedule and, generally speaking, the budget is prepared and ready for the governor's perusal of it at the first of the year, in cases where you have a new governor coming in, or a governor that has been in office.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, if I may, I would like to move down a little further to line 10 where we state that, "Proposed expenditures shall not exceed estimated revenue." Is it the intention of the majority proponents or the proponents of the majority point of view that the legislature should, in some way, indicate how these revenues are to be estimated, whose estimates are to be used here? I don't believe that it is clear when we say, "Proposed expenditures shall not exceed estimated revenue," without indicating, in some way, whose estimates. Are these to be the governor's estimates? The estimates coming from the legislature or—I am just not clear as to what is intended here.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Are you directing your question to Mr. Karn?

MR. AUSTIN: Yes, I am.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Karn.

MR. KARN: I think that is reasonably clear in the proposal. However, let me say this in the beginning. This statement in here on the subject, that "Proposed expenditures shall not exceed estimated revenues," is a balanced budget proposal. I think I am safe and fair in saying that we have not operated on what might be truly called a balanced budget proposal. Coming to your—and I think there is general feeling that a balanced budget in a state is just as desirable as a balanced budget in a business today, and most businesses operate on a balanced budget, as Mr. Austin, I believe, realizes. We think that that is a perfectly fair position to take for the state of Michigan.

Coming to your question on the estimate, the estimated expenditures and estimated revenue will appear in the budget and it is made by the budget group. We also have, in this proposal, a statement to the effect that if the legislature finds that in their opinion our estimated revenue will differ from that in the budget, then they must indicate why the difference and designate the major source of revenue which will cause a differential between that and the governor's budget. In the past we have had no definite information of this sort. We have attempted to find some records or history of the past few years on what has happened in the way of estimates, estimated revenues. We know—and I think only a year ago, the legislature had an estimated revenue of some $6 million or $7 million less than the governor's budget indicated, but there was no indication as to how the legislature arrived at that estimate. We think that it is important, if an estimate of revenue is changed, that it be indicated how and why they think it should be changed, and that is one of the responsibilities that we assign to the legislature in this proposal.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, one of the reasons I asked that question was just to show how involved the situation can become when we attempt to explain exactly what we mean by requiring that the proposed expenditures shall not exceed estimated revenues. We get into any number of questions as to what, first of all, we mean by "proposed expenditures", and secondly, what we mean by "estimated revenues"; whether the governor can use his own estimates, whether they must be accurate to within some reasonable percentage of the actual income, or whether he should consult with the legislature and agree on some estimated revenue. But, the main point is that it seems as though this matter might be better left to the legislature rather than included in the constitution.

Moving on we get to the matter of the same date. I think the minority argument there is quite sound, about attempting to require the governor to submit these appropriation bills on the same day. Just to illustrate, Mr. Karn, if I may, how simple this could be if we did not attempt to write so much detail into our constitution, on line 10, you say:

> On the same date, the governor shall cause to be submitted to each house of the legislature general appropriation bills to embody the proposed expenditures and any necessary bill or bills for new or additional revenues to meet proposed expenditures.

Then down below on line 17:

> The governor, prior to final action of the legislature thereon, may cause to be submitted to the legislature any amendments to the general appropriation bills, and shall cause to be submitted any bills to meet deficiencies in current appropriations.

The whole matter could be handled so much simpler if we just said, "The governor shall cause appropriation bills to be submitted," without specifying a time, because then you would embody or embrace the requirement that he submit, first of all, his appropriation bills, and later on any adjustments that have to be made. But when you begin to spell it out, you may be causing some difficulty when he finds that he can't fit into this pattern, and you have left no freedom for the legislature to make any changes; and this is the problem.

We are attempting here to write into the constitution procedures, and procedures don't always work under all circumstances, and you are providing no flexibility for the legislature to make corrections, if it should be found that these procedures will not work. It just doesn't seem advisable to write procedures into the constitution. Another question, of course, that bothers me, and I would like to direct this—

MR. KARN: Mr. Austin, may I make a comment before you go on, please?

MR. AUSTIN: Certainly.

MR. KARN: Mr. Chairman, if I may, please?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Karn.

MR. KARN: To file the bills on the same date—I would like to comment on that—it is your understanding that in the past the budget has been submitted and then, from time to time and over a period of time the appropriation bills were not submitted to the legislature, but I believe it has been the habit for the bills to be handed to various individual legislators who, in turn, will put them into the mill, and that means that the bills implementing the appropriations are scattered over a period of time, all of which creates delay in the consideration of these bills. We think the committee thought that it was quite important to have the bills accompany the appropriations, and this is not unusual. This is followed in other states. It has been rather effective where it is handled, and you have something certain in the way of a program before you at the beginning of the legislature. If this is not done, it is our opinion that there will be delays as there have been in the past, which we do not believe is in the best interest of the legislature.

The next item that you mention has to do with submitting amendments to the budget. Again, I think you realize, Mr. Austin—and I am quite sure that the delegates do—that when the preparation of a budget is started, let's say, the first of July in a given year, it is completed in January of the second year or early February, there may be, at times, quite serious changes in the budget from its original preparation. There may be things that are urgent that were not considered and included in the budget in the beginning. There are other items that may not be considered as the same necessity as they were considered in the preparation of the budget, so that there must be adjustments made in the budget. This gives the governor the right and the power to make such changes as are deemed necessary, and again, we believe that it is important. There is perhaps quite a bit of verbiage in this proposal, but knowing some of the methods that have been followed, it is the thought of the committee that this should be spelled out in quite a bit of detail in order that it may be implemented.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Well, Mr. Karn, wouldn't it be better to leave it to the legislature to spell out this detail, so that if it is discovered that these procedures won't work, adjustments could be made and new procedures instituted, rather than attempting to do this now in the constitution with no opportunity to change if it should be found unworkable?

MR. KARN: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Austin, the majority of the committee did not agree with your statement.

MR. AUSTIN: Thank you. May I continue, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Continue, Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Now we move down to line 16. I should read that whole sentence:

> The amount of any general fund surplus created or deficit incurred during the last preceding fiscal period shall be appropriately entered as an item in the budget and in the appropriation bills.

The language there at the end of that sentence bothers me considerably, when we say, "and in the appropriation bills." In other words, we are asking that we include in the appropriation bills—am I to understand—an additional appropriation bill for a deficit? If I understand the procedures for appropriating moneys by the legislature, the legislature appropriates expenditures and if these appropriations should happen to exceed the revenues, we will have a deficit. But those items will already have been appropriated. I am just wondering what is meant there about including among the appropriation bills a bill for any deficit.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Are you directing a question?

MR. AUSTIN: Yes, I am, to Mr. Karn. I am still addressing my questions to Mr. Karn, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Karn, you may answer.

MR. KARN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Austin, the situation here is that—I think I am correct in making this statement—the state of Michigan has not paid too much attention to deficits. As a matter of fact, I think at any particular time it is difficult to find out what our deficit might be, because our accounting is not quite that tight. The committee believed that it is important to do something about the deficit in the state of Michigan and its financing, and at the same time, if you have a surplus in any given fiscal period, that surplus should be dealt with. So our suggestion here is that when you come to the end of a fiscal period and the new budget is being prepared for the new fiscal period ahead, then any deficit that exists at that time will be included in the budget for the coming fiscal period and will be eliminated by raising sufficient funds to pay it off, and if there is any surplus, that also comes into the budget and is revenue that can be used for other purposes.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Karn, I do understand including the deficit in the budget, although I don't agree, necessarily, with this procedure. But what I don't understand is why we are requiring, in the constitution, that an appropriation bill be included for the deficit. This is the confusing part of it. The appropriations have already been made. That is the only reason why we have a deficit, because appropriations in the preceding period exceeded revenue, so we have already appropriated the revenue. Why do we now want to include another appropriation bill?

MR. KARN: To raise money to eliminate the deficit.

MR. AUSTIN: I want to confess, Mr. Chairman and Mr. Karn, that that is still a little bit confusing to me. I want to ask another question, again in connection with this same sentence. How is the surplus to be determined? Since we are including the surplus in the constitution, I am just wondering if we should not, at the same time, indicate how it is to be defined. I realize that it is very difficult to define surplus and I would not want the job of defining it, but again it points up the difficulty of attempting to write legislation into the constitution. My question, of course, is: should not the surplus be defined since we are stating that surplus should be included in the budget and also in the appropriation bills?

MR. KARN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Austin, Mr. Austin is an accountant and I think perhaps he can answer his question better than I can, but as I understand the meaning of surplus, it is the surplus of revenues at the end of a period, in this instance, over the expenditures.

MR. AUSTIN: Accumulated or just for the year?

MR. KARN: Yes, for the year. I am talking about the year only. This deficit and surplus is for this fiscal period only. It is not accumulative.

MR. AUSTIN: Very well. Thank you very much, Mr. Karn. I think that these are perhaps all of the questions—I have some other questions but it seems to me that we do have some detail here that we could get along better without, and it would seem to me that if you will read the draft submitted by the minority, which sets up in general language what we would like to have done here, it would be better to have that in the constitution rather than this detail which I think will lead to a lot of problems. I would certainly suggest that we support the minority amendment on this.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, there are some things that have been said about which I wish to—

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, does Delegate Brake rise to ask a question? I still have the floor. I yielded to Delegate Austin.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: All right.

MR. MARSHALL: I am sorry, Delegate Brake. At this time, Mr. Chairman, I would like to yield to Delegate Snyder.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Snyder.

MR. SNYDER: Thank you very much. Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I want to thank Mr. Austin for laying the foundation for the committee to act upon the minority report amendment. I think it is very obvious that the tone of the questions and answers have developed that we do have here an area where the matter is not delineated as clearly as it should be, and rather than to resolve the problems as we should be doing at the present time, we are opening up a field of unknowns that will come back to plague us in the future.

I am very much concerned, fellow delegates, by what I feel is the jeopardy which we are putting the separation of powers into by this move. Of course, it is quite academic to all of us that we must maintain the legislature as a separate unit and the executive branch as a separate unit and the judicial, and I hesitate to even mention the word "judicial" this morning after 3 weeks, but I do say this: we do have a definite responsibility here to preserve this separation and when we set up a series of circumstances, as we have in the majority proposal—and the minority will attempt to correct the circumstances—we have a situation here in which the governor must act upon his messages with a pistol at his head. He must act with the full realization that somewhere down the line a magic number of 21 days has been picked out, and at the conclusion of 21 days he must come up with a final proposal. If he does not come up with a final proposal, then he must appear before another branch of government and ask that they, in their wisdom, give him the consideration so that he can have the appropriate extension. I think that this is basically wrong. I do not know how the majority of the committee did come up with the magic number of 21 days, but I submit to you that this will create a very serious problem to the person attempting to come up with an adequate proposal. Of course, the option is given to the governor that he can make subsequent submissions, but I think you are all familiar with legislative procedure, that there are certain times set in which you can no longer put in new appropriations. These then must come as riders to the original bills.

Recently at the convention here we had some discussion on a committee that would handle our post convention work. During the committee on administration meeting, I posed a question of whether or not we had been timely in this submission, and it was pointed out to me that the deadline date had passed. However, the legislature could add onto this bill. It was pointed out to us that the appropriation could be tacked on to a mental health or some other issue of this sort. Again, I submit to you, if we must take additional appropriations and tie them in with other deserving requests, then we are putting both units in jeopardy. For this reason I feel it would be a most unfair restriction to put the 21 day limitation in. Those of us who are active in government back home know this, that budget items are not a year to year item. Any of us who are concerned in the handling of public funds know that in order to utilize these funds at their optimum benefits, we must have long range planning. You do not work from a year to year basis. You work sometimes on capital improvement programs for 10, 15, and even 20 years. This way you can get the optimum use of your money. You can combine sums at a time and use them from year to year in the area where they are needed the greatest.

It is my understanding of the proposal submitted by the majority committee and the errors that the minority will try to remove, that you have an annual accounting, that prior to any action being taken you must dispose of the surpluses of the previous year. This would be wrong. This would take away any inducement that the departments or any other groups would have to combine their money and use them over a 5 year period. To illustrate the point, here we may have a line item on a question of fuel, and if we had a mild winter and did not use the fuel appropriation, fine; we would have a surplus and this surplus would be absorbed. However, the following year we would have a cold year in some of the departments and then we would not have enough money and this would create a situation where we would have to go back and ask for additional money. This I say to you would add immeasurably to the work. Rather than streamline the government as is our obligation at this convention, we would be creating additional work for the legislature and the governor.

I say this, that on the surface this is a very innocuous looking proposal, but it is new language and it is something that would change entirely the concept that we have at the present time. We have had advanced before us at several times this proposition: if it is going to be new, it is going to be untried and unproven, and if there is area for error in this language, then this should not become a constitutional matter. This is properly a statutory matter, so that the legislature, at their annual sessions, can tailor, correct, and amend the language as the errors become apparent. I would heartily encourage the support of the minority report amendment because I feel that this would accomplish the objectives that the majority report is trying to accomplish, but at the same time does not open up the area of confusion and error that we would have to come back and correct, I am certain, before the 50 year limitation for the constitutional convention is over with. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, that concludes the report of the minority, and again, I urge the delegates to give serious consideration to the statutory nature of the majority proposal and also the restrictions and limitations placed therein. We believe that the minority report amendment, which says that the governor shall submit to the legislature at a time fixed by law, leaves it to the discretion of the legislature to fix the time by submitting his budget through this medium; and leaving it to the discretion of the governor and the legislature will work better in the years to come and will be in the best interests of all concerned. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, just a brief comment on 2 or 3 of the things which have been said. It has been said that this is legislation or this is legislative language. The committee feels that this is not too much language to achieve the very real objective which we have. The objective is to get some order and some force into the idea of a budget submitted on time and appropriation bills submitted on time, so that the legislature doesn't lie around here waiting for weeks and weeks for the governor to get his proposed bills in. We see no reasonable chance of harm from the limitations or the deadlines that have been provided. So far as the date of submission of the budget is concerned, the legislature is free to change that if for any reason the 21 days does not prove to be entirely satisfactory.

As far as the surplus and deficit items are concerned, this has nothing to do with the accumulated deficit. The accumulated deficit will be up to the legislature to dispose of, and we hope they will dispose of it. This simply relates to whatever deficit has accumulated in the last preceding fiscal period, and that we want the governor to take a look at and to include in his budget for the next year, so that we don't go on doing what we have been doing in the state of Michigan, and that is accumulating deficits year after year after year. This is the real heart of the objection of the minority. They don't want to have to take a look at this deficit and clean it up by good fiscal responsibility. They want to let it ride along through and worry about it sometime in the future, and this is wrong fiscal procedure. It is the kind of way you shouldn't run a government any more than you should run a business that way, and we believe that this procedure will prevent that.

As far as the question of Mr. Austin's comments about expenditures, that proposed expenditures should not exceed estimated revenue, and his question about the meaning of these terms, we are talking about only the best estimates of the governor and the best estimates of the legislature. We realize those cannot be absolutely precise, but we want to know, we want the people to know what the governor thinks the expenditures are going to be, and we want the people to know what measures for raising revenue he proposes, if he proposes to expend more than he estimates will be taken in. Similarly we want, and it is provided later on, to know what the legislature thinks about those 2 things, so that in the future we can get some estimate as to who is right and who is wrong on some of these guesses, on some of these estimates.

The general purpose of the whole section and of the whole proposal is to get some order into this situation and to get some sense of fiscal responsibility into it so that we can operate as we ought to be operating instead of operating with $100 million deficit in the state of Michigan. Until we do that, the record of the state of Michigan—its fiscal record—will not be good, and we will suffer from year to year in the high interest cost of bonds, which every municipal corporation and the state of Michigan has to sell. We are trying to get the state back onto a sensible fiscal basis and this is the reason for this whole executive budget proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Port Huron, Delegate Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I would just like to take a minute to stress again what I believe the importance of this section is. As a member of the finance and taxation committee, we heard a good deal of testimony on the fiscal problems of the state, the earmarking situation, and many others. We were looking for ways of solving this problem. In some of our minds on the committee—many of them, I might say—this executive budget will go a long ways in that direction.

I would like to read, just for a second, a short section from a booklet we received, Constitutional Aspects of State Financial Administration, by Mr. Byrd. He states as follows:

> The state of Oklahoma placed budget balancing provisions in its constitution of 1941 that make assiduous use of both control of and appropriations and the execution of the budget. The before and after financial situation of the state shows that drastic action was needed and that the action taken has been effective.
> In the 12 years, 1930 through 1941, balanced fiscal operations were achieved in only 2.

That is in 12 years, 2 years they had a balanced budget.

> In the other 10 years, deficits aggregated some 60 million, 57.7 million of which was cleared by a series of deficit funding bonds.
> Since 1941—

when they again passed the executive budget procedure,

> —the state has maintained its operations consistently on a balanced budget, a record that certainly cannot be attributed solely to better economic conditions.

Take a look now at the state of Michigan. Starting with 1957, we had an accumulated surplus of $6 million, '58 we went to a $21 million deficit; '59, we went to a $95 million deficit; '60, we went back to a $64 million accumulated deficit; but this was, as the footnote shows on this chart, the year of the sale of the Veterans' Trust Fund totaling $40 million. The following year, '61, we were right back up to $71 million again, and you have read in the papers the estimates for this year, that again there is going to be an additional deficit. I think this clearly indicates that Michigan, too, is ready for some somewhat drastic action in this area. All this does—there is no way of forcing a balanced budget, but this goes a long way to center the responsibility so that the people can see for themselves if we are overestimating our revenues and if so, by whom, and at least they can have the facts before them to make up their minds on where the responsibility should lie for any deficit that is accumulated during any year.

I think that the section, as proposed by the majority, is the section that should be adopted. At one time I had drafted a section for our finance and taxation section, when we had concurrent jurisdiction on this. I personally would have had more of the so called details in it than this. I think, though, that the proposal as submitted by the majority is an excellent step in this direction, and I urge you to support the report.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the lady from Detroit, Delegate Hart.

MISS HART: Mr. Chairman, I should like to make sure from the chairman of the committee whether or not—obviously, this morning we are going to trust the legislature—we are not going to trust the legislature. This afternoon I am sure that we are all going to be asked to put implicit faith in the legislature, and it would seem to me that perhaps the committee should have a sign over the seal over here so that the delegates will not be completely confused.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Delegate Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, could I ask, through the Chair, a question of the chairman of the committee?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If he cares to answer.

MR. DOWNS: This, perhaps, is not major, but I would like a little clarification. In the committee proposal on line 11, it refers to the fact that the governor shall cause to be submitted to each house—then on line 19, you have the same phraseology, then on line 18 it says "may cause". Our present constitution on legislation, article V, section 19—I will just read the one sentence—says, "All legislation by the legislature shall be by bill and may originate in either house of the legislature." The question I would like to ask the chairman is, would this section, if adopted, the committee proposal, permit a new form of introduction of bills, namely by the governor rather than a member of the legislature?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Downs, the answer to that is that it will not permit and is not intended to do so. This is the reason why the words "cause to be submitted" are used. If you will notice in line 6, we provide that, "The governor shall submit to the legislature . . . a budget," and this, of course, it is his direct responsibility to do. However, to avoid any question about violation of the separation of powers doctrine, bills have to be submitted by members of the legislature. So that we are not proposing that the governor shall become a legislator, in the sense of being able to submit bills as any legislator. He has got to submit those through members of the legislature.

MR. DOWNS: This would assume that the governor would have at least one friend in the legislature that would submit the bill he requested.

MR. MARTIN: That is right. It assumes he's got one friend. If the governor hasn't got that many, why, he will be in trouble.

MR. DOWNS: I see. Well, that answers my question. Thank you. I did think the committee should be clear, when we are making language we often say "may" or "shall". I assume from the answer there is really no way to enforce it, but it is really a directive to the governor to direct a member of the legislature or request him to do something which could not be forced.

The other comment—and I had not planned to speak on it—was the matter of a deficit and the current one. I had assumed that we had disposed of the discussion, at least, if not the deficit, in the report from the finance and taxation committee, but apparently this has raised its head again. Again I would just like to point out to the committee that looking at the past and even at the future, our convention has not so far raised 1 cent of revenue. We are simply trying to create a framework in which to establish that and establish budgeting.

If my memory is correct, past governors—and of both political parties—have, in their messages, submitted estimates and means to balance income with outgo. Whether or not this should be done on a yearly basis or a long range basis is not before us. I just submit again to the delegates that it is the legislature which finally passes every tax measure and which passes every appropriation measure. I do not like to see the chief executive be made the whipping boy of any deficit. I think we do want a sound fiscal policy. I have favored our principles of short range borrowing, and if necessary, long range borrowing, but I do not think it is a sound approach on the committee floor to intimate that the governor is solely responsible for revenue income and outgo. If we want, really, to place that responsibility solely in the governor's hands—and I am not for it—I say it can be done. We can simply say if at the end of any year there is a deficit, the governor shall be empowered and required to make a tax provision that will take care of that deficit for the next year, and pin the responsibility clearly on him. I want to make it clear that I do not recommend that, but if delegates keep talking about the responsibility of the governor to balance the budget, well, then, let's give him that responsibility, even though it violates principles of sound government of having this done by legislation. If on the other hand we continue to have tax bills and appropriations the responsibility of the legislature, let's clearly state that that is their constitutional responsibility.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Owosso, Delegate Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, a comparison between the majority and the minority proposals would seem to indicate that there are 5 specific portions of the majority proposal to which the minority is objecting. Those are specifically the setting of the 21 calendar days deadline for the submission of the budget, as contained in line 7; the requirement that expenditures and revenues must balance, in line 10; the requirement in lines 10 and 11, that the appropriation bills have to be submitted on the same date as the budget itself; the rest of the section, beginning at line 14 with the requirement that the amount of a surplus or deficit in the general fund be included as an item in both the budget and the appropriation bills; and, finally, the authorization to the governor to submit amendments to the appropriation bills prior to the final action of the legislature thereon. Those are the specific portions of the majority proposal which the minority would propose to eliminate. Those other portions, Mr. Chairman, have been covered and may be further covered in discussion.

I submit that there is one, I think, rather important point that, as far as I am concerned, represents the essential difference between the majority and the minority positions, and that is the requirement in line 10, that proposed expenditures shall not exceed estimated revenues. I think we have already heard from members of the minority their feelings in this particular matter. They claim that they are not necessarily opposed to a balanced budget, but instead of requiring that this budget be balanced on an annual basis, they are willing to have it balanced over a so called cycle period, or a long term, be it 2 years or 5 years or whatever it may be. This attitude on their part, Mr. Chairman, is borne out by the last sentence of the minority supporting reasons on page 541 of the journal, which state, and I quote:

> For example, adverse economic conditions might warrant the incurring of a manageable deficit until it could be liquidated under more favorable economic conditions, but under this proposal any increase in state expenditures might have to be financed by additional taxes even though this may adversely affect economic recovery.

I think, Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, that perhaps this, very simply, is the matter before us in the consideration of this first section.

Do you feel, and I am speaking now collectively to the members of the committee of the whole, do you feel that when we have a deficit, be it manageable or unmanageable—and that, again, might cause some question of definition—that it should thereby be taken care of by increased revenues or increased taxes or are you willing to look 5 or 10 years into the future and say we must balance this over a cycle period? We can accept deficits in certain years; we can hope for surpluses in future years when business conditions are better, and therefore we can live with deficits, we can use our surpluses in the future if they should occur, to make them up. I happen to have been exposed first hand, Mr. Chairman, to that kind of a theory on the national level for some years, the so called theory of balancing a budget over a cycle, and I think we have right here, at the present time, the conflict between the so called cycle theory of balancing the budget and the idea which I personally subscribe to, as a member of the majority of the committee, that whenever and wherever possible budgets should be balanced on an annual basis; if the final result of one fiscal year shows a deficit, we have thereby got to take care of that deficit in the next year and not hope for wishful and perhaps impossible surpluses in the future to take care of that situation. I think that is the situation before us; and I think of all the parts of the majority proposal to which the minority, perhaps, most strongly objects is this specific requirement in line 10, that proposed expenditures shall not exceed estimated revenue, and that, according to the majority, is to be done on an annual, not on a cycle basis.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Stanton, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, 2 or 3 comments on things that have been said. In the first place, this matter of the 21 days. I think we should keep this in mind, and it is fundamental here. The work upon and the final passage of the appropriation bills determines the length of each legislative session. Everything else can be done within the time that it takes the finance committees to complete their work. It costs money to keep the legislature in session, just the same as it costs money to keep us in session here, so the quicker they get started at it, so much the better for the taxpayers and so much the better for the legislators. If I were drafting this I would have said, on the opening day of the session the budget and the bills should be ready. There is no more reason why the head man in the state cannot be on time than anybody else, with the one exception of a new governor coming in. And, as things look now, that will only be once in 4 years, at the very fastest, and probably much less than that. The governor can just as well be ready at one time as another. The statute has called for 10 days after the session opens. That has been habitually disregarded or regarded only in form and not in substance. This says "21 days or as otherwise fixed by law". The governor has plenty of help. There is no reason why he can't be on time so the legislature can get to work and get its work done.

The matter of separation of powers has been emphasized by Mr. Snyder. That was in this picture under the first drafting of this proposal. That was one of the problems we had to work out among the 3 committees, and it has been completely worked out. The governor's authority stops when the budget and the bills get to the legislature. From there on, it is their responsibility. His influence doesn't stop. We know that. We expect the governor to go on and get his ideas enacted into law, if he can do so, and that is proper. But his legal authority stops when the legislature gets control of the budget and of the bills.

I want to talk to you about what I think is the real problem we are trying to meet here, and as has already been said, the detail we have in this proposal is detail that is required by Michigan experience, and what I am about to say also is based on Michigan experience. We might be confused by trying to fit other state experience into this part of the picture, because we have not had, here in Michigan, the same kind of a picture in this fiscal matter that generally prevails and in recent years we have not had, in Michigan, the same kind of picture that has usually prevailed in Michigan. Ordinarily in all states and in the long range view in Michigan you have a legislature trying to spend and a governor trying to hold them down. That has been reversed for years in Michigan. The thing that has had more to do with the deficit that we are running, and that we regret, than all the earmarking we have been talking about here, for years past, is that the governor makes an estimate of what the revenues are going to be. That is an official estimate.

The legislature, or at least the legislative finance committees, make an estimate of what the revenues are going to be. The governor's estimate has been almost always, almost always higher, and much higher than the legislative estimates. Not only that, but very consistently—I am talking about not the governors of just one party or any one governor—almost consistently, the governor's estimate of income has been higher than experience has carried out. In other words, the estimates have almost always been overestimates. Legislators are human, the same as governors. I am not going to say why the governors overestimate the income. Let's just be charitable and say they see the need, they want money, they estimate high, hoping that the expenditures will be made. All right. The legislators, being human, have all too frequently taken the easy way out. While they have not thought that the revenues would be as high as the governor has estimated, they have said, "Well, the governor says we are going to have this much money, the pressure is on for the spending, let's spend it," blaming the governor if the thing doesn't hold up. That isn't right. It doesn't work out financially, but that is the kind of thing that has been going on. While their own estimates were lower, they have relied on the higher estimates of the governor, and resulting deficits.

Let me say this, maybe it's got nothing in particular to do with the issue, but nobody comes down to see the legislature saying, "Don't spend money." Everybody comes down to the legislature saying, "Spend, spend, spend." All the time it is more expenditures. They yield to it, relying on the governor's estimate rather than on their own, more conservative estimate. This proposal is going about as far as you can go in language to prevent that kind of thing. The governor will be required to make his statement of revenues just as he has in the past, but also the legislature is required to say, "Our estimate is so much." That they have not done officially. You just found it out, unofficially, in the past. We think this is going to balance things up and get things under control in a much better way.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The gentleman from Detroit, Delegate Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I hesitate to make predictions for the next 50 years, particularly when the chairman of our committee on emerging problems is in the Chair, but I would just make 1 or 2. The first is that the tone of this language is that each year the budget shall be balanced. I think that there may be tendencies—the previous speaker to the contrary notwithstanding—when a legislative body in a good year might wish to set aside a surplus for the lean year. I think, psychologically this tends to discourage it. But the prediction I will make, and will make very clearly, is that if in no year the state of Michigan can provide, on a reasonable basis, for a reasonable deficit for conditions beyond its control, that once within the next 50 years there will be some sudden shift in defense production where there is immediately economic hardship in Michigan that is not the cause of labor, management, Democrats, Republicans, but just something shifting in our national economy, and that local communities, whose revenues will go down, will go to the state, and the then governor, whoever he may be, will be approached by local officials and he will wring his hands and say, "Gentlemen, I would like to help you but the constitution precludes it," and the committee seeing him will then ask he join them and they go down to Washington and Washington be asked to solve the problems. If this convention wants to shift more and more of our economic responsibility onto Washington, go ahead and do it, but I for one want to see that the state, so far as possible, meets our problems. When we can't, we work with the federal government to meet them. But I feel this will have a negative impact upon those, on a short range basis, who want to meet state emergency problems.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Austin, you were out. Would you wish to be recognized now?

MR. AUSTIN: Yes, I do, Mr. Chairman. Thank you. I had a long distance call that I had to take. I am sorry that I had to absent myself at that time. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I would like to just summarize my own views on this matter, and before doing so, I would like to make a political reference—this is the first I have ever made on this floor and I feel somewhat apologetic in doing so. It just happens that those who have spoken in opposition to the committee position and in favor of the minority position have been Democrats, and I am sincerely hopeful that the members of the committee will not get the impression that this is intended as a political matter. It certainly is not my position. I feel very firmly that what we are discussing here is just a question of whether to include in the constitution legislative detail that may not work.

In regard to the 5 points raised by Mr. Bentley, I would like to make it clear that I am not necessarily in opposition to the points. It is just a question of whether they ought to be included in the constitution. We haven't necessarily argued the merits of these points. This is something that I think would better be argued on the floor of the legislature, as to whether we should include 21 days in the constitution; it is certainly my feeling that we should not include a figure of 21 days in the constitution. We ought to leave it to the legislature, and especially if the legislature is concerned about when the governor ought to submit his budget. Let the legislature decide when it wants the budget. It has that power in the constitution now, and it ought to retain that power.

I certainly don't see how we can include in the constitution the requirement that expenditures shall not exceed estimated revenue. It is possible that the legislature may, from time to time, decide that it would like to have the revenues equal the expenditures, but there may be occasions when the legislature may be satisfied with a budget that is nearly balanced, because of economic circumstances. I don't mind telling you that it is my feeling that the position on whether the budget should be balanced will be governed somewhat by economic conditions.

Another problem that we have is that we are insisting, in the majority proposal, that the deficit be included as an item of the budget. If the deficit is included—that is, the deficit from a preceding period—in the budget, then would this contribute to the deficit for the current year? Let me be a little more explicit. Let's assume that our expenditures for a given year—I am talking about the general fund now—would be $650 million, and our revenues are going to be $700 million. We have a deficit from the preceding year of $100 million. What we are proposing is that we add the $100 million to the $650 million of expenditures, so that total expenditures, presumably, will be $750 million. The result will be a deficit of $50 million. Is this to be the definition of deficit or would that year actually have a surplus? I give this example merely to show that to use the term "surplus" and "deficit" without in some way indicating how it is to be defined, we are merely confusing those who will be required to interpret these provisions in the constitution. I certainly feel that we ought to eliminate that reference to a double appropriation. I think I made that very clear when Mr. Karn and I had our little colloquy on the floor.

It is my firm conviction that the language offered in the minority report amendment is just about all that we ought to include in this section a to make it workable, practical. I think if we add any additional language we are merely going to create problems for both the governor and the legislature, and I certainly hope that you will vote in favor of the minority report amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I had not intended to speak again on this, Mr. Chairman. I want to echo the remarks made by Delegate Austin and at the same time point out that while we are dealing with section a, all of these sections are related one to another, and Mr. Bentley's remarks actually went to a, b, c and d, in effect. No one could quarrel, I guess, with the intent of the remarks made by Delegate Bentley, but I would like to point out a few facts. The majority report, of course, contemplates a balanced budget, but no more than balanced from the present into the future. This would be accomplished, of course, by requiring that the deficit and surplus reported for the previous fiscal year be the first item, respectively, on the appropriations or revenue side of the new year's budget. The fact that this procedure is actually impossible, if interpreted literally, is ignored in the discussion here on the floor. Assuming this is correct, then there can be no gradual liquidation of a deficit or consumption of a surplus over a period of years under the committee proposal.

Taking the fiscal facts as they actually exist, presently the application of the proposal to the budgetary process for the fiscal year 1962-63 would produce the following results: the general fund deficit, at July 1, 1961 was $71.7 million. This will be augmented by June 30, 1960, because of the gap between revenue and obligations during 1961 and '62, by $25 million. The amount of revenue in 1962-63 which must be set aside before making any operating appropriations, in order to be in balance at the beginning of the fiscal year 1962-63, is $96.7 million. Before proposing any change in revenue or expenditure patterns in 1962-63, we must also anticipate the same gap between revenue and expenditures for 1962-63 as occurred in 1961-62.

There are some activities which produce increased requirements within themselves, without any increase in scope—such as veterans' homestead exemptions, retirement, O.A.S.I.—so use the hypothetical figure of $10 million. This is the amount of new revenue to be provided, or the measure of the reduction in existing appropriations just to stand still under the proposal. It would require $131.7 million. Even if the existing accumulated deficit of $71.7 million is ignored, the appropriation revenue gap going into 1962-63 would be $60 million, all of which must be covered in the single year 1962-63 under the committee proposal.

If, as has been the case, the legislature ignored the gap and under another proposal required the governor to reduce appropriations to match revenues, his choices are indicated as follows: the total general fund expenditures, from both general purposes and restricted revenues, was $672.7 million. We have exempted by constitution or pledge to the courts, legislative debt service, $23.5 million; revenue producing agencies, such as liquor merchandising, regulatory revenue, and any reduction in expenditure which also reduce revenues, $17.6 million; other priorities, civil service, retirement, workmen's comp and other fringe benefits, $13.9 million; constitutional grants to primary schools, sales tax to local units, $112.4 million; federal-state matching grants, vocational education, vocational rehabilitation, health, T.B., crippled children, old age dependents, blind, disabled, conservation, all of these, $119 million; other statutory grants presently, intangibles, racing, drivers' training, junior colleges, operator and liquor licenses, direct relief, veterans' homestead, agricultural, aeronautics, waterways, highways, schools, et cetera, $100.1 million; institutions, the University of Michigan, Michigan State University, Wayne, and other educational institutions, $208.4 million; all other, the administrative costs of all state services including the governor, treasurer, general department of administration, secretary of state, state police and military, $63.2 million.

Actually, therefore, the governor has only $63.2 million available to plug a gap of $60 million. And to do this, he would have to terminate—mind you, to do this, he would have to terminate every state activity in the executive branch except the institutions, obviously he cannot open and close the institutions overnight depending on the productivity of an established revenue base. He cannot—we all should recognize it—cut back in the other areas unless he ignores the constitution or suspends the laws. The further the budget moves into the fiscal year, the less of the $63.2 million he has left to make any adjustments.

Again, we have spent considerable time on this and I don't want to take any more of your time, ladies and gentlemen, but give serious consideration to the statutory nature of the majority proposal. Give serious consideration to the obvious attempt to write into the constitution a balanced budget—even though it is desirable by all of us—when it won't work under the committee proposal. Give consideration to taking away, as you are, under this proposal, the discretion of the legislature and the governor to work these problems out. Again, I strongly urge you to use your own minds in this one and your own thinking, and ignore the suggestions of the leaders of your caucus. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the minority report amendment. Do you desire to have it read? Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I have been just, the last hour and a half, going through one constitution after another in an effort to find some reference to this material which is being presented to us today, and I have only gotten as far as the state of Ohio. But in doing so, I have found only one state which spells out any detail on the submission of a budget in all the detail that we have before us, and that is the state of California which, as many of you know, has one of the longest constitutions of all 50 states, which goes to considerable length in every area of government.

We are here to write a constitution that is going to provide a flexible framework for the future operations of state government. We are not here to write a constitution which is based upon the last 5 years of Michigan's experience. I ask you to take into account the experience of all the other states. All of them, with the exception of a few, leave out of their constitutions details regarding the submission of the budget and the request for future appropriations, and they do this because in the wisdom of these other states and in the wisdom of the whole United States, it has been found that things of this sort change in time, and to fix them into the constitution will date our document more than anything else will in 40, 50 or 60 years. We cannot write a constitution that is based upon a bad picture that may be in Michigan this year, last year, 5 years ago; a bad picture that was not in Michigan 10 or 20 or 30 years ago; a good picture in Michigan that may be 10 or 20 or 30 years hence. This is not a valid means of correcting a situation. As I have heard the arguments advanced, we are attempting to solve the problems which are not constitutional in nature. The problem of balanced budgets and expenditures, as far as this particular area is concerned, has been traditionally left with the legislature in Michigan. I think we ought to feel sufficient confidence in the legislature to leave it to their discretion again. There may be changes made. They may need to change some of these items.

In support of the minority report amendment, it isn't something that the Democrats have just pulled out of thin air. This is something which is totally new in our constitution. We ought to be very careful as to what we spell out. The model state constitution uses similar language, but even less restrictive than this. All we are asking here — and I hope that many of you have not yet determined your position — is that you consider the changing nature of our society, consider how times have changed just within the last 50 years, and realize that our responsibility to posterity is to provide something that they can look to in 50 years and feel confidence in, too. We can't do that when we spell out details, no matter how wise these details may appear in the light of today's world. In the light of today's state, we can't do it either.

A conservative position would be one that would say, tread very lightly on new grounds; and this is something new in the constitution. It has not been in Michigan's constitution of 1908, 1850 or 1835. This is something new. Let's go very easy on it. Let's not provide restrictive details. Let's give a — if we want to give this recognition, give it recognition, but let's not act as the legislature and fix into the constitution something that will not be able to be changed in years to come. I urge you to give your attention to the minority report amendment in the light of these arguments and to vote in favor of it.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Jackson, Delegate Karn.

MR. KARN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, just one brief statement. Mr. Marshall had quite a detailed accounting report. I understood, however, that in dealing with the deficit he was taking the entire deficit that would exist at the end of this fiscal year into next year's accounting. However, on line 14 it says, "The amount of any general fund surplus created or deficit incurred during the last preceding fiscal period shall be appropriately entered. . . ." We did give thought at one time to specifying the number of years over which an accumulated and accrued budget could be retired, but we gave that up, and that is in the hands of the legislature. The thing that is to be considered here is only the current fiscal period deficit.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Howes.

MR. HOWES: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise to support the majority proposal and to oppose the minority report amendment. I believe an overall statement of sound fiscal policy and procedure should by all means be set forth in our constitution as a definite guideline in the financial operation of our state government. As our individual businesses have definite guidelines as to good business procedure, so our state government should have definite guidelines pertaining to good government procedure. I believe the majority proposal sets these guidelines in clear, concise language, and I urge the delegates to support the majority proposal and to oppose the minority report amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I think we have presented the points of view on both sides. I would like to see if we can dispose of this particular matter before the committee rises. If we are ready to vote, I suggest we go forward with that and then we will rise.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the amendment of the minority. Delegate Young.

MR. YOUNG: Mr. Chairman, I would like to address a question, through the Chair, to Delegate Karn, if I may.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If he cares to answer.

MR. YOUNG: The provision here calls for the inclusion of the deficit from the preceding fiscal year in the budget for the ensuing fiscal year. I would like to know if the budget is to be presented 21 days after the house convenes or the legislature convenes and that will be presumably in January, and will deal with a fiscal year, in terms of today, '62-63, the only way you can determine the deficit of the preceding fiscal year, which is this fiscal year, would be as of the end of that fiscal year in June. So how can the governor, except on the basis of an estimate, include in his budget an estimate or a definition of the deficit for the current fiscal year when he makes his report in January?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Karn.

MR. KARN: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Young, the fiscal period, of course, starts with July 1, and the next budget to be submitted to the legislature by the governor will be the budget for the fiscal period starting July 1, 1962, and running through June of 1963. It is true that at that time the amount of the deficit would be an estimated item, as are many others, but this can be changed from time to time and could be included in the next budget, I am sure.

MR. YOUNG: And then I am to assume the language should read, "an estimated deficit", since it is obviously impossible to give a defined deficit in advance of a determination?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Karn.

MR. KARN: Well, at a time during the year it might be an estimate, yes, but it certainly could be corrected as time goes on, as other items of expense and revenues are corrected.

MR. YOUNG: Well, brother Chairman, I feel that one of the major weaknesses of the majority report here—and I think that on the whole, although this is new language, that an advance has been made in attempting to set forth an executive budget—but one of the basic weaknesses is the attempt to equate a government operation with a business operation, and I don't think that the government of the state of Michigan is a business. The government of the state of Michigan is not founded for the purpose of making a profit. The government exists, presumably, to render services and to offer governmental functions to the people of Michigan. Those governmental functions are not like a business. In times of low income, the services remain fairly static. We cannot do what the operator of an automobile plant might do. When the income is low he will curtail his operation. He might lay off half of his workers. He might even close down. We certainly cannot close down the operation of the state of Michigan in bad times.

Since we are required to take a deficit from the preceding year into the current year—and I assume that the major reason for this deficit would be a falling off in income—and if we are required, then, to carry a steady amount or fairly steady amount of services into the next year, then we must assume that at a time when the tax revenue is at its lowest point we will have to increase the tax revenue for the ensuing period. The only alternative to that is to cut expenditures to the level of income. For instance, we are approaching a deficit of $100 million for this current fiscal year, as I understand it. As I understand it, the general fund totals approximately ½ billion dollars, or $500 million. What that means is that 20 per cent of the needed income will not be available if we add this deficit. How are we to make up —assuming we will not raise taxes—for that 20 per cent?

An automobile manufacturer could lay off 20 per cent of his workers. Are we to lay off 20 per cent of the school children or shall we release 20 per cent of the prisoners, or maybe we should curtail 20 per cent of the building of our roads. What I am saying is what might be a practical, sound solution to a business operation might prove to be a highly impractical position for the state of Michigan. So I think that, in our eagerness to specify and to delineate the requirements of an executive budget, we have fallen into the trap of confusing our state budget with a business operation, which it definitely is not.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Kalamazoo, Delegate Allen.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Chairman, I have a question directed to Mr. Martin, or perhaps to Mr. Karn.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Which one, Mr. Allen?

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Martin.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If Mr. Martin cares to answer.

MR. ALLEN: The words "the last preceding fiscal period" in relation to, let's say, a deficit, as I would read those words, I would read them as the last preceding the governor's message. That would be a date certain. In other words, if this constitution were in effect and he gives his message the last part of January, he would have a specific deficit he could refer to. Would that be the preceding July to July? If that is so, it wouldn't be a guess. It wouldn't be last preceding the new budget. Am I correct?

MR. MARTIN: That is correct, Mr. Allen. It would be a fixed and definite figure, because the budget would be being prepared from June on and they would have the deficit as of the end of June to work into the budget for the succeeding period.

MR. ALLEN: So, actually, then, your deficit refers to a year back?

MR. MARTIN: It refers to the last preceding fiscal period in which the deficit has been established, yes.

MR. ALLEN: Yes, Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the delegate from Muskegon, Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I was not a member of the taxation committee, but I certainly want to support the majority report from the executive committee, as concerns the executive budget. This language is substantially the language that has been developed over the years by the national municipal league concerning governmental budgeting at city and county levels, and it arose out of the irresponsible financial picture that cities and counties found themselves in during the last depression. If we are to have a responsible legislature, then this type of budget is a must, and history has shown that those cities which have adopted substantially the model cash budget law, and counties that have adopted substantially the model cash budget law, have had good financial stability.

Mr. Young says that thereby you are going to cut down and discharge 20 per cent of the school children or 20 per cent of the prisoners. There are 2 facets to this problem. The first is that your tax structure or system must be so designed to have a maximum stability of revenues. This is your first problem. And our tax structure does not vary in its receipts by 20 per cent. The second problem is that the deficit which has to be incurred is, according to Mr. Martin's answer, and as I read this, the last completed fiscal period, which, by the time the budget is adopted and the taxes are to be levied, some 12 to 18 months in the past. This would not require, as Mr. Marshall implied, a complete funding of the deficit existing at the time of this constitution, but will say to the executive branch and to the legislature, which is equally important, that the financial problems that Michigan has will not be perpetuated ad infinitum, but that we will begin to live as we require cities and counties throughout the country to live, on a basis that your budget must be balanced insofar as possible. In every budget there are some items which can be delayed from one fiscal year to another, and it is those items that history has shown that city managers or mayors or county managers or county administrators are able to delay until the next fiscal year.

We are complicating this to the extent that we retain earmarked funds, because you can't cut in on an earmarked area and use that money someplace else. But to the extent that we avoid earmarking, this gives good financial solvency to the state of Michigan, without any harm to the services rendered by the government because of a temporary recession. All of us know that in studying economics since 1900, in our modern economy, serious curtailment of government revenues from a recession in the economic structure of the state seldom lasts more than one fiscal year.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the minority report amendment. Will you ring the bell. All those in favor of the minority report amendment will say aye. Opposed, no.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: A division is called for. Is there support? Sufficient number is up. Ring the bell. All those in favor of the minority report amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment proposed by the minority, as offered by Mr. Marshall, the yeas are 41; the nays are 82.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The minority report amendment is not adopted. The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin moves that the committee do now rise. All in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. The committee will rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, Vice President Hutchinson resumed the Chair.]

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Genesee, Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 46, on which the secretary will make a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 46, A proposal pertaining to the executive budget and item veto; has considered an amendment thereto; has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: What is the pleasure of the convention? The Chair recognizes the delegate from Grand Traverse, Mr. Rajkovich.

MR. RAJKOVICH: Mr. President, I move we recess until 2:00 o'clock this afternoon.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: All those in favor of recessing will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The motion prevails and the convention stands in recess until 2:00 o'clock p.m.

[Whereupon, at 11:45 o'clock a.m., the convention recessed; and, at 2:00 o'clock p.m., reconvened.]

The convention will be in order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: General orders of the day. The Chair recognizes the delegate from Genesee, Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering matters on the general orders calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon the motion of the delegate from Genesee. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The motion prevails. The committee will convene and Mr. Millard will preside.

[Whereupon, Mr. Millard assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The committee will be in order. At the conclusion of the morning session we had voted upon the minority report amendment to section a of Committee Proposal 46. Mr. Secretary, are there any amendments to section a?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Faxon and Austin offer the following amendment to section a of Committee Proposal 46:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "legislature" by striking out the comma and "not later than 21 calendar days after the convening of each regular session, or"; so that the language will then read:

> The governor shall submit to the legislature at a time fixed by law, a budget for the ensuing fiscal period setting forth in detail all proposed expenditures and estimated revenue of the state.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Detroit, Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this morning we discussed the question of whether it was wise to fix into the constitution a definite time for the submitting of the budget. I suggest that you look at this language and see if, in your mind, this giving to the legislature the fixing of the time wouldn't provide the kind of confidence and flexibility which you have permitted in many, many other areas. I don't doubt that it is necessary that some time be allowed, and I am certain that no one disagrees with this idea. The question is simply one of whether it is in the best interests of the state and of the executive budget that a specified time be put into the constitution. In so many other areas, fellow delegates, we have taken out detail like so many days or so many months or such trivia that we had in the old constitution. This is clearly giving to the legislature the right to prescribe whatever time is best and—let's face it—times may change and conditions may change where we need this needed flexibility. I urge you to support this amendment and would at this time yield to Mr. Austin, my cosponsor, for any further comments.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I don't believe it is necessary to belabor this point any further. I think we talked on it at length this morning. I agree with Mr. Faxon. It does not seem necessary to include this language in the constitution, especially since we have at the same time given the legislature the right to fix the date. In fact, it might even lead to some confusion. So I would urge the support of this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Faxon, the floor is yours.

MR. FAXON: I have nothing.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: You yield the floor?

MR. FAXON: Yes.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize, then, the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this is simply a part of the amendment which was offered this morning in the minority report amendment, and I think your reasons for feeling that there ought to be a specific time subject to the right of the legislature to change that time is desirable in this proposal. I hope that you will defeat the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise to support the amendment. I think that this is a question that should be left flexible and left to the legislature. I don't know whether this afternoon we are trusting the legislature or not. Our distinguished committee chairman says that the legislature can change this. This is true only to the extent that they can change it downward, less than 21 days. If some occasion should arise—and I realize that it has not been too much of a problem at this point—that they needed more than 21 days, it could not be done. Therefore, I urge that you support the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, there is nothing to prevent the legislature from changing in either direction, either up or down.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Faxon amendment. Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, this is the very point that I was trying to make. There is nothing to prevent the legislature from changing it, so then why put it in in the first place? This is the whole question. If it says, as you read that statement, "or at a time fixed by law", this means that the legislature can change it, so what possible value is there in inserting into that first sentence a specified time when you say in the same sentence that they can go ahead and change it either way? There is no sense here in trying to clutter up the constitution with matter that can be and would be dealt with by the legislature. The legislature could change it a year after the constitution is adopted. Then what have we left? People will read the constitution and see "21 days," and find out that the statutes say something else. Let's try to keep the constitution a basic document of law and not give that detail.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I stand corrected on one statement I made. You do have the language, "or at a time fixed by law", but you also say in the beginning, "not later than 21 calendar days after the convening of each regular session". I am not an attorney. I am one of these—I hold like Delegate Barthwell, an L.S.L., Long Suffering Layman, after going through the judiciary—I think you could get into some arguments over whether or not you could go beyond the 21 days. But, again, I think it is language that is unnecessary and there have been several occasions where we clouded the constitution, we loaded it down with articles that are statutory. In other words, if what Delegate Martin says is true, that the legislature can change this date at any time, then it seems to me that if that is the case the minority report amendment would suffice because it says "at a time fixed by law".

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Delegate Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I would merely remind the delegates it is common in the United States constitution, to which you so often look for example, to make such a provision and then the phrase, "or as provided by law."

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Faxon amendment. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor of the Faxon amendment will say aye. Opposed, no.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: A division is called for. Is there support? Sufficient number is up. All those in favor of the Faxon and Austin amendment will vote aye and those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment by Messrs. Faxon and Austin, the yeas are 40; the nays are 71.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is not adopted. Are there any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 11, after "shall" by striking out "cause to be submitted" and inserting "submit"; and in line 18, after "may" by striking out "cause to be submitted" and inserting "submit"; so that the language in each case will read, page 1, line 11, "The governor shall submit to each house of the legislature general appropriation bills to embody appropriate expenditures," and in line 18, "The governor, prior to final action of the legislature thereon, may submit to the legislature any amendments to the general appropriation bills,".

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the author of the amendment, Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I don't mean to take up much time on this. Some of this was discussed this morning. The question is, how does the governor "cause to submit" something. I am aware of the fact that there is some feeling that there would not be a clear delineation of authority between the governor and the legislature, as far as checks and balances are concerned, in not wanting to have the word "cause" to be there.

In the model state constitution it reads:

> The governor shall submit to the legislature, at a time fixed by law, a budget for the next fiscal year setting forth all proposed expenditures and anticipated income of all departments and agencies of the state, as well as the general appropriation bills.

So that they do here say that the governor shall submit a general appropriation bill. We say in the first sentence of the section, "The governor shall submit to the legislature the budget." It is possible—I don't say that this might happen, but it is possible—that the governor may not be able to get somebody to submit, or may not want to have somebody submit his bill, his appropriation bill. Maybe he would rather not have a person take the ball for him. It might be an identification he wouldn't want to have. But, under this provision, he has to cause something to be. This kind of language is very reminiscent of monarchical states where the king causes something to be, and I suggest it might clear it up if we put in "shall", as it is in the California constitution with regard to similar matter.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: In all kindness, Mr. Chairman, I want to point out again to all the delegates, this is a matter of language and this really isn't any reason to take up the time of the committee with something that the committee on style and drafting clearly has jurisdiction of and no doubt will take care of.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, this was considered this morning. It was thoroughly considered in the committee. The word "cause" was put in there deliberately so that we would not involve the governor in introducing bills into the legislature as a legislator. I urge your negative vote on the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Faxon amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted. Any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Austin offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 15, after "period" by inserting a comma and "as defined by law,"; so the sentence will then read:

> The amount of any general fund surplus created or deficit incurred during the last preceding fiscal period, as defined by law, shall be appropriately entered as an item in the budget and in the appropriation bills.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I don't believe that this is just a language change. I believe it is a substantive change.

I just attended a hearing over at the legislature during the noon hour at which there was a hearing on house bill 508, which seeks to amend the corporation franchise tax bill. The substance of the bill is to change the definition of earned surplus or surplus for the determination of the franchise tax. The item of surplus has been giving practitioners and the corporation and securities commission a great deal of difficulty in arriving at the tax liability of corporations.

This may not seem pertinent, but I merely want to illustrate how difficult it is to define surplus in such a way that it will satisfy all of the people who have to interpret it over a period of years. When the term "surplus" was defined by the public acts of 1921 for corporations it seemed to work well, but there have been developments in the structure of corporations to the point now where the definition at that time no longer is satisfactory, and the legislature at this point is seeking to change it.

What we are seeking to do now is to write into the constitution—not an act—we are seeking to write into the constitution language which would indicate that the amount of surplus has to be included in the budget each year, with no indication as to how the term "surplus" is to be defined. The least we can do is to leave it to the legislature to define surplus from time to time. So I suggest that we include the language, "surplus or deficit as defined by law." That is my argument, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Stanton, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, Mr. Austin and I spent hours, many hours, I think, at the beginning of this convention in the finance committee trying to work out a definition of surplus. I think at one time, Mr. Austin, we thought we had accomplished what we were trying to do, but we got the fiscal officers of the state in to review what we had said. They knocked it all to pieces and practically told us that the concept changes from time to time, in accordance with accounting procedures, and what kind of accounting procedures you use, and advised us eventually not to attempt any such thing. Our conclusion was, I believe, that we would not attempt such a thing. Now you are proposing to impose upon the legislature what you and I failed to do in committee on finance and taxation. May I suggest that we leave it to the accounting department of state government to struggle along the best it can as it has in the past.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Kalamazoo, Delegate Allen.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Austin, I think even if there were merit in what you suggest, I am afraid that by the way you word it what you are doing here is defining "fiscal period as defined by law" rather than "surplus as defined by law." In other words, what are you defining by law by putting the comma after "period"? You are defining, as I would interpret it, "fiscal period as defined by law," rather than surplus or "deficit as defined by law."

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I am very sorry for not addressing my remarks to you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes you, Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Thank you. What I had in mind was the definition of surplus created or deficit incurred. I included the language "during the last fiscal period" because I think that that also will have to be included in the definition, because I think there may be some confusion as to what surplus or deficit during the last fiscal period will mean. If you feel, perhaps, that the insertion ought to be after "deficit", that would be all right with me, but all we are interested in doing is defining general fund surplus created or deficit incurred during the last preceding fiscal period. That is what we want to define.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Allen.

MR. ALLEN: In case your amendment should pass then, Mr. Austin, what you are intending is a definition both of surplus, deficit, and fiscal period?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the vice president, Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Austin a question.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If Mr. Austin cares to answer.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Austin, now then, suppose that we did not include this phrase "as defined by law" in here. These terms, in order to mean anything, will have to be defined somehow and it stands to reason that they will have to be defined by law. You don't have to say so in here, do you? A surplus and a deficit will be the surplus and the deficit which is reflected by the accounting practices of the state, will it not?

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Hutchinson, if you want to say "as defined by accounting practices of the state", I think that will be satisfactory. My only point is that there ought to be some indication as to how the definition is to be arrived at, because you may have the legislature using one definition and the governor using another, and there ought to be some way of defining it so that all are using the same definition. This is my only point.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Well, Mr. Chairman, I think I see the point but I don't seem to be as disturbed about it as Mr. Austin, for the reason that it seems so obvious to me that when we talk about a surplus or a deficit in government, those are items which are reflected by the accounting procedures, and the accounting procedures are established by law, and that is the only source of information, really, the governor is going to have, as well as the legislature. Whatever those accounting procedures and practices reflect, that is going to be the surplus or the deficit, and the same information will be given to both of them by an agency which is charged with carrying out accounting practices in accordance with the law.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, could I ask Mr. Hutchinson a question now?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If he wants to answer.

MR. AUSTIN: I would like to know, Mr. Hutchinson, if you interpret this language to mean that the definition of surplus at the end of a given year will be arrived at after taking into account the surplus or deficit from the preceding year, or will it apply only to the transactions for the year in question?

MR. HUTCHINSON: Well, offhand, not having made the study of that matter, Mr. Chairman, I wouldn't know. But Mr. Austin and the rest of the members of the committee certainly will be quick to recognize that constitutional words and constitutional phrases have different meanings at different times in history, and how that word might now be interpreted. Maybe, in 25 years, it would be interpreted differently, and each one of them would be constitutional, because there is a certain amount of flexibility in that regard simply because constitutional terms do change in their interpretation. Neither one of them would be violating the constitution. It depends on how you interpret it.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I don't see any basic disagreement between the belief that I have on this subject and that of Mr. Hutchinson. I think our difference is merely as to whether this constitution should indicate, in some way, how these terms are to be defined, and I submit that I believe that in writing the legislative language into the constitution we should at the same time complete it by simply saying that these terms are to be defined as determined by law.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, at the end of each fiscal year the department of administration makes a determination as to what the general fund surplus or deficit may be. That is all we are talking about and it seems unnecessary. I don't think that is defined by law now and there is no difficulty about knowing what it is at the end of each year. That is all we are putting in here. It seems to me unnecessary to add this additional provision for a legislative definition of that. I think the committee considered the language and the language is adequate to cover what our object was.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Detroit, Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I don't pretend any competence in this particular area except that I was somewhat moved by Delegate Hutchinson's observations that the meaning of these technical terms may change in a period of some 25 years, and that is precisely what I believe to be the intent of the amendment, namely to recognize that there would be a changing specificity of meaning during the course of time and therefore the legislative wisdom ought to be invoked with regard to avoiding litigation by defining, by law, these terms.

It is, after all, an axiom of constitutional construction that you would be construing terms that had meaning at the time the constitution was adopted, so that that would be the point of beginning. But it may be, as time goes on with changing accounting concepts, that you may want to depart from the meaning that was extant at the time the constitution was ratified. So it seems to me that there ought to be some flexibility here, especially in these kind of terms, and I would support the flexibility and the kind of approach that the sponsor of the amendment intends here.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Austin amendment. All in favor will say aye. All opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted. Are there any further amendments to section a?

SECRETARY CHASE: We have another amendment, Mr. Chairman, but before that is offered, may the secretary call to the attention of each delegate that there is a corrected page 2 for this proposal and if you do not have one, the corrected page 2 has section c printed in lower case type. If you do not have one, please signal on the board and the pages will bring you one.

Mr. Austin offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 16, after "budget" by inserting a period and striking out "and in the appropriation bills."; so that the sentence will read, "The amount of any general fund surplus created or deficit incurred during the last preceding fiscal period shall be appropriately entered as an item in the budget."

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the proposer of the amendment, Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I will confess that this is primarily a language matter which might be handled by the committee on style and drafting, and I will not belabor it. I will simply explain, as I did earlier, that this language is, from my point of view, unnecessary and could lead to confusion because it indicates that we are expecting the legislature, or at least the governor, to include appropriation bills for items that have already been appropriated when we add this language "and in the appropriation bills". We are simply inferring that in addition to the appropriation bills for the current year, he must also include a new appropriation bill for the deficit of the preceding year. That deficit, I submit, arose out of the appropriations for the preceding year, so I don't see the necessity for an additional appropriation.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the proposal doesn't call for a separate appropriation bill. The sole purpose of including the words "and in the appropriation bills" in addition to the words "in the budget" is so that both the bills and the budget will reflect the fact that we are taking account of a preceding surplus or deficit. There is no specific appropriation required for this item. It simply has to be figured into either the expenditures that are figured or the revenues that are figured, depending upon whether you are dealing with a surplus or a deficit. That is the only reason for having both in there, and they are both necessary if you are to show in the appropriation bills the evidence of what you are proposing in the budget. We think they are necessary and that they should both be there.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Austin amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted. Any further amendments?

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: A division has been called for. Is there support? There is sufficient number up to have a division. All those in favor of the Austin amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Austin, the yeas are 34; the nays are 74.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is not adopted. Any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Young offers the following amendment to section a:

1. Amend page 1, line 14, after "expenditures.", by striking out "The amount of any general fund surplus created or deficit incurred during the last preceding fiscal period shall be appropriately entered as an item in the budget and in the appropriation bills.".

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the sponsor of the amendment, Mr. Young.

MR. YOUNG: Mr. Chairman, I offered this amendment because I don't think it adds anything to section a that is not already covered in various other sentences of section a, in the first place. And, in the second place, it presents a requirement to the governor and/or the legislature that would be impossible to carry out in times of economic crises, and therefore, might place either the governor or the legislature or both in a position of violating the constitution of the state. If the purpose of this language—that is, the carrying over the surplus or the deficit into the next budget—is to insure that no more money will be spent in a given period or a given fiscal year than is raised, well, I submit that that has already been covered. The first sentence requires that the governor shall present a new budget with an estimated revenue of the state and the proposed expenditures shall not exceed this estimated revenue. Then further on, starting in line 17, the final sentence of section a says:

> The governor, prior to final action of the legislature thereon, may cause to be submitted to the legislature any amendments to the general appropriation bills, and shall cause to be submitted any bills to meet deficiencies in current appropriations.

So we have here the requirement in the event the budget runs into problems, for the governor to make the request for additional moneys. We have already directed that no more expenditures shall be called for than there are revenues provided for.

When we say that we must carry over a deficit as a part of a budget from one fiscal year to another, we seem to be implying that economic declines will conveniently fit themselves into fiscal year divisions. I don't think we are in a position to make that prediction for the next 50 years. We seem to be saying that in a period of economic decline where the revenues of this state have dropped substantially, and where it will be a great problem in the current year to raise the minimum revenues necessary to meet minimum state services, that over and above this we should place an additional burden of a previous deficit on the back of the legislature for that given period. To me, it would seem to be far more preferable to carry over a surplus, if one existed, from year to year, and thus be in a position to take care of a deficit later on, if one should occur. Or, if a deficit should occur during a period of economic decline when revenues were at a minimum, to pass that deficit on to such succeeding fiscal year as the state shall have the ability to liquidate the debt. It seems to me to do otherwise would be to place our governor and our legislature in a position of potentially violating a constitution which we now seek to write.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Young amendment. Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, this is another part of the same proposal which we voted on this morning, and the reasons for approving that proposal this morning have not changed. I hope you will defeat the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Young amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: A division has been called for. Is there support? There is a sufficient number up. The question is on the Young amendment. All in favor of the Young amendment will vote aye and all opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the Young amendment, the yeas are 30; nays are 75.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is not adopted. Are there any further amendments to section a?

SECRETARY CHASE: I have none on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If not, it will pass.

Section a is passed. The secretary will read section b.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section b:

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I yield to Mr. Karn for an explanation of the details of this section.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Jackson, Delegate Karn.

MR. KARN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I would like to read for our mutual benefit the comments on section b on page 401 of the journal, if you are interested in following it.

[The supporting reasons for section b were read by Mr. Karn. For text, see above, page 1636.]

I would like to yield to Delegate Stamm, please.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Karn yields to Delegate Stamm.

MR. STAMM: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, this provision requires that the legislature must act on general appropriation bills for the next fiscal period before they may act on any other appropriation bill. This will focus the attention of the legislature on the operation of state government and possibly will avoid the panic and haste of trying to pass a budget in the closing minutes of the session. An exception is made for bills to supplement current operations, and the only purpose is to focus attention on the major task of each legislative session. Another factor in this provision is that the legislature will be required to set forth their estimates of proposed revenues for use of the public and for the use of the legislature in comparison to what the executive's budget is estimating the revenues will be. This provision will also provide that the revenues must match the proposed spending, and I feel that this is a step in the right direction for orderly financing of state government.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin, do you yield the floor?

MR. MARTIN: Yes, we yield the floor, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: There is a minority report. Will the secretary read it.

SECRETARY CHASE: Pursuant to the minority report of Mr. Marshall, Miss Hart and Mrs. Daisy Elliott,

Mr. Marshall offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 21, by striking out all of section b.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Detroit, Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: First of all, I would like to ask for a point of information, or maybe a parliamentary inquiry, but I still don't understand it. I attempted to ask it this morning. That is that under our rules the minority report is taken up first. It still appears to me that in explaining the majority report, the speakers are, instead of the chairman getting up and reading and explaining it, he is yielding to other people and in a sense it seems that they are talking on the majority proposal, thereby crystallizing the views. I come along with a mop and pail and make my little spiel and then they come along and tear it apart again. The question I want to ask is, does the minority report come up first? That is number one. Number two, if it does, should not the majority proposal only be read, or should it be thoroughly explained and discussed prior to hearing the minority report? Now, I would like a ruling on that.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall, the convention, in committee of the whole, has followed the procedure that the majority report will be discussed first and then the minority report will be taken up afterwards. We have divided this proposal. There are 4 sections to it and we take up each section at a time. The majority report is discussed and then you go directly to the minority report for that section.

MR. MARSHALL: Well, this morning, is it discussed or just explained? There is a difference, I think, in discussing and explaining. In other words, reading the majority report and briefly explaining it is one thing; discussing it is another.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: You have to discuss a report in order to get the meat of it. The Chair can't see any other way that you can get the substance of the report before the committee.

MR. MARSHALL: I guess I am confused, and I admit that I am dense. I would at this time yield the floor to Delegate Elliott, one of the cosponsors of the minority report.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall yields the floor to Mrs. Elliott.

MRS. DAISY ELLIOTT: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I am very deeply disturbed about section b.

[The supporting reasons for the minority report for section b were read by Mrs. Daisy Elliott. For text, see above, page 1637.]

Therefore, I would urge that you support the minority report.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I have nothing further to say on this section.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, just one additional word of explanation. The fundamental purpose of this section is to get the attention of the legislature to the main business of appropriations, that is, the general appropriation bills before it acts on so called special bills for this, that, or the other thing, which are thrown in by individual legislators and which do not come from a consideration of the total needs of the state government and the total revenue. This seems to be the only way and the best way to do it, and it is certainly the orderly way to get these matters considered. We think it is an integral part of this whole proposal and makes extremely good sense in getting the legislature to consider the main problems first and then, if it is desired, to add additional appropriations. This does not prevent it. This does not prevent any special bill from being acted upon. It simply says, act on the main bills first.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the minority report amendment to strike out section b of Committee Proposal 46. Are you ready for the question? All those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted. Are there any further amendments to section b?

SECRETARY CHASE: None have been submitted, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If there are no further amendments to section b, it will pass.

Section b is passed. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section c:

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, this is the same provision as is now in article V, section 37 of the constitution, and the committee on legislative powers had the responsibility with respect to this section. I want to call on the chairman of the committee on legislative powers, Mr. Hoxie, if he or a member of his committee wishes to make a statement.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the chairman of the legislative powers committee, Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, as explained by Mr. Martin, Committee Proposal 46 was the primary responsibility of the executive department and the finance and taxation and legislative powers committees had concurrent jurisdiction of this proposal. Our particular section c, which is now under discussion, was section 37 of article V dealing with the subject of veto. We had a coordinating committee composed of our chairman of this committee, along with Mr. Downs, Mrs. Koeze and Mr. Wanger. At this time I yield to Mrs. Koeze for an explanation.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Grand Rapids, Mrs. Koeze.

MRS. KOEZE: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Hoxie, I would refer this committee to the journal, page 401, section c.

[The supporting reasons for section c were read by Mrs. Koeze. For text, see above, page 1636.]

For the committee of the whole, the item veto originated in the confederate constitution. This section of the executive article in the Michigan constitution originated in the 1907-08 constitution. In the debate on the item veto, some fear was expressed at that time that it was a very dangerous power to give the governor. However, those supporting the item veto pointed out it would prevent log rolling, and allow the governor to strike out unwarranted items without having to veto the entire appropriation bill.

In 1911, Governor Osborn started the practice of reducing appropriation items in addition to vetoing entire items. At that time a Pennsylvania court decision had interpreted a similar provision in the Pennsylvania constitution as authorizing the governor to reduce as well as to strike out items subject to legislative override. Later, courts in 5 other states denied this power to reduce items in the absence of specific constitutional authority to do so. During the administration of Governor Brucker—that is, in 1931—the Supreme Court of Michigan denied the governor of Michigan the power to reduce items in appropriation bills after this interpretation had been held for 20 years.

The procedure for the item veto in Michigan, as specified in article V, section 37, is not detailed. In 1951, the governor of Michigan signed and filed with the then secretary of state an appropriation bill with disapproved items indicated on the bill. Although the language of this section of the constitution might infer that this method of item vetoing, as used by the governor at this time and also used in some 41 other states was proper, an attorney general's opinion held that the veto of those items was not, and that the entire bill should have been returned to the legislature for its action on the items.

Forty-one states have, or provide for the governor to veto in appropriation bills. Alaska's constitution, one of the newer constitutions, is unique in that it requires 3/4 of its members elected to both houses, in joint session, to override the veto of an appropriation bill or items of an appropriation bill. The model constitution provides for an item veto in its finance article in connection with budget procedure. The United States constitution does not provide for an item veto.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman, are there any amendments on the desk?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: There are.

MR. HOXIE: I believe Delegate Hutchinson has an amendment there, has he not? I yield to Mr. Hutchinson.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hutchinson offers the following—

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, are we still on section c?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Yes, we are on c. Do you have an amendment?

MR. MARSHALL: I don't have a minority report. I just wanted to make a statement. I thought it might help expedite things to state that the minority agrees to the desirability of having this section in the provision.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Thank you, Mr. Marshall. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hutchinson offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 12, after "veto.", by inserting "The governor may reduce any item or items in any bill making appropriations of money embracing distinct items, and the item or items reduced shall be valid only to the lesser amount, unless repassed by the majorities in each house required for original passage of the bill.".

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the sponsor of the amendment, Delegate Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, Mrs. Koeze mentioned in her remarks that when the item veto was first written into the Constitution of Michigan in 1908, that it was apparently intended and certainly was interpreted for 20 years as including the right of the governor to reduce items as well as to strike them out entirely. She mentioned that it was not until 1931, in Governor Brucker's administration, that the supreme court interpreted this language very strictly and said that this power of item veto was the power to strike out completely but not the power to reduce. So that what had been supposed to be the law—that is, the meaning of the doctrine when it was first written into the constitution—and what was supposed to be its meaning for all the time between 1911, at least, when Governor Osborn first used it, and 1931, when Governor Brucker first tried to reduce these items, it was construed to be constitutional.

Now, I offer this amendment in the belief that this constitutional convention should again, at least, discuss and determine whether really the right to reduce items of appropriations is something that ought to be conferred upon the governor. I happen to believe that it is a good thing to provide him with the right to reduce items as well as to veto them completely. I feel that way because I am sure that there is a goodly percentage of the people of Michigan who are very earnestly desirous of what they call economy in government, and one way to effectuate economy is to let the governor have power to reduce, if he dares, the appropriations of the legislature.

The wording of this amendment is that if he sees fit to reduce an item, then he has to return that bill, together with that reduced item, back to the legislature, and then the legislature has the right to repass it. The legislature will have a right to repass it by the same majority required for original passage. In connection with overriding this reduction, we will not require a 2/3 vote. We will simply require the same majority as was required in the first instance. In most appropriation bills, the only majority required is what is known as a constitutional majority. That is a majority of the members elect and serving. In some bills, a 2/3 vote originally is required for an appropriation. For instance, when the legislature makes appropriations for the service activities of the several veterans' organizations in Michigan, that is construed to be a grant for private purposes, so it is necessary that a 2/3 vote of the members of each house be obtained in order to pass the bill originally. Well, if it was this kind of an item that the governor reduced, why then, of course, the legislature would be required to remove the reduction and lift it up to its original figure by a 2/3 vote, in that kind of an instance. But, by and large, it would require a simple majority vote of the members elect in order to say to the governor: well, you think we are appropriating too much but we don't think we are. The effect of this provision in the constitution would be to provide a method for the spotlight of public attention to be turned upon some appropriations which, in the opinion of the governor, might be a little bit more generous than necessary, and, as I say, this power, though probably sparingly used, would be a good thing, in my opinion, to vest in the governor, in the interest of economy in government.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Detroit, Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: May I ask a question of Delegate Hutchinson; 1 or 2, please?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If the delegate cares to answer.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Hutchinson, can you tell me if there are any other states, and if so, how many, that grant to the governor the right to reduce rather than veto outright?

MR. HUTCHINSON: Thank you, Mr. Marshall. I can, from this source material which was delivered to us at the beginning of the session. As a matter of fact, I brought this book up here to read it and then promptly forgot it.

MR. MARSHALL: I suspected that you could, and I wanted to give you the chance to explain it.

MR. HUTCHINSON: It says—and I quote—

> Several state constitutions have specific provisions authorizing the governor to reduce items by the veto procedure in addition to vetoing the whole item. Alaska, California, Hawaii, Massachusetts and Tennessee and the model state constitution have specific provisions for reduction of items. New Jersey and Missouri have provisions that operate with the same effect. While not specifically provided for in the constitutions of Pennsylvania and New York, the governor's power to reduce items appears to have been established in those 2 states of Pennsylvania and New York by precedent.

Does that answer it?

MR. MARSHALL: Then you would say that the overwhelming majority of the states do not have it, right?

MR. HUTCHINSON: I would have to concede that since it is only mentioned with regard to half a dozen states, I don't know about the others.

MR. MARSHALL: Then will you agree that just because a handful of states have it, that does not necessarily make it a good provision? I have one other question, and that is all.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Well, I don't know that I would just let that last statement go unchallenged, Mr. Marshall. I would reply to you this way, sir: I think that it is immaterial as to really what other states do.

MR. MARSHALL: I agree.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Whether it is good or not, it is, in our judgment, good for Michigan, yes.

MR. MARSHALL: Would this, in your opinion—supposing that you had a governor—and I can conceive of this happening—who might be antagonistic toward a given department or towards the universities. He could use this, under the amendment that you offer, to reduce the budget of the universities, for an example, if he so desired.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Well, Mr. Chairman, in answer to that, yes, he could, Mr. Marshall; but he would do it in the midst of a political arena whereby, number one, if he did it, probably all of the alumni association of that university would be right down on him. And, number two, it would go back to the legislature and the legislature might not sustain him.

MR. MARSHALL: Well, I would desire then to speak against the Hutchinson amendment, taking into consideration, of course, the statements made by Delegate Hutchinson, that he would do it in the limelight of the political arena and would be subject to answering to the people for it, and I do not believe the amendment is necessary. I can conceive that we would—I can see where a governor would be reluctant, probably, to do this, but I also cannot forget the situation that developed in the—when you talk about the alumni of the university being down on him and so forth, we could conceivably, some day, in this state have a governor similar to the one that the state of Louisiana had recently, where the only alumni were the people on Burbon street, and I would not want to see us get into the position of giving the governor the authority to reduce these appropriations for these institutions. So, I would urge you vote against the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. McCauley.

MR. McCAULEY: Mr. Chairman, through the Chair I would like to ask Mr. Hutchinson a question, if he cares to answer.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If he cares to answer.

MR. McCAULEY: It has been my understanding—and I am sure you can correct me if I am wrong—that most of these budgets and bills are submitted as line items. I am wondering about the practicability as to how this works out. When you are going to veto various items, are you using the word "item" synonymous with a line item that is submitted?

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, are we talking, Mr. McCauley, about a veto or about a reduction?

MR. McCAULEY: About a reduction.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Every appropriation bill, Mr. McCauley, has a good many lines in it, line items. They have it because, in Michigan, at least, we don't simply say there is hereby appropriated $290 million to be distributed among the several departments of state government as the governor may provide. We appropriate so much money for salaries and wages; so much money for supplies and materials; so much money for equipment; sometimes some additional line items to each and every department, and sometimes to divisions within departments. The general appropriation bills, of necessity, are like that, so there will be line items. They might not be as detailed as some people would like to see them. One time the legislature attempted even to specify what particular civil service rating each and every employee should have. Well, the courts told them—at least, the attorney general told them they couldn't go that far. So, it is impossible for the legislature to be too detailed, and, on the other hand, I think the items referred to in this language are clearly understood in Michigan governmental practice.

MR. McCAULEY: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, this is not a sudden brainstorm, I am sure, of Mr. Hutchinson. The right to make reductions has a long history in government, and, interestingly enough, it is not a political issue. On the national level, the presidents of recent years—starting with President Roosevelt, including President Truman and including President Eisenhower—have asked Congress to give the president this power in budgetary control. It was also advocated by the little Hoover commission as a means of budgetary control. It was recommended that congress enact it. It is part of the little Hoover recommendations which were not enacted. It, for years, has been recommended by the national municipal league and others, as they draw model budgetary laws for cities and counties. It has been recommended by the best financial authorities and incorporated in each issue of the model state constitution since the early '30s. It has a long history and originally Michigan was the forerunner when we put in the item veto and allowed it to be interpreted as the power to reduce. This would first be carrying out its use as it existed for a good many years in Michigan. It is also, by all known writers on this subject, considered to be an essential budgetary tool of the executive in controlling the legislature or controlling his duty to administer the finances of the state.

Certainly, if it is appropriate and recommended by the federal government for federal adoption, and if you will notice the states given by Mr. Hutchinson, it has been incorporated in several of the recent constitutions, because all authorities agree that this is an essential tool to effective financial management by the executive department. The reason why it has not been given to the president, notwithstanding the majority of the congress being of the same party as the president, boils down to jealousy, primarily, within the ways and means committee of each house of the federal legislature. Such abuses are the problem of a constitutional convention, and certainly, I heartily recommend that this convention adopt and give to the governor of Michigan a very essential budgetary tool.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Hatch.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct a question to Mr. Hutchinson, if I may.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If Mr. Hutchinson cares to answer.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Hutchinson, you stated that approximately a half dozen states do allow the governor to reduce items in appropriation bills. Can you tell us how many states in their constitutions provide that the legislature may override this reduction by a majority of each house in the legislature?

MR. HUTCHINSON: I don't know that I can from the information here, Mr. Hatch, I am sorry to say. Somewhere I got the impression that in some of them or somewhere or other it was provided that sometimes they didn't require anything more than a majority. Maybe I got that impression from talking with Mr. William Hanna relative to a model constitution or something.

MR. HATCH: Thank you, Mr. Hutchinson. I would oppose the amendment for 2 basic reasons: 1, I feel that it is unnecessary; and 2, I think it is undesirable. First of all, I think it is undesirable in the sense that if the legislature passes an appropriation bill with a given item in it by a majority of both houses, they certainly will pass the legislation in light of the recommendations of the governor as to how much that item should contain. To me, it seems useless, when the legislature well knows that the governor may not agree with what a given item should be, for them to pass it and then to have him reduce it and then have them pass it again. Secondly, I believe it is unnecessary because if the delegates will read ahead to section d of Committee Proposal 46, they will see that the governor is directed to reduce expenditures in the event revenues do not come up to expectations.

In other words, if revenues do not meet expectations, once the budget is in operation for a given fiscal year, the governor has the authority and is directed to reduce expenditures. I think this power is undesirable for the reason that once it is determined that an item is to be included in an appropriation, to my mind, the amount to be spent for such an item is a legislative function rather than an executive function, and that the only consideration should be, once the budget is in operation, whether revenues are sufficient to meet this appropriation. I feel that that has been covered in section d. Therefore, I respectfully oppose the amendment.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to answer Mr. Hatch, if I might.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Go ahead, Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: I would like to invite Mr. Hatch's attention to this fact: the records are replete with instances where the legislature has passed bills by a 2/3 vote and the governor has vetoed those bills and then the legislature has declined to pass the bill over his veto. There are members of the legislature who—while they might be for a bill in the first instance—if the governor vetoes it, perhaps are convinced by the merits of his argument and so on, and they don't vote to override him. That has been true of governors of both parties. It is not purely a Democratic-Republican split or anything. This has happened over the years, and I say the same thing conceivably could happen with regard to these appropriations, where an appropriation might be made at a particular level and then, after having the governor reduce, with his reasons and so on, only to come back and find out that perhaps not even a majority of the house or the senate, as the case may be, would want to go against the decisions of the governor, being convinced by the later information that he brings forth. Therefore, I don't think that your argument about it being a useless thing is valid. I think that you have to keep in mind that legislators are, to a certain extent, influenced by later information and arguments and so on, and also, sometimes, by the pure prestige and weight of the governor's office. If that can be exercised in the interest of economy, well and good.

You also made the second point, Mr. Hatch, that you conceived that it was the responsibility of the legislature to say what shall be spent. Well, on the other hand, I see another sentence along here somewhere that says that an appropriation shall not be construed to be a mandate to spend. An appropriation is a policy upper limit of expenditure, and therefore, at least, the philosophy of this amendment, as it stands, is that when the legislature appropriates money, it is not to be construed as a determination and a mandate by the legislature to go out and spend that amount. The mandate is that you shall not spend more than that amount. And so, I disagree with you on that point, too, I am sorry, Mr. Hatch.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Allen.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak in favor of the Hutchinson amendment and give an illustration of where I think it could be helpful. This illustration doesn't apply on the state level. I take it from the federal level, but I think the same thing could apply equally well in the state. Some years ago, about 6 years ago, a number of municipalities throughout the United States wanted appropriations from congress in connection with flood control. All of the projects which were proposed—before they could be enacted into law and translated into an appropriation—first had to be approved by the United States corps of engineers; at least this was the practice at that time. In the city of Kalamazoo, and a number of other cities in Michigan, the corps of engineers came in, made an investigation and determined that the project was fiscally sound. When it came time for congress to finally pass the legislation, a number of congressmen, without securing the approval of the corps of engineers, added on flood control projects of their own. Many of these projects were included without any investigation at all by the corps of engineers. On others, there had been a partial determination by the corps of engineers and a flat figure recommended. But, the congressional appropriation bill substantially increased the appropriation. So, the bill was finally enacted by congress. It went to the president who, at that time, was President Eisenhower. He looked the thing over and he was in a dilemma. He had a good number of municipalities which had secured the approval of the corps of engineers and the budget and the expenditures had been found to be sound. He had another set of communities where nothing had been done at all, and so he didn't know at all, and then he had a third set of areas—this would be the one involved in this kind of case—where there had been an investigation by the corps of engineers and a figure determined, but the congressional appropriation was substantially higher. Now, what was the president to do? He didn't have the power of a line item veto, as we give. He didn't have the power, as the Hutchinson amendment proposes, of reducing the figures which were too high down to a figure which had been estimated to be right by the corps of engineers. So what the president did was to veto—it is the only thing he could do— the whole thing. Now, when he vetoed the whole thing, he prejudiced the cities which had an approval, and that happened to include my own city of Kalamazoo. He put in doubt those communities which had secured an approval, but for a lower amount, and he threw out entirely where there was no approval at all.

I submit to you that if the President of the United States had had the power which the Hutchinson amendment proposes and which the majority proposal, as far as the line item veto, recommends, which we have had before, then those cities which had an amount which was determined to be correct could have gone ahead with their projects. Those other communities which had had an approval but for a lower amount could have gone ahead. And, therefore, I think that the amendment offered by Mr. Hutchinson can be of value in those cases where a governor would feel, based upon some sort of reliable fiscal evidence, which I am sure he would need—where the governor would be put in the position of either throwing the whole thing out and giving to the institution nothing at all, or giving it a reduced amount. I think this is the kind of flexibility which the Hutchinson amendment is designed to take care of. Therefore, I would favor it.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from St. Louis, Delegate Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I question the wisdom of adopting the proposed amendment. I am a firm believer in our 3 divisions of government. I believe that the legislature should assume their responsibilities, as well as the governor being the chief executive of the state, who is endowed with the power to carry out all the laws that are enacted.

I would like to call your attention to the fact that it is the responsibility of the executive to present to the legislature a recommended budget. It is also his responsibility to present to the legislature a tax program necessary to meet the recommended appropriations. On the other hand, it is the responsibility of the legislature to appropriate the moneys which, in their judgment, they feel are necessary for the operation of the state. It is also exclusively their authority to tax the people of the state of Michigan to meet those appropriations.

When we consider, if we may, the distinction between an item veto and the right to reduce items, those are completely 2 different subjects. Now, for many years—I don't know whether it was in our preceding constitution, but we know it was in the 1908 constitution—the matter of item veto was considered a wise provision in the constitution. We can refer to other constitutions that do have such an amendment as proposed here, but do we know about the method of operation in those particular states? It is difficult to read a document with the limited information and draw any reasonable conclusions. I say that the item veto, as we have it in our present constitution, has met the test. I question the wisdom, as I said before, of making any change, and I can see considerable danger involved by granting this authority to the governor.

Mr. Hutchinson said we will put the spotlight on the governor. I don't think the spotlight belongs there. It belongs on the legislature, the people that are elected by us back home to determine what the various agencies in state government should receive in the way of appropriations. I can visualize where, if a governor saw fit to believe that some of our educational institutions were receiving more funds than they should receive in comparison to some other educational institutions, he could use that reduction and it might not be wise, because your appropriating committees listen to all the arguments, all the discussion, the programs of our various schools of higher learning, and who is better able to determine the needs of those institutions? I say to you, be careful in adopting this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to reply to Mr. Hoxie in one statement. I think he misquoted me. I did not say that we would be turning the spotlight on the governor. I said we would be turning the spotlight on the appropriation which, in the opinion of the governor, was too high.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from East Lansing, Dr. Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, Mr. Hoxie has made part of the speech I intended to make, for which I am grateful. I recognize that what this committee is trying to do, I believe, is to give the governor a good deal of control over the fiscal policies and procedures of the state, and with that I am in full sympathy. I have no objection to the item veto. I am very much disturbed by the potential that Mr. Hutchinson's amendment places in the hands of the governor. It makes it possible for the governor, if he wishes, to determine, within a program of the university, what is not entitled to the degree of support that the legislature has determined it may be entitled to.

Many long years ago, Michigan had a very strong governor. We have had his biography distributed here. He decided after the legislature had made an appropriation for the cooperative extension service of this state, that the money would not be released for that purpose. The board of control of our university found it necessary to take the governor to the supreme court, and the supreme court ruled that this was outside the province of the governor and that the appropriation should be made available for the purposes for which it was made. Now, I recognize that this is not likely to happen very often, but there is the potential there.

I am very much concerned about some of the words in the next section which we will come to a little bit later. I would like to ask Mr. Hutchinson this question, through the Chair, if he thinks it is appropriate to give the governor the opportunity to reduce the appropriation, and if this is in the direction of giving the governor control of the fiscal policy of the state, would he also be willing to give the governor the opportunity to increase appropriations made by the legislature, provided the original recommendation was in his budget, as he presented it, and with the understanding that this increase would have to go back to the legislature in the same way as he provides in this amendment?

Now, it is very well to talk about the Constitution of the United States and the desires of the President of the United States, and the budget bureau of the United States to give the president control and say that this isn't a political issue because it has been demanded by Republican presidents and Democratic presidents and not granted to them, or to say that this is good fiscal policy at the township or county or city level; but we are talking about a constitution for the state of Michigan, to work here. If you watch how appropriations are made across the street in the state capitol, with the committee system as it operates in our state legislature, it is practically impossible for the governor to have included in the budget approved by the legislature any item that meets with the disapproval of the ways and means committee, or of the appropriations committee—ways and means of the house or the appropriations committee of the senate. Someone may say, any member of the legislature can rise on the floor and make an amendment to an appropriation measure. But the fact of the matter is that with the committee system as it operates, it is practically impossible to change, by a single dollar, an appropriation figure as it is voted out by the ways and means committee or by the appropriations committee.

So, if we are going to be consistent and if we are going to give the governor fiscal responsibility, I will go along with Mr. Hutchinson on his amendment if he will take the next step and permit the governor to add or increase an item with the understanding that this, too, becomes effective only when it is approved by the legislature. Without that I am opposed to the amendment. In any event, I think the members of this committee want to think very seriously before they place in the hands of the governor what I see they may be placing in his hands through the adoption of this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Dr. Hannah, did you direct a question to Mr. Hutchinson?

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Yes.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Do you want him to answer it?

MR. J. A. HANNAH: If he will.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, as Mr. Hannah well knows, the price of his support is too high. I would not agree to that kind of an arrangement, as well he knew when he asked the question. I would also like to testify here, so that those of you who haven't been in the legislature will not carry forth any false impressions, that I can think of numerous times when, at least in the senate—now, it has been a long time since I have been in the house, and my memory is fading as to that—but numerous times during my experience in the senate when appropriations have been increased on the floor of the senate, Dr. Hannah, over the recommendations of the appropriations committee of the senate.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Detroit, Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Delegate Hoxie and Delegate Hannah more adequately said what I had planned to say. I think that it was brought out that by logic, if this were done one way it should be a 2 way street. I do feel that there is the danger that a university appropriation could be made and then the governor try to carve out a department of that university budget, even though the legislature and the regents or governing body of that constitutional body had approved it. I would therefore oppose the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Pontiac, Mr. Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I rise in opposition to the amendment. I think we are going to go too far in trying to give the governor this much power. I am one that believes in a separation of powers, and in reply to Mr. Allen I would say that the problem that President Eisenhower faced can be solved by the item veto which the federal government does not provide the President of the United States. Since we do have this item veto, this problem would not arise in the state of Michigan and therefore, I am opposed to this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I don't want to divert the discussion, but I have a piece of incidental intelligence. Mr. Batchelor returned from the men's rest room not too long ago, where a group of small boys were discussing the proceedings on the convention floor after the long series of amendments which we had, and he tells me that one of them said, "Say," he said, "you know that fellow with the gray hair, he must be a communist. He's against everything that anybody wants to do." (laughter) I just want you to know that I am not a communist and I am not against everything that everybody wants to do, except when they want to amend my committee report.

Commenting on Mr. Hutchinson's amendment, I can't express an opinion for the committee because the committee has not met. I have talked with a number of members of the committee and I find some diversity of point of view, so I can only express my personal opinion. I think the amendment is not harmful, as some of the delegates have suggested. However, in its present form, so that a reduction can be repassed by the same majority which originally passed the bill, it seems to me that it adds very little to the present situation, and in view of the fact that the committee did consider this, and did put into section d of the committee proposal certain provisions with respect to the reduction of expenditures, I think those matters have been taken care of and I doubt that there is a real and burning necessity for this amendment. For that reason, I shall vote against the amendment, but I don't think it contains the elements of harm that some delegates have seen.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Hutchinson amendment. A division has been called for. Is there support? Sufficient number is up. All those who are in favor of the Hutchinson amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Hutchinson, the yeas are 49; the nays are 56.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is not adopted. Are there any further amendments to section c?

SECRETARY CHASE: None on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Are there any further amendments to section c? If not, it will be passed.

Section c is passed. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Section d.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I yield to Mr. Karn for an explanation.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The chairman yields to Mr. Karn.

MR. KARN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee:

I would like to yield to Delegate Shackleton, please, for comments on this section.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Shackleton of Saginaw.

MR. SHACKLETON: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Karn, delegates, the first sentence, "No appropriation shall be deemed a mandate to spend" coincides with the commonly accepted thinking in the field of government finance. It conveys the idea later expressed that there should be authority to reduce or eliminate expenditures if unforeseen efficiencies or economies can be accomplished or in the case of emergencies after the budget has been approved by the legislature. An example would be emergency committees or commissions which were set up during the war. The war having terminated, the governor would have the right to terminate by means of reducing the expenditures rather than saying that those commissions had to spend out for the year. Our auditor general, in his financial report, part 1, for some years has included a statement which in his opinion merited repetition, which points out from his experience why this sentence should be incorporated: "Appropriations for operating costs are generally construed to be permissive rather than mandatory as to the amount appropriated."

The second sentence:

> The governor shall reduce expenditures of executive agencies whenever it appears that actual revenues for a fiscal period will fall below the revenue estimates on which appropriations for that period were based, such reductions in expenditures to be made in accordance with procedures established by law.

If actual revenues fall short of anticipated revenues, obviously budget estimates will be out of balance. To prevent repeated deficits, it is necessary to (a) obtain additional funds from taxes, or (b) reduce expenditures even though the legislature has made appropriations. There is a distinction between appropriations and expenditures. Obviously it is too late to obtain additional taxes when experience in any one current year shows that revenues will be short of appropriations. It is the duty of the governor to carry out the laws passed by the legislature which, among others, includes the laws regarding taxes or the obtaining of funds for operating expenses. It is also his duty to see that the various phases of the state's operations are carried out and paid for in accordance to the appropriations bill or bills. Thus the governor is charged with administering the budget after the budget is adopted by the legislature. If the income in the current year is insufficient to meet all the appropriations, obviously the governor would be one of the first to know and appreciate that there might be an impending deficit. Under the provision of this sentence, he may then adjust expenditures, not appropriations which have formerly been determined by the legislature. Adjusting expenditures would be permissible then to (a) take care of efficiency or economy changes and emergencies, and (b) try to assure the balancing of the budget. In the last few years, the legislature has directed in their appropriations bills that the governor do just this, but their direction has not been carried out because of the possibility that to do so would be in violation of and not within his power under the 1908 constitution.

The last sentence of section d, "The governor's power to reduce expenditures shall not apply to the legislative and judicial branches or to those services for which funds are mandated by this constitution." This provision protects the separation of powers doctrine by prohibiting the governor from reducing the expenditures for the legislative or judicial branches of government. This section d thus brings the proposed constitution up to date by conforming to the practice of 41 states, 16 of which thus provide in their constitutions. The last 3 state constitutions to be adopted, Alaska, Hawaii and Missouri, have included this provision.

It has often occurred where agencies that might have a surplus at the end of a fiscal year deliberately plan not to let any of their funds revert to a general fund for fear their budget requests for the ensuing year might be reduced. A provision in this section would make that procedure more difficult in a year when it would seem apparent that the budget might not be balanced. This proposal provides for the governor to be a true executive in carrying out the mandates of the legislature in keeping with sound, financial practice. Remember, we are not giving the governor control over appropriations, only expenditures under emergency conditions. This section is one more step in helping to make a strong governor, making him responsible and giving him one of the tools toward this end. Another section proposes control of balanced budgets and this section is an aid not only to assist in that control but also an aid toward sound business administration. These proposals have been concurred in by the committee on finance and taxation and the committee on legislative powers.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: That is all we have to present at this point, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will now recognize one of the sponsors of the minority report, Mr. Marshall, of Detroit.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates:

[The supporting reasons for the minority report to section d were read by Mr. Marshall. For text, see above, page 1637.]

My friends and fellow delegates, I urge you—I urge you, very sincerely—to take a close look, take a close look at the majority proposal; study it, analyze it. I believe that if you do you will have to come to the conclusion of supporting the minority report. At this time, Mr. Chairman, I would like to yield the floor to Delegate Austin.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I was worried about section a of this proposal. I don't mind admitting that I am even more worried about section d. I agree with practically all of the comments that were made by Mr. Marshall, and I am somewhat disturbed that we are promoting legislative irresponsibility. I think more than any other issue it was the problem of revenue shortage in the state of Michigan that prompted the people of the state of Michigan to order this constitutional convention. The people were somewhat concerned that the legislature either did not have the power or refused to exercise the power to raise sufficient revenues to pay the cost of government. I am not contending that the revenue shortage problem is the most important problem that we face at this convention, but I think we will all agree that it was the one which got the people of Michigan interested in revising the basic document. Now what we are seeking to do is to provide an escape hatch for the legislature by putting the onus, as Delegate Marshall has indicated, on the governor to reduce expenditures where the legislature has failed to provide sufficient tax revenue. I am worried about this because we are again attempting to write into the constitution some new ideas and procedures that I don't think should be in the constitution, and I would again like to ask a few questions about this language, if for no other reason than to clear the record.

There were 3 proponents of the majority proposal who spoke on this and I don't know which to address my questions. I will ask the first question and then any of the 3, Mr. Martin, Mr. Karn or Mr. Shackleton, may answer if they desire to do so, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: You better designate one of them so we will know who you want.

MR. AUSTIN: Well, Mr. Chairman, you should not give me that prerogative. I might pick the one that I would rather debate with.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: He has a right to refuse to answer, you know.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, my first question is, is it the intent of the proponents of the majority proposal that the legislature shall set down in some precise detail how expenditures are to be reduced? Shall I address the question—

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Is that your first question?

MR. AUSTIN: That is my first question.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: We will refer it to the chairman of the committee then, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Austin, this is exactly what is proposed, and that is made clear by the language in lines 16 and 17, that "such reductions in expenditures to be made in accordance with procedures established by law." It is intended that the legislature should exercise a supervisory responsibility over any reductions that the governor might make and just specify how he should make such reductions.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, I think I interpreted the language in the same way. My next question is, I don't see any indication of the legislature in any way designating, according to the language here, what expenditures are to be reduced. Is it the intention of the committee that the legislature shall spell out in some precise detail what expenditures shall be reduced, or is this left entirely up to the governor?

MR. MARTIN: That same authority is given to the legislature. They can specify what appropriations may be reduced as well as how they may be reduced.

MR. AUSTIN: Well, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, as I read the language, it does not say anything about what expenditures. It refers only to what procedures shall be followed in making these reductions.

MR. MARTIN: The word "procedures" is a broad word, Mr. Austin. It is intended to give the legislature broad authority, since it is the appropriating body, to determine to what extent, how much, how fast and in exactly what way these reductions may be made. They can determine that broadly or they can determine that narrowly, but it is in the hands of the legislature.

MR. AUSTIN: All right, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, my next question is, who, under this provision, determines whether there is a deficit, that is, whether there is an impending deficit, and that it is therefore necessary to reduce expenditures?

MR. MARTIN: The governor is given that responsibility, Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Not the legislature?

MR. MARTIN: Not the legislature, no.

MR. AUSTIN: The governor will make the determination that revenues are to be reduced and we do not expect the legislature to make this determination?

MR. MARTIN: The legislature is not really in a position to make the determination because the legislature has gone home. The legislature is not in session, presumably, and the governor is, on the other hand, entirely cognizant of the expenditures that are being made and the revenues that are flowing in. The governor is a part and head, of course, of the executive branch, and that is his responsibility as the chief administrator of that branch. The legislature is not geared, or staffed, or set up to deal with that kind of a question.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, we are going to then expect the governor to make the decision that certain expenditures must be reduced because revenues are not adequate, and it is up to the legislature to lay the ground rules, is that correct?

MR. MARTIN: That is correct.

MR. AUSTIN: The governor will not be able to provide any ground rules for making these determinations, that is to be left to the legislature?

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Austin, that is correct.

MR. AUSTIN: Well, Mr. Chairman and Mr. Martin, what about raising additional tax revenues? Is there no indication here that the governor would have the right, at any point here, to indicate that the legislature ought to provide additional revenue instead of reducing expenditures?

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Austin, certainly. The contemplation is that the governor has 2 avenues to pursue: one is to reduce expenditures in the manner prescribed by the legislature if revenues are not flowing in as estimated, but the governor has the responsibility and always has that responsibility if he decides that a better course would be to increase revenues, to call the legislature back into session by special message and ask them for additional tax legislation.

MR. AUSTIN: Well, Mr. Chairman and Mr. Martin, I would like to read this language just to let you see what I see as a danger in what we have before us.

> The governor shall reduce expenditures of executive agencies whenever it appears that actual revenues for a fiscal period will fall below the revenue estimates on which appropriations for that period were based, such reductions in expenditures to be made in accordance with procedures established by law.

There is nothing said here at all about the governor having the prerogative to request additional revenue. I asked this question, Mr. Martin, for a specific reason. We are apparently by this—and you can correct me if I am wrong—directing the governor now to reduce expenditures when it appears as though there is not going to be sufficient revenue, and there is no suggestion to him that he may seek additional revenue. Am I correct?

MR. MARTIN: Well, Mr. Austin, it seems to me implicit in the governor's powers that he has the alternative to request the legislature to raise additional revenue which would make it unnecessary for him to reduce expenditures.

MR. AUSTIN: Except here we say he shall reduce expenditures. Mr. Chairman, I think those are all of the questions that I have on this, but I certainly would like to reiterate that it is my view that we are getting into serious difficulty by including this language in the constitution. I don't know how it can be interpreted otherwise, except that the governor now has the onus of responsibility to reduce expenditures whenever it appears that actual revenues for a fiscal period will fall below estimates, and whether he makes any effort whatever to get the legislature to increase revenues, he still has this responsibility to reduce expenditures, and it would appear to me that this is a very definite escape hatch for the legislature. I certainly would oppose section d as it was submitted by the committee, and support the minority report that this language be stricken from the proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I yield to Delegate Snyder, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall yields to Delegate Snyder.

MR. SNYDER: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I rise in support of the minority report and I would like to refresh the memories of the delegates as to a remark that was made this morning by the proponents of the majority report to the effect that the action taken and the overall effects of this proposal would serve as a basis for some subsequent decisions that could be made by the committee on finance and taxation. This obviously would bring us in the area of earmarking funds, and the various other limitations prescribed. So I say to you that when you make your final decision, bear in mind the remarks that were made.

I also would like to say that it is my opinion that the minority report also has in consideration the good financial management aspects. They are also interested in the sound fiscal policies that have been expounded by the other speakers here.

I sincerely hope that the section, as presented by the majority of the committee, and as proposed to be amended by the minority of the committee, does not pass. I feel that if the minority report amendment does not pass, the committee on style and drafting will have to take a look at the proposition that we will have before us, and I feel here that they will be in a quandry, indeed, because their committee must deal with the extraneous language and that language which is not consistent with the balance of the proposal and the reports submitted by this committee. I feel that the language, to a large degree, is repugnant. It does not reflect the confidence that we should have in our elected officials. I have with me a record that was submitted recently through one of the local newspapers, and I submit that if we look at the record and if we observe it closely, the record will show that good, elected public officials do stand up to their responsibilities in times of emergency. Secondly, the existing statutes already provide for the authority we are being asked to put into the constitution. Three, there is a sound rationale to support keeping the budget items on a cycle rather than on an annual phase. Fourth and last, but not least, there must be a statutory flexibility rather than constitutional restrictions in order to assure that the long range planning and the optimum benefits of the tax moneys we receive can be fully utilized.

This is a record that I have reference to, and I think it is very interesting to note that in one small current event item that many of the delegates may have missed, it carries an important message. It ties up, in a few short paragraphs, many of the problems that we have had presented to us today, and it certainly gives firsthand the manner in which the legislature and the executive branch do operate when they are removed from the curtilage of the constitutional convention. I have specific reference to a newspaper article that appeared as recently as January 6 in the Detroit News. The subject matter was the unspent mental health funds, and the legislative position.

> Governor Swainson faced a mental health battle today over $4,695,000 in unspent money that the administrators say they were barred by law from using. Criticism from 2 Republican lawmakers about the money came as Swainson prepared to ask for more millions to meet Michigan's mental health needs.

The article goes on to point out that the money was not being used. Certainly this is diametrically opposed to the effect that the present majority committee proposal would try to point out. And I think this is a very good demonstration of what we have confronting us here.

> In answer to this, Charles F. Wagg, the state mental health director, explained that the unused dollars that were allowed to lapse since 1956 and 1957 were due primarily to the fact that these moneys could not be used. "We couldn't," reported Wagg. "Until 1958 and '59, the mental health budget was line itemed into 176 separate accounts. Funds were not transferable and an excess in a salary fund could not be used to supplement a depleted food fund." Wagg said surpluses often appeared in fuel accounts during light winters and some money was accumulated when positions were vacant. Budgets in all agencies are prepared 18 months before they go into effect. "Long range cost planning of new buildings," he said, "is often thrown out of kilter by prices when construction starts and ends."

I think we should emphasize this:

> "About $1 million of Pears' lapsed money figure," he said, "came during the 1959 cash crisis when Governor Williams and the department of administration ordered economies regardless of appropriations available."

Here, I say to you delegates, brother and sister delegates, we have graphic and firsthand proof that when you do have emergencies, that when you have elected officials who are willing to step up to their responsibility, they meet the challenges before us, and this is a matter of documentation.

Now, Delegate Marshall and Delegate Austin have covered my points on some of the other matters contained in section d. But I would like, in closing, to just touch briefly on the item contained in lines 12 and 13. This, I feel, is class legislation, and it is personified to its optimum. Here we have a situation where the judicial and the legislature are completely excluded from the controls set up in this, and the only valid argument that was presented by the proponents of the majority of the committee were that they did not agree that this was wrong; their only defense was, this was such a small item it only amounted to 1 per cent. Because of the smallness of this item, we could agree to go along, but we could not overlook it. I submit to you that regardless of the size of the wrong, it is still wrong.

In the material contained in lines 14 and 17 of the proposal—in which it would be mandatory to reduce the expenditures regardless of public interest—I think it has been very well pointed out to us, who are we and who are they to say that when it comes to public interest we must put the economy ahead of the needs of the people? I feel that we have a very vital need here, and it is my opinion that section d, as it is presented at the present time, would do an irreparable harm to the people of Michigan and certainly, in view of the arguments established very eloquently by Delegates Marshall and Austin, I would urge the defeat of the majority proposal and support of the minority report.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I want to again urge all of the delegates to give serious consideration to the minority report. I think that we should be flexible. I am weary of seeing this constitutional convention continue, time and time again, to legislate in the constitution. If we want to be legislators—those of you that do—then run for the legislature. Support our minority report. Do not undermine the separation of powers doctrine. Do not encourage legislative irresponsibility in political situations by adopting the majority report. In conclusion, I would like to just quote from Alexander Hamilton, "Constitutions should consist only of general provisions. The reason is that they must necessarily be permanent and they cannot calculate for the possible change of things."

Thank you for your patience in listening to the minority report. I again urge your serious and sincere consideration.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Owosso, Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I am delighted to hear members of the minority party start quoting from Alexander Hamilton. This is the first time I have ever had that privilege, I believe.

Mr. Chairman, for the benefit of those people who may have either read the supporting reasons of the minority on pages 542 and 3 of the journal, or who had heard it read so eloquently by my good friend from Taylor township, Mr. Marshall, I would like to point out that I have noticed in there a rather serious and recurring inconsistency. I started to count, Mr. Chairman, the number of times that the minority report speaks of cutting appropriations, and I counted up to 7 times and I lost count. I would suggest to my friend from Taylor township that he examine with care section d of the committee report and he will find, I am sure, that nowhere in the committee report does it talk about cutting appropriations. It does talk about reducing expenditures which, I submit, as was borne out previously by the gentleman from Saginaw, Mr. Shackleton, is a completely different item from an appropriation.

An appropriation is something that is submitted by the governor, as we have provided for in section a, or in a private bill by one of the members of the legislature. It is passed in the legislature and signed by the governor into law, and then it becomes in effect. Then, once the appropriation becomes a matter of law, the question of the rate of expenditure is entirely in the hands of the executive branch of the government and the chief executive. This is his prerogative. I submit, as I say to my friend, even though he is engrossed at the moment in a serious conversation, there is a vast difference between an appropriation and an expenditure, and I hope that he does realize that difference because I do not believe that when he drafted this minority report he appeared to be fully aware of that distinction.

All we are asking in section d of the committee proposal, Mr. Chairman, is that during the course of the fiscal year for which an appropriation or appropriations have been made, that the governor, as he should be doing in any event, should be making a careful survey of revenues. If it should appear, during the course of that fiscal year, that revenues will fall below prior estimates, and that, of course, can be readily foreseen when tax collections come in, that he then endeavor to reduce his spending program accordingly. In other words, that if he has notice that revenues are not up to his original estimates, that he will then not go ahead and conform to his original estimates of spending; if he knows or has reason to believe the revenues will fall below the estimates which he originally set forth, that he thereby endeavor to reduce his spending accordingly. There is no mandate, as we have said in this original sentence of the section, that every penny that is appropriated by the legislature and signed into law by the governor has got to be spent in the present fiscal or the current fiscal year.

I respectfully submit, Mr. Chairman, that it is not a question, necessarily, of eliminating this expenditure or that program; it is a matter which has been practiced before and can be practiced again very easily, of the so called "stretch out." In other words, for example, if a building program is involved, it is very possible to spread that building program from one fiscal year into the next fiscal year and thereby endeavor to make the expenditures conform more closely to the revenues. That is all we are suggesting. That is all we are trying to require the chief executive to do. That is all we are proposing here in section d of the committee proposal; that when the chief executive knows or has reason to believe that his original estimates of tax revenues were overestimated, and he sees, during the course of the fiscal year, that revenues are not coming in at the rate that he originally believed them to be and presented those beliefs to the legislature, that he then reduce the expenditures or stretch his expenditures out to conform to the reduced tax revenues.

Of course, he does have the option, as was stated by the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin, that if there is a serious gap between revenues and proposed expenditures, he then, of course, has the option of calling a special session of the legislature and requesting additional revenues or during the next regular session of the legislature of setting up a supplemental appropriation bill which we have provided for in section b. That is all this proposal is intended to do. It is not intended to upset the balance of power, the constitutional separation of the executive and the legislative, because it does maintain in the governor his traditional right to control the rates of expenditures. But what we are asking is that he do endeavor to limit and control those rates of expenditures to revenues as he sees the revenues coming in over the course of the fiscal year. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Karn.

MR. KARN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I would like to point out that one of the benefits of section d is for use during emergencies. Everyone realizes that we have emergencies which may cause a reduction in income. We may have emergencies which may cause an increase in expenditures, but whatever an emergency might be, where it is evident that the revenues seem to be less than those that were originally estimated to such an extent that something should be done, it gives the governor the power to step in and take control of the situation. The governor is surrounded by a staff that certainly has the ability to estimate revenues and keep in touch with the situation, and I don't think we need to worry too much about how the estimates might be made.

There has been throughout the minority report, some indication that the legislature may be, to some extent, bypassed. I have here, to show that the legislature is very much in sympathy with the second sentence in section d, a bill which is enrolled house bill 208 of the regular session of 1961, State of Michigan, seventy-first legislature, and here is a sentence that I want to read which I have been told has appeared in most bills of this nature during the past 3 years. I must say there hasn't been too much attention paid to it because I didn't think there was any constitutional right. It is a sentence that is very much like the second sentence in section d, and it reads as follows:

> The governor is hereby authorized and directed to make such reductions and allotments as he deems necessary to keep the total expenditures for any fiscal year within the total revenues available for such fiscal year.

That is very similar to the statement that we have used in our second sentence. It gives the governor the power to step in when there are emergencies that warrant his attention. To me, the comments made by the minority report go far beyond the section d which you have had read to you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Just a brief answer to Delegate Bentley. As they would say in Brooklyn, I didn't quite get the "pernt" that he was talking to. However, Delegate Bentley, we are, in this section, in the way you want to refer to it—I appreciate your explaining to me the difference between appropriations and expenditures, and I am quite sure that some of the other delegates that didn't understand it either might also appreciate it—but we are still talking about money, and a rose by any other name smells the same to me. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I too wish to make it clear that I appreciate the explanation made by the chairman of our education committee, a distinguished delegate that pointed out the difference between expenditures and appropriations, and I want him to know that I am perfectly satisfied with that explanation and I am sure that when the universities get their cuts, that the professors and particularly the economics professors will be perfectly satisfied and understand that when they get no check, or a reduction, that is simply because the appropriation was there but not the expenditure.

But what I am concerned about, Mr. Chairman, is when Dr. Hannah has to reduce the feed for the cows. How are you going to get across to the cows that they got the appropriations but not the expenditure? (laughter) In fact, if I could refer to Dr. Anspach, this reminds me of a story. (laughter) A funny thing happened to me on the way to the convention. I was talking to a friend of mine and he talked about a farmer and his cow, and I want to assure the delegates that this was not a Michigan cow. The farmer was not a delegate to this convention and was not a citizen of Michigan. The farmer was having trouble, not so much with his appropriations, but his expenditures. So, what he did was give the cow some sawdust with the grain, and it wasn't working out very well, and I guess it was some—I am sure not from the extension service—and another farmer, outside of Michigan, said, "Well, the trouble was you didn't put the green glasses on the cow. That's what I did to mine. And the first day I mixed about 5 per cent sawdust with the grain; it worked out fine. The second day, about 10 per cent sawdust and I kept increasing the sawdust but kept the green glasses on the cow." The other farmer asked, "How did it work out?" and he said, "Just fine. There was just one little flaw." The first farmer asked, "What's that?" He said, "Well, after 30 days, the cow died." (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the minority report. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Pursuant to the minority report of Mr. Marshall, Miss Hart and Mrs. Daisy Elliott.

Mr. Marshall offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 13, by striking out all of section d.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Everybody has been dealing with the fact that the legislature could pass the buck here, but I am concerned, as some conservatives might be, with the power that this gives to the chief executive of the state. It says that the governor shall reduce, whenever it appears—now, this is the language. When it says "it appears", when it appears to him that there is a need to reduce, and I suggest to you that our history—and I don't speak simply of our American history, but our English heritage as well—that the idea of leaving to the prerogative of the chief executive, whether it be the governor or the king, the right to make judgments which are not inherent in his office, but which are delegated to him are not in our best interests, and I want to call your attention to the fact that during the reign of Charles I, it appeared to him that there was an emergency and ship money was collected, and there were many people throughout the countryside of England that objected violently when they said there was no emergency. But who was to question the royal will of the king when he says there is an emergency? And so, I have heard it said here today that one of the benefits of this proposal is that it has the benefit of use during emergencies. Emergencies to be determined by whom? To be determined by the chief executive.

Here you are giving to the chief executive of the state the right to determine something which he, alone, will be responsible for. I suggest to you that this is an unwarranted grant of power on the part of this convention; that this is an unwarranted grant of power to any chief executive; that the people of England in 1641 to 1649 rebelled against this unwarranted grant of power, and many people fled to this country in the ensuing years. Our heritage has been one of limiting the rights of the governors whether it be the colonial governor or later the governor set up by state constitutions. Let us not revert back to the days of the Stuarts in this grant of royal power. (applause)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the adoption of the minority report amendment, which is to strike out section d of Committee Proposal 46.

MR. HODGES: A division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: A division has been called for. Is there support? Sufficient number up. All those who are in favor of the minority report amendment which is to strike out section d of Committee Proposal 46 will vote aye, and those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the minority report amendment to strike out all of section d, the yeas are 35; the nays are 80.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is not adopted. For what purpose does the gentleman rise, Mr. Hubbs?

MR. HUBBS: I rise to a personal privilege, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: State it.

MR. HUBBS: As a former citizen of New York state, I resent the language which Mr. Marshall incorrectly attributes to Brooklyn. "Pernt" is down east, and down east is way down on Cape Cod. In Brooklyn the people say, "See the boids sitting on the coib stones eating squoimy woims." (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: For what purpose does the gentleman from Detroit rise?

MR. HODGES: I have a question to ask the committee chairman, if he desires to answer.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: What does it pertain to?

MR. HODGES: Section d. I was just wondering what power or grant of power restriction or what possible use is the first sentence in section d?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: I am sorry, Mr. Chairman. I did not understand the question.

MR. HODGES: The first sentence, "No appropriation shall be deemed a mandate to spend." I am just wondering what power this gives or restriction.

MR. MARTIN: This does not grant any power, Mr. Hodges. This is simply a statement of policy, and it does not apply to any particular governor. It is not intended as a reflection upon any of our recent past governors, as the minority report seems to imply. It is simply a statement of policy and intended to apply to the situation generally, without reference to any particular person or individual.

MR. HODGES: Well, Mr. Chairman, I submit that any language in the constitution should have a purpose and I fail to see the purpose here. At best this is merely useless and, at worse, it is sort of a gratuitous insult. I would say that if we were to engage in this type of petty cliches, the minority might put in a sentence, "The legislature should remember to be penny wise and pound foolish" or something of that sort. It seems to me that we could well do without this. I appreciate Mr. Martin's comment, that this is not to be offered as an insult to any of the previous governors or executives, but I think it is something that we can well do without. I am sure every governor, anyone who attains the office of governor in this state, be he Republican or Democrat or of any other party, realizes this, and we are just putting excess verbiage in. Therefore, I would move at this time to strike the first sentence.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Will the delegate put his amendment in writing? We have 2 other amendments ahead of that, Mr. Hodges.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, we have 2 other amendments and Mr. Hodges' amendment, and it doesn't look as though we can finish in the immediate future. I move the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The chairman of the committee has moved that the committee of the whole do now rise. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, Vice President Hutchinson resumed the Chair.]

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate from Genesee, Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration a proposal of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 46, A proposal pertaining to the executive budget and item veto; has considered several amendments thereto, and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee on emerging problems will meet this evening, March 14, in committee room I, third floor, at 7:30 p.m. Mr. Frank Millard, chairman.

We have the following requests for leave. Mr. Higgs wishes to be excused from the afternoon session of Thursday and all day Friday and the session of Monday, March 19, because of his participation in federal court trials; and Mr. Everett wishes to be excused from the sessions of Friday, Monday and Tuesday.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, the requests will be granted. The Chair hears no objection and the requests are granted. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I would like to make inquiry at this time, through the Chair, to the secretary or whoever else would consider such a matter, to see if a method couldn't be devised so that we could more readily have available to us the language of the proposals as they are finally amended and submitted to the committee on style and drafting for ready comparison with the language that comes back from style and drafting at the time that we go into the second reading, so that as we go through these sections we can see what changes were made in the committee on style and drafting, in view of the fact that not all of us have complete notes on the amendments that were made.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The delegate is informed that each proposal is printed in the journal in the precise form in which it goes to style and drafting, and so it is available to you at that point.

MR. FORD: I understand this. However, the journals are spread out now for several months going back to the first one that was referred by the education committee, and in order to facilitate this, if we could have them reprinted in some form so that they can be readily compared, perhaps we could have an analysis made with a directory that we could use at our desk as we proceed.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair is informed that each delegate is now furnished a status of committee proposals, and your status would reflect to you where those that have been referred to style and drafting—where that reference was made.

MR. FORD: Thank you.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. President, I have received in the new file book—and I believe I just got this the last day—the title with the second reading, which I understand does show the differences, which does facilitate showing what style and drafting has done. Is that correct?

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: That is correct, Mr. Downs.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Wood wishes to be excused from Friday's session to keep a speaking engagement in Detroit.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Is there objection to the request of the delegate from Huron? The Chair hears none and it is so granted. Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. President, I notice that Mr. Lawrence was very successful in getting a stand here for use, and I was informed a week ago that all the microphones here would have one. I wonder what has happened with regard to that matter.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Faxon, will you suggest to Mr. Apol that he take the stand that is in the far corner over there by Mr. Hubbs at a microphone that is never used, and he can transfer it over to you.

What is the pleasure of the convention? The Chair recognizes the delegate from Marquette, Mr. Richards.

MR. L. W. RICHARDS: Mr. President—

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Just a minute Mr. Richards. Mr. Hubbs, did you wish to speak?

MR. HUBBS: Mr. President, I might add that I am happy to have the stand go because I do so little talking. (laughter)

MR. L. W. RICHARDS: Mr. President, after having experienced a day of noncontroversial items, I move we adjourn.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The gentleman from Marquette, Mr. Richards, moves that the convention do now adjourn. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The motion prevails and the convention stands adjourned until tomorrow morning at 9:30 a.m.

[Whereupon, at 4:55 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 9:30 o'clock a.m., Thursday, March 15, 1962.]

ONE HUNDREDTH DAY

Thursday, March 15, 1962, 9:30 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation this morning will be given by the pastor of the church of one of our delegates, Mr. Davis, the Reverend Veder Bass of the Aurelius Baptist Church. Will you please rise.

REVEREND BASS: Shall we pray. Almighty God, we thank Thee this morning for this privilege that You have given us that we may come before Thee beseeching that You might answer our prayers and that Thy will be done in each and every one of our lives. We thank Thee, O God, this morning for these delegates from the various districts and various walks of life which You have called together, our Father, that they may chart the course of this great state.

O God, this morning we pray that You may cast from our minds individualism and, our Father, we pray Thy blessing that these activities, and the things that are accomplished, might be for Thy glory. We ask these things in Jesus' name and for His sake. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Will those present please vote aye.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the delegates are excused.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please be in order. Communications.

SECRETARY CHASE: No communications.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Referred to the committee on rules and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all the resolutions on file.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, at this time I would like to move that when the convention has considered Committee Proposal 78 dealing with the legislative auditor general that we then proceed to consider the following committee proposals: Committee Proposal 70; Committee Proposal 75; Committee Proposal 72; Committee Proposal 48; Exclusion Report 2027; Committee Proposal 74; Committee Proposal 77; and Committee Proposal 76.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Martin for consideration of proposals.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Just a minute, Mr. Marshall. Mr. Chase, would you read this again? Then the Chair will recognize you, Mr. Marshall.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Martin has proposed —

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. President, I did not hear the first reading of Mr. Martin's motion.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Would you repeat, Mr. Martin? Would you care to give a further explanation?

MR. MARTIN: Yes. Yes, of course. What I am proposing, Mr. Leibrand, is that after we consider the next proposal on the final calendar, which is the proposal with respect to the legislative auditor general, that we then pass to the consideration of the numbered proposals which are the veto power of the governor; compensation of state officers; compensation of the acting governor; dual office holding; an exclusion report that deals with that; the board of fund commissioners, state auditors and escheats; governor's residence; and local civil service; the remainder of the calendar then to follow in that order now on the final calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President, I am at a complete loss to understand the maneuver by our honorable committee chairman. I had discussed the order of business on the executive branch with the chairman. He had advised me that we would follow the order as set forth on general orders in the calendar. It is obvious to me — I see no reason and I am speaking against the motion made by Mr. Martin. We are well prepared to proceed with the debate on the issues as they appear on the general orders — it is becoming rather obvious to me, Mr. Martin, that you fellows do not know from one day to the next what you are going to take up, and if it is being decided in the majority caucus from time to time and from day to day as to how you are going to maneuver and manipulate within this convention, then it would seem to me that maybe the majority of us should join the Republican party for the duration of the convention in order to have a voice in the drafting of this constitution. I am opposed to the recommendation. We should proceed to general orders.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President and Mr. Marshall, we would be glad to have the minority join with the Republican party for the balance of the convention if they would be good enough to do so.

This seems to be a more logical order of consideration.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. President, I stayed up until after 12:00 o'clock last night preparing myself on Committee Proposal 71 in reliance upon the calendar. I do not think that the chairman of the executive branch committee has given sufficient reason — as a matter of fact he has given no reason at all — for switching this calendar to take up something next with which I may not be acquainted at all. I cannot join with Delegate Marshall in everything he said, but I will join him in his ultimate position that we should follow the regular order of the calendar. I will oppose Mr. Martin's motion.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. President, I did not hear Committee Proposal 71 read in the motion. Does the motion provide for 71 to follow all the other proposals?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Committee Proposals 71, 59 and 60 would follow the other proposals then.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, the chairman of the committee has quite a lot of responsibility in the presentation that he makes to this convention and to the committee of the whole. I have not had time, of course, to go back and check over just what has happened since the convention convened, but I cannot remember a time when the chairman of the committee was not allowed to present the material coming from his committee in the order in which he thought it ought to be presented. I know definitely that when the finance article was here I asked you to change the order in which the sections were taken up, and there wasn't any question about it. It seems to me that in the judicial article that we have just finished that Mr. Danhof asked to move some of those sections around in their order and it was granted. It seems to me that when the chairman thinks that there should be a different order of presentation that we ought to give some credence and grant him some discretion in how the presentation is made. I shall certainly go along with Mr. Martin's motion.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Well, I agree with Delegate Brake that the chairman of the committee has a great deal of responsibility, but I would also remind Delegate Brake that the chairman of the committee also has an office and a private secretary. He also has the research department of this convention at his disposal. Those of us in the minority have had to labor many hours on our own in order to prepare for the debate on the floor of this convention, and I think some consideration should be given to that. And if there is to be a change in general orders, particularly after the committee chairman has informed the vice chairman of the committee — who happens to be in the minority — how we were going to proceed and we prepared to proceed that way, I think in all honesty that the chairman should give us some good, logical reason.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the motion. Mr. Secretary, will you read that order so that there will be no question in the delegates' minds.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Martin's motion is that the order of consideration of the proposals from the committee on the executive branch following the disposition of Committee Proposals 46 and 78 shall be as follows: next, Committee Proposal 70, the veto power of the governor; then 75, which is compensation of state officers; then 72, compensation of the acting governor; then 48, dual office holding; then the Exclusion Report 2027, which deals with sections 14 and 15 of article VI; then Committee Proposal 74, the board of fund commissioners, state auditors and escheats; then Committee Proposal 77, the governor's residence; then Committee Proposal 76, local civil service; after which the remaining items on the calendar will be taken in the order printed therein.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, I would like to address, through the Chair, a question to Mr. Martin, if I may.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Do you care to answer, Mr. Martin?

MR. NORD: Mr. Martin and delegates to the convention, this is not a question of the chairman, as I understand it, just changing the calendar. If he had the power to do so he would do so without our being required to vote, but we are being required to vote and I need information in order to know how to vote. I want to get this from Mr. Martin, if I may. Mr. Martin, can you tell us what reason there is why the calendar that we have before us was the logical calendar yesterday and the calendar that you propose now is the logical calendar today? I would like to know what has happened in the meantime to change the logic.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President and Mr. Nord, the answer is for the same reason that Mr. Brake at one time wished to change his order of business, and Mr. Danhof: to give the delegates a more adequate time to consider the various proposals or sections of the proposals in the order that seems to me to be a somewhat more logical order of consideration.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Martin. Those in favor will say aye. Those opposed, no. The Chair is in doubt. Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I ask the yeas and nays.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The yeas and nays have been demanded. Is the demand seconded? A sufficient number up. Those in favor of the motion will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? Mr. Sharpe.

MR. SHARPE: Point of information, Mr. President. Is the next order of business Committee Proposal 78?

PRESIDENT NISBET: That is correct.

MR. SHARPE: And this is under the motion that Mr. Martin has made that we take up Committee Proposal 78 next?

PRESIDENT NISBET: We have finished Committee Proposal 78, as I understand it. Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I believe that is incorrect, Mr. President.

MR. SHARPE: Let me get this clear.

MR. MARSHALL: I believe under Chairman Martin's motion that it is to take up all of the other stuff the same as we have done all throughout the convention; it is to avoid the real issues until the last — and he is sidestepping 78 and 71 —

MR. MARTIN: No, Mr. President, 78 remains exactly as it is on the present calendar.

MR. MARSHALL: I am sorry.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Have you all voted? Mr. Sharpe.

MR. SHARPE: Mr. President, delegates, let me ask one more question. Where does 71 come in on the list?

PRESIDENT NISBET: After 76. Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Committee Proposal 71 will be considered after some of these other matters are considered, Mr. Sharpe.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion to rearrange the schedule for the consideration of the committee proposals from the committee on executive branch, the yeas are 71 and the nays are 59.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The motion prevails. Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Special orders.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders. The Chair recognizes Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the consideration of certain matters on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Millard. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, Mr. Millard assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The committee will be in order. We are considering section d of Committee Proposal 46. We had disposed of the minority report at the conclusion of the session yesterday.

The secretary will read.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 46, see above, page 1649.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon now offers the following amendment to section d:

1. Amend page 2, line 14, after "governor" by striking out "shall" and inserting "may"; so that the language will then read:

> No appropriation shall be deemed a mandate to spend. The governor may reduce expenditures of executive agencies whenever it appears that actual revenues for a fiscal period will fall below the revenue estimates on which appropriations for that period were based. . . .

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, this change in the word from "shall" to "may" simply gives some discretion to the governor as to what in his wisdom he deems necessary in order to act in this particular area. Although I am not exactly pleased with the content, I think that the least we can do is to permit some degree of flexibility insofar as the operation of this particular section may come about. I would urge your consideration of changing the word to "may" there, so that the governor would have that flexibility insofar as his operations and functions are concerned.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Hatch, the delegate from Marshall.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman, I am surprised that Mr. Faxon — who yesterday was so opposed to having this flexibility and discretion in the governor when he referred to the words "it appears" — now wants to give the governor even more discretion. I oppose the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the purpose of the committee in using the word "shall" was exactly that it desired that the governor would be directed to do this and not that he "may" do it if he happens to think that it is a good thing to do or that he happens to not want to do it. We want the governor to do it. That is the import of the committee's use of the word "shall". For that reason, I oppose Mr. Faxon's amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Faxon amendment. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 19, after "branches" by inserting "or to those funds appropriated for public educational purposes and institutions"; so that the last sentence will read:

> The governor's power to reduce expenditures shall not apply to the legislative and judicial branches or to those funds appropriated for public educational purposes and institutions or to those services for which funds are mandated by this constitution.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Detroit, Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, we have here in this section given the governor power to reduce expenditures for all those areas except the other branches of government and those funds that are mandated. We recognize the judicial branch and we recognize the legislative branch, but we do not give recognition to the status of our constitutional universities, an action which we took some weeks ago. The power to reduce expenditures is the power to coerce and interfere with the educational programs of our state. This power should not be lodged with a single individual. If we mean what we say when we give constitutional status to our universities, then we ought not to give to the governor, a single individual, the power to reduce the expenditures. Education, like these other branches of government, cannot exist unhampered with this type of power vested in the governor. You cannot reduce the appropriations to a university without seriously curtailing its instructional program and the effectiveness of its whole operation.

I recommend to you, fellow delegates, that we look very carefully here to see whether we might not in our wisdom see fit to implement that decision that we made earlier with regard to the giving of constitutional status and at this point protect those appropriations made by the legislature from the caprice of a single individual. The legislature is appropriating the money. They are the ones that are responsive and responsible to the people. The governor should not be able, as a single individual, to reduce these appropriations or expenditures — by whatever word you prefer to call them. This is simply keeping in line with the idea that has been long prevalent in this state over the independence of our constitutional universities. Let's keep them independent from the actions of a single governor if he so desires to reduce those particular appropriations.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I believe the secretary has a substitute amendment on his desk. I wonder if he would read that?

SECRETARY CHASE: Well, the secretary is at a loss, Mr. Martin, because this amendment of Mr. Faxon's is to line 19, and the amendment that was sent up was to line 13.

MR. MARTIN: I believe the substitute amendment would strike Mr. Faxon's amendment and substitute the language on line 14.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon's present amendment is as follows:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above.]

The previous amendment that Mr. Faxon had offered to line 14 after the word "governor" by striking out "shall" and inserting "may" has been defeated and is no longer before the committee.

MR. MARTIN: I will examine the amendments on the secretary's desk, Mr. Chairman.

MR. WALKER: A point of information, Mr. Chairman.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the secretary advises me that the amendment to which I referred is not a proper substitute and must be considered in order. For that reason, I address myself now to Mr. Faxon's amendment. The amendment referred to will be proposed subsequently.

With respect to Mr. Faxon's amendment, I would have to say this: that if we are going to insert a particular group of agencies into this picture and exempt them from the power of the governor to reduce expenditures, we would also have to insert a large number of other agencies and institutions, and before we got through we would have to insert all — out of fairness, all — of the institutions and agencies and departments of the state, and this would completely defeat the purpose of the section. For that reason, I oppose Mr. Faxon's amendment, since it would discriminate in favor of one group of agencies against all of the other agencies, departments and institutions of the state. I hope you will defeat the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Walker.

MR. WALKER: Mr. Chairman, would it be possible for the delegates on this side of the room to see what the amendment is? We do not have it here. Or is it the opinion that Mr. Faxon's first amendment was not there either? (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The sergeant at arms will see that the amendment is put on this side of the room.

Mr. Faxon, do you want to be recognized?

MR. FAXON: No, I want Mr. Hannah recognized.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Walker, would you like to have the amendment read again?

MR. WALKER: No, sir, it is an amendment of some length and I don't feel — particularly on an amendment of this length — that I can keep it all in my mind. It is a little early in the morning for that, you know. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will now recognize the delegate from East Lansing, Dr. Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, of course, as the administrator of a university, I am sympathetic to the objective that Mr. Faxon has in mind. But in view of the very large percentage of all state expenditures that go for education, I cannot believe that in a time of real emergency if the state finds itself without sufficient revenues to take care of all of the costs of operation, I cannot believe that education should necessarily be a sacred cow that shouldn't be susceptible to reexamination of its expenditures too. My objection to the language of this section is not to the failure of it to give preferred status to education but to the fact that you place in the hands of the governor the sole and exclusive opportunity to determine how expenditures shall be made to come in line with available revenues. I think this is a most unwise procedure.

I have spoken to the chairman of the committee and I assume that the amendment that he is going to introduce later may take care of my objection, but if it does not I introduce the motion at this time that it is a mistake to give the governor the opportunity, in the event that revenues are not going to equal expenditures by a certain number of millions of dollars, and make it possible for the governor on some sort of a whimsical basis to completely eliminate functions or services of the state that to him may seem unimportant or less important than others. My feeling is that if we are going to accomplish the objectives that the framers of this section had in mind, there must be an appeal from the action taken by the governor or some shared responsibility for these decisions resting in the hands of the legislature that made the appropriations in the first place.

I am not speaking in favor of Mr. Faxon's amendment because I think it would be a very unpopular position for education to take; that education alone must be exempt from rescrutinizing any of its expenditures in times of real emergency. If we have another way of taking care of my objection I am not in favor of Mr. Faxon's amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, just to somewhat clarify the situation, I would appreciate it if the secretary would read the amendment, which he has on his desk, which I understand Mr. Staiger is offering, so that the point which Dr. Hannah has raised might be somewhat clarified.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Staiger has filed an amendment to page 2, line 14, after "governor" by inserting a comma and the language ". . . with the approval of the appropriating committees of the house and senate,"; so that the language would then read, beginning on line 14:

> The governor, with the approval of the appropriating committees of the house and senate, shall reduce expenditures of executive agencies whenever it appears that actual revenues for a fiscal period will fall below the revenue estimates. . . .

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I don't want to speak out of order on that amendment, but I did want the delegates to know that it was on the desk and that I think it will take care of the question which Dr. Hannah has raised in saying that he thought the responsibility for such reductions ought to be shared with some other portion of state government.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Just a moment. Because of the interjection of a new amendment here, we had better have the secretary read the Faxon amendment and find out what we are talking about.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon's amendment which is immediately pending is:

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Faxon, who is the next on the list. You will be next, Dr. Pollock.

MR. FAXON: It has been said by others that this is a giving of certain privileged status to institutions, agencies and departments. I suggest that the status which has been given to education has already been given in the form of constitutional status. As many of you know, in the early part of this century one of the universities was considered by the courts to be a fourth branch of government. Now we give status to our legislative and judicial branches in those areas which cannot be tampered with by the governor alone. This is simply following through with the same type of treatment to the question of the universities and education.

I feel that if a real emergency comes up in this state the legislature ought to be called into session to deal concurrently with these problems. This should not be dealt with alone. As far as meeting the appropriations if the revenues are insufficient, this is a responsibility which should be shared by the representatives of the people of the state and not dealt with alone. Now, I don't know — Mr. Martin brought up his amendment and I guess I should reserve my comments to that when it is pending — but I still feel that we have a certain responsibility here and that, although there may be some efforts to change the second sentence, we still ought to give careful consideration to the implications that are inherent in this kind of a situation where the educational appropriations could be dealt with by a person or by a select group of people who are not representatives of all the people.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Ann Arbor, Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, could I ask, through the Chair, a question of the chairman of the committee? I think it says in line 13, Mr. Martin — line 14, I beg your pardon — ". . . shall reduce expenditures of executive agencies. . . ." Now, would you interpret the term "executive agencies" to include constitutional universities? If so, it is a strange interpretation that I have never heard.

MR. MARTIN: I think, Mr. Chairman, Dr. Pollock, that "executive agencies" does cover, although we have not used all of the different descriptive terms to cover other — I mean, to make certain that we have included everything. I think that it probably does cover the constitutional agencies as well as those which are not constitutional. I believe that it does.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Faxon amendment. All in favor of the Faxon amendment will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: A division has been called for. Is there a sufficient number up?

SECRETARY CHASE: A sufficient number.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: A sufficient number. All those in favor of the Faxon amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? The vote is on the Faxon amendment. All in favor of the Faxon amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and total the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon, the yeas are 27; the nays are 82.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Mahinske and Hodges offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 13, after "Sec. d.", by striking out the balance of the line, "No appropriation shall be deemed a mandate to spend."

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the proposer of the amendment, the delegate from Detroit, Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: This is the amendment that was attempted to be offered from the floor yesterday, orally. As Mr. Martin said, these few words here actually add nothing to the constitution. They are just a statement of policy. And for these reasons and for the reason that we felt that it was inappropriate to put this language in the constitution, we made the motion to strike the first sentence of section d of the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I only want to repeat what I said yesterday, and that is that this proposal is an important statement of policy; but I want to remove any question in the minds of the minority that this is intended as a reflection upon any individual or any party with respect to this particular matter. The sentence is general in character and I think they have misapprehended its import in implying that this is directed against a past governor or an action of any particular party.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: At this point, Mr. Chairman, there is no misapprehension on my part. I don't think this was meant to be derogatory or so forth, but I think that at best it is a statement of policy and I don't believe that it does belong in the constitution. For that reason I offered the amendment to strike the language and I would urge you to vote to delete this language from the constitution.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Mahinske and Hodges amendment. All those in favor of the amendment will say aye. Opposed, no. The Chair is in doubt. All those in favor of the Mahinske amendment will vote aye, and those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment offered by Messrs. Mahinske and Hodges, the yeas are 40; the nays are 64.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Staiger offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 14, after "governor" by inserting a comma and "with the approval of the appropriating committees of the house and senate,"; so that the language will then read:

> The governor, with the approval of the appropriating committees of the house and senate, shall reduce expenditures of executive agencies whenever it appears that actual revenues for a fiscal period will fall below the revenue estimates. . . .

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the proposer of the amendment, the delegate from Port Huron, Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I share with Dr. Hannah some of the concern for leaving this power completely to the governor. I also think Mr. Mahinske mentioned when he talked before that there is something that should be done in this area to, in some way, have a followup on the appropriations to see that they are in line with the incoming revenue, and this cannot be done completely by the legislature because the legislature is not in session. This suggestion of allowing the governor, with the approval of the appropriations committees of both houses, is not a novel approach to something like this. New York, as I understand it, has a select committee made up of certain members of both of their houses which, when the legislature is not in session, is empowered to make certain emergency appropriations upon the recommendation of the governor. This approach would leave the power with the governor to cut expenditures when he sees that the revenues are not meeting expectations but only with the approval of the appropriating committees of the 2 houses of the legislature, so that there is some check on the power. I recommend the adoption of this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I would first like to ask a question of Mr. Staiger. In the case of the state of New York, Mr. Staiger, is this spelled out in the constitution?

MR. STAIGER: I believe it is by constitutional provision. I am not completely certain on it, but that is my understanding. We had the administrative head on the executive department from New York here. I am not on that committee but I heard the testimony and that was my understanding.

MR. FAXON: I can check that, I guess, but I just wanted to say that I think it is somewhat irregular to give constitutional status to a committee, one committee of the house or the senate, in this case the appropriations committee. I don't know that we have given this status to the other standing committees of the house and senate, and I think that this might be a departure from the tradition of not naming the legislative committees.

I would want to say one thing further with regard to this amendment: I do not think it goes far enough. I think that the idea of having a check upon the governor is a fine one, but the traditional check is a legislative check and not of a select committee of the legislature. Now if I could see language there in other parts of the constitution where the governor shall, with approval of the senate or the house, or both, reduce expenditures, then I would at least know that the whole legislature is involved in this important process.

As I said before, when there is a cash crisis, where there is a problem, this is the time that the governor has the power to call the legislature back and to deal with this problem with them. And I don't see that the selection of a single committee of the house and senate is adequate protection for the people of the state who elect a total legislature to represent them. In this case we give a specified committee of the house and senate this particular prerogative. I would oppose this amendment and hope that in its defeat we could come up with giving this back to the legislature so that the governor shall, with the approval of the legislature, reduce expenditures. In this way we would be maintaining a proper relationship between the 2 branches of government.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the lady from Grand Rapids, Mrs. Judd.

MRS. JUDD: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I wonder if we could have clarified a little more the application of this phrase. I am not quite satisfied as to whether we have included the institutions of higher learning. It seems to me that we have not excluded them from lines 19 and 20, and I cannot feel quite sure yet that the term "executive agencies" in the upper part of the paragraph includes institutions of higher learning. Could we have some further legal interpretation on this point?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Does the chairman wish to answer the lady's question? Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mrs. Judd, the term "executive agencies" is a broad one. It covers everything which is not a part of the legislative or judicial branches, and it was the view of the committee that it was completely comprehensive in this regard; that it covers not only statutory agencies and institutions but that it covers constitutional agencies and institutions, and that it would apply to institutions and agencies which are constitutional in character. It was not felt necessary to insert a whole series of words here showing that these other institutions were covered. We think that the language is broad enough to cover them. I mean—if I might continue my comment here, Mr. Chairman—the purpose of this amendment, as I understand it, is to make sure that the reduction of expenditures—and we are not talking about appropriations—is not done, to use Dr. Hannah's phrase or word, at the whim of a single individual. We realize that this is a serious matter, but there is at the present time no means in government by which reasonable adjustments can be made where revenues are falling below estimates.

Now it is also true that we have what is called a "little legislature" which is composed, I believe, of the members of the appropriating committees, which is given authority by the legislature to make appropriations from a contingency fund for emergency matters when the legislature is out of session. This is a body which, on the governor's recommendation, may add to the funds which these agencies have if there is a temporary shortage which they need to have made up. And this is the converse of that. It would permit the governor—it puts the responsibility on the governor to take the initiative. And this, we think, is very important because he is the head of the executive branch; he is closely familiar with what is happening to revenues as well as expenditures and the initiative is properly with him. But it seems to many of us that this provides a safeguard in that he must have approval of the appropriating committees which—of the entire body of the legislature—are also most familiar with these financial and fiscal problems. He must have their approval to make these reductions. We think that this meets the objection and while this is not a committee amendment, those delegates whom I have talked with—and I have talked to quite a number—seem to feel that this does provide an adequate safeguard. I hope that the committee will approve the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the delegate from Detroit, Mr. Young.

MR. YOUNG: Mr. Chairman, in further comment on Mrs. Judd's question, I am not sure whether section d, in fact the whole article as it is written, covers higher education, but I am very sure that it covers lower education. It certainly provides that in time of cash crisis there can be a serious curtailment of the amount of money available to adequately run our school system.

Now, insofar as the amendment is concerned, I sympathize with the laudable motive of Delegate Staiger's amendment. It seems to clarify and perhaps to loosen the severe bind that this whole proposal places on fiscal policy, but I do not think it goes far enough, because the real solution would be to strike the whole section. In terms of the committee's own reasoning, Mr. Karn said yesterday, I believe, that one of the purposes of this language was to enable the governor, under procedures set down by the legislature, to take action in the absence of the legislature. Now it would seem to me, following the logic of the committee, that procedures approved by the whole legislature would certainly be more representative and more democratic than any decision reached by a small committee of either body. So for that reason I will have to oppose the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Saginaw, Mr. Shackleton.

MR. SHACKLETON: Mr. Chairman and delegates, if you include this amendment, you have 2 checks; it is not left willy-nilly to the whims of the governor. The first check would be the committees of the house and the senate and the second check would be the rules, the laws, set up by the legislature itself as to procedure and method. I don't know how many more checks you could get short of calling the legislature back and rewriting the whole appropriation bill.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the amendment. Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Staiger a question, if I may.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If Mr. Staiger cares to answer.

MR. YEAGER: Something that I would like to know about is how this would actually be implemented; you say, "the approval of the appropriating committees of the house and senate." Now, would these committees act jointly or individually in such action?

MR. STAIGER: I assume that you would have to have the majority of both to get the approval.

MR. YEAGER: Approval of each? Each or both jointly?

MR. STAIGER: Each, would be the — a committee as such acts through a majority of its members so, if you have to get a majority of the appropriating committees of the house and the senate, that means a majority in each voting separately.

MR. YEAGER: If one committee wanted to go along and the other one didn't, there would be no action taken?

MR. STAIGER: That's right.

MR. YEAGER: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair understands there is an amendment to the amendment. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon offers the following amendment:

1. Amend the amendment, after "approval of" by striking out "the appropriating committees" and inserting "a majority"; so that the language would then read, ". . . with the approval of a majority of the house and senate. . . ."

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: This is in line, fellow delegates, with all the other practice that we have in the constitution with regard to checking the power of the governor or checking the power of the judiciary or checking any power. You never lodge the check within a select group of the body; you lodge it with the body itself. As I said before, this would be giving constitutional status to one of the select committees of the senate and house. Let us lodge the responsibility where it belongs. It belongs with the total legislature. All the legislature should participate in a decision affecting and of such importance to the whole state. Let us not select just a small group of people who sit on a specific committee. The responsibility is with all of them. Let the house and senate have their traditional role of checking upon the governor's power. Delete those words and support this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Staiger.

MR. STAIGER: I think it is obvious to everyone that the Faxon amendment would completely destroy the purpose of the whole section. If there is a need — and I certainly believe, as the committee did, that there is a need — in this area to allow somebody to follow up on the expenditures to see that they don't get out of line from revenue, the whole house and the whole senate just isn't the type of body that can do this during the year. They are not in session the whole year. This gives the governor, with some check on it by the 2 committees, the right to follow up. I would oppose the amendment and state once more that this whole subject is not a novel subject at all and many constitutions have it. Hawaii has this type of expenditure revision during the fiscal year. The model constitution contains a provision of this type. We are not talking about something completely new here, and I think it is a valid and a good provision to have in our constitution. I would urge the defeat of the Faxon amendment to the present amendment on the board.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I think it might be a little bit helpful to remind the delegates the status of committees in the legislature seems to be quite different from what it is in the constitutional convention. I don't think there is any question, as a practical matter, but what the 2 committees of the legislature would well represent the thinking of the legislature and would in practice amount to the same thing as an expensive convening of the legislature in special session so far as all practical results are concerned. Committees in the legislature seem to have a standing and status which we do not seem to recognize here. I think we should think about that. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Faxon amendment to the Staiger amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted. Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, may I have a division on that?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Faxon amendment to the Staiger amendment was defeated.

MR. MARTIN: Oh, I am sorry.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question now is on the Staiger amendment. All in favor of the Staiger amendment will say aye. Opposed, no.

The ayes have it. The amendment is adopted. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Cudlip offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 14, after "expenditures of" by striking out "executive agencies" and inserting "all bodies receiving appropriations"; so that the language will then read:

> The governor shall, with the approval of the appropriating committees of the house and senate, reduce expenditures of all bodies receiving appropriations whenever it appears that actual revenues. . . .

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the proposer of the amendment, Mr Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I think that Mrs. Judd and Dr. Pollock asked questions about this. I am not satisfied that "executive agencies" includes anything but executive agencies. Unless there are words in this proposed constitution that define "executive agencies" — and I know not where they exist — to include such things as universities, et cetera, we need some different language here. I don't think Mr. Faxon needed to make his amendment. I think under this language we are only talking about executive agencies, and the other bodies would be in a class by themselves.

Justice Holmes said that "words are just skins for thoughts." Perhaps the language I suggested is not the best language. It is difficult to do these things on the spur of the moment but we could make a better change, perhaps, on second reading. I am convinced that "executive agencies" does not include all of the bodies of government for which appropriations are made, as a matter of law; they are not words of art, and I would suggest that we change this at this time because it is of vital importance if the whole idea of the section d is to prevail.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Delegate Durst.

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, as a member of the executive branch committee it was my understanding — and I believe it was the understanding of some others — that when we used the term "executive agencies" we meant just that and did not include the educational institutions but, since it has been interpreted that way here and most people seem to feel that it is desirable that it do so, I think Mr. Cudlip's amendment is a good one and I will support it.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Birmingham, Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, a question for Mr. Cudlip, if he would care to answer.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If he cares to answer.

MR. VAN DUSEN: I take it, Mr. Cudlip, that it is not the intention of your amendment that the governor would have to make across the board reductions in expenditures to comply with your amendment but that he could select one or more bodies receiving appropriations and apply the reduction to them in line with the authority conferred by this section and the Staiger amendment. Is that correct?

MR. CUDLIP: Yes, I was simply trying to bring before the body the idea that if this reduction is to be effective — it is confined here to "executive agencies" and I believe those words leave out a lot of other bodies of government. I thought that the idea of the proposal was to give the governor this power with respect to all people receiving appropriations.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman, but not necessarily on an across the board basis?

MR. CUDLIP: No, I understand that the legislature will have rules applying to this section that will take care of that matter.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Thank you, Mr. Cudlip.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if Mr. Cudlip would consider changing the word "all" to "any". The implication of the word "all" is the implication that I think brought about Mr. Van Dusen's question.

MR. CUDLIP: I would indeed do so.

MR. MARTIN: I believe that if he would accept the word "any", I would see no objection to the amendment.

MR. CUDLIP: I accede.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment has been revised as follows:

1. Amend page 2, line 14, after "expenditures of" by striking out "executive agencies" and inserting "any bodies receiving appropriations".

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if I might ask Mr. Cudlip a question.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If he cares to answer.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Cudlip, is it your intent that under this provision of reducing appropriations, it would apply to your schools of higher learning?

MR. CUDLIP: Yes, it is my understanding that the intention of the committee is to have this apply to all units, if you please, of government that are receiving appropriations. Member Durst said that he didn't have that notion as a member of the committee but that was, I think, our general understanding.

I am simply trying to provide some wording that doesn't confine the action of the chief executive to "executive agencies", because I think those words are highly restrictive. I think that what we are talking about here when we say "bodies receiving appropriations" means any unit of government, any body, any university receiving appropriations from the legislature. I assume that is the committee intent; I mean, the basic committee intent.

MR. HOXIE: Well, Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak in opposition to the amendment. There are areas perhaps where reductions can be made because of conditions or times that exist. There are other agencies that have set up a schedule — for instance, our schools of higher learning. They have their enrollment there and they have to have the funds available to carry on the activity for instruction.

I don't know how Mr. Cudlip could justify that Mt. Pleasant or any other school could be reduced in the course of the year unless they dismissed from their school students that were already enrolled and thereby reduced the expenditures of the institution to come under this provision. And I certainly don't believe that the membership of this body wants to put our schools of higher learning in that position.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I thought there was a longer list and I would have more time to prepare what I was going to say, and since I have not had as much time to prepare — you know, you can talk longer when you have less time to prepare; when you have more time, presumably it is shorter.

I do want to point out to the delegates that I think we are making a very serious mistake in this whole section, that I think what we are trying to do is expect government to operate like business and yet not quite let it operate like business. Now I say that if this is proposed, it is trying to get government to operate like a business. Then we should also give the govenor the same power that a business would have, to borrow; namely, to put up the roads and the schools and the state parks as security and be able to mortgage them to tide over in periods of economic emergency just as a business has the right to borrow in time of need and carry over to better times.

I do not propose that, because I do not think it is a sound way to operate government. I think that we should point out again the real difference between a business operation and a government. Normally, when businesses are prospering revenues are coming in and state expenditures are down; so the normal pattern is that in good times government's revenues go up because of general community prosperity and certain costs such as welfare are down. When businesses because of necessity must reduce their expenses, then, generally speaking, the expenses of government go up. They tend to be the opposite of the business community.

Now I am afraid that the whole approach of this is to say that the legislature shall establish certain needs but then they shall be mechanically, arbitrarily and in a straitjacket reduced regardless of what the legislature said. We have not recommended the other side of the coin, namely, that if revenues should increase beyond estimates that the governor should be able to spend those with or without legislative approval. I would not recommend that.

I am very concerned that we are going to end up in a position where the governor is forced, with or without legislative consultation — depending on which amendment is adopted — to arbitrarily reduce expenditures in these areas that are not mandated, or even if they are mandated, will still be placed in a very unsound approach. I hope that in reviewing this, the delegates will not only consider the amendments but their effect on the whole section and, in taking a second look, see the unwisdom of what we are doing.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Delegate Shackleton.

MR. SHACKLETON: Mr. Chairman, a question of Mr. Hoxie, if I may.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Hoxie, would you care to answer?

MR. SHACKLETON: As I understand it, in the preparation of the budget all departments introduce their schedules. Would you just as soon enlighten me as to what departments do not have schedules?

MR. HOXIE: The budget — I might start back — I think that perhaps some of the members aren't aware of the procedure that is followed in the legislature. It is the duty of the governor and the responsibility of the governor to first consider requests from all of the agencies in state government including your institutions of higher learning. Then the governor through his agency prepares a recommendation to the legislature. The legislature in turn reviews the requests of the agencies, conducts public hearings and, as a result, makes a determination of what appropriations should be made for the conduct of that particular agency, the business of that agency.

Now there are areas in which there possibly can be reductions made in the course of the year in the event of undue conditions. There are certain other agencies that it is practically impossible to make reductions. We considered many times in the legislature a program of a straight percentage cut across the board to reduce appropriations. It is not a very judicious manner in which to accomplish that purpose. In other words, there are agencies in which you materially affect an operation that is considered to be of value to the people of the state. One of them, in my belief, is the schools of higher learning. I think it is impossible, after a program is set up, for a school of higher learning during that fiscal year for which the appropriation is made to materially reduce it. Now you may hold up, say, some of the building program or something of that nature, which has been done; but as far as the operations of those institutions, I don't think that you can possibly reduce that in the course of that term. I do not know whether that answers your question, Mr. Shackleton.

MR. SHACKLETON: No, Mr. Chairman. I was trying to find out what agencies do not work upon schedules.

MR. HOXIE: Well, I think practically all of them work on a schedule, but you do have agencies in state government — for instance, in the field of the contractual service, in the field of personnel, where they have vacancies, where it is not absolutely essential that they fill those vacancies if the financial situation doesn't warrant it. There is the matter of contractual services on which the governor presently and has in the past requested the agencies not to expend that money, not to fill those vacancies, whereby it does reduce the expenditures of state government. But I think there are certain agencies, and particularly I am thinking of the schools of higher learning, where this is not a practical way in which we can operate government.

MR. SHACKLETON: Mr. Chairman, I was not asking about the practicality. He made the statement that the schools could not change their schedules, inferring that there were agencies that did not have schedules, and now I am trying to find out what agencies there might be in the state that do not have schedules.

MR. HOXIE: Well, I do not know that we could properly use the word "schedules." I was referring to the word "schedules" in relationship to the schools of higher learning. In other words, they have their teaching staff hired, they have so much of their money appropriated for contractual service, for the fuel and all those items, and they have their enrollment. In my opinion it would materially affect those institutions to take a reduction or a flat cut against their operation. Now, as I have explained, all agencies carry on certain functions or operations which are considered for the benefit of the people, but there are within those agencies opportunities such as mentioned — such as personnel vacancies, such as contractual service — where it can be reduced without materially affecting the service that they are rendering to the people.

MR. SHACKLETON: But yes or no, you know of no agencies that do not have schedules?

MR. HOXIE: I don't consider agencies in state government outside of our schools of higher learning that have what you and I might consider schedules, as such. They have programs.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Judd.

MRS. JUDD: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I just wanted to address myself to Delegate Hoxie's fear that this was going to affect the universities. I would support Mr. Cudlip's amendment changing the words "executive agencies" to "all bodies receiving appropriations" only in the light of Mr. Staiger's amendment which modifies the governor's power to include approval of the appropriation committees of the legislature. It was my thought that this was one way to protect the institutions of higher learning against the power of the single individual in cutting their appropriations.

It occurs to me, Mr. Chairman, that perhaps this whole matter is one for style and drafting; that if the convention can agree as a consensus that we do not want the governor alone to have the power to cut the appropriations of the institutions of higher learning, perhaps we could leave it to that committee to decide whether to put it in the first part of the paragraph or the last part of the paragraph.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Cudlip amendment. Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, sometimes it seems that each one of us has his individual sacred cows, and in that connection a horrible thought has just occurred to me and to Judge Gadola: do you suppose under this paragraph the government would have the right to reduce our retirement paychecks? (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Does anyone desire to answer that question? (laughter) Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: I am sure that comes within the category of mandated funds and there would be no possibility of that whatever. I do not want Judge Dehnke to be worrying about that when he votes on this. (laughter)

Mr. Chairman, may I only add this — I just want to refer back to Dr. Hannah's position that he did not want to see educational institutions put in some different class than any other department of government in this respect.

With respect to Mr. Hoxie's comments, he brought out exactly the areas where delay in expenditure could occur and that would be, perhaps, on the expenditures for capital outlay and so on. And that is the purpose of adding the appropriating bodies to this picture; so that they can give reason and justice and care to any changes that might be made. I hope that Mr. Cudlip's amendment will be approved and then the matter can go to style and drafting. If there is any further improvement in the wording that can be made there, of course we would be glad to see that done.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Karn.

MR. KARN: Members of the committee, it seems to me that if we would go back to the original thinking of the subcommittee in the preparation of this statement, it might put some verbiage in here that would clear up the situation. Yesterday I made the statement to the committee that the original thinking of the subcommittee on section d was that this section would be effective in emergency conditions or when there seemed to be an impending imbalance in the fiscal policy in the state. This was not originally designed to be a day in and day out affair at all.

Now, various individuals will have their individual agencies that they are worried about. I think if we look at this as an emergency, when the state is in trouble, it is an entirely different situation, and perhaps a couple of words of that sort in here would clear up the matter and would ease the tension of those who are sponsoring some individual agencies and institutions.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Cudlip amendment as revised. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The ayes have it. The amendment is adopted. Are there any further amendments on your desk, Mr. Secretary?

SECRETARY CHASE: That was the last amendment on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If not, it will pass.

Section d, as amended, is passed. Are there any amendments to the body of Committee Proposal 46? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 46, as amended, is passed. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 2 on the calendar, from the committees on legislative powers and executive branch, by Messrs. Hoxie and Martin, chairmen, Committee Proposal 78, A proposal to provide for the office of legislative auditor general. Adds a new section to article V.

Following is Committee Proposal 78 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committees recommend that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. THE LEGISLATURE, BY A MAJORITY VOTE OF THE MEMBERS ELECT OF EACH HOUSE, SHALL APPOINT A LEGISLATIVE AUDITOR GENERAL TO SERVE FOR A TERM OF 8 YEARS, WHO MAY BE REAPPOINTED FOR ONE ADDITIONAL TERM ONLY. HE SHALL BE REMOVABLE FOR CAUSE AT ANY TIME BY A 2/3 VOTE OF THE MEMBERS ELECT OF EACH HOUSE OF THE LEGISLATURE. THE LEGISLATIVE AUDITOR GENERAL SHALL CONDUCT COMPREHENSIVE FISCAL POSTAUDITS OF ALL TRANSACTIONS AND ACCOUNTS KEPT BY OR FOR ALL DEPARTMENTS, OFFICES AND AGENCIES OF THE STATE GOVERNMENT AND PERFORMANCE POSTAUDITS. HE MAY MAKE INVESTIGATIONS PERTINENT TO THE CONDUCT OF SUCH AUDITS. HE SHALL BE ASSIGNED NO DUTIES OTHER THAN THOSE HEREIN SPECIFIED. HE SHALL REPORT ANNUALLY AND AT SUCH OTHER TIMES AS HE DEEMS NECESSARY OR AS REQUIRED BY THE LEGISLATURE TO THE LEGISLATURE AND THE GOVERNOR.

Messrs. Hoxie and Martin, chairmen of the committees on legislative powers and executive branch, submit the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 78:

There has been in the last quarter century a marked increase in the cost and complexity of services of state government. State operating expenditures have increased from less than $13 million in 1910 to nearly $1,200,000,000 in 1961, and the last 25 years have seen the creation of at least 30 executive agencies.

There has been no parallel emphasis on the improvement or creation of legislative tools to balance the trend in the executive area. If any semblance of balance between the legislature and the executive-administrative area is to be retained, the Michigan legislature must be greatly strengthened in its power to oversee the conduct of executive operations. Giving the legislature the oversight of the audit function both as it respects dollars and cents and as it respects the performance and efficiency of the conduct of services, would be one large step in this direction. The legislature, in effect, now lacks any effective means of its own for determining whether or not the intent of the policy decisions it makes is being honestly and effectively translated into action.

The present independent elected office of auditor general does not, and probably cannot, provide the legislature with the adequate and timely tools it needs, certainly not those tools which are subject to its own oversight and control. A legislative auditor general offers an effective solution to a serious problem of maintaining a desirable, if not actually necessary, balance of power between these 2 major coordinate branches of government.

The first sentence of the proposal calls for the appointment of a legislative auditor general by a majority vote of the members elect of each house of the legislature for a term of 8 years, and provides that the legislative auditor general may be reappointed for one additional term only, or a maximum consecutive service of 16 years. It was felt that a specified term of something more than ordinary length was essential for 3 basic reasons: 1) to attract high caliber persons; 2) to provide for a substantial degree of freedom from extraneous influences in the performance of his duties; and 3) to provide for a reasonable degree of job security. Precedent for a limitation on length of term is provided in the case of the U.S. comptroller general (15 years) and the Detroit auditor general (10 years).

If appointed as an officer of the legislature, there is little room for argument that this officer should be removable by that body. However, removal would be for cause, by which is meant misfeasance, malfeasance, or nonfeasance in office rather than for political or personal reasons, and it would require a 2/3 vote. This extraordinary vote on removal again stresses that such an action, while by no means to be prevented, should not be undertaken lightly or without concurrence of more than a simple majority vote, which might easily represent mere partisan bias.

The duties of the legislative auditor general are to conduct comprehensive fiscal postaudits and performance postaudits and to make investigations pertinent to the conduct of such audits. A performance postaudit is an examination of the effectiveness of administration, its efficiency and its adequacy in terms of the program of the departments or agencies as previously approved by the legislature. The prohibition against assigning other substantive duties to the officer focuses attention on the primary duties and prevents his being placed in the anomalous position of having to audit his own administrative activities. Nonauditing duties of the present office (such as county auditing, examination and approval of plats, and duties relative to the sale of lands delinquent for taxes) should be assigned by law to other existing executive agencies.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

While the investigatory powers of the legislative auditor general are necessarily broad, they are strictly limited and confined to the postaudit area. All preaudit functions remain exclusively in the executive branch where they properly belong. Thus the legislative auditor general has absolutely no power to intervene in or in any way interfere with the exercise by the executive branch of its judgment in carrying out approved programs or its day to day function and discretion in the execution of appropriations.

Reports from the legislative auditor general would be required annually and as he deems necessary to the efficient performance of his duties or as otherwise required by the legislature.

Following is minority report A as offered and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

Messrs. Wanger, Wood, Perras, Hubbs, Powell and Mrs. Koeze, a minority of the committee on legislative powers, submit the following minority report to Committee Proposal 78:

A minority of the committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Insert the following just before the last sentence of the committee proposal:

HE MAY CONTRACT FOR LEGAL COUNSEL OF HIS CHOICE AND MAY AFTER PUBLIC HEARING ESTABLISH MINIMUM STANDARDS FOR ANNUAL REPORTS TO BE ISSUED BY ANY AND ALL DEPARTMENTS, OFFICES AND AGENCIES OF THE STATE GOVERNMENT.

Messrs. Wanger, Wood, Perras, Hubbs, Powell and Mrs. Koeze, a minority of the committee on legislative powers, submit the following reasons in support of the foregoing minority report, which accompanied Committee Proposal 78:

While the minority agrees with the committee proposal, it firmly believes that its purpose can be best attained only if the above language is added. This language in no way weakens the office, but rather strengthens it in 2 important and necessary ways.

First, the power to CONTRACT FOR LEGAL COUNSEL OF HIS CHOICE is essential to the legislative auditor general's independence of the executive branch. Otherwise the attorney general could directly impose a restrictive interpretation upon the office's all important powers of postaudit and investigation. The whole purpose of placing this officer under the legislative branch requires that it not be subject to the influence or control of the executive.

Second, the power to AFTER PUBLIC HEARING ESTABLISH MINIMUM STANDARDS FOR ANNUAL REPORTS TO BE ISSUED BY ANY AND ALL DEPARTMENTS, OFFICES AND AGENCIES OF THE STATE GOVERNMENT, is most desirable (1) as an economical means of obtaining facts which would not otherwise be reasonably available, and (2) in promoting proper uniformity and detail in reports which would otherwise be lacking. Since such standards could only be minimums, no department, office or agency would in any way be prevented or discouraged from including additional information or analysis. The requirement of a public hearing guarantees that any department, office or agency affected will have the fullest opportunity to be heard before its minimum standards are established.

Following is minority report B as offered and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

Messrs. Downs, Lesinski and Murphy, a minority of the committee on legislative powers, submit the following minority report to Committee Proposal 78:

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

A minority of the committee recommends that Committee Proposal 78 be not adopted.

Messrs. Downs, Lesinski and Murphy, a minority of the committee on legislative powers, submit the following reasons in support of the foregoing minority report which accompanied Committee Proposal 78:

We object to the inclusion of this new section for the following reasons:

1. It would limit the right of the people to elect their own auditor by indirectly providing for a legislative auditor in place of an auditor elected by and responsible to the people of Michigan. Michigan has been uniquely fortunate in dollar honesty in state government under all administrations and part of this is because of an auditor elected by the people and responsible to the people.

2. The legislature can now provide for legislative review and audit and study by appropriation committees and investigation by special committees. This provision would, in reality, limit the legislature's present rights by specifying the details of establishing a legislative auditor. The fact that the legislature should or should not do more in this field should be decided by the legislature itself.

3. An over zealous auditor might assert that his constitutional status gave him the right to investigate all operations and details of agencies at any and all times. This could result in the "tail wagging the dog" and violate the concept of separation of powers. This language is so broad that it might permit such an auditor to interfere with the academic operations of constitutionally established universities beyond mere dollar auditing. A performance audit could include a review of the entire academic operation of what, to date, has been Michigan's constitutionally independent system of higher education.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the chairman — there are 2 chairmen of the committees. Which chairman desires to be recognized first? The chairman of the executive branch committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Well, Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a brief statement on this proposal and then yield the floor to Mr. Hoxie whose committee was also responsible for this proposal since it is a joint committee proposal.

Very briefly, the committees propose that we transfer the function of the auditor general from the executive branch to the legislative branch. We feel that in so doing the auditor general should have a reasonably long term of years comparable to that of the head of the general accounting office in Washington and other auditors of similar character. The proposal comprehends that the auditor general would not — and I want to emphasize this — would not get into the business of preauditing. Preauditing is the kind of thing which the department of administration through its accounting division does now. It is the kind of work which the internal accounting department and the controller in a business does during the year. They check the payments that are going out to make sure that they are proper and that they are not being used for improper purposes or purposes which the legislature has not provided. Now when you finish the year, then the postaudit process occurs, and this is the function of the auditor general — and it is the function of the auditor general at the present time — to then review the operations to determine whether they have in fact been conducted according to law and in the manner in which the legislature directed. The business analogy is similar. You have your internal accounting and afterward you have a complete audit by an independent auditing firm.

In the present situation in state government, you have the preaudit being conducted by the executive branch and then you have the executive branch again doing a postaudit. Now this change puts the thing in a much more logical frame. It permits internal accounting controls to operate through the controller of the department of administration and his accounting division. Then it permits a postaudit by an independent body, namely, the legislative auditor.

The proposal also comprehends that these postaudits will be fiscal in nature. It also provides that there may be performance postaudits. The meaning of "performance postaudit" is a look to see whether the agency has performed in the manner in which it presented its proposals to the legislature. It is not designed to direct the body or the agency to do any particular thing; it is simply to see and to report to the legislature whether the agency has performed as it stated to the legislature it would perform. The proposal also permits the employment by the legislative auditor, if authorized by the legislature, of independent accounting firms or of legal counsel for special work. This is common now, so far as independent accounting firms are concerned, in the auditor general's office. He does use them for certain special types of audit and that practice should continue to be possible. Where reference to legislative counsel is put in, since it transfers it from one branch to another, it no longer being in the executive branch, there might be a question as to whether the legislature could authorize legal counsel to assist if that were necessary.

The proposal further limits the duties to the work of state auditing so that the legislative auditor will not be assigned numerous unrelated duties and provides for his annual report and other reports from time to time as may be necessary both to the legislature and the governor. It gives the legislature the power to prescribe uniform accounting systems and for the auditing of units or agencies of local government. At the present time the auditor general audits counties and occasionally townships, not usually school districts unless there is some very serious problem. But he has provided uniform accounting systems and uniform accounting requirements with respect to these local units. This, of course, should not be interfered with.

Finally, after the committee considered the question of whether the staff of the auditor general should have civil service status as they now do, it felt that some independence by virtue of tenure should exist in the staff as is now the case, because they have the difficult job of making reports on agencies of government and we want them to make honest reports based upon their best judgment as to what the facts and figures show. And so the committee has recommended in its proposal that the members of the staff — aside from the legislative auditor general, his deputy, and one other member of his staff — shall be exempt from civil service; that those 3 shall be exempt, and that other members of his staff shall have civil service status.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Will you state it, Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: I understand that the chairman of the committee, Mr. Chairman, has been discussing the substitute proposal and I do not believe that has yet been offered. Am I correct?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: That is correct, Mr. Bentley. The chairman of the executive branch committee has been discussing a substitute proposal and he should offer it if he is going to want to discuss it.

MR. MARTIN: I apologize, Mr. Chairman —

MR. DOWNS: I have a point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Downs, state your point.

MR. DOWNS: I want to say that I have a minority report joined in by 2 other Democrats. Now we don't mind too much the majority report being presented, discussed and debated on one side, then we get around to the minority report, but I get a little tired of the rules being changed in the middle of the game. Now to bring in a "ringer" substitute — I just wonder when we get to present our minority report?

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, as a matter of procedure, I should have permitted the reading, the presentation, of the substitute on which I have been talking and then, after simply a statement of what it contains, we expect to have the minority present its minority report and carry on the argument from there on the basis of the ruling of the Chair yesterday. If it is possible, I would request that the substitute be offered at this time.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: That is in order. The secretary will read the substitute proposal.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Martin and Hoxie, on behalf of the committees on executive branch and legislative powers, offer the following substitute for Committee Proposal 78:

A proposal to provide for the office of legislative auditor general. Adds a new section to article V.

The committees recommend that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. The legislature by a majority vote of the members elect of each house, shall appoint a legislative auditor general to serve for a term of 8 years, who may be reappointed for one additional term only. He shall be removable for cause at any time by a 2/3 vote of the members elect of each house of the legislature. The legislative auditor general shall conduct comprehensive fiscal postaudits of all transactions and accounts kept by or for all branches, departments, offices, boards, commissions, agencies, authorities and institutions of the state, whether established by this constitution or by law, and performance postaudits thereof. For these purposes, in addition to his staff, he may employ such independent accounting firms or legal counsel, as the legislature by resolution may direct and may make investigations pertinent to the conduct of such audits. The legislative auditor general shall be assigned no duties other than those herein specified and shall report annually and at such other times as he deems necessary or as required by the legislature to the legislature and the governor.

The legislature shall provide by law with respect to the maintenance of uniform accounting systems and the auditing of units or agencies of local government.

The legislative auditor general, his deputy and one other member of his staff shall be exempt from civil service. All other members of his staff shall have civil service status.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to yield to Mr. Hoxie.

MR. LESINSKI: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Lesinski, for what purpose does the gentleman rise?

MR. LESINSKI: Perhaps the secretary can ring the bell so the delegates can be present and take the benefit of this debate. At times here there wasn't even a quorum.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The secretary will ring the bell. The Chair will recognize the chairman of the legislative powers committee, Delegate Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman, I am not sure whether the substitute proposal is now before the committee or whether it is necessary to make a motion on this matter. Is the substitute officially before the committee now or is it necessary to make a motion?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The committees have offered a substitute proposal which is now before the committee of the whole.

MR. HOXIE: Under the former ruling of the Chair, it is my understanding that after the initial explanation of the proposal — it being all in one section — that it is in order for a minority report to be discussed at this time. I yield to Mr. Downs.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Hoxie, is this on the majority report? Is this on the original report of the committee or on the substitute?

MR. HOXIE: The minority report, I assume, would apply the same to the substitute as it did to the original, which was striking the entire proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The procedure, Mr. Hoxie, is that we will hear the proponents of the committee proposal first. If this is on the minority report, the Chair will declare you out of order.

Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: If I might speak — I yielded to Mr. Hoxie because I thought perhaps he wished to have one of the members of his committee amplify the statement with respect to the substitute proposal after which we would yield the floor to Mr. Downs or anyone else to discuss his minority report. If he would be willing to proceed in that order, I would appreciate it.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman, apparently I was in error. It was my understanding that after the initial explanation, we then considered the minority report.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Well, Mr. Hoxie —

MR. HOXIE: If I am in error, then at this time I would like to yield to Delegate Kuhn, who was the subcommittee chairman of the legislative powers committee that worked with the subcommittee of the executive branch. I yield to Mr. Kuhn.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, for those who might be interested in reading the committee report, you can find it in journal 70 on page 433.

Mr. Chairman, the traditional American concept of separation of powers among the executive, legislative and judicial branches with appropriate checks and balances would seem to suggest that the postaudit function be vested in the legislative branch. The postaudit function is an after the fact check on the expenditure of public funds. As such, responsibility for the postaudit function should be separate and distinct from the responsibility for the actual spending of public funds which is vested in the executive branch. The legislative postaudit is the job of the legislature, the branch of government responsible for appropriating funds, an independent check on the executive branch in its expenditure of the funds that are appropriated.

Mr. Chairman, some 15 states have a legislative auditor. Eleven of these states have it according to statute; 4 states have it by constitutional status. The last 3 states which revised their constitutions and adopted constitutions — those being New Jersey, Hawaii, Alaska — have put it in their constitutions. Also, the state of Virginia has it in their constitution.

I think it is important for us to remember that we had several plans introduced in this convention on a legislative auditor. Some suggested that we appoint a legislative auditor at the pleasure of the legislature. I would like to state to you at this time that 3 of the last 4 states which have adopted a legislative auditor have given him a definite term. The little Hoover commission of the state of Michigan in 1951 recommended that we have a legislative auditor, and I believe they recommended a term of 10 years — that is correct, 10 years. Our committee thought 8 years would be adequate and we thought we would be able to get a higher caliber person to take this job. I think this is a significant step forward. It will give the legislature a chance to see whether or not its intentions are being carried out when they appropriate money. I would now like to turn the floor back to Chairman Hoxie.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, another member of the legislative powers committee that worked hard and long on this proposal is Delegate Wanger. At this time I would like to yield the floor to Delegate Wanger.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Lansing, Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Hoxie and fellow delegates, it seems to me that this is one area of our constitution where we can make another significant advance in the field of promoting and continuing sound financial administration of our state government, and I respectfully urge your favorable consideration and action upon substitute Committee Proposal 78, which would establish an auditor general appointed by the legislature and who, though completely responsible to that body, would be reasonably insulated from the political and extraneous pressures which such an office would otherwise be bound to attract.

The immense cost of modern state government demands the very best means of financial management and accounting which can be devised. As you will note from the majority report in the convention journal:

> There has been in the last quarter century a marked increase in the cost and complexity of services of state government. State operating expenditures have increased from less than $13 million in 1910 to nearly $1,200,000,000 in 1961, and the last 25 years have seen the creation of at least 30 executive agencies.

The goal of accurate, efficient and honest government operation can be most completely achieved only when the responsibilities for that management and accounting are firmly and clearly fixed in state officers whose position in our government structure will realistically enable them to do the best possible job.

The financial management and accounting I just spoke of are more exactly described as the preaudit and the postaudit functions. The former includes direct internal supervision of expenditures, budget control and the preparation of an executive budget. This, obviously, is a function of the executive branch and should reside there. The latter or postaudit function is that of determining that all expenditures have been made accurately, efficiently, honestly and in accordance with established statutory policy. This "watchdog" function appropriately resides and can best be performed in the legislative branch for the following 3 reasons: first, because the legislature bears the burden of raising and appropriating the public revenues and is thus most directly concerned in seeing that they are properly spent; second, because those performing this "watchdog" function should not be responsible to the executive branch whose activities they must continually investigate and check; and third, because the legislative branch must be strengthened within its proper constitutional limits as a check and balance to an executive branch whose power and complexity have greatly increased in recent decades. Under Committee Proposal 78 it is this postaudit function which an auditor general appointed by the legislature would perform.

Now, as the committees who dealt with this problem are well aware and as many delegates are aware, there has been a great deal of support voiced in this state favoring the appointment of the auditor general by the legislature. Its proponents include the present governor, 4 former governors and a former auditor general of our state. They also include such public spirited citizens groups as the league of women voters of Michigan and the Michigan municipal league. They also include the little Hoover commission, the so called Michigan little Hoover commission in 1951, and the more recent governor's citizens' advisory committee which met prior to the constitutional convention. And, as Delegate Kuhn has pointed out, 15 other states have adopted the idea of the legislative auditor; and New Jersey, Alaska and Hawaii, with other recent constitutional revisions, have done so as well, the other state being Virginia. It has been pointed out that the legislative auditor is confined by the committee substitute to the postaudit area. He has the power to make fiscal postaudits and performance postaudits. However, as pointed out in the committee report, all of the preaudit functions are left with the executive branch, as provided by law, where they certainly belong. And thus decisions made by executive officers in the exercise of their discretion pursuant to value judgments which they alone by application of expertise are capable of making are not proper objects of the legislative auditor general's scrutiny, and he may not conduct investigations the purpose of which is to criticize such decisions. The wisdom of such a discretionary policy decision may — if at all — be called into question by the legislature alone.

As you will note in reading the substitute with which we have all been supplied, the most important aspect of the legislative auditor general's function is his power and his duty. This coupled with the power to investigate pertinent to the conduct of such postaudits is the backbone of the office itself. It is set out with some detail and necessarily so, because unless this power is spelled out in the constitution, it will undoubtedly be legally challenged in many areas as a violation of the doctrine of separation of powers. This has been a serious problem with the United States controller general and, therefore, it is something which we in Michigan should avoid and forestall.

You will note that the legislative auditor general is to be chosen by a joint vote of the legislature — that is to say, a majority of the members elected to each house. Hawaii's constitution and New Jersey's constitution have the same majority requirements. A vote in each house is desirable in Michigan, first, because either house may initiate tax legislation and, second, to best assure that a nonpartisan choice will be made.

You will also note that the legislative auditor is given a definite term of office rather than being merely at the pleasure of the legislature. It is deemed desirable to give him a fixed term to insulate the position from the pressures, sometimes venal pressures, which such an office held at the pleasure of the legislature might otherwise attract or invite and, second, to attract the most highly qualified candidates for the office. The Michigan municipal league in its last convention has recommended that he have a definite term. The Hawaiian constitution provides for an 8 year term and the comptroller general of the United States has a 15 year term and the auditor general of Detroit has a 10 year term. It is thought that by giving him an 8 year term this will make it possible to get qualified people into the job and, at the same time, face up to the fact that first of all it will take considerable time for an officeholder to become thoroughly acquainted with the position, and also because the administrative direction of the position should not be frequently interrupted and, finally, because the incumbent may only be subject to reappointment once. I therefore respectfully urge your support for this proposal as the means of making Michigan's financial organization thoroughly sound and of promoting future soundness and continued progress on the basis of sound accounting, sound performance and efficiency in the state government. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Chairman Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. Chairman, at this time I would like to yield the floor back to Mr. Martin, chairman of the executive branch committee.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to call on Mr. Karn, if he desires to make a statement on this at this time.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Karn.

MR. KARN: I will pass at this time.

MR. MARTIN: Then, Mr. Chairman, unless the minority wishes to commence the presentation of their report, I will move that the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Chairman Martin has made a motion that the committee of the whole do now rise. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has been in session and has taken under consideration several — 2 — committee proposals of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 46, A proposal pertaining to the executive budget and item veto. It reports this proposal back to the convention with 2 amendments, recommending the amendments be agreed to and the committee proposal as thus amended do pass.

Following are the amendments:

1. Amend page 2, line 14, after "governor" by inserting a comma and "with the approval of the appropriating committees of the house and senate,".

2. Amend page 2, line 14, after "expenditures of" by striking out "executive agencies" and inserting "any bodies receiving appropriations".

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on concurring in the first amendment. Mr. Snyder.

MR. SNYDER: Mr. President, may I ask who submitted the proposal?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Snyder, I don't think that — I was working; I didn't hear your question.

MR. SNYDER: Is this an amendment, you say, or the committee proposal?

PRESIDENT NISBET: This is an amendment to the committee proposal. It was acted on in the committee of the whole.

The question is on concurring with the amendment. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Amendment 2 recommended by the committee of the whole:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on concurring with the amendment. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Now there are filed with the secretary the following amendments —

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, preferential motion. I move that the convention do now recess until 2:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Martin that we recess until 2:00 o'clock. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

We are recessed until 2:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 11:30 o'clock a.m., the convention recessed; and, at 2:00 o'clock p.m., reconvened.]

The convention will please come to order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Pugsley.

MR. PUGSLEY: Mr. President and fellow delegates, during the noon recess I talked over long distance telephone with Delegate Carl Mosier. He is confined in the Dowagiac Memorial hospital. He suffered an injury to his vertebrae in the accident which he had last weekend. He reported to me that he had been in considerable pain but was feeling better today. He told me that a cast was being arranged for and I hold in my hand a telegram which was received, a part of which I read, as follows:

> The fracture was confirmed by x-ray examination. Judge Mosier is a Republican constitutional convention delegate from the Cass-St. Joseph county district. He suffered the injury last Friday in a car truck accident on the Ford expressway. Spokesman reported him in good condition but in considerable pain when he walked under his own power into the hospital after a drive with his son from Detroit.

Carl wished me to express his regards to all of the delegates. He is optimistic as usual and hopes soon to be back again. May I suggest that I think it would be a fine thing for us to send cards to him addressed at the Dowagiac Memorial hospital. Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you, Judge Pugsley. I might say we had one other message during the noon hour. You might have noticed that Martin Tweedie is absent. He called to announce the arrival, after a family of 2 girls, of an 8 pound, 15 ounce baby boy. (applause) Incidentally, I might say this is getting to be a little bit serious for me because early in the convention I had talked to one of the fathers of a new baby and said that any father that had a baby during the convention I would see that he got some baby food. This is going a little bit too far. (laughter) I don't know what my boss is going to say to me.

We will proceed on the report of the committee of the whole. Mr. Chase.

SECRETARY CHASE: When the convention recessed for lunch, the immediately pending business was the consideration of amendments to Committee Proposal 46, A proposal pertaining to the executive budget and item veto. The amendments proposed in committee of the whole had been concurred in.

Mr. Marshall now offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "The governor shall submit to the legislature, at a time fixed by law, a budget for the ensuing fiscal period setting forth in detail all proposed expenditures and estimated revenue of the state. The governor shall also cause to be submitted to each house of the legislature general appropriation bills to embody the proposed expenditures and any necessary bill or bills for new or additional revenues to meet proposed expenditures.".

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment. Mr. Marshall, do you seek recognition?

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I gave all the reasons yesterday in debate here on the floor on this amendment. The amendment, of course, is identical with the minority report amendment that was presented yesterday. I offer this amendment in hopes that some of the delegates have had a chance to give some thought to this amendment, to analyze it, to compare it with the majority proposal, to take into consideration the remarks you heard yesterday from both sides on this issue. Make up your minds according to what you honestly believe to be the best plan, what you believe to be in the best interests of the state as a whole.

I could get up and make another 20 minute or half an hour talk on it as I did yesterday, but to do so would be to only repeat those facts that I gave to you yesterday. I do not believe at this time that I could add any more to it. I do hope that you will consider this, that you will give consideration to it and reverse the action that was taken in the committee of the whole. Thank you. I ask for a division, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment. Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, as Mr. Marshall said, this whole matter was debated at length. I do not think there is any more that either side can say on it, and I hope that the amendment will be defeated.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Marshall asks for a division — for the yeas and nays. Is there support? A sufficient number up. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I want to ask for a record roll call vote.

PRESIDENT NISBET: That has been ordered, Mr. Ford. Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, this, I understand, is on the approval of this amendment? Am I correct?

PRESIDENT NISBET: The vote is on the amendment as presented by Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARTIN: Those who are in favor will vote yes. Those who are opposed will vote no.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Those who are in favor of the Marshall amendment as presented will vote aye. Those opposed to that amendment will vote no.

MR. MILLARD: Would you clear the board, Mr. President?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Will the delegates please clear the board. Those in favor of Mr. Marshall's amendment will vote aye. Those opposed to it will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment by Mr. Marshall to section a of Committee Proposal 46, the yeas are 41; the nays are 85.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Marshall offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 21, by striking out all of section b. That is lines 21 through 24 on page 1, and lines 1 through 6 on page 2.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment. Mr. Marshall, do you care to speak?

MR. MARSHALL: I think that the same statement that applied to the previous amendment would likewise apply to this one. I would only add that throughout all the discussion on this particular topic the emphasis always seems to be on the fact that revenues fall short of appropriations, but actually the state's current problems arise from the fact that appropriations have been in excess of estimated revenues. The control must be on appropriations to accomplish what seems to be the goal in section b. There would also have to be a prohibition against any appropriations outside action on the governor's budget either by the legislature alone or in response to a special session call unless each such appropriation is accompanied by its own revenue measure.

We simply — we in the minority — simply believe that this is an unnecessary provision, that it is preferable that it be deleted in order to have flexibility, and leave it up to the legislature and the executive to operate in this area. And I might add that the minority report, in particular the amendment that was just defeated, pretty closely resembles that that is included in the model constitution. We urge adoption of the amendment.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the adoption of the amendment. Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, this is the same amendment that we had yesterday. The same reasons for voting no on it are appropriate now as were appropriate yesterday. I don't understand, really, why these amendments are all being reoffered one after another. The minority can get a record vote if they want to by taking a vote on the whole thing instead of taking our time here to go through each one of these things one by one.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I demand a recorded roll call vote on this. And in answer to Delegate Martin, I do not necessarily feel that he has to understand. I did not understand his maneuver this morning either. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: A roll call vote has been demanded. Is the demand seconded? A sufficient number up. Mr. Nord, do you seek the floor?

MR. NORD: I would just like to make a comment somewhat similar to what Mr. Marshall said in anticipation of mine, and that is this: I am rather surprised to find out that what was logical yesterday is logical today. That is what Mr. Martin seems to be saying now; whereas, this morning he said that what was logical yesterday is illogical today. Something is wrong with the logic here somewhere.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment of Mr. Marshall. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment by Mr. Marshall to strike out all of section b, the yeas are 40; the nays are 90.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is not adopted. Will you please clear the board after the votes.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Marshall offers the following amendment to Committee Proposal 46:

1. Amend page 2, line 13, by striking out all of section d, lines 13 to 20, inclusive.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President and fellow delegates, the same thing goes for this as for the previous amendments. You have the minority report before you; I am sure you have had ample opportunity to go through it and you listened to the debate yesterday. As I stated on yesterday, it is this final section that is the most objectionable of all. Assuming that the aforementioned criticisms could be eliminated, the proposal would still be wholly unacceptable because of its sharp departure from the basic concepts of American constitutional government. I am not going to have further statements to make, but I demand a recorded roll call vote.

PRESIDENT NISBET: A roll call vote has been demanded. Is it seconded? A sufficient number up. The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: I would just have to say the same thing I did after the last amendment. I hope that the delegates will vote no on this.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: I rise in support of the amendment. I would just like to point out that in the final form, as I understand this, we have either adopted too much or too little. Our mandated funds now are approximately 2/3 and with the addition of the judicial and executive branch it is more than that. So it means if there were, say, a 10 percent reduction in state revenue due to causes beyond the control of any individual or the state, then the reduction in the unmandated area would have to — if my arithmetic is right — be at least 3 times the reduction on the percentage basis, or a 30 per cent reduction. And I just hope when we delegates vote on this, we will ask ourselves if it means the prisons or the universities or welfare or mental health or state police or conservation — just where those cuts are going to be made. With the final amendatory language, as I understand the action of this morning, it means the governor makes these cuts in conjunction with the legislative committees. I fear this will result in an economic whipsaw between the governor and certain members of the legislative committees which will not be good government.

I point out again that most of the people who have studied government are against the idea of each year necessarily a balanced state budget but, rather, recognize there are years there should be a surplus and years where there may be a deficit. I think this is an unsound approach to government and hope the amendment is adopted.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Gover.

MR. GOVER: Mr. President, fellow delegates, it seems that this is the place in the constitution where we may be able to save some money for the state of Michigan, and I think this part of the proposal should be left in the constitution.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment of Mr. Marshall. Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. President and members of the convention, it is my feeling that the point should be made here that in voting for this amendment, we are not voting against the executive budget. We are merely trying to determine whether this language which places a straitjacket on the legislature belongs in the constitution. I think that the debate that we had this morning, which illustrated the problems that will arise when we attempt to insert procedures into the constitution, ought to be illustrative of the problems that we are going to encounter. I sincerely hope that we decide not to include this legislative detail in the constitution.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment. A roll call has been demanded. Those in favor of Mr. Marshall's amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment of Mr. Marshall to strike out all of section d, the yeas are 46; the nays are 83.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is not adopted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 14, after "appropriations" by inserting a comma and "except those institutions of higher education established in this constitution or by law,".

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: This morning when we discussed this particular section, an interesting thing came out with regard to what definition was being attached to the words "executive agencies". The chairman of the committee interpreted it to mean the inclusion of the constitutional universities. The other members of the committee were not sure that that was the meaning at all or the intent of those words. Now, during the process, Mr. Cudlip in his effort to clear up language and to say what we do mean introduced an amendment which we have since accepted which clearly stated all agencies that receive appropriations.

Now I ask you to return to what I thought to be the original intent of the committee and what I wanted to see more carefully spelled out — to recognize the coordinate branch of government here, the universities with constitutional status, and to give them the same protection as we give to mandated funds in the constitution, as we give to the branches of government which will not be affected by this provision. And I urge your support for this agency. Remember that today is that fateful day when 1996 years ago, on the Ides of March, a knife was plunged into the back of the leader. Let's not injure our universities. Let's vote yes.

PRESIDENT NISBET: May we have a little better order. Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, I don't know who is going to get that knife, but I hope it's not the leader of the committee (laughter). Mr. Faxon has submitted this amendment this morning. As you know, the proposal was further amended by a provision with respect to the adding of the appropriating committees to this picture in determining these questions of any such cuts, and it seems to me that this obviated completely the necessity for this language. So I hope you will vote no on this amendment as you did this morning.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I would like to rise to support the Faxon amendment. I do not agree with all of the statements made by Delegate Martin. I think everyone knows what the committee proposal does and what it proposes to do in the area of permitting the governor and the appropriations committees of the house and senate to reduce budgets. I think in this space age when Michigan is lagging far behind in the training of scientists, when we are losing to the east coast and to the west coast where we have failed to provide the necessary facilities for training and education, that we definitely need to take this step in order that we positively protect the universities of this state. I urge support of the amendment.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. President, I would like to correct the record. Caesar was assassinated in 44 B.C. The year is 2,006 years ago.

I would like to call for the yeas and nays.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the amendment of Mr. Faxon. The yeas and nays have been demanded. Is that demand seconded? A sufficient number up. Those in favor of the amendment by Mr. Faxon will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On Mr. Faxon's amendment, the yeas are 41; the nays are 84.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The amendment is not adopted. Are there further amendments to the body of the proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: No further amendments, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: If not, Committee Proposal 46, as amended is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 46 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. The governor shall submit to the legislature, not later than 21 calendar days after the convening of each regular session, or at a time fixed by law, a budget for the ensuing fiscal period setting forth in detail all proposed expenditures and estimated revenue of the state. Proposed expenditures shall not exceed estimated revenue. On the same date, the governor shall cause to be submitted to each house of the legislature general appropriation bills to embody the proposed expenditures and any necessary bill or bills for new or additional revenues to meet proposed expenditures. The amount of any general fund surplus created or deficit incurred during the last preceding fiscal period shall be appropriately entered as an item in the budget and in the appropriation bills. The governor, prior to final action of the legislation thereon, may cause to be submitted to the legislature any amendments to the general appropriation bills, and shall cause to be submitted any bills to meet deficiencies in current appropriations.

Sec. b. General appropriation bills for the succeeding fiscal period shall be acted upon before either house of the legislature shall pass any other appropriation bill, except bills supplementing appropriations for the current year's operation. Any bill which will require an appropriation to carry out its purpose shall be considered an appropriation bill. One of the general appropriation bills as enacted by the legislature shall contain an itemized statement of estimated revenue by major source, the total of which shall not be less than the total of all appropriations proposed in the general appropriation bills.

Sec. c. The governor shall have power to disapprove of any item or items of any bill making appropriations of money embracing distinct items; and the part or parts approved shall be the law; and the item or items disapproved shall be void, unless repassed according to the rules and limitations prescribed for the passage of other bills over the executive veto.

Sec. d. No appropriation shall be deemed a mandate to spend. The governor, with the approval of the appropriating committees of the house and senate, shall reduce expenditures of any bodies receiving appropriations whenever it appears that actual revenues for a fiscal period will fall below the revenue estimates on which appropriations for that period were based, such reductions in expenditures to be made in accordance with procedures established by law. The governor's power to reduce expenditures shall not apply to the legislative and judicial branches or to those services for which funds are mandated by this constitution.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 78, has considered several amendments thereto, and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair will recognize Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of taking up matters on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Millard. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Millard.

[Whereupon, Mr. Millard assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The committee will be in order. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Under consideration is Committee Proposal 78, A proposal to provide for the office of legislative auditor general; to which the committees on executive branch and legislative powers have offered a substitute, which substitute is as follows:

[The substitute was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 1674.]

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The proponents of this substitute proposal were heard this morning. The question is on the adoption of the substitute for the proposal. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The substitute is adopted. The Chair will now recognize the delegate from Detroit, Mr. Downs, who will speak on the minority report amendment which reads as follows:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, by striking out all of the committee proposal.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, rather than read the minority report which has been included in our journal of official proceedings, I think we could progress faster if I were allowed to ask the chairman of the executive branch committee a few questions and then I intend to yield to 2 other delegates to speak on this.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If Mr. Martin desires to answer.

MR. MARTIN: Yes.

MR. DOWNS: All right; thank you, sir. Through the Chair I would like to ask the chairman of the committee first of all, can the legislature now establish a legislative auditor or comptroller without any additional constitutional action?

MR. MARTIN: Well, Mr. Downs, the legislature can establish someone whom it calls a legislative auditor. There is, however, very grave doubt as to whether that legislative auditor would have the authority to operate within the executive branch and to do what an auditor general or a legislative auditor established by the constitution can do. This, of course, is the reason for placing the provision in the constitution, because there would certainly be doubts about the powers of a statutory legislative auditor.

MR. DOWNS: Could I ask, through the Chair, has the legislature currently established a comptroller or a legislative auditor?

MR. MARTIN: My understanding, Mr. Downs, is that the legislature has someone whom it hopes to use to make some studies of what is going on in some of the agencies. What his authority will be in dealing with those agencies is another matter, and I think if it were to set up an auditor to go in and audit those agencies in detail, there would be considerable question about the violation of the separation of powers doctrine unless the legislative auditor had the constitutional authority which we propose to give him in this proposal.

MR. DOWNS: Has, to your knowledge, the present legislative auditor or comptroller ever been refused any information from any agency he has requested information from?

MR. MARTIN: Well, until most recently the extent of auditing was nil. The legislature has requested certain information from the agencies in connection with budget preparation and so on, and the agencies have furnished it. This, of course, is a very different thing from going into the agency and making an audit of its books and records, as the auditor general now has the authority to do. And for that reason it is not possible to go into past history with the question as to whether he has ever been refused or not. The general requests for information, so far as I know, have not been refused; but, as far as conducting audits are concerned, the answer is, it has not been done.

MR. DOWNS: Would the proposed 8 year term for the legislative auditor be a limitation on the legislature in the sense that that could be rescinded only by a 2/3 vote?

MR. MARTIN: Yes, I think the answer to that is, it would be a limitation on the legislature. It would give the legislative auditor a term that would give him job security for 8 years unless he were removed under the provision which we have contained in the present proposal for removal.

MR. DOWNS: Could I ask then through the Chair, on lines 16 and 17, what does the term "institutions of the state, whether established by this constitution or by law" include?

MR. MARTIN: This means everything, Mr. Downs. When we first drafted the proposal, it was obviously defective because it did not include the right to audit all of the various parts of state government. Among other things the word "branches" was added so that it was clear that the legislative auditor could audit the 2 other branches. The word "authorities" was added to make clear that he could audit such things as the mackinac bridge authority. The word "institutions" was added to make sure that this covered all kinds of institutions. And the phrase "whether established by this constitution or by law" was added to make sure that constitutionally established bodies were not excluded.

MR. DOWNS: Thank you. And Mr. Chairman, may I ask: what does the term "performance postaudits" in lines 17 and 18 mean?

MR. MARTIN: If you will refer to our statement of supporting reasons, Mr. Downs, the term "performance postaudit" is defined there as "an examination of the effectiveness of administration, its efficiency and its adequacy in terms of the program of the departments or agencies as previously approved by the legislature." In other words, the department or agency goes before the legislature and presents its program and says, "This is what we are proposing to do." The auditor may make a fiscal audit, as is provided, which is to determine whether the money which is expended by the agency — appropriated to and then expended by the agency — is spent properly and for proper subjects within the scope of the bill. And, secondly, he may take a look to determine whether the agency has carried out its commitments to the legislature which were made when the agency appeared before the legislature to ask for its budget or its appropriation in the last preceding year.

MR. DOWNS: Would this language permit the legislative auditor on his own initiative to review course materials of university professors and of local school boards?

MR. MARTIN: Absolutely not, Mr. Downs. There is no such intention. And the committee was perfectly clear on this that it did not include any authority to the legislative auditor to dictate or determine in any way, shape or manner, the curriculum — what is taught or how it is taught or anything of that kind.

MR. DOWNS: Well, Mr. Chairman, I get a little confused. I understand that on the definition of institutions of the state that everything was included, which I would assume means universities. "Performance postaudit" means a review of how the moneys were spent and if those answers — as I believe I understood correctly — are so, why does it not logically follow that this auditor could review in detail the academic activities not only universities but of local school boards receiving state money?

MR. MARTIN: Well, Mr. Downs, the question has been raised by some of the people connected with the universities. I believe Mr. Bonisteel has an amendment which he has submitted — I do not know whether it is on the secretary's desk yet or not — which I think will deal with this particular problem.

MR. DOWNS: The next question is: has Michigan government been dollar honest?

MR. MARTIN: Has it been dollar honest?

MR. DOWNS: Yes.

MR. MARTIN: If you are asking me whether it has been as honest as one might expect, I think the answer is yes. I have often said when I was auditor general that there is no more dishonesty in government than there is in private business or in any other sector of the economy. There are occasions when there is dishonesty and this, of course, is the purpose of an audit. And we found a number of cases of that kind. The difference, of course, is that when you find something of that kind in a public body, you are acting in the public eye and it tends to seem as though perhaps there is more in government than there is in private industry, because it is sometimes hushed up or brushed under the table or dealt with in some other way if it simply involves a private company. But the direct answer to your question is: there is about the same amount of honesty and there is about the same amount of dishonesty as you might expect in any other situation outside of government.

MR. DOWNS: To your knowledge has any other state had more dollar honest government than has Michigan?

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Downs, I cannot answer that because we never attempted to compare Michigan with other states on this score. I think that you can say that we have had very good auditor generals, of course, (laughter) and they have been very careful to see to it that nobody got away with anything they should not. However, I cannot make any comparison with other states. I think we are as good — I think perhaps we are a little better than most other states.

MR. DOWNS: All right. Well, thank you. I have 2 other questions. Is the intent of this committee proposal to eliminate the present constitutional auditor elected by the people?

MR. MARTIN: I am sorry, I didn't quite get that question.

MR. DOWNS: Is the intent of this committee proposal for a legislative auditor to include the elimination of the present constitutional auditor?

MR. MARTIN: Yes. Yes, of course. We don't want to create a duplicating function here. We don't want a legislative auditor general and an executive auditor general both doing the same job.

MR. DOWNS: And I have a final question, which may be subjective and if you would care not to answer it, of course, I would not press it. This is: when you were Auditor General of the state of Michigan, did you feel that your primary loyalty was to the governor, the convention that nominated you, or the people that elected you?

MR. MARTIN: Well, that is sort of a 4 pronged question, and I won't try to answer all its prongs. I will only say that I felt that I ought to do the best kind of a job for the state of Michigan that was possible without regard to whether I was elected or appointed or without regard to whether I was in the executive branch or might have been in the legislative branch.

I think if you have the right person on this job and he has some reasonable tenure and his staff has some reasonable tenure, you can expect to have a competent, thorough and honest job done.

MR. DOWNS: Thank you very much. I would like to yield, Mr. Chairman, to Mr. Austin for a question.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman — thank you, Mr. Downs — I would like to ask one question of Mr. Martin, too, in regard to the elimination of the auditor general, whom, I presume, will be replaced by the legislative auditor. We have indicated on page 1, line 12, of the substitute proposal that

> The legislative auditor general shall conduct comprehensive fiscal postaudits of all transactions and accounts kept by or for all branches, departments, offices, boards, commissions, agencies, authorities and institutions of the state . . . .

Now am I to assume this would exclude local units of government, Mr. Martin?

MR. MARTIN: Yes, Mr. Austin, that is correct. It is not intended that the legislative auditor general should do anything more than handle state agencies, departments and institutions. These other units would, of course, continue to be subject to such audit as the legislature required. At the present time the counties are audited. The townships are not audited, generally, unless there are special problems. The school districts are not audited except that the legislature requires that they themselves have an independent audit made. So there are different provisions and it is to be presumed that the legislature would make such provision for them. They would not be audited by the legislative auditor general.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, on line 8 of page 2, you have provided that

> The legislature shall provide by law with respect to the maintenance of uniform accounting systems and the auditing of units or agencies of local government.

MR. MARTIN: That is correct.

MR. AUSTIN: Now, if you are eliminating the present auditor general and if the legislative auditor general is to have no other duties than those specifically assigned to him in this proposal — which would, of course, exclude local units of government — what do you envision will be the auditing agency for these local units of government?

MR. MARTIN: Well, we would leave that entirely to the legislature, Mr. Austin, to place that where it appeared to be most desirable. As you know, we do propose that there be some reconsolidation of some of the departments. If that is approved it would be placed by the legislature in one of those departments, presumably —

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman —

MR. MARTIN: — or might be made a separate department, depending upon what the legislature saw fit to do.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, then what you do envision is another auditing agency in addition to the legislative auditor within the structure of the state government somewhere?

MR. MARTIN: We envision another auditing agency, Mr. Austin, but we don't envision another auditing agency for state government and for state institutions. At the present time the work is completely divided and completely divisible in the office of the auditor general. He has 2 staffs which do not cross over. One of them works on state audits and the other works on county audits.

MR. AUSTIN: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I will yield the floor back to Mr. Downs.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to yield to Mr. Brown.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Brown.

MR. T. S. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I apologize for standing up here at this juncture and standing facing the delegates, but for what I am about to say, at least for the next few moments, I think it is essential that you see what I am doing. I am not going to get into histrionics at this juncture, but I do have some general remarks about the topic that we are involved in right now.

Of course, the legislative auditor general problem is only part and parcel of a much larger problem, the problem of whether or not we are going to have appointive or elective state officials. Now it is argued generally and also specifically in regard to the legislative auditor general that the reason we must have appointive state officials is so that you can more easily pinpoint responsibility. In this particular case you would pinpoint responsibility, I assume, either to the legislature or to the governor because in most cases the governor and the legislature, were they of the same party, in regard to the legislative auditor general would have the same man in mind. I think this point of responsibility can be best illustrated by a little skit that I happened to see a year or so ago which was done by a group of strolling players that you will see sometimes in New York city and Chicago in the improvisation field. These players do bits in pantomime, generally at the suggestion of anyone in the audience, and they are usually quite effective in illustrating certain social points. This particular illustration — and I warn you in advance it is not humorous; as a matter of fact, it is tragic — concerns a rising young corporation executive. And you see the first gentleman in pantomime come out on the stage, and the announcer offstage begins to talk about the corporation executive and how he is doing all the right things and how he is trying to get ahead and trying to get into a position of power within the corporation. And he soon naturally gathers about him a staff. Enter the second player on the stage, who is obviously acting in the capacity of an administrative assistant. So that the rising young corporation executive — as the moderator goes on — is issuing orders and making decisions, and the executive assistant is carrying them out. He is scurrying about and so on implementing the orders. The executive is conducting press conferences and otherwise acting in a grand public relations capacity while the administrative assistant constantly is doing his bidding. Eventually the corporation executive rises — according to the moderator — to the position of president of the corporation. And here he is in a very grand posture doing things on the very grandest scale. Again the administrative assistant is scurrying about shining the shoes, brushing the clothes, issuing the orders, hiring and firing. Finally the corporation gets into trouble and there is an antitrust suit involved with the government. And they lose this antitrust suit after several lawyers go on stage and argue grandly, et cetera. Ultimately, the responsible party is taken off to jail. And enter the policeman in the uniform who grabs the struggling and kicking administrative assistant and hauls him off to jail while the executive keeps on with his press conference.

I think this is an illustration of something that we are all aware of. And that is that when you have an executive who has, either in government or in business, an ultimate responsibility that in most cases in a practical way he does not have that ultimate responsibility. Now I don't think that the 5-percenters in the Truman administration, for instance, reflected adversely on the president himself, and I don't think that Sherman Adams in the Eisenhower administration reflected adversely upon the president himself. And I don't think either that the president of General Electric in the price fixing cases was adversely reflected upon, although the vice presidents went to jail. Now I do think that this idea of responsibility is therefore fatuous and that your appointive, relatively minor, state officials are not really reflective upon the integrity and efficiency of the chief executive of the state.

And I want to say something else, also, because this comes part and parcel with the responsibility argument when we are considering elective or appointive state officials. That is the concept of efficiency. Now we have heard a lot in this constitutional convention about efficient government and effective government, but those people, generally speaking, who talk about efficient government and effective government do not at the same time talk about the philosophical bases and philosophical consequences of their efficiency and their effectiveness. Those people who adhere to the normal conservative philosophy, I think, have quite amply demonstrated the philosophical orientation that they have and I think that the liberal end of this convention has also done likewise. Now the real nub, I think, of the central problem concerning elective or appointive state officials is again — and I have alluded to this many times on the floor previously — is whether or not there is a reasonable philosophical basis for this idea of efficiency in government. I think it is a relatively novel idea. It arose in this country at the turn of the century. It is being fostered and developed by, generally speaking, the political scientists and the so called nonpartisan groups. But I think this is erroneous because, in a larger sense and in an ultimate sense, in this country we are in grave danger of being inundated by the efficiency experts. Now, in that regard, I think it behooves us to elect as many people as we can as long as we can and spread the base of governmental participation as far as we can down into the ranks of the people in order to protect our ultimate best interests.

Now, specifically, in regard to the auditor general — as Tom Downs has indicated already in his questions and as the following speakers will no doubt indicate — our principal reason for wanting to maintain the elective and independent status of the Auditor General of the state of Michigan is really quite simple. We feel that the auditor general is responsible for fiscal integrity of the state and he should therefore be elected by the people. Now the classic mechanism is that the governor proposes; the legislature disposes; and then an independent outside authority beholden to neither the governor nor the legislature makes sure that this position is at least financially carried out with integrity. Now, we would violate — as has been already indicated — the normal separation of powers doctrine if we were to have a legislative auditor general in the state of Michigan. We would in effect and in practice end up with the auditor general having 144 bosses, each of whom would have some particular say in indicating what phase of government he wanted to have investigated and possibly even harassed.

It has been mentioned before that under the present statutes — and I don't think this can be denied — the present elected auditor general has all the power that all of the advocates of the legislative auditor general would want him to have. And the only reason our present auditor general has at times not been able to perform his functions is, of course, that he has not been granted the funds. I do not think there has been an illustration in Michigan history of an auditor general refusing to do something that the legislature asked him to do. They have simply not granted him the funds in the past and I do not see why they would change their stripes and begin to grant him funds in the future. In general, again, we are talking about — in our constitution, hopefully — strengthening the position of the executive branch of government. In that regard the legislative auditor general would be a regressive measure rather than a strengthening measure for the executive, because it would involve a harassment of the executive branch.

Now, specifically, I am going to read from a book I have before me, which does not quite read like a novel. It happens to be the Senate Journal of 1953 of the state of Michigan, on page 406. What happened historically was that the legislature set up a joint committee to study the proposition — this is back in 1952 — of whether or not we should have a legislative auditor general in the state of Michigan, and I want to read to you verbatim the report of that committee.

Senate Journal '53, page 406 of this journal, reports of select committees. Mr. Porter submitted the following report:

> State senate concurrent resolution 19 of the 1952 regular session created a select committee to study and report on the values to be realized by realigning the present functions of the auditor general including the creation of a division of state government concerned with all relationships of local governments, the proper role and concern of the legislature in the postaudit of governmental activities, and the need of the legislature in having its own sources of information so it could fulfill its responsibilities more effectively, and the need for appraising the conduct of state programs as well as auditing the accuracies of their financial transactions. The committee has completed its work and recommends:
> 1. That the auditor general remain an elective state official independent of the legislature and of the executive;
> 2. That the proper function of the auditor general should be that of postaudit for the purpose of ferreting out violations of the law including failures of compliance with the accounting and appropriation laws of the state. The committee is of the opinion that the auditor general should also point out those cases where appropriated funds are used in a manner contrary to clear legislative intent and that such cases should be reported to the legislature.
> 3. That the legislature should strengthen the office of the legislative comptroller, that the office of legislative comptroller should be established by statute, that the staff of the office should be increased so far as necessary to properly provide the legislature with technical services in the field of governmental costs and appropriations and to assist the legislature in appraising the value of special governmental services.
> Respectfully submitted, Elmer R. Porter, chairman; Frank D. Beadle, Edward Hutchinson, Arnell Engstrom, Richard L. Thomson, Carl G. Lindquist.

At the conclusion of my remarks, I should very much appreciate it, if he cares to answer, an explanation from Vice President Hutchinson as to why he has changed his position relative to the legislative auditor general.

Now, I have one more item which is a communication from the Alaska legislative council, which is a joint group in the Alaska legislature, submitted to the then Auditor General of the state of Michigan, Mr. Otis M. Smith, in a letter of December 22, 1961, and which reads as follows:

> Dear Mr. Smith:
> At the request of the legislative audit committee, the Alaska council is making inquiry about auditing practices and problems in the several states.
> In Alaska postauditing of all agencies is a legislative function.

As indicated previously, I believe by Mr. Kuhn, they have the legislative auditor general setup there.

> The audit committee is composed of the finance chairmen of both houses and the presiding officers of both houses and one additional member appointed by them. The 6 member committee nominates a CPA who, when approved by the legislature, serves as legislative auditor at its pleasure.
> The legislative auditor directs the activities of the staff agency, the division of legislative audit. Its goal is an annual postaudit of each state agency, a goal which it has found impossible to attain even with an expanded staff.
> While the executive branch provides a preaudit, there is no arrangement for internal audits by the agencies themselves and it is felt that the absence of internal audits makes effective annual postaudit of every agency impossible.
> I am enclosing a questionnaire covering types of audits, interaudit agency relationships and audit procedures. We would very much appreciate your assisting us by completing the questionnaire and adding any comments or suggestions you think would be helpful in eliminating our auditing bottleneck.
> Sincerely, John C. Doyle, executive director.

Now I think this illustrates that in a new state whose problems, I think, are relatively uncomplicated as compared with ours and who has the system of the legislative auditor general, that they are already at this early date running into problems and they find they are unable to accomplish their program.

I think this is illustrative of the fact that we in Michigan in our system have been doing quite well, even though in a recent conversation I understand from our present auditor general, Mr. Farnum, that when his staff gets into the area of county audits that it requires, when they do Wayne county, the bulk of their staff approximately 14 months to do a year's audit in Wayne county alone, and that when they get into the other counties of the state it requires approximately 11 months to handle them on a lump sum basis. So that in effect we are not able to have an annual audit in every county.

I should like at this time — and I have the greatest respect for Vice President Hutchinson — I should like, if he cares to answer, an explanation for his change of heart, if any, concerning the legislative auditor general principles.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The gentleman does not care to answer. The Chair will recognize Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: I would like to yield to Delegate Perlich.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Perlich.

MR. PERLICH: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the office of the auditor general has about 100 men and women and it is the watchdog of state and county money. They do one thing — this is important — they make sure that none of this money is stolen, wasted or spent without proper authorization. For as long as there has been such an office, the job of auditor general has been without the direct control of any branch of government. This is because he is elected directly by the people. The present auditor general, Billie S. Farnum, says, "I have always felt that is is essential that the man responsible for integrity in government should be directly responsible to and elected by the people."

All constitutions including those of states and federal governments separate the powers of government into 3 arms; executive, legislative and judicial. If Michigan's new constitution puts the auditor general under the legislature, it will be breaking down this separation. The auditor general's job is part of the executive department. It is not a part of the legislative work. The auditor general does administrative work and not legislative. He has many important chores. He sets up plans for uniform accounting in all counties, and he improves the efficiency and economy of spending in state government and in schools and townships and units that get state money. In some of these, the audits are performed at state or taxpayers' request.

An auditor general who has to work for the legislature is going to have 144 bosses. This is a prospect to curl your hair and break your back all in one; with 144 bosses the auditor general would have at least 144 pet projects or fishing expeditions to worry about. Many of the legislators would have 2, 3, or 10 projects mostly aimed at embarrassing the executive office. The result would be a real malfunction in accounting of money at all levels of government. When the state does audits because of political grudges or whims of individual legislators it is asking for trouble, not improving or increasing confidence in the state or its government. The most important point — and nobody seems to be saying it in this fuss about putting the auditor general under the legislature — is that the legislature does not need any new authority to get whatever fiscal or money information it needs for its work. If the people themselves keep the right to elect the auditor general, they can be sure he will be responsible only to them, and their rights and needs and interests will be protected. Thank you. (applause)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I want to say that this was Delegate Perlich's first speech, and I am sure we are all appreciative of the applause. We assume, of course, that the votes go with the applause. (laughter)

I want to say that this does complete the presentation. We appreciate the time the delegates gave to consider this. I would just like to add a very brief summary. I feel that, first of all, our historical elective system of auditor general has in Michigan, in one simple word, "worked." Nobody has shown that it has not worked satisfactorily, particularly when it is demonstrated that the legislature has to our knowledge never been denied information it has requested. Now I feel, as so often happens, that in this case the proposal does not provide too little or too much; it provides both too little and too much. Delegate Austin brought out very well the vacuum that will be created when some of the present auditing functions would be eliminated and simply would be supplanted by the one sentence saying, "The legislature shall provide by law . . . uniform accounting," et cetera. I think that much of the present auditing system that has worked would be discontinued; so in that sense this proposal does too little. Now where it does too much is twofold. First of all, and the answers from the distinguished chairman of the committee to the contrary notwithstanding, I for one feel that this broad definition of performance audit or postaudit would permit a legislative auditor, if he were so inclined, to interfere with academic freedom. I feel this is particularly a danger because the auditor is elected for 8 years, and if I were flip I would say: who will audit the auditor? I do feel, though, there is a danger of the "tail wagging the dog."

At the present time the auditor of the state must return to the people for election and represent them. I think this should be expanded to a 4-year term and the legislature have its opportunity to audit and the governor have his executive power to require reports of any and all agencies of the executive branch that he so desires. So, in summary, I will simply say that our present system has proved satisfactory. We have had checks financially, by the governor and by the legislature and by the people, to an auditor general elected by and directly responsible to the people. I therefore urge support of the minority report amendment and the deletion of this section. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Then you are yielding the floor, Mr. Downs?

MR. DOWNS: Yes.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Wood.

MR. WOOD: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Martin a question through the Chair. Mr. Martin, do you consider the county treasurer a state office?

MR. MARTIN: The county treasurer is a state office, yes, Mr. Wood.

MR. WOOD: And the county road commissioner is a state office? They get their funds from the state?

MR. MARTIN: Yes, that's right.

MR. WOOD: Have you ever thought of the possibility — and I think I know of a case or two where it happens — that we have 144 men in the legislature and they are in various businesses and at various times they do business with these state agencies, and that puts them in the position of hiring an auditor under your proposal? — and that these same legislators could fire him if they did not like his report when he audits their transactions?

MR. MARTIN: That is why we expand his term and why we give him a reasonable length of term and why we give his staff civil service status, Mr. Wood. That is important and it was important when he was an auditor serving as part of the administrative branch.

MR. WOOD: Well, supposing something was found in the account of one of these legislators who was doing business with the state; do you think it probable that that auditor would make a report derogatory to the man that hired him?

MR. MARTIN: I certainly do if the legislature had done a decent job in picking the man. I cannot imagine — you have this same situation with the general accounting office. The comptroller general of the United States is in exactly the same position with respect to the congress as the legislative auditor would be with respect to the legislature, and nobody has cast any reflections on the comptroller general of the United States. He hands out even justice and his reports are accepted as being absolutely correct and honest.

MR. WOOD: It doesn't seem to me that this auditor should be placed in the position of auditing accounts of the men who hired him. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I was one of the original sponsors of this delegate proposal along with Delegate Wanger. I would like to make some observations based on my 5 years on the legislature staff. The observation is basically this: that we desperately need this auditor general because the present system is inadequate. At present we have a legislative controller who is the head of the legislative service bureau. He does all the postaudit plus the operation of the budget under the direction of the ways and means, and appropriations committees. His department is grossly understaffed and he lacks the independence necessary to do an effective job in checking the various state agencies to see if they have spent moneys and followed the legislative intent correctly. The present system can be compared, I think, to trying to run a billion dollar corporation out of a cigar box. The net result of this is that the legislature must for all practical purposes rely on the executive branch to prepare the budget, to preaudit the budget, and then report to the legislature whether it — the executive branch — has carried out the legislative intent in the appropriation act. There is no way for the legislature to conduct its own postaudit, practically speaking. Now the legislature has partially recognized this problem by hiring an additional person this year.

Another evidence of the need for a legislative auditor is the fact that the legislature shifts periodically from line item to lump sum budgets. When appropriating lump sums, the legislature feels insecure, because they do not have the information as to whether the agencies are spending the money in accordance with legislative policy. When they shift to line item budgets, which they are doing this year in some areas, they become burdened with administrative detail and in effect become administrators and not policymakers. The legislative auditor general could ease the minds of the legislators in this respect.

The cost of a legislative auditor is definitely not a factor in this situation, for a good, competent legislative auditor and a competent staff would save more than the cost of the salaries involved in the first year of operation. For these and many other reasons already stated, I think it is imperative that the legislature have an independent, qualified auditor and an adequate, competent staff. I urge you to defeat the minority report amendment and support the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Lansing, Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, in urging you to vote no on this minority report amendment, I would like to call your attention to the fact that the following are among the people who testified before the committee of the convention to have the auditor general appointed by the legislature: Governor Swainson, former Governors Brucker, Kelly, Williams and Van Wagoner. They were all in agreement on the desirability of this point. I would also like to call your attention to a report rendered by the citizens' advisory committee, which was appointed by the governor to study constitutional issues. You all have a copy of this report. Page 7 of the report, the top half of that page, double spaced, reads as follows:

> As for the auditor general, the committee recommends that he be selected by the legislature. The joint committee staff also recommended legislative selection of the auditor general.

In its final report the staff commented:

> The legislature now lacks any effective means of its own for determining whether or not the intent of the policy decisions it makes is being honestly and efficiently translated into action. A legislative auditor general would give the legislature, as the policy determining body, the means for checking on the executive administration of its policy.

And then the citizens' advisory committee continues:

> We would add that the auditor general performs a rather technical function. The electorate is unqualified to pass judgment upon a candidate's capabilities for the job.

I note that in the chairman's letter on this report on, I believe, the third leaf of the report from the chairman of this committee, it says:

> We have achieved considerable consensus. In the sole case where committee members have expressed substantial disagreement with the recommendation in the report, their dissent is noted.

I note there is no dissent noted at all regarding the auditor general, and I further note that the members of the committee which made this report include the Honorable Murray D. Van Wagoner; Mrs. Irwin Whitaker; Mr. Ferrell Heady, chairman; Joseph Woodka; Honorable Clark J. Adams; William J. Brake and William Marshall. (laughter) If Mr. Marshall would care to express his opinion upon the subject briefly, I would not be averse to yielding to him for a brief comment at this time.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I don't believe I understood the question. I was carrying on a conversation. Would you repeat it?

MR. WANGER: No, I asked you no question. I said if you cared to make any comment regarding the legislative auditor, briefly, that I would not be averse to yielding to you for that purpose. I did not request that you answer a question.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Wanger, there are several on the list here and if you have a question to ask Mr. Marshall, that is all right, but the Chair will not open the floor to him to make a speech at this time because there are several ahead of him.

MR. MARSHALL: If you have a question, Delegate Wanger, shoot.

MR. WANGER: Are you in favor of having the auditor general appointed by the legislature?

MR. MARSHALL: I am not. I am in favor of having him appointed by the people.

MR. WANGER: Thank you.

MR. MARSHALL: Well, now, were you referring to the — someone mentions the report here. Did you mention something about a report of the citizens' committee?

MR. WANGER: Yes.

MR. MARSHALL: I would advise you, and Dr. Heady who headed that committee can also advise you, that I did not sign the report. I was not present at its final adoption, and at the meetings that I was present I talked in terms of elective officials. So I want to set the record straight. There has been discussion heretofore in our committee on this question. I did not sign the report; I want to make that clear. And I am in favor of continuing to have the state officials elected with the consent and advice of the people by casting their ballots.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, to continue, the points which have been raised in opposition to the legislative auditor general are, of course, obviously contrary to the testimony which we have had presented that was made before the committee of the convention dealing with this subject. But a question has been raised regarding 3 items, the first of which deals with the subject of performance postaudits, and I would quote to describe to the convention this well accepted term from the little Hoover commission staff report 11, page 5, which, as you know, was drafted in 1951. I quote:

> Because the appropriations process involves the determination of policy, it is necessary that the legislature hold the executive responsible not only for the honest expenditure of all funds but also for the efficient use of public money in accordance with policies prescribed by law. This is known as an operational audit or a performance audit, and it too should be undertaken by a staff responsible to the legislature.

So we see that not only is the term reasonably accepted but it deals not only with the subject of dollar honesty, as Mr. Downs pointed out, it also deals with the subject of efficiency, which is always a problem in any big organization — business or governmental — and also deals with the problem of whether or not expenditures have been made in accordance with lawful statutory policy which has been established.

I suggest that the third question which has been raised is a question without any substantial merit in it. That is the question of academic freedom. There is clearly no power here where the legislative auditor could interfere with academic freedom. Remember, his powers, as put out in the committee substitute before us, are only of a fact finding nature. He can only do the postaudits, not preaudits; only postaudits, and postaudit investigations only with respect to matters which the legislature itself has the power to control. This gives the legislature no power whatsoever. It has been legally long accepted in this state that the universities have the control of academic freedom and so there is no danger whatsoever, as has been pointed out by several previous speakers, that this matter would in any way threaten the principle of academic freedom known to our state.

One final point has been raised by Mr. Wood, who suggested that there might be an occasion where one of the members of the legislature or a number of them would be embarrassed or at least would be angered by some action which this legislative auditor might take. I would suggest, first of all — as has been previously pointed out — that the position of the office and its staff insulates him from that type of pressure. I would, secondly, suggest that if a legislator was interested in dealings with the state to that extent he would clearly have a conflict of interest which would disqualify him from serving in the legislature of the state of Michigan. I believe one of the proposals which will subsequently be presented by the committee on legislative powers will provide that any person in the legislature shall not enter into such dealings in his own business which would create a substantial conflict of interest.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Marshall, Mr. Hatch.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman, after sitting here patiently and listening to Delegate Brown's story about the corporation executive — I am sorry to see that he is not in the chamber right now — I fail to see the relevance of the particular story to the matter that we have under discussion, but I think if we add a few facts to that story we might see that it is most relevant.

Let us assume that that corporation executive also was a member of the board of directors of that corporation and that not only was he a member of the board of directors but he also conducted the audit of that corporation. Now I don't think that if Mr. Brown were a stockholder in that corporation he would want a member of the board of directors to be conducting the audits of the corporation's activities. And I think this is analogous to the situation we have today in state government where the auditor general is a member of the executive team and sits on the administrative board. I therefore oppose the amendment and support the committee report.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Detroit, Dr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I understand that what we have before us is under the aegis of the committee on the executive branch and the minority report thereto. I understood, too, that what we were discussing was the question of the ways and means of strengthening the executive power and strengthening the power of the governor and the executive branch of government in order that we might give proper sway to leadership and responsibility.

I am somewhat disturbed by the tenor of the proposals, including the proposal to which we have a minority report amendment in front of us, because they seem to have in their combined impact not so much a strengthening of the powers of the governor and the executive branch but a diminution of it and a weakening of it both by direct means and indirect means. Thus far in this convention we have taken one step in my judgment which weakens the executive authority by depriving the governor of the right to select members of the judiciary, a very important power in my judgment. When the record of Mr. Williams' administration will go down, one of the major accomplishments of it was the caliber and quality of the people he selected there, and we have removed that. And I think that is an oblique if not a direct attack upon the power of the governor.

Second, we have before us a proposal which talks in terms of the legislature selecting a person to exercise the auditing function under the committee on the executive branch, and I submit that what we are having before us is also a weakening of the executive branch of government. It does not strengthen the power of the governor. He does not have by this proposal an auditor general elected by the people — and who is a member of the state administrative board — as part of his team to exercise a certain amount of independent judgment as an elected separate official, but is still part of the team and part of the executive branch giving the governor the kind of cabinet, organization and orientation that he needs. Here we have a proposal which, if you will, undermines the executive branch by saying and making a judgment constitutionally that we may not trust what is happening and we want to exercise a "watchdog" function — not merely a watchdog function; you almost have here someone who acts in the capacity of the Inspector General of the United States Army, who is responsible to no one but the commanding general and for none of the line functions. And it seems to me this also is a diminution of the executive power and authority.

I understand, too, contemplated in the series of proposals that we are going to have before us from the executive branch is appointment of state officials perhaps with advice and consent and that also means that we transfer powers from the executive branch — the governor having a team, an administrative board, that he has some selection over at party conventions — to a selection which will be influenced by the legislature, and, if as indicated, an unrepresentative legislature.

I think in these 3 very important areas — the question of the selection of the judges, this auditor general selected by the legislature, the advice and consent over power of appointment — we are not strengthening the power of the executive; we are not enhancing the power of the executive to exercise leadership in the community and state. I think we are qualifying it and distracting it and decimating it, and I am quite apprehensive, Mr. Chairman, that one of the things that was advertised as a reason for calling this convention — to give the governor the power to exercise leadership, to do the things that are necessary in the next 50 years — is not actually taking place. We are obliquely and indirectly hammering away at the executive power and giving more and more power to certain segments of the legislature, the legislature which is thus far, in my humble judgment, unrepresentative, and I am quite disturbed — I wish sometimes that on our lever we had an amber button as well as a red and green one, because I am not so sure which way to move on some of these — but I have a disposition because of the general trend thus far in this report to vote for the minority amendment and I urge others to do so.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Dr. Norris, the Chair wishes to inform you that this proposal was offered by both the executive branch and the legislative powers committee together. The Chair will recognize the delegate from Detroit, Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, first of all I would like to make it clear that unlike the remarks of another delegate, this is not my first speech. It is also not my last speech.

With regard to the question of the auditor general, I believe that the evidence we have before us makes one thing crystal clear, and that is that reasonable men may differ on this subject. It appears as though reasonable men have differed even with themselves on this subject from time to time or, at least, they certainly have wavered in their minds. As a reasonable man myself, I certainly would like to confess the same thing: I have wavered in my mind. In fact I do not know that my mind has 100 per cent finished reasoning on this subject, and I would like to take the opportunity with you to reason. Reasonable men may differ, so let us reason. Everything else has been tried and has not succeeded, so let us reason.

The first point I noticed in reading the proposal — I have not had available the substitute — but in reading the proposal I noticed it begins: "The legislature . . . shall appoint a legislative auditor general." Now this is not the first time we have had the words "The legislature shall" before us. Every time that we have those words before us, so far as I can recall, someone has taken the floor and objected to those words and this time it is my turn to do it. When it says "The legislature shall" we always get the question in the back of our minds: what happens if they don't? What happens if it says, "The legislature shall select an auditor general" and they just don't manage to get around to it? The time for adjournment comes and they have not agreed on which one of those candidates shall be the man and there isn't any auditor general.

Now, it may seem that this is far fetched. Judge Dehnke is always saying that we have a lively imagination and these things never happen. It is true that some of us do have lively imaginations; all lawyers do, no doubt. But it has been known that the legislature has failed to do something that it ought to do. I believe I could present a list of at least 2 or 3 things like that where they have failed — like balancing the budget, for example; they have not done that. And reapportionment. When they had a duty to do that, for 20 or 30 years they didn't do that. And there are probably 1 or 2 other things they may not have done, as well.

Now if the constitution says there shall be an auditor general, period; says how he shall be elected or appointed, whichever it may be, especially elected, then we know there will be one. But if the proposal says the legislature of 144 people shall get together and agree on a certain man — this reminds me of the situation in which some of my clients have put me in the past. They say, let us make up an agreement that, while we do not know what the terms of it are now, let us write down that we will agree to agree in the future. And I always tell them that that makes no sense as well as having no legal significance. You cannot agree to agree. And here you are expecting, you are requiring, the legislature to agree and when the legislature is required to agree on a certain, single individual, both houses must agree. It is not even enough if a majority of all the legislators should agree.

So, point one on my doubts — and I hope that everyone else will take this into account as one of the factors to be considered in reasoning — is this: you do not have a self executing auditor general provision if you adopt this provision. You only have a hope that there will be an auditor general, and it seems to me that that is not quite good enough. When it comes to tracing the people's money, I would like to have something a little bit better than a hope that somebody will be selected to do it. I would like to be certain.

Now I am sympathetic with the source from whence this sprung, this idea of the model constitution of the national municipal league. I have noted it there myself and that is one of the reasons I am wavering about this, because I have a great respect for that constitution and I notice that many of the states which have recently had constitutional conventions also have had respect for it and have done the same thing with the legislative auditor. But I would like to point out the difference between that constitution and the one that we are proposing. That constitution is radically different on crucial points, namely, what the legislature shall be. We are talking about "The legislature shall" do something or other, shall keep tab of the money of the people. Well, who is the legislature under the national municipal league's constitution and who is the legislature under our constitution? Under theirs it is a unicameral legislature based strictly on population not even adhering to county lines. In other words, it is a standard political scientist's dream of a perfect legislature. Now with a perfect legislature certainly a much stronger argument no doubt can be made in favor of a legislative auditor, in fact a very strong one. The main one against it, then, is you don't know whether they will act, whether the 144 will agree; but we do not have that kind of a proposal before us, which we will be reaching in probably a week or so, as to what the legislature shall be like. Ours, according to the majority proposal — and there is a possibility that it might pass; you never can tell — suppose that did happen, the worst should happen, that the majority proposal for the legislature should pass, should be adopted. Then we would have a malapportioned legislature instead of a "Mel" apportioned legislature. We would have a legislature which is not responsive to the people.

Another one of the factors that causes me difficulty with this particular problem has to do with the argument that we want to have a strong governor. And there is a great deal of movement afoot — and I am basically in sympathy with the idea — that we should have a strong governor. I don't like to have a weak government of any sort and I don't see why we should have a weak governor. We should have a strong governor. Now if we are to have a strong governor, he is spending a great deal of money. It would be a nice thing for him to be sure that he knows where that money is going. More than a nice thing. You would think that would be his duty. And if you think it would be his duty, you would think he would have some means to make sure that he can do that. He has the duty to know where all the money is going, but under the proposal before us he has no power to find out. The only one that would have the power to find out is the legislature, provided they do manage to appoint an auditor general. If no auditor general is appointed, nobody will find out. And if an auditor general is appointed who is responsible to — that is, appointed by — the legislature, while it is true he has the duty to report to the governor, he is still responsible to the legislature and not to the governor. A strong governor should have the tools. This makes the governor a weak governor.

Let us state this in a different way. Looking at this from the political scientific type of approach, the spending of the money is an executive function and to find out whether the money has been spent where it should be, and so forth, is part of the executive responsibility. It belongs to the executive branch of the government. Some place in the executive branch of the government there must be an absolute power to find out where the money goes and I would like to make this point in this connection. Suppose you do have a legislative auditor. I have no objection to it. I think it is a great idea in and of itself. Why not? If they want to find out where the money is going, they should be able to get the facts, but what in the world has that got to do with whether or not there is an auditor general of the state, for all of the state, and not just for the information of the legislature? There is no inconsistency between the 2 of them.

The main argument I have heard in favor of the legislative auditor is that there should be a check and a balance, that the legislature appropriates this money and the governor spends it and the legislature should find out where it went. Again, nobody could say that that is a bad argument, but if it is a good argument — and I think it is a good argument — what is wrong with the reverse of that argument, or the converse of that argument? If it is a good idea for the legislature to find out how the executive branch is working out, is it a bad idea to do the opposite and have the executive branch have a way to find out how the legislature is working out? Is it a bad idea, for example, for the attorney general of the state to have subpoena power to get information just like the auditor general has, subpoena power to get information about the legislative branch of government? It has been pointed out that it is against morals and ethics and it may become against the constitution pretty soon for a legislator to have a conflict of interest — Mr. Chairman, I believe I may have walked into the wrong room; it sounds like Grand Central terminal, and I had an idea that it was a different place. May we have order?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: All right, we will give attention to the delegate.

MR. NORD: I regret to say that my train of thought has been interrupted. Probably the best way to get back to where I started from is to start over again; then I am sure I will be back on the right track. (laughter) But I will take the next to the best course and continue.

If it is correct that the legislature should have some overseeing power over the executive — and I believe it is — it is just as true that the reverse should be so. The executive branch should be able to check on the legislature. I put in such a proposal too, as a delegate proposal. It was one of those 20,000 or 30,000 delegate proposals. However, it has not as yet seen the light of day. But I would say this: if we are insistent upon the legislature having this supervisory check and balance over the executive, let us be consistent; let us do it the other way, too.

I hope that the Chair will not be upset when I point out that all the attorney generals in, I believe, the last 20 years favored that, including Mr. Millard. It is something that is generally thought of — at least by attorney generals — as being a nifty idea; that they should have subpoena power over the people of the state so that they can see that provisions such as the one Mr. Wanger mentioned — that there shall be no conflict of interest of legislators — that something can be done about it. For example, Mr. Wanger points out that it will say right in the constitution there shall be no conflict of interest of legislators. That is what it will say. The only thing that worries me is how will we know whether there is any? We know what it says, but will we know whether there is any conflict? How are we going to find out? We are not going to find out — as pointed out by Mr. Wood — we cannot find out whether there is any conflict of interest by having somebody hire a man and say; now find out whether I have a conflict of interest. He might not find out. So, therefore, if there is validity, as I say, to one branch of government checking the other, let us go both ways.

It has also been pointed out that the idea of a legislative auditor is not something which is inconsistent with an auditor general of the entire state. The legislative auditor if he is to find out information for the legislature can do so. He can have a rather narrow function. An auditor general has a bigger function. There is no need, as I understand it, for any provision in the constitution which says that there shall be a legislative auditor. It can be done by statute, but if we desired to have it in there, I don't see any objection to it, provided it does not take away the power of the executive branch to do what it must do.

When we get down to the final analysis of what we are dealing with, the question really is this: who should the auditor — if there is to be only one — who should the auditor of the state be responsible to? Ultimately, who should he be responsible to? One theory is the one that we had before us in the majority report. He should be responsible to the legislature. Another theory is that the best way to find out who he should be responsible to is to find out whose money it is that he is spending or, rather, whose money it is that he is checking, that he is tracing. Whose money is it? If it is the legislature's money, they should have the power to find out where it went, and only they. And if it is the people's money, they should have the power to find out where the money went. Now without a great deal of analysis, I think it could be demonstrated that the money that is involved does not belong to the legislature; it is the people's money. The people have a right to know. The people have a right to demand that somebody keep track. Now, under the present system, they have a man on whom they can place the responsibility. He is called the auditor general. They elect him. If he does not do what he is supposed to do, they can boot him out. It is the people's money. They should be the ones who have the right to keep tabs on it. I think that the deduction that you draw from that, if you follow me that it is the people's money, is, therefore, that they should have somebody who at least has the power to find out where it goes, is this: It would not be good enough, really; actually, it would not be good enough for him to be appointed by anybody, because he will be responsible basically to them. He really should be elected, because the people are the ones whose money is involved.

There are 3 different possibilities, as I see it, if you insist upon having only one auditor. One of them is to have a man responsible to the legislature, to be appointed by the legislature, another to be appointed by the governor, another one to be elected by the people. And of the 3, it seems to me perfectly clear that if we have the auditor appointed by the legislature — and the legislature is less responsive to the people than the governor is; under almost any apportionment scheme, that is so — then you have the least responsive person in the auditor. The most responsive person will be the one who is elected by the people. He will respond directly to the people whose money is involved. The next to the most responsive situation would be if he is appointed by the governor. In that case, at least, the governor is elected by all the people. But if he is appointed by the legislature, you have the question of apportionment brought right back in again. The legislature never really can be absolutely responsive to the people and under the apportionment scheme proposed by the majority would be quite unresponsive. So of the 3 methods, either of the 2 that have been considered likely in the past are better. Elected by the people is the most responsive; appointed by the governor is the next to the most responsive; and appointed by the legislature is the least.

Mr. Chairman, for the foregoing reasons I state and I conclude that the case has not been made out to substitute the present auditor general for a legislative auditor. The most that can be said, in my opinion, is this: that there might be a good reason for having a legislative auditor. If so, let us have him, but let us not take him away from the executive branch. We must have one in the executive branch. For this reason I cannot go along with the committee proposal, and I will follow the minority report amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Muskegon, Mr. Hanna.

MR. FAXON: Parliamentary inquiry.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: All right, Mr. Faxon; state your question.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, is it your intention that we will continue to go on without having any afternoon break at all? Is this going to mean 4:30 or 5:00? Then we rise about 4:30? Is that the idea, that we will continue on this way? I think we would have better attention if the people knew we would have a break.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Faxon, the Chair thinks that is up to the chairman of the committee. Mr. Martin is in control of the machinery for recess or adjournment.

MR. FAXON: I thought it was up to you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: That has been taken out of the Chair's hands since I was up here before.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I was going to ask Mr. Downs a question as one of the proponents of the minority report amendment, but I would like to point out 2 things in his absence. One, in the past we have elected an auditor general, and the legislature over the many years has given him many functions not auditing in nature. But it has always perturbed me, as we have developed the science of auditing, that we at least have not required that the auditor general be a certified public accountant with experience in municipal accounting. My question to the minority is whether or not, if we were to elect the auditor general, would they provide that he and his staff insofar as necessary be required to be certified public accountants with experience in public accounting? Two, would they — in order to give him independence which they are perturbed about — provide for his nonpartisan election as we do the courts so that he would be truly responsible to the people? Three, — and I did not intend to make this comment until I listened to Dr. Nord. I am amazed at Dr. Nord's statement — the functions of the auditor general are statutory, and within the executive department there is the department of budget, the department of administration; there is the office of the treasurer; there are a number of financial management departments or functions within the executive department which give to the executive all the financial information and management that he needs. The weakness in our government in the past has been need of a competent postaudit by a competent person, and certainly this necessity must be answered. The balance of the executive branch article allows the creation of a financial department — call it what you want — and in the finance and taxation they said that audits would be made by competent state authority. Thus this audit function would be assigned to the auditor general insofar as postaudit. If there is a necessity for preaudits, the department of administration or the department of finance can perform the necessary audits. Dr. Nord is assuming that by electing the auditor general you are freezing for all time his functions. He raised the point that the people should discover through their elected auditor whether there is a conflict of interest. I take it from Dr. Nord's statement that he is of the opinion that the auditor general himself makes all these audits and that he runs up to Muskegon county and audits the treasurer's books or the clerk's books or the probate court books, and at the same time he runs down to Wayne county and while he is in Wayne county he goes up to Keweenaw. Actually, it is all handled by his staff.

Now then, to say that if the auditor general is not doing his job the people can change it is to ignore our extensive civil service procedure in Michigan. When we change the auditor general, we can change the auditor and 1 or 2 positions at the top, but his entire staff is kept on by civil service so that you cannot say that by changing the auditor general you will immediately give pep pills to the staff or discharge the staff or hire a new staff. It may be desirable to remove the auditor general's staff from civil service if we elect him, but the fallacy in Dr. Nord's statement is the assumption that the auditor general does all of the auditing himself.

It seems that our problem is this: it is true he made a correct statement that there are 3 ways to select an auditor general. One is to provide that the people elect him but then to provide for a measure of his competence so that the auditor general is a C.P.A., has experience in municipal accounting and is qualified. Two, is to take it out of the realm of popular election and allow the governor to appoint him and write the same standard for him. But the problem is that the governor already has his financial staff through a department of finance and a department of budget. What is needed is an independent auditor — independent of the executive branch — to make sure that once the legislature appropriates the public's money that it is spent according to the directions of the public representatives. And the solution that has been adopted in the federal government and has been recommended by students of this and adopted by most of the recent state constitutions is the legislative auditor. This may not necessarily be the most perfect but it is certainly the least evil of all 3 plans. I request the rejection of the minority amendment.

MR. DOWNS: I wonder if Mr. Hanna wanted to yield for answers to his questions.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Hanna, did you want —

MR. W. F. HANNA: I asked him a question.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: All right, will you repeat it so we will all know what the question is?

MR. DOWNS: I believe the first question was whether I would favor having an elected auditor be a C.P.A. I would hesitate to put this in the constitution. I think that the conventions in nominating people will aspire to get qualified people. Certainly everything else being equal, a C.P.A. would have an advantage and I assume the electorate would show that. I think, though, that the auditor general is more than a technician. I think that our Michigan history has shown that perhaps an attorney with a Rhodes scholar background was as well qualified if not better than a C.P.A. I think the electorate can handle that very adequately.

Now on the second question — and I want to see if I can get it right about a nonpartisan election — I am inclined to think that nonpartisanship for state officers does not necessarily get the most responsible operation of government. My own feeling is — and I know that this is another place where there is honest disagreement not only among delegates but the citizenry in general — is that our present system of party nomination with the voter making the decision does strengthen our 2 party system, and it puts a responsibility on both the party and the individual to see that the right person is selected for the job and the voters make the final decision. If the individual turns sour — I am certainly not suggesting that has happened — it is not only the individual that suffers but to an extent the party that nominated him. And I think that our system of party nomination in Michigan has brought about responsible candidates from both political parties.

Now the third question — and this was a little bit longer, but I got the feeling that there was kind of an either-or attitude on auditing. I certainly yield to no delegate in wanting efficiency in government. I do feel that auditing is not an either-or but a both-and, and our present system provides that the legislature can do the auditing. I think that Delegate DeVries and I agree completely when he said that there should be a more adequate staff. I am not quite as critical, perhaps, as he is but I think that this is the decision: that the legislature, if it desires, can have additional auditing staff, and I think they should have that freedom too, and that staff should be responsible to the legislature to remove if it so wants. That is a check through the legislative branch regardless of the apportionment. I think a second check is the governor who, as chief executive, has the right to know from agencies what happens and can require written information from them. And the third check — and I think the most vital — is through the people in an auditor general, and if in this area of auditing it ends up that we have the legislative and the executive auditing with the power of the judicial to get in the act if there is found illegal activity, and then the people auditing, I think it strengthens our government rather than weakens it.

This morning we were talking about the differences between private business and government, and I think here too is one: that to a large extent a profit and loss sheet does measure the ultimate success of a business from a business viewpoint but, again, government by its nature, being a monopoly, cannot be measured in a profit and loss statement as to how well it does perform it. For that reason I think — if anything — there should be more systems of independent auditing within governmental agencies than within private businesses, and I think our present system so provides. Thank you, Delegate Hanna, and I hope I have answered those questions satisfactorily.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman form Traverse City, Mr. Rajkovich.

MR. RAJKOVICH: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, for the last 2 hours or longer we have been debating: where does the postaudit belong? This has been quite a question. We do have separation of powers. We do have checks and balances. Yesterday we did adopt the executive budget idea and, from what we have learned of that, the executive budget is divided between the executive and the legislative branches of government. We have decided pretty well that the budget is to be prepared by the executive. The legislature may review this and modify it through its appropriation power, and then in a third step we have decided that the governor or the executive shall be assigned the job of administration and control.

Now the question that we are debating is: who should appraise the results of this budget? Who shall determine whether the program and financing were carried out by the executive as directed by the legislature? Whose job is it? This is the issue. Now who should do this? Looking back at our constitution again, we can look at the executive, we can look at the legislative or we can look at the judicial or we may look at some outside agency to do this.

Now if the executive branch does the auditing — and, by the way, this is done in some states — we have a rather illogical situation. It is contrary to good fiscal principles to have an agency auditing its own books and records. If we give it to the courts to do it, then this is again against the traditional role. This leaves only one agency to do it, and this is the legislative branch as the proper branch to do the auditing. Now the postaudit, certainly, has been outside of any one of the 3 branches of government. However, good government demands and requires that all of these things be placed in one of the 3 branches and, if any branch should have it, it certainly belongs in the legislative branch. We have to have a balance between the 3 branches of government; there is no doubt about that, and we have to prevent concentration of power in any one branch. By placing the auditor in the legislature, you are going to get this balance.

Furthermore, the postaudit itself is not usually confined to the financial transactions but it should cover performance both in quantity and quality. And here is where we need some performance auditing. Further, the auditor himself must see to it that the will of the legislature is complied with, and if performance financing or rulemaking are deviating from the legislative intent. This is the procedure as followed in sound business practice and we can follow a similar procedure in our government. I urge you to defeat the minority report amendment and support the committee. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the vice president, Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, first I would like to make an observation in response to something that Mr. Nord was arguing about. He ran up an alarm that perhaps the legislature would be unable to appoint an auditor general by a majority vote of each house of the legislature and then what would happen. Well, for many, many, many years, for almost — well, for the first 75 years, I guess, of the state's history, it was the responsibility of the legislature to elect United States senators. They elected United States senators. They didn't fail in that responsibility. And certainly an official who is going to perform an auditing function, a function that the legislature is very keenly interested in and concerned about — I do not think that there is any reason to be alarmed about the theoretical possibility that they couldn't even get a majority of the legislature to do something. I might say from observation that it is apparently much easier to get a majority of either house of the legislature to act than it is sometimes to get a majority of this constitutional convention together.

I would also like to say that my attention has been called to the remarks of the delegate from Wayne, Mr. T. S. Brown, in which he dug out of the legislative journals of 1953, the report of a select committee which I signed in which the committee said that in its opinion the auditor general should remain an elective state official independent of the legislature and of the executive. Now I would also like to call attention simply to the fact that the present constitution says that with regard to the privileges of members of the legislature that they shall not be questioned in any other place for any speech in either house, but I waive that immunity (laughter).

I would like to say that as the years have gone by I have from time to time changed my position upon things. I would invite your attention to the fact that this report which I signed — and which has been thrown in my face here today — emphasized that it was my position in that report that the auditor general should be independent of the executive as well as independent of the legislature, and I will say that either in 1953 or '54 or '55, one of those years — '53 or '54 probably — there was a proposed constitutional amendment before the senate which would provide for the removal of the auditor general, that is, the abolishment of him as a popularly elected official and the creation of an auditor general to be appointed by the legislature — much as this proposal here now would entail. As my recollection goes, if I had voted for that, why, the matter would have gone on the ballot. In other words, the matter fell short by one vote in the senate and I did not vote for it. And I did not vote for it because in those days I honestly believed, and maybe naively so, that the auditor general should be independent of the executive and he should be independent of the legislature, or, to put it the other way, that I did not think he should be answerable to the legislature but neither did I think he should be answerable to the executive. I conceived of him as an official apart from all of these influences and a man who without fear or favor in his official capacity would do the job of really ferreting out waste and incompetence and malperformance.

Well, as time has gone by, the ideal is still there but the practicality of reaching it is impossible for the reason that every auditor general in the past, at the present, and I suppose in the future, even though he is popularly elected — if he is popularly elected as part of the state ticket and he sits as part of an executive team, that is, a team of officers in the executive branch of the government — why, he is going to be loyal to that team. So you get down to the point of trying to assess which is better: to have a man loyal to the executive team or to have him loyal to the legislature in connection with this matter of postaudit and, certainly, in state government as I view it now — and I would say that this change in my position is nothing that has been brought about in recent days or in even recent months — in my later years in the legislature, I would have supported a constitutional amendment which, although, as I say, I voted against it in 1954 or '53, I presume along about 1958 or '59, I would have been found on the other side of the question, because as I get older and as I view things differently, why, my positions change. And that is one thing about politicians, you know: consistency is not a virtue.

Now I honestly think that under the circumstances, as we find state government today and as we have found it in the last number of years, as the size of the government increases in dollars, as the tax burdens become so unbearable, as the responsibility of the legislature for the wise appropriation of public money and the responsibility of raising it increases, that the legislature must have available, and I think responsible to it, the postaudit function.

Now, in this earlier report, the position stated was that the legislature should create a legislative auditor by statute, that we should enlarge his staff, that he should perform this service of informing the legislature. I am happy to point with some pride to the fact that I think the legislature has made some considerable strides in that area. But as has been pointed out here earlier today, a legislative auditor or legislative comptroller or whatever you want to call him is simply — in this context here, with another auditor general in the government — this comptroller is largely a staff assistant.

I am of the opinion now and have been for the last several years that we would have a better governmental system so far as the postaudit function is concerned, so far as the performance of the government is concerned, so far as informing the legislature is concerned, if this activity were in the legislative branch of government.

So if this amounts to an admission by me that I have changed my position, I have changed it; and I know an awful lot of people in public life who have changed their positions from time to time. I do not think that we have to go back very far. It seems to me as though perhaps my good friend, the governor, changed his position on a matter even during the course of this convention, maybe even during the weekend. So I say that consistency is not a virtue, and if by changing our position we can improve and see the light, why, so much the better. (applause)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Taylor, Delegate Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, it was about 2 hours ago when I asked for the floor and I don't even know where I am now. I am quite sure that anything that I could say has been said. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, I, too, asked for the floor some time ago and I find that everything that I wanted to say has been said except one thing — and I hope that this one thing will be repeated time and time again as the afternoon wears on — and that is: I pass.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I would just like to make a brief remark about the appointment of the auditor general by the legislature. We have heard that this should be left to the people. Well, I have a letter from one of these voters, and I have several others that I have received, and the third point in this letter that this person brings out is, "The auditor general should be appointed by the legislature and responsible to that body for the funds it authorizes."

MR. BLEDSOE: Point of information, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The gentleman will state his point of information.

MR. BLEDSOE: How many on the list?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: We have 3 on the list. Delegate Durst.

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I know that most members of the committee are beyond listening by this time, but I would like to read into the record, as long as we are discussing who stands for what, the opinions of 2 very eminent members — either present or former members of the state government of Michigan on this question. We were privileged to have former Governor Williams appear before us and he made a very detailed statement of what he thought should be done in the state government. He listed an 8 point program which he said was essential to strengthen the legislature. Point 8 was: "The legislature should have the right to select the auditor general and thereby control the postaudit." By like reason the executive should have complete control of the preaudit which, as I understand it, is exactly the system which we have proposed in this committee proposal.

Now we also had another gentleman who is very experienced in finance in this state, Mr. Ira Polley, appear before our committee on November 22, 1961. And he said in part in discussing an executive budget:

> As a parenthetical observation, let me add that it is my belief that the legislature should appoint the state auditor who would conduct the postaudit to determine the accuracy, legality and propriety with which the budget has been executed.

To my knowledge these gentlemen have not changed their minds yet.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the lady from Grand Rapids, Mrs. Judd.

MRS. JUDD: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, we have heard many times on this floor this afternoon the importance of having the auditor general responsive to the people. Often when I hear this, I wonder just how responsive the people are to the auditor general. And just as an experiment, I would like to see a show of hands in this committee as to how many of us before running for con con regularly had read the reports of the auditor general. This is a remarkably select group, and I think if we were to go home and ask our friends, we would find there are very few who could read them and understand them and interpret them and make use of them. I think that when somebody is responsible to everybody, it amounts almost to being responsible to nobody, and this change would make the auditor general responsible to the legislature.

It has been said that the legislature is not responsible to the people. I heard that statement this afternoon, which surprises me. However, when the legislators understand the auditor general's report, you and I can talk with our legislator any weekend and get some understanding of the relationship of the auditor general's studies to the appropriations being made by the legislature. It seems to me this is a much more effective way in which the people can understand and check on our state finances.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Ford of Taylor.

MR. FORD: I am sorry that Senator Hutchinson left us after his little presentation because I — oh, he is back — disagree with what he said about consistency. I think that Senator Hutchinson exemplifies, typifies, and has demonstrated by his little analysis of the change that has taken place in his approach to this subject, a form of consistency which I have been convinced of recent date in this convention his party has practiced for a number of years in Michigan. And he seems to be one of the foremost exponents of it. Glancing at the state directory, I see that from 1836 to 1850, we appointed the auditors general in this state. And from 1851 to 1955 we seem to have elected them for some reason, predominantly from 1 of the 2 major political parties. And then at about the same time — purely by coincidence I am sure — Mr. Hutchinson did what he calls an act of inconsistency and what I view as an act of consistency — and that is, changed his mind about whether they ought to be elected or appointed. I see Democratic names starting to show up in the office, and I submit that Senator Hutchinson is being completely consistent. I won't argue with him about whether it is a virtue or not, but this is following the rule of his party that when the Democrats start to win we change the rules, and if we cannot find a different way to select him we abolish him.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Bledsoe.

MR. BLEDSOE: Mr. Chairman, fellow conferees, since time and history find us very happily assembled here with 2 Mr. Hutchinsons, I am happy to say that I am going to join the ancient Mr. Hutchinson because I think he was good then and I think he is still good. Frankly, if I were to cast my vote today for the most helpful person in helping this convention to get off parliamentarily on the right foot — aside from our illustrious secretary — I would vote number 1 for Mr. Hutchinson. I think he was good. I still think so. And I think he actually gave the only reason he could give here today on the floor for this change. I still think we ought to stand by the people in electing our public officials.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, since this seems to be our afternoon for eulogizing, I would like to eulogize my good seatmate and companion, Delegate Durst, for his eulogizing the eighth point of Governor Williams. I do hope that when we get to the subject of legislative organization, he will continue to show that respect for our great governor and read the other points that he supported as a condition precedent to the acceptance of point 8. Thank you. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Madar.

MR. MADAR: All I have been doing is waiting and hoping and praying that maybe you were going to get tired, but it seems that after I did give you 3 days of rest, you learned nothing. (laughter) You know I like to hear Mr. Hutchinson talk about it being a good thing to change your mind occasionally. Well, you know, I have mentioned this on several occasions about having been a Republican for a long number of years. (laughter) They were a long number of years, too, because it just seemed that they could never learn and I am sincere about this; I am not trying to make you laugh. You lost elections in this state because your leaders did not have sense enough to give the people what they wanted.

When I ran for state representative in the first district on the Republican ticket, I did say we ought to have a strong governor. He ought to be responsible, not just in name only because he is the governor and supposed to be the administrator but because he had the right to appoint his ad board. And in those days because the Republican party was electing the ad board and could do as they wished, they would go along with even appointing him but not under the advice and consent. And then just as Mr. Ford puts it, the Democrats started to elect the ad board. Then they came along and said we have got to do something about it. Oh, I was in on many a conclave. It used to make me sick. I don't mind telling you that was why I left the party; I got sick and tired of running down the state —

MR. GOVER: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: All right, state the point.

MR. MADAR: Let's get 2 points of order —

MR. MARTIN: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Just a minute. Who is it?

MR. MADAR: I am trying to get something here for the people of the state —

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Just a moment, now. Point of order has been raised. What is it, Mr. Martin?

MR. MARTIN: The point of order, Mr. Chairman, is simply on the question of whether Mr. Madar is discussing the subject before the —

MR. MADAR: I am.

MR. MARTIN: — committee or whether he is discussing his political career. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Madar, you will confine yourself to the question, which is on the minority report amendment, please.

MR. MADAR: Well, you may rest assured that I didn't lose my trend of thought due to the rudeness of the interruption. I am hoping that maybe here instead of just having a caucus and saying it is Republican or Democrat, that you will start to use your own heads in making up your minds as to whether it is right to appoint or elect. I do not believe that it is right to appoint even with advice and consent, because then the governor is not appointing —

MR. EVERETT: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

MR. MADAR: — and I believe that they should be elected.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Now, just a moment. State your point, Mr. Everett.

MR. EVERETT: There is nothing in this proposal about appointment with advice and consent, and I think he is off the subject.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Madar, will you please confine yourself to the matter being discussed.

MR. MADAR: That's right. It is by the legislature, appointment by the legislature. And I wanted to get that in too. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The committee will be in order.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, you have been asked all during the campaign how you felt about these things. I believe that you meant that the people should have something to say about our government. You aren't giving them a chance to say anything about it. Frankly, I think you are trying to defeat a constitution. I tell you right now that if you are going to try to get anything done, you will go ahead and put in this constitution that you will elect your auditor, let the people elect him, and then you will be doing some good.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the minority report amendment. The secretary will read it. Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Do you have any more speakers listed?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: No, sir.

MR. MARTIN: If I might add —

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. McAllister just raised his hand. The Chair will recognize Mr. McAllister.

MR. McALLISTER: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I do not belong to the minority party; however, the people of my area have instructed me to not vote for any appointed officer. Accordingly, I will have to support the minority report amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I believe we have covered the subject thoroughly. I don't think there is anything more to be added on either side. I did, however, want to pick up just 1 or 2 quick points to this effect: the report of the committee is based squarely, among other things, upon the report of the little Hoover commission, the Michigan joint legislative committee on reorganization of state government, which was the most extensive study ever done in Michigan of state government, and I think it is interesting that the membership of that committee contained some of the most distinguished members of the legislature including some of the very well known members of the minority party. I note here Representative Michael O'Brien, Representative Leo Doyle, Senator Garland Lane, who is still in the senate, and Representative William Romano. It also included some of our more distinguished Republican legislators: Senator Bonine, Representative Conlin, Representative Montgomery, Senator Perry Greene, who is still there, Senator Frank Heath, our own delegate, Representative Jefferson Hoxie, the Speaker of the House Victor Knox, and Senator Leo Roy; and, representing the governor, Clark Adams, who served on the supreme court and was at that time representing the governor. And the comment of the little Hoover commission was just this. I read it only because it is so squarely in point. It is under the recommendations, number 4:

> Strengthening the legislature's means for effective control, particularly through establishment of a legislative auditor general to be appointed by and responsible to the legislature to undertake performance as well as fiscal audits of all state agencies. This will equip the legislature with its own means to hold the executive branch responsible for the execution of the program prescribed by the legislature.

The point has been made over and over again here this afternoon that we ought to keep this office close to the people by electing him.

All I can say is that any one of you or all of you ought to search back in your recollections as to who these auditors general were. Perhaps you know that I was one of them because I have mentioned it here, but these people are not known to the people who elect them. They are not known when they are elected, they aren't known when they are in office, and they aren't known when they leave office. And I might say myself that after 4 years in the office I still couldn't go out to make a speech without being introduced as the attorney general instead of the auditor general, although I did my best to become known to the voters of the state. I am sure the attorneys general had the same experience. There is absolutely no validity whatsoever to the argument that this business of electing an auditor general keeps him close to the people. If you want to select a highly qualified man who knows something about the job, the way to do it is to do it through the committee proposal, and the legislature will be in position to get the best and most qualified person that can be found in the country. We are not only interested in strengthening the executive power; we are interested in strengthening the legislative arm as well, because we want 2 strong branches of government; we want 3 in fact. Of course we want strong courts, but we want a strong governor and we want a strong legislature. And with that kind of a division between the branches we will get a good government.

I think that probably covers all the points that can be made on the subject. I hope we are ready to vote, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the minority report amendment. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Pursuant to their minority report, Messrs. Downs, Lesinski and Murphy offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, by striking out all of the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Are you ready for the question? All in favor of the amendment will say aye. Opposed, no.

A DELEGATE: Division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Division is called for. Is there support?

SECRETARY CHASE: Sufficient number.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: There is support. All those in favor will vote aye and those opposed will vote nay. For those coming in, this is the vote on the minority amendment to strike out all of the proposal. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the minority report amendment to strike out all of section a, the yeas are 39; the nays are 85.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Pursuant to the minority report of Messrs. Wanger, Wood, Perras, Hubbs, Powell and Mrs. Koeze, Mr. Wanger offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 18, after "thereof" by changing the period to a comma and inserting "and may after public hearing establish minimum standards for annual reports to be issued thereby.".

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the first proponent of this amendment, Delegate Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, the purpose of this minority amendment which is offered by members of the legislative powers committee is, as you can see, in no way designed to weaken the office of the legislative auditor general. Its sole purpose, and I think all will agree its sole effect, is to strengthen that office. It is the position of us in offering this amendment that to do so is most desirable; to give the legislative auditor general the power, after public hearing, to establish minimum standards for annual reports to be issued by those agencies of which it is his job to do fiscal and performance postaudits. I want to emphasize the fact that the legislative auditor general's power relates only to the finding out and determining of facts, facts about the fiscal and facts about the efficiency of the operation of the executive branch of our government.

Now, we believe that there are 2 important reasons why it would be desirable to strengthen the office as this amendment proposes. The first reason is that it will save money by enabling the legislative auditor to get the facts economically — in many cases without having to go to the expense of a comprehensive investigation at all. It will also promote reasonable uniformity in the reports to be rendered, as they should be rendered, by all of the important agencies, departments and institutions of the state.

As you can very well realize, when you come into an agency at the end of an operation or at the end of a period and try to find out what happened during the preceding period, it takes a great deal of effort and sometimes a great deal of time to find out the facts when the agency has not had its records set up in a manner so that those facts will be readily available. This provision allows the legislative auditor to set these minimum standards so that the facts will be available without the unnecessary cost and perhaps in some cases unnecessary embarrassment of the investigatory process coming into effect. Since such standards could only be minimum, no department, office or agency would in any way be prevented or discouraged from including additional information for analysis.

Now the requirement of public hearing guarantees that any department, office or agency affected will have the fullest opportunity to be heard before its minimum standards are established, and this will guard against any abuse. It has been suggested that experts in charge of agencies may oftentimes be so intimately concerned in serving the people of the state in their area that they do not have time and sometimes do not have the mental attitude required to take a larger and more broad view and to realize that the legislature in making appropriations should have as much uniformity among the reports of the agencies as can be obtained.

The Detroit News on page 4A of the issue of Tuesday, June 27, 1961, pointed out that

> As of June 27 of that year the presidents of Michigan's 9 tax supported colleges and universities have adopted rules for the uniform reporting of student enrollments and faculty members . . .

and goes on to point out that up until that time there had not been a uniformity in some cases in this regard. This is perfectly understandable because the various institutions involved can and should be concerned with their own operations and do not always have the time and the inclination to consider the broad scope as far as the uniformity in their reports is concerned. This applies with even more force and vigor to other agencies of a more specialized nature than educational institutions.

Now there have been 2 objections raised, Mr. Chairman, to this proposal. The objections which have been called to my attention are, first, that this language is unnecessary and, secondly, that in some way which I do not myself understand, it would give the legislative auditor general too much power. And in order to, I hope, conserve time, I would like to briefly comment upon those 2 objections. First of all, I believe that if we want to accomplish the goals of uniformity and economy this provision is necessary, because I think it is quite clear that without this constitutional authority the legislature could not authorize the legislative auditor or anybody else to set such minimum standards for constitutional agencies in many cases. I would also like to point out that there is no other place in the constitution which authorizes the legislature to establish such standards except with respect perhaps to the limited financial aspect of accounting alone. The second to last paragraph of the present substitute does authorize the legislature to provide uniform accounting for units or agencies of local government, but that, of course, applies just to the local government area. And section c of Committee Proposal 37 does not apply to any state agency beyond the dollar and cents accounting.

Now, with respect to the second objection which has to do with the power of the office, I would like to emphasize once again that the legislative auditor only has power to gather and discover facts and report those facts. He is not a policymaker in any sense and cannot interfere even to the extent of getting into the preaudit area through the operations of any of these agencies. Only facts are what he is to discover. Secondly, these again are only minimum standards which he could set. Third, a public hearing would be required. This hearing is authorized only with respect to the setting of these standards, so that any abuse would be fully guarded against. And fourth, I would like to point out that if any power of the legislative auditor would be abused, he is fully subject to the process of removal from his job by the legislature.

So in conclusion I would like to reemphasize that adding this phrase to the constitution, our amendment here, in the opinion of this minority of the committee — which includes 2 members of the subcommittee which had the topic under its direct jurisdiction — first of all would save the state a great deal of money in the fact finding process and, secondly, would promote reasonable uniformity of content in reports to be rendered by the agency which, after all, he is empowered to investigate and check.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I think Delegate Wanger made my speech. This was defeated by the committee on legislative powers. It was brought up before the joint subcommittee on legislative powers in the executive branch and defeated again as not being necessary, totally unrealistic and might cause powers in this legislative auditor general which we would not want. Therefore, we urge you to defeat this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Wanger amendment. Delegate Karn.

MR. KARN: I agree with Delegate Kuhn in taking a position in opposition to this amendment. It is wholly unnecessary in my opinion.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Wanger amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Did somebody ask for division? Is the demand for a division seconded? A sufficient number. All those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment offered by Mr. Wanger is:

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on that amendment just read. All in favor will vote aye. Those opposed, no. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Wanger on behalf of the minority, the yeas are 27 and the nays are 79.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hutchinson offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 7, after "appoint" by striking out "a legislative" and inserting "an"; and line 12, after "The" by striking out "legislative"; and on page 2, line 2, after the second "The" by striking out "legislative"; and line 12, after "The" by striking out "legislative".

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the proponent of the amendment, Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I think that the amendment is perhaps self explanatory. My desire is to change the apparent constitutional name of the office and reinstate the office as we have known it for so long. I do not myself think much of having a constitutional officer called "legislative auditor general." I think he should be called "auditor general." The word "legislative" is an adjective. If you are referring to a legislative auditor general, why, you are saying a lawmaking auditor general. That is not what he is. I think we would do better to call him "auditor general." This will not change the meat of the proposal at all. The legislature will still appoint an "auditor general." I hope that you can go along with this minor amendment. I suppose I could have offered this in style and drafting, but I was afraid somebody might claim this was a substantive change.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I can see no objection to Mr. Hutchinson's amendment. I think perhaps I can speak for the committee in saying that the committee would see no objection to it.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Taylor, Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, I rise to speak against the amendment, because in effect he is a legislative auditor; he is no longer the "auditor general." I think the majority proposal insofar as the terminology is correct and, therefore, I would oppose the amendment. If Delegate Hutchinson would like to add that he be elected by the people, then I would support his amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Hutchinson amendment. Do you want it read again? Mr. Austin.

MR. AUSTIN: I wonder if I could ask Mr. Hutchinson a question through the Chair.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If Mr. Hutchinson cares to answer.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Hutchinson, inasmuch as there is this one area of, let's say, auditing work that has not been covered in our constitution by this proposed legislative auditor — and I am relating now particularly to the work of auditing the counties and any other local units of government that may be required — I was wondering if we were not going to need some other type of auditor and who may have a title somewhat similar to "auditor general" and it might be better to let it be clear that this is the one who has responsibility to the legislature by way of his title.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, in answer to Mr. Austin I would say this: that I suppose that the county auditing function under this proposal might very likely be placed in the department of administration perhaps and that it would be known as the "county auditing division." And I think in all fairness that the state officer that is hereby being created is the successor to the officer that we know as the "auditor general" and he is the "auditor general." This word "legislative" is not descriptive of his powers at all. He is the postauditor of the state government. His department, while I understand it is the intent of the committee that the department should be described as being within the legislative branch — although I do not see that that is written out clearly in this proposal as it stands — nevertheless, it is also clear that the employees of his branch are under civil service just as they are in the executive branch in the government. I think that really this officer is the "auditor general" and while the legislature appoints him and while he reports to them, you will notice he also reports to the governor. And I don't think that there will be any confusion here at all. In fact, I think there will be much more confusion if we leave that word "legislative" in here.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Delegate Young.

MR. YOUNG: Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose the amendment primarily because I think the whole amendment makes it very clear exactly what we are doing in terms of strengthening the executive. And I heard a lot of talk before the convention about the necessity of strengthening the executive office. Several days ago we strengthened the governor by taking away from him the right to make judicial appointments, and so now we are proposing to further strengthen that office by removing yet another responsibility from the executive. I would hate to see this convention contrive consciously to weaken the executive if this is the way we strengthen him.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Hutchinson amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Boothby offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "to serve" by striking out "for a term of 8 years, who may be reappointed for one additional term only. He shall be removable for cause at any time by a 2/3 vote of the members elect of each house of the legislature.", and inserting "at the pleasure of the legislature."; so that the sentence will read; "The legislature by a majority vote of the members elect of each house, shall appoint an auditor general to serve at the pleasure of the legislature."

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, Mr. Kuhn has pointed out that there is some disagreement as to whether the auditor general, if appointed by the legislature, should serve at the pleasure of the legislature or whether he should serve for a relatively long, fixed term of years. Those favoring the long term claim this would attract a professional man and would remove him from ordinary political pressures of the legislature, thus making him independent. Mr. Kuhn did mention, however — he stated that the last 3 states that have adopted a legislative auditor have done it for a fixed term of years. I would like to point out that that statement is not completely correct. The state of Alaska has provided for a legislative auditor and that particular state has provided that the legislature shall appoint an auditor to serve at its pleasure; so the state of Alaska has provided that rather than having a fixed term of years provided, instead, they would indicate that the auditor general or the legislative auditor would only serve at the pleasure of the legislature; in other words, not for a fixed term of years.

I would also like to point out that for once — and I think probably this may be the first time I am in complete agreement with the model constitution put out by the national municipal league — I wish Mr. Allen was here — the national municipal league in its constitution makes the recommendation as follows: "Postaudit. The legislature shall appoint an auditor to serve at its pleasure." So the national municipal league also makes this same recommendation which was also included in the Alaskan constitution.

I personally feel that to make the auditor truly an arm of the legislature, that body must have the power to hire and fire the auditor at its will. An official appointed for a long term might feel so independent that he would refuse to provide the legislature with the information they desired, especially — I wonder if I could have some order, please.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The committee will be in order.

MR. BOOTHBY: — especially if the legislature was of a political complexion different from the auditor and particularly if the auditor was of the same party affiliation as the executive. A long, fixed term of years would allow an auditor to set up his own bureaucratic kingdom, I fear.

Now, there were certain statements made in the committee's recommendation as to why they wanted the long, fixed term of years. They listed 3. The first one they have indicated was to attract high caliber persons. I would refute that by saying that the office of auditor general certainly is an office of high prestige, and I feel that any person in this state would feel it an honor and a matter of prestige to serve in that capacity and would take that position whether it was for a fixed term of years or whether it was offered at the pleasure of the legislature.

The committee has also indicated that their reason for placing a long, fixed term of 8 years is to provide for a substantial degree of freedom from extraneous influence in the performance of his duties. Now the members of the legislature should certainly not be considered an extraneous influence. The purpose is to make the auditor of postaudits an arm of the legislature. They would not be an extraneous influence; they would actually be the proper body to have the influence. They should hold direct control of the constitutional means by which the legislature may have a check upon the executive and his subordinates in financial matters. I would say this: that the extraneous influence — the extraneous influence — would be the executive. This is what you want to keep him away from, but you want to have the legislature have control of this particular individual.

Now the third point that the committee has raised is that they want a long, fixed term of years to provide a reasonable degree of job security. Now I submit that the auditor is something more than an employee of state government. He sits in a professional category such as a doctor, a lawyer or a C.P.A. The relationship between the legislature and the auditing arm of the government requires a high degree of confidence. Article X, section 2 of the Michigan constitution now requires that the legislature should provide moneys for estimated expenses of state government. Article X, section 18, requires the legislature to provide for the supervision and audits of accounts of public officials. In addition, it has traditionally been considered the power of the purse strings should remain in the legislative branch. The legislature — the legislature — has the obligation to provide for the paying of necessary expenses of state government, but in the appropriations of the taxpayers' money it must make sure that these funds are not being illegally used, mishandled, or wasted. I say that this responsibility which the legislature has to the people requires that they have a great deal of confidence in the auditing arm of state government, and so in this degree of confidence they must have a situation occurring where they can appoint or fire that person such as an individual would have over a person serving as his lawyer or his C.P.A. The real purpose of the legislative auditor should be to give the legislature maximum control over the determination of the accuracy, legality and integrity with which the executive has carried out the legislatively enacted budget plans.

Now, a statement was made in some prior debate that the auditor should be responsive to the people, and I do believe that there should be a degree of responsibility in this category of auditing the books of the executive arm in the postaudit function. And I would say that the auditor can be responsive to the people through the traditional watchdog of the public purse strings, and the traditional watchdog of the public purse strings has been the legislature. And I say if you want to continue that idea that the legislature shall be the watchdog, then you must give them a high degree of control over the auditing arm, and the only way I know how to do it is to make that particular arm serve at the pleasure of the legislature. It is my own personal feeling that an 8 year term would not cause this particular official to be responsive. I think he would be nonresponsive to the people through their elected representatives if he served for a long fixed term of years. And I ask you and I plead with you to consider this fact: if you want the legislature to have control of the purse strings and to be able to supervise and look over to see whether the executive is spending the money the way that the legislature has provided it, let them have control — and direct control — and let them have confidence in the official which they provide to cover this.

To further placate some of the members of this convention, I would like to indicate that when I was before the committee that was considering this provision and particularly my proposal which required that the auditor general serve at the pleasure of the legislature, Lieutenant Governor Lesinski indicated that he agreed with this proposal, and I am also informed that Governor Williams indicated to a reporter that he also agreed with this proposal. I urge the adoption of this amendment which would remove a long, fixed term of years and insert a provision which would allow responsibility of the auditor general to the legislature.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Martin, the chairman of this committee, 2 questions before I speak against the Boothby amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If he cares to answer.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Martin, there has been discussion that the individual to be selected for this office is to have some professional status. I notice that there are no qualifications written into the committee proposal so, of course, he does not have to be an accountant or a C.P.A. or anyone of any professional background whatsoever. Is this not true?

MR. MARTIN: We haven't written in the qualifications, Mr. Binkowski, because we thought that this was a proper function of the legislature. We do want, I might say, and we do hope and expect that the legislature will select a person of the very highest qualifications, the kind of person who is hard to get because he already has a very good job and is being well paid. And in order to get that kind of person, you have to have some incentive other than a sort of day to day basis.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Well now, Mr. Martin — however, this job could very well be an administrative one and the individual would not necessarily have to be a C.P.A. in order to qualify for the job. Is that not true?

MR. MARTIN: Yes. Let me say it is both. It is administrative, but it is highly desirable that the auditor have some accounting background. If he does not have some accounting background, it is very difficult for him to do the job, because it is difficult for him to properly instruct his auditors and to know where to look — that is, under what rug he will find the bugs that he is looking for. So it is desirable that he have those qualifications and we expect that the legislature will take those things into consideration.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Martin, how do you feel about the Boothby amendment?

MR. MARTIN: Well, I am going to speak on it in a moment, but I would rather take it up at one time and let the other comments be made first.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Well, thank you, Mr. Martin. Ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I oppose the Boothby amendment, because I am very fearful that if this provision were inserted in the constitution that the legislative auditor could very well be a one man grand juror for the state of Michigan. Whenever you are involved in investigations there is attendant publicity, and I am very fearful that if he would have to serve at the pleasure of the legislature no matter in whose control or what party would be controlling it, he would be an arm of the politics of that particular party. I think if we are going to have a legislative auditor that you would certainly want him as independent as possible and certainly independent from party politics. I think this is the purpose of having the term stated right in the constitution. I would oppose any type of amendment of this sort. I also have an amendment in, myself, to try to eliminate him from as much politics as possible.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Detroit, Delegate Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would yield the floor to committee chairman Martin at this time to explain his stand on whether he is for or against this amendment before I would make my remarks.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin said he would like to talk later.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, then I will make them now. I am also opposed to this amendment. I think that this is certainly not going to remove this man from politics. By the same token, by inserting the new language, we are making this man strictly accountable to the legislature, and as to his holding the job at the pleasure of the legislature, he may be removed even without cause, as I read this. I feel that this is certainly not going to draw the type of man into this job that Mr. Martin just remarked about. We are going to have to have a man with a good substantial background who is going to be leaving a well paying job and he is going to be coming to a job that is going to be on a day to day basis, and when you are working for anyone at their pleasure you are working on a day to day basis. I do not think that the job with these stipulations will attract this type of man, and I would be opposed to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. Chairman, I believe this amendment bears out many of the fears most of us from my party have had on this very thing. It would seem all we are doing here is transferring, under the guise that we are going to get expertise in a particular field, from the people under a one man, one vote theory and now turning it into a legislative theory where that faction of our population which is a minority can control that individual. Now, if we are going to do this — because under the guise of expertise he is going to need some freedom from that legislative body and perhaps the 8 year term gives it to him — if we are to adopt this amendment, all it means is that we can expect an auditor general who can harass the administration at the will of a legislative body which is not representative of the people of this state.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: What I was going to say has already been said, but I would like to ask a question. How many more amendments does the secretary have on his desk, please?

SECRETARY CHASE: There are 5 additional amendments on the desk, Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Well, inasmuch as we have been here since 2:00 o'clock and we did not have a recess, I would like to at this time move that the committee rise, Mr. Chairman. It is after 5:00 o'clock.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: We have carried on here and we have made a lot of progress this afternoon. I had in mind moving —

A DELEGATE: Point of order.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: It is not debatable, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, I don't mind Mr. Martin running the convention through the Republican caucus, but I do resent — I do resent —

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair has ruled that Mr. Martin is out of order, Mr. Marshall. The question is upon your motion. The question is on whether the committee will now rise. All in favor say aye. Opposed, no. The Chair is in doubt. All in favor that the committee do now rise will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion that the committee rise, the yeas are 61; the nays are 52.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The committee will now rise.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration a committee proposal of which the secretary will make a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 78, A proposal to provide for the office of legislative auditor general; has considered several amendments thereto and has come to no final resolution thereon.

This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Any announcements?

Without objection, we will return to the order of communications from state officers. Hearing none —

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. President, is a motion out of order at this time?

PRESIDENT NISBET: Let us take this up first, Mr. Mahinske, and then we will return to you. This is a message from the governor. Mr. Chase will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Office of the Governor, Lansing March 15,

The Honorable Stephen S. Nisbet, President, Michigan Constitutional Convention, Civic Center, Constitution Hall,
Lansing, Michigan

Dear Mr. President:

Transmitted to you with this letter is my message to the fifth Michigan constitutional convention on the subject of executive appointments.

Sincerely yours,
John B. Swainson, Governor.

Following is the message:

Ladies and gentlemen of the convention:

The convention is now considering provisions concerning the executive branch of government to be incorporated in a proposed new constitution for this state. I take this opportunity of calling to your attention one facet of executive authority which I am convinced should be modified from its form in our existing constitution. I make reference to the provisions of section 10, article VI of the Constitution of 1908, which provides that vacancies in state office shall be filled by the governor with the advice and consent of the senate.

The proviso in question derives from the Constitution of the United States, and was placed in that document following strong debate on the proposition of whether absolute power in the matter of appointments should be placed in the hands of the executive, or whether this authority should reside solely in the hands of the legislative body. Convincing arguments were presented on each side of this question and, as a compromise, the "advice and consent" proviso was adopted by those who framed our federal constitution. This has been a part of each Michigan constitution.

In the early years of our federal and state governments, the words "advice and consent" were literally observed in the matter of executive appointments. The senate was a numerically small body and executive appointments were only a fraction of the number they are today. Under these circumstances, the senate could truly advise the executive and comprehensively examine each prospective appointee. However, the vast increase in the number of executive appointments, as well as the increase in the membership of the senate, has made it impractical for the "advice and consent" proviso to operate in its traditional manner, and its use as originally conceived has, for all practical purposes, been abandoned.

In Michigan, the power to advise and consent has in modern days been used strictly as a right of veto by the legislative body. An executive appointee receives in most cases a perfunctory hearing before a committee of the senate which votes him in or out of office on the committee recommendation.

In some instances, the appointee occupies office without any action by the senate, simply by assuming the position during legislative recess and holding it during months and even years of senate inaction. In the case of rejection of an appointee by the senate, no reason therefor is communicated to the executive.

The foregoing situation may, to a great extent, be blamed upon the fact that the large number of agencies, boards and commissions require the executive and senate to submit and pass upon hundreds of appointees. Inasmuch as the convention has already taken commendable action to drastically reduce the number of state agencies, boards and commissions, it appears to be an opportune time to reinstitute and restore the provision for "advice and consent" to its historical place in our government, and assure its operation as our founding fathers intended.

Therefore, I urge that you give serious consideration to adopting provisos which will guarantee an appointee a prompt and full hearing before the pertinent legislative committee, together with the right to be confronted by and cross examine all witnesses who may have been presented to the committee in opposition to his candidacy.

The appointee should also be afforded the right to counsel, the right to examine and rebut all documents which may have been viewed by or presented to the committee in opposition to his confirmation, as well as the right of subpoena to assist him in gathering evidence to prove or disprove contentions which have been raised in the matter of his fitness and qualifications for public office.

A proviso requiring the legislative body to report to the executive the specific reasons for rejecting an appointee should most certainly be adopted.

I further recommend that a provision be incorporated in the new constitution which will automatically confirm an appointee in his position unless he is rejected by the legislature within 60 days after that body convenes its first session following the appointment.

Proceedings in accordance with the foregoing would assure that legislative rejection of an appointee would not be capricious or improperly motivated, and provide the executive with a guide and counsel in the matter of selecting persons to hold public office.

It is my firm belief that the adoption of the foregoing suggestions will be a great step forward in this vital area of government and assure that both the executive and the legislature will play their proper and intended roles in the matter of selecting state officers. It will also guarantee that prospective state officers will have every right safeguarded when being heard upon their candidacies.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The communication will be received and printed in the journal.

Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. President, at this time I would like to make a motion to reconsider the vote that was taken this morning the result of which was to change the order of business in the committee of the whole on the proposals now pending.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, I object.

MR. MAHINSKE: I don't think an objection is proper, Mr. President. He can either vote yes or no.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Mahinske to change the rules.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, a point of order.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: The point is the question of whether it is in order at this time to return to motions and resolutions in committee of the whole — no, we are not in committee of the whole — in the general body of the convention.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Rule 53 states, Mr. Martin:

A motion to reconsider shall take precedence of all other questions, except a motion to fix the time to which to adjourn, a motion to adjourn and a motion to recess. No motion to reconsider shall be renewed on the same day.

The Chair rules that the motion is in order to suspend the rules. The motion is in order, Mr. Martin.

MR. MAHINSKE: The motion is also debatable, and I would like to speak to the motion. The vote was very close this morning. There were people off the floor. There were some people who have indicated that they thought they were voting for one thing and wound up voting for another and didn't see fit to change their vote at the time. For these reasons, I would move the adoption of this motion.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. — Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, if I may speak on the motion of Mr. Mahinske, the decision reached by the convention this morning was based on general discussion as to the reasons for the change. Those reasons haven't changed any, and it appears to me, as the chairman of the committee, that we can have a more informed discussion if we can settle some of these other questions which are before us and come back to the proposals which have been passed by the action of the convention to this point. I certainly hope that the convention will follow the practice of supporting the action of the committee chairman in trying to arrive at a logical and sensible order of consideration of the matters coming before the convention. Therefore, I hope that you will vote no on Mr. Mahinske's motion.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: May I ask a couple of questions of Mr. Martin through the Chair?

PRESIDENT NISBET: You may if Mr. Martin cares to answer.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Martin, number 1 is: you say that the decision this morning was arrived at after discussion on the need for it and determining the need for it, et cetera. Could you tell me where that discussion and how it was arrived at — where this was done?

MR. MARTIN: You were here, Mr. Marshall.

MRS. KOEZE: Mr. President, preferential motion —

MR. MARSHALL: Can you answer one — I have one other question —

MRS. KOEZE: — I move we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Marshall may continue.

MR. MARSHALL: I am inclined to speak for quite awhile, but I want to continue my question: can you tell me why, Mr. Martin, that yesterday the general orders calendar was logical but today it is not logical to have the order as we had it yesterday?

MR. MARTIN: Well, to the committee — in looking over the business of the committee, the work of the committee, it appeared that we could cover these matters better by taking up the items which are of noncontroversial character and coming to the more controversial matters at the end of our consideration. I am sure this is the same reason which other committee chairmen had for suggesting that the order be changed as they went along.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair now recognizes Mrs. Koeze.

MRS. KOEZE: Mr. President, I move we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

We are adjourned to 9:30 tomorrow morning.

DELEGATES: Division.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Those in favor of the motion will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. In the meantime, Mr. Chase has an announcement.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Cudlip gives notice of a meeting of the committee on style and drafting this evening, March 15, at 8:00 o'clock p.m., in room K.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote. Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. President, would it be in order to make an announcement while waiting for the vote to be called?

PRESIDENT NISBET: You may make your announcement.

MR. YEAGER: It might be of interest to the convention to note that in addition to being the Ides of March, we have just completed the first 100 days of this convention.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Faxon, you had an announcement that you wanted to make, too?

MR. FAXON: In line with the fact that delegates here are commemorating the birthdays of some of their distinguished members, I have the honor to announce to you the birthday of a former teacher, lawyer, legislator, state representative, former mayor, friend of the court, a man who serves as the distinguished chairman of the committee on legislative powers, Mr. Thomas Jefferson Hoxie. (applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Snyder.

MR. SNYDER: Mr. President, before the vote is announced, I would like to be excused for Monday, and, not knowing with any degree of certainty what the hours of the convention are going to be, I would like to ask for excuse now because I don't know when we will be here and when we will not be here anymore.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, excuse will be granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: We have the following requests for leave: Mr. Norris wants to be excused from the session of Friday morning; Glenn Allen wishes to be excused from this Friday's session to attend a probate court hearing in St. Joseph county: Mr. Barthwell wishes to be excused from tomorrow's session; Father Dade wishes to be excused from the sessions of Monday and Tuesday mornings; Mr. Austin asks to be excused from the session of tomorrow afternoon to address the training institute of the municipal finance officers association in Ann Arbor; President Nisbet wishes to be excused from tomorrow's sessi n; Mr. Goebel wishes to be excused from Friday's session to attend a meeting of the regents of the University of Michigan; and Mr. Snyder wishes to be excused from Monday's session.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the excuses will be granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion to adjourn, the yeas are 74; the nays are 40.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The motion prevails. We are adjourned until 9:30 tomorrow morning.

[Whereupon, at 5:30 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 9:30 o'clock a.m. Friday, March 16, 1962.]

ONE HUNDRED FIRST DAY

PROCEEDINGS

Friday, March 16, 1962, 9:30 o'clock a.m.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The convention will come to order.

The invocation this morning will be offered by Rabbi Harry Essrig of Temple Emanuel Church, Grand Rapids. Rabbi Essrig.

RABBI ESSRIG: Our heavenly Father, favor us with knowledge and instruct us in the proper use of Thy divine gift of understanding. Help us fashion that instrument of political maturity which will best advance the welfare of all those who inhabit our beautiful state. Teach us how to reconcile our differences for the common good to the end that we may further unity and harmony and cultivate material well being and spiritual fulfillment in our midst. May we rise above petty discord and partisan interest and harness all our physical and moral resources for the enhancement of the lot of the common citizen. May we sow wisely in order to reap abundant harvest and may we labor so effectively that future generations will rise up and call us blessed.

In the words of an ancient Hebrew prayer, "May the pleasure of the Lord our God be with us this day and may He firmly establish the work of our hands." Amen.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Thank you, Rabbi Essrig.

The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Will those present please vote aye. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave: Mr. Ford, temporarily, from today's session; and Mr. Page, on orders from his doctor to go back home and stay in bed a few days, wishes to be excused indefinitely.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. Allen, Barthwell, Everett, Follo, Ford, Garvin, Goebel, Higgs, Lundgren, Mosier, Nisbet, Norris, Ostrow, Page, Tweedie and Wood.

Absent without leave: Messrs. T. S. Brown and Lawrence.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Without objection, the delegates are excused.

[During the proceedings the following delegates entered the chamber and took their seats: Messrs. T. S. Brown, Ford and Lawrence.]

The Chair has had one request for recognition. Before recognizing the delegate who made that request, may the Chair remind you that tomorrow is St. Patrick's day. And the Chair doesn't know whether you have noticed it or not, but somebody supplies the presiding officer with a flower each day, and this one is a green carnation. As I walked up here, Delegate Erickson handed to me some genuine shamrock. He received this from Paddy Boyd in Ireland who sent it to him to avoid green painted carnations on St. Patrick's day. Anyone interested in seeing some genuine shamrock can check in with Claud Erickson. (laughter)

Delegate Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President, may I speak from the secretary's desk?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Do you object, Mr. Secretary?

SECRETARY CHASE: Not at all.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: No objection.

[Whereupon, Mr. Brake approached the rostrum.]

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, as I read the Free Press this morning, I am appalled. I have apparently embarrassed you in a way in which I wouldn't want to embarrass any man—by trading you out of your pants. I am contrite, humble; and I want to do anything that I can to make amends. The only thing that I know of that I can do is what I'm going to do.

[Whereupon, Mr. Brake presented a pair of trousers to Vice President Romney.]

I'm sorry they are not better. (laughter and applause)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: May the Chair state, Mr. Brake, that he has never been concerned about being reduced to pajamas, and has always felt that we should have 2 pants suits. Thank you very much. (applause)

Delegate Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. President, I have a preferential motion. I move the convention recess for one hour.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: You have heard the motion. The motion is not subject to debate. Those in favor say aye. Those opposed.

The motion prevails. We will recess for one hour.

[Whereupon, at 9:40 o'clock a.m., the convention recessed; and, at 11:00 o'clock a.m., reconvened.]

Ladies and gentlemen, the convention will please come to order. The Chair will recognize Delegate Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. President, fellow delegates, I have a brief statement to make, and then a motion to make. If there is no objection, I shall read it now. It is with great shock and sorrow that we read in this morning's paper that there has been a deal made by the majority delegates to write a constitution without participation by all the delegates. We deeply regret that the concept of an open convention has been replaced with the concept of more decisions being made off the floor of the convention than on the floor by the majority party. We shall continue to vote for those things best for the people and oppose those things not in the best interests of the people. We shall continue to vote on each issue on its individual merits, and never on the basis of a deal for political expediency.

In view of the dramatic developments that have taken place, we believe there should be a cooling off period over the weekend for all delegates to reconsider any alleged deals, and see if we can return on Monday to the concept of an open convention with decisions openly arrived at by a vote on the floor of this convention. I therefore move we stand adjourned until Monday.

MR. BRAKE: I ask for a roll call vote, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: A demand for the yeas and nays has been made. Is it supported? It is supported. Those in favor of adjourning until Monday please vote aye, and those opposed please vote no. There is no debate possible on a motion to adjourn. Has everyone voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the votes.

The roll was called and the delegates voted as follows:

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion to adjourn, the yeas are 36; the nays are 84.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The motion does not prevail. Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President and fellow delegates, I desire to make a statement under the point of personal privilege. During the recess a statement was made by one of the delegates on the floor, for the benefit of the gallery, to the extent that it was a disgrace that the one hour recess was asked for. We do not feel that way. We are faced with a very serious and dramatic problem here. I also want to remind the delegates here in the convention that on a previous occasion here, when Mr. Art Iverson, I believe, the chairman of the Republican caucus, asked for a recess to discuss a problem that he had become involved in on the floor, the recess was granted; and no one got up on the floor from the minority party and accused the Republican party of being disgraceful in doing that. We felt that it was all right. Here on last Friday, when the gallery was packed and the halls were packed, there was a motion to adjourn, and the motion did carry over my protest, Mr. President. I just wanted that for the record.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Mr. Marshall, the Chair might state that as all delegates know, the original recess was for 1 hour, and when the 20 minute extension was indicated, during that period we undertook to entertain the gallery as best we could.

MR. MARSHALL: That's fine, Mr. President. I think you did an excellent job. But I do think that probably, in view of the fact that when the Republican majority had a recess on a previous occasion in the convention no objection was made; I do think the remark was out of order.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The Chair made no comment on that, Mr. Marshall.

Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. President, I ask that the Democratically elected delegates be excused for the rest of today's session.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, I wonder if Mr. Downs would reconsider his suggestion. We have some very serious business, and the convention has a long way to go. It will not be helpful to the consideration of the matters at hand to have the minority depart; and it would seem in the interests of the work of the convention and the people of the state of Michigan that we carry on with the responsibility of deciding these questions and deciding on the various amendments which have been offered to the committee proposal with respect to the legislative auditor general. We ought to get these matters dealt with, and as rapidly as we possibly can.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. President, I had asked in the motion for adjournment for a cooling off period, hoping that none of us would say things we would later on regret. And I hope I am not at the moment proving the wisdom of the motion that was defeated.

If the decisions have been made, I think it would facilitate the convention if the minority members left the floor for the majority to make the decisions. I had hoped that we would have the weekend for all of us to reconsider our activities, so that we could come back Monday with a fresh start, and hope that the delegates who had been caucusing secretly would be in a position to reconsider their activities, and we could get off to a good start. I do not withdraw the request.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The Chair recognizes Delegate Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. President and delegates, I have heard the statement now several times this morning that the majority has reached decisions. I'm not aware of any unanimity of a decision. And, fortunately for the majority party, it's a 2 way street. That's probably the reason why we received a little press from one of the urban newspapers pointing out that we were trying to work together. I think we've all been trying to work together.

As far as the adjourning or being excused from this convention, I believe that the people in the minority party and the majority party are big enough and sensible enough to ignore this little situation—and I call it a little situation, because it is not nearly as important as the work we have yet to do. I believe that they could ignore this and rise above it today and act in a responsible manner to finish the business we have on hand. (applause)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Plank.

MR. PLANK: I would just like to call to the attention of Delegate Downs that he is violating almost immediately a statement he made before this convention just a matter of 3 or 4 minutes ago when he said the group was going to stay here and vote their convictions. Now he is asking them to leave and let us go on with our work without them. It seems to me, in the sense of being consistent, he would either do one or the other, and do it now.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President, fellow delegates, as a member of the majority party, I regret if there were any statements made by any member of my party in regard to the request of the minority party to recess for the purpose of calling a caucus. I consider that very unfair. We have done it in the past. And I would further like to urge my fellow Republican delegates that if it is their desire, after deliberation, that they be excused, that we honor that request.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. President, I just raise a point of order. It seems to me that this was not a motion, but just simply a request, and in the past the Chair has ruled upon it immediately without any debate. And if Mr. Downs' request for the entire delegation is out of order, I as a delegate would hereby request to be excused for the balance of today.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Is there objection to the request of Mr. Downs—

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. President, I object.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Objection has been heard. Delegate Howes.

MR. HOWES: I am a politician. To many the name does not sound good. To me the good of my county, my state and my country comes first. The good of my party comes second. What is good for my country will be good for my party. Our 2 major political parties are here and were developed as services to our country. He who serves his country best serves his party best.

To men such as Lincoln, Roosevelt and Wilson their fame came not from what they did for their party, but from what they did for their country. But their parties benefited in proportion to their service to their country. To these men it was: my country first, my party second. He who does less than this, be he Republican or Democrat, is not worthy of the name. (applause)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. President, members of the convention, particularly the delegates from Wayne county, I might state that I was not much less surprised at what I read in the paper this morning than some of the Democrats from Wayne county. I would think that by this time you wouldn't take too seriously everything you read in the papers.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Binkowski has asked to be excused. Is there objection?

MR. HUTCHINSON: I object, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Mr. Hutchinson objects.

Delegate Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I request an excuse from the balance of the day.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Mahinske requests an excuse. Delegate Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: I object.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Hodges.

MR. HODGES: I request an excuse from the remainder of today's session.

MR. FARNSWORTH: I object.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Farnsworth objects.

Delegate Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President, how can this convention and you as the President, after you have already excused other delegates from today's session, be this narrow minded to take the position that we cannot be excused? And at this time I would like to ask to be excused from today's session.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Mr. Marshall, the Chair should be permitted to point out that the Chair is simply complying with rules of the convention, and has not injected anything other than the proper procedure into the handling of these matters. Now, Delegate Marshall has asked permission to be excused. Is there objection? There is objection.

Delegate Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. President, I never got much chance before to beat Mr. Martin to the punch. He was always recognized before me. Thank you, Mr. Romney.

Mr. President, I now ask that I be excused for the rest of the session today.

A DELEGATE: Don't anybody object. (laughter)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Is there objection to Mr. Madar being excused?

MISS DONNELLY: I object.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. President, it is not necessary for us to go through all of this. If there are objections to individual requests for an excuse, I suggest that someone make a motion that the delegates be excused, and I think that it's their privilege. If they want to leave the convention, they should be permitted to do so. I don't think that we should try to hold people here against their will. If they want to leave the convention and don't want to take part in the business of the convention, this certainly should be their privilege. I think it is unwise, I think it is undesirable; but this is their decision.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The Chair has been completely unable to keep track of the order in which everyone has risen, because there are so many on the floor; but is going to recognize Mrs. Hatcher next, because the Chair believes she was the next one.

MRS. HATCHER: Thank you, Mr. President. Fellow delegates, I have such a full feeling within me at this moment that I can barely speak as I would like to. So if I pause between my words at times, it will be because I feel that so many things have happened here within the last 48 hours that I can't quite understand as a citizen and as an elected delegate from the fourth senatorial district in the city of Detroit.

Of course, I feel that if decisions have been made off the floor of this convention to the point that it has crystallized the contents of the constitution and the constitution has been wrapped up, then the minority of this convention is certainly taking a very rough sledding at this particular time. Despite whether we remain in this convention today or any other day, it seems as if we are outvoted. We understood, in the very beginning when we came to the convention, that there were 45 Democrats and 99 Republicans. We were very willing to sit in the convention and in committee meetings and to take our chances and to express our points of view. And, fortunately enough, I may say, on the lighter side of the ledger, we have met very many fine Republicans in this convention. We have discussed many salient points in this convention, and we have found unanimity of opinion; we have found very reasonable objectives, which many of us have agreed with.

Unfortunately, this story has appeared in the newspaper, and it would appear to me if I were at home today that whatever efforts are being set forth in this convention today are certainly without any avail whatsoever; that the constitution has already been agreed upon in privacy. This I take extreme exception to, because I believe that the 45 Democrats here represent people back home the same as the 99 Republicans do. Each weekend I have had the problem of attempting to defend some of the things that have been going on down here in this convention. For that reason, and because of my feelings being so scarred at this moment, Mr. President, I ask to be excused.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: You have heard Delegate Hatcher's request. Is there objection? Mr. Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. President, I will advise right now that I propose to object to any further requests for excuse. I believe it is high time this convention got down to the business for which we were elected. We have much before us. We had unfinished business pending at the end of yesterday's session. We have a great deal of business before us, including the entire matter of the executive branch. I believe the secretary had on his desk half a dozen amendments when we adjourned yesterday. I think the best thing we can do at this point is to get down to business, and for that reason I will object to any further requests for excuse. And I move, Mr. President, we proceed with the order of business.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: You have heard the motion.

MR. KUHN: Mr. President, a preferential motion.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: A preferential motion by Delegate Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. President, to me this is turning into a circus. We have never once turned down a request to be excused. I can only see retaliation in the worst form. I therefore move that we adjourn, or otherwise let them go if they want to. It's their right. We should not change the rules at this stage of the game.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The question is on the motion to adjourn. Those in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote no. Well, the Chair is going to rule that he is in doubt, so that no one can say that the Chair made the decision on the vote. Those in favor of adjourning will vote aye, and those who are opposed will vote no.

MR. NORD: Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The Chair doesn't believe, Delegate Nord, that there is any debate on a motion to adjourn.

MR. NORD: I have a point of convention privilege in the event that the motion does not carry.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The Chair will recognize you as soon as the vote is announced. Has everyone voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion to adjourn, the yeas are 39; the nays are 77.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The motion does not prevail. Delegate Nord, will you restate the request you made, because there were other delegates who asked to be heard ahead of you.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, it is a matter of convention privilege.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The gentleman will state it.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, we have really seen a circus here this morning, and I'm sure that nobody planned it. And nobody enjoys it. I think that we ought to be a little more dignified and specific in what is really going on in this convention, and why these requests are being made—what it's all about. This is a crucial matter to me, to my mind, in the convention. Otherwise we would not have asked to recess; we would not have asked to adjourn; we would not have asked to be excused.

But in view of the fact that you have seen fit not to excuse us, or to adjourn, it is necessary, in my mind, that we explain, or at least that I explain why I have taken the same position as these other delegates. This is a matter that relates to the entire convention as a convention.

When a friend of mine called me on the phone and asked me whether I would like to be a constitutional convention delegate, there is where I made my first mistake. I said yes. And the reason that that was a mistake is this. I had been reading in the newspapers at that time that we were going to have the highest quality of delegates to the convention and that there would be no caucuses of any sort and that it would not be a political matter. That's the only reason I came here. I had never been involved in politics deeply. I am a member of a party, but I have never been highly active in it. And when I was asked the question before I came here, before I ran, whether I would agree to the policies of a Democratic caucus, I said no. I was asked that by the Democrats. That was the answer I gave.

I was rather naive at that time, like a lot of us. And when I found in the newspapers shortly thereafter that the Republicans had caucused before the convention even, and that every delegate, even those Republicans who said that they would never go to a caucus, was present at the caucus and voting, then I asked the Democrats to form a caucus as well. And I did this with regret. I did it for this reason. I told the Democratic delegates I didn't wish to come here to be a paid spectator with a reserved seat. I didn't think the convention would be that exciting that I should be a spectator for 6 or 7 months. However, we've been here for all of this time, struggling, and until recently I think there was always a chance that we would not be just paid spectators with reserved seats.

Now, in reading the paper this morning, I think you must all realize we just can't ignore what we see; and we certainly cannot ignore it when we see Mr. Brake, who I believe is the greatest speaker at the convention, make the speech that he made today, or the actions that he made today, which in essence ratified or affirmed what the paper said. We certainly can't believe that the paper was inaccurate in view of his statement. If I'm wrong, of course, you can contradict me; but in view of that fact, and in view of one other fact which I would like to lay before you, I think you must realize that I take an extremely serious view of what is going on here. Not what's coming off, not pants; but what's going on.

Now, I am going to read, Mr. President, a letter which was misdelivered by one of the delegates to the convention to another delegate. I have the envelope in which it was delivered. And without saying the names of the persons involved, it had the first name of one delegate and the last name of another, and that's the reason it was misdelivered. It was delivered to the person whose last name is on the envelope. He is a Democrat. The man whose first name is on it is a Republican. And that's the reason a letter addressed to a Republican ended up in a Democrat's box. And this is the letter:

> To Republican members
> Committee on Legislative Organization,

Incidentally, this is dated March 13, 1962. This week. A few days ago.

> Unfortunately, tonight is winter term commencement at Michigan State University. As host to a dinner at the president's house at 6:00 prior to commencement exercises, I have no alternative but to leave the convention hall shortly after 5:00. This means I may miss all of the joint meeting—and I emphasize those words "joint meeting" because they are rather stunning. Continuing:

> —This means I may miss all of the joint meeting and will certainly miss most of it. My personal feeling is that a real Republican compromise—and I will halt again to depart to point out and emphasize those words, a Republican compromise, not a bipartisan; and I'll return to the letter:

> My personal feeling is that a real Republican compromise on the 3 items to be discussed is very important, practically essential if we are to have a sound constitution. I hope we will make an all out effort for positions that at least 73 Republicans will agree to adhere to.

I will depart from the letter again to point out that that is what is required for this compromise: 73 Republicans and zero Democrats. I will return to the letter:

> If this involves the moving to 111 house seats on a population basis adhering to county lines, as a third part of a 3 way compromise, I would be willing to accept it if this is the caucus position. Unless this is agreed to as a part of a total package, agreed to by 73 or more Republicans—

I depart again from the letter to point out again: 73 or more Republicans, and no Democrats. To return to the letter—

> I am prepared to go all the way to defend and sell our committee report as now submitted. I want my position to be understood. I am willing to compromise—and I depart again from the letter to point out that word "compromise"—to return:

> but lacking a firm commitment all the way around, I will stand with the committee report.
> Sincerely, John A. Hannah.

I regret that I had to read the name, because it is not what I would wish to do. I do not intend this to be a reflection on Dr. Hannah. I believe that he is one of the finest men at the convention, and this letter doesn't change my opinion. But I read it for a different reason, and I hope he will not take offense; but if he does I cannot help it.

When I received this letter 2 days ago by accident, before I had heard of any of these rumors about a deal, I was fit to be tied. Because here I am at a convention, thinking that I'm a delegate, thinking that I can participate in the making of a decision, of any decision, and here I am faced with the realities—and I know that Dr. Hannah hasn't forced these realities to exist, and maybe no one person has. But this is the fact. The fact is that it doesn't make any difference whether any Democrat says this, that or the other; the convention is not being run on that basis.

Now, early in the convention, when I had a fear that that might develop, I was quoted in the newspapers as saying that if this convention ever turned out to be nothing but a Republican caucus, I could see no role for me to play, and I would have to leave. I was quoted in the papers as saying I would resign at that point. That is no light matter to do. I have been considering it all week—whether I should resign. I think I really should resign. But it isn't so simple to resign when you're under fire, and when what you do reflects on many other people. I am not proposing to resign at this point, and neither is any other delegate. Neither is any other delegate proposing to leave the convention permanently, irrevocably, or anything like that.

But what we are saying—and I think you should pay attention—is that this puts an entirely different light on the convention, and we do have to reconsider. We certainly do have to reconsider what our role should be. Should we be here in the face of this, where it is clear that it makes no difference what we do? Should we be here or should we not? We need to know the answer to that question, and that is going to take a little time. What we have asked for is time. Now, it seems to me that we are going to have to make a determination, and I wish it would not be just by the Democratic delegates. I wish that delegates from both parties could make this determination once and for all. Are we going to have the people in convention assembled, or are we going to have a Republican caucus?

Now, if it's going to be a Republican caucus and it's going to be irrevocable, then it's clear that we have no role here. We don't wish to be excluded from the convention, but if you make it impossible for us to have any effective function, it's very difficult for me to know what our function will be. We need to know the answer to that question. It would be very helpful if, over the weekend, the Democratic delegates could discuss this matter with each other, and preferably if they could discuss it with Republican delegates as well. If you are going to go ahead as if nothing had happened, you are going to make a mockery of this whole idea of a convention where we are going to have the people in convention assembled.

Mr. President, I move that we reconsider the vote on the last motion which was put, which was that we adjourn, on the basis of these remarks.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The Chair understands from the secretary, Delegate Nord, that you do not make a motion to reconsider a vote on adjournment.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, would you ask the secretary what you do when you wish to adjourn?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: You make the straight out motion, Mr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. President, then I make the motion that we adjourn in view of the foregoing remarks.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The question is on the motion. Those in favor vote aye.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President, I believe I have a preferential motion.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Would you please state it.

MR. HOXIE: I believe that a motion to honor the request made by Mr. Downs is in order.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Hoxie, the Chair is advised by the secretary that the motion to adjourn takes preference over any other motion, except a motion to fix the time of adjournment.

MR. HOXIE: This is an amendment to the motion to adjourn, for the purpose of excusing—

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The secretary advises me there is no amendment to a motion to adjourn.

MR. HOXIE: Then I'll request the floor as soon as this action is taken.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The question is on the motion to adjourn. Those in favor vote aye. Those opposed vote no. Has everyone voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion to adjourn, the yeas are 43; the nays are 72.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The motion does not prevail. Delegate Hoxie.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President, it is my understanding—I may be in error, but I would like to be corrected if I am—that the request of Mr. Downs was not in the nature of a motion. Is that correct?

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: That is correct.

MR. HOXIE: We had a request made by Mr. Downs, one of the minority leaders, and at this time I would like to make a motion that we honor the request of Mr. Downs; and that we have a record roll call vote on my motion.

VICE PRESIDET ROMNEY: Is the demand for a roll call supported on the motion to excuse the minority delegates from the balance of the day's session? There is a sufficient number. Delegate Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Mr. President, I would rise to a point of personal privilege. A letter from me, written on business of this convention, to be delivered in a mail box of this convention, evidently reaching the hands of a person to whom it was not addressed, has just been read on the floor of this convention.

I acknowledge the letter. I make no apologies for it. Its content was appropriate. It was in the best interests of the work of this convention, and I believe the people of this state. I raise the question, however, of the ethics or propriety of anyone receiving a letter obviously not intended for him; as soon as he ascertained that it was not for him, to proceed to read it in the first place, to me, would be a violation of common decency. To deliver it to another for the purpose that it was used here this morning is totally indefensible. I conclude with a statement made in the beginning. There are no apologies for the letter. I just question the ethics of the people that have used it, in spite of the admiration I have for many of them as individuals.

And I should only remind them that by sitting where I happen to sit, directly behind a vice president of this convention, representing their party, and adjacent to their caucus leader, and listening now for 5 months to much of their conversation—which I tried not to hear—and knowing the subject of the conversations taking place yesterday afternoon, I will match their ethics by some of my own, by making the statement that I doubt if there is much relationship between the story in the morning's Free Press and the action that has been taken in the last hour and a half in this convention.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The Chair believes he still retains his delegate rights, and raises the question of personal privilege and asks to be heard on that; and asks Vice President Hutchinson to kindly take the Chair for the purpose of my making a statement of personal privilege.

[Whereupon, Vice President Hutchinson assumed the Chair.]

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes the delegate from the twelfth district, Mr. Romney.

MR. FORD: Mr. President, by what new rule now do we start recognizing Mr. Romney in preference of those of us who have been standing on the floor for 10 minutes trying to get the floor? Mr. Romney assumes a lot of prerogatives in this hall, but not the prerogative of taking the floor after the rest of us have been waiting. At least that much has been left to us.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes Mr. Romney.

MR. FORD: You may proceed without me.

MR. ROMNEY: May I say, for the benefit of Delegate Ford, that familiar as he is with the procedures of this convention, he will know that I just recognized Delegate Hannah ahead of other delegates because he raised a question of personal privilege, and, as he knows, the question of personal privilege does take precedence.

Now, a number of the remarks made relate to a story in which I believe I was the principal character dealt with. I think it is important, in the interests of the future of this convention, that there be no misunderstanding on some of the alleged events that have transpired. May I say that the story is very incomplete. It is not an adequate coverage, and I don't see how it could be an adequate coverage, because as far as I can tell it has been pieced together from fragments acquired from a number of delegates, including certain questions that were put to me. But on many points in the story I was not asked to comment, and it does seem to me that, considering the importance of some of the conclusions drawn, I was at least entitled to the right of being asked as to the conclusions being drawn by the author.

Now, this is only the second talk that I have made to this convention since we started our deliberation on proposals. I have made one or 2 comments, but other than that I have not abused the privilege of this floor. I have not responded to previous attacks that entitled me to the right of personal privilege. I didn't do so because I didn't think they were worthy of it.

A great deal has been made by Delegate Nord about compromise. May I read from Profiles in Courage, by President John F. Kennedy, on the question of compromise in a free society. He says:

> It is compromise that prevents each set of reformers — the wets and the dries, the one worlders and the isolationists, the vivisectionists and the antivivisectionists — from crushing the group on the extreme opposite end of the political spectrum.
> The fanatics and extremists, even those conscientiously devoted to hard and fast principles, are always disappointed at the failure of their government to rush to implement all of their principles and to denounce those of their opponents.
> But the legislator — and I insert here constitutional convention delegate because I think there is a high degree of comparability — > has some responsibility to conciliate those opposing forces within his state and party and to represent them in the larger clash of interests on the national level; and he alone knows that there are few if any issues where all the truth and all the right and all the angels are on one side.

> Some of my colleagues who are criticized today for lack of forthright principles — or who are looked upon with scornful eyes as compromising politicians — are simply engaged in the fine art of conciliating, balancing and interpreting the forces and factions of public opinion, an art essential to keeping our nation united and enabling our government to function.
> Their consciences may direct them from time to time to take a more rigid stand for principle — but their intellects tell them that a fair or poor bill is better than no bill at all, and that only through the give and take of compromise will any bill receive the successive approval of the senate, the house, and the president of the nation.

And this, too, applies to what we are dealing with:

> But the question is how we will compromise and with whom. For it is easy to seize upon unnecessary concessions, not as means of legitimately resolving conflicts but as methods of "going along."

Now, my hopes for this convention were as high as Dr. Nord's or any other delegate to this convention. I came to this convention imbued with the general objectives of those citizens who collaborated in bringing about this convention. I could enumerate those citizen goals. I talked about them to the extent I could through this state. I stated at the start of this convention that this nation desperately needs a state constitution to match our federal constitution. I subscribed to the objectives stated for this constitutional convention by Dr. Pollock. Now, the key question that's raised here is, really this: do the Republicans, as delegates to this convention, have the right to meet as delegates to this convention for the purpose of composing to the extent possible their viewpoints on matters before this convention; and does this process help or hurt the results of this convention?

Now, first, let me deal with this question of Republican caucuses. It's important that this state understand this point, because this point will be misrepresented and will mislead people unless it is understood. During my battle to bring about this convention, I stated that I would not participate in any binding caucuses. I have not violated that commitment, and I do not expect to violate that commitment, and I have not been requested to violate that commitment.

One of the things made clear at the first Republican caucus we held was that no Republican caucus is ever a binding caucus. And no action that has been taken by the Republican delegates in their meetings has been binding on any Republican delegate. Every Republican delegate has come onto this floor—and this is as true today as it has been throughout the course of this convention—to vote on the basis of what he thinks is in the best interests of this state and in the best interest of writing the best constitution that we can write. Now, I think that this is an important distinction. This term "caucus" has a kind of a ring to it that people don't like, because it carries the implication of binding people to a course of action. I would prefer to call these meetings "meetings" rather than "caucuses." But I think this point should be clear.

Now, the key question is: has the Republican caucus been used to bind delegates and for narrow partisan purposes, or has it been used to further the writing of the best possible constitution that we are capable of writing? I say "we are capable of writing" because the results achieved by those who had the highest aims for this convention can only fairly be judged on the basis of the composition of this body.

A constitutional convention is a very unique thing. There is nothing else quite like it in a free society. In a legislature, if you don't like what happens one session, you can go to work to change it in the next session. A governor can make an appeal directly to the people to help him prevail. As a delegate to this convention, you have to deal with the realities of the viewpoints of the people that constitute this convention. There is no way to go outside the halls of this convention effectively and adequately to secure public support for what may occur here.

Now, this body consisted at the start of a majority of Republican delegates who came from districts who opposed the calling of a constitutional convention. Only 5 counties voted the majority for this convention.

Now, the second big issue that was dealt with at the preconvention meetings of the Republican delegates was whether the convention was going to be organized along partisan or bipartisan lines. The bipartisan decision to organize this convention on a bipartisan basis saved this convention. And it is still proceeding on a basically bipartisan basis. Since then the Republican caucus has been used to exchange information so that delegates could vote on this floor on an informed basis, with 2 exceptions. And I wish every Democratic delegate would get up here and say honestly how many occasions there have been when they have taken positions that they were then expected to follow, or at least the caucus hoped they would follow. In the entire history of the meetings of the Republican delegates to this convention, there have been but 2 occasions when we have arrived at positions that it was hoped that most Republican delegates would follow, with no one bound to follow those positions.

Those 2 exceptions were county home rule, and the present preliminary general understanding on 3 limited phases—and let me emphasize "limited phases" because there are many other aspects to these 3 articles—3 limited phases of the revenue, executive and apportionment articles.

Will these 2 limited and general Republican delegate understandings produce the writing and adoption of the best possible document this convention is capable of producing? Let's look at both, and the alternate indicated results. The first understanding was on the single issue in the local government article of home rule for counties. The now renowned and appropriately recognized "courthouse gang"—and I'm sorry Mr. Ford isn't here, because he was the one that recognized them—had prevailed in the committee in recommending a proposal that circumscribed and restricted home rule for counties. It was neither genuine nor mandatory. The first Republican caucus understanding broke up the county courthouse gang alliance and brought about the adoption of a genuine county home rule provision—not mandatory, but approximately equal to the home rule for cities written into the 1908 constitution which some authorities have said was the biggest single improvement made in that rewriting of the constitution.

Now, the "mandatory" advocates, of which I was one, were disappointed. Some thought they could have won. But based on what happened on the floor and what happened before, it was perfectly clear they could not. They had no chance of winning. Now, the only other Republican delegate understanding is one based on general principles relating to limited aspects of taxation, administrative board appointment or election, and some major aspects of apportionment. Will this general understanding, to which there are some Republican delegates who disagree, result in more or less improvement? I think that's the central question here.

The net improvement—and I consider this an improvement—will be the appointment of 2 more members of the administrative board than would have been the case otherwise, and more delegates will leave this convention prepared to sell this document because of improvements that already vastly exceed the importance of the cost and time that we have devoted here. In addition, the revenue article was improved. The 15 mill limitation was loosened and made more flexible, but retained. Five taxes were to be eliminated from earmarking; more flexibility in the highway and the sales tax proposals.

The cost was house apportionment based on the committee proposal. And may I say here and now that the responsibility for this committee proposal missing practically a straight population basis by a hairline—by 2 representatives from the northern half of the state—clearly rests on the Democratic members of the legislative organization committee—of whom Mr. Nord was one of the leaders—because there were Republican delegates who were prepared and did offer to vote with the Democratic members of that committee to have the house apportioned on a straight population basis, and when that vote was taken the Democratic members of that committee abstained. Now, that's the hard, cold record of what happened to house apportionment on a population basis. Now, the committee proposal is within a hairline of being on a pure population basis.

Now, may I conclude with these observations: 1, I have sat in this convention and I have had Democratic delegates in this convention tell me that they had been called to the governor's office and they had been told how to vote in this convention; and 2, since this convention started, the Democratic party has shifted its attitude with respect to major proposals before this convention, and their own leaders came here and testified on proposals before our committees that they now repudiate, and they were engaged in the process of an alliance with Republican delegates to scuttle certain basic committee proposals that were coming before this convention.

I want to say that I feel proud to have been able to reach understandings that prevented a combination of Republican and Democratic delegates from completely scuttling certain sound proposals that were to come before this convention; and I want to say to you that I know that what has been done is in the interests of securing a better constitution to present to the people of this state than would have been possible otherwise. I know there is no binding commitment on the part of any Republican delegate. I know they come onto the floor of this convention free to vote in any way that they want to vote.

I know we have already written into this constitution provisions that do not occur in any other state constitution in the land. It does not live up to my highest expectations when I came to this convention. But it lives up to over 75 per cent of them and I can take them and list them and mark up the score card. I say to you that within the limits of the realities that President Kennedy has so well outlined, and considering the opposition at the start in this convention to the convention in the first place and the subsequent opposition that has developed in the process of this convention, that this is a marvelous accomplishment that is being achieved here.

I think we should proceed, and certainly we have never objected to Democratic meetings to develop whatever viewpoints they wanted to develop; and this is really all that is involved in this situation. I believe we are going to wind up with the best constitution that any state has in this country. The apportionment issue is particularly at issue with relationship to the house. The proposed basis of apportioning the house in this state is the best in the nation. There is no other state that even approaches the population basis on which we are proposing to apportion the house. Thank you very much. (applause)

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. President, a preferential motion.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. President, I move that we recess until 2:00 o'clock.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is on the motion to recess, which is not debatable. All those in favor will say aye. Those opposed say no.

The motion prevails. The convention stands in recess until 2:00 p.m.

[Whereupon, at 12:05 o'clock p.m., the convention recessed; and, at 2:00 o'clock p.m., reconvened.]

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Ladies and gentlemen, the convention will come to order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The Chair will recognize Delegate Hoxie, whose motion was pending when we recessed.

MR. HOXIE: Mr. President and fellow delegates, this morning I made a motion to honor the request of Vice President Tom Downs to excuse the Democrat members of this convention. I would like to withdraw that motion. However, it is my hope that if any member of this convention desires an excuse for the balance of the day, that that excuse be honored.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, this is the last session of the last day when one of those with whom we have worked since the third day of October can be with us. Charlie Davis is running for the house in the legislature to fill a vacancy. The election is Monday. One cannot be both a delegate to this convention and a member of the legislature, for the double reason that it would be illegal, and the second reason that he couldn't stand it. (laughter) He is therefore resigning. I know it's a matter of regret to us.

Inasmuch as he is running on a partisan ballot, and inasmuch as we belong to 2 parties, of course I can't ask you all to join with me and wish him success on Monday. But I'm sure that for 143 besides Mr. Davis we can express our regret that he is leaving us and wish him well in whatever his field of endeavor may be.

Knowing the kind of service he has given here, we know the kind of service he will give in the legislature in the event that the people see fit on Monday to send him there. And I'm sure that everybody can join in wishing him a tenure there that is as pleasant as tenure in the legislature could be, and long. He is the kind of public servant who ought to be kept in public office. Nearly all public officers are honest. Let's pat ourselves on the back and say that on the average the intelligence among public officers is a little above the average. We hope so, anyway. If there is a qualification in which we who are public officers are sometimes weak, it's a matter of not having quite enough courage—the courage to do what we know ought to be done; the courage that makes one stand up when he comes to the time that good public service points in one direction and personal advancement in another. Charlie Davis has that courage in an unusual degree. When he gets over in the legislature—if the people send him there—and some lobbyist starts to work on him, he is going to find that Charlie can say no just as fast as he can say yes; and when he says no, he means no. Some of us have found that out here when we tried to get him to change his mind. You can't push him around. He is a good public servant.

I'm sure that all of us wish him well in whatever his career may be and hope that from time to time, if he is in the legislature or if he is not in the legislature, that he comes back and pays us a visit while we are still here. Thank you, Mr. President.

[Whereupon, Mr. Davis was given a standing ovation.]

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: One of the disadvantages of our working in so large a hall is that our best opportunities to become acquainted with fellow delegates are afforded by those who sit in the same part of the hall. I consider it one of the best privileges and the greatest benefits that I have had as a member of this convention to have been so situated, by reason of the fact that both our names begin with D, that Mr. Davis has been my closest neighbor on my left. I want to add my words to what Mr. Brake has said, in this part of the hall especially, for myself and the others here, for the privilege that we have had in having Mr. Davis as a member, and to join on behalf of all the others here located in the good wishes that Mr. Brake has expressed. Thank you. (applause)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. President, I respectfully again request that I be excused for the remainder of the session today for personal reasons.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Is there objection? The Chair hears none. You are excused.

Delegate Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. President, I also request leave to be excused.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Is there objection? There is no objection. You are excused.

Delegate Davis.

MR. DAVIS: For the remarks which have just been made from 2 gentlemen whom we all respect, I am indeed grateful. I didn't happen to know that the fact of my leaving today was going to be mentioned. I had even addressed a letter to Mr. Nisbet expressing a statement which I had hoped he might read after I left here. With your permission, I would like to say this: as an individual, I think that we sometimes are called upon to make decisions which contain certain regrettable factors. In numerous ways I regret resigning as a delegate to the constitutional convention.

For 5½ months I have been a part of as fine a group of ladies and gentlemen as it has ever been my good fortune to be associated with. The personal qualities of character, diligence, sincerity of purpose and capability have been amply demonstrated by individuals on both sides of the political aisle. After the completion of the new constitution, like the other delegates, I shall put my shoulder to the task of explaining the new document, truthfully and objectively, to the best of my ability.

In parting, I wish to extend personally to each of the officers, delegates and employees of this convention best wishes and God speed for your future well being, both in and out of this convention. (applause)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The secretary has a request.

SECRETARY CHASE: Earlier today Mr. L. W. Richards filed a request asking for excuse from the afternoon session.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Chair will recognize Delegate Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. President, I move that the convention now resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of taking up matters upon the general orders calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Excuse me, Mr. Millard. In light of the many things that happened this morning, we didn't go through the regular order of business. Consequently, the next thing in order is the reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: We have some other requests ahead of that, Mr. President. Mr. Baginski, Mr. Walker, Miss Hart, Mr. Buback and Mr. Downs filed requests to be excused from the afternoon session.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Is there objection? The Chair hears none; it is so ordered.

Delegate Walker.

MR. WALKER: I think I have partially resolved my problems of this morning, and I wish to withdraw my request. (applause)

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. President, seeing as we are in so gracious a mood this afternoon, I would like to renew my request to be excused from this afternoon's session.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Is there objection? The Chair hears none; it is so ordered.

Mrs. Hatcher.

MRS. HATCHER: Mr. President, I would like to be excused for the balance of the afternoon.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Is there objection? The Chair hears none; it is so ordered.

Delegate Murphy.

MR. MURPHY: Mr. President, I would like to be excused for the afternoon.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Is there objection? The Chair hears none; it is so ordered.

Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no standing committee reports on file, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Reports of select committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: Mr. President, early this morning I filed a request to be excused from the latter portion of today's meeting. I have a medical appointment in Ann Arbor, and I have to be there by 4:30. I also have one on Monday that may make me late. I would like to be excused from the remainder of this afternoon's session, and from the first session on Monday.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Without objection, it is so ordered.

Delegate Kelsey.

MR. KELSEY: Mr. President, in view of the circumstances, I would put forth a preferential motion to adjourn until Monday.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: You have heard the motion. Those in favor say aye. Opposed?

The motion does not prevail.

Communications from state officers.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Second reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Third reading of proposals.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Unfinished business.

SECRETARY CHASE: Under the order of unfinished business, the president lays before the convention the motion made on yesterday to reconsider the vote by which the order was set up for consideration of proposals on the executive branch.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The question is on that motion. Those in favor say aye. Opposed?

The motion does not prevail.

Special orders of the day.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Millard.

MR. MILLARD: I will now make my motion, Mr. President, that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of taking up matters on the general orders calendar.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: You have heard the motion. Those in favor say aye. Opposed?

The motion prevails. Delegate Millard will preside.

[Whereupon, Mr. Millard assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The committee will be in order. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: The matter presently under consideration is Committee Proposal 78, A proposal to provide for the office of legislative auditor general.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 78, see above, page 1680.

The substitute offered by the committee on executive branch and legislative powers has been adopted, and presently pending is an amendment offered by Mr. Boothby:

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: At the close of the session yesterday the Chair had exhausted the list of those who wanted to speak on this amendment. So, Delegate Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I just wanted to straighten Mr. Boothby out, because he thought that I misinformed the committee that Alaska did not have in its constitution the provision that the legislative auditor general should serve at the pleasure of the legislature. In the statement I made yesterday, I said out of the 4 constitutions that provided for a legislative auditor general, 3 provide for a definite term, and the only one that does not is Alaska. I just wanted to make the record straight, and say to you that the joint committees of legislative powers and executive branch had taken this question up, and we are opposed to the Boothby amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Brown, from Detroit.

MR. T. S. BROWN: I'm sorry, Mr. Chairman, are we on the Boothby amendment now.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: We are on the Boothby amendment.

MR. T. S. BROWN: I was absent for the last hour or so of yesterday's session. But during the early part of the session I made a speech concerning this particular topic, and I should like to oppose the Boothby amendment for the specific reasons which I enumerated yesterday. I believe the principal objection to the legislative auditor general setup is that it would allow fishing expeditions at the whim and caprice of not only the legislature, but individual legislators through the office of the auditor general, and thus attempt to obfuscate or embarrass or otherwise second guess some very autonomous functions of government, and I would imagine that in my absence yesterday certainly the universities were mentioned in that regard. I think this is the principal objection.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I did comment on this yesterday, in response to a question from Mr. Binkowski, but I wanted to add 1 or 2 points on behalf of the committee. The committee considered this question very carefully. We considered the idea of having the legislative auditor general employed only at the pleasure of the legislature. We also considered the possibility of providing for a much longer term, a term of 15 years, as I believe the comptroller general of the United States is employed.

It appeared to us that neither of these answers was a proper one; that to provide the longest term was longer than necessary. But it also appeared to us that to provide no tenure whatsoever would be harmful to the work of the auditor general, and that it would create 2 major difficulties. One is the problem of getting the kind of man that you have to have—and I adverted to this in my answer to Mr. Binkowski's question. It simply is not possible to get the caliber of man you need to fill this kind of a job unless you can offer him some tenure. The man you need for this kind of a job is one of the most qualified men in the country so far as governmental accounting is concerned. He has a good job now; he can't be lured away from it on the proposition that he may be out of a job tomorrow. And he can't be lured away from it without paying him a good salary. So we felt that it was necessary to have a term, and we felt that the term of 8 years was not too long—that this offered reasonable security, unless he did something which justified his dismissal—and for that reason we put into the proposal the rest of the sentence which this amendment would strike out, that he shall be removable for cause at any time by a 2/3 vote of the members elect of each house of the legislature. We don't want him to be removable at the mere whim of an individual senator, or even necessarily at the whim of a party, but if he has clearly failed in his responsibilities, then he should be removable, and it is possible to do so on this basis. So I hope that you will go along with the committee proposal—it has had careful consideration—and will not vote for the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the proposer of the amendment, Delegate Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, no doubt, after all the time that has passed since last night, my remarks are little remembered. This, too, shall pass away. And I will not take the time of this committee to repeat them. However, I would comment on some of the remarks that have been made after my initial comments regarding this amendment.

The purposes of a postaudit—and that is the function which the legislative auditor or the auditor general appointed by the legislature is responsible for and is concerned with— are 3 in nature. The 3 points which a legislative auditor is looking towards are, 1, the systematic check and review of the administration's financial accounts, records, methods and practice; 2, a determination of accuracy, legality and integrity with which the budget plans have been carried out; and 3, a report of the findings to the proper officials.

Now, when you investigate the 3 purposes which are connected with the postaudit, you find that these are the responsibilities which the legislature has been traditionally charged with. They have the responsibility of controlling the purse strings. They have the responsibility to determine whether the executive has carried out that budget in a legal manner and whether it has been carried out accurately. In other words, this is simply a check upon the function of the executive branch of government. Now, if this is the case, I would think and I would feel that there should be a high degree of control by the legislature over this particular function. And I fear the situation which may develop if you create a wholly new and separate independent body in addition to the legislature to carry out this function. I think that the responsibility of controlling this particular phase, the postaudit phase, should be with one body and not separated with 2. When you create a legislative auditor or an auditor general who has a great deal of independence from the legislative body, I'm afraid that you're dividing the function of the watchdog of the people's dollar as spent by the executive branch of government.

Now, I would like to comment regarding the question of whether you would be able to get a person of high caliber if you didn't offer him the security of a long term. Last night I had occasion to go over to the legislature, and there I talked with several members of the legislature concerning this problem. And those people I talked to expressed their hope that the amendment would be adopted so as to allow control by the legislature of this particular function. I asked one of the members there whether there was an analogy presently existing in the state legislature to allow a person to serve only at its pleasure and, if so, whether they had any difficulty in finding people of high caliber to fill these jobs. Immediately one of the members of the legislature made reference to the legislative service bureau, and he informed me that that particular bureau, and the head of it, and all the members connected with it, who have been doing outstanding work for the legislature, are serving only at the pleasure of the legislature. I was also informed that there are only 3 people that are elected for terms by the legislature: the clerk, the secretary and the postmaster. These 3 people are elected for terms which are consistent and coincide with the legislative term. All the other employees of the legislature are serving at the pleasure. And I think I have found, from my discussions, that the people who are members of the legislature are well satisfied with the high degree of competence that these people have in the carrying out of their purpose.

I would urge the adoption of this amendment, which would strike from the committee proposal the term of 8 years for legislative auditor—or the auditor general, as the office has been named—and that inserted in its place would be the provision which is urged in the model constitution, and which has been adopted in the Alaskan constitution, to have him serve at the pleasure of the legislature.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, only with respect to one of Mr. Boothby's comments, I say this knowing whereof I speak.

The job of the head of the legislative reference service has no comparability to the job of a legislative auditor general. The pressure on the former are nothing compared to the pressures which are on a person holding the job of auditor general and it's highly important that he have the maximum independence of judgment in making his reports. If he does not, his reports will not be of the kind that they should be. So I only say that I speak from experience on this, and that there is no comparability between any job held in the legislature at the present time and this kind of responsibility.

This of course is not derogatory in any sense of the persons who are now employed over there, who are of very high caliber and whom I know and respect very much; but this is a different kind of responsibility, and the pressures are entirely different. It is desirable that the holder of the job have some job tenure, and that the legislature be able to work with him on that basis. In any event, they have the maximum control in that they control his salary.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Lansing, Delegate Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, just to correct an impression which might be with you regarding the model constitution of the national municipal league, which Mr. Boothby uses as support for his amendment, I would like to call your attention also to the fact that the Michigan municipal league, which is concerned with Michigan, has recommended in their constitutional recommendations to this group, and I quote from recommendation 4 regarding this, "The Michigan municipal league recommends that the auditor general be appointed by the legislature for a definite term."

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Boothby amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Brake offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "term of" by striking out "8" and inserting "4"; so that the language will read, ". . . shall appoint an auditor general to serve for a term of 4 years."

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, the fact that 4 is halfway between the 2 extremes puts it in a good compromising position, but that's not the reason for the 4. I listened to Mr. Brown's speech yesterday and found myself in agreement with a considerable part of it. The matter of having a legislative auditor is a fashion at the present time, and I think he is correct in his inference, at least, that it is a fashion fostered very largely by political scientists. Strangely enough, it's a fashion with which I agree.

It seems, however, to me, that what we are handing out with one hand we are taking back with the other. We are saying to the legislature: you can have your own watchdog to see that the birds to whom you apportion the money spend it the way you direct them to spend it; but we are going on and saying to them, but you can't put any chain on this dog. And if he goes to pointing rabbits instead of pheasants, there isn't anything you can do about it for 8 years. It doesn't seem to me logical to have him appointed by the legislature and then say to the legislature, you can't do anything about it. And I don't think there is any possible justification in Michigan's background for the assumption that if the legislature has the power to do it, it will handle him by means of whim and caprice.

In reaching a judgment, I always like not to put it purely on theory, and we don't have to put it on theory here. Let me call your attention to the fact that there are some of us here who can remember when a skillful and experienced clerk of the house of representatives was carried through the term when the parties changed, so that he was a member of the opposite party from a very high majority of the members of the house. The very distinguished gentleman whom we enticed to come here and steer us through the maze that we are in has been secretary of the senate continuously since 1935, until we got him away, and during that time the senate was not always under the control of the same party. The legislative comptroller —Mr. Martin says this has no reference—but it does have a bearing on what I'm arguing. The legislative comptroller, who has been there continuously since 1949, is not a member of the party that has been in control of the senate for that entire time. I think there is no basis for thinking that it will be a matter of whim and caprice.

Now, it's conceivable that some time in the more remote future the majority control of our legislature will change hands. It's not probable, of course, but just possible. If that misfortune should happen, (laughter) I think that the legislature that comes in under a new party should have the right to say whether this is the man they want. I don't think we can assume that they would change on account of party, but I think they should have the right to say whether they wish to continue or whether they wish somebody of their own.

In the meantime, before we change parties, as I understand it, if and when we ever get to it, we are going to establish 4 year terms for the senate and 2 year terms for the house. That means a new legislature every 4 years—not all new legislators, but a new legislature. I think every incoming legislature should have a right to pass judgment on whether or not they wish to continue the person who is there or whether they want somebody else. Now, if that's not true, I don't know who we are fooling by having him appointed by the legislature. They have no control over him. Now, that is the reason that I am suggesting a 4 year term—so that his tenure will be coterminous with that of each legislature. I'm sure they won't change unless there is a real reason, because the experienced man in that position is simply invaluable, but I think they should have the right to change if they wish.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, in opposing this amendment, I would call your attention to the fact, first, of the experience in other states, where Hawaii has a 8 year term, for example, for this office. Also, right here in Michigan, where since 1937 the city of Detroit has had an auditor general who has a definite term for 10 years. And of course as we know the comptroller general of the United States has a definite term of 15 years.

Largely, I think, due to the reasons which have been so well outlined by Mr. Martin about the type of an office and the type of an individual who should fill it, the office is clearly a nonpartisan, non policymaking position. Its holder would thus be able to work equally well with the legislature regardless of which party is in power there. Therefore, no justifiable reason exists for providing for his dismissal at a time when the political complexion of that body may change.

The fixed term of office—and I think it's been quite well accepted by this committee on the basis of the last vote—has been set at 8 years rather than at half that time for 3 or 4 reasons, which I will briefly state. First of all, it will take considerable time for an office holder to become thoroughly acquainted with the position of auditor general; secondly, the administrative direction of the position should not be frequently interrupted; third, remember that the incumbent here may only be appointed for one additional term; and fourth, remember, as has been stated here, that this is a career type of appointment. In limiting it to 4 years, it would be very much more difficult to get the type of man for this position which it so definitely requires.

With respect to the aspect of control over the office, the legislature clearly has control over it, because any time that the man in this position is not faithfully performing his duities for any reason, that will be cause for removal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Detroit, Delegate Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask through the Chair a couple of questions of Mr. Brake, if he would care to answer. Under this amendment, reducing from 8 to 4 years, we continue with the next sentence "who may be reappointed for one additional term only." In other words, this would be a limitation of 8 years?

MR. BRAKE: If this amendment of mine prevails, I will offer an amendment to strike that out. Whether it is a 4 year term or an 8 year term, if they've got a man who is doing the job, why in the world shouldn't they keep him as long as they want him?

MR. YEAGER: Well, that's the point I wanted to make.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Will you ask your questions through the Chair, Mr. Yeager, so we can follow it, please.

MR. YEAGER: I'm sorry, Mr. Chairman. I have no further questions of Mr. Brake. I simply want to state that if that next sentence is stricken out, I could vote for the amendment. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Jackson, Delegate Karn.

MR. KARN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, some of the things I say here may be repetitious, but I would like to say that the 2 committees, the committee on executive branch and the committee on legislative powers, gave this question a great deal of thought, measured in time, in order to attempt to get what was considered the best solution to this particular point.

It has been said that we started with 15 years tenure. We are down to 8 years. But our conclusion was that it was our belief that we could get a higher type of man if we had an 8 year term instead of a 4 year term, because if you go out and get an extremely capable individual, which the committees are in hopes would happen in this case, you have to have something that will attract him besides salary. He is looking to some continuity of service. The other thing is that we discussed at some length—and we believe it has merit—that if a person is appointed for a shorter term, 4 years instead of 8, there is more likelihood that he may be thinking of things that he should do to curry favor with his bosses that would permit him to continue his employment after the 4 years is up. If he has an 8 year appointment he is more likely to do the things that in his best judgment should be done and not be thinking about his future employment.

It seems to us that this is entirely in order. We believe we could get a better man, and attract better people for this particular position, if he is appointed for an 8 year term rather than a 4 year term. Another thing that we discussed was the question of more than two 8 year terms. We discussed that this might work a hardship in the other way; that he might so conduct himself that he would establish an empire which would make it rather difficult for him to be released. So we think that this is a good compromise, arrived at with both committees being present and discussing it, and I support the committee proposal in opposition to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Parma, Mr. Beaman.

MR. BEAMAN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Yeager asked my question, and it was answered by Mr. Brake. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Dell from St. Ignace.

MR. DELL: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Yeager likewise asked my question, but there is another thought that I had. Because of the fact that this man will be appointed nonpartisan, or at least he can be nonpartisan in appointment, we must take into consideration that after all he is not going to be faced with the expense of campaigns for election, and so on, which I think would be quite a factor in your being able to go out and get a qualified man. For that reason, I could go for either the 4 or the 8 year term.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, this is the kind of amendment where you could probably take 4, 6, 8 or 10 and make some argument for it. I don't think there is any magic number. The 2 committees have tried to use their very best judgment on this. The report was unanimous from both committees, and I hope that the delegates will support the joint committee recommendation.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Brake amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no. The Chair is in doubt. The question is on the Brake amendment. All in favor will vote aye. All those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment offered by Mr. Brake to reduce the term from 8 years to 4, the yeas are 34; the nays are 58.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Austin has filed an amendment. He is not present.

Mr. Binkowski offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 9—

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Is Mr. Binkowski here? Proceed with the next amendment then.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Bonisteel, J. A. Hannah, Anspach and Goebel offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 18, after "audits thereof.", by inserting "Nothing in this section shall be construed in any way to infringe the responsibility and constitutional authority of the governing boards of the universities and colleges to be solely responsible for the control and direction of all expenditures from the institutions' funds.".

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the proposer of the amendment, Delegate Bonisteel.

MR. BONISTEEL: Mr. Chairman and fellow members of the committee, the language of this amendment is plain. It is the purpose of the sponsors to put in writing the interpretations heretofore made by the sponsors of Committee Proposal 78. This amendment to Committee Proposal 78 has been heretofore submitted to the committee, and it does not seem to require any amendment, and I wish to ask, Mr. Chairman, through the Chair, if Chairman Martin will confirm my impression of the statement which he made that there is no objection from the committee to the proposed amendment as submitted here.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If Chairman Martin wishes to answer.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Bonisteel and fellow delegates, Mr. Bonisteel did show this amendment to me. The purpose of the committee, I'm sure, was not to interfere with the responsibilities of the universities as outlined in his amendment for the control and expenditure of their funds. The sole function of the auditor general, of course, is a postaudit function, and he is not directed or permitted to get involved in the operation or direction or determinations of that kind. I have not shown this to all the members of the committee, but I believe it is the sense of the committee that this amendment does no harm to the committee proposal, and I would favor it.

MR. BONISTEEL: Mr. Chairman, that being the case, I—will sit down. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I know that we all on the legislative powers committee also realize that this amendment would in no way be contrary to our intent, nor to the operation of the substitute, or even of the original as it was proposed, but I would like to suggest that this amendment adds language which is legally unnecessary. There is nothing in this proposal which gives the legislative auditor general any authority over the control and direction of expenditures from the institutions' funds. Will you please look at the substitute, and I can show you very completely and exactly what powers he has: first, to conduct fiscal postaudits; second, to conduct performance postaudits; third, to make investigations pertinent to the conduct of such audits; and, finally, it's expressly stated that the legislative auditor general shall be assigned no duties other than those herein specified. So you see there is absolutely nothing in the original that could empower the legislative auditor general to interfere with the boards of the universities and colleges to be solely responsible for the control and direction of all expenditures from the institutions' funds. This language therefore is unnecessary. It adds language to the constitution which does not have any legal effect. It says, in other words, that the legislative auditor shall not be able to do something which he doesn't have any excuse for a power to do anyway. So I oppose the amendment, but solely on that basis.

And I would like to hear — and perhaps my mind would be changed — any reason why the sponsors of this amendment believe that this amendment is necessary to clear up any ambiguity in the language of the committee proposal, or any interference which the committee proposal would permit the legislative auditor general to make with the governing boards' authority and control over the direction of all expenditures of those institutions.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the second sponsor of the amendment, Dr. Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I didn't intend to speak, but in view of Mr. Wanger's questions and comments, I feel constrained to.

The strength of public higher education in this state is very largely due to the fact that back in 1840, after the University of Michigan had been subjected to a series of inquisitions by individual members of the Michigan legislature, the legislature caused to have a committee appointed to make a study of the appropriate relationship between legislatures, state governments and universities. And had we the time, or was it necessary, I would like to read to this committee this rather long statement of 1840 known as house document 51 of 1840, filed by the chairman of the select committee who was then a representative in the legislature from Mackinac county. I'm not going to read it, because it would take too much of your time, but I would be glad to make copies of it available to those who would like to read it. It points out the great weakness of public universities of that day, due to the fact that individual members of the legislature felt that because these universities were publicly supported, that it was desirable and necessary for legislators and others politically inclined to examine into all of their operations. It is a very interesting statement in which, among other things, Mr. Turner compares a university or a college to a plant, and indicates what happens when one legislator or politician finds it is necessary to pull up the plant to look at its roots to see if the roots are strong enough to support the top, and then deciding that the top is too large for the roots, they lop off a part of the top. It is a very interesting and humorous anecdote that he describes.

Well, subsequent to that the founding fathers of this state decided that partisan politics and higher education have little in common; that universities should not be more concerned with the problems of policies of one party than with another. And so they moved in the direction of giving first the University of Michigan, and then what is now Michigan State University, and later Wayne University—and in the educational provisions that have already been approved by this convention, to all of our public universities and colleges—constitutional status and protection in their educational integrity.

Now, I would only answer Mr. Wanger by referring him to some of the incidents that were reported in the press just a few months ago when individual members of our legislature became very much concerned and interested in the content being taught in certain courses and departments and programs on our own campus. The constitutional status of our institution made it possible for the institution's board of trustees and president to say that the board and president are perfectly willing to be subject to scrutiny, to answer questions, to appear before such inquiries as you may want to conduct, but when you move in the direction of actually examining course content or demanding of individual instructors explanations of what they teach and why they teach, this is improper.

Now, why we want this language written in here—and I've made it clear in the comments I made a couple of days ago that there's no feeling on the part of most of us in education that education should be a sacred cow; that we are perfectly willing that these institutions and boards and operations shall be subject to the same scrutiny with reference to the procedures they use in the expenditure of their money, that they be made to be accountable, and make certain that they do follow prudent and defensible procedures—is that there is always the fear that this thing you call the legislative auditor, or auditor general, may become the tool of a group or even an individual or a committee of members of the legislature and be used for the purpose, not intended, of inquiring into what is taught and why it is taught. It takes nothing away from this provision. It doesn't make it impossible or undesirable or in any way impede attaining the objectives that the committee had in mind when they wrote the provision. It does give the colleges and the universities the protection that they should have if they are to serve you and the people of this state now and in the future as they should.

I recognize that I am biased, but I believe with great conviction that there is nothing more important to the future of Michigan, more important to the people of this nation or the role this nation is going to play in world affairs, than the availability of educational opportunity, the basic philosophy of that education, the availability to all people. I think we should do everything that needs to be done to be certain that we maintain this great strength that we have had in Michigan that has been widely copied more recently by other states in keeping our educational institutions completely free from partisan political influences just as nearly as that can be done.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Wanger.

MR WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I'm sure we are all in agreement with the sentiments expressed by Dr. Hannah. But there's nothing in the words here of the amendment which relate to course content, curricula or academic freedom. I suggest that the legislative auditor has no power to get into this area at all. I do not understand how this language then would give any additional protection in that way.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Dr. Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Mr. Chairman, I don't want to become involved in a debate with Mr. Wanger. For 28 years I have dealt with the Michigan legislature, either as the secretary or the president of a university only 3 miles away from it; and I recognize that there is nothing in the language, without this protection, that gives this specific authority to a legislative auditor. I also have full knowledge of how legislators sometimes operate, and there is nothing in the language that would prevent a member or a committee of the legislature from using the legislative auditor to do, at least until he was stopped, the thing I am concerned about. And so if Mr. Wanger only says it shouldn't be there because no authority is given, let's leave it there to make certain that in the future this isn't abused.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Do you wish to be recognized again, Mr. Wanger?

MR. WANGER: Well, I would be in complete agreement on the score that the legislative auditor should not have this power to go into any aspect of curricula, course content or things of that type. But, legally, looking over this, all I can say is that there is no power given here, as nearly as I can see, for him to do anything other than make postaudits and investigations pursuant thereto, and the language says that he shall be assigned no duties other than those.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the reason behind my supporting the amendment was simply that I think the universities have had some experience which give them some cause for concern that this might be claimed to provide a right to do things which the committee has no intention should be done. I think that it's fair to include language which will quiet any such fears, now or for the future.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Hancock, Delegate Heideman.

MR. HEIDEMAN: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, the very fact that a question has been raised as to the need of this amendment by people who have dedicated so many years of their lives in the service of these great institutions in Michigan to me is an argument for the amendment. I favor the amendment wholeheartedly so that we can in every possible way strengthen the autonomy of Michigan's institutions of education.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Bonisteel.

MR. BONISTEEL: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I don't think that anything I might say will add too much. I just call your attention to the fact that if we are talking about what should be and what should not be in the constitution, most of the matters that are already in this particular section, in my judgment, are properly matters of legislation. But I am not raising that question. I am merely pointing out that we are trying to clarify something so that we know that we are going to be adequately and fully protected. There can be honest differences of opinion, you know, as to legal interpretations. I hope that the members of this committee will support the proposed amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Wanger.

MR. WANGER: May I ask a question through the Chair of Mr. Bonisteel?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If he cares to answer.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Bonisteel, I know the major concern here is with regard to politics in the field of what is being taught and done in an academic way in the universities and colleges. Now, I just want to ask: is it the intention of this amendment to mean that the legislative auditor, then, as I understand it, shall be prohibited from getting into that area of the educational institutions?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Dr. Hannah, do you want to answer that question?

MR. J. A. HANNAH: I have already answered it, Mr. Wanger. There is no desire on the part of the universities or the colleges to be immune from examinations of their books, their fiscal records, and all that sort of thing. There has been a mistaken notion created in the minds of the people of this state that in recent years there has been some unwillingness on the part of universities and colleges to make available to the legislators and others complete information with reference to their fiscal practices, and that just is not true.

No one has any objection at all to granting to the auditor general what he always has had—an opportunity to make full and complete audits of the fiscal affairs of the universities if he wants to. He used to do that. Twenty years ago they stopped because they didn't have money enough to do it. In recent years the principal universities at least have had annual audits conducted by Ernst and Ernst, or Price Waterhouse, or some of the great auditing firms, because of course the boards of trustees need to have some protection to make certain their own officers are carrying on their business affairs in an honest and an appropriate manner. So in recent years the auditor generals have accepted these commercial audits conducted at the expense of the institutions in lieu of their own auditing. But there is no objection on the part of the institution that I am the president of, and as chairman of the council of state college presidents, I think I can state for all of our institutions that there is no unwillingness to be scrutinized in the same manner as other operations so far as the handling of our financial affairs is concerned. We just want to be sure that in looking into finances, this doesn't become a device by which you look into what is taught in the economics department, and why, and you do it on the handle that it is necessary to satisfy some legislator to find out how many professors there are, and what are they teaching, and are they Keynesians, or are they subscribing to other types of economic philosophies, and is it appropriate? This is the type of thing we want to protect ourselves against.

MR. WANGER: Does this language—

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Are you asking another question?

MR. WANGER: Yes.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Please ask it through the Chair.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, this language speaks of control and direction of all expenditures from the institutions' funds. However, I take it—and I'm sure Dr. Hannah has already pointed this out—that it's not the intent of it to mean that the legislative auditor would not have constitutional power to make audits in that regard, and with that assurance I would see no reason for not stating again that the amendment will not materially or in any way weaken the legislative powers committee's intent and purpose, nor the executive committee's, as I have been informed of its intent and purpose, but I still think it is legally unnecessary.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Dr. Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: This is my final comment on this one. I would like to read to the members of the committee the sentence that is in the educational section that has already been approved by this convention, when we are talking about these universities and colleges and their boards — and this is the exact quote —

> The respective boards shall have the general supervision of their respective institutions and the control and direction of all expenditures from the institution's funds . . . .

And those are the words that Mr. Bonisteel has included in this amendment, in which I and others concur. It is an exact restatement of the words that you have already approved.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Bonisteel amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: There is a call for a division. Is the demand supported? There's enough up. The question is on the Bonisteel amendment. All in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Bonisteel and others, the yeas are 66; the nays are 25.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is adopted. Are there any further amendments to the proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: Miss Donnelly and Messrs. Lawrence and W. F. Hanna offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "8 years,", by inserting "who shall be a certified public accountant duly licensed to practice in this state and"; so that the sentence will then read:

> The legislature by a majority vote of the members elect of each house, shall appoint an auditor general to serve for a term of 8 years, who shall be a certified public accountant duly licensed to practice in this state and who may be reappointed for one additional term only.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the proposer of the amendment, Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: In view of the fact that Mr. Lawrence has to leave, I will be happy to yield to him at the moment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Miss Donnelly yields to Delegate Lawrence.

MR. LAWRENCE: The purpose of this proposed amendment of course is to assure the people of the state of Michigan that the auditor general or the auditor will be a competent, qualified person. The requirement of the certified public accountant is similar of course to that of judges being attorneys. The qualifications, the examinations, the training that is required to obtain a license as a certified public accountant — as far as ability and as far as background, of course — is desirable and necessary. The head of the department, in other words, should be qualified. We feel that it would be to the best interests of the people of the state of Michigan if this proposed amendment was adopted.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, there is another reason for my joining in this amendment, and that is that I am worried about a practice which occasionally creeps into this office and creeps into other offices that legislative bodies sometimes appoint. And that is to appoint to this office some legislator who may have in the past served very well in the legislature — perhaps as a member of the ways and means or finance or taxation committee, or of other committees — and then, because he lost his office through election, and this vacancy being appointive, you will have with the old club tie the temptation to appoint one of the club to this office.

Now, there is a second reason. The second reason is that when you require this man to be a certified public accountant, you have 2 lines or 2 groups watching his competency. The first of course is the legislature. The second is: a certified public accountant must meet certain professional and ethical standards of his group. This is comparable to the attorney. Not only does he face, when he is a judge, the governor's right to remove him or the supreme court's right to suspend him, but he faces the fact that if he conducts himself unethically in office the bar association of which he is a member may also discipline him for reasons of unethical conduct.

Certainly no person who is not a qualified public accountant should hold this office. And the only test that we have in this country today is the test of whether or not he is a certified public accountant. Not all certified public accountants are competent to audit public books and records. But all certified public accountants must pass an exam in governmental accounting. And governmental accounting is considerably different than private accounting, especially when you get into performance accounting. But this requirement protects the people of Michigan in guaranteeing that the legislature will not use this except to hire the most competent person by an independent and outside test; and I strongly urge the adoption of this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: I have a question, Mr. Chairman, to address to Mr. Hanna.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If Delegate Hanna cares to answer.

MR. DEHNKE: It is the purpose of the proposers of this amendment to confine the candidates to those who have been previously certified as public accountants in the state of Michigan?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Judge, the certified public accountant exam now is a universal exam across the country. Michigan some years back had a separate public accounting exam that was different from the national C.P.A. exam. We have now shifted and are using the national C.P.A. exam. I believe that a certified public accountant is required. I did not consider whether or not he should be a qualified elector or resident of Michigan. I would assume, however, that if I were in the legislature and the state of Alaska had a certified public accountant who was qualified and who had some experience, and I wanted to hire him, I would hate to be bound by the requirement that he be a Michigan resident.

MR. DEHNKE: I'm wondering whether that isn't the effect of the language. You require him to be a public accountant duly licensed to practice in this state.

MR. W. F. HANNA: With this language, a stranger can move to be admitted if he has 5 years practice as a C.P.A. in another state, much the same as an attorney.

MR. DEHNKE: Then you expect him to be qualified under the Michigan rules before he takes office, but not before he is appointed?

MR. W. F. HANNA: That's right. He would have to qualify under the Michigan rules. And I think this becomes important, Judge, if we ever go back in Michigan to having a more restrictive C.P.A. exam than the national exam.

MR. DEHNKE: Thank you, Mr. Chairman and Mr. Hanna.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Delegate Karn.

MR. KARN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, in commenting on this amendment, again, I want to say that there was lengthy discussion on the part of the 2 committees regarding this individual. And the final decision was that he should not necessarily be a certified public accountant. This particular individual, as we viewed it in the committee discussions, should have experience in accounting, yes, because this is an accounting matter. But we look upon this individual as being more of the administrative and executive type — one who is fully qualified to be in charge of a group of individuals who are making the accounting audits.

This restricts the legislature in seeking a top flight man that could operate this job. Again, I want to say that he should have accounting experience and auditing experience, but he should not be restricted to someone of this sort. Because the administration of the office is very important. Neither should they be restricted in having to employ only someone who is a resident of Michigan. Again, it would be the hope, I know, of the convention that for jobs like this they would get an outstanding individual; and to do that there might not be anyone available at the moment in Michigan, and they might see fit to go across state lines. I would vote in opposition to this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Lansing, Delegate Erickson.

MR. ERICKSON: I was wondering to what number we were restricting this in limiting it to C.P.A.s of Michigan, although Mr. Hanna has indicated you might go outside. But it might be well to know the number of C.P.A.s in Michigan.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Do you know the answer?

MR. W. F. HANNA: I do not.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Hanna does not know the answer. Chairman Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I'm out of position here. Mr. Karn has said much of what I would say. The committee felt that the legislature should have the latitude to decide on what kind of employee it wanted. And very likely it would decide on a certified public accountant. But it is not absolutely necessary. The job is both administrative and requiring accounting knowledge, so that the legislature we felt should have this wide discretion in making its selection of a man to do this job.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the lady from Grand Rapids, Delegate Koeze.

MRS. KOEZE: Mr. Chairman, as a member of the legislative powers committee, I'm sure you are well aware of my position in regard to the auditor general being a C.P.A. The C.P.A. certificate is a mark of professional competency relied upon by businessmen, bankers, government officials and others who are concerned with financial reports. Now, I happen to do all of my husband's bookkeeping. It is a peanut business, (laughter) but nevertheless I do his bookkeeping. I wouldn't consider anything else but a C.P.A. when it comes time for my husband to have to file any kind of government report, income tax, or anything else. I think it is good business procedure. I think it would enhance the position of this auditor general to be a C.P.A. I want to go on record as feeling that this is almost a must for the man, as well as having administrative ability. I think he should be part of the C.P.A. organization.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: I would like to add a couple of things. It seems to me the committee is rather inconsistent with some of the practices and procedures. If my township is required by statute to be audited by a C.P.A., and if my school district is required to be audited by a C.P.A., since when is the state to be subject to a looser standard than the others? Secondly, he says that he shall be an administrator. Would you hire a school teacher to run the highway department, or would you hire an engineer? Would you hire a qualified deep sea diver to run the state board of education, or would you hire an educator? It seems to me that in both cases you measure the competency of that person by his professional attainment, and you measure a teacher by the fact that he has a teacher's certificate or a degree in education that shows some professional competency. If you hire an engineer, and you have written in that he should be an engineer, he should be a certified civil engineer; because you cannot administer something that you don't know.

Once you take away the certified public accountant, then you let human nature judge his competency. Who is to say that I am a qualified accountant because I spent 2 years as a cost accountant with a corporation? Am I a qualified accountant because I have kept county books as a county controller, without being a C.P.A.?

I say that the only test and the only public assurance that the public has in any audit is a requirement of a certified public accountant's audit. And certified public accountants are very able administrators. In fact, they are probably as able administrators as attorneys. And yet we have said that the attorneys shall administer the court system. If we are not requiring attorneys on the supreme court to administer the court system, maybe we should hire an engineer — an efficiency engineer — to administer the court system. But I dare say he would know little about legal practice. When we get into the accounting field, let's make sure that the administrator knows whereof he talks and about what he talks, and that he is measured by a certificate that tests his competency, and not his political attributes.

I urge the adoption of this amendment so that the state of Michigan will be subject to the same professional competency that my township board or my school board is required to meet at the present time.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Delegate Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, as Dan Karn pointed out, we had this matter in discussion in our committee. I was one that was in favor of a C.P.A. for the legislative auditor; but after listening to Dan Karn's arguments and those of others, I agreed to eliminate it as a minimum requirement. I then took a glance at the other 4 state constitutions which provide for a legislative auditor, and I found that 3 of the 4 do not require that he be a certified public accountant. So taking that into consideration, as well as the arguments by Dan Karn, I thought it would be best not to put this minimum requirement in our constitution, and therefore I agree with the committee report — and that is the committee on legislative powers and the committee on executive branch — that this minimum requirement should not be in our constitution.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Flint, Delegate McLogan.

MR. McLOGAN: The recent auditor general of the state of Michigan and current supreme court justice, Otis M. Smith, indicated to me last October that his first recommendation for the office of auditor general would be that that person be so qualified to bear the designation, certified public accountant. Incidentally, attorney Smith is not a C.P.A. But that was his firm recommendation.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I would like to ask Mr. Hanna a question. Delegate Hanna, would you give constitutional status and recognition and require that the state treasurer be a C.P.A., or make the superintendent of public instruction an educator, or the highway commissioner an engineer, or somebody on the liquor control commission a bartender, make a psychiatrist the head of the department of health, a union leader as head of the department of labor, and so on, and require that we put all of these things in the constitution?

CHAIRMAN WILLARD: The Chair thinks that question is out of order, Dr. DeVries.

MR. W. F. HANNA: I would love to answer it.

MR. DeVRIES: I think it is to the point, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If you want to answer it, go ahead.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Would I require a bartender to be a member of the liquor control commission? He would be the last man I would want on the liquor control commission, I think.

MR. DeVRIES: Don't take the worst of my analogies.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, I'll answer those that I would require. Would I require that the superintendent of public instruction be an educator? Yes.

MR. DeVRIES: In the constitution?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Preferably a man who had a PhD, or a PhE, or something in education and education administration. But I know of no public test which can be applied in that field except the educational degrees. Would I require the highway commissioner to be a qualified civil engineer? Yes. Would I require the state treasurer to be a C.P.A.? No, because he is not an auditor. But I do require in the constitution that he be an honest man. And we put in that he can hold no other offices, and we tie his hands very completely with other restrictions. Now, when we get to the liquor control commission, or the janitor of the courthouse, and so forth, I might even write in that a janitor had to have 2 arms so he could push a broom. But I believe here that you have a test of competency that is the same as testing the competency of an attorney, and I do believe it is important, Mr. DeVries.

MR. DeVRIES: Mr. Chairman, if I may, one more question. In other words, Mr. Hanna, for the major departments in state government you would require that these people be professionals in the particular field that they supervise and administer?

MR. W. F. HANNA: If there is a public test that determines their competency, I would be glad to use that test.

MR. DeVRIES: You would give it constitutional status?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Yes, sir.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD. The Chair recognizes the proposer of the amendment, Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I believe that some of these questions have gotten a little far afield, and I want to try to answer some that were posed earlier. I understand that there are presently 68,000 C.P.A.s; 9,000 within the last year or 2 years. Now, you just multiply that along and I think you will find that there are more than adequate numbers to choose from.

On the next question, should they have administrative ability, I should think that the legislature, acting, should be able to make this determination. We are giving a great deal of latitude to the legislature. We are hoping to get a very adequate handling of our problem.

To require that the minimum standard that we have set up in our state for people handling individual books and holding themselves out to be qualified to make these analyses should be met in this manner, I think is perfectly logical, perfectly reasonable and eminently proper. To say that we don't have enough within this state I don't think is valid. There is no requirement initially that I can see that they are residents of this state, except for the fact that they must be admitted to practice. This means that they must meet the minimum requirement that we set forth in this state.

Now, we are not talking about a momentary job. We are talking about someone that we are going to have for 8 years on good behavior, with a requirement of a 2/3 vote to remove. To require that this individual be more than competent I think is a minimum aspect. The legislature, in viewing and screening their individual applicants, may establish whether they have enough judgment, if they have enough administrative ability — and I'm sure that there are numerous candidates that will meet this. This is one job we are talking about. And to have in our state the highest requirement that we know of at this moment to fill this job is only reasonable in my opinion.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Delegate Stafseth.

MR. STAFSETH: Mr. Chairman and members of this committee, I wholeheartedly endorse this amendment. I think this is like the same example that I gave when I was talking about the probate judges. The legislature in their wisdom in the 1951 act that governs all the control of moneys for state highways, county highways and city funds for roads said that they would not give this to us unless we had a system that subsidized engineers at the county level and insured that they were used properly. I think this is a step in the right direction. I had the pleasure when I was at Lenawee county to set up an accounting system, and this accounting system, with the help of the highway department, emanated all the way up to the auditor general's office, and now is one of the best accounting systems for highway programs in the United States. And one of these men helped us do it, and I think that these men are well qualified and will do us a tremendous job.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Karn.

MR. KARN: One short statement. There seems to be some feeling that because there is no requirement in this proposal that the auditor general be a C.P.A., that there might not be C.P.A.s in the department. I think it is certainly necessary to have C.P.A.s in the department — men who are actually making the audits. I don't see this individual as devoting a major part of his time, perhaps, on detailed auditing. There should be — and no doubt would be — C.P.A.s in the department, however.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: I just want to say that Mr. Karn is entirely correct, at least if the staff were composed as it is now. There are a number of C.P.A.s on the auditor general's staff. And that's highly desirable, of course. They are not all C.P.A.s. There are some very fine auditors who do not have a C.P.A. certificate. But they are doing sort of in service training, so to speak, and some of them will get their C.P.A. certificates in due course.

I hope that the delegates will accept the committee's suggestion, however. If the best man found is a C.P.A., that's fine. But it is possible to do a thoroughly good job as auditor general — and I'm not referring to any present company — without a C.P.A. certificate. It is desirable to have some accounting background, but the certificate is not an absolute necessity to finding a highly qualified man.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Donnelly amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no. The Chair is in doubt.

MISS DONNELLY: Division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: A division is demanded. Is there support? There is a sufficient number up. The question is on the Donnelly amendment. All in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment offered by Miss Donnelly and others, the yeas are 42; the nays are 47.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 12, after "conduct" by striking out "comprehensive fiscal postaudits of all transactions and accounts kept by or for" and inserting "postaudits according to standards prescribed by law or fiscal reports and records of"; so that the language will then read:

> The auditor general shall conduct postaudits according to standards prescribed by law of fiscal reports and records of all branches, departments, offices, boards, commissions, agencies, authorities and institutions of the state. . . .

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, this is the amendment which Mr. Austin had prepared, and I see that he isn't here to submit it, so I am submitting it on his behalf. As I examine the language, I can point out to you, I hope, 2 points that his amendment covers that aren't to be found in the present language on lines 12 and 13.

The question that we have here is that of dealing with "The auditor general shall conduct comprehensive fiscal postaudits. . . ." Now, who is to determine what the comprehensive fiscal postaudits could be? This could be determined either by the auditor general himself or, possibly, by the legislature. But in the absence of any specific delegation of responsibility here, it would seem to me that we should state specifically who shall prescribe the standards involving the conducting of the postaudit. In this case we ask that the legislature prescribe those standards. This not only serves to eliminate any confusion, but it also provides some degree of flexibility in the determination of what shall be a comprehensive fiscal postaudit. It would seem that in keeping with the writing of a document that would have some flexibility for the future, the legislature ought to be able to prescribe those standards that shall make up the postaudit.

I urge your consideration of this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, once again I find myself in agreement with that conservative, Mr. Faxon. I think that certainly we ought to have in the language some means of prescribing the standards by which the auditor general is to work. I also think that the logical place for these rules to be promulgated would be with the legislature. So I think this is an excellent addition to the very fine language that the committee has already presented, and I would urge support of it.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Delegate Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, I urge you to vote against this amendment. I think it would seriously endanger or weaken the office. In the first place, the legislative auditor, according to our entire discussion, is supposed to be a man well qualified in the field of accounting and in these areas — and should set his own standards and follow the clear language of comprehensive fiscal postaudits. That means a complete audit investigation. If you allow the legislature to set standards, you imply that it may be less than a complete fiscal or performance examination. Further, by using the words "as prescribed by law," you make these standards subject to the veto power of the governor. The whole purpose of placing this man in this office in responsibility to the legislature is to provide that his basic powers will not be subject to pressure, influence, or veto from the executive branch, which is he continually called upon to investigate and check, pursuant to his constitutional postaudit duties.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, it is quite clear that the legislature has the authority to prescribe the standards which Mr. Faxon's amendment would provide for. So I feel that the additional language is entirely unneeded. The committee did consider this problem when it was preparing its report and its proposal. I hope that the amendment will be defeated.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, I don't see in that sentence the degree of flexibility and the interpretation that the legislature has the authority with regard to what shall make up a fiscal postaudit, as the chairman of the committee indicates. I would invite the delegates to examine the language, and if they can find standards prescribed by law, or any prescription by law as to what shall compose a fiscal postaudit, then I would be most willing to withdraw this amendment.

But I do think it is necessary to comment briefly upon the major objection that was raised by the speaker previous to the chairman of the committee, who indicated to us that we are to permit an individual to set his own standards. We have already taken the office of the auditor general away from the people through the direct election process. Now I see a further attempt to remove the auditor from his duties by attempting to permit him to establish his own standards, and not to permit the representatives of the people in the legislature to have some say as to what those standards might be.

I suggest that if it's a question of who runs the government, I would prefer to see the government in the hands of those representatives of the people, rather than in the hands of experts who have long appointments to office and who are not in a position to be reflective and responsive to the people themselves. I think in the tradition of sound government and sound, effective control by the people, the standards ought to be set by the legislature. And if this attempts to clear up in any way the language as to who sets the standards, then it ought to be accepted.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, there is confusion here. I'm sure Mr. Faxon is operating under confusion of the postaudit power of the auditor general and the standard for accounting and for preaudits. Now, it is very clear that this does not remove the power from the legislature to establish the standards for the accounting system and for the preaudits. In fact, Committee Proposal 37, which was passed by the committee of the whole on February 2, in section c says, "The legislature shall provide by law for the annual accounting for all public moneys, state and local, and may also provide by law for interim accounting." They can set the accounting standards. They can set the preaudit standards. But what we are dealing with here is the postaudit power of the auditor general. This is not just a matter of standards. If you pass the amendment you will seriously endanger and weaken that power and make it, to the full effect of the veto power, another executive influence subject to control by the executive branch and the whole purpose of placing it underneath the legislative body would thereby be weakened and defeated.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I would like to address a question, if I might, to Mr. Martin through the Chair. I believe that I was thinking of the earlier draft. There is a substitute draft dated March 7 which was not called to my attention until after I spoke before. I would like to ask Mr. Martin what his interpretation of the language on line 17 is.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin, do you care to answer?

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I am looking at the language in line 17, but I don't know which language you mean there, Mr. King.

MR. KING: Well, the whole sentence is:

> The auditor general shall conduct comprehensive fiscal postaudits of all transactions and accounts kept by or for all branches, departments, offices, boards, commissions, agencies, authorities and institutions of the state, whether established by this constitution or by law. . . .

Now, the part that concerns me is the language "whether established by this constitution or by law." Does this refer to the boards and commissions, or does it refer—

MR. MARTIN: That's right, it does.

MR. KING: It does not refer, you feel, to the comprehensive fiscal postaudits?

MR. MARTIN: No, it refers to the various boards and commissions and agencies and so on which are mentioned there.

MR. KING: I would now, Mr. Chairman, direct Mr. Martin's attention to the second page, line 8, reading, "The legislature shall provide by law with respect to the maintenance of uniform accounting systems and the auditing of units or agencies of local government." Does this language refer only to the auditing of units or agencies of local government?

MR. MARTIN: That's right. It refers to local government.

MR. KING: This language again does not refer to providing by law with respect to maintenance of uniform accounting systems, except as they relate to local units?

MR. MARTIN: No, it does not, because it's the feeling of the committee that the legislature has this inherent power to provide for proper accounting systems implicit in its power to conduct these audits. In order to conduct an audit—I mean, to take an extreme case, if an agency were to say we are not going to keep any accounts, and therefore you can't audit us, clearly the legislature would have authority to say: look, you keep those accounts, because we have authority to audit you, and they shall be such and such accounts. I use an extreme example. There's no question but what the legislature can require that certain standard types of accounting systems be established and exist in state departments and agencies and institutions, and so on.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, would it be your opinion that you would be in disagreement with Mr. Wanger in that he feels that this gives power which does not exist to the legislature, but rather that you feel that the language is somewhat superfluous and not necessary. Is that a fair statement?

MR. MARTIN: Yes. I feel that the language is superfluous and unnecessary. I'm not worried about there being any danger from it. I just think it is not needed, and it is provided for by the language we already have.

MR. KING: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Faxon amendment. All in favor will say aye.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Division has been called for. Is there support? There is a sufficient number up. The question is on the Faxon amendment. All those in favor will vote aye, and those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Faxon, the yeas are 17; the nays are 61.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: One or 2 delegates have asked me when we propose to rise. I would appreciate the secretary letting us know how many amendments there are on the desk. I believe there's only one, is that correct?

SECRETARY CHASE: There is one additional amendment, offered by Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. MARTIN: I would like to work through until 4:00 o'clock if we can, and if we can possibly dispose of that amendment then we will have completed one good piece of work.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Hutchinson offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "years" by changing the comma to a period and striking out all of line 9, which reads as follows: "who may be reappointed for one additional term only.".

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the proposer of the amendment, Vice President Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, had time permitted, before I offered this amendment I would have liked to have asked the committee for the rationale for this language in the first place. I have been listening to the debate, and somehow or other I haven't noted any real point being made about this "who may be reappointed for one additional term only." I'm thinking about the situation where a man is to be appointed the first time, and I suppose that the likelihood is that he wouldn't be in his 20s. He might be in his early 30s, let's say 35, when the legislature would first appoint him. Under the present arrangement, he would only be able to serve 16 years. That would get him out of office when he was about 50 or 51. And then what would the situation be? I presume he would be just a little bit too old to go out and start in to build up another career. At the same time, he wouldn't have been in state government long enough to qualify for retirement under the retirement systems. Offhand I can't see the wisdom of limiting him to only 16 years. If he is doing a good job, and if he has 16 years of experience, by that time he certainly will know this state government thoroughly. And if the legislature in its wisdom would say let him stay on for another term, an 8 year term or whatever their pleasure is, thereby have the advantage of his experience and his knowledge and his wisdom, because he will have obtained great wisdom in state government through that tenure, why shouldn't they be able to do so? What was the thinking for knocking him out after 16 years? I offer this amendment to remove that restriction, because I can't see it.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Are you asking the question—

MR. HUTCHINSON: I would direct the question to Mr. Martin, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin, do you care to answer it?

MR. MARTIN: Yes, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Hutchinson, the reasoning of the committee was simply that we wanted to be as sure as we could that the auditor general would not be making decisions for the purpose or with the view in mind of indefinite extension of his tenure. We are giving him tenure, and we didn't want him to feel that he had to make decisions which would keep him in office indefinitely. The wisdom of this is a matter of judgment. The committee felt that it was desirable. And I believe that this same type of provision occurs in several other constitutions. That is the rationale of it, Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Well, Mr. Chairman, I don't know that I am particularly convinced with the rationale, because if it was to dissuade him from making decisions which might lead to an extension of his tenure, the thing to do would be to give him one term of considerable length and make him ineligible for reappointment. Now, since you are going to let him be reappointed once, then, in the worst situation that I can think of, toward the end of his first 8 year term he would tend to fall away from his ideal in order to satisfy some people in order that he might get reelected for another 8 year term. Thereafter he would be secure for 8 years. He wouldn't know whether the men were going to be around in 8 years. In other words, this would come up only toward the end of every 8 year term. It wouldn't be a regular thing. Certainly when a man would start out in the beginning he wouldn't be too concerned, because public memory and even personal memory is short. Human relationships tend to adjust themselves. And while he might make an unpopular although a very right decision in, say, the first 6 years of his term, that wouldn't disturb him much. I mean, he would do that. He wouldn't be thinking about what he was going to get in his third or fourth term at that time. So I say that the rationale of the argument you make, Mr. Martin, seems weak to me the minute that you realize that he is subject to reappointment at all.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Hutchinson, I think I would subscribe really to the proposition that he might well be given a much longer term. Some of the members of the committee felt, however, that there were some reasons for not extending it too far. And this was a compromise provision, if you want to call it that, to effect the purpose that I have stated.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Well, Mr. Chairman, it is unfortunate, I would think, in view of the fact that it is likely that a man first appointed will be in his 30s, that you are going to turn him out to pasture when he is just past 50, at a time when from the standpoint of his service to the state he is in his prime, but also at a period in his life when it is unlikely that he would be able to go out and build a new career. For that reason I think that it would be a better decision not to deny him—at least, not constitutionally—the opportunity for further service in a career for the state of Michigan if the appointing authorities saw fit. For that reason I hope that my amendment can be adopted.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, the type of individual that the office of legislative auditor general should attract will be the type which at the end of his term of office will find a number of careers ready and waiting for him because of the experience which he has gained.

Now, the committees were torn to some extent between a long term with no reappointment at all and a shorter term, and this 8 year term was finally reached—a comparatively short term—with a limitation on the number of times that he could hold the office. This proposal provides that the legislative auditor general shall be eligible for reappointment only once, as you know. Limitations on reappointment are also contained in the statute providing for the United States comptroller general, and also in the charter provision providing for the auditor general of the city of Detroit. Let us remember that the state revenues or state finances at this time amount to about 1 billion, 200 million a year. And it is certainly necessary to provide this limitation with respect to the office in order to insulate the office from the improper pressures which the office would otherwise be bound to invite.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Hutchinson amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The ayes have it.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: A division is demanded. Is there support? There is support.

The question is on the Hutchinson amendment. All in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment offered by Mr. Hutchinson, the yeas are 72; the nays are 19.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is adopted. Are there any further amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: This is the last amendment on the desk, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, the proposal will pass.

Committee Proposal 78, as amended, is passed. Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: I move that the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the motion made by Mr. Martin that the committee do now rise. All in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, Vice President Romney resumed the Chair.]

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had before it a proposal on which the secretary will make a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 78, A proposal to provide for the office of legislative auditor general. It reports this proposal back to the convention with an amended substitute therefor, recommending that the substitute be agreed to, and that the proposal as thus substituted do pass.

For substitute, see below.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The question is on agreeing to the substitute. Those in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The substitute is adopted.

The proposal, as substituted, will be referred to style and drafting. Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. President, there were a number of amendments adopted to this, and our previous practice has been to make reference to those. I was wondering—perhaps I had missed something, or do not understand the procedure properly.

SECRETARY CHASE: May the secretary point out to Mr. Wanger that the substitute offered by the 2 committees was amended. The only question coming before the convention at this time was agreeing to the amended substitute, which has been adopted.

MR. WANGER: I would desire to have a separate vote upon the last amendment, because I think it is of great importance, and I think it should be tested upon the floor of this convention.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The Chair is advised by the secretary that in order to do that, Delegate Wanger, you will have to offer a separate amendment in writing.

MR. WANGER: I will prepare the amendment.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: In the meantime, Committee Proposal 78, as substituted, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 78 as substituted and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. The legislature by a majority vote of the members elect of each house, shall appoint an auditor general to serve for a term of 8 years. He shall be removable for cause at any time by a 2/3 vote of the members elect of each house of the legislature. The auditor general shall conduct comprehensive fiscal post-audits of all transactions and accounts kept by or for all branches, departments, offices, boards, commissions, agencies, authorities and institutions of the state, whether established by this constitution or by law, and performance postaudits thereof. Nothing in this section shall be construed in any way to infringe the responsibility and constitutional authority of the governing boards of the universities and colleges to be solely responsible for the control and direction of all expenditures from the institutions' funds. For these purposes, in addition to his staff, he may employ such independent accounting firms or legal counsel, as the legislature by resolution may direct and may make investigations pertinent to the conduct of such audits. The auditor general shall be assigned no duties other than those herein specified and shall report annually and at such other times as he deems necessary or as required by the legislature to the legislature and the governor.

The legislature shall provide by law with respect to the maintenance of uniform accounting systems and the auditing of units or agencies of local government.

The auditor general, his deputy and one other member of his staff shall be exempt from civil service. All other members of his staff shall have civil service status.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY (continuing): Announcements, Mr. Secretary.

SECRETARY CHASE: We have the following requests for leave: Mr. Hoxie wishes to be excused from Monday to attend a meeting which has been previously arranged; Mrs. Conklin wishes to be excused from Monday's session to make an address; Mr. Thomson wishes to be excused from Monday afternoon's session; Mr. Rush wishes to be excused from Monday's session, possibly from the Tuesday session, for business reasons; and Mr. Suzore wishes to be excused from Monday's session.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Without objection, it is so ordered. Are there any further announcements? Mr. Kelsey.

MR. KELSEY: Mr. President, I would like, before the convention adjourns, to have the privilege of speaking on a point of personal privilege. I would acquiesce until you give me that right, sir.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Delegate Kelsey, the Chair thinks we are ready to adjourn, and therefore if you want to be recognized, this is the time.

MR. KELSEY: Thank you very kindly, Mr. President. As much as I dislike using names—I don't like to deal in personalities—however, Mr. President, you being in the Chair, I have reference to what was said as of this morning.

A fine gentleman many years ago in our history appraised human value and the dignity of an individual's name. In my opinion, sir, you were on the floor this morning and indicted the entire minority party, which I have been associated with for 20 years. I would like to invite you, sir, at any time at your convenience, to cross the avenue, go over to "the hill", and go before the state supreme court, before the attorney general, and I will swear, affirm upon oath, that I as an individual member of the Democratic party have never been talked to by any members of my delegation, any members of the governor's staff or governor's office, or anyone in the Democratic party.

It was not my opinion, when we debated section 10, article II on search and seizure, when I supported the Prettie amendment, that it was a political issue. My name did not appear on the bulletin board that I was one of the people that voted with the so called Republicans, as on the Ford amendment there was a list of Republicans who were listed on the bulletin board that said these are the people that voted for the Ford amendment, and so on and so forth.

I take offense, Mr. President, at you, Mr. Romney, because I profess to be a man of high standards. I think my reputation will bear that out. In the years that I have served in public life in the city of Warren, which is the fifth largest city in the state, we had a grand jury and we also had an auditor general's investigation. And by virtue of the offices I held at those times, I was subjected to subpoena to make statements before a grand jury, and I was subjected to indictment. Now, I don't know if this will add any truth or veracity or any credence to what I say, and I cast no reflection on those public servants who in that area at that time were called before the grand jury and were indicted, but I say with pride, Mr. President, that I was not called, nor was I indicted, in any of these investigations. And when you indict the entire Democratic party, sir, you indict me.

I would at your convenience be happy to swear and affirm under oath before the attorney general, and subject myself to cross examination at any length, to the fact that I have discussed matters with members of both delegations as to how they felt on a particular issue; I have never told anyone how to vote, and no one has asked or told me how to vote. Thank you very kindly, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: Thank you, Delegate Kelsey. May the Chair just say that he would be very happy to see you make such a statement to the attorney general. The Chair made no statement of the character you have indicated with respect to you, and certainly thinks you would be entirely within your rights to make such a statement.

Is there any other matter to come before the convention?

SECRETARY CHASE: There is nothing on the desk, Mr. President.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: The Chair will recognize Mr. James Rood.

MR. ROOD: Mr. President, I move that the convention do now adjourn.

VICE PRESIDENT ROMNEY: You have heard the motion. Those in favor say aye. Those opposed?

We stand adjourned until 4:00 o'clock Monday afternoon.

[Whereupon, at 4:10 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 4:00 o'clock p.m., Monday, March 19, 1962.]

ONE HUNDRED SECOND DAY

Monday, March 19, 1962, 4:00 o'clock p.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation today will be given by the pastor of Dave Upton's church, the Reverend Dr. Edward W. W. Lewis of the First Congregational Church of St. Joseph. Reverend Lewis.

REVEREND LEWIS: Let us bow our heads in prayer. Eternal God, who didst lead our fathers to bring forth in this land a new nation conceived in liberty and dedicated to the thought and practice of justice and dignity for all, give Thy grace to us, their children, that we may be ever mindful of Thee without whom no law can prevail, no people prosper or dwell secure.

Forgive us for seeking to enrich and to exalt ourselves and for striving for personal and selfish preferences at great strain and cost to others. O God of our fathers, turn us to Thee in hearty repentance and true humility and teach us Thy will, which is the only good and lasting constitution for people everywhere.

We praise and bless Thee for the liberty, freedom and good will which now prevail in this land we love. We thank Thee that Thou hast inspired devoted men and women on the local, state and national level to work for progress in free enterprise; to help promote public education; to stand firmly and nobly against cruel and humiliating discriminations and to serve faithfully the government and people of this greatest republic the world has ever known.

Give us wisdom; give us devotion; give us conviction that we may overcome the threat of atheistic communism — overcome defensively by complete military preparedness and scientific advance — overcome offensively by seeking first Thy kingdom and Thy righteousness.

Therefore, our Father God, as constitutional convention leaders seeking Thy guidance and as Americans dedicated to Thy cause, we pledge anew our allegiance to this land, where our fathers made freedom ring and, like them, we would reaffirm our hallowed promise that "in God We Trust" and know that the star spangled banner shall always wave "o'er the land of the free and the home of the brave," for in Christ's name we pray. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present, please vote aye. If you are present, please vote aye. Have you all recorded your presence? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the attendance.

The motion prevails.

The motion prevails. Mr. Millard.

[Whereupon, Mr. Millard assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The committee will be in order and the secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 3 on the calendar, from the committees on executive branch and legislative powers, by Messrs. Martin and Hoxie, chairmen, Committee Proposal 70, A proposal to revise provisions of section 36 of article V regarding the veto power of the governor.

Following is Committee Proposal 70 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committees recommend that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. Every bill passed by the legislature shall be presented to the governor before it becomes a law; [. If he approve, he shall sign it; if not, he shall return it with his objections to the house in which it originated, which shall enter the objections at large upon its journal and reconsider it. On such reconsideration, if 2/3 of the members elected agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent with the objections to the other house, by which it shall be reconsidered. If approved by 2/3 of the members elected to that house, it shall become a law. In such case the vote of both houses shall be determined by yeas and nays and the names of the members voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journals of each house, respectively. If any bill be not returned by the governor within 10 days, Sundays excepted, after it has been presented to him, it shall become a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the legislature, by adjournment, prevents its return, in which case it shall not become a law. The governor may approve, sign and file in the office of the secretary of state within 5 days, Sundays excepted, after the adjournment of the legislature any bill passed during the last 5 days of the session, and the same shall become a law.] AND THE GOVERNOR SHALL HAVE 14 DAYS MEASURED IN HOURS AND MINUTES FROM THE TIME OF PRESENTATION IN WHICH TO CONSIDER IT.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

IF HE APPROVES, HE SHALL WITHIN THAT TIME SIGN AND FILE IT WITH THE SECRETARY OF STATE AND IT SHALL BECOME A LAW.

IF HE DOES NOT APPROVE, AND THE LEGISLATURE HAS WITHIN THAT TIME FINALLY ADJOURNED ITS SESSION AT WHICH THE BILL WAS PASSED, IT SHALL NOT BECOME A LAW.

IF HE DOES NOT APPROVE, AND THE LEGISLATURE CONTINUES ITS SESSION AT WHICH THE BILL WAS PASSED, HE SHALL RETURN IT WITHIN SUCH 14 DAY PERIOD, TOGETHER WITH HIS OBJECTIONS, TO THE HOUSE IN WHICH IT ORIGINATED, WHICH HOUSE SHALL ENTER THE OBJECTIONS AT LARGE UPON ITS JOURNAL AND RECONSIDER IT. IF 2/3 OF THE MEMBERS ELECTED AND SERVING IN THAT HOUSE AGREE TO PASS THE BILL NOTWITHSTANDING THE OBJECTIONS OF THE GOVERNOR, IT SHALL BE SENT WITH THE OBJECTIONS TO THE OTHER HOUSE BY WHICH IT SHALL BE RECONSIDERED. IF APPROVED BY 2/3 OF THE MEMBERS ELECTED AND SERVING IN THAT HOUSE IT SHALL BECOME A LAW. THE VOTE OF EACH HOUSE SHALL BE DETERMINED BY YEAS AND NAYS AND THE NAMES OF THE MEMBERS VOTING FOR AND AGAINST THE BILL SHALL BE ENTERED UPON THE JOURNAL. IF ANY BILL BE NOT RETURNED BY THE GOVERNOR WITHIN SUCH 14 DAY PERIOD, THE LEGISLATURE CONTINUING IN SESSION, IT SHALL BECOME A LAW IN LIKE MANNER AS IF HE HAD SIGNED IT.

Messrs. Hoxie and Martin, chairmen of the committees on legislative powers and executive branch, submit the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 70:

The committee proposal is intended to clarify the method of computing the 14 days which would be given to the governor to consider whether he shall approve or veto bills passed by the legislature. Until 1961 the practice had been to compute that time by hours and minutes from the time the bill was presented to the governor. In 1961 the attorney general ruled that the time was to be computed as at the common law; i.e., the day could not be divided, the day of presentation is not included. The committee proposal would reinstate the traditional method.

In examining the present veto provision in the constitution, it is apparent that everything is not spelled out in the language. Nothing seems to limit the period of time during which a governor might positively approve a bill although this is now understood to be 10 days. The last sentence, which says that the governor may approve within 5 days after the end of a session any bill passed during the last 5 days of the session, does not take into account that the period of the governor's consideration is usually measured from the time of an enrolled bill's presentation to him rather than from the time of passage by the legislature.

The present proposal is intended to make clear what happens in every case.

(1) The governor shall have 14 days in which to consider a bill; and his 14 day period for consideration and approval will not be affected by whether or not the legislature adjourns its session.

(2) If during that period he signs the bill, it becomes a law.

(3) If during that period he does not sign the bill, and the legislature has adjourned its session, the bill does not become a law.

(4) If during that period he does not approve, he must send it back to the house of origin, if the legislature is still in session for consideration of his veto.

(5) If during that period he neither approves nor returns the bill with a veto message, the legislature continuing in session, it becomes a law as if he had signed it.

The time for consideration by the governor has been extended from 10 to 14 days in accordance with testimony by former governors that some additional time is desirable.

Following is the minority report to Committee Proposal 70 as offered and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

Messrs. Downs, Lesinski and Murphy, a minority of the committee on legislative powers, submit the following minority report to Committee Proposal 70:

A minority of the committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

On line 15, "IT. IF 2/3 OF THE MEMBERS ELECTED [AND SERVING] IN THAT HOUSE".

On line 19, "BY 2/3 OF THE MEMBERS ELECTED [AND SERVING] IN THAT HOUSE IT".

Messrs. Downs, Lesinski and Murphy, a minority of the committee on legislative powers, submit the following reasons in support of the foregoing minority report, which accompanied Committee Proposal 70:

This will restore the original language and be consistent with other parts of the constitution.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee, the delegate from Grand Rapids, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, the committee on executive branch has submitted Committee Proposal 70 in conjunction with the committee on legislative powers. The proposal has to do with the executive veto and the committees have proposed that we extend slightly the time for the veto from 10 to 14 days and that we make it clear that the executive have 14 days in which to approve or veto, regardless of whether the legislature adjourns in the meantime or not. I want to call on Mr. Hutchinson to discuss the proposal but since the committee on legislative powers also shared in this — Mr. Hoxie is not here — Mr. Kuhn, do you have a statement you'd like to make at this time? I yield to Mr. Kuhn, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Kuhn.

MR. KUHN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I had nothing to do with this section. I think Stanley Powell, if he was here — Mr. Powell is not here, I would think our committee would pass.

MR. MARTIN: In that event, I will yield to Mr. Hutchinson to discuss the details of the proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the vice president, Delegate Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, the only substantive change intended in this proposal as compared with the present constitution, is largely what Mr. Martin mentioned. The idea is to give the governor 14 days instead of the 10 days, Sundays excepted, which he now has, in which to consider every bill.

The next point in this proposal, which is not clear in the present constitution, is the measurement of the time which the governor may have for the consideration of each bill. The constitution has always said that the governor shall have 10 days, Sundays excepted. This language was taken from the Constitution of the United States, "10 days, Sundays excepted." The federal practice and the practice in the state of Michigan up until a year ago was that this 10 day period, Sundays excepted, was to be measured in hours and minutes from the time that the bill was presented to him for approval or disapproval. A year ago the attorney general advised the governor that that 10 day period was, in the attorney general's opinion, to be measured in the manner of the common law. Now, in the common law, you cannot divide days. A day is indivisible and so in the common law, since you can't divide days, the day of presentation was not to be counted and the tenth day, Sundays excepted, following the day of presentation was an indivisible day, so that if the governor approved a bill at any time during that day, presumably before midnight of that day, it was a law. This opinion of the attorney general flew in the face of what had been the time honored practice both in Michigan and, as I understand it, in the federal system — actually to measure this time by hours and minutes. So the second point of change in this proposal as compared with the present constitutional provision is merely an attempt at clarification, to make it clear that this time for consideration by the governor will be measured by hours and minutes, as it has been traditionally in the past.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

Now, this language in this proposal is intended to spell out clearly what actually does take place. The traditional language, as has been found in every constitution in Michigan and is the language of the Constitution of the United States, doesn't spell out everything. This proposal here before you does. It doesn't introduce anything new because the governor always has had a pocket veto and he always has had 10 days, Sundays excepted, in which to approve a bill. And it always has been the constitutional provision that if he didn't approve it within that period and the legislature was in session, he had to return it to them. But there were 2 or 3 other combinations of circumstances that were not spelled out in that traditional language, that had been resolved by practice. As the thing actually worked, there was no confusion about it but as a student in a school would read that language in the traditional form, or anyone who would undertake to analyze that language which is in the traditional form, there were some things that weren't spelled out. This proposal does spell it out.

Keep in mind that the time for consideration by the governor is not to be measured from the time that the bill passes the legislature. Instead, it is to be measured by the time from presentment. What happens is this: let us assume that we have a senate bill, a bill originally introduced into the senate. It passes the senate and it passes the house and presumably in a different form. Then the 2 houses have to agree to it in a conference, but it finally is adopted by both houses in a particular form. Then, it being a senate bill, it becomes the duty of the secretary of the senate to print that bill in the form in which it was finally adopted and it is the duty of the secretary of the senate, since it was a senate bill, to present that bill to the governor. Sometimes a bill can be speedily printed, sometimes it takes 2 or 3 weeks to get a bill printed, if it's a great big thick bill and there's an awful lot of other bills also to be printed. So the time for measurement of the governor's consideration is to be measured from the time of its presentment and it is presented by the secretary of the senate in the case of a senate bill, or by the clerk of the house in the case of a house bill. Then this proposal spells it out clearly that the governor shall have 14 days measured in hours and minutes from the time of presentation during which time he may consider. And then if he approves that bill, he must approve it within that 14 day time and he shall sign it and he files it with the secretary of state and it becomes a law.

I might parenthetically mention that by spelling it out in the constitution here that the approved acts of the governor shall be filed with the secretary of state, here you are in effect vesting in the secretary of state a constitutional power, because the secretary of state then constitutionally will be the officer which must receive it. Now, if the governor does not approve, and within that 14 day time the legislature has finally adjourned its session, then the bill does not become a law. That is a pocket veto. We have a pocket veto under the present system. We will continue to have a pocket veto under the new system.

I might say that the legislature of Michigan many, many, many years ago devised a procedure whereby the likelihood of pocket vetoes are largely nonexistent in Michigan because the legislature, in order to avoid the possibility of pocket vetoes, instead of adjourning finally its session — adjourning sine die — the legislature by its rules usually takes what it calls a short adjournment. That adjournment under its present rules I believe is 34 days. After the work of all of the session is completed, the legislature adjourns for 34 days. During that 34 day period, the secretary of the senate and the clerk of the house are able to submit to the governor in a fashion that to some extent I suppose is for the accommodation of the governor in his work load. That is, they don't present all of these bills all at once. They feed them in to the governor in a kind of a work load state so that the governor won't feel unnecessarily swamped. And over this 34 day period the governor has this constitutional time in which to consider these bills. Then the governor will have approved or he will have vetoed all the bills. The legislature then comes back to consider his vetoes, after which they adjourn the session sine die, — without day — and finally adjourns. So in that kind of an arrangement, the legislature has worked itself around and figured a way around the possibility of pocket vetoes. Nevertheless, constitutionally, just as the president of the United States has the right of a pocket veto, thus does the governor of Michigan now have the right of a pocket veto. This new proposal will permit the governor to have a pocket veto if the legislature has adjourned before the time has expired during which the governor may consider any bill.

Then this proposal goes on to say what the governor shall do if he does not approve a bill and the legislature continues in session. You've got to send the bill back and then the legislature has an opportunity to pass it over his veto. The machinery of the legislature's passing bills over the governor's veto is not changed here at all except in one respect, and I understand that there is a minority report with regard to this one respect. The proposal would permit the members of the legislature by a 2/3 vote in each house of the members elected and serving to pass a bill over the veto; elected and serving. The present language says simply "elected". This idea of introducing this "and serving" in here is in order to permit 2/3 of the actual membership of the legislature to act. If you say that there must be 2/3 of 34 senators to concur to override a veto, when as a matter of fact there are only 32 senators, then you have 2 dead men who are voting, you see. The same thing is true in the house. Consequently, this "and serving" is introduced in here in order to permit actual memberships to perform and not to let a vacancy have any count one way or the other in arriving at the outcome of the decision. I believe that that explains this matter. I don't think that there is anything else in here that is different from what the present constitution provides.

I might make this one observation in closing. The veto power of the governor is not strictly an executive function. It is strictly a legislative function. What I mean to say is that by giving to the governor a veto, you permit him to enter into the legislative branch of the government. And this is as it should be because it is one of our great checks and balances in our system. By this means we give the executive an opportunity to check the legislative branch. On the other hand, the legislative branch in our system has fashioned into it other checks upon the executive, such as the matter of advice and consent, such as the matter of impeachment and so on. So this is one of those great traditional checks which we place in a branch of government other than the one which, if you were thinking about it purely as a pure matter, it wouldn't be there at all because the veto function is part of the law making function. It is legislative in character but it is a part of the legislative function which we have traditionally vested in the governor and which we will continue to do under the new constitution.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, only one other comment. The 14 day period permits the legislature to submit the bill on a working day and because of the 14 days, the period in which the governor must take action would always come to an end on a working day.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Dr. Nord, a delegate from Detroit.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Hutchinson some questions, if I may.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If Mr. Hutchinson cares to answer them.

MR. NORD: I have 2 groups of questions. One of them is a single question. The other one has 3 parts to it. The first question has to do with the language as it presently is in the constitution and which will be retained in the first sentence. It says "Every bill passed by the legislature shall be presented to the governor before it becomes a law." The question I had in mind is this: am I correct in recalling that in the case of initiative that a proposal originating by initiative later on can be adopted by the legislature and it does not require the approval of the governor? Am I correct as to that? Do you recall that particular point?

MR. HUTCHINSON: Yes, Mr. Nord, I think you are correct, but I also point out to you that that is not treated as a bill. The legislature in its one experience under the initiative legislation provision of the constitution declared on its records that that was not a bill.

MR. NORD: Okay. Therefore there is no problem of inconsistency in your opinion?

MR. HUTCHINSON: No.

MR. NORD: The other group of questions has to do with the effect of changing to the business of measuring in hours and minutes. What I was concerned about was whether that might have been due to some problems as to when a certain event occurs, which might not otherwise be a problem. For example, these are the 3 questions that occurred to me in reading this: one, in line 2 of the second page it refers to the time of presentation. I would like to ask you whether you think it's clear exactly what time that would be. Is there any problem about when the time of presentation might be?

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Nord, I do not see any problem there, perhaps because I know so intimately how this matter actually works procedurally. The secretary of the senate or the clerk of the house, as the case may be, delivers to the governor's office this enrolled bill and accepts a receipt from the governor's office, in which the time expressed in hours of the time of the day is set forth.

MR. NORD: The question I had in mind is: would it be when the governor himself receives it or when it is received in his office?

MR. HUTCHINSON: It would be from the time of presentation in his office. You might direct the question to the secretary of the convention. He is the man here who from actual experience knows precisely how he has delivered it or whether he actually delivered it to the governor in person or not, but I don't think he did.

MR. NORD: I won't do that as long as you feel there is no ambiguity on that point. Now, the next point relating to when a certain thing occurs has to do with line 5 on page 2 where it says, "If he approves, he shall within that time sign and file it. . . ." "Sign and file it. . . ." Would you say that he must file it with the secretary of state within that time or only sign it, or what do you think? Is there any problem there?

MR. HUTCHINSON: I think that if he signs it within that time, that there wouldn't be any problem about whether he actually got it into the secretary of state's hands within that time. If he actually signed it within that time, then the filing with the secretary of state is just perfunctory. There is no reason to believe that it would not actually be filed with the secretary of state's office the same day.

MR. NORD: The same day, of course, won't be good enough under the measuring in hours and minutes.

MR. HUTCHINSON: We are talking about measuring in hours and minutes of the time during which the governor may sign it. If he signs it within that time, what he will do — at least, I've seen bills signed by the president of the United States in which he puts the hour of the day at which he signs it. This could be handled the same way, "Approved such and such a date, 10:22 a.m."

MR. NORD: I assume, Mr. Hutchinson, if I may say so —

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Will you address your questions through the Chair so that the rest of the delegates can follow this discussion.

MR. NORD: I will, Mr. Chairman. Then, Mr. Hutchinson, through Mr. Chairman, am I correct in assuming then that if there is any problem about this, style and drafting could take care of it, assuming there is any problem on that point?

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, if there is a problem along that point, if in the judgment of style and drafting this isn't precisely clear, I can assure Mr. Nord that as a member of that committee, I shall make every effort to clarify it. It didn't occur to me that it was unclear. I don't think it to be but I will bow to the judgment of other minds as well as my own on it.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, the final question along this same line has to do with line 11 on page 2, which says," . . . he shall return it. . . ." Again, Mr. Chairman and Mr. Hutchinson, I would simply like to be sure that there is no problem about when it is that he returns it. Is there any difficulty as to that?

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, it says that "he shall return it within such 14 day period," that is to say, measured in hours and minutes, "together with his objections to the house in which it originated. . . ." The way that he actually returns it is that in case of a senate bill he addresses his communications to the president of the senate but actually delivers it to the secretary and the secretary reads in the veto message to the next session of the senate.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Hutchinson, I assume then that there are no serious problems here, and I will thank Mr. Chairman and Mr. Hutchinson for the answers.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Thank you, Mr. Nord.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair thinks we will have the minority report now, if there is no one else to speak.

[Following is the minority report amendment:

1. Amend page 2, line 15, after "elected" by striking out "and serving"; and in line 19, after "elected" by striking out "and serving".]

The Chair will recognize one of the proponents of the minority report amendment, Mr. Lesinski.

MR. LESINSKI: Mr. Chairman, at this time the minority withdraws the minority report. We made a protest because of the inconsistency of the language with other sections. I have received the assurance that the words "and serving" will be used in other sections for consistency. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Without objection, it is withdrawn. Are there any other amendments on the desk, Mr. Secretary?

SECRETARY CHASE: None on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If not, this proposal will be passed.

Committee Proposal 70 is passed. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 4 on the calendar, from the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 75, A proposal to provide for compensation of state officers. Amends article VI, section 21.

Following is Committee Proposal 75 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. The governor, LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, secretary of state, state treasurer, [auditor general,] and attorney general shall each receive such compensation as shall be prescribed by law which shall be in full for all services performed and expenses incurred during his term of office: Provided, That the same shall not be changed during the term of office for which elected[.] EXCEPT AS OTHERWISE PROVIDED IN THIS CONSTITUTION.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 75:

Article VI, section 21, relating to salaries and expenses of state officers has been amended to include the lieutenant governor and to eliminate the auditor general. The words, "EXCEPT AS OTHERWISE PROVIDED IN THIS CONSTITUTION," are added at the end of the section to eliminate any possible conflict with the provision which permits the payment of the same compensation as the governor shall receive to those state officers who have the powers and duties of the office of governor devolve upon them as provided in the constitution.

The elimination of a reference to an auditor general is required by the decision of the committee to eliminate this office from the executive branch.

With the exception of the changes noted above, this language came into the Constitution of 1908 by way of amendment in 1948.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. King was chairman of the subcommittee which handled this matter. I will call on him for a statement at this time.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The gentleman from Pontiac, Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to ask Jim Sterrett, one of the members of this subcommittee, to explain this section.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, this proposal is essentially the same as that contained in the 1908 constitution which was put in by way of an amendment in 1948. This pertains to article VI, section 21, relating to the salaries and expenses of state officers and has been amended to include the lieutenant governor. We have added the words "except as otherwise provided in this constitution" because there is other mention in Committee Proposal 72 for compensation of the lieutenant governor and other officers. I believe there is no more to be said about this and I will pass at this time.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Are there any amendments to the proposal on the desk?

SECRETARY CHASE: None on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If not, it will be passed.

Committee Proposal 75 is passed. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 5 on the calendar, from the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 72, A proposal to provide for compensation of acting governor. Retains section 18 of article VI.

Following is Committee Proposal 72 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. The lieutenant governor or other state officer in the line of succession, while performing the duties of governor, shall receive the same compensation as the governor.

Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 72:

The committee recommends no change in this section. The unanimous opinion of the committee is that any state officer acting in the capacity of governor should receive the compensation of that office. No difficulty has been encountered under the present provision.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: I will yield to Mr. King, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this wording is precisely the same wording which was in the 1908 constitution. It provides that the lieutenant governor or other state officer in line of succession will receive the same compensation as the governor when he is serving in that capacity. And that is why, as Mr. Sterrett pointed out, we added the last few words in Committee Proposal 75, "except as otherwise provided in this constitution." We made no change. If there are any questions, I'd be glad to answer them.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to ask Mr. King whether the committee did any research into whether this particular provision has ever caused any controversy in state government.

MR. KING: We could not find any indication of that. It is our understanding when the governor is out of the state, he is not acting as governor and in those events, the lieutenant governor is allowed to step into that capacity and be compensated accordingly.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to then, for the enlightenment of the membership of the committee of the whole, simply relate that because of an experience that did arise out of this matter, I think in the year of 1937, to my knowledge, no acting governor has ever even claimed any additional compensation while the governor was out of the state.

I don't know of any lieutenant governor that ever got the compensation of the governor during the time that he was acting as governor. My recollection is that back in 1937 — I believe it was when Mr. Nowicki was lieutenant governor — Governor Murphy left the state for about a month and the lieutenant governor, acting as governor for that month, claimed to get the pay of the governor for that month. Well, apparently, you see, the legislature had appropriated only so much money for the compensation of the governor. The question arose, I suppose, as to whether the lieutenant governor was to get the pay that the real governor, who had been not acting during that month, whether he was also entitled to pay or whether he wasn't. And so they just kind of backed away from it and they never did settle it. I submit to you, sir, that this language here for all practical purposes is a nonentity. It means nothing. If this constitutional convention wants to make it mean something, it will have to do something different than write these words back in here.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, could I ask Mr. Hutchinson a question?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If he cares to answer.

MR. KING: Was it the Legislature of the state of Michigan that decided this constitutional issue or was it tested in the court?

MR. HUTCHINSON: I'm sorry, Mr. Chairman, I don't know how far it got; but I think it is generally known around state government that Mr. Nowicki didn't get the money, even though I presume he was entitled to it.

MR. KING: Well, we can't mandamus the legislature. I think we've all agreed to that.

MR. HUTCHINSON: No, but Mr. Chairman, I could suppose they could have mandamused the state treasurer and directed him to pay out so much money based upon this. They didn't do it.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, may I ask —

MR. HUTCHINSON: I would be very happy, Mr. Chairman, if Mr. King would be so kind as to have Mr. Brake speak upon it. He is a former state treasurer. Maybe he knows more about this than I do.

MR. KING: Fine.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Do you yield to Mr. Brake?

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

MR. KING: Yes, indeed.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, if the senator is looking for evidence, I can add a little. In 1952 at the time of the presidential inauguration, all of my superiors went to Washington and it got clear down to me and I was acting governor for 3 days and they never paid me a penny. (laughter) That I don't mind at all. But Governor Williams' staff saw to it that I didn't get even the chance to appoint a notary public and I wanted a chance to kind of flex my muscles a little bit, you know. (laughter)

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, I think the wording here goes a little bit further in any event than might have been indicated. It seems to me this wording states that whoever acts in the stead of the governor shall receive the same compensation as the governor. Now the question arises, interpreting the present language in the constitution, as to whether or not one becomes governor upon the succession to the office of governor in the event of the absence of the governor. It is my understanding that they don't fill the vacancy of lieutenant governor nor does anyone else move up behind it. So this language, as I understood it, was meant to cover those situations, one, where the governor actually is removed from office or dies; and secondly, because we felt this was the intent of the language and had no idea that it was not the way it had been carried out in the past, we felt that the lieutenant governor should also receive the compensation of the governor when acting in that capacity.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: I would like to ask Mr. King a question, if I may. Mr. King, let us assume then, as I understand you now, that the intent of this language is to assure that whoever succeeds to the governorship in the case of a vacancy shall be entitled to the same pay as the governor receives. In that case, Mr. King, would not the person who succeeds thereupon become the governor? My recollection is that when Governor Fitzgerald died, that Lieutenant Governor Dickinson took the oath of office and thereupon became governor. Now, I know that, way back in the history of our state, when some earlier governors resigned or at least maybe they just left the state to become members of the president's cabinet, that the lieutenant governor acted as governor and they called themselves "acting governors". But in recent times, the concept is that if there is an actual vacancy in the office of governor, the line of succession would make the officer who succeeds, the governor himself and there would be no problem then about the compensation, would there, Mr. King?

MR. KING: Mr. Hutchinson, I refer you to the present constitution, section 17 of the executive article, wherein it says — I'll read the whole thing:

> After the lieutenant governor, the line of succession and order of precedence of state officers, who shall act as governor, shall be secretary of state, attorney general, state treasurer and auditor general, and during a vacany in the office of governor, if the lieutenant governor or any state officer or officers in this line of succession die, resign, be impeached, displaced, be incapable of performing the duties of office, or be absent from the state, leaving no state officer prior in the line of succession to fill the office of governor, the state officer next in line of succession shall act as governor during the residue of his term or until the absence or disability giving rise to the succession ceases.

I don't know how the legislature interprets this word "act" but I interpret it to mean act.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would simply like to observe that it seems to me as though this constitutional convention should clarify the language which Mr. King has just read, for it seems to me that there are 2 different situations here. One is the situation where, in the absence of the governor — because of absence from the state primarily — someone else must act as governor, stay in the state and act as governor. That's one problem. There isn't any real vacancy in the office of governor there. The other problem is when the office of governor becomes vacant. In that case, the man who succeeds should thereupon be governor, it would seem to me — I'm sure that that's my feeling anyway, just as Mr. Dickinson became governor on the death of the governor — so if there is an actual vacancy in the office of governor in the future, the man who succeeds would thereupon be governor, just as the vice president becomes president.

I think that there are 2 different situations here that we must distinguish between and I am frank to say that your suggestion that this language we are now debating here in Committee Proposal 72 was perhaps intended only to apply to situations where there is an actual vacancy in the office of governor, that while I hadn't ever supposed it was intended to be so, now if that's all it means, I submit that the matter could better be handled by rearranging the language having to do with succession to the governorship than to have this thing in here. Because as I say, this would simply cause confusion.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, I don't want to get into section 17 at this time because we haven't discussed it and we made some rather major changes in that area. If senator Hutchinson has some suggestions, I'd be glad to hear them out. Perhaps this is a matter he would like to take care of in style and drafting. I don't know. (laughter) But I'd appreciate any amendments if he has them at this time.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The chairman of the committee still has the floor. Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the wording was left as it is because there is a wide difference of opinion among the states as to whether one who succeeds to the office of governor becomes the governor or whether he remains the acting governor. This language was intended, I'm sure, originally, and since then to make it clear that if he does succeed to those responsibilities he draws the pay of the governor. There are some other complications. If he officially becomes governor, as Mr. Hutchinson would suggest, you have the problem as to a governor with respect to whom a disability has been determined so that he is found unable to function as governor. We have made some provision for that in another section but if the man who succeeds becomes governor instead of acting governor, then you have a problem as to what happens if the disability ceases and whether the governor then can take back his responsibilities or not when someone else has in the meantime become governor on the theory that Mr. Hutchinson proposes. So that it seemed to us better to leave the language in this form. It may be that we can clarify it further and we are certainly open to suggestion on that point. But that's the reasoning behind the committee proposal. I suggest that it be passed unless there are amendments and we will be happy to work with the committee on style and drafting on this point.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Do you yield the floor, Mr. Martin?

MR. MARTIN: Yes, I yield the floor.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the delegate from Detroit, Mr. Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I merely want to point out, I can remember when Mr. Nowicki asked for a month's pay and presumably never got it. It seemed at that time, looking literally at the constitution, that he was entitled to it. The only thing would be for the legislature to provide, possibly by a deficiency appropriation, for it.

In the matter of the time of the death of Governor Fitzgerald, I remember the attorney general issued an opinion, in which he says yes and no. The lieutenant governor was governor. It was all right to call him governor and he would get the pay of the governor. Apparently, this has not been too clear. The difficulty seems to be: how are you going to clarify it?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: I pass.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: There is an amendment on the secretary's desk. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Yeager offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 5, by striking out all of the proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the proponent of the amendment, Delegate Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, it seems to me that this might be a solution to the problem here. If a permanent vacancy occurs by reason of death or some other major situation, that you will have a lieutenant governor taking over and the succession will be proper and there will be no administrative problem. If on the other hand there is a vacancy occurring of a temporary nature due to the absence of the governor or somebody in succession taking over, it seems to me that this should be part of their duty and additional compensation in this area, at least to me, is not indicated. I would suggest that we strike this section as being really a little archaic and unnecessary. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Yeager, I don't want to discuss Committee Proposal 59 at this time because I wouldn't be in order if I did, but yet I can't answer this question or this suggested amendment without at least touching upon Committee Proposal 59. The governor can be unable to fulfill his obligations for a variety of reasons. In there, we provide for impeachment and conviction thereon, removal from office, death, inability, resignation or absence from the state. In all of these cases, the power shall devolve upon the lieutenant governor and so on down the line of succession. Now, this problem of inability has been a major problem in this country and it has never been solved, so far as we can determine, to any degree of satisfaction by any of the 50 states or of the federal government which you delegates will recall, I am sure. President Eisenhower, at 3 different times during his presidency, was confronted with serious illnesses and there was no provision — and there is none today — to provide for a method of determining when the vice president shall step in and take over the duties of that office.

Let's say that the lieutenant governor is forced to assume the duties of the governor for a period of time — not permanently, but perhaps temporarily — as a result of some sort of protracted illness. In those cases, we feel that the lieutenant governor ought to get the pay of the governor. As far as to whether he goes down to Toledo, Ohio, for the day or something like that, I'm not too concerned, and if the legislature can work this out within the present wording of the constitution, as apparently they have to their satisfaction in the past, that's wonderful. But I think this provides a lot to be in here for those more serious contingencies which we can foresee and we have provided for in Committee Proposal 59. So for that reason, I would definitely oppose the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to answer Mr. King in this way: it seems to me from what has been said here that the legislature has to act, whether this particular provision is in the constitution or not. And it would also seem to me that if it is removed and you had this inability to act situation, that the legislature could still appropriate sufficient money if it saw fit to do so. Does it require basic constitutional authority for the legislature to pay the lieutenant governor an additional sum under a special act or does it require part of the constitution?

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Yeager, I assume that the legislature could appropriate money. I assume that we could start off our constitution by saying, "There shall be a constitution as shall be provided by law," and we could all go home tonight. But I don't think that this necessarily answers all the problems. I think it ought to be in here; it definitely ought to be in here.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: The amendment also ignores the problem that we may get into if it is presented to the court and the court holds that this man does not become governor no matter how well he is performing the duties. We want to make it clear that he does have that right to additional compensation. If you strike this out, then you get into the problem of the legislature raising the salary of a man who is already in office, which is generally frowned upon. So that it seems to me much better to continue this language until or unless we can find some better way of dealing with this problem than by trying to strike this out, which just creates additional problems that we will have to solve. I hope you will not vote for the amendment but give us additional time for consideration of this.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Lansing, Delegate Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, I desire to ask Mr. Martin a question through the Chair.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin, do you care to answer?

MR. WANGER: Mr. Martin, if a person must perform the duties of the governor for a period of several months, as could happen, might it not be that his personal expenses would be somewhat increased if he was to properly carry out his duties?

MR. MARTIN: That's unquestionably true. He would have all the ceremonial responsibilities of the governor and assume such responsibilities for entertainment and so on as the governor now pays for out of his own pocket. There is no question but what if he were to perform these duties over a long period of time, over an extended period of time, that he ought to be compensated on the same basis as the governor is compensated, and this should not depend entirely upon his actually succeeding to the office. The governor might be ill enough to prevent his performing his duties for a period of 4 or 5 months, and whoever handles his duties during that time should receive his compensation and that is covered by this.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Delegate Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, am I to understand that the language that you have in this proposal then relates only to those cases, or you contemplate that it would relate only to those cases where you have a person acting as governor when the governor is either out of the state or suffering from a disability for which he may be removed, or anything of that nature?

MR. MARTIN: It is intended to cover long periods of disability when the governor may not perhaps have been declared disabled but when he is not able to perform his duties and it is also intended to cover periods in which he actually succeeds to the responsibilities of the governor, that is, the governor has resigned, for example, or he dies, or something of that kind. So there are 2 possibilities there, in either of which event the person who succeeds, whether it is the lieutenant governor or someone else in the line of succession, ought to be compensated on the same basis as the governor is compensated.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, this could conceivably involve setting a time limit as to when compensation would start in that capacity.

MR. MARTIN: Yes, but setting a time limit doesn't solve the problem very well because we don't know exactly what the extent of those duties would be, if you say 2 weeks or 4 weeks or something like that. With this language, if it feels that the burden is unduly great, the legislature can appropriate additional money to take care of the salary of the person who is performing the governor's duties. It is very clear that it could do that under this language. If you strike the language out, however, you have the question immediately about increasing the salary of someone who is already serving the government.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, in view of the questions, apparently Mr. Martin isn't entirely satisfied with this language. In view of the matter of whether or not a time should be provided, whether or not the legislature shall provide by law as to when this compensation shall be paid, I will move that we pass over this proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Motion has been made by Mr. Brown that we pass over this proposal. Until when?

MR. G. E. BROWN: As I understand it, the time certain is not set. That it be passed over until the next meeting of the committee of the whole. Is that not correct, Mr. Hutchinson?

Mr. Chairman, I would then direct a question to Mr. Martin. Does he feel that this language could be improved, that it could be improved by tomorrow, say, and have different committee language?

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Brown, if you want to move to pass this until we have considered Committee Proposal 60, which is the end of the chain of proposals for the executive branch. I have no objection. We will endeavor to see whether we can meet some of the questions that have been raised here.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I would so move.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: That means that you want to put it to the foot of the calendar? Is that it, Mr. Brown?

MR. G. E. BROWN: That's right.

MR. MARTIN: That is my understanding, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Faxon, do you want to talk to this motion?

MR. FAXON: I was going to make the same suggestion.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Do you want to talk to this motion, Mr. King?

MR. KING: Yes, Mr. Chairman, indirectly.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Directly, the Chair wants it. (laughter)

MR. KING: I'll be very direct. I do not oppose the motion to pass at any time after Committee Proposal 59. Committee Proposal 60 comes after 59. We changed this batting order a little and as a result of that it's hard to argue for this without getting into another proposal which apparently is not completely germane. Committee Proposal 60 is the last one?

MR. MARTIN: That's right.

MR. KING: I have no objection to that. I can't conceive of any change in language which is going to make it any different; but I think perhaps the delegates might better understand it after we have discussed 59.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the motion to put Committee Proposal 72 at the foot of the calendar as far as the executive branch calendar is concerned. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 6 on the calendar, from the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 48, A provision pertaining to ineligibility to hold office. A substitute for article VI, sections 14 and 15.

Following is Committee Proposal 48 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. NO MEMBER OF THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH OF THE STATE SHALL HOLD ANY OTHER OFFICE OR POSITION FOR COMPENSATION UNDER THE UNITED STATES, THIS STATE, OR ANY POLITICAL SUBDIVISION OR AGENCY THEREOF.

Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 48:

This section replaces sections 14 and 15 in article VI. The purpose of this section is to prohibit dual officeholding by members of the executive branch of this state. Some flexibility is achieved by the addition of the qualifying phrase "for compensation." This allows members of the executive branch to hold positions on interstate commissions, school boards, and other such similar positions as long as they do not receive compensation. The committee does not feel that this provision would preclude a person serving in such a noncompensable position from receiving actual expenses or per diem compensation in lieu of expenses.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I will yield to Mr. Durst on this proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Durst.

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, the proposal we have here is meant to replace sections 14 and 15 of article VI of the present constitution. Now, it actually was the judgment of our committee that we could do away with 14 and 15 without replacing it with anything because we thought that the proposition presented in those 2 sections were unlikely at this time. However, after due reflection by our committee we felt it was desirable to establish some general overall provision against dual officeholding. I would indicate that there is similar provision in sections 6 and 7 of article V dealing with the legislature and it may be possible for style and drafting to perhaps combine these 2 if they feel it desirable in their wisdom. I also understand that the committee on emerging problems has done some work on this. Whether they are coming out with a proposal, I don't know. I feel it is desirable to proceed with this section at this time and if there are further thoughts on the matter, they can be taken up at a later date.

What we have done here is prohibit any member of the executive branch from holding any other office or position. We have tried to create some flexibility by providing the words "for compensation." It is a problem both in this state and several states in this day and age when we have people serving on interstate commissions and so forth and advisory commissions, great lakes commissions and others of allowing people who are experienced in our state government of using their wisdom in these largely advisory capacities. Under this section, we think it would be possible for members of the executive branch, the governor or other members of the executive agency to serve in this type of capacity, and the only limitation we make is that they receive no compensation. This prevents a double interest here.

As the committee report points out, this would allow them to serve, for instance, on school boards, interstate commissions and other positions of that type. We have specifically stated in our committee report — we wish to emphasize this — that when we use the words "for compensation" we do not mean to prevent the receipt by the individual of his actual expenses or, in lieu of expenses, per diem compensation. We realize this perhaps could be an opening for some abuse of this provision, but in the total, if you are going to have some state officer traveling, we'll say to Ohio or New York to serve in an advisory capacity, it would be desirable that the state be able to compensate him for his actual expenses. I would say that the germ of this idea is taken from the Alaska constitution, where they have a provision pretty much the same, which prevents a member of their state government from serving in any other capacity for profit. We have changed the "for profit" to "compensation".

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin, we're back to you.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I yield to anyone for any other questions, if there are any.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Hutchinson, do you want to ask a question of Mr. Martin?

MR. HUTCHINSON: I would be happy to ask it of Mr. Martin or Mr. Durst. I would like to ask Mr. Martin to elucidate further upon what is intended by the word "member" of the executive branch. Do you mean state officer in the executive branch or do you mean any employee or what do you mean by the word "member"? This is a new concept.

MR. MARTIN: The word "member," Mr. Hutchinson, is simply intended to mean an employee of the executive branch. It does not just relate to officers.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, does that include any person holding a position under the state civil service?

MR. MARTIN: It would include any person who holds a job for compensation under the state civil service, yes. It would not include, for example, the members of boards and commissions who serve without compensation but who receive a per diem or who receive actual expenses. As you know, there are many people in that category in state government at the present time.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would then observe that while the members of the civil service commission would not be prohibited by this language, any employee in the system would be — unless they are nonsalaried.

MR. MARTIN: That's correct. I think that any person who was performing a full time responsibility for salary, for compensation would be covered by this but persons who were simply serving on a voluntary basis without compensation would not be.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to direct a question to either Mr. Durst or Mr. Martin.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Which one?

MR. G. E. BROWN: Either. Mr. Durst, since he handled the presentation.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Durst, do you care to answer?

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Durst, do you contemplate that the language that you have set forth in this proposal would preclude one serving as a notary public and receiving compensation therefor or as a member of the armed services reserve or anyone in that capacity?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Durst.

MR. DURST: First of all, Mr. Brown, it was not our feeling that a notary public was receiving any compensation from the United States or this state or any political subdivision. If he receives any compensation, it is for the service he renders as a notary public to some other individual.

Now, as far as concerns a person serving in the armed services reserves, frankly, this had not occurred to us. I don't suppose we would interpret this to be a position or an office under the United States, this state or any political subdivision. For the purpose of interpretation, I am sure it was the committee's position that this would not include people serving in some type of armed forces reserve. We are speaking of people holding governmental positions. In other words, in the previous section, we would not say that a person could be a member of the executive branch and at the same time, serve in the United States senate or serve in some capacity in the United States government as a paid employee of the United States government and at the same time, serve as an employee of the state of Michigan. We feel there is a conflict in this type of dual officeholding and this is what we are seeking to prevent.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Durst, with respect to this question, it was raised in the committee on legislative organization relative to eligibility of legislators, and I would quote for you some of the language of section 7 of article V, which reads as follows:

> No person elected a member of the legislature shall receive any civil appointment within this state or to the senate of the United States from the governor, except notaries public, or from the governor and senate, from the legislature, or any other state authority, during the term for which he is elected.

This is a comparable provision which is in the constitution and specifically mentions notaries public. I know in our committee report, we have dealt with members of the armed services. I merely question as to whether or not it would be better to define and clarify that which you intend in this proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Hanna. Was that a question that you asked, Mr. Brown?

MR. G. E. BROWN: No.

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I don't see that it is necessary for us to include the words "notary public" here as they may have done in the legislative powers committee since we use the words "for compensation," which eliminates the problem. I will admit that in the area of the armed forces Mr. Brown has raised a point which perhaps needs further clarification. Just thinking on my feet, I am not sure whether it does or not, whether we are not able to define our terms specifically to eliminate that particular problem.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, a question to Mr. Durst: in some parts of the state, it has been a common practice that the branch license manager for the secretary of state has been some other officer. He may be a county clerk, a register of deeds or such other township official. Do you intend that this dual capacity could no longer serve under this language?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Whom is the question to?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Durst.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Do you care to answer, Mr. Durst?

MR. DURST: As I read the provision, Mr. Hanna, I don't believe it would.

MR. W. F. HANNA: A second question, Mr. Durst. At the time you had this under consideration, did you also consider the language in Committee Proposal 88 which says, in part, notwithstanding the provisions of this constitution, members of the executive department may serve in any of the new governmental cooperative corporations or new governmental units established, which appears at the bottom of 88 and which seems to except your language to all these new forms of government? Did you consider this exception that local government put in their metropolitan government affair?

MR. DURST: If I am not mistaken, Mr. Hanna, doesn't this provision just apply to local governments as such, where our provision merely applies to members of the state executive branch?

MR. W. F. HANNA: This applies to the state as well as local.

MR. DURST: It applies to officer, employee —

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Will you kindly put your questions through the Chair so that this discussion will be available to all the delegates. It sounds like you have a little closed corporation down there. (laughter)

MR. DURST: We have, Mr. Chairman, you'll have to admit. The language reads, ". . . an officer or employee of any of said units of government or subdivision or agency thereof." Without my having had a chance to read real quickly the whole provision, Mr. Hanna, doesn't this apply to the local areas of government?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Durst, we were informed in style and drafting that this meant if the attorney general was to be a member of this, it should so read.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Is that all, gentlemen?

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, the only thing I would answer is what Mr. Brown just said: if he wishes to be a member, he would serve without compensation in an advisory capacity. He cannot receive 2 salaries.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment on the secretary's desk. If he would read it, I would speak to that.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "No" by striking out "member" and inserting "elected official or department head"; so the language will then read:

> No elected official or department head of the executive branch of the state shall hold any other office or position for compensation under the United States, this state, or any political subdivision or agency thereof.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I think we're beginning to see the trouble that we get into when we use such an encompassing term such as the word "member" here, which has been defined to mean any employee. I, for one, would not want to see any group of people in our state disenfranchised from any kind of participation in the political civic life of their community or state. Just because a person works for the state government shouldn't mean that they can't serve on school boards; it shouldn't mean they can't participate in their local government, in their local communities. I think we are opening up a vast area here where the real intent is to prevent a kind of conflict of interest which would occur at the top echelons of state government. By inserting "elected official or department head" we are eliminating that area of conflict of interest but we ought not to be extending this type of conflict to people who happen to work for the state and happen also to be interested citizens in their community. I think this is making lame ducks out of a lot of people who live in areas, work for the state and would find themselves unable to participate, that is, to actually involve themselves in the political civic life of their community. Therefore, I would urge we would define "member" more clearly and keep more in line with giving people an opportunity to take part in their government.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Just a moment. The Chair has several on the list. The next on the list is Delegate Allen. Do you want to talk to the Faxon amendment?

MR. ALLEN: No.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: All right. Mr. Durst, do you want to talk to the Faxon amendment?

MR. DURST: I pass.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall on the Faxon amendment.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, I think that Delegate Faxon covered most of what I was going to say. As a member of the committee — and I recall some discussion on this — but unless I am incorrect, it seems to me that we were talking in terms of precluding or prohibiting the executive officials and I didn't understand that it was to be this encompassing. Maybe I am incorrect, and if I am, I stand corrected at this time.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Is this on the Faxon amendment?

MR. MARSHALL: It can be on the Faxon amendment because the Faxon amendment and the remarks made by Delegate Faxon I agree with. That was the point on which I asked for the floor.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Let's confine ourselves right now to the Faxon amendment and then we'll come back to the original proposal.

MR. MARSHALL: I asked the question that I asked on the the Faxon amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: All right. Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Marshall, Mr. Faxon, the general objective here was to prevent persons who were receiving a salary from the state government from holding 2 paid jobs. We don't think that we should encourage moonlighting and that if they hold a full time paid job with the state government, they ought not to be holding paid jobs with the United States government or with other political subdivisions of the state. This is the purpose of this. Mr. Faxon mentioned school boards. This doesn't prevent anybody from serving on a school board.

MR. FAXON: Just in response to school boards —

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Just a moment, Mr. Faxon. Mr. Marshall has the floor.

MR. MARTIN: I simply say we are not endeavoring to prevent anybody from serving the state government and serving in some other unpaid capacity. But we don't think that they should serve 2 paid jobs, one of them in state government and one of them somewhere else.

MR. MARSHALL: I will yield to Delegate Faxon.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, there are school boards in the state of Michigan that do pay the members of the board. This also, under the present terminology of that proposal, would not only exclude people who serve on school boards but, it seems to me, there are other commissions and agencies where people receive a per diem for serving. Now, it seems to me that the intent here may be one we're all agreed with. But there are school board people who do get paid and this would exclude them from participation upon their boards.

MR. MARSHALL: Believe it or not, I agree with our committee chairman on the intent, but I'm afraid that the language goes too far. For example, supposing a person was serving on a board or commission — and I want to ask this in the form of a question — supposing he was serving on a board or commission that met quarterly that was under the executive branch, under this language, and he received, let's say a $50 per diem, which is compensation, would that then prohibit him from serving as sewer commissioner of Taylor township on a $25 per diem?

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, in explaining the proposal Mr. Durst pointed out that the committee does not feel that the provision would preclude a person serving in a noncompensable position from receiving actual expenses or a per diem in lieu of expenses from the state. In other words, if you were getting a per diem from the state, or expenses, this would not prevent you from serving in some other capacity on the sewer board or whatever organization that is.

MR. MARSHALL: I'm not going to be on the sewer board much longer anyway, so let's get off of that and go to this one — and I am not trying to take up time, but I am disturbed about this language. In many of your townships, you have trustees who earn anywhere fom $600 a year and up — in my township, $1,500 a year — as a salary. Now, supposing that this trustee was serving on one of the state commissions that was a part time position — and I can't think of one at this moment but I am sure I could dig up a concrete example — but suppose he served on a state board and received for that, let's say $1,200 a year for attending meetings. Would this then prohibit him from serving as trustee of the township at a salary of $1,500 a year? I believe it would.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Marshall, the answer to that is that if his $1,200 a year received from the state was more than his expenses or more than a reasonable per diem, then he would be prevented from serving in this other capacity. If this represented a large number of trips to Lansing so that it was simply reimbursement for expenses, or a reasonable per diem, it would not.

MR. MARSHALL: Okay. I will just close by saying this — and this certainly cannot be taken as any party position or party issue because this is one of those things that is going to affect people, period — I just want to make sure that we are clear and that we know what we are doing and that we not get language in here that is going to create a lot of problems and trouble in the future. I did not understand it to mean that it had gone as far as it has when we discussed it. I thought we were only talking about elected executive officials and department heads who were on full time salary. For that reason, I support the Faxon amendment. I believe it is clear and spells it out. The Faxon amendment, as I understand it, says,

> No elected official or department head of the executive branch of the state shall hold any other office or position for compensation under the United States, this state, or any political subdivision or agency thereof.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Mahinske just on the Faxon amendment.

MR. MAHINSKE: I notice in the original language of sections 14 and 15 of the executive article that these 2 sections only take into consideration the governor or lieutenant governor. Is it the intent of the maker of the amendment and the committee itself to expand this thought here beyond the lieutenant governor and governor themselves, these 2 offices? I direct that question to anyone who feels they have the answer.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Will you direct your question to a particular person, please.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, I'll start with the maker of the amendment, Mr. Faxon.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Faxon, do you care to answer?

MR. MAHINSKE: The original language of the executive article dealing with dual officeholding deals with the people who are holding the office of governor and lieutenant governor only. Is it your intent by your amendment to expand this concept to other people beyond the governor and lieutenant governor only?

MR. FAXON: Yes. This would, I believe, Mr. Chairman and Mr. Mahinske —

MR. MAHINSKE: Is it your intent to expand this?

MR. FAXON: This would expand it to those people who are elected officials of the state government, plus those officials who are heads of departments. I am saying this in line with the other part of the executive committee report dealing with the organization of state departments, thinking that there are going to be so many departments, and there would be heads of departments.

MR. MAHINSKE: There is one additional point that comes into play here, either under your amendment or the committee proposal. The original language of the 1908 constitution precludes these people from even being considered for these offices because any votes cast for that will be void. Now, under your language, which goes in line with the committee proposed language, these people, even the ones that you are excluding, could run for these offices and then take their choice of the office that they are holding or the office that they have just won. Do you want these people to be in that kind of a position, where they can run for dual offices and then make a selection as to which office they will sit in?

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Mahinske, I can't at this point give a definite statement as to what are the implications of the section that they have under consideration here because I wasn't thoroughly pleased with the whole thing. But it is my opinion that the conflict which you raise might be taken care of in the form of either an amendment or some instructions to the committee on style and drafting to incorporate that thought. I don't know that it is in there right now. I didn't have an amendment to cover that. I am just trying to cover those people who are heads of departments and elected officials. But I don't believe this type of language should extend itself to all levels of the state government and agencies thereof.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, then I would withhold this question until we get back to the body of the committee proposal.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, Delegate Durst has put in a purported substitute amendment. Will you explain why this is a substitute amendment to be considered at this time?

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, it is a substitute amendment put in by myself and Mr. Downs. I must say he has read Mason's Manual far more than I have and he says we can do it. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Downs to explain this proposed substitute amendment.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I would like to say that my good friend and seat mate, Delegate Durst, convinced me on the substance and apparently I convinced him on the procedure. I hope my advice on the procedure equals his advice on the substance.

The intent of this amendment was to get what is apparently the consensus of the committee, that is, that this would apply to a full time member of the executive branch who does not receive any other full time office, which would prevent the dual officeholding. It would permit, for example, a member of a university faculty who was full time to be a part time advisor, commissioner or a member of some other state employment to be on a part time or nominal commission with the nominal expense of per diem, either the federal government, the state or a local subdivision. This could mean, for example, a local community might want a special tax study commission, and some official may be a comptroller or treasurer or some other full time official to serve on it. I believe that while I talked, the amendment has been drawn up. Could I ask that it be read, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Is it on the wall? The Chair can't see. Will the secretary read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Downs and Durst offer the following substitute amendment for the amendment of Mr. Faxon:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "No" by inserting "full time"; and in line 7, after "other" by inserting "full time"; so the language would then read:

No full time member of the executive branch of the state shall hold any other full time office or position for compensation under the United States, this state, or any political subdivision or agency thereof.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: You know what the Faxon amendment is, Mr. Downs?

MR. DOWNS: Yes. I think this is clearer than the Faxon amendment. I think that probably both aim at the same thing and I think, though, that this is properly a substitute because it covers the same subject matter. I think it is a little clearer than Delegate Faxon's amendment and does achieve the same objective in a little clearer language.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Faxon, do you want to accept that?

MR. FAXON: I'd like to ask Mr. Downs a question through the Chair.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: All right.

MR. FAXON: Is it the intent of this amendment to leave to the legislature a definition as to what a full time employee is, or is there some way of knowing that what is full time today will be full time 10 years or 20 years or 50 years from today?

MR. DOWNS: I suppose that the answer as a rule of reason is, certainly if the legislature wished to make a reasonable construction of that, it certainly would be consistent. The intent would be to permit a full time teacher, state official or professor to serve on a part time or temporary commission or on a school board without needing to give up the position.

MR. FAXON: Yes. Now through the Chair, would a person who, say, serves on a school board — they are a school board member full time, they're not a school board member just when they are sitting as a school board, they are a school board member at all times. Now, would this in any way involve a definition, a court decision of "full time"? That is, is full time just if you are getting paid for a 40 hour week — a 40 hour week I can understand — but in the case of where you hold a position and you are paid so much per week, even though you are in that position all throughout the week, your meetings may vary, or say in the case where you are on a commission, you are always a commissioner. In a sense you are as full time a commissioner as anybody else is a full time commissioner. Do you see the problem I am getting at?

MR. DOWNS: Of course — I'm sorry. Were you through with the question, Mr. Faxon?

MR. FAXON: Yes.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I think the question is very well taken. The intent here — I believe I am speaking for Delegate Durst and myself — was that "full time" referred to the individual's full time activity and not to the fact that somebody might be on a school board that met once a month maybe 10 months a year. While he was a permanent member of that board, the functions of that board were temporary from a time nature. So I think that the term "full time" — the intent was to think of a full time occupation so that the one individual would not be, as one of the other delegates said, moonlighting and having 2 full time jobs. Perhaps we could say if there is any further question, this could be worked on at second reading. But I do feel this is a clarification consistent with the intent of the expression of the delegates this afternoon.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Faxon, do you accept that as a substitute?

MR. FAXON: Well, I just want to respond this way, Mr. Chairman: it seems to me that we are getting into a problem as to the definition of "full time". I understand Mr. Downs' position in saying that a person who is engaged full time in a job, but at the same time, I am thinking of where situations may change. Some people manage to get in an awful lot in their time. They may get in a 16 hour day, working at not necessarily 2 full jobs but their concept of time — what is to them a full time devotion to a job — may be different. I don't know that the use of the words "full time" is a constitutional definitive statement of intent. My amendment, it seems to me, would restrict this specifically to certain people where this tends to get into many gray areas of commissions, agencies, boards of supervisors, various areas of local government where there may be some conflict insofar as interpretation is concerned as to what constitutes a full time employee or not a full time employee. This is what I was attempting to eliminate by putting in the amendment that I did. So I would like to see them both voted upon.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Then you do not accept this substitute amendment?

MR. FAXON: No, I don't.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Just a moment. You are way down on the list, Mr. Martin. (laughter) The Chair will recognize Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, I want to pursue further, in opposition to the amendment and the committee report, what Mr. Mahinske raised. It seems to me by the elimination of these 2 sections, 14 and 15 especially, in the constitution, whether by the original committee report or by the Faxon amendment, would open the door to something which I don't think we want to open the door to and I don't think the committee intended. I submit that by doing this, by passing this proposal, you would permit a governor to be a nonpaid mayor of a city. That has been passed upon by the supreme court and they held that the 2 offices were incompatible. Now, if that is what is intended by the committee and by Mr. Faxon in his amendment to the committee report, then I question whether it is advisable for us to go that far. I only call your attention to the fact that the governor has the constitutional authority to remove from office a mayor of a city or many other officials. I think it would be a very dangerous practice.

I think here is another situation where perhaps this matter ought to be deferred. I will not offer the amendment but I would suggest that it may be well to do this because I don't think it is good practice on our part to eliminate sections 14 and 15 of the present constitution unless you intend to make certain offices compatible which have heretofore been incompatible.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question, of course, is on the substitute amendment. The Chair will recognize Dr. Pollock. Is the substitute amendment up on the wall or not? Can we get it up there?

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I asked for recognition on the committee proposal and there have been several things intervene in between. I have nothing to say on this amendment. I'd like to be recognized, though, on the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Yes, sir. Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, as I understood it, Mr. Faxon did not agree to the substitute. I am wondering therefore, if the Faxon amendment is not now before us.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question before us is on the substitute. We vote on the substitute and then we vote on the Faxon amendment. The Chair thought if we could get them combined, it would relieve a vote but we couldn't get them combined. The Chair will recognize Delegate Wanger. Is this on the substitute amendment?

MR. WANGER: Yes, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Martin was seeking recognition, I believe, on this point. If he desires to speak on it, I would yield to him at this time.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, on Mr. Iverson's point, sections 14 and 15 don't do anything to prevent the governor from also being the unpaid mayor of a city, as far as I can determine. They don't apply to that particular situation. So that I don't think the raising of that question is a basis for voting no on the committee proposal and voting not to exclude these 2 sections.

The principal objection which we have to Mr. Faxon's amendment is that it is altogether too broad, and the substitute which has been offered by Mr. Durst and Mr. Downs, modifies the committee proposal in a form which I think would be acceptable to the committee in that it clarifies the character of the 2 types of jobs which we want to prevent people from holding. But we don't want to limit this just to elected officials or heads of departments. We want it to apply to all full time state employees who might otherwise, without this provision, hold full time paid jobs somewhere else. We don't think that that is in any way desirable or proper. So I would favor the substitute amendment. I would not favor Mr. Faxon's original amendment. Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, may I answer?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: You may answer.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Let's get this thing in order here. There are several people here. You didn't ask any question, did you?

MR. MARTIN: No, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: You wait and the Chair will put you down on the list.

MR. IVERSON: Just don't forget me.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Wanger, you waived to the chairman.

MR. WANGER: I yielded to him.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: He was on the list and you took him out of order. The Chair will put you down after Mr. Iverson. (laughter)

The Chair will recognize Delegate Madar.

MR. WANGER: May I make point of inquiry as to procedure then, Mr. Chairman? A parliamentary inquiry?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: All right. What is it?

MR. WANGER: What form of words should one use when one wants to make it clear that he is yielding to a person but does not wish to give up his right to the floor?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Wanger, Mr. Martin was on the list. The Chair told you he was way down on the list. So you waived your position on the list and you go down to where Mr. Martin was.

MR. WANGER: I won't object to that. I only wanted to know — what I intended to do was —

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, we are now on the substitute amendment but I wanted to speak to the original proposal by the commiteee. So I would like to be placed on the list for that.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: All right. The Chair will recognize Delegate Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, may I ask Mr. Martin a question?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Is this on the substitute amendment?

MR. STEVENS: It's on the whole thing.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Can you confine it to the substitute amendment?

MR. STEVENS: Well, I can't vote on the substitute or amendment if I don't know what the —

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: State your question.

MR. STEVENS: The question is quite simple: does this intend, by implication or otherwise, to affect the present law of incompatibility of office? It would seem to me that they are concerned only with moonlighting, not with incompatibility. Is that a proper question?

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, in answer to Mr. Stevens' question, I think the general law with respect to incompatibility of positions would not be affected by this at all. That is, if the courts were to hold that a governor who was also trying to hold a mayor's job which was unpaid, I think the court would certainly be able to hold that those 2 positions were incompatible, regardless of this provision. This provision relates to people holding full time jobs for compensation.

MR. STEVENS: Thank you, Mr. Martin. You answered my question.

MR. MARTIN: I appreciate that question because I think it clarifies the point. There are 2 different situations here, one where someone is holding 2 jobs which are incompatible with each other as the law has defined it. The other, where they are holding 2 jobs for pay. We want to say you can't hold a full time state job for pay and a full time job for some other organization in government.

MR. STEVENS: This is not then, as I take it, intended by implication to affect the present rule of incompatibility?

MR. MARTIN: That's correct, Mr. Stevens. It does not.

MR. STEVENS: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate William Hanna. Delegate Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would like to direct this question through the Chair to either Mr. Downs, Durst or Martin.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Which one?

MR. MAHINSKE: Preferably Mr. Durst.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: All right, Mr. Durst, if he cares to answer.

MR. MAHINSKE: In this order, it seems to me we are broadening the whole area here as set down in sections 14 and 15. Now, my specific question is, why? Are there any kinds of examples that you had in mind why you want to cut dual officeholding in the executive branch beyond the 2 top executive officers of the state?

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Mahinske, I don't believe that it came to the attention of the committee that we had any specific abuses in mind when we drafted this. It just seems to be good constitutional practice to provide that members working for the state executive branch do not hold other jobs for compensation with other agencies and therefore, have a conflict of interest in their jobs. You are correct that we have broadened in the original committee proposal the concept contained in sections 14 and 15. However, I think that the addition of the words "full time" in both places in the committee proposal sufficiently limits that we'll have no trouble with the provision in the future and it will prevent the most flagrant cases where a person is holding 2 full time jobs.

MR. MAHINSKE: Now, this brings to mind one other question that I would like to ask with reference to full time. Would a school teacher be precluded from serving on a commission which is a short lived commission during the summer on a full time basis?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Durst.

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Mahinske, of course, any term you use in the constitution is subject to interpretation at a later date. It would not be my understanding, and I am sure it is not Mr. Downs' that you interpret "full time" in this way. When we use the term "full time" we mean 2 jobs that are full time simultaneously and, therefore, conflicting with one another.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, a school teacher's job — by way of explanation here, as I understand it — is a full time job. Maybe Miss Hart could straighten me out on this. On a contract basis, a teacher is employed on a full time basis. But during the summer, from June to September, when they are not serving in their school teacher capacity, would it be possible, even though they are still under contract, still receiving their pay checks, depending on their option as to how they receive their pay, would it be possible for a school teacher during this interim period to serve on a full time basis on any executive commission?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Are you addressing your question to somebody?

MR. MAHINSKE: Anyone that cares to answer it.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Address it through the Chair and name whom you want to answer it and the Chair will see that they have a chance. Mr. Lundgren.

MR. LUNDGREN: Mr. Chairman, point of information. I wonder if we're wandering quite afar when we're talking about school teachers, when the whole provision states the executive branch of the government. I don't know how school teachers got into this.

MR. MAHINSKE: Well, by way of explanation through the Chair here, I think this sentence means as much when you read it backwards as when you read it forward. (laughter) A school teacher could be an employee of a political subdivision of the state. Now, what are we talking about? The school teacher that starts off as a full time member of the executive department or a full time member of the subdivision of the state? I just wonder if this works in reverse here or if we're starting from the top and working down.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Confine yourself to the amendment and direct your question to a specific delegate.

MR. MAHINSKE: Either Mr. Downs, Durst or Marshall.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Which one, so we'll know.

MR. MAHINSKE: Start with Durst again. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Durst.

MR. DURST: You must think I give the worst answers. (laughter) The only thing I can say, Mr. Mahinske, is the same thing. It would be my understanding that we are referring to 2 simultaneous jobs that are in conflict and I would not think that the teacher who works 9 months out of the year would be prohibited from working for the state for the 3 months during the summer at a full time job.

MR. MAHINSKE: I have no further questions.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Iverson. Delegate Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Pass.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Perras.

MR. PERRAS: I would like to address this question to Mr. Durst or anyone who would like to answer it. Mr. Mahinske brought out a point on school teachers. Now, some school teachers work only 9 months a year but they draw their salary for 12. It's spread over 12 months. Now, if it is spread over 12 months, they are being paid 12 full months. Now where are we?

MR. DURST: Mr. Downs suggests we say "full time as defined by law."

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, do you want me to answer that question?

MR. DURST: I yield to Mr. Stevens. (laughter)

MR. STEVENS: The usual customary practice in Michigan is that school teachers are hired for 9 or 10 school months, 40 weeks. They do not get paid during the summer as some people think. In some systems, instead of paying them each school month, they cut down the amount into 1/12 of the annual salary, and spread it over the year. But they are still not being paid for the summer months when they are not teaching. That is a matter of fact. That's what they do. You don't need any attorney general's opinion. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the substitute amendment. Will the secretary read.

SECRETARY CHASE: The substitute amendment offered by Messrs. Downs and Durst is as follows:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For full text, see above, page 1727.]

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I'll pick on Mr. Durst, like everybody else. A question through the Chair, if I may.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Durst, if you care to answer.

MISS DONNELLY: The problem seems to me that right now this amendment is going after the term "for compensation." In an attempt to define this you are going into the money argument, not compatibility of office argument. Is that not true?

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, Miss Donnelly, I think essentially that is true.

MISS DONNELLY: May I ask you this question then through the Chair? Do you feel the compatibility of office is not important?

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, it may be important, but I don't feel that we intended to cover the problem with this section.

MISS DONNELLY: Through the Chair again, may I ask another question? If you weren't going to handle it through this section, where were you going to handle it — as a member of the committee, I mean.

MR. DURST: Mr. Chairman, Miss Donnelly, I don't know as we did necessarily handle it but on the point I will yield to Mr. Martin, if he wants to fill us in. (laughter)

MR. MARTIN: This proposal doesn't deal with incompatibility and we didn't try to propose a section that would. It is my understanding that the doctrine of incompatibility is essentially a common law doctrine and that where 2 offices are clearly in conflict, the courts have traditionally held that they couldn't be held by the same person at the same time. Now, if someone wants to—

MISS DONNELLY: I'm sorry. I can hardly hear you. I can't hear you.

MR. MARTIN: I don't want to complicate anything further but if someone wants to add something about incompatibility, I don't think we would object. But this did not propose to deal with the problem of incompatibility, which I think is a matter of common law definition, that is, where 2 offices clearly conflict, the courts have traditionally held that a person cannot hold both of them at the same time. I don't think we need to deal with it in the constitution.

MISS DONNELLY: Through the Chair again, this is your conclusion or the conclusion of your committee, that compatibility should not be dealt with in the constitution?

MR. MARTIN: I say the committee didn't consider a proposal with respect to incompatibility. There was slight discussion of it but we did not consider that it was necessary.

MISS DONNELLY: Through the Chair again, you mean where it says "shall hold any other office" does not deal with compatibility in section 15?

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, Miss Donnelly, if we are getting into section 15, some further definition or explanation is necessary because we had intended to deal with that on the exclusion report. I will only say that that section was primarily designed to prevent the governor or lieutenant governor from being appointed United States senator. That was the principal purpose of that and that purpose has disappeared because United States senators have to be popularly elected today. That's the reason why we think that section 15 has no real bearing today and is not needed.

MISS DONNELLY: I believe that compatibility is a vital thing for us to cover in this constitution, particularly since earlier we struck out the retention of the words "common law" in our constitution. Therefore, on the basis of that and the fact that none of these amendments are going to that aspect; they are just going to the monetary, which I do not believe is broad enough, I would be opposed to all of the amendments and to the committee proposal too.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Leppien.

MR. LEPPIEN: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I am sure from the discussion we have had on the proposal before us, it is very evident to most of us that attempting to bring this to a resolve cannot be accomplished on this floor at this time. I therefore move that this proposal be placed at the end of the calendar on executive branch and the committee might come up with some language that should be clear.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the motion to put this Committee Proposal 48 at the foot of the executive branch calendar. Any discussion? If not, all in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, at this time, if the chairman of the committee would wish to make a motion that the committee arise, I'd be happy to yield to him. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, that is what I am proposing to do. I move that the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the motion that the committee rise. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration several proposals, of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 70, A proposal to revise provisions of section 36 of article V regarding the veto power of the governor; and Committee Proposal 75, A proposal to provide for compensation of state officers; reports these 2 proposals back to the convention without amendment and with the recommendation that they do pass.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Committee Proposals 70 and 75 are referred to the committee on style and drafting.

For Committee Proposal 70 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 1717.

For Committee Proposal 75 as referred to the committee on style and drafting, see above, page 1720.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole, Mr. President, has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 72 and Committee Proposal 48 and the committee has placed these 2 committee proposals at the foot of the general orders calendar of the committee on executive branch. This completes the report of the committee of the whole, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. DeVries wishes to be excused from the evening session to attend a meeting in Ann Arbor this evening.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection he will be excused. The Chair recognizes Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. President, I move we recess until 8:00 o'clock.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion that we recess. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

We are recessed until 8:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 6:05 o'clock p.m., the convention recessed; and, at 8:00 o'clock p.m., reconvened.]

The convention will come to order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Mr. Habermehl has filed with the secretary a request to be excused from the remainder of today's session.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, he will be excused.

The Chair recognizes Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of taking up matters upon the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Millard. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Millard.

[Whereupon, Mr. Millard assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The committee will be in order. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: The next item on the general orders calendar from the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Exclusion Report 2027, A report recommending the exclusion of article VI, sections 14 and 15.

Following is Exclusion Report 2027 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee on executive branch recommends that article VI, sections 14 and 15 of the present constitution be excluded from the new constitution.

Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Exclusion Report 2027:

Sections 14 and 15 of article VI were amalgamated in Committee Proposal 48.

This exclusion report is a substitute for Exclusion Reports 2001 and 2002.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: This exclusion report relates to the 2 sections which are tied into the matter we were discussing last and which we moved to the end of the calendar. Since this is intimately related to that, I believe this should also be moved to the end of this executive branch calendar so it can be considered when the item that precedes it, Committee Proposal 48, is considered. I would so move, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Motion has been made by Mr. Martin that the Exclusion Report 2027 be moved to the foot of the executive branch calendar. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 8 on the calendar, from the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 74, A proposal to provide by law for the administration of claims against the state, escheats and escheated property, and the investment of state funds. Revises article VI, section 20.

Following is Committee Proposal 74 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. EXAMINATION AND ADJUSTMENT OF CLAIMS AGAINST THE STATE, PROCEDURES RELATING TO ESCHEATS AND TO THE CUSTODY AND DISPOSITION OF ESCHEATED PROPERTY, AND THE INVESTMENT OF STATE FUNDS SHALL BE AS PROVIDED FOR BY LAW.

Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 74:

The existence of an ex officio board of elected state officials (secretary of state, state treasurer, and by law, the superintendent of public instruction) was not deemed necessary for the execution of the functions required to be performed by the current provisions of article VI, section 20.

The officials no longer meet as a board of state auditors, these functions having been imposed by law on the state administrative board and on the department of administration. The same is true of the board of fund commissioners, the investment of state funds now being controlled in detail by statute and administered by the investment division of the state treasurer's office. Similarly, statutes exist governing the examination and adjustment of claims against the state. The major remaining duty to act as a board of escheats does not appear essential to the effective administration of law controlling escheats and the custody and disposition of escheated property.

The committee proposal deals with the 3 major functions:

1) Claims against the state;

2) Escheats and escheated property; and

3) Investment of state funds — by which is meant the long or short term investments of state treasury moneys, or of pension, retirement and other like funds of a trust or custodial nature, but which is not intended to include investment of university funds.

The proposal would leave the legal details and administration of these 3 functions in the hands of the legislature, and in effect abolishes the ex officio board of state elected officials now required by article VI, section 20.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I yield on this to Mr. Karn to discuss the details of this proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Karn.

MR. KARN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, we would like to bring to your attention some of the reasons in support of the Committee Proposal 74.

[The reasons were read by Mr. Karn. For text, see above.]

I yield to Mr. Martin.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: We have no other comments on this, Mr. Chairman unless there are amendments. In substance, the proposal is to modify the present provisions of the constitution in line with our present practice and all of these various functions either are no longer being dealt with by the boards which are established in the constitution or can be dealt with as in the case of escheats by other portions of the state government more efficiently.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, through the Chair I would like to ask Mr. Karn a question, if I may.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Karn, do you care to answer?

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Karn, could you explain the different effect between having this provision in the constitution and having it out in view of the fact that, as I gather, all it says is that these things shall be as provided by law. I assume that it could be that way without the constitution.

MR. KARN: Well, Mr. Nord, you're an attorney. You probably can answer that question better than I can as a layman. It was felt, however, that it should be in the constitution in order that these 3 items that we cover here would certainly be covered. This section does improve some of the items that are no longer in use. They have passed out of existence and there is no need for a continuation. But it was thought by the committee that we should leave this section as it is in the hands of the legislature just so that there is an assurance that they will be covered. You might be right, however.

MR. NORD: Thank you, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Karn.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: I have nothing further, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: I have a question.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Karn, if you care to answer.

MR. OSTROW: Mr. Karn, I am directing your attention to the last line, ". . . the investment of state funds shall be as provided for by law," under which, I take it, any way the legislature provides for investing of funds will be constitutional. Is that correct?

MR. KARN: Constitutional in that the provision is made here for them to be provided by the legislature or by law.

MR. OSTROW: In Committee Proposal 37 of the finance and taxation committee, there are certain restrictions on the investment of state funds. This would seem to be in conflict with Committee Proposal 37. Committee Proposal 37 provides that the state cannot subscribe to nor be interested in the stock of any company, association or corporation. That was intended, I think, to prohibit the investment in ordinary corporations. It also provides that endowment funds created for charitable or educational purposes may be invested as provided by law governing the investment of funds held in trust by trustees, which is less than a full power. How do you propose to reconcile these 2?

MR. KARN: Well, I'm not sure that I can reconcile them, as far as that's concerned, Mr. Ostrow. It is my understanding that the type of funds are different as dealt with here than as dealt with in the article that you suggest. In these funds, true, there is some state treasury money, there are pension or retirement funds, but they are moneys and funds that have been operative in the past under section 20 of article VI, which is a board of state auditors, escheats and fund commissioners. I think there is — and I can't tell you, Mr. Ostrow, the exact difference — but I think there is a difference between the funds that are involved here.

MR. OSTROW: Well, then shouldn't this specify that this is limited to escheated funds or whatever limited funds that you had in mind?

MR. KARN: These are not only escheated funds.

MR. OSTROW: Then is this going to supercede Committee Proposal 37?

MR. KARN: Not as far as I know. Perhaps Mr. Martin can cover that better than I can because I am not familiar at the moment with Committee Proposal 37.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: If I might attempt to answer Mr. Ostrow's question, the section 20, article VI, for which this is a substitute, simply provides for a board of fund commissioners and provides that they shall perform such other duties as may be prescribed by law. There is nothing specified there and the legislature set up all of the responsibilities of the board of fund commissioners who had at that point the responsibility for investment of state funds. They provide for that by law. So all we have done is to say the same thing in effect, that the legislature shall provide by law for the investment of state funds without specific reference or without inclusion of a board of fund commissioners. We haven't enlarged the responsibility any. If you are concerned about this, however, I think the committee would have no objection to adding after "as provided for by law" the words "and by this constitution."

MR. OSTROW: I would feel happier if you did.

MR. MARTIN: Well, Mr. Chairman, is it possible for us to add this by oral amendment here?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: There is no objection to that that I can see.

MR. MARTIN: It would then read; ". . . the investment of state funds shall be as provided for by law and by this constitution," which would cover the other constitutional provision. I believe there is no conflict.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: What are you arguing on?

MR. CUDLIP: I want to be recognized, Mr. Chairman, when my turn comes.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: All right, the Chair put you down. The Chair will recognize Mr. Austin at this time.

MR. AUSTIN: Mr. Chairman, I should probably thank Mr. Cudlip for yielding the floor as easily as he did. I think I have a feeling as to what he was going to comment on.

I agree with Mr. Martin that if we are going to have this provision in the constitution, we should add after "as provided by law" the words "and by this constitution" or "subject to the restrictions in this constitution" because of the language we have in section d of Committee Proposal 37. Section d reads, "The state shall not subscribe to, nor be interested in the stock of any company, association or corporation. . . ." Then, of course, it goes on to list some exceptions. My personal feeling is, though, that it would be better to just leave this last part out of the constitution. I don't think we need it. I don't think we need to say "and the investment of state funds shall be as provided for by law or by this constitution" because it has already provided for the investment of state funds. If it is going to be left in, it would be better to add "and by this constitution" and we could just as easily leave it out.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: I wanted to make the same point, that it should be left out.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: The same point.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The secretary requires a written amendment, so if you will prepare it. Mr. Cudlip, you're up now.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman and members, I want to apologize for taking the microphone as I did. I am not aware of this system whereby people get on the list by just raising your hand. I can't follow that, especially in the rear. I just want to say that I agree with Mr. Austin and I am not sure that the amendment which Mr. Martin suggests is proper because then we are just double tracking. Either this section should be confined to escheated funds and we're talking about that and nothing else, or it should be left out. The section that it replaces does not talk at all about the investment of any state funds by any body. I think this is very important to avoid this lack of harmony. It seems to me, as I said, it should be confined to these funds; the legislature can do as they please with these funds, the investment thereof, or leave it out, because there is a conflict today, as has been pointed out by the preceding speaker. And I don't think, to repeat, that putting language in, "except as otherwise provided in this constitution" does anything to the constitutional language. I know in the style and drafting committee that is what we are concerned with and we just have to do something about it if you want good, clear language. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Thank you, ladies and gentlemen.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the problem is that this investment of state funds with which the board of fund commissioners was entrusted is much broader than escheated funds. It doesn't relate just to escheated funds. It relates to other funds which they had the responsibility for. I think that we are talking about something here that is essentially a problem for style and drafting. These are 2 sections which are going to need some correlation and it seems to me if this is amended to make clear the purpose of the committee and the convention by adding the words "by this constitution" and then this passes on to style and drafting, if it is necessary to bring these 2 together, they can do that. But I think we are spending unnecessary time here in trying to argue over these differences.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Secretary, are there any amendments on the desk to this committee proposal?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. G. E. Brown, Brake and Austin offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "property" by striking out the comma and "and the investment of state funds"; so that the language would then read:

> Examination and adjustment of claims against the state, procedures relating to escheats and to the custody and disposition of escheated property shall be as provided for by law.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the first proposer, Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, with all that has been said here, I think the amendment speaks for itself.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, would the secretary read that again. Did it read "the disposition of escheated funds" or "disposition of escheated property?"

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment is:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above.]

MR. MARTIN: If Mr. Brake will assure me that his section fully covers the problem of investment of state funds, I am perfectly willing to go along with this amendment. Otherwise, I think it should be in here.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Brake to answer Mr. Martin's question.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, section d of Committee Proposal 37 tells you what you may not do in the way of investing state funds. I think that is all that is necessary.

Beyond that, the legislature has all the power that there is and you are not giving them any more power with this clause that you have in and I think that it is confusing to have the investment referred to in 2 different places.

MR. MARTIN: In the light of that explanation, Mr. Chairman, I think the committee would be willing to go along with this last amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Will the secretary read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment is:

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Brown amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted. Are there any further amendments, Mr. Secretary?

SECRETARY CHASE: There is only one on the desk.

Miss Donnelly offers the following amendment to Committee Proposal 74:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, by striking out all of the proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Miss Donnelly, the proposer of this amendment.

MISS DONNELLY: As I have listened to the argument of the proposers of this committee proposal, to me the language does nothing for us except give us some extra words in the constitution. If the constitution is silent on the subject, obviously the legislature will have it. This proposal sets forth that these things shall be as provided by law. If the constitution is silent on the subject, that is how they will be. The constitution will restrict the legislature.

Again we go back to our original rule when we got here—what does the constitution do? This language does nothing. It may have historical interest about what they did with the group who sat on this board but they'll find that in reading the message to the people as we put it forth for the constitution to be adopted. This language gives the legislature no power it hasn't got. It doesn't restrict the legislature in any way. It is just words for no effectual purpose. It is mere surplusage to the whole proposal. I can see that when they took section 20 out and they changed it, they wanted to do something, which in effect by leaving it silent, they've done the same thing as they are by saying what they did. Therefore, I think there is no need for extra words to the constitution. I recommend that the entire section be deleted.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, there are a lot of things that we have put into the constitution that the legislature probably can do if we say nothing about it. But we were taking out a rather important provision with respect to the board of state auditors and with respect to the board of escheats and the board of fund commissioners and we felt that it was important for those who might have claims against the state and for those who had matters relating to escheats, to know where the jurisdiction had gone to and what disposition had been made with it. And that is the purpose of this section. It doesn't give additional authority to the legislature but it does clearly indicate what has happened to this provision of the constitution and we thought that was better than to simply strike the provision and leave the matter in the air as to matter of escheats and claims against the state. For that reason, I oppose the amendment. I hope that the delegates will go along with the committee on it.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: If Mr. Martin would answer a few questions through the Chair, I would like to ask him: if they want the people to know where it went to, don't you feel the message to the people will tell them where it went to? Or don't you feel the problem of those in between will be handled in the schedule? And this is in for a historical point, as far as I can see, Mr. Martin, and not to accomplish a purpose. From all your argument, I don't see what you are going to accomplish except for historical interest to people. Isn't this true?

MR. MARTIN: It isn't purely a matter of historical interest. It is a matter of what do people do and what are their rights in relation to both escheats, which goes far, far back into our history, and many of which have been pending for long periods of time and the same thing with respect to claims on a shorter time basis. All I can say is it was the belief of the committee that it was better to make a statement on the subject than to simply leave it in the air. Now, this is a matter of judgment and the committee's judgment was that it was desirable to do that. I can't give you any further explanation than that.

MISS DONNELLY: May I ask him another question through the Chair, if he is interested? You said escheats goes far back into history. I believe there's a lot of statutory language as to who will handle it and how it is handled, how much publication you have to do, how you get it back. But it is all statutory.

MR. MARTIN: I mean by that, Miss Donnelly, that many questions of escheats are long pending matters to the extent that the escheat isn't final for a substantial period of time and even then I believe if the person whose property is escheated shows up, he can be reimbursed or repaid. There are some complicated legal questions here. It seemed better to clarify them in this way than to simply strike the provision and leave the people whose rights are involved to wonder what happened or to some uncertainty about what had happened here.

MISS DONNELLY: Through the Chair again, Mr. Martin, aren't you going back to the statute on escheats then? You are arguing the statutory methods. I'll agree with you, they are very well set up, the people can always get it back, it will never be as firmly escheated. But you are preserving constitutional language for statutory.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, Miss Donnelly, there is no question but what it goes back to the statute on escheats and it also goes back to the constitutional provision on the board of escheats. You can strike it if you want to, but it leaves people in further doubt about what has happened to their rights and we are trying to give them a bridge here so they will know what happened to their rights.

MISS DONNELLY: Well, for the reason that I believe we can tell them what happened to their rights by a message to the people and anything in between would be handled in the schedule, I would suggest that we strike the whole language as unnecessary at this time for the constitution, if we want it to last for 50 years.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Detroit, Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I would like to state that I support the amendment offered by Miss Donnelly. This, of course, goes right back to the question I asked before and the answer that was given leaves me at the same point as it left Miss Donnelly, that there is no useful purpose to the language here and I would say that that is especially true now that we have stricken the words "and the investment of state funds." When those words, "and the investment of state funds," were in here, apparently then there was a difference between removing entirely the section 20 of article VI on the one hand and putting this one in, and the difference was that this section before us related to the investment of state funds. Therefore, the section before us, as it was originally written, would not be equivalent let's say to an exclusion report relating to section 20 of article VI of the present constitution. But with those words stricken, "and the investment of state funds," which we have now done, now what we have is language which serves no purpose, as has been pointed out. It does nothing more than what an exclusion report would do. It simply says that whatever was in section 20 before about escheats is no longer in there. Therefore, we have a standard procedure for informing the public of why we have taken something out of the constitution, and that is not just by the report to the people, but also by exclusion reports which were printed in the journal.

I also would like to point out that as I see the section as it now stands before us, it has no effect unless the legislature does something because it says it "shall be as provided for by law." If the legislature doesn't do anything, then this section won't come into effect; it is inoperative. If the legislature does do something, then the person who wants to know about escheats will have to look to the statute. Therefore, in any event, the only place he can ever look to find the answer to the question about escheats will be in the statute. So there will be no answer provided in the constitution. In any event, while this, of course, is not a very important point one way or another, it seems to me on the whole that there is no point in putting something in the constitution which has no legal effect but simply confuses people and slows down anyone reading the constitution to the point where they are not quite clear as to what everything means. Therefore, I support the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, I think we are on the amendment but this might also apply to the committee proposal. If you strike the language as provided by the amendment or adopt the committee proposal, I'd like to ask this question: is it intended to also strike the language or the right of an individual citizen of the state under this language, "they shall examine and adjust all claims against the state not otherwise provided for by general law?" I presume this question ought to be directed to Mr. Martin. Is it intended that no claim shall be presented against the state except those authorized by general law?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin, if you care to answer.

MR. MARTIN: That in general is true, Mr. Iverson. In the adjustment of claims against the state, as you know, the state has a certain immunity to suits and the legislature has made some provision with respect to claims against the state, including setting up a court of claims and the provision that the state administrative board shall have certain responsibilities with respect to the settlement of small claims. I am not sure that I am answering your question but maybe if you will state it again, I'll —

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, I'm not sure that you are either. But if you adopt the language of the committee report, aren't you in effect saying that if the legislature desired to provide that no claim shall be filed against the state, nor passed on by the board of auditors or the administrative board, they'd have a perfect right to do it under this provision?

MR. MARTIN: Yes, sir, that's right. I think they have the authority to determine what immunity shall be waived there.

MR. IVERSON: So it was the intention of the committee to eliminate the language which I referred to in the present section 20?

MR. MARTIN: Yes, that's right.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I'd like to address a question through the Chair to Miss Donnelly.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Miss Donnelly, if you care to answer.

MR. G. E. BROWN: I would like to ask Miss Donnelly, Mr. Chairman, as to what the fundamental basis is for the idea of escheats, if this power should be in the legislature in the absence of such a provision as this. As I recall the idea, the concept of escheats was a concept and a privilege of the crown, as it developed in our common law. Now then, if we don't have this provision, what would preclude that from being the case?

MISS DONNELLY: I'm sorry, but I don't think your question is very succinct. Could you rephrase it? If you want to know what my thought of escheats is, if we want to go into that, that's one question. The next question is what the provision has to say about escheats and the right of the sovereign and the crown — could you give me a more specific —

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, Miss Donnelly, why wouldn't the executive have this authority?

MISS DONNELLY: Why would the executive have this authority?

MR. G. E. BROWN: Why wouldn't the executive have this authority without this provision?

MISS DONNELLY: I don't believe this gives permission to the legislature to escheat the property forever to the state either. In my opinion, this doesn't give them anything specifically except everything. In other words, it doesn't say they can put it to the crown or not to the crown. This doesn't say that it will go back to the people, then after 7 years it will go from the people to them; it doesn't say that after due notice and what have you, all the things one goes through statutorily to get back your property that has been escheated, this doesn't cover that either. So I don't know how your question relates to where this should or shouldn't be. This doesn't say the property shall eventually escheat and never come back. And that is what I think you want, something to say.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, Miss Donnelly, all that I attempted to point out is that this section provides for the procedures relating to escheats and to the custody and disposition of escheated property. This says the legislature shall provide; otherwise, the authority is in the legislature to provide by law as to how escheated property shall be handled. And the procedure is relating to escheats. In the absence of this, what would be the law? Where would you stop the executive from treating echeated property as it cared to?

MISS DONNELLY: What would prevent it, in the absence of this, would be a legislature's enactment.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Miss Donnelly —

MISS DONNELLY: If I may ask you a question through the Chair: what now prevents it?

MR. G. E. BROWN: I don't know. That's why I think this is a good section. That's why I think it should not be stricken, Miss Donnelly.

Mr. Chairman, another question of Miss Donnelly: what about the examination and adjustment of claims against the state? Do you think there isn't any necessity for constitutional provision that this shall be as provided by law?

MISS DONNELLY: In answering you, I would say that Mr. Iverson's comment was the most important on this, and that hasn't been answered: those that have not been enacted by the legislature. This section merely says it shall be as provided by law. All it does, it gives these things to the legislature. If there was no constitutional statement, it would rest with the legislature to enact law. If I may ask through the Chair this question: in your opinion, where does the power to enact laws lie?

MR. G. E. BROWN: I assume it's in the legislature, Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: May I ask you this next question —

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, Miss Donnelly —

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Miss Donnelly, Mr. Brown is asking you questions. (laughter) Will you please answer them?

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, Miss Donnelly, if I may further answer your question, as I posed at the original discussion of this question, I said that at common law the idea of escheats, the concept of it — escheat was originally a privilege of the crown. Now, if this is not true, then I'd like to be so advised. If it is true, then I think that we need something to provide that the legislature shall have authority to do something that otherwise it would not have to do, based upon the common law. I will conclude, Mr. Chairman —

MISS DONNELLY: Point of order. I haven't heard the question.

MR. G. E. BROWN: You asked me the question, Miss Donnelly. (laughter) Mr. Chairman, this is not a question. I would also suggest to the members of the committee that, rather than as Miss Donnelly has suggested, possibly it's better to put in the constitution that which we'd like the people to refer to rather than in the address to the people because I'm not too sure that the address to the people will be around as long as the constitution is. I would urge a no vote on the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Delegate Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Iverson and Mr. Martin together have me confused now. Leaving out the matter of escheats, this now reads, "Examination and adjustment of claims against the state . . . shall be as provided for by law." I understood that, Mr. Martin, to be purely a matter of procedure. In case you've got a claim against the state, the legislature shall say how you shall get that adjudicated or determined. Now, in the conversation between you and Mr. Iverson, you seemed to me to be talking about who shall have a claim against the state and the legislature may decide what claims may be brought against the state. Now, which is it, or is it both?

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Brake, certainly the legislature should have the power and does have it, under this proposal, to determine what procedure should be used in connection with claims against the state. As far as whether you have the right to a claim against the state or not, there may be constitutional limitations to what the legislature can do in that regard in so determining, but clearly the legislature, I think, does have some responsibility in that connection insofar as it can waive the immunity which the state has for certain types of claims. So the legislature has an authority there which is somewhat flexible. It may be extended a long way or not at all. Therefore, it does have that authority with respect to what claims can be brought against the state. You can't determine whether a claim exists but you can determine whether it can be enforced or not in certain instances.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, there is no question at all but that the legislature has the power to say what claims are good against the state but it seems to me this language ought to be one way or the other or clearly both, instead of hazy, as it seems to me it is now.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Do you have any further answer, Mr. Martin?

MR. MARTIN: No, I don't have any further answer.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to ask Mr. Martin a couple of questions, if I may.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin, if you care to answer.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Martin, this section first is simply a revision of article VI, section 20 of the 1908 constitution; is that correct?

MR. MARTIN: That's correct, Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Martin, was this placed in the executive article in the prior constitution because it did set up a board and give it constitutional status, to wit, the board of auditors and, to wit, the board of escheats. Is that correct?

MR. MARTIN: I think that's probably correct, yes. It set up 3 different boards, you see.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Martin, section 20 of the 1908 constitution did not pass on the question of whether or not claims could be placed against the state, did it?

MR. MARTIN: Not in this section, no. It doesn't pass on the question of whether a claim can be brought against the state. It simply says that this board shall examine and adjust all claims against the state which are not otherwise provided for by general law.

MR. W. F. HANNA: With regard to escheats, the old section then of 1908 did not specifically define or create the power of escheats?

MR. MARTIN: That's correct.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, is the power of escheats inherent in government itself?

MR. MARTIN: I think Mr. Brown has put his finger clearly on the problem as far as escheats are concerned. I think the power of escheats was at one time a power of the crown and in that respect would be a power of the executive. At least under our system of procedure, escheats has been made an authority of the legislature, and with that authority, the legislature apparently set up the board of escheats.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, another question. Mr. Martin, can the executive exercise any powers not provided in this constitution or by law?

MR. MARTIN: I don't suppose it can, Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, a question to Mr. Martin: then if this power of claims against the state and the power of escheats can be exercised only by an executive arm of the government to the extent that the legislature gives them that power, is this section at all necessary?

MR. MARTIN: I think when you ask what kind of power does the executive have, the executive, I believe, can have some power from the common law as well as from statutory or constitutional provision, and in this case, I think that is probably true.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin, does this section, as you redrafted it, belong in legislative powers or does it belong in the executive branch?

MR. MARTIN: Well, we left that to the committee on style and drafting, Mr. Hanna. We are not concerned with which section it goes into.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman and members of this committee, it seems to me that inherent in our system of republican government, the powers vested in this government are vested in the legislature except as restricted by this constitution. This is a fundamental concept. Now, the whole article attempted to create an administrative agency that would adjust claims and would dispose of escheats and handle the custody and so forth. Now, if we proceed on this theory and we recognize that the legislature has the power to do those things except as restricted by this constitution, then claims against the state are within the province of the legislature without any constitutional recognition that there may be claims against the state. The same applies to escheats. The power to provide for escheated property is within the legislature and unless we say that the escheated property cannot be disposed of or passed upon or provided for by the legislature, they have that power, and therefore, this section, once the committee decides to take away the ex officio nature of the secretary of state, treasurer and other state officers, we need no further power, and they are recognizing a power here which did not exist prior to this time and which has not been necessary up to this time and once they take away the ex officio nature, they can place all of this section 20 of article VI in an exclusion report; and I therefore support the Donnelly amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Dr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose the Donnelly amendment. I believe that the intention of the committee is to provide for a constitutional mandate to the legislature to develop a procedure for the examination and adjustment of claims, escheats and disposition of escheated property. But I do think there is an infirmity in the present language and I believe Mr. Chase has an amendment there, sponsored by Mr. Shackleton and myself, which changes the words from "shall be as provided for by law" to "shall be provided for by law" because I don't think the language here carries forward the intent. As I understand the intent — and I may be wrong; if I am, Mr. Martin can correct me — the legislature shall provide by law for these various contingencies. But the present language is subject to being construed as not being mandatory or directive, but permissive only, and if the legislature does not act, as it may not act with constitutional authority under words such as, "shall be as provided for by law", I think this infirmity would be corrected by making the language just as has been suggested in that amendment. But in order that we might reach that amendment, I think we'd have to vote down the Donnelly amendment.

I don't think that in a matter of this kind, examination and adjustment of claims and escheats, that we ought to leave the matter without direction in the constitution. I think the subject matter calls for that direction. I invite your attention to section 20 of the 1908 constitution as amended, where it is stated that the law shall constitute a board of state auditors. "Shall" is a directive quality to the entire section 20 and I think we ought to carry that forward in this constitution because I think leaving it blank would mean that first of all, the legislature may not provide for them and second, it provides a hiatus in the law which would not be in the public interest. Therefore, I would oppose the Donnelly amendment and ask that we consider favorably the amendment which is now on the desk of the secretary.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Shackleton.

MR. SHACKLETON: Mr. Chairman and delegates, without doubt, as Miss Donnelly said, the legislature could do it but supposing they should repeal the present laws that are on the books. Then the state of Michigan would be left right up in the air. I oppose the Donnelly amendment and support the amendment that Dr. Norris has put in.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Donnelly amendment. Do you wish to be recognized, Miss Donnelly?

MISS DONNELLY: I would just like to point to the fact that now again we can't make up our minds here if we're going to trust the legislature or not trust the legislature on the last 2 points and arguments by the movers of the other amendment. One says we shall tell them to do it because they might not, and the other one says they might not do it and we'll be up in the air if we don't have this. Neither one will cure the problem that they are directing your attention to. Neither in the committee proposal nor any other place is it handled for those not provided by law as the 1908 constitution did.

Now, I submit if we want to preserve things that are not provided by law, we've got to go back to some of the language of the 1908 constitution and the new language doesn't take care of anything or provide for anything in the future. And you can't make the legislature act — we've heard this argument a hundred times — and once again, we're just telling them to do something which they can do. So I oppose the committee proposal and the amendment against mine, and support deleting the whole thing.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: Would you read the amendment again?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair was going to say that the amendments are not on the wall, so will ask the secretary to read the Donnelly amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment is:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above, page 1733.]

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Donnelly amendment. Mr. Mahinske.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would like to direct a question to Miss Donnelly through the Chair.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Miss Donnelly, if you care to answer.

MR. MAHINSKE: If your amendment would succeed, what do you propose to put in its place?

MISS DONNELLY: That's a good question, but it's a dirty one. At this moment, I don't have any amendment to take care of it. (laughter) To me, the deletion does nothing except neat up the constitution by deleting some words that do nothing. The committee proposal does nothing and neither aspect handles the problem that this board wants handled, which was to take care of claims, "They shall examine and adjust all claims against the state not otherwise provided for by general law." Now, they once had the function. Now we've gotten rid of the function. Now we are also going to get rid of — if the other thing passes — we are going to cut these down to 20 different boards. So at this stage of the game, the nature of your question I think is almost to say: how do I rewrite the rest of the article to take care of it? I am not prepared to answer that. I'm just saying this proposal doesn't take care of the problem that I think exists. All my language and all my amendment to strike does is remove some surplusage that gives us nothing. I don't know if that answers your question or not.

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I think the striking of the committee proposal here would leave us up in the air in that under section 20 of the existing article VI the language is to the effect that all claims not otherwise provided for by law shall be handled by the state board of auditors. Now, the court of claims act of 1939 has given most of the jurisdiction to the court of claims but has left the balance of the jurisdiction to the state board of auditors. One of their functions is to respond in garnishee cases where the state is the garnishee defendant. If we strike this and we don't go further and replace the function that the state board of auditors had, I'm afraid that we're going to have areas that are not covered at all with reference to claims against the state. And until we come up with some language that would fill this gap, I would have to be opposed to the amendment.

MISS DONNELLY: May I ask him a question through the Chair? Mr. Mahinske, how does the committee proposal take care of that gap? It just says the legislature shall provide. Isn't that true?

MR. MAHINSKE: Mr. Chairman, the last phrase here "shall be as provided for by law," I think would be interpreted to the extent that all provisions or all statutes on the books as of the adoption of the new constitution or as of today would remain in force. Now, with the function that we have that's left over to the state board of canvassers, I think it is covered — or not canvassers; that's another board that was created here — in the original language of 1908, the state board of canvassers was provided for here and we shifted it over to article V — but the state board of auditors, their function which they have left would be transferred over to actually the legislative department here, if they could provide for this. I believe that striking this whole provision here would strike possibly the court of claims act.

MISS DONNELLY: Mr. Mahinske, through the Chair, I don't see your logic.

MR. MAHINSKE: The court of claims' sole basis for existence is in the present section 20, article VI. Now, if we strike out section 20, article VI, and this proposal, then I don't think there is any constitutional basis for the court of claims act.

MISS DONNELLY: May I ask him a question through the Chair? Does not this language as proposed by the committee look forward, not backward? Does it not look to the future? Now, you're trying to have this language look backward, if I understand your question correctly, to pick up this hiatus. Am I not correct?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Miss Donnelly, the Chair thinks we're getting this turned around. The question is on your amendment to strike and you are asking Mr. Mahinske questions. The Chair thinks you should answer his questions.

MR. MAHINSKE: I would volunteer an answer.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: All right, if you want to.

MR. MAHINSKE: I feel that this looks to the present situation and the future to cover the gap. I think the deletion of this language as proposed by your amendment may conceivably be interpreted — in the absence of something to replace it with better words than this — I think may be interpreted to abolish the present court of claims that is established under the existing section 20.

MISS DONNELLY: Point of order. I gather I am not allowed to ask him a question. It is improper. Is that right? I mean, I'd be happy not to.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If it is material to your amendment and he cares to answer, the Chair will let you go ahead. (laughter)

MISS DONNELLY: I was just going to say I think his premise is erroneous.

MR. MAHINSKE: In response, if we go back to the original language of section 20 of article VI of the 1908 constitution, it calls for a multiplicity of offices; state board of canvassers, state board of auditors, a state land commissioner, and in the event the office of state land commissioner is abolished, it should be replaced and so forth, and I think and I am quite sure that even in your survey study here, you will find that the existence for the present court of claims is based on section 20 of article VI of the existing constitution, wherein it recites that the state board of auditors shall retain those duties that are not designated by the legislature to some other function or other office which has been designated to the court of claims and the balance was left over to the state board of auditors here and I am afraid by striking out the whole language, we may just topple the claims court. For these reasons, in the absence of something to replace this language, I would be opposed to the striking of the language itself.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Donnelly amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no. The Chair is in doubt. The question is on the Donnelly amendment. All those in favor will vote aye and those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Miss Donnelly, the yeas are 31; the nays are 78.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is not adopted. Are there any more amendments?

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Norris and Shackleton offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "shall be" by striking out "as"; so the language will then read, ". . . shall be provided for by law."

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Dr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Shackleton and I have already advanced the reasons in support of this amendment. The main idea is that the language simply be directory and mandatory even though it may not be enforced by mandamus and that it would not leave it open, as well it might be under the present language, for the legislature not to provide by law for these contingencies. Accordingly, we respectfully ask for a favorable vote on this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Iverson.

MR. IVERSON: May I ask Mr. Norris a question?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If Dr. Norris cares to answer.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Norris, do you feel that with your amendment, the provision in section 20 of the present constitution, namely, "They shall examine and adjust all claims against the state not otherwise provided for by general law," would require the legislature to set up some means by which the citizens of the state could have their claims heard against the state which might otherwise not have been provided for by the legislature?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I think that perhaps Mr. Martin might well contribute to an answer to this question; but I would envision that an appropriate body might be set up either by way of a court of claims or some kind of procedure to process these claims in the matter of escheated property. It would have to be some entity to which claims might be directed for a prompt adjudication.

MR. IVERSON: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Norris, I believe presently it is well known that the court of claims act limits the claims which can be heard by them; that presently I believe the administrative board passes upon other claims which are not authorized by the legislature. Would you say — or Mr. Martin say — that those claims that are presently passed upon by the state administrative board could not under this language then be passed upon by anybody?

MR. NORRIS: I am not certain that I have the precise knowledge with which to answer the question. All that the import of this amendment suggests is that the legislature shall proceed, take appropriate steps to deal with this matter in view of the fact that section 20 would be eliminated.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I see no objection to this amendment. It makes it a little more clear that the legislature should act and fill whatever gap is created by the abolition of these 3 boards. I think that is desirable.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Detroit, Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: Mr. Martin says he sees no objection to this. I see a necessity for this, from having read the supreme court cases which will remind most lawyers of principles that, especially in this convention, we have forgotten. Without language such as this, there is no way to enforce a claim against the state. In this particular case, Missouri Tile and Lumber vs. Sullivan, 275 Michigan 29, there is a statute that permits the state to be garnisheed as a garnishee defendant. In this particular case, the state failed to make a disclosure and a judgment and garnishment was rendered against the state of Michigan. The court then points out that although you have a judgment against the state of Michigan, all that amounts to is a liquidation of the claim. You cannot get an execution against the state of Michigan; you cannot garnishee any of the state funds; and unless you have either a board of auditors or any administrative board or court of claims to which you can then present that judgment as a claim, there is no way of getting it paid by the state. Now, this is an old case. I haven't had time to check it in the citator. It may be changed since then. But the law is still the same. You need some sort of procedure for auditing and allowing these claims.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Norris amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Brake offers the following amendment to Committee Proposal 74:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "Sec. a.", by inserting "The procedure for the"; and after "state" by striking out the comma and inserting "and"; so that the language will then read:

> The procedure for the examination and adjustment of claims against the state and procedures relating to escheats and to the custody and disposition of escheated property shall be provided for by law.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the proposer of the amendment, Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, all this does is make it perfectly clear that we are talking about procedures and not substantive rights.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I see no objection to this. I think it would clarify the wording of the proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Could it be read again, please?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment is:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above.]

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Brake amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted. Are there any further amendments, Mr. Secretary?

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Nord offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 9, after "by law.", by inserting "There shall be a court of claims which shall examine and adjust all claims against the state not otherwise provided for by law.".

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, in view of many of the remarks made by a number of delegates that the real solution to the problem would be to provide some self executing provision which states point blank that there shall be and is a procedure for examining and adjusting claims, it occurred to me to offer an amendment of this type which would state there is somebody or other — in this case, the court of claims — and then use language very similar to the language in the present constitution. This language would go further than the language we now have before us because this does not say that the legislature merely shall do something but it says also what happens in case the legislature doesn't do something, that there shall be a system anyway for doing so. I don't know whether the language which has been drafted rather rapidly is as good as it could be, but it seems to me some provision of this type, making the adjustment of claims self executing, as it always has been, ought to be incorporated.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, we now provide for a court of claims by statute and I submit that that is where it should remain. With this particular proposal, you are making an additional constitutional court. This I would oppose. I think it could very well be that in the future — it is possible that the circuit court might begin to handle some of the claims against the state rather than this special court of claims. We used to have a federal court of claims in the federal system and now the district courts are taking more and more of the claims against the United States government. This particular procedure has worked very well. It makes the court more available to the people. It does not force them to go to Lansing, which they have to do for a court of claims, and it would appear to be no good reason, if the legislature should see fit, to pass the claims against the state to the circuit court. I would oppose the idea of freezing into the constitution any additional courts of any kind other than we have provided for in the judicial article. We made an exception for the court of claims in the article by proclaiming that the special statutory courts will remain until changed by law. I would hope that this is where it would remain. I would therefore oppose the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Judge Dehnke.

MR. DEHNKE: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I have an additional reason for being wary of the amendment that is before the body now. Unless we intend to lay down a blanket immunity waiver of the state, I think it would be dangerous to adopt this amendment. The substance of it is that there shall be a court of claims to pass upon all other claims against the state, and it could at least be argued that that would permit anything to make a claim to be heard before the court of claims. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I would only endorse what Mr. Danhof has said. I think that the proposal as adopted with the Brake amendment provides for the procedure, it gives the legislature the authority to establish such a court, and under the judicial article we adopted we should not have a court of claims written into the constitution. I would suggest that you vote no on this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I still say that first the amendment by Mr. Brake which we just adopted now states that only certain procedures shall be put into effect. It says nothing about substantive matter. I believe that was pointed out by Mr. Brake. Therefore, it no longer is mandatory, nor was it intended to be when the Norris-Shackleton amendment was adopted a few minutes before. As I see it now, there is nothing mandatory in the provision before us to state that there shall be some adjustment of claims. It seems to me we agreed a few minutes before that there should be something mandatory and now we don't have it and therefore we have more need for this amendment now than we had before.

The second point I'd like to make is this: with reference to the statement made by Judge Dehnke, it occurred to me in selecting this language the same thing as occurred to Judge Dehnke, but I know that the language that we have before us now is substantially the identical language that is in section 20 except that it now will refer to court of claims instead of a different board. I'll read the language from the present section 20: "They shall examine and adjust all claims against the state not otherwise provided for by general law." Now, that is substantially the identical language we have before us. Therefore, I don't believe that will work any change in the substantive law as to which claims are allowable and which ones are subject to immunity. I don't believe that that is really a serious problem although it did occur to me at first that it might be.

For those 2 reasons, then, that the language that we have before us basically is identical with what we have now in the constitution except that the board has been abolished and I've just put it into the hands of some other existing body; and 2, that we should have some substantive guarantee that in the event the legislature doesn't provide otherwise, the claims against the state will be handled.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Nord amendment. Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I believe this goes far beyond what the committee intended by its proposal. We did not intend to specify what the legislature should do in this connection and I think that the proposal as it now stands, as it is now amended, goes as far as the committee was prepared to go. I would therefore oppose the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: I want to raise one further objection to this amendment. This amendment provides that the court of claims shall examine and adjust all claims, which would mean many claims which are now settled administratively. You claim the state owes you $100. You write a letter or file a petition and many times the attorney general will recommend that it be paid. Now, each of these claims will have to be a formal matter before the court of claims. It is much better to handle these as they are presently handled on an administrative basis, and then when you can't get relief there, go into the court of claims. I would oppose putting this provision in the constitution.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Nord amendment. The secretary will read the whole section so we will understand it.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment offered by Dr. Nord is:

1. Amend page 1, line 9, after "by law.", by inserting "There shall be a court of claims which shall examine and adjust all claims against the state not otherwise provided for by law.".

As the section now stands, with the several amendments that have been adopted, the language would read:

> The procedure for the examination and adjustment of claims against the state, and procedures relating to escheats and to the custody and disposition of escheated property shall be provided for by law.

Dr. Nord proposes to add at the end thereof these words, "There shall be a court of claims which shall examine and adjust all claims against the state not otherwise provided for by law."

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Nord amendment. All that are in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted. Are there any further amendments, Mr. Secretary?

SECRETARY CHASE: No further amendments on file, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 74, as amended, is passed. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 9 on the calendar, from the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 77, A proposal to provide a suitable residence for the governor and to authorize an allowance for maintenance. Amends article VI.

Following is Committee Proposal 77 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. THERE SHALL BE PROVIDED FOR THE GOVERNOR'S USE A SUITABLE EXECUTIVE RESIDENCE WITH FIXTURES AND FURNITURE AND

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

HE SHALL RECEIVE AN ALLOWANCE FOR MAINTENANCE OF THE RESIDENCE AS SHALL BE PRESCRIBED BY LAW.

Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 77:

The committee believes that a suitable residence for the governor, properly furnished and with an adequate maintenance allowance, should be provided. This matter has been debated here in Michigan since 1879. Eleven governors of both parties have recommended that such a residence be built. Of the 50 states, 41 now provide a residence for the governor and all the midwestern states except Minnesota have such a residence. The committee feels that this action has been much too long delayed and that the present situation places the governor in an undignified position which reflects unfavorably upon the state of Michigan and its elected head. All details of construction and related matters are left to determination of the legislature.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, as you have heard, this provides that the legislature shall provide an executive residence for the governor with suitable furnishings and an allowance for maintenance. I want to call on one of the committee members to discuss the matter in more detail. I can only say that this proposal has been before the people of Michigan since 1879 and that 11 governors of both parties have recommended that such a residence should be built. It seemed to the committee that we have waited long enough for some action to be taken by the legislature and that while this is legislative in character, it is time that we moved ahead and that if no action is going to be taken, it should be specified in the constitution. I should like to yield to Mr. Marshall to discuss this.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Taylor, Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee of the whole, I am happy to make a few remarks on this committee report. I might say in the beginning that this was unanimous in the committee on executive branch to recommend this proposal to the committee of the whole. I am happy also, inasmuch as I was one of the cosponsors along with Mrs. Koeze, Messrs. Anspach and Faxon.

In discussing this in the committee, we came to the conclusion that a suitable residence for the governor properly furnished and with an adequate maintenance allowance, should be provided. This matter has been debated here in Michigan since 1879 and, as Delegate Martin, the chairman of our committee, pointed out, 11 governors of both parties have recommended that such a residence be built. Of the 50 states in the union, 41 now provide executive residences for their governors and all of the midwestern states, except Minnesota, have such residences for their governors. After discussing this, it was the opinion of the committee that this action has been much too long delayed and that the present situation that exists places the governor in an undignified position which reflects unfavorably upon the state of Michigan and its elected head.

As Delegate Martin pointed out, we recognize that this possibly is of statutory nature; but I would point out that we leave it to the legislature under this proposal. All we do is give constitutional status to the providing of the executive residence and we leave it to the discretion of the legislature to work out all the details of construction and related matters. So I would urge all of the delegates, in view of the fact that we have debated this in Michigan since 1879, and in view of the fact that there have been numerous bills before the legislature to create an executive residence and one has not been created, that you give favorable consideration to the committee proposal. Thank you.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the vice president, Delegate Hutchinson.

MR. HUTCHINSON: Mr. Chairman, I would like to raise this question as to whether this provision as it stands right now already has been complied with in the state of Michigan. As I understand it, we have already provided for the governor's use a — I don't know how suitable it is, but it is an executive residence on Mackinac Island and there isn't anything here that says it has to be at the seat of government. Now, since you admit this is purely a statutory matter, it seems to me as though we better go further and say where this residence is to be located.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from the upper peninsula, Delegate Lundgren.

MR. MARSHALL: I thought Delegate Hutchinson asked a question.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: He didn't ask any through the Chair. (laughter) Delegate Lundgren has the floor.

MR. LUNDGREN: I just rise in support of Mr. Marshall's position on this. I think it's a longtime need for Michigan to provide a suitable residence for our governor. I think Mr. Hutchinson has a very good point. We don't want to keep the governor living on Mackinac Island when he should be down here doing his duties in Lansing. I'd also like to say when this residence and the furniture and everything have been provided for, perhaps we could put this in the schedule part of the constitution and when this house is completed, and everything is topsyturvy, or rosydaisy, or whatever you want to call it, (laughter) why, then, we can drop this thing out of the constitution and we won't have to deal with it 50 years from now, for those few who might still be around. So I rise in support of the proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Now we will recognize Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I am not quite sure, but I believe Delegate Hutchinson probably did raise a valid point. The only thing is that it is my understanding that the providing of the residence on Mackinac Island by statutory language by the legislature is that it is provided as his summer home. It was never intended to be the executive residence as such.

I have several suggestions and I don't dare make any. Somebody suggested that we ought to build in Wayne county and someone else suggested Bloomfield Hills, and I don't dare make either one. (laughter) I would yield at this time, however, to our committee chairman for a reply to this as to his thinking as to whether it is necessary to say "at the seat of government". We did not take this under consideration in the committee.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Marshall and Mr. Hutchinson, I think the point is well taken and I notice that one of the delegates, Mr. Hubbs, has an amendment in to add the words "at the seat of government" after the word "provided". I think that is probably a desirable thing to do and I think the committee should have no objection to that.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mrs. Cushman.

MRS. CUSHMAN: I believe I have an amendment in on the secretary's desk.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mrs. Cushman, there is an amendment to change the wording of the section which we think should be put before yours to strike the whole thing. We'll perfect the section and then we'll go to your amendment. The Chair recognizes Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to question the wording here "and he shall receive an allowance." Are we ever going to have a woman governor? (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: That's a good question. Does anyone want to answer it?

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: I think we should amend this to say, "and he or she shall . . ."

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Hubbs and Faxon offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "provided" by inserting a comma and "at the seat of government,"; so that the language will then read, "There shall be provided, at the seat of government, for the governor's use a suitable executive residence with fixtures and furniture . . ." and so forth.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Hubbs.

MR. HUBBS: Mr. Chairman, I think with regard to Mrs. Butler's problem, we should use the word "governess" occasionally in here. (laughter) However, on this subject, I think everything has been said that needs to be said and I will now yield to Delegate Faxon. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I agree with Delegate Hubbs and I yield the floor. (laughter and applause)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Hubbs-Faxon amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted. The secretary will read the next amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mrs. Cushman offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, by striking out all of the proposal. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mrs. Cushman.

MRS. CUSHMAN: I want to make it plain that I am in complete sympathy with the purpose of the section. There is no doubt about the fact that Michigan needs and has needed for a long time an executive mansion. I don't think, however, that this is the way to meet this problem. It is adding a section in the constitution to take care of something that everybody admits the legislature has complete authority to take care of. There is no question about it. They have had bills before the legislature. The only reason we are putting this in here is because the legislature has failed to take appropriate action and I don't believe that it is necessary to add a section to the constitution just because the legislature overlooked its duty. For that reason, I propose that we delete the section.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Delegate Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Cushman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I disagree with Mrs. Cushman. I don't believe the legislature will do this and in fact, I don't think they can do it by its very nature. There always seems to be a greater need for money for other things than for something as plainly needed as a residence for the governor. I think it is a disgrace the way we have treated our governors in this respect in this state for many, many years — in fact, since the inception of the state. I urge a no vote on the Cushman amendment, and support the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Delegate Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I would only want to add to what Delegate Yeager said and I think many of the former governors would also agree with him, that it was a disgrace the way they have been treated. I don't think they'd only talk about his residence. (laughter) But I would want to speak against the Cushman amendment and again ask that you support the committee proposal, and point out again, there have been many editorials in the daily newspapers throughout the state, many in recent weeks and months since this convention has commenced, calling for and pointing out the need for an executive residence. An executive residence can be the meeting place for the governor with the legislators, to entertain visiting dignitaries, many other functions and usages without going into all of them, and I think it is absolutely essential and it is vital, and it is long overdue in this state.

We went no further than we had to. And I might mention that there are other states in the union that have language spelled out in their state constitutions similar to the language that we use here. And all we do is to provide for the executive residence and leave the authority in the hands of the legislature as to what type of residence, how it is going to be built, how it is going to be maintained, and so forth. Again, I ask you to defeat the Cushman amendment and support the committee proposal. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I agree and urge you to vote yes on this amendment. It seems to me quite clear that — from what has been said, I believe — there is no other constitution which contains such a provision. I call your attention to the fact that this is non self executing. The legislature still has to appropriate the money for it. I suggest there is perhaps little chance that they would be more likely to appropriate the money merely because this admittedly mandatory language is in the constitution. Finally, I suggest to you that, if there is need for government buildings in the state at this time, certainly others are needed far more than a special mansion for the governor — a new supreme court building; a house and senate office building; perhaps even a new capitol might take the head of the list in this regard.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, Mrs. Cushman is right in theory and I join her in being somewhat critical of the legislature for not having taken care of this. But back of the legislature and largely to blame for the fact that it hasn't been done are the people of the state, including newspapers, newspaper editors. Every time the legislature has made an attempt to get this job done, we hear just exactly what we heard from Mr. Wanger right now — we need hospital beds; we need school classrooms; we need everything more than we need a governor's mansion. And in spite of the fact that it doesn't involve a lot of money in a state that is spending a billion a year, we get it up and go on without it. And what we have done is disgraceful, I agree.

We got awfully close one time. In the second Kelly administration, the legislature finally appropriated $75,000 for a governor's mansion; and we had one of the finest architects in the state of Michigan. There is no question about it at all. But he made a psychological mistake that cost us the governor's mansion. He put in it a fish pond (laughter) — half inside the house and half outside the house. The model was placed in the basement of the capitol and people started laughing and they laughed us right out of that $75,000. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Gover.

MR. GOVER: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I am in sympathy also with Mrs. Cushman's remarks that this doesn't need to be in the constitution. I'd like to know what the word "suitable" means — whether it means $50,000, $100,000 or $500,000? I'm kind of interested in the money end of it for some reason or other and would kind of like to know something about it. But anyway, it seems that the legislature has passed the buck on this for 125 years. We ought to be able to pass the buck here for just a little while. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I am not going to take too much time, Mr. Chairman, but in answer to Delegate Wanger and also at the same time, Mrs. Cushman, about the statutory language — as I say, it is only half statutory — but I would also remind all of the delegates that none of us disagree that civil service is statutory language and it is, but because over the years the legislature failed to act, it was put into the constitution.

Now, in answer to Delegate Wanger concerning the governor's residence, that a supreme court building is needed as are other state buildings, I would only point out that we are not providing an executive residence solely for the use of the governor. The governor's house most of the time — not all of the time, but most of the time — is like metropolitan airport prior to a holiday — legislators going and coming, various meetings being held, visiting dignitaries to entertain. And it is essential to this state and the dignity of the state that we provide a residence for the use of the chief executive. This is the last time I intend to speak on this. I again ask you to defeat the Cushman amendment and support the committee proposal. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Lundgren.

MR. LUNDGREN: I rise in opposition to Mrs. Cushman's amendment and support the idea that we now provide a mansion for our governor. Again, I say we can put this in the schedule part of the constitution. Style and drafting can take care of it. And when the house is built and the furniture is in, and the rugs are down, then we can drop it out of the constitution and it won't be in there, for those who might have the objection to writing this into the constitution. In reflection, I have one thing I'd like to comment on. When Mr. Marshall says we shall leave it up to the legislature, I say, amen.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Anspach.

MR. ANSPACH: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I rise in support of the committee proposal and in opposition to Mrs. Cushman's amendment. I was in favor of constructing a governor's mansion and I signed a delegate proposal and I am in favor of it now. I take the words of Judge Dehnke the other day, which are very wise words: I cannot add any more ideas. All I would be doing is adding words. Except I do want to get our central part of Michigan into the picture because reference has been made to the governor's summer mansion at Mackinac Island and the proposed mansion here. You perhaps read in the papers that in case of emergency, the capitol of the state of Michigan will be at Mt. Pleasant on the campus of Central Michigan University. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Lesinski.

MR. LESINSKI: Mr. Chairman, I wish to speak against Mrs. Cushman's amendment. I believe there should be an expression in the constitution, expression of the people, that an executive mansion shall be provided for the governor. I may not be in agreement with the present committee proposal, but I have an expression on the desk that you will possibly favor in the near future.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Young.

MR. YOUNG: Mr. Chairman, I also oppose the Cushman amendment. But I think that what has been raised here is something that is pretty important in regard to the responsibility of this constitutional convention or any constitutional convention. I want to reemphasize the point that Delegate Marshall made, that this convention, faced with a clear need on the part of the people of the state and the unwillingness or the inability of the legislature to act in response to that need, then has the responsibility to enact statutory language, if you please, in order to meet the need. For that reason I support the committee proposal and oppose the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Dr. Nord.

MR. NORD: Mr. Chairman, I rise to support the amendment offered by Mrs. Cushman. First of all, I'd like to point out that this section as it has been offered to us, does not do anything that we desire to be done. Mr. Chairman, as I said, this section does not provide for a suitable residence for the governor. If it did provide for a suitable residence for the governor, I think all of us would probably stand up and give 3 cheers at least — if it did provide that; but it does not. As I see it, it doesn't provide; it requests the legislature to do it. In other words, what it does basically is this: it memorializes the legislature to do a certain thing. Now that is what it does. I think we should memorialize the legislature but I don't see why a letter that we send to the legislature should be included in the constitution. We might put quite a few letters like that in the constitution, but I don't see that they need to be in.

We should keep this in mind — I think this is the purpose of the Cushman amendment — that this constitution should be so good that it would be meaningful for the ages; that every word in this should be a gem; every word should be needed and it should be just as useful 50 years from now as it is now. This language that we have here is for the moment, really. It is something that should be done now. And once it is done, it won't need to be in the constitution any more. It isn't just that it is legislative detail. I realize that we have a great deal of legislative detail. But the difference between this and legislative detail is this: if it was legislative detail, we would be enacting something, and when we got finished enacting it, it would be so. In this case, we are not. We are only pleading with the legislature that they should enact something. Therefore, we are only memorializing the legislature.

I think that the correct approach is therefore to strike the language from the constitution and have a resolution later on at the appropriate time to memorialize the legislature to do this and I believe quite a few other things that we would like to express our intentions about, but shouldn't be in the document. I realize this is not a great issue but, nevertheless, it seems to me in the interest of a clean, sound document for the ages, it would be better to separate this and put it in a different document.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I would like to oppose the amendment at this time and support the committee proposal. Also, I'd like to point out to Mr. Wanger that the New York state constitution does have this in it and as far as the funds go, I believe this could be taken from the general fund. Mr. Brake has already proved to us that the legislature will act on a governor's residence because they have in the past, and this would give them the initiative to do so.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, fellow members of the committee, I think it is extremely important that we put this kind of a provision in the constitution. Dr. Nord points out that this doesn't do anything that we desire to have done. Well, it does. One, it indicates to the legislature that we want this. Secondly, it relieves them of a rather onerous burden that they now have. Naturally, it is difficult for the legislature, as Mr. Brake has pointed out, to expend sums of money in this way, even though it may be a very, very small percentage of the state's revenue, when there are other things which might at first seem to be more important. And yet, I think we do realize — all of us — and I'm sure the legislature does too — if they were to be placed in a position where they could look at this thing without any degree of passion — impassionately, perhaps I should say — it does indicate that we in the state of Michigan are proud of our state, proud of our heritage, that we would like a residence which would be an attraction for visitors from all around.

My brother in law was recently here from the state of Maine and he witnessed our activities here in con con and he went over across the road and saw the senate and the house in action, and he asked about the executive mansion because, of course, they have one in the state of Maine. And I told him that we don't have an executive mansion here. Well, he had been through the Blaine house, which is the executive mansion in Maine, and had seen the period furniture and the art exhibits and he was quite impressed and he thought it surely would be something to see here in this great state of Michigan, and I am sure it would be if we had one.

Recently, I understand — I think it was the president of Finland was here, and I understand — I don't know this to be a fact — but I understand there are more people of Finnish extraction in the state of Michigan than in any other of the 50 states. I think it would have been nice if the governor could have entertained this visiting dignitary, and I suppose he could — he could have rented a room over at the Jack Tar, or something like that — but I don't think this is what we wanted him to do, and probably for that very reason, he didn't do it.

I think that here we have an opportunity to relieve the legislature in this state of a burden which naturally they must bear when they spend money for such purposes as this.

And yet I am sure that we want our governor to ride in a suitable automobile, and we want him to live, I think, in a suitable home. This is our opportunity to do it. There is precedent for it. As Mr. Sterrett pointed out, the New York constitution provides for this. And I think it would be a very significant step for the state of Michigan to take at this time.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Miss Donnelly.

MISS DONNELLY: I rise to support the Cushman amendment for the reasons that I have heard that it is going to give us dignity; we're going to relieve the legislature; we're going to make a much better impression and we're going to do all sorts of interesting things. But I don't think that the constitution is the place to do them. I don't think that the legislature has ever shown that it is unwilling to do this. In fact, I am afraid that they have shown that they have an inability to do this act.

In writing this document, we have already pointed out to the legislature that they shall increase the supreme court by 1; they shall set up 9 appellate judges. This will probably take 3 more courts. We are helping the legislature spend money in the most fantastic manner I have ever seen but I don't think we have helped them get any money in. We're telling them they've got to do this, they should do this, they should do this. This is another situation — it isn't perhaps as much as the salary for the judges that will go on and on, but we are telling them to do this act which they have been willing to do in the past and they didn't have the money to do.

Next, the question of "suitable". What is suitable to me, I don't know would be suitable to another citizen or to another citizen and I don't think any 2 architects would agree what is suitable. I think we are attempting to do something perfectly reasonable if we were in the legislature and we had the money to do it. But we are the constitutional convention. Our job is not to dig up the money at the moment; our job is to do something for 50 years, we hope, and I don't think this is doing the job.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I said I wasn't going to speak on the proposal again and I shall not. I will not attempt to answer Miss Donnelly because I think all of the statements that she made have been answered heretofore. I do rise, though, to point out — which might help some of you to make up your minds — that I just received a news flash a moment ago. One of our fellow delegates and colleagues, who had some very kind things said about him on the floor here Friday is rapidly approaching the governor's chair. Brother Charlie Davis is leading by over 1800 votes to 300. Of course, I contend that all the Democratic precincts haven't been heard from yet. (laughter and applause)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Plank.

MR. PLANK: Mr. Chairman, Delegate Marshall beat me to the punch. I was going to give that report, but I thought I would throw this little point in: I don't believe we are going to have to worry about the governor's mansion at least for the next term because I think he's going to be sleeping in a Rambler. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Yeager.

MR. YEAGER: Mr. Chairman, while I have a chance, I request a division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Tubbs is ahead of you, Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I don't want to debate. I want to make a brief statement.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose the amendment of Mrs. Cushman, and while I am doing it, I would like to answer one of the arguments of Delegate Nord. If we are afraid of putting something in the constitution that may be good for 2 or 3 years and then forever forgotten, I think we can have the answer. We can say the state shall provide and maintain forever a residence at the seat of government. You see, if the present legislature, who might be asked by resolution to build a residence should build it, and next year it should burn, there would be no resolution to present to the legislature following that.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Dr. Hannah.

MR. J. A. HANNAH: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I think we've had plenty of conversation on this topic. I should only like to add to the point made by Miss Donnelly that if we do what I hope we are going to do — make provision in this constitution for the building and maintenance of a home for the governor — it will not be unique in Michigan. The Constitution of 1850 provided that the institution that I have the honor to preside over be created by the legislature at the earliest practical moment. It is not unique to write into the Michigan constitution directives that will eventually result in a desirable outcome. I urge the defeat of the Cushman amendment and the approval of the committee proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I just want to make a brief reply to my good friend Delegate Plank, to the remark that he made a moment ago. And I might tell him that I was discussing it with some of my colleagues, and we would be happy to have the Democratic governor ride in a Rambler providing he can get a special built machine comparable to the present Chrysler we are using. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Cushman amendment. There has been a request for division. Is the demand supported? There are enough up. All those in favor of the Cushman amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment by Mrs. Cushman to strike out all of Committee Proposal 77, the yeas are 18; the nays are 92.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is not adopted. Mr. Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman, I have been very confused by this vote. I thought my seat mate was the foreman of a wrecking crew and here I see that he is ready to construct a governor's mansion. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Lesinski has offered the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "An executive residence shall be provided for the governor at the seat of government.".

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the proposer of the amendment, Mr. Lesinski.

MR. LESINSKI: Mr. Chairman, this amendment provides a simple expression of the people. The whole constitution is an expression of the people and we leave the details up to the legislature.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, the existence of a residence without an adequate allowance to operate it is entirely impractical and the 2 really have to go together. If we are going to put the 1 in, if we are going to require the residence, it is just almost mandatory that you have some provision for a maintenance allowance or the governor will find it impossible to operate it on his salary. I would oppose the present amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Lesinski amendment. Mr. Lesinski.

MR. LESINSKI: Mr. Martin's remarks are directed to the legislature. We're only concerned here with an expression of the people. People are expressing themselves that an executive mansion be built; and I believe that is all we should be concerned with in this constitution and not the details. Of course, we put a lot of detail in this constitution that I personally believe should not be in. And that's what we're doing right along, putting in details.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I rise to oppose the Lesinski amendment. I agree with the remarks made by our committee chairman, Mr. Martin, that the 2 have to go together. Right now in this state, in order to entertain visiting dignitaries and carry on the many functions that the governor has to do in a social way, he has to depend upon fund raising affairs, birthday dinners and what have you. I think that in itself is a disgrace and I think if we are to have a chief executive, let's make him a chief executive and let's give him the tools to do the job that the people of the state of Michigan want him to do.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I urge you to support this amendment. It will in every way have the effect of the original upon the legislature and yet it will be shorter and it will contain the expression of popular will required to get the job done, without including fixtures, furniture and allowance for maintenance. These things are clearly statutory details, just as much statutory detail as the language of section 25 of article V of our present constitution which provides that fuel, stationery, blanks, printing and binding for the use of the state shall be furnished under contract or contracts with the lowest bidder, et cetera, et cetera. It is a natural thing which, upon reflection, the people will realize to be more legislative detail of the least desirable kind.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. King.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman and fellow members of the committee, it seems to me, as Mr. Martin has pointed out, and as I would reiterate, it is extremely important that we provide an allowance and furniture for this place. Now, conceivably the legislature could provide for a mansion, a very expensive to maintain mansion, and then because of a fallout with the governor, which has been known to happen, they might cut this allowance right off. It seems to me that the next governor or after the next one might not be in a position to maintain such a home and I think by all means we should defeat the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Lesinski amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Division has been called for. Is there support? Sufficient number up. All those in favor of the Lesinski amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the amendment offered by Mr. Lesinski, the yeas are 18; the nays are 85.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Norris offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 7, after "and" by striking out "he" and inserting "the governor"; so the language will then read, "The governor shall receive an allowance for maintenance of the residence as shall be prescribed by law." (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Dr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I think Delegate Butler has made a point here which I hope will some day be a footnote to history and I hope that this amendment engenders the possibility that there will be a lady governor. (laughter) I think we ought to recognize that there has been considerable change in a number of respects with regard to the status of women since the 1908 constitution. We have recognized it in a number of provisions thus far adopted. I think also that this is not a matter which we can aproach as lightly as it has thus far been approached. I think it does recognize a change in the status of women and we ought to recognize it in this particular proposition.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Norris amendment. Delegate Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, it seems to me we have forgotten our early English lessons and we don't know that the word "he" includes women when used in this sense. Postmasters who are women are not called postmistresses. There is no such official term as "congresswomen". Those are things which people have used. We've had no trouble having women postmasters all through the state and the United States. We have women in congress and in the legislature. It hasn't been necessary to change the constitution in order to get these things. I'd like to oppose the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I thoroughly agree with Delegate Stevens' English lesson. However, I would support this amendment for the particular reason of being consistent. Throughout the executive article, we have used the words "the governor" in most instances.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Norris amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Are you serious? Is there support? No, there is not a sufficient number up. (laughter) Mrs. Butler.

MRS. BUTLER: Mr. Chairman, I just want to say, "Thank you, brother Norris." (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Are there any further amendments, Mr. Secretary?

SECRETARY CHASE: No other amendments on the desk, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Are there any amendments to the body of the proposal? If not, it will pass.

Committee Proposal 77, as amended, is passed. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 10 on the calendar, from the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 76, A proposal pertaining to the passage of permissive legislation to allow civil divisions of the state to establish local civil service systems and to receive assistance from the state civil service system. Amends article VI.

Following is Committee Proposal 76 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. THE LEGISLATURE SHALL BY LAW ESTABLISH A SYSTEM UNDER WHICH THE CIVIL DIVISIONS OF THE STATE, INCLUDING CITIES AND VILLAGES, MAY CHOOSE TO PROVIDE FOR THE MERIT PRINCIPLE IN EMPLOYMENT. IN SUCH CIVIL DIVISIONS, APPOINTMENTS AND PROMOTIONS IN THE CIVIL SERVICE SHALL BE MADE ACCORDING TO MERIT AND FITNESS TO BE ASCERTAINED, AS FAR AS PRACTICABLE, BY EXAMINATION WHICH, AS FAR AS PRACTICABLE, SHALL BE COMPETITIVE. THE STATE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, WHEN AUTHORIZED BY LAW, SHALL ASSIST ON A REIMBURSABLE BASIS, THE CIVIL DIVISIONS OF THE STATE IN THE ESTABLISHMENT AND MAINTENANCE OF THEIR PERSONNEL SYSTEMS.

Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 76:

This proposal in its present form requires the legislature to establish a system under which civil subdivisions may choose to provide for the merit principle in employment. The provision does not impose any obligation upon such subdivisions to come under the merit system, but it is intended to encourage and assist them in doing so. A mandatory requirement that appointments and promotions in the civil service of civil divisions of the state shall be made according to merit and fitness was considered but this optional provision seemed preferable.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

The constitution, if this provision is included in it, would make it obligatory on the legislature to establish by statute a system which civil divisions, including cities and villages, could choose to come under. In local units which exercise their option to enter the system, the provision specifies that appointments and promotions in the civil service shall be made according to merit and fitness to be ascertained by competitive examination, as far as practicable. The legislature is given discretion to legislate as to the details for conforming to these standards.

The provision also gives recognition to assistance on a reimbursable basis by the state civil service commission, when authorized by law, to the local units in installing and maintaining their personnel systems.

The intent of this proposal is to encourage local governmental units in adopting the merit principle, and to facilitate them by making assistance available from the state personnel agency, without making it a constitutional requirement that all civil divisions conform to the merit principle in civil service appointments and promotions.

It should be added that both New York and Ohio have had somewhat similar constitutional provisions for many years.

The committee on local government was asked for its opinion though no jurisdiction was specifically assigned on this matter. A majority of that committee are of the view that the subject matter of the proposal is legislative in character and not necessary in the constitution.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, before commenting on the proposal, 2 or 3 of the delegates have asked me when I was planning to move that the committee rise. I indicated that I thought we could work through until 10:30. I don't think we will cover this proposal, but at 10:30, I will make that motion if it is agreeable to the delegates.

The present proposal is one which would make it possible on an optional basis for local units of government to establish the local civil service system. There is nothing mandatory in the proposal except to require the legislature to set up such an optional system and its adoption would entirely depend upon the action of the local unit in determining if they wanted the merit system. The details of the proposal, I am going to refer to Dr. Pollock. For that purpose, I yield the floor to him at this time.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Ann Arbor, Professor Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, this proposal is explained in Journal 70 on pages 432, 433. As the chairman of the committee has already indicated, it is a permissive proposal. The committee decided to put it on the permissive rather than the mandatory basis. But the intent of the proposal is to encourage local government to adopt the merit principle and then to facilitate them by giving them assistance, if assistance is desirable.

I believe we are here in part as delegates in this convention to do what we can to strengthen state and local government. It is obvious that the functions of modern government, both at the state and local level, have become so technical and so difficult at times that they require trained personnel. We decided this 20 years ago at the state level and when we passed section 22, which is the basis for our present civil service system, I was pleased to find, as I listened to all the delegates over the hall, not one person was opposed to the principle of civil service. I am looking around this evening to see if there is anybody who wants to contend that civil service is not a good standing principle. That being the case, I think it applies equally to local government as it does to state government. And just by way of illustration of the importance of having good personnel standards to improve the efficiency of local service, I wonder if you realize that in the recent census of government we have something like 100,000 employees — compared to about 32,000 employees at the state level — over 100,000 at the local level. This doesn't count, of course, school districts, counties, municipalities and townships. We have, according to that census of government, some 25,000 county employees, some 68,000 municipal employees, some 16,000 township employees. And since Mr. Gover and others are interested in the financial side, I think it is very interesting to find too that the expenditures of local government are of course higher than the expenditures of state government, the direct expenditures, the direct general expenditures, so that the need from the point of view of both dollars and cents and from the point of view of efficient service is greater at the local level and I think is much more needed in many cases than it is at the state level. However, the committee did not feel like making this mandatory but rather, as I have indicated, our intent was to encourage local governments to improve their local personnel systems, as of course many of them have already done.

The city of Detroit has one of the outstanding municipal civil service systems in the country. We have the same thing true, I believe, with Wayne county. However, rather widely over the state we have policemen and firemen organized on a merit basis, but many other employees are not. I am sure that especially in the metropolitan counties, metropolitan cities, and a good many of the urban townships, there is a crying need for something today. The purpose, as I say, is to encourage improvement along this line and to facilitate them if they need the assistance of the state civil service commission on a reimbursable basis to provide for it. I urge the support of this proposal, and I would like to yield the floor, Mr. Chairman, if I may, to Mrs. Judd.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mrs. Judd.

MRS. JUDD: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I am particularly interested in this proposal because of some rather vivid personal experiences I have had in this field. The proposal, as you see, is intended to provide the smaller units of government that could not afford and undoubtedly could not even secure a personnel technician or the technical help that is needed to do a good job. I had the experience a number of years ago in the city of Grand Rapids where the commission refused to put up money to secure technical help in writing rules for the Grand Rapids civil service commission — a rather ridiculous situation for a layman to be in. I had a further experience with the juvenile court in Kent county where the citizens had finally persuaded the judge to secure qualified people for his staff in helping to set up a job analysis and classification plan because there were no funds for technical help. So that I am well aware of the various ways in which technical help could be used, particularly in situations where a permanent technician would not be essential; where the services could be, for instance, assistance in the drafting of rules or in job analysis, setting up a classification and compensation plan, and also giving examinations. This is the kind of service that the Michigan municipal league renders more or less at cost to the smaller cities of the state that do not wish to employ permanent personnel technicians. So this coming from the state service might be particularly helpful to counties and to townships.

I'd like to point out that this would in no way give the state civil service department policymaking power over any local units of government. The proposal, as you see in the second sentence, does set up minimum standards provided the local unit desires to have a civil service system for its employees. And this, I think, is a protection to our state civil service department. We would not wish them to be wasting their time in local government service on a standard that was not adequate. However, the extent of the civil service in the local unit, the number of employees that would come under it, the level of the pay plan and so on would all be policies that would be made locally and this would simply be a service which would be rendered under contract. And lastly, I want to point out that it would not cost the state any more money because the local government units would pay the cost of it.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: I should now like to yield the floor to Mr. Downs.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak very much in favor of the principle of civil service. I see that as this is drawn it is optional. I, for one, think maybe at times we should have more teeth in it.

There are 2 points I would like to make. As I read this, where there is a satisfactory civil service established, that community or county would not need to avail itself of the facilities of the state civil service commission, though it could. Where there is a community that is planning to use civil service, it could get the advice or advantage of a long established system. The one point that I would like to raise — I feel somewhat as the end man in asking the question of Dr. Pollock — is to what extent, if a community participated in this plan, will it then hand over any control of its operations to the state civil service commission or would that be primarily an advice or technical facility for the community if it so desired? I think that point may be raised and I would appreciate Dr. Pollock's answer, if I may direct it through the Chair.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Dr. Pollock may answer if he wishes to.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Downs, yes, very clearly the control remains with the locality, and the purpose is merely to provide a framework law within the terms of which localities may, if they see fit, set up their system. The control remains, of course, locally. There is no provision, as I believe there is in the New York constitution, for some kind of financial assistance, even of some kind of financial supervision over local civil service systems. This could be done. But it is not provided in this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If the chairman of the committee would yield the floor now so the Chair could —

MR. MARTIN: I yield, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will now recognize Delegate Woolfenden.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to direct a question through the Chair to Dr. Pollock, if I may.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Dr. Pollock. He may answer if he wishes to.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: Dr. Pollock, within the contemplation of this language, are counties and townships civil divisions of the state?

MR. POLLOCK: They are so considered, yes.

MR. WOOLFENDEN: I am a little perplexed as to the clause "civil divisions of the state, including cities and villages" but saying nothing about counties and townships.

MR. POLLOCK: This language is somewhat a duplicate of the language in the New York constitution, where the matter has been litigated quite a bit, and where they do not have home rule in the same way as we do in Michigan. The idea is to avoid any possible conflict with the home rule act.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, I just wish to ask a question of Dr. Pollock through you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Dr. Pollock, you may answer if you wish to.

MR. MADAR: I just want to make sure that we get on record this one thought: as I understand it, this will in no way affect the city of Detroit's civil service or the county of Wayne's civil service?

MR. POLLOCK: Correct.

MR. MADAR: Thank you very much. I certainly am for this proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. William Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, a question to Dr. Pollock or Mrs. Judd.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Which one?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Dr. Pollock.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Dr. Pollock, you may answer if you wish to.

MR. W. F. HANNA: In line 10, you refer to "in such civil divisions of the state" — it goes back to line 9. Now, is it intended to say civil divisions adopting the merit principle or in all civil divisions, whether they adopt civil service or not, that appointments and promotions shall be according to the merit system?

MR. POLLOCK: The civil divisions which may choose to provide for the merit system.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, I desire to ask Dr. Pollock a question.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Dr. Pollock, if you care to answer.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, Dr. Pollock, the question is this: you say that the New York state constitution contains a somewhat similar provision; I merely wish to ask, is this necessarily a good comparison or a good model for us to use? Is not the New York constitution considered to be, among state constitutions, unnecessarily long, prolix and detailed?

MR. POLLOCK: I think in general, you are correct about the New York state constitution. I was trying to indicate that there are already similar systems and similar constitutional arrangements working. I mentioned New York as one example. I could equally well mention Ohio. I merely wanted to indicate that this is not unprecedented and we therefore have a lot of practical experience knowing exactly how these arrangements work.

MR. WANGER: The second question I should like to ask: I would like to ask if my understanding about the legal effect of this is correct, namely, that the legal effect of this section is exactly the same as the one providing for a governor's mansion. It merely sets out a goal to be achieved and places the legislature under a moral mandate to achieve it but it in fact is in no way self executing. Is that a correct understanding of it?

MR. POLLOCK: Yes, Mr. Chairman, we say the legislature shall. Of course, there is no way, as we have indicated a good many times, to force the legislature to do this.

MR. WANGER: My last question is this: we did this in the case of the governor's mansion because the legislature has evidently for a century and a quarter failed to act, although many people have desired the governor's mansion be built. Now, I understand that we do have local civil service systems. I wish to ask: is there any parallel problem here — a parallel? Does the legislature refuse to act in allowing local units of goverment to set up the merit system for the basis of this employment?

MR. POLLOCK: No. That's true, because we are principally concerned with large cities which usually have the means to do this. Now we have reached the point where we have a lot of smaller divisions, but with a great many employees unable to assist themselves in providing for a proper personnel system.

MR. WANGER: Then do I understand that many of these divisions of the state do not at present have the legal power to establish a merit system?

MR. POLLOCK: No, no. They do have the legal power but they haven't the financial means usually to do this. And also they haven't the knowhow or the framework within which to develop a modern personnel system. The idea here, of course, is to try to develop personnel systems rather universally and to develop them within a sound framework.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman and Dr. Pollock, it would seem that the basic question then is one of financing the system and providing perhaps a uniform or suitable ideal framework for these units of government to adopt.

MR. POLLOCK: It's partly financial but it's also partly technical.

MR. WANGER: Is there an indication that the legislature has refused to step into this area and to help solve the situation or is there any history of difficulty?

MR. POLLOCK: There is a history of inaction. It is a history of failing to recognize that this serious problem exists.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman and Dr. Pollock, my last question would be this then: do you think that the problem of inaction, from a practical political standpoint is so serious that it requires the insertion in the constitution of language of such length which has admittedly no legal effect whatsoever?

MR. POLLOCK: Yes. If the committee had not thought so, we wouldn't have gone to the trouble of framing this proposal. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Kalamazoo, Mr. Allen.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to ask a question of Dr. Pollock and I think he may know what I am going to ask. It seems to me, Dr. Pollock, that if we put the "proper interpretation" — that's in quotations — we don't have anything to worry about. But I would like to be sure we have a proper connotation in understanding. Let me give you an example. We have in existence today certain laws under which a city or a home rule village may adopt firemen and police pension retirement plans. Now, after these are passed, maybe 10 cities and some villages will adopt them, and this is all right. Then a few years later, one of the 10 cities wants some sort of an amendment, and because these are set up under a general act, the amendment has to come under a general act also. Now, one of the cities of the 10 wants a general amendment. So the legislature passes the amendment. It pleases 1 city. There are 10 cities already under the system. Nine cities are dissatisfied and they can't do anything about it.

Now, let us apply it in the case of what we are talking about here. The first sentence says, the legislature shall by law establish a system under which the local units of government, cities and villages, may choose to come under the merit principle. Now, let's say 10 of them choose to come in under a system. Now let us say later an amendment is made to the system. My question is: may any of the 10 cities which are already under the system, as soon as an amendment is made, pull out if the city wishes to do so, or are they all bound?

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Allen, that's a legal question beyond my competence but I would hazard a guess that the cities would be under the system in the first place and would continue under any general system which the legislature would provide, either by amendment or otherwise.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Chairman, if I may continue on then. I'm wondering, Dr. Pollock, if this is really the right way to go about it. If a city wanted to come under it and had the liberty to pull out, I can see value, especially — and perhaps I ought to say primarily for the small city or the village or the small county, if a county wanted to come under it —

MR. POLLOCK: Or the large county.

MR. ALLEN: — or even a large county, if they did not wish to have a personnel system of their own. But I think we get away from the home rule principle if we get a whole number of diverse units — some large cities, some medium, some small, some large counties, small counties — all under a general act. And then if they are still bound, and the legislature changes the act, then aren't we really going back to what we thought we got away from in 1907, when it was Lansing and the state legislature that was setting the policy for cities and for villages? In other words, if a city is going to be bound under this, then isn't this an evil because we no longer really have home rule. If we could understand this constitutional amendment in terms of not being bound but the ability to pull out at any time and sort of an advisory technical assistance, I think that might be valuable. But to say that they have to be bound by it, then I think that we get into the obvious difficulty of a determination made by the legislature which will not fit all of them together, which they may not all want, and we no longer have our home rule. In other words, I think with the interpretation which I understand you may be putting on it, we aren't strengthening home rule; we may be weakening it.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Allen, I appreciate the point that you are raising and I yield to you or to no one in my respect and devotion for the principle of municipal home rule. But I really think you are raising a "boogeyman" when there is no reason to do so. The legislature, in the first place, is to set this up, as the amendment indicates, on a permissive basis. I am sure that when this matter is before the legislature, there will be plenty of people who will raise that point you are raising, to be sure that nothing in that framework law violates our tenets of municipal home rule. I think therefore that your objection is not a very good one.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: I have a question or two of Dr. Pollock.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: You may answer, if you care to, Dr. Pollock.

MR. OSTROW: In your first line you say "The legislature shall establish a system. . . ." I take it from that — and then it's permissive — that either the municipality chooses to adopt that system or they can adopt no other.

MR. POLLOCK: They can adopt any under their existing powers, of course.

MR. OSTROW: Well, that isn't what this language indicates to me.

MR. POLLOCK: The idea of adopting a framework law, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Ostrow, is to encourage civil subdivisions to do something within a modern framework as the framework law was laid down.

MR. OSTROW: Yes. But under the present situation before this proposal, any municipality could adopt any type of civil service.

MR. POLLOCK: Yes, consonant with the existing general law.

MR. OSTROW: Yes. Under this, the legislature is to establish a system under which the civil divisions of the state may choose to provide —

MR. POLLOCK: Yes. Not necessarily a system. There can be alternatives.

MR. OSTROW: Yes. But you say "a system".

MR. POLLOCK: Yes. There are various alternatives, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Just a minute. This little set to here — will you speak through the Chair so that the rest of the committee can understand what is going on.

MR. OSTROW: You say "a system", which I read to mean a system which the municipality may choose. It says nothing about any other alternative. That's what is bothering me. At the moment, they can have a 100 per cent system or 75 per cent system or a system has this feature or that. If the legislature establishes a system, as I read this language, you either choose that system or nothing.

MR. POLLOCK: That would not be my interpretation. I suppose you would like the word "optional" put in, an "optional system."

MR. OSTROW: I would like something.

MR. POLLOCK: An "optional system" or "optional systems". This is probably what you are getting at.

MR. OSTROW: My second question. I am not familiar with your New York provision of civil divisions of the state. To me, there are civil divisions, criminal divisions. How broad is this definition of "civil division"?

MR. POLLOCK: It includes all the principal units of government under the state.

MR. OSTROW: Would that include university school districts?

MR. POLLOCK: No.

MR. OSTROW: What is the definition of "civil"? I know of no definition. I don't mean that there aren't any. I would like to know what your definition is.

MR. POLLOCK: Counties, cities, townships and villages.

MR. OSTROW: Just limited to those?

MR. POLLOCK: To those. That's the way I would interpret it. Not school districts.

MR. OSTROW: Or school boards?

MR. POLLOCK: School boards are obviously operated on a different financial and organizational basis.

MR. OSTROW: What I am talking about is the definition. When we get into the courts, if we do — and we are bound to with all of these things — the question will be: what is a civil division of the state? A moment ago, you said anything less than the state.

MR. POLLOCK: Yes. The civil subdivisions set up by the state for the carrying out of its general functions.

MR. OSTROW: Well, is there some standard of reference for the word "civil"?

MR. POLLOCK: Again, I say I use this as an accepted term under the New York provision, where there has been no difficulty in interpreting what it means.

MR. OSTROW: How broadly have they interpreted it?

MR. POLLOCK: Just as I —

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Gentlemen, again, can you direct the questions through the Chair? And not this talk that is going back and forth, which nobody seems to understand. Direct your questions to the Chair and then to Dr. Pollock.

MR. OSTROW: Mr. Chairman, for the benefit of those who didn't hear or those who didn't understand, the 2 points that I wanted clarified were, first, that these civil divisions, whatever they may be, will not be limited to a system set up by the legislature, but may adopt any other system that they choose; and second, some standard of reference as far as definition of "civil divisions of the state" is concerned so that there could be no question about how broad or how narrow that definition is.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: There are at least 2 amendments and it is after 10:30. I move that the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is, shall the committee rise. All in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration several proposals, of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 74, A proposal to provide by law for the administration of claims against the state, escheats and escheated property, and the investment of state funds; reports this proposal back to the convention with 3 amendments thereto, recommending that the amendments be agreed to and that the proposal as thus amended be passed.

[The following are the amendments recommended by the committee of the whole:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "Sec. a.", by inserting "The procedure for the"; and after "state" by striking out the comma and inserting "and".

2. Amend page 1, line 8, after "property" by striking out the comma and "and the investment of state funds".

3. Amend page 1, line 8, after "be" by striking out "as".]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on concurring in the amendments as adopted by the committee of the whole. Those in favor of concurring in the amendments will vote aye. Those opposed, no.

The amendments are adopted and Committee Proposal 74, as amended, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 74 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. The procedure for the examination and adjustment of claims against the state and procedures relating to escheats and to the custody and disposition of escheated property shall be provided for by law.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 77, A proposal to provide a suitable residence for the governor and to authorize an allowance for maintenance; reports this proposal back to the convention with 2 amendments, recommending the amendments be agreed to and the proposal as thus amended be passed.

[The following are the amendments recommended by the committee of the whole:

1. Amend page 1, line 6, after "provided" by inserting a comma and "at the seat of government,".

2. Amend page 1, line 7, after "and" by striking out "he" and inserting "the governor".]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on concurring in the amendments of the committee of the whole. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendments are adopted and Committee Proposal 77, as amended, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 77 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. There shall be provided, at the seat of government, for the governor's use a suitable executive residence with fixtures and furniture and the governor shall receive an allowance for maintenance of the residence as shall be prescribed by law.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole, Mr. President, has also placed Exclusion Report 2027 at the foot of the general orders calendar for the committee on executive branch; and also had under consideration Committee Proposal 76, A proposal pertaining to the passage of permissive legislation to allow civil divisions of the state to establish local civil service systems and to receive assistance from the state civil service system; and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements. Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. President, fellow delegates, for the information of those who are interested, the latest election returns at 10:30, 28 out of 47 precincts reporting: Mr. Davis, 1872; Mr. Andrews, 371.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Announcements. Mr. Beaman.

MR. BEAMAN: I'd just like to call the attention of the delegates to another solemn occasion. You will recall that last year in setting up the budget, the administrative committee had to make certain estimates, and one in regard to the verbatim reporting was based on the fact that 1 million words of debate were used in the 1908 constitution. In arriving at our estimate for this convention, we felt that 2,500,000 words would be handled. I'd like to say that 40 minutes ago, we reached that 2,500,000 words. (laughter) From now on — and I hope it will have some effect on the delegates — we are deficit debating. (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Chase.

SECRETARY CHASE: I have the following announcements:

The committee on public information will meet Wednesday,

March 21, 7:30 p.m., in the committee room directly across the corridor from the convention hall.

There will be a meeting of the committee on administration tomorrow, Tuesday, at 1:15 p.m. Walter DeVries, chairman.

There will be a meeting of the committee on emerging problems, Tuesday, March 20, in committee room I on the third floor at 11:30 a.m. or immediately after the morning session. Frank G. Millard, chairman.

The apples today are from Mr. Turner. (applause)

We have the following requests for leave: during the sitting of the committee of the whole, Mr. Heideman called. Because of the very bad weather, he couldn't get a plane and wishes to be excused from the sessions of tonight and tomorrow morning; also, Mr. Knirk wishes to be excused from tomorrow morning's session for business reasons; and Mr. McAllister asks leave from the morning sessions of Tuesday and Wednesday, March 20 and 21.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, they will be excused. Is that all you have?

SECRETARY CHASE: That's all of the announcements, Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Sablich.

MR. SABLICH: Mr. President, I move we adjourn.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on adjournment. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

We are adjourned until 9:30 tomorrow morning.

[Whereupon, at 10:40 o'clock p.m., the convention adjourned until 9:30 o'clock a.m., Tuesday, March 20, 1962.]

ONE HUNDRED THIRD DAY

Tuesday, March 20, 1962, 9:30 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

This morning, to give our invocation, through the courtesy of Dr. Anspach, we are happy to have the Reverend J. Kenneth Cutler, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Mt. Pleasant.

REVEREND CUTLER: Let us pray. Almighty God, our Father, we humbly acknowledge Thy sovereign rule over all the affairs of men. We own that Thy will and purpose over arches the business of government and reaches into the very halls and committee rooms of this convention. Without Thy guidance and inspiration, a constitution which is worthy of the highest and best in our American heritage cannot be written. As the fathers of our nation who wrote the constitution of our great land fervently implored Thy aid, so do we. For without Thy helping hand, we will surely fail. With it, we cannot but succeed. We pray that to know Thy will shall be our supreme concern and our unremitting search until this constitution is completed.

We confess to Thee, O God, our human weaknesses and frailties. We are prone to anger, quick in temper, often selfish and parochial in outlook. This we confess to our shame. The human nature in us wants to condemn, to strike back, to get even. In such times we need to listen to the calm, clear counsel of the Man of Galilee who said, "Judge not . . . . Turn the other cheek . . . . Go the second mile . . . . Love your enemies . . . . Pray for them which despitefully use you." What confidence in one another these teachings, O Christ, can restore in us if we will only practice them. Give us the grace to do it. If there is anything our faith has taught us, O eternal One, it is that no situation is ever hopeless if the light of Thy truth is brought to bear upon it and if men are willing to cooperate with one another.

Give to these men and women of this convention enthusiasm for their tasks and divine strength to bear the weight of their heavy responsibilities. Guide them aright in the making of the momentous decisions affecting the lives of the millions of people. When they are tired and weary, refresh their bodies and spirits. When they lack understanding, give them Thy wisdom. When their faith wavers, fill them with hope. When they make mistakes and errors, help them to acknowledge them and correct them. Save this convention, O Lord, from the destructive power of selfish interests and mere political expediency. Turn us from divisive loyalties and party cries to the unity of men who know themselves to be children of the one true God and brothers, one of another. May the gracious charity of Christ, our Lord, be with your spirits. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Thank you very much. The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present, please vote aye. Those present, please record your attendance by voting aye. Have you all done so? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record the attendance.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

Prior to today's session, the secretary received the following requests for leave: Mr. T. S. Brown who has urgent business in Detroit, Mr. Higgs who is still busy in a federal court trial, and Mr. Douglas whose mother in law had a heart attack, wish to be excused from today's session; Mr. Spitler, from this afternoon's session to attend a funeral; and Messrs. Greene and Wood, from this afternoon's session and tomorrow morning's session.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, the requests are granted.

SECRETARY CHASE: Absent with leave: Messrs. T. S. Brown, Dade, Douglas, Everett, Follo, Heideman, Higgs, Knirk, Mrs. Koeze, Messrs. McAllister, Mosier, Page and Rush.

Absent without leave: none.

[During the proceedings the following delegates entered the chamber and took their seats: Messrs. Dade, Knirk, McAllister and Rush.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: Reports of standing committees.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no standing committee reports.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Communications.

SECRETARY CHASE: None.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Third reading.

SECRETARY CHASE: Nothing on that calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Motions and resolutions.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no resolutions on file.

PRESIDENT NISBET: General orders. The Chair recognizes Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. President, I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of taking up matters upon the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Millard. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Millard.

[Whereupon, Mr. Millard assumed the Chair to preside as chairman of the committee of the whole.]

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The committee will be in order. At last night's close, we were on Committee Proposal 76. The secretary will read so you will be advised what it is.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 10 on the general orders calendar, from the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 76, A proposal pertaining to the passage of permissive legislation to allow civil divisions of the state to establish local civil service systems and to receive assistance from the state civil service system. The committee proposal has been read.

For last previous action by the committee of the whole on Committee Proposal 76, see above, page 1743.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: At the close, the Chair had 5 names on the list: Delegates Faxon, G. E. Brown, Norris, Judd and Lesinski. At this time, the Chair will recognize Delegate Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, I'd like to ask one question through the Chair to Dr. Pollock with regard to the —

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Dr. Pollock, if you care to answer.

MR. FAXON: In the last sentence where it states "The state civil service commission, when authorized by law. . . ." The question is whether this is necessary or whether the legislature could do this without constitutional authorization, that is, to authorize a civil service commission, or is the fact that the civil service commission is a constitutional creation that requires some additional spelling out here.

MR. POLLOCK: I think the language was put in for several reasons. In the first place, the civil service commission is not reaching out for more power and authority. Obviously, this is one state, and if it could be helpful to local government, as well to the state service, it ought to be clear that it has that power. Therefore, we put it in and we also said, of course, on a reimbursable basis.

MR. FAXON: I'd like to yield to Delegate Martin for purposes of making some comments.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, when we adjourned last night, several questions had been raised with regard to this proposal and subsequent to that time, several of the delegates who had raised those questions worked on a possible amendment which I believe Mr. Hanna is offering. I wonder if it would be possible to have that read and then it may be that some of the other amendments which are pending would not be necessary.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. W. F. Hanna has filed the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the remainder of the section and inserting "Each city, village, township, county, school district and metropolitan government may, by a majority vote of the electors voting thereon, establish a merit system for its employees. The state civil service commission may furnish technical services on a reimbursable basis to any city, village, township, county, school district or metropolitan government requesting the same.".

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: This evidently is a substitute for the proposal. The Chair will recognize Mr. Martin as chairman of the committee.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, this provides the self executing provision with respect to local civil service which would avoid the problem that Mr. Allen presented last night whereby if a general statute with respect to local civil service were set up, it would have to be changed every time any one unit wanted to make some change in its system and this would then affect everybody, whether they wanted that change or not. This is a self executing provision and it is protected by the proviso that the local community may authorize it by a majority vote of their electors. It contains the very essential provision also that the state civil service commission may furnish technical services on a reimbursable basis in order to help such local units work up or work out the problem of a local civil service system. The provision is also broadened to make reference to other local units and cities and villages. Of course, if a city or village has a home rule charter, this would take precedence. The home rule charter will control in the event that there is a home rule charter and it makes either provision for civil service or provision for establishing a civil service system. Where there is no such provision, this would make it possible for them to establish such a local system with approval of the voters. It seems to me the amendment is a good amendment and takes account of the questions which were raised. I think that the committee would be happy to accept it. I would ask Dr. Pollock if he would want to comment on this at this time.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Just a moment. We have some other people that are talking to the original proposal. Your amendment will come up in order. The Chair recognizes Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I find myself in a strange position of being more of a constitutional purist than Dr. Pollock. We have, in Committee Proposal 81, already adopted a provision much like this with respect to in counties of a million and over, where it is self executing. Counties under a million may adopt a similar provision for a merit program as provided for by law, the provision says. It seems to me with respect to counties we are providing a duplication here. I don't think there is any question but what the legislature may do that which we are now writing into the constitution. I would be opposed to any self implementing provision as has been suggested by the amendment and I think without the self implementing provision, this language is purely statutory and could just as well be left out of the constitution and, as I say, being a constitutional purist, I am forced to oppose the committee proposal and any amendments that would write it into the constitution.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Detroit, Dr. Norris. This is on the original proposal.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, I had originally sought to ask some questions regarding this terminology of civil division. There were several questions of Dr. Pollock yesterday with regard to it. I notice, however, in the contemplated amendment that there is a spelling out of the governmental units that are involved in this particular situation. I think I would pass because apparently the problem is taken care of in the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the lady from Grand Rapids, Delegate Judd.

MRS. JUDD: Was this from yesterday's list?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: That's right.

MRS. JUDD: Because I would like to speak to Bill Hanna's amendment when the time comes, I will pass at this point.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Lesinski.

MR. LESINSKI: Pass.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I'd like to ask the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin, a question, if I may.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin, do you care to answer?

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Martin, was there in your committee any demand from the cities for this proposal?

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Brake, I think I'd have to say there was no direct demand for it. The committee was conscious of the fact that in many areas there may well be, in the future, a desire to establish a civil service system and the purpose of this is simply to make that possible. This is a matter of a good many years ahead, of course. The civil service program has worked well generally and some local units have adopted it or have provided it under their home rule provision, which felt that we should have a flexible provision which would enable local units to adopt such a system with the approval of their electors if they felt it was desirable.

MR. BRAKE: You didn't hear from any townships or counties, I take it?

MR. MARTIN: I don't think we had any specific request that this be provided for, no.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. Chairman, the legislature without any possible question has the power to take care of everything that is here except possibly the matter of the aid from the state civil service system. And as Mr. Martin has just confirmed, and as far as I have ever heard, there is no demand from cities, counties, townships for this service whatsoever.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman, we have an amendment coming up and I'd like to reserve my time for that amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Is there anyone else to speak on the proposal? Dr. Pollock. Is this on the proposal?

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, it is in reply to Mr. Brake's comment. I can't recall that anybody in the state legislature or in the state government wanted civil service at the state level either. But it proved to be a very necessary thing and I think with the growing population and the growing complexities of the problems of government at the state level, it will become just as necessary there as it was at the state level.

While I am on my feet, I would like to add my comment to that of the chairman of the committee, that this substitute that Mr. Hanna has brought together is a good example of the deliberative process at work. They were able to come forth with language which I think is a distinct improvement over what we brought forward from the committee and clarifies some of the questions that were raised with me yesterday. I therefore hope that that amendment can pass. The only question I have heard about it is with regard to school districts. There may be some question of including school districts in the list.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The secretary will read the first amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon has offered the following amendment to Committee Proposal 76:

1. Amend page 1, line 10, after "employment.", by striking out the balance of the section; leaving the section to stand as the first sentence only, to read:

Sec. a. The legislature shall by law establish a system under which the civil divisions of the state, including cities and villages, may choose to provide for the merit principle in employment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, what happened to the Hanna amendment?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: It will be offered in its order.

MR. FAXON: Well, I put this in yesterday before the discussion began because I felt that the first sentence took care of the merit principle in terms of spelling out what the legislature shall do and that the balance of the 2 sentences dealt more with details as to how it was to be carried out. I don't know that I care to say anything more about it because I am not quite certain whether I want to keep it in, in view of the new amendment that Mr. Hanna has offered. I wonder if Mr. Hanna would care to comment on it.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, point of inquiry. If I offer my amendment as a substitute for the committee proposal and amendments thereto, will it take precedence with the Chair?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The answer is, no. The ruling is that we perfect this proposal by any amendments that are on file before we take up the substitute.

MR. W. F. HANNA: May I ask Mr. Faxon if he will take my amendment as a substitute for his amendment?

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, can I withdraw my amendment pending action upon Mr. Hanna's amendment?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: You can withdraw your amendment.

MR. FAXON: So that we may act upon his?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Secretary, are there any amendments ahead of the Hanna amendment?

SECRETARY CHASE: There are 2 other amendments on file ahead of Mr. Hanna's amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: We will have to take those up. Will you withdraw your amendment?

MR. FAXON: This one here, yes.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Faxon withdraws his amendment. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Shackleton, Seyferth, G. E. Brown, Brake and Boothby offer the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, by striking out all of section a.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Saginaw, Mr. Shackleton.

MR. SHACKLETON: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, the reason for this amendment, or the reasons — there are several — this idealistic, innocent executive committee proposal may not be as innocuous as it might first appear. It says that the legislature "shall" pass a law which "may" make possible, for a fee, for the state's more than 1500 political subdivisions to use the state civil service commission's services to assist them in a supposed need for improvement in the employment and use of their public servants. Before hurriedly or lightly voting on this — we are led to believe — harmless proposal, some consideration should be given to some facts as to where resulting action could and might lead.

First, the background of what the convention has approved thus far: one, we have created an appointed commission of 4 members, not more than 2 of which shall be of the same party. If more than 2 parties are represented, the 2 of the same party can control the commission. If 2 are from one major party and the other 2 from the other major party, a deadlock would result. Staggered terms do not overcome such a possibility. Two, the acts of the commission are untouchable by the legislature, the governor or the administrative head of government. Thus we have, three, an unrecognized all powerful fourth branch of government in addition to the 3 recognized gubernatorial, legislative and judicial branches. Four, there are no effective checks on this unrecognized branch of government, whereas we do have checks on the 3 recognized branches. Five, the employed, the civil service commission, has more authority than the employer, the state of Michigan. Six, the allegiance of state employees, except for infinitesimal number of exempt positions, is to a bureaucracy and not to those who must carry out the work as provided by the legislature, the governor, the department heads, those responsible for getting the work done. Attempted interference by those whose duties are to direct the work puts those people on trial to carry the defense against inefficiency, shortcomings, refusal to carry out instructions, rather than the accused employee who can hide behind the civil service. Seven, the constitution has usurped a legislative function and duty. This has been conceded by one of the authors of the present section 22, article VI.

Some of the requirements to make the proposed section effective are, one, the legislature "shall" enact a law to make permissive certain so called beneficial objectives. Two, the law could not be sufficient in detail to take care of all contingencies for 1500 separate political subdivisions. On this floor, we have heard the statement that "laws could not meet our individual needs" as coming from, I believe, the director of either the Detroit or the Wayne civil service, and it was necessary to have spelled out something separate from them, which we have done. The civil service commission could not service even a small percentage of our political subdivisions, at any rate, for a reasonable fee, unless the provisions were sufficiently broad to establish a pattern for all, to fit into mass routine and the handling of a potential of 220,000 political subdivision employees. Incidentally, this figure does not coincide with the figure that was mentioned on the floor yesterday but it is a figure obtained from the librarian. To treat each township, village, city, town or county on an individual basis would be essentially an impossible task. To obtain efficiency, it could well be that the present pattern used for the state would have to be used. Three, any such law would make permissive the surrender by a local government of a local governmental function, in the one area at least, to an all powerful, over powerful bureau or commission in Lansing. Four, it could be an opening wedge for state government to encroach further upon local governmental functions and control, making it ever easier to get away from home rule or from our grass roots control which should be preserved. Five, without specific prohibitions, wage scales, fringe benefits, working conditions and standards would no longer be established locally. This would result in the increasing of local taxes at a time when they do not have enough taxes. Based on past civil service actions, as far as raises and fringe benefits are concerned, they could become effective after local units had adopted their budgets. Six, much has been said about preserving rights in this convention. The rights of the government should be preserved and not surrendered to a commission or bureau.

Some of the possible results if this should become enacted: 1, the evils of present interim appointments could become statewide. This would be an extension of the present underground patronage system; 2, local government's employees would become subservient to a bureau in Lansing with its umbrella coverage to the fourth unrecognized branch of government and not to the local government from which their pay checks would come; 3, the civil service commission claims it needs 1 per cent of the total state payroll for operations. Unless the state expects to indirectly subsidize political subdivisions, all local payrolls would have to go up to meet the fee to be charged to the local units. There is no experience to judge how much the charge would have to be before such a large increase of work load. Present facilities would be grossly inadequate. Unless these services would be on a specific contract basis, again the local units might find their charges adjusted without notice and after budgets were approved; 4, it is the history of bureaus and commissions, when once given authority, that they exercise it on an ever expanding basis. Not being accountable to the legislature or to the governor for expenditures, it would be only human for the civil service commission to use funds to propogandize and bring pressure on local units of government in order to use this "permissive" service so that the commission would build its empire ever larger and seemingly more important. Many, particularly smaller political subdivisions, find it easier to submit to a higher form of government than to resist. That is why in the federal government and at the state level more and more political subdivisions rely on outside assistance rather than solve their own problems. That is why local state's rights have been surrendered to a more centralized government. Local rights, as well as state's rights, as President Eisenhower warned, should be recaptured and not surrendered; 5, such a law could readily be accepted by some local officials that they might escape local pressure for the responsibility of making salary adjustments. This could become a beautiful buck passing scheme, even though surrendering rights just to escape one of the disagreeable responsibilities for which they were elected by the people; 6, the civil service commissioners would be less than human if they did not try to achieve control over all public employees, other than federal, if the groundwork is laid; 7, there is no reason to believe that the commission would not ultimately try to get school employees under their empire and jurisdiction; 8, the following figures were given to me by our librarian: the number of employed persons in the state, September 1961, 2,723,300; state employees, approximately 34,000; all political subdivision employees, 220,000. As I said, this does not coincide with the figure given yesterday. Total state and political subdivision employees, if they were all to come under it, 254,000.

The civil service commission — not responsible to the legislature, not responsible to the governor, not responsible to the people or voters — now controls, without any checks, the employment and wages of 1.6 per cent of the total employed in Michigan. If the state employees, plus political subdivision employees are included, their control would be 7.2 per cent of the employed population of the state. It would mean a 460 per cent increase in the number of employees serviced or controlled. There does not appear, as Mr. Brake brought out, to be any evidence of a demand recorded or suggested that the counties, townships, cities or villages are clamoring for this provision.

This does not mean that I am opposed to merit systems, either state or locally. I am not opposed to sound merit systems. Who ever dreamed in 1941 that the present section 22 would become an uncontrolled behemoth? You may think the imagination is running loose, imagining impossible results if this proposed section is adopted. There are about 10,000 more state employees now than in 1950. How many more state and local employees will there be by 1970? To build an empire takes an imagination. We are derelict in our duty if we do not try, in all our sections, to imagine what might happen the next 25 to 50 years. We should certainly try to imagine where our present oligarchy, the civil service commission, in its present framework of our constitution, may go unchecked if we permit their enlarged authority.

We have already adopted section m in Committee Proposal 81, which provides that all other counties may establish merit systems as established by law. We certainly don't need to spell out for a third time in the proposed constitution this section, along with 2 other sections on civil service. The committee on local government views this as a statutory provision. Mr. Ostrow and Mr. Allen pointed out very effectively some of the things here yesterday. Therefore, I suggest that you think well before you create an untouchable, uncontrollable, possible Frankenstein and urge the adoption of this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Kalamazoo, Delegate Allen.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Chairman, I think that the remarks made by Mr. Shackleton and the Shackleton amendment would, if the choice before this convention were simply whether or not to take the committee proposal or to have nothing at all, be very much in point. In other words, if the choice before us today were to take the committee proposal or to take the Schackleton amendment, which would strike it out, then I certainly, personally, would favor the Shackleon amendment. However, if this Shackleton amendment should fail, we have coming up the Hanna amendment. And the Hanna amendment provides that any city, county or village which wishes to do so — and this is purely voluntary — may have its own civil service system. It then provides that if it wishes to do so, it may secure technical assistance from the state. So it is voluntary in both ways. Now, my feeling is that the Hanna amendment cures the defects which I mentioned last night, which Mr. Ostrow mentioned, and which Mr. Shackleton mentioned this morning, and that the real choice before us therefore is not whether we have nothing at all under the Shackleton amendment, if it passes, but the choice is whether we have a purely permissive basis which the Hanna amendment would permit. And, therefore, while last night I would have favored striking the whole thing, I think that the Hanna amendment, if we get to it, cures all the defects and I personally feel that the Hanna amendment would be a better thing to do since it allows the system of civil service on a purely voluntary basis, does not make the state come into it, establishes no state system. Therefore, because I feel that from a parliamentary point of view, that if the Shackleton amendment passes, there is nothing that the Hanna amendment can be substituted for, that it would be better to vote no on the Shackleton amendment with the intention of voting yes on the Hanna amendment which comes up next.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate McCauley.

MR. McCAULEY: Mr. Chairman, if it is permissible, I'd like to direct a question to Mr. Allen.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Allen, if you care to answer.

MR. ALLEN: Yes, sir.

MR. McCAULEY: Glenn, I would like to know — you were speaking against the Shackleton amendment — don't you feel this whole field is purely legislative in nature? Why does it have to be put into the constitution? It is my feeling that if the legislature wants to provide for local units of government to avail themselves of state service, they'll have that right by an act of the legislature. I don't see why it is necessary that we get embroiled in the constitution with this type of language.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. McCauley, if we took out everything that we have written so far that is legislative and could be put in by the legislature, I think we would reduce the work that we already have passed by at least 50 per cent. In other words, we aren't doing anything different in this than we have done in many other sections. I suppose the other answer is that the legislature hasn't passed such an act across the board. A city doesn't have to take advantage of it. This simply says a city may do it. So I see no harm.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mrs. Judd.

MRS. JUDD: I'd like to attempt to reply to Mr. McCauley and also to Mr. Brown on the question as to whether this belongs in the constitution. It seems to me that the way the present committee proposal is worded, most all of it is statutory with the exception of the last sentence. I am not a lawyer but I think the question might be raised as to whether the state civil service commission would have power to render these services under contract to local government unless this were put in the constitution, in view of the fact that the entire workings of the civil service commission are in the constitution.

On the question of the relation of this proposal to the possibility of local government having civil service, I would like to refer you to the section m in the local government article, which refers to civil service in counties. Counties over a million, the provision says, shall have the power. In other words, this is a self executing provision to a county and it would not have been possible by statute. If we wish to give similar power to counties under a million, we would, I think, also have to put it in the constitution. Now, it is true the legislature has the power to permit local units of government to have civil service if they want to. But what has happened through the years is that they have classified counties by population and for a long time, there was an act on the books which permitted counties of 300,000 or more to have the merit system. But what happened was that when Kent county and Genesee county reached that level, the legislature changed the law to raise it to 500,000. So obviously, the legislature is not very sympathetic to this sort of thing and consequently, we are proposing that it be made self executing in the constitution and this would be constitutional rather than statutory.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, in inverse order to which they were presented, I first would like to answer Mrs. Judd. That is, of course, that Committee Proposal 81 as amended by this committee does provide that all other counties may establish such merit systems as provided by law. So there is constitutional provision now for other counties to do it in accordance with whatever legislative enactment may be made by the legislature.

And I would answer to my good friend from Kalamazoo, Mr. Allen: it seems to me that in the past when we have put things into the constitution, which we thought to be in all honesty legislative detail, it was done because there had been a great hue and cry to the legislature to do something in this field and nothing had been done. The question was raised with respect to practically every one of these provisions, that the legislature has failed to do it, they need some direction, it needs to be mandatory; so, therefore, we have put in this legislative detail due to the fact the legislature has not acted. I have yet to hear testimony before this committee that there has been such a great hue and cry to the legislature to do something in this field with respect to local units of government. If that is the case and it is presented here, I may change my view; but until that time, I think this is statutory detail that should not be in the constitution and that there is no real need for it. I would once again support the amendment to strike the whole language.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Muskegon, William Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, when we were discussing Committee Proposal 81 regarding the county home rule and county civil service, one of the problems raised by the delegate from Wayne county was the fact that the legislature from time to time by act tampered with the civil service provisions and that Wayne county could not run its own civil service program by its own legislative body and be subject to the right of referendum by its own people. Now, if we proceed to strike this out — Mr. Brake and others have argued that this is legislative power, that the legislature could do this, and I think this is true. But let me show you the danger to this. This means that the legislature could pass an act saying that all townships having a population of between 5,000 and 25,000 will be under civil service, and these are the provisions. And all townships would be under it, whether they liked it or not, and whether it applied specifically to their local unit or not. In my township, for instance, with a volunteer fire department, there seems to be little need for civil service as applied to fire departments. But supposing the legislature in its wisdom said that all townships had to place their fire departments under civil service. Now, if the legislature has the power to enact civil service, they have the power to enact a uniform statute, and under our language, we say they must act by general law whenever it is possible. Therefore, we are saying to the legislature, if civil service is required, you will act and then all these political subdivisions find themselves under a general law; and this has caused the problem today with cities; it has interfered with their effective home rule; it would interfere with township home rule, county home rule; and interfere with the people's rights within a given political subdivision to determine for themselves whether or not they want civil service.

Now, Mr. Brown raises the question: has there been legislative enactment? I'll give you a concrete example, Mr. Garry Brown. There was proposed by both the Democratic and Republican legislators from my county a proposal to place the sheriff's department in counties of our population under civil service. This was advocated by both Democrats and Republicans in Muskegon county, but because we had to classify counties by population, we obviously were stepping on the toes of Berrien county, or other counties falling within the population of approximately 150,000. Now, this provision, if stricken out, forces the legislature to adopt a uniform statute applied to sheriff's departments falling within the category of 150,000. Berrien county may not want it; Muskegon county may want it. If we defeat the Shackleton amendment, the amendment which I provide simply says that the people of Muskegon county could, if they wanted to, adopt, by a majority vote, the merit system — and they could apply it to the sheriff's department — it would apply only to Muskegon county. Berrien county could copy it or not copy it, as it saw fit, and we increase the home rule. Now, to the extent that we increase home rule, we are strengthening local government. To the extent that we strengthen local government, we keep the state out of our local affairs. And so I recommend that if it is the power of the legislature, which Mr. Shackleton and those who oppose the amendment admit, then we are creating a dangerous monster because the legislature could enact a uniform statute, in the terms of the committee proposal, to which we all object. The provision which I put in this amendment prevents the legislature from passing this civil service by a special amendment or special law, but says to each local unit: you may or may not, as you desire, by a vote of your people, have civil service, and you can have civil service and tailor it to your local problem. It then goes on and says that if you are able to have good technical services, you may contract with the state civil service for technical service. It does not mean that state civil service can operate this system but they may furnish technical advice. All that we have heard about local, county, city and so forth civil service seems to indicate that the best civil service is that which is locally controlled, and this will guarantee it to the political subdivisions if we vote down the Shackleton amendment and adopt my amendment.

MR. WANGER: Point of information.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: State your point.

MR. WANGER: If the Shackleton amendment passes, does that mean that we cannot consider the Hanna amendment?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The ruling is that the Hanna amendment could be offered as a new section if the Shackleton amendment carries. The Chair recognizes Mr. Shackleton.

MR. SHACKLETON: Mr. Chairman, Mrs. Judd did not read the last sentence of section m, which says, "All other counties may establish such merit systems as provided by law."

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Seyferth, the delegate from Muskegon.

MR. SEYFERTH: Mr. Chairman, delegates, this is a rather confusing discussion. My notes are prepared to talk against the committee proposal. We have had so many amendments before us since then it somewhat confuses the issue. However, I think the basic premise is still there. First of all, I am one of those individuals who feels that civil service is a necessary evil. At its very best, it's not good. So starting from that premise and as a commissioner and a supervisor of Muskegon county, I have some potentially, I think, realistic boogeyman envisionments. I feel that as the committee proposal has been presented, that certain exceptions could be taken not in the intent — the intent I respect and admire and the objectives that they're trying to do — I take exception to the method of implementation. Due to the very nature of the question, some boogeyman questions come to my mind, and they simply are these — and I am not asking for answers because I don't think that they can be logically answered.

First of all, in adopting a proposal such as this we are taking another step towards, shall we say, statehouse centralization. Now, bear in mind that at the moment I am speaking against the committee proposal and in favor of the Shackleton amendment. This proposal is permissive now. Would it at a later date be mandatory on the local units? Would the next step after merit principle implementation at the local level be a control in the form of suggested wages and salaries to fit the now suggested established classifications? These are just questions that come to my mind that I think could be very real. This entire subject is a function to be enjoyed by local units of government, for them to handle as they see fit.

I noticed on the bottom of the page of the journal that the committee on local government felt also by majority opinion that this matter was legislative and not constitutional. However, I am speaking now and adding further to the confusion, if I am in order, Mr. Chairman, on the Hanna amendment and some statements that Mr. Hanna just made. I wholeheartedly agree with the privilege of local units of government voting on whether or not they will entertain the merit system of civil service. But I object wholeheartedly to any tie in with the state civil service in any manner whatsoever. I feel that that is a control that the local units of government should entirely abandon and never allow to come under their sections of domain. If the local units of government desire to have civil service in this instance and they vote for it, then make it a part of the provision that they finance and pay and obtain counsel not in conjunction with the state civil service act. I move to support the Shackleton amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Bay City, Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman and delegates, it would appear to me that under the original committee proposal and the Hanna amendment, we are being asked to put something into this constitution that not one of the 1500 affected political units in the state wants badly enough to have asked this convention for. That being the case, I feel obliged to vote for the Shackleton amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Wanger. Not here? Delegate Boothby.

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen of the committee, some seem to believe that all you have to do is mention the words "merit system," especially if those words are drafted in the constitution, and then magically, all civil service positions are taken out of the political plum classification. Now let us read from the suggested provision which has come out as the committee recommendation, to see how effective it would be — and I call to your attention the wording beginning with line 10. It says:

> In such civil divisions, appointments and promotions in the civil service shall be made according to merit and fitness to be ascertained, as far as practicable, by examination which, as far as practicable, shall be competitive.

Now, I want you to watch those words "as far as practicable" because they are surely words which dilute the intention of the previous statement.

I think maybe we should read or take note of a newspaper report which appeared in one of my local county newspapers as late as March 16, 1962, last Friday. This appeared in the St. Joseph Herald Press. It is a report of an executive committee meeting of a major party in my county of which I am not a member. And it reads as follows — it mentions this particular party and it says:

> . . . who have been arguing for months over patronage, now has a special committee to screen applicants for endorsement by the county committee. The executive committee at a meeting in February had approved the patronage committee, to serve as a screening board, for applicants for postal and other governmental jobs under civil service regulation. But there was some question over whether executive committee members also should serve on the patronage group. Questionnaires will be sent to each local committee which wants to recommend someone for a civil service job. Each city and township will be entitled to a 5 man committee to screen local applicants. Those will be forwarded to the county patronage committee, where they will be rated on the basis of 60 per cent for job qualifications, 20 per cent for local party activity, and 20 per cent pure patronage. (laughter)

Now what I want to know is under this committee report, when it starts talking about "as far as practicable," as far as fitness and merit is concerned, any examination "as far as practicable," does that mean that 20 per cent can go to party patronage, party activity and 20 per cent to pure patronage? Is that what those words mean?

It seems that the provision suggested is a sleeping pill approach. We don't cure the problem but we put the people to sleep so they don't know what the bad things are that are going on. I would not delude the people into thinking that this provision would take government jobs out of politics. I do not oppose the laudible objectives; in fact, I applaud them. But it would seem to me that we cannot remove this evil by worshipping at the shrine of the merit system and ignoring what actually is now taking place in my county and other counties of the state. I do oppose invisible politics which is now taking place and which is now existing in civil service.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mrs. Judd.

MRS. JUDD: It appears to me that this debate is mostly centered against the principle of the merit system in civil service. And I would remind the committee that we have long ago settled this problem when we voted by good majority to adopt the state civil service system. And the question before us is simply whether we shall make the services of that department available to local government when and if they should want that kind of service. It strikes me that the proponents of this deletion are raising up a lot of ghosts. I think that the very objections that have offered demonstrate how little and how slowly the merit principle would be adopted by local units of government and that it would indeed be the millenium when 1500 local units of government rush up on the state civil service department for help.

Secondly, I spoke a moment ago about the fact that the legislature had increased the minimum population basis for counties to have a merit system and Delegate Hutchinson informs me that this was done at the request of the supervisors of the 2 counties involved. This ties in with Mr. Brake's point that there has not been any great demand on this convention on the part of the people to give local units of government this opportunity. This same situation was reflected in our experience in the local government committee, where almost all of the demands for any kind of provisions came from the various 10 or 15 associations of county officers and we heard from only one citizens' organization in the state. Indeed if we had weighed the evidence by the ton, there would be no county home rule provision proposed for our constitution today.

I think that what we must ask ourselves in this question is: for whom are we writing the constitution and for when? Is it for the present or past? Is it for the future? Is it for the officers or is it for the people?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Does Delegate Bentley wish to be recognized? Apparently not. The question is on the Shackleton amendment. Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: There have been several references to the idea that the state civil service commission would somehow in some manner dominate these local systems or be involved in them. The wording of the committee proposal and the subsequent amendments that have been offered, I think, are quite clear. They are only authorized to furnish technical services on a reimbursable basis. I don't think there is the slightest likelihood that the state civil service commission can be involved in any way in determining the policies or programs of these local units. It seems to me that it is desirable to defeat the present amendment and then to consider the Hanna amendment. I hope that the committee will vote in that manner.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Shackleton amendment. A division has been asked for. Is the demand seconded? Enough up. All those in favor of the Shackleton amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? The secretary will lock the machine and tally the vote. Mrs. Judd.

MRS. JUDD: I was voting for the deletion on the assumption that the Hanna amendment may still be proposed. Am I correct in that?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: You are correct. Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: I'd just like to suggest that it would be a good idea if we turned it all off, now that they're all in here, and take another vote so that we're sure that some haven't voted twice. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The secretary says that's agreeable to him. He is kind of confused too. We are voting on the Shackleton amendment. Clear the machine, everybody. Will you please clear the machine, everybody. The question is on the Shackleton amendment. All in favor will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote. Will the sergeant at arms check the bell? It is stated that the bell is not ringing downstairs. Will you please check it?

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the amendment offered by Mr. Shackleton and others, the yeas are 56; the nays are 59.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon has filed an amendment —

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Is Mr. Faxon here? If not, his amendment will be passed.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. W. F. Hanna offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "Each city, village, township, county, school district and metropolitan government may, by a majority vote of the electors voting thereon, establish a merit system for its employees. The state civil service commission may furnish technical services on a reimbursable basis to any city, village, township, county, school district or metropolitan government requesting the same.".

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Delegate Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, I already explained this in answer to Mr. Shackleton's amendment and do not propose to go into it further. There is a minor typographical error on the second from the last line. There should be a comma between "county" and "school district" so that it is not "county school district" but it is "county" as distinguished from "school district."

[Correction made, see above.]

Now, a question has been raised as to why school districts? The committee proposal referred to civil subdivisions and I believe a school district is a civil subdivision of the state. The question then raised is: is it necessary for school districts in view of the possibility of school districts coming under the school tenure act? It is my understanding, and I would be glad to be corrected if wrong, that the tenure act only applies to educational staff, to wit, the teachers. It does not apply to the janitors, the secretaries or the other administrative personnel that are connected with the school districts. That is the reason for my leaving "school district" in. First it was a civil subdivision, and secondly, there are members, as I understand it, not covered by the tenure act. And it seems to me that if the people in the city of Detroit or in my school district wish to establish by their vote a merit principle with regard to the janitors in their school district, that they should have that privilege. But because some question has been raised with regard to school districts, I request at this time that when the vote is taken, that we divide this question and vote first upon the inclusion or noninclusion of school districts in the third line and in the second from the last line, and then vote on the amendment as I have submitted it, either without or with the words "school district" included, so that the persons perturbed about the inclusion of school districts shall have an opportunity to express their vote separate and distinct, if that is permissible. Mr. Chairman, may the question be divided so that we vote on school districts first and then the balance of the amendment?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: You have a right to divide the question.

MR. W. F. HANNA: I so request, that the question be divided so that we vote first upon the school districts, and then subsequently on the balance of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Allen requested to talk on this amendment some time ago. Do you wish to —

MR. ALLEN: I pass.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Delegate Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman, a question to Mr. Hanna. Mr. Hanna, is there anything in your amendment that the legislature could not do tomorrow if it so desired?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Do you have a point of order, Mr. Barthwell?

MR. BARTHWELL: Yes, Mr. Chairman, I think we got a ruling previously that to strike and insert was not a divisible question and I'd like the Chair's ruling on that.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair thinks, Mr. Hanna, we have it straight now. Mr. Barthwell is right. You can offer an amendment to your amendment. That is the way it would have to be handled.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, I don't wish to argue with the Chair. It was my understanding that an amendment to strike and insert was not divisible, but a request to divide the proposition was permissible.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: An amendment to strike out and insert is not divisible under our rules but you may offer an amendment.

MR. W. F. HANNA: I'll leave it alone. In answer to Mr. Danhof: could the legislature do this now?

MR. DANHOF: Yes.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Yes, they could. They could go much further, and that is what worries me. I would like to prevent the legislature from passing a general act and blanketing all these people under a state system of civil service. This is the very thing I don't want to happen and this is the reason for this amendment.

MR. DANHOF: Thank you. Mr. Chairman, I favor home rule as much as anyone else and the right for a particular subdivision to determine their own fate, but I beg of the members of this committee that they look at this particular amendment and see what type of a Frankenstein they might be creating 50 years from now. We have in this state 1500 artificially made political subdivisions, all of which have been created under and by the authority of the legislature. There is no sanctity to school districts or to cities or to townships except as we make them. And what you are going to do is make it available for 1500 different types of civil service to exist in this state without any possibility of the legislature in the future having any type of control. You don't do it for city home rule. You haven't done it for county home rule. But you are now going to freeze into this constitution an absolute prohibition against the legislature ever trying to correct any of the evils or trying to make any sense out of a civil service jungle which is going to be created between town and town, between township and township, between county and county.

Now, the problem hasn't been that the legislature has gone too far. And I submit that this particular act is probably what the legislature would enact if the counties and the cities and the townships wanted it. But envision, if you will, 40 or 50 years from now, when perhaps there reside in this state 11 million people and you have numerous counties of over a half a million or approaching a million people, and each of them live side by side with a different type of merit system. There is no particular sanctity about school districts. If the legislature would desire, it could make the state of Michigan one school district, they are all creatures of the state. Sure, we allow home rule and we are going to have county home rule. But it is going to be under the supervision and the direction of the legislature.

We passed in this convention a type of home rule which the legislature would set up for the various counties. Now what you are going to do is tie one hamstring in it and state that when it comes to civil service, everybody can jump on their own horse and ride off in a 360 degree fashion. I repeat I am for home rule. I think again, we are getting into legislative detail. I think that you will be creating something which, if it proves unworkable, if it proves to become too complex, you have absolutely no way of getting any type or semblance of order out of the chaos which might develop. It is far better that we either grant or direct the legislature to pass whatever acts it deems necessary for civil service, or that we would have adopted the Shackleton amendment which in effect would have left it to the legislature also. If you adopt this particular type of amendment, I submit that you are creating and sowing the seeds for discord and discontent and a great deal of confusion — not today, not tomorrow, but 20, 30, 40 or 50 years from now, when you have counties which have become so entrenched and their systems are so different that, because of local pride, they won't change and yet you have a confused situation. Far better we leave it to the legislature under the committee proposal than to adopt this type of self executing, mandatory prohibition against the legislature from ever doing anything in the field of civil service. I will admit they may have tampered with it in the past. The problem lies then in our legislators. Now we're trying to write this particular type of a provision into our constitution. For that reason, I cannot support the amendment and I would urge its defeat.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Taylor, Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: The point that I was going to make was already taken care of by Delegate Barthwell. I would like to ask Delegate Hanna, though, if he can give me the reasoning behind his wanting to separate or divide the school districts.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Hanna, do you care to answer?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Marshall, I made the statement, I thought, clearly; it is because some people raised the question whether this would conflict with the teacher tenure act. It is my feeling that it would, but that was the reason why I wanted to divide it.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Barthwell, do you wish to be recognized?

MR. BARTHWELL: No.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair would like to make a comment. The Chair thinks Delegate Barthwell has now passed the second course toward his degree. (laughter)

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Owosso, Delegate Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, since I feel that the Hanna amendment more clearly spells out the intent of the original proposal as coming from the committee on executive branch, I move to support it. I do not feel, Mr. Chairman, that Mr. Hanna needs to be too concerned about this matter of employees of school districts being included on a permissive basis. I think that since it is pretty clearly understood that this would not conflict with the teachers' tenure act, this would only apply to so called nonteaching employees in an administrative or custodial capacity, I think there is hardly any need myself to offer a separate amendment in this connection unless of course, he feels inclined to do so. As chairman of the education committee, I would have no hesitation in voting for the amendment as it stands, including these nonteaching employees of the school district, if so desired by the electors of that district.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, only with respect to Mr. Danhof's comment, if you are dealing with something like powers of taxation, something of that sort, of course, it is essential that specific limits be put on what kind of taxation the local units may use and employ. When you are dealing with civil service, you are dealing with an essentially local problem which doesn't require that there be uniformity. In fact, each local unit may want to establish a system that is somewhat different from some other local unit. And there is no reason why they shouldn't. And the Hanna amendment recognizes this and permits them to use their judgment. Some may want to have very extensive civil service systems. Some may not want any at all. Or some may want a very modest system applying only to a portion of their employees. It is the very flexibility that is needed in this particular field and it will not do any harm to have different local units using different civil service programs. In fact, it is desirable that the people be able to establish the kind of system in each particular unit which the people want. That's the purpose of the amendment, I am sure.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Downs.

MR. DOWNS: May I pass for a moment, Mr. Chairman?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, a question through the Chair to Delegate Hanna. The amendment states that the majority vote of the electors voting thereon is necessary to establish this merit system by the very reasoning that I would presume that any change in it would also have to be submitted to that electorate and any amendments would have to be submitted to that electorate and be adopted by it as well. Now, my question is this: do you think there is sufficient flexibility under your amendment so that rules could be made by an appropriate body or agency of this established merit system which would not have to be voted upon by the people? As I read it, it says the merit system itself certainly would have to, in any case where a change is necessary, be submitted once again to the people for their adoption or rejection.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Do you care to answer, Mr. Hanna?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Wanger, this is not what the amendment says. Your premise is not correct. Once the people voted to establish a merit system, the legislative body would establish such merit system, the details of which would be established by ordinance. Under our present law, all ordinances are subject to referendum, and I would assume that we are preserving that right so that minor amendments and so forth — changes that are necessary in the ordinance — would be taken care of, just as an ordinance that establishes the fire department in a given township or the police department, such ordinances are subject to referendum. It is true that to establish and to start and determine whether or not the employees shall be under a merit system or whether they should be under a personnel board or whether they should be simply political patronage pure and simple is the voice given to the people by my amendment.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, Delegate Hanna, it says the system shall be established by a vote of the people. I take it then that any part of the system could then be changed without going back to the people. Is that my understanding of your interpretation of the language?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Wanger, this is just like the constitution says, that the legislature shall levy taxes. We don't say that it will levy a specific tax on a phone call that I make to Muskegon. We leave this to the legislature to implement by statute. The statute, however, is subject to referendum.

MR. WANGER: Well, you'd have to have a referendum then whenever there was any change in your system.

MR. W. F. HANNA: That is not correct.

MR. WANGER: In other words, the people could establish it and the local governing body could repeal it for all practical purposes?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, would Mr. Wanger repeat his last question?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Will you repeat your question, Mr. Wanger?

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Hanna, then I understand that the people could vote to establish a system and then following that at some time the legislative body of the division of government could repeal it or modify it to the extent as to operate as a repeal?

MR. W. F. HANNA: I would assume so, Mr. Wanger, and if the legislative body so circumscribed the merit system by ordinance that it did not in fact exist, that ordinance would be subject to referendum and those members of that board would be subject to retirement by a vote of the people at the next election or sooner if they desired, by recall.

MR. WANGER: Is there legal precedent for this proposition that when the constitution states that the voters may establish something, then the legislative body may repeal it? It seems to me to follow inexorably, from your language here, that any change in the system itself would have to be submitted to a popular vote before it becomes effective. I wonder if there is a precedent here.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Wanger, I only point to the 1908 constitution concerning city home rule. It says that the legislature shall provide for city home rule. We didn't say how; we didn't give them the number of the charter commission; we didn't say if it was a majority vote of the property owners or the voters. We didn't say that each city that adopted home rule had to have a city clerk, an assessor, a legislative body, a mayor, an executive, a board of review. We did not spell it out in the constitution. There is considerable legal precedent for stating a principle in the constitution and leaving it to the implementation of the legislative body or the people.

MR. WANGER: Do you recall the number of the section in the local government article?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Are you directing a question, Mr. Wanger?

MR. WANGER: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: To whom?

MR. WANGER: To Delegate Hanna, Mr. Chairman. (laughter) Mr. Chairman, Delegate Hanna, do you recall the section in the local government article establishing city home rule? I am looking for it now and I —

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Wanger, I have never made it a practice to either memorize the constitution or the Bible by verse and chapter. I am sure it is in there.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Any further comments, Mr. Wanger?

MR. WANGER: Yes, Mr. Chairman, merely that the analogy which is drawn between the legal effect of this section and the legal effect of the city home rule section, as I recall that section, is not valid inasmuch as the language is not clearly the same.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Are you arising to speak on this amendment, Mr. Faxon?

MR. FAXON: Yes. I have an amendment to the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: We are not to that yet. The Chair will recognize the delegate from Detroit, Dr. Norris.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, a question to Delegate Hanna.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Hanna, if you desire to answer.

MR. NORRIS: Getting back to the matter with regard to the teachers' tenure act, as I understand the teachers' tenure act, it permits on an optional basis a community to come within the provisions of the state tenure act. Would this mean then that in those communities where you do not have a teacher tenure act then that if the words "school district" are incorporated in your amendment, then the teachers would then come within the comprehension of the language you propose?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Dr. Norris, I would assume that if the merit system were to be applied to the teachers and the voters approved this, this could be done.

MR. NORRIS: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Hanna, it may then operate to encourage those communities that may not have a teacher tenure act to pass one in order that the merit system might apply to nonteacher personnel in the school districts and the teacher tenure act would apply to the teachers. Would that be a logical conclusion from that?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Dr. Norris, in those districts that have adopted the teacher tenure act and felt the necessity to apply civil service to its other employees and I would assume desirable, this would allow them to do so. Those districts which have not adopted the teacher tenure act and wish to include their teachers as well as their nonteaching staff under civil service, and a majority of the people voted therefor, this would be permissible.

MR. NORRIS: It would be the intent of your amendment, Mr. Chairman, Delegate Hanna, to give priority to the teacher tenure act? In other words, if this amendment went through and a community did pass a teacher tenure act, that means the teacher tenure act would take care of the teachers and the rest of the personnel would be governed by whatever act was enacted pursuant to this provision of the constitution?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Dr. Norris, I would assume that this is true.

MR. NORRIS: I just have one comment while I am on my feet. I appreciate Delegate Danhof's concern with regard to what might happen, but I think we ought to begin with where we are with regard to the principles of the merit system and the various units of government. The simple irrefragable fact is that the legislature has not acted and if we are going to plot a trajectory into the future on the basis of what the legislature has not done, it is reasonable to assume that it will not do in the future that which it is asked by this amendment that it might do. It is only permissive and as I understand it the operative impact of this amendment would be simply this: that those that are interested in the merit system and good government in various communities throughout the state would have an argument to exercise moral suasion upon the city fathers to proceed here to make the request for assistance and to get on the ballot such provisions as may be necessary for the merit system. I would support the Hanna amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Judge Leibrand.

MR. LEIBRAND: Mr. Chairman, I pass.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Faxon.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon offers the following amendment to the Hanna amendment:

1. Amend the amendment, first sentence, after "county" by striking out the comma and "school district"; and in the second sentence, after "county" by striking out the comma and "school district"; so that the language in each case would read:

> Each city, village, township, county and metropolitan government may, by a majority vote of the electors voting thereon, establish a merit system for its employees. The state civil service commission may furnish technical services on a reimbursable basis to any city, village, township, county or metropolitan government requesting the same.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I appreciate the concern which is being shown over the employees of the school district, but as has just been alluded to, the teacher tenure act takes care of the problems with regard to teaching personnel. The teacher tenure act is a permissive act which allows members in the school districts in the community to adopt tenure. So that this doesn't give anything new as far as teaching personnel is concerned. This doesn't add anything to what they already have and that has already been provided for by the legislature. As a matter of fact, I think that it has a serious setback by including the words "school district" here because of some other interpretation that could possibly be given to the use of the words "merit system". Now, I don't think I want to get into a lengthy argument on what interpretations might be attached to teaching personnel in a school district when you use the words "merit system," but I think you are opening up an avenue which was not intended by this amendment. The amendment was intended primarily to deal with the employees of cities, counties, townships and villages. As I understood it yesterday when Dr. Pollock was asked, with regard to what he meant by civil divisions, he answered cities, counties, townships and villages. This was the intent that he had alluded to, which was the intent of the committee in proposing its original draft. Therefore, I feel the inclusion of the words "school district" here adds a new dimension to it, one which was not originally intended by the committee, one which is not really necessary in terms of present protections already permitted by the legislature in the teacher tenure act, and one which would seriously hurt the intent of the whole amendment. I would urge your favorable consideration of the deletion of the words "school district" for these reasons and ask that you take action on it soon.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I would appreciate it if any member of the committee could enlighten us very generally on the percentage of school district employees who are teaching personnel and the percentage of school district employees who are not teaching personnel. It would be quite clear that this teacher tenure act, of course, would apply only to the teachers.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: To whom is your question directed, Mr. Wanger?

MR. WANGER: It was not a question. It was a statement that I would appreciate—and I am sure the other members here would appreciate—if any member with that experience in education might be able to offer a statement of what the facts in this regard would be.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Madar.

MR. MADAR: Mr. Chairman, we've been listening now for quite some time. I was in hopes that no one would be putting in any more amendments. This one that was just given to the secretary by Delegate Faxon certainly just shows us that we've got to do something here because now we find that one of the teachers doesn't want to give the other employees of the school boards the opportunity to come under a merit system. I still think we ought to go ahead and keep the school districts in and vote down this amendment and vote for the amendment by Mr. Hanna.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Tubbs.

MR. TUBBS: Mr. Chairman, I am not sure that I can answer accurately Mr. Wanger's question. All I can tell you is that in the Grand Rapids school district, which is a second class school district—there are only 2 of them in the state—we have about 1/3 fewer nonteaching employees than we have teaching employees. In other words, there are about 1200 teaching employees and roughly 900 nonteaching employees in the Grand Rapids school district.

I do not share some of the lugubrious predictions by my former chairman, Mr. Danhof, nor do I quite share the enthusiasm of Mr. Bentley for the inclusion of school districts in this proposed amendment. I am inclined to believe that the school districts would be few in number that would take advantage of it because of the conditions generally existing in the smaller districts that there are many more teaching employees than other employees. Teachers are under contract. It would be difficult, I think, to put them under civil service if you insist that the boards of education make written contracts with their teachers in order to employ them. The qualifications for teaching in this state are all determined by the state department of education so that the local units can hire only those people who are qualified. A school district, as Mr. Danhof has said, is a peculiar animal. They can all be abolished this week or next by the legislature. I agree that this is legislative in nature, but so was the whole civil service amendment in 1940. It was voted in favorably by people of this state, all of whom live in school districts, towns, villages, counties and these other places that seem to be entirely on the brink of extinction if this goes through.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Faxon amendment to the Hanna amendment which the secretary will read so that we will all know.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon's amendment is:

[The amendment was again read by the secretary. For text, see above.]

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, everybody has been running up here in anxiety over the fact that I am trying to disinherit janitors, clerks, et cetera, in the schools. I am looking at this and I invite your looking at the words too, because I think this is a question where the words may mean different things to people. I am looking at the words "merit system" and the words "merit system" may have a very definite meaning when you talk with regard to civil employees of cities, townships, counties and villages. But it has a different connotation when you discuss it in terms of schools and teachers. Now, if the intent of this is not to include teachers, then you would have to put in nonteaching personnel in school districts and I would have no objection to such an addition. But if the language is going to be as encompassing as "school districts," then I would certainly ask that it be deleted. Mr. Hanna, if you care to comment on this, I would like to hear you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Faxon, my only question to you after listening to your comments: would you hire or establish a procedure for employing teachers without regard to merit? I take it from your statement that you object to applying a merit system to teachers. I would assume that we should apply a merit system to teachers—and this is what the tenure act attempts to do, by saying that if you are a good teacher, they cannot retire you from that system by a capricious method. From listening to your argument, I am perturbed that we are going to apply a higher standard to the janitor of the school system than we do to the teacher.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Faxon, do you care to answer?

MR. FAXON: Mr. Hanna, I have already stated that the present teacher tenure act gives satisfactory protection for teaching employees in the school district and it is not my intent to see that the teachers are treated less well than the employees. They are already protected in the school district for those who choose to adopt the tenure in their district. My only worry is not in the teachers as far as the security of their job is concerned, but in the introduction of another idea which is that of a merit pay system. Now, I don't want to get into the whole merits of this, but it just seems to me that the use of the words here tends to give the impression that this is something that could be done just as one would adopt teacher tenure, or something of that sort. I, for one, choose not to get involved in that particular conflict.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Faxon, if I thought that I could slip into this constitution a provision for merit pay for teachers, I certainly would do it; but I am sure that a merit system merely means a classification based upon the job held and the length of time in grade and the qualification for that grade. And we have never applied the bonus or the piecework system to the janitor or to the top executive in any civil service. I think your worries that "merit system" may go to the argument in the school system concerning merit pay are unreasonable.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Madar.

MR. MADAR: I just wanted to say this: if I were worried, for instance, about the city of Detroit's merit system, like Delegate Faxon is worried about the teacher tenure, I'd be fighting here against this. Frankly, I feel like Delegate Norris, after the explanation from Delegate Hanna, that it doesn't bother these teachers—the tenure act—and where they haven't got it, if they wish to put it in, they'll be able to do so. However, where they don't want the tenure act, certainly the civil service system could be voted in there too if they wished to. I believe that Delegates Hanna and Norris were right in their opinions.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Judd.

MRS. JUDD: Mr. Chairman, I don't think that those of us who were interested in this amendment originally had any intentions of including the educational system and we're getting way off the subject. Let's vote in favor of Mr. Faxon's amendment and get back to the main subject.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Faxon amendment to the Hanna amendment. All in favor of the Faxon amendment will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Division has been called for. Is there support? Sufficient number up. Will the sergeant at arms check the bells in the basement to see if they are ringing all right? The question is on the Faxon amendment to the Hanna amendment. All in favor of the Faxon amendment will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the Faxon amendment to strike out of the Hanna amendment the reference to school districts, the yeas are 32; the nays are 85.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is not adopted. The Chair understands there are 3 more amendments to the Hanna amendment. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Ostrow offers the following amendment to the Hanna amendment:

1. Amend the amendment, first sentence, after "establish" by inserting a comma and "modify or discontinue"; so that the language will then read:

Each city, village, township, county, school district and metropolitan government may, by a majority vote of the electors voting thereon, establish, modify or discontinue a merit system for its employees.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Ostrow.

MR. OSTROW: Mr. Chairman and delegates, the amendment is self explanatory. All it means is that they may establish, modify and discontinue.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, I have no objection to this amendment. I had assumed if you could establish, you could take away. I have no objection to spelling out that you can do it.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Ostrow amendment to the Hanna amendment. Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I think the committee would see no objection to this amendment. It seems to carry out the general purpose and clarify it.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Ostrow amendment to the Hanna amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Messrs. Downs and Danhof offer the following amendment to the Hanna amendment:

1. Amend the amendment, first sentence, after "employees" by inserting "unless otherwise provided by law"; so the language will then read, ". . . establish, modify or discontinue a merit system for its employees unless otherwise provided by law. . . ."

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, my legal adviser, the chairman of the judiciary committee, consulted with me and I'd certainly be glad to yield to him to supplement the comments. The purpose of this is to continue the self executing part of the Hanna amendment, which I think we agree has a good value. Yet, Delegate Danhof brought up the concern that 20 or 30 years from now there might be an attempt to establish some more consistent principles, and this would permit that to be done. I think particularly it assures that the state has a right to set maximum hours for firemen and so on. Personally, if we follow Dr. Pollock's definition of the merit system, I think the matter is taken care of. But since there has been the concern on this, I do feel that this language will permit the self executing to start with and yet permit that legislative flexibility for the future. I'd be glad to yield to Mr. Danhof if he wants to supplement it.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Danhof.

MR. DANHOF: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I think this would take care of what Dr. Norris referred to. We have it; the counties will have it. If the legislature continues on the trajectory that he charted, then nothing will happen. On the other hand, I think that this would, as Mr. Downs states, give a provision to bring some order out of chaos if it would ever be needed. It is not as if you are granting it solely to the legislature because you are granting a self executing provision to the various local units of government. We used to talk about the 3 branches of government, then we got to 4 with the civil service, and we got 5 with the education; and we now have 6. Now, we have the local units who will be—if you adopt this amendment as it is—more powerful than the arm of government which in fact created them: the state. I submit that this would allow the legislature to make the necessary revisions if they are ever needed. It will be something that the legislature will have to take away from these local units of government and whenever you try to take anything away, you're going to run into a hue and cry. A buzz saw, as Mr. Karn says. But it will allow it to be done. I urge the adoption of the amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate William F. Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, a couple of questions to my friend, as of yesterday, from Muskegon. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Danhof, if you desire to answer.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Danhof, would your amendment allow the continuation of the legislature to prescribe a specific civil service act in detail for counties of 1 million or more?

MR. DANHOF: I would imagine that it might allow that, yes, Mr. Hanna. I would envision that.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Danhof, would it allow the legislature by specific act to provide a specific act governing volunteer firemen as occurs in your township and mine?

MR. DANHOF: Certainly. This is what I want.

MR. W. F. HANNA: In other words, Mr. Danhof, this is a sly way of accomplishing the striking out of the provision, as you first advocated. (laughter)

MR. DANHOF: No, because it is going to be there, Mr. Hanna, and you and I both know that the legislature doesn't act unless it is really pushed, and I think there is a great difference between the legislature having to grant something and take it away. But I do think that we need something along this line or you are in fact setting up these local units of government superior to the state, with no other provision. No other place in the constitution do you have anything like this, not even under home rule, where at least there are guidelines laid down for the charters. But here you are giving a total complete grant of authority. The legislature—as I read this and as I think any court will—once a city has adopted it, the state, if it endeavors to set any minimum standards—you talk about a merit system—it may be necessary to set minimum standards. You are going to have cities right next to each other. The standards will vary up and down and around as to what is needed for a fireman or what is needed for a policeman. I hope that they will cooperate. If they do, it will never be necessary for the legislature to act. But I do feel that no unit of local government should in any way, except where absolutely necessary—and I don't think it's been necessary here—be made superior to the state of Michigan. And I submit that if you pass this amendment as it is, you are putting in these little kingdoms and perpetuating them ad infinitum.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, we have had 50 years of experience under home rule for cities. The home rule act provides that a city may adopt a civil service provision in their charters. We have allowed cities to do this without little kingdoms except as civil service within the state or within the city creates a little kingdom. But I submit to you that even the best authorities recognize that providing for statewide standards is a dangerous practice. I submit to Mr. Danhof and the other delegates, the well worded provision of the recommended city charter under the national municipal league auspices, which clearly calls attention to a detailed chapter dealing with the merit system for city employees, and then in its comments provides that cities of a given size may wish to adopt only the first section of that chapter and the first section of that chapter merely says that employees shall be employed, promoted, discharged and transferred on a merit principle. Other cities go on and provide for detailed civil service management. Others merely take a second step and provide for a personnel board which may review any discharge or employment or set up general standards of employment even after an employee is discharged. The provisions vary. They provide that he appeal to the personnel board and they recommend to the city manager or city council as to the disciplinary action to be taken. Others give this personnel board final say and they are independent of the legislative or administrative body of a city. I submit to you, for the legislature to establish a statewide system or a statewide standard for civil service, is to make it impossible to have civil service based upon the local people. As between who we trust at this point, I prefer to trust my neighbors and not become involved in trying to establish a merit system or not establish a merit system in my township, city or county. I will trust my local voters and not get involved in the crossfire that you receive when you come to the legislature and try to impose a standard on all townships or counties of a given size. I certainly feel that the Danhof amendment also perpetuates all the objections we heard on this floor concerning the legislative interference with Wayne county civil service.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, Delegate Hanna said most of what I had intended to say and he also asked questions of Mr. Danhof that I had intended to ask. I am not an attorney. Delegate Danhof is. But he hasn't convinced me that the Downs-Danhof amendment would not make it possible for the legislature to do away with civil service in Wayne county. Delegate Danhof talks about trying to make it impossible—he is opposed to any local unit of government setting itself up superior to the state. I cannot see the rationale of that statement. If my neighbors in my community and I desire, by a majority vote of the citizens in my community, to grant civil service status to our employees, I think we should have that right. In having that right, I do not believe that it sets us up superior to the state.

The other statement that I would like to comment on is the statement made by Delegate Danhof about trying to prohibit the perpetuation of little kingdoms. Now, I would submit that when township employees, village employees and city employees hold their jobs, whether he be the garbage truck driver, the street cleaner, the fellow that works down the road, the grass cutter, the janitor in the township hall, when he holds his job at the mercy of the powers to be in control of the political strings in a community, that we do not get the best employees. I further submit to you that when you have a change in administration in a community where you do not have a civil service status for your employees, you have a mass housecleaning of employees of loyal service, who sacrifice their jobs upon the altar of political expendiency. In many, many communities township employees, city employees, village employees, where there is not civil service status, are compelled to campaign for candidates that they otherwise would not campaign for. I think this is another great injustice. And I do not agree that this perpetuates the little kingdoms. I think that if we have civil service status and if the communities are permitted to do this by a majority vote of the people of that community, that we stop in a large sense, perpetuation of little kingdoms.

As far as concerns the Downs-Danhof amendment, if this amendment were adopted, we might as well strike the entire section because it would mean absolutely nothing, in my considered judgment. Therefore, I oppose the amendment and ask the delegates to do likewise.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Ann Arbor, Professor Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Mr. Chairman, I do not desire to talk on this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I think that we should at the outset correct what I believe to be inaccuracies that have been stated on the floor with respect to what may be done and what may not be done under provisions of this nature.

In the first place, Mr. Hanna sometime in the past said that anything that the local unit of government might do would be subject to referendum. There is no provision, to my knowledge, in townships, at least—and I think in other units of government, counties, for instance—that make any of their enactments subject to a referendum automatically. Those statutes that provide for referendums specifically do so. For instance, zoning provides for a referendum. So this is one thing I think we should keep clear in our minds. Another thing we should keep in mind is that a provision which is self executing in the constitution is to be interpreted that way and will be interpreted that way by the courts. Any legislative enactment which would tend to establish standards that in any way limit and provide uniformity, as Mr. Danhof has suggested is necessary, I am sure would be determined by the courts to be unconstitutional. Where a right is granted in the broad language that would be granted under the Hanna amendment, this language could not be impaired or encroached upon by the legislature. And in respect to this, I cite the recall section of the constitution that has been interpreted by the courts, where this very language is used. The case, if Mr. Hanna would like to refer to it, is Wallace versus Tripp and Stamm.

I would certainly agree with Mr. Danhof that his amendment does tend to eliminate or seriously impair the effectiveness of the original amendment. And I think this is good. Whether it's sly or not sly, it is good, and I'll be frank to say so. It could abolish in effect the very thing that we put in the constitution. We recognize the legislature can do this for local units of government now and provide a self determination type of civil service if the local units of government desire to do so. Putting into the constitution a provision such as the Hanna amendment certainly should be limited, as a matter of principle, by the Danhof amendment. If we put the Danhof amendment into the constitution with the Hanna amendment, we end up where we would be if we had adopted the Seyferth-Shackleton amendment. And I propose before the day is over to move a reconsideration of that amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mrs. Judd.

MRS. JUDD: I've talked too much this morning but these fellows say too many things. I think that the Danhof-Downs amendment confuses the question of the power doctrine of local government. I would agree with them on the questions of substantive power, that is, if this related to the question, for example, of whether a local unit of government could provide fire protection or health service, then I think definitely the legislature should be in on the decision. But this is a question of how they are going to administer something and it is good home rule doctrine to leave completely in the hands of the local units what methods of administration they might wish to use. Therefore, I think it is proper here and I would oppose the Danhof-Downs amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the delegate from Bessemer, Mr. Pellow.

MR. PELLOW: Ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I didn't really intend to talk on this one but since everyone has been wandering on it, the only thing that I can't understand about not only the amendment but about the whole proposal, is why the taxpayers, after they have paid to hire the state civil service, then go back again to the local units of government and again request them to pay additional tax moneys. For myself, I think that it's time that we leave in this constitution a little of "To the victors go the spoils." And I would oppose this whole proposal. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Danhof amendment to the Hanna amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Division has been called for. Is there support? There is not sufficient support.

Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: I move that the committee do now rise.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The motion is on the question that the committee do now rise. All in favor say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, President Nisbet resumed the Chair.]

PRESIDENT NISBET: The Chair recognizes Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration a proposal, of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 76, a proposal pertaining to the passage of permissive legislation to allow civil divisions of the state to establish local civil service, considered several amendments thereto, has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Are there announcements?

SERCETARY CHASE: The committee on administration will meet at 1:15 today. Mr. Walter DeVries, chairman.

The committee on style and drafting will meet at 8:00 o'clock this evening in room K. Mr. William B. Cudlip, chairman.

The committee on rules and resolutions will meet in room I today immediately following this afternoon's session. R. C. Van Dusen, chairman.

The committee on emerging problems will meet today in committee room I, on the third floor, at 11:30 or immediately after the morning session. Frank G. Millard, chairman. P.S. We'll eat while we meet.

We have the following requests for leave: Mr. Romney requests to be excused from the session of this afternoon and tomorrow because of long time commitments in New York city and Detroit; and Miss McGowan wishes to be excused from the afternoon's session to attend a meeting of the Wayne county medical society and the Detroit bar association in Detroit.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, those excuses will be granted. The Chair recognizes Mr. Perras.

MR. PERRAS: Mr. President, at this time I move that we recess until 2:00 o'clock this afternoon.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion to recess. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

We are recessed until 2:00 o'clock.

[Whereupon, at 11:40 o'clock a.m., the convention recessed; and at 2:00 o'clock p.m., reconvened.]

The convention will please come to order.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, a quorum of the convention is present.

During the recess there were filed with the secretary the following requests for leave: Mr. Kuhn requests leave of absence from the afternoon session; Mr. Madar requests leave from the afternoon session, he had to return to Detroit on personal business; and Mrs. Heideman called. Mr. Heideman has a very bad sore throat. The doctor has put him to bed. He wishes to be excused.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, those requests will be granted. The Chair recognizes Mr. Brake.

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen of the convention, before we settle into the afternoon's work, there is an item of important business that I think should be taken care of. The secretary has a list of distinguished members of this convention. If, as the secretary reads that list, those members will please very promptly come and line themselves up in front of the secretary's desk, we can get on with this matter. Mr. Secretary.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Raymond Lawrence King; Mr. Hazen van den Berg Hatch; Mr. Clyne Ward Durst, Jr.; Mr. James Hoyt Sterrett; Mr. Frank Owen Staiger, Jr.; Mr. David Frederick Upton; Mr. Edward Austin McLogan; Mr. Walter Daniel DeVries; Mr. Sanford Martin Tweedie, III; Mr. Eugene Gilkison Wanger; Mr. Garry Eldridge Brown.

[Whereupon, the named delegates assembled before the rostrum.]

MR. BRAKE: Mr. President, I propose to confer upon these distinguished gentlemen a degree. It is all right for this convention to confer the degree because we are certainly an educational organization. No one can sit here hour after hour and day after day and week after week without learning something —if he can keep awake. Of course, quite a lot of what he learns would be wrong. (laughter) But that never keeps anyone from getting a degree. (laughter) This idea I did not originate. I was requested by these gentlemen to help them and I don't know why I was requested to do so. With a convention that is full of university presidents, ex presidents and assorted college professors—

MR. BOOTHBY: Mr. Brake, did you say "sordid" college professors? (laughter)

MR. BRAKE: I did not say "sordid" college professors. I said "assorted." Now, that means about the same as miscellaneous or heterogeneous. I love college professors when I'm not one of their students and have to polish any apples. But as I was trying to say before the conservative's interruption here, (laughter) I don't know why an ultra liberal like myself should be chosen for this when they could have had a real conservative like Mrs. Judd, for instance. (laughter) At any rate, I was.

Now, the degree that we are going to confer upon these gentlemen is the degree of Doctor of Radical Republicanism. (laughter) That is not an honorary degree. They have earned it. (laughter) Actually, they are not so radical. They are just young. (laughter) Give them 30 or 40 more years of experience and they'll be all right. I think we can use them in the "courthouse gang" by that time. (laughter) They're smart. As a matter of fact, they're too smart. (laughter) They're so smart that nobody but George Romney or Dr. Pollock or the Democrats can get any votes out of them. (laughter) The only way that I can get a vote out of any one of the 10 or 11 of them is to get Bill Ford or Jack Faxon over there to introduce my idea for me. (laughter)

Seriously for just a minute, it's well that we have in this convention a fine sprinkling of young people so that we can get all of the viewpoints. If this convention all agreed with me, we would not draw a good constitution.

MR. DEAN DOTY: Thank the good Lord for that. (laughter)

MR. BRAKE: Now it's the moderate senator talking. (laughter)

While the people of Michigan have all the viewpoints that are in the books, we have all the viewpoints that they have and some that nobody ever heard of here in the convention, and that's good.

Now, gentlemen, in the matter of conferring these degrees upon you, I am sure it will add to the pleasure of the occasion for you and your memories if we have the insignia pinned on you by some very charming young ladies—both Democrats. Girls, will you help us out?

Now, listen, Wanger, I know you're a bachelor but this is not a wedding. No kissing. (laughter)

I realize that we are setting a dangerous precedent here. We confer these degrees on these liberal Republicans. Somebody is going to come up with the idea of conferring degrees on conservative Democrats, and the competition for that honor would be tremendous. (laughter)

If from where you sit you can't read these signs, each one reads, "Young Radical Republican". They picked that title for themselves.

[Whereupon, badges were pinned upon the named delegates by Arlene Groh and Patricia Gorski, members of the stenographic pool. Upon approaching Mr. Wanger, both ladies kissed him on the cheek.]

Girls! Girls! What will people think? Democrats kissing Republicans! (laughter)

Gentlemen, you are now full fledged Doctors of Radical Republicanism. I salute you. (applause)

MR. KING: Mr. President, it seems as though one of us ought to respond to this wonderful tribute which has been paid to us. And so I have composed a few lines of verse. It goes like this:

Thank you, Professor Brake,
For letting us in.
We own no farms,
But that's no sin.
We grow no food,
With a subsidy.
But we trade like the devil,
At the A & P.

From the cities we come,
Green at best.
But is that pile of milk bottles
Really a cow's nest?
You're our professor
And you're quite a jewel.
But will the legislature really
Give us "home rule"?

Supreme court decisions
We read with a passion,
But is the Mapp case
Really but a fashion?
Our vote is erratic,
Take the 15 mill.
But when Goldwater is gone,
We'll be here still.

With the passage of time,
As we get gray,
Our devotion to progress
May not hold sway.
We may live to recall
When the convention sang
The first 3 verses of "That Old Court House Gang.'

We've lost our shirts,
Our pants if you please,
But we'll be back to fight,
In our BVDs.
Time is on our side,
We shout with glee.
Then we look beside you,
And see Boothby.

We've been told where to go,
But we're not to blame
If there's a Michigan town
With the very same name.
We want to talk,
It's something we feel.
Your gentle response?
SHUT UP AND DEAL!

But, to play upon words,
Our respect for Hale is hearty
And when the chips are down,
We're with the Grand Old Party. (applause)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Hodges.

MR. HODGES: Mr. President, I just have a question to ask Mr. Brake. I'm sort of worried. If these are liberals, what does that make us? (laughter)

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. President, I move that Mr. King's poem be printed in the journal.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Without objection, it will be done.

Now that we're all set, we'll take care of civil service. The Chair recognizes Mr. Millard.

MR. WALKER: Mr. President.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Walker.

MR. WALKER: I note with interest that the awards and one thing and another took approximately 10 minutes. At $40 a minute, this comes to $400, about $50 per badge. I do believe, however, that the time was probably better spent than some of the time we spent here this morning. Thank you.

PRESIDENT NISBET: Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. President, I'll get down to mundane things. I move that the convention resolve itself into committee of the whole for the purpose of taking up matters on the general orders calendar.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The question is on the motion of Mr. Millard. Those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The motion prevails. Mr. Millard.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The committee will be in order. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: The presently pending business before the committee is Committee Proposal 76 from the committee on executive branch, item 10 on the calendar, to which Mr. Hanna has offered an amendment. An amendment to that amendment has been adopted.

There is presently filed an additional amendment thereto by Messrs. Brake, Boothby, Finch and Seyferth:

1. Amend the Hanna amendment after "employees.", by striking out all of the second sentence, which reads, "The state civil service commission may furnish technical services on a reimbursable basis to any city, village, township, county, school district or metropolitan government requesting the same."

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the first proposer, Delegate Brake.

MR. BRAKE: This simply takes the state out of the picture and leaves the constitutional provision for the local units of government. I yield to Mr. Seyferth.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Seyferth.

MR. SEYFERTH: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I think we have pretty well covered the reasoning for deleting the last sentence in this amendment in our discussion this morning. Adding to Delegate Brake's comment, removing the state from the local element of civil service, which we do incidentally very much support, we had the feeling that in allowing, or permitting the state, as it is spelled out in this provision, to—even if reimbursed—supply the local units of government with rules and regulations under which they can set up their individual civil service requirements, in itself is forming a pattern of classifications and examinations that makes it very easy then at a later date—as my fears were expressed this morning—to write then also wage and salary requirements for these classifications at the state level. This, I feel is a very definite invasion of local political rights, local units' political rights. And for this reason, I feel that this amendment as presented would, by striking out the last sentence, carry greater import and do more good for the local units of government. I strongly support the amendment before us.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Do any of the other proposers wish to talk on this? If not, the Chair will recognize Delegate Downs.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, I rise in opposition to this amendment. I think if we read the second sentence, we see the word "may" there; "The state civil service commission may", which means there is nothing mandatory about that. And in the final 2 lines it says unit of government "requesting the same". In order for this advice to be given, first of all, the local unit of government would need to request it, and secondly, the state civil service commission would need to agree to it. Now, when we discussed this last night, I believe our good friend, Dr. Pollock, yielded to me and I expressed on the original proposal the question, not how far it went but perhaps it didn't go far enough.

I feel that from a very practical viewpoint, this sentence should remain. I'll just give one example. The state civil service commission recently inaugurated a system of insurance for state employees. Now, this was not done in a cavalier fashion. It was done after weeks and I believe months of intensive study of various plans of insurance for state employees. I would assume that if a local unit of government, with the civil service commission, were considering having an insurance program for its employees, that the most logical thing to do would be to call in the state civil service commission for a preliminary report on what they had done, so that the other unit of government would not need to re-research what had already been done by the state agency. I just cite that as one very practical example where a local unit of government could, with the aid of the state civil service commission, save much time and money. The fact that it is on a reimbursable basis would mean the state would neither lose nor make money but provide this service on a quality basis in much less time and really save the local units money because they would be passing on the work that had already been done. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Kalamazoo, Mr. Allen.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Brake a question, if I may.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Brake, if you care to answer.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Brake, for purposes of clarification mostly, I am wondering, because the civil service commission is established primarily by constitutional action, let us assume that the second sentence is dropped as proposed in your amendment, and then local units of government would want to use the services of the civil service commission in a way that is originally provided. In your opinion, would the legislature have the power to authorize this?

MR. BRAKE: I would think not. I haven't researched it very carefully as a legal point but since all power and all limitations upon the civil service commission of the state are expressed in the constitution, I doubt if the legislature could make any change at all.

MR. ALLEN: Mr. Chairman, it would seem to me that if the legislature cannot do it—and I wasn't sure, but I am inclined to agree with Mr. Brake and feel that that probably is what would happen—then if we did have a demand develop by local units to use the services of the civil service commission, the legislature would be unable to respond to it inasmuch as this is "may" only. It is entirely permissive on the part of the local unit of government to ask for the services and the civil service commission "may" respond to it. I feel that it might be useful for those smaller units of government which might not have the funds otherwise to set up their own systems, to take advantage of this system. Therefore, I personally believe it would be better to leave the second sentence in.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Taylor, Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, I wanted to ask some questions concerning the Hanna amendment itself. I don't believe that the questions touch on this specific amendment. I'd like to pass until we get back to it.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, this last sentence is clearly—in the light of Mr. Brake's answer, with which I completely agree—a necessary thing if the local units of government, in setting up their systems, are to be able to obtain advice and assistance from a fully qualified and expertly developed civil service system. What they will have to do, if you don't let them do this, is to go outside the state and bring in outside experts, either from state commissions outside or from organizations of one kind or another which are familiar with civil service procedures. They'll have to go outside to get that kind of expert help. And all this does is to make it possible for the local unit, if its people vote to set up a civil service system of whatever kind, to obtain the help and advice if any kind is required, assistance upon a reimbursable basis in setting up a proper civil service system. It does not bring the state civil service commission into the thing for any other purpose than to enable them to have this kind of technical advice, and the civil service system does require some technical knowledge in getting it into operation and making it effective. This is an important part of this section and it will be almost useless to the local units if it is not included. I hope that the amendment will be defeated.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Brake amendment to the Hanna amendment. All in favor will say aye; opposed, no.

The amendment is not adopted. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. Faxon and Miss Hart offer the following amendment to the amendment:

1. Amend the amendment, first sentence, after "discontinue a" by striking out "merit" and inserting "civil service"; so that the first sentence will then read:

> Each city, village, township, county, school district and metropolitan government may, by a majority vote of the electors voting thereon, establish, modify or discontinue a civil service system for its employees.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I will yield to Miss Hart for the purpose of making a presentation on this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Miss Hart.

MISS HART: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, this isn't just a change in terminology. I think the term "merit" has a particular meaning to teachers, not only teachers in the state of Michigan, but this is a national issue. We will serve the same purpose by substituting "civil service" system for "merit" and avoid the difficulty that would come, I think, from use of the term "merit". I can think of nothing that is more disruptive or would be more disruptive in relationship to the schoolroom than establishment of the so called merit system. It is an issue on which I think all classroom teachers are pretty well united. I think all of us would like to have the opportunity for school employees, if the local communities so desired — that is, non-contract employees—to be placed under a merit system, but I am sure that I speak for the teachers of the state of Michigan when I ask that the term "merit" be changed to "civil service" system to avoid the problem that I am sure we would meet.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I would think that the committee would have no objection to this change because what we were talking about when we talked in the committee sessions in preparing this proposal, was a civil service system. The word "merit" is interchangeable in most situations but it's not interchangeable in the school situation and, personally, I think the members of the committee would have no objection to this change.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mrs. Judd.

MRS. JUDD: First a question, Mr. Chairman, and then I'd like to make a remark. Didn't we this morning delete the words "school district" from the Hanna amendment?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: That was voted down.

MRS. JUDD: So it is still there?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: That's right.

MRS. JUDD: This is why the concern of Miss Hart; is that it? I'm personally sorry it's there. It complicates matters, I think. I am not on Mr. Martin's committee, so I don't have to agree with him on this point, but I feel it just plain isn't good English to speak of a civil service system. It doesn't say what we want it to say. The civil service is the body of public employees who are not in the military service. So if we speak of establishing a civil service system, all we are saying is establishing an employment system, and we are not saying what kind of a system we want. I think the word "merit" is essential to indicate the type of employment system that we do want. I am sorry it is confused with the school district problem, but there must be some better way to handle that.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if I might ask Miss Hart a question.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Miss Hart, do you care to answer it?

MISS HART: I'd be glad if we had a synonym for the word "merit." I do object to the word "merit." I don't care whether we use "civil service" system. If anybody can think of a better term, I would be delighted. It is the term "merit" I object to.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin hasn't asked his questions yet.

MISS HART: I beg your pardon.

MR. MARTIN: I just wondered if we said "a civil service merit system" if it would meet your problem.

MISS HART: I don't think it would, Mr. Martin. I would just prefer that that word "merit" be left out if we are talking about schools.

MR. MARTIN: I think the term "civil service" is clear and I say again I think we have no objection to the change.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Delegate Stevens.

MR. STEVENS: Mr. Chairman, along that line, as a member of the style and drafting committee, I would suggest that if you are going to change it, you make it "classified civil service." That is what we will probably do with the rest of the civil service. Mrs. Judd is correct. The term "civil service" applies to all employees in the government who are not in the military service. We will try to correct that—at least I anticipate we will—in style and drafting for the state civil service commission and call it "classified civil service" so it will mean something.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Delegate Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, to answer the objection of Miss Hart and Mr. Faxon, to put the issue squarely before us, civil service is all civilian employees, whether classified or not, and there are some people obviously that you don't want to classify. May I suggest that you withdraw your amendment and after the word "employees" put "except teachers under contract or tenure" so that it is clear that the civil service within school districts does not extend to teachers under contract or tenure.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I would be very willing to withdraw the amendment and insert the language "except teachers under contract or tenure".

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Will you prepare your amendment in writing and submit it to the secretary?

MR. FAXON: I'll do that right now.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: You withdraw your amendment now?

MR. FAXON: So that we may take up this particular amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Faxon-Hart amendment is withdrawn. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment now offered by Mr. Faxon and Miss Hart is:

1. Amend the amendment, first sentence, after "employees" by inserting "except teachers under contract or tenure"; so that the sentence will then read:

Each city, village, township, county, school district and metropolitan government may, by a majority vote of the electors voting thereon, establish, modify or discontinue a merit system for its employees except teachers under contract or tenure.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Faxon.

MR. FAXON: I think we have already gone over the arguments here. It seems clear that the intent of the amendment was not to encompass school teachers and the additional words here would take this into account. Of course, I hoped earlier today that we would just delete the whole subject of school districts entirely but the feeling for those people who were nonteaching personnel was strong, so that if you want to give them this opportunity, then I think we could keep this meaning by adopting this amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Hatch.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Hanna a question, if I may.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Hanna, do you desire to answer?

MR. HATCH: It is somewhat tied in with this particular amendment. Is it the intent of the amendment, where it refers to "employees," to include the superintendent of the school, the principal of the school, the city manager of a city, or its city attorney, officers of this sort, who are not elected?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman and Delegate Hatch, you have answered your own question. Those gentlemen are officers as applied to municipal government. City managers, their deputies and so forth, are spelled out. Those are officers. The township clerk or his deputy would be an officer and not an employee. Now, with regard to the superintendents or principals, they are teachers under contract or tenure.

MR. HATCH: Mr. Chairman, my only thought would be that when we get into excepting only teachers from this provision, and with the possibility that for instance, say, a city manager may be considered an employee of the city, that we may be thereby including all these other persons by the specific exemption of teachers alone.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, if I might add one remark to Mr. Hatch's: also, Mr. Hatch, you see, this requires a system to be voted on by the people and certainly, the people would never vote for a civil service that encompassed the policymaking officers that you have envisioned; so that you have a double safeguard — the word "employees" and the right of the people to vote approval.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on this Faxon-Hart amendment to the Hanna amendment. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed, no. The Chair is in doubt. The secretary will read the amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment immediately under consideration is an amendment by Mr. Faxon and Miss Hart, an amendment to the Hanna amendment:

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: All those in favor of the Faxon-Hart amendment to the Hanna amendment, which has just been read, will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the Faxon-Hart amendment to the Hanna amendment, the yeas are 62; the nays are 49.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment is adopted. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: There are no further amendments to the Hanna amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question now is on the Hanna amendment as amended. Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: I'd like to direct some questions to Mr. Hanna, with the possibility that we can work out a couple of small adjustments on the floor.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If he cares to answer.

MR. FORD: One of the questions, Bill, that comes to mind is when you say "each city, village, township," et cetera, do you mean this in its literal sense so that it might be construed not to apply to joint activities where we have 2 townships or 3, for example, operating special service operations, such as police and fire protection?

MR. W. F. HANNA: You are talking about those townships that jointly operate a police or fire department under the statute?

MR. FORD: Yes.

MR. W. F. HANNA: I would assume that under local government we have provided generally, Mr. Ford, that any power that a township may exercise singly may be exercised jointly.

MR. FORD: I think I am correct in saying that this only applies to metropolitan authorities.

MR. W. F. HANNA: We are still struggling with this term in style and drafting, Mr. Ford. I used "metropolitan government" here in the technical phrase that it has been loosely used before and not necessarily the joint government. Style and drafting will have to get this language consistent as we go through all of these local government units.

MR. FORD: Is it your intention that these joint functions would be covered?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Yes, sir. If a township were doing it jointly, then the 2 townships could establish a merit system by concurrent vote.

MR. FORD: Then also if you list several types of municipal corporations — and one of the dangers with listing specifics is that it might be construed to exclude those not mentioned — I wonder if your use of the phrase "metropolitan government" is broad enough to include such things as these park authorities, water authorities, sewage authorities, incinerators, the various authorities that may have substantial numbers of employees, but are actually separate municipal corporations apart from the municipal corporations that own them.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Ford, under the present constitution and statute, I am sure it would be inclusive because they are generally incorporated under one or more of the metropolitan authority acts. Generally, it is the general metropolitan authority act, or in case of the Huron-Clinton, by special act, but it does refer to them by the loose term "metropolitan authority".

MR. FORD: But we don't here extend to this type of municipal corporation the ability to have civil service?

MR. W. F. HANNA: We do under my language. That was my intent. This is a problem we have been struggling with in style and drafting, Mr. Ford. I assure you that it was my intent to include all these special forms of government that may be created pursuant to our new constitution or pursuant to the old metropolitan authority granted under the Constitution of 1908.

MR. FORD: Bill, this is where the problem is. You see, when you are talking about metropolitan government, as Glenn Allen's committee talked about it, you are talking about a governmental unit. But I am talking about a municipal corporation, which is merely a special service authority. I am not talking about a governmental unit at all. I am talking about a special service public corporation, municipal corporation, if you will, that doesn't perform governmental functions, it performs a specified set of functions without being a governmental entity as such.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Ford —

MR. FORD: It has no boundaries or borders —

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Will you kindly direct your questions through the Chair. You are having a little argument here amongst yourselves and the rest of the delegates here would like to know what it is all about.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Ford, they do perform a governmental function. They do have boundaries. It is true that ordinarily many of them are set up as cooperative corporations and not as govermental units in the sense that they elect their own legislative or administrative bodies and so forth. If you will take my word for it, I mean to include not only the true metropolitan government but the metropolitan cooperative corporation — and believe me, it is giving us a great deal of concern in style and drafting as to whether we can use the term "body corporate" without cutting across the colleges and universities. We will have to try and get this term "metropolitan government" in line with the other provisions of local government and cover both the true metropolitan government and authority in the intergovernmental cooperative corporation. This is a struggle we are facing in style and drafting.

MR. FORD: One more question, Mr. Chairman. Again, this is something probably you can correct in style and drafting, but in most municipalities, they find it desirable to have more than 1 merit system, 1 covering the police and fire, for example, and 1 covering general governmental employees, because many of the philosophies are different in the 2, the trial board procedure and so on, and you wouldn't want this language to restrict the municipality to having a single overall merit system, would you?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Ford, I do not interpret this language to require that. You can have a merit system only for police, only for fire or 1 merit system for police and 1 for fire. I do not believe that this requires that all employees be covered under the same merit system.

MR. FORD: Well, could we change "establish a merit system" to "establish merit systems?"

MR. W. F. HANNA: I have no objection.

MR. FORD: This is what you intended?

MR. W. F. HANNA: I have no objection. If this will clarify it for township attorneys, I'll be glad to cooperate.

MR. FORD: One final question, Mr. Chairman, and that is this: in the first sentence it reads, ". . . school district, . . . and metropolitan government may, by a majority vote of the electors. . . ." Now, is this intended to mean that upon approval by a majority vote the municipality will set this up, or does it mean that you actually have to present to the electors the specific merit system and have them vote on it, and when you want to make an amendment, you submit that specific amendment to the voters, or does it mean that you ask the voters to approve the broad concept, within limits, of the merit system?

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Ford, I assume that the question to be submitted to the voters is much the same type of question that you submit if you are amending a charter to provide for a merit system. You would not go into the ordinance itself or the rules and regulations itself but ask, shall we have a merit system with a board applying to our policemen or our firemen? Much the same question, Mr. Ford, is provided when you decide within a township: do you want a personnel board for your police or your firemen under the statute? I mean, the details are left to ordinance. I certainly wouldn't want the whole civil service ordinance and all the rules and regulations subject to a vote every time you wanted to adjust it. I think the broad principle is what you submit.

MR. FORD: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Ford, were you offering an amendment?

MR. FORD: No. I am satisfied that Mr. Hanna is going to take care of it in Mr. Cudlip's committee.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, parliamentary inquiry. While this amendment is pending, would a motion to reconsider a prior amendment be in order?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair thinks that we should dispose of this amendment before we take up any other business.

MR. G. E. BROWN: I am interested in knowing what the Chair thinks, but is that the ruling of the Chair?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: That is the ruling of the Chair.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I think we are about ready to vote on this Hanna amendment but I want to say what I said to a group of students this noon, that I think this is the first good example of the way in which a constitutional convention, working hard and conscientiously, can hammer out material improvements to the original committee proposal and come up with a balanced proposal which meets the objections of various delegates and still accomplishes the broad objective of the committee. It seems to me that this is a good job and I hope that as a result we will have a good, resounding, favorable vote; that is, that we can clearly establish this general principle as part of our constitution.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Hanna amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

The amendment is adopted.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: A division is called for. Is there support? There is support. All of those who are in favor will vote aye and those who are opposed will vote nay. The question is on the Hanna amendment. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the adoption of the Hanna amendment as amended, the yeas are 83; the nays are 26.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The amendment, as amended, is adopted. The Chair will recognize Mr. Garry Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I move to reconsider the vote upon which the Shackleton, Seyferth, Brake, et al, amendment failed.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The secretary will read the Shackleton-Seyferth amendment.

SECRETARY CHASE: The amendment offered by Messrs. Shackleton, Seyferth, G. E. Brown, Brake and Boothby was:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, by striking out all of the proposal.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, this is the question we just finished voting on. If you voted for the Hanna amendment, as you have, with a rather strong vote, you wouldn't want to vote to reconsider the Shackleton amendment because that would exactly reverse your vote. So I hope that this motion to reconsider will be defeated.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, I would only suggest to Mr. Martin that it is entirely conceivable that many felt if they had to have something, they'd rather have the Hanna amendment but would prefer to have nothing at all. I would therefore urge a yes vote on the motion to reconsider.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the motion to reconsider the Shackleton-Seyferth amendment. All in favor will say aye. Opposed, no.

DELEGATES: Division.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Division has been called for. Is there support? There is sufficient number up.

MR. POLLOCK: Parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Dr. Pollock.

MR. POLLOCK: Would you explain the parliamentary effect of this motion, please. As I recall the Shackleton amendment, it was to strike the original committee proposal. The original committee proposal now has had substituted for it Mr. Hanna's amendment which has been adopted by a large majority. I can't understand the purpose or the effect of this reconsideration.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The effect will be if you vote to reconsider, you then will vote upon the original Shackleton-Seyferth amendment, which is to strike section a in its present form.

MR. POLLOCK: In its present form?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: That's right.

MR. POLLOCK: The Shackleton amendment was made, was it not, before the Hanna amendment was adopted?

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman, may I speak on this?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Just a moment. The Chair wants to answer Dr. Pollock. Section a has been amended so that the Shackleton-Seyferth amendment would go to the amended section a.

MR. POLLOCK: I understood, Mr. Chairman, that the Shackleton amendment was presented before the Hanna amendment and substituted.

MR. FAXON: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: State your point.

MR. FAXON: Didn't the Hanna amendment strike out all of section a and insert this new language?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: That's right.

MR. FAXON: Now we are moving to reconsider a striking out which has just been accomplished by the committee in an affirmative way with the insertion of the Hanna amendment. I thought there was something in the rules about having one item of intervening business between an action to strike out or something that has already been accomplished. We just voted to strike out all of section a and insert the Hanna amendment.

MR. G. E. BROWN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Just a moment. The motion to reconsider is in order. Mr. Brown.

MR. G. E. BROWN: I was going to say, Mr. Chairman, your ruling is entirely correct because the Shackleton amendment says strike all of section a. Now, whether that was as it was in the committee proposal or as it is now, it still is to strike all of section a, whether it was amended once, twice or a dozen times. So it is in order, I'm sure.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Cudlip.

MR. CUDLIP: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I'd like to ask a point of information. Can one make such a motion if he hasn't voted on the prevailing side?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: There is no limit in our rules on that point.

MR. CUDLIP: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Sterrett.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. Chairman, I believe that the Shackleton amendment has already in effect been acted upon by striking section a under the Hanna amendment and the Hanna amendment substituted therefor.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the reconsideration of the Shackleton-Seyferth amendment. Division has been ordered. Those who are in favor of reconsideration will vote aye. Those who are opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion to reconsider, the yeas are 50; the nays are 59.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The motion does not prevail. Are there any further amendments to section a?

SECRETARY CHASE: That is all of the amendments on the desk, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Is there any further amendment to the body of Committee Proposal 76? If not, it will pass. Committee Proposal 76, as amended, is passed. The secretary will read.

SECRETARY CHASE: Item 11 on the calendar, from the committee on executive branch, by Mr. Martin, chairman, Committee Proposal 71, A proposal to provide for the election, term and duties of state officers, allocation of departments, administrative reorganization, appointment and removal of department heads, supervision of departments, appointments to fill vacancies, provisional appointments, and removal or suspension from office by the governor. Contains new language and amends or replaces article VI, sections 1, 3, 10 and 19, and article IX, sections 5 and 7.

Following is Committee Proposal 71 as read by the secretary, and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. [There shall be elected at each general biennial election a governor, a lieutenant governor, a secretary of state, a state treasurer, a commissioner of the state land office, an auditor general and an attorney general, for the term of 2 years.]

THE GOVERNOR AND THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR SHALL BE ELECTED AT THE GENERAL BIENNIAL ELECTION IN 1964 AND IN EACH ALTERNATE EVEN NUMBERED YEAR BEGINNING IN 1966. THEY SHALL, AFTER 1966, SERVE FOR TERMS OF 4 YEARS BEGINNING ON THE FIRST DAY OF JANUARY NEXT SUCCEEDING THEIR ELECTION.

THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR SHALL BE NOMINATED BY PARTY CONVENTION IN A MANNER PROVIDED BY LAW. IN THE GENERAL ELECTION THE VOTES CAST FOR A CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR SHALL BE CONSIDERED AS CAST ALSO FOR THE CANDIDATE FOR LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR RUNNING JOINTLY WITH HIM. THE CANDIDATE WHOSE NAME APPEARS ON THE BALLOT JOINTLY WITH THAT OF THE SUCCESSFUL CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR SHALL BE ELECTED LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

Sec. b. The lieutenant governor shall be president of the senate, but shall have no vote EXCEPT IN CASE OF EQUAL DIVISION. HE SHALL PERFORM SUCH ADDITIONAL DUTIES AS MAY BE DELEGATED TO HIM BY THE GOVERNOR.

ALL EXECUTIVE AND ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICES, AGENCIES AND INSTRUMENTALITIES OF THE STATE GOVERNMENT AND THEIR RESPECTIVE FUNCTIONS, POWERS AND DUTIES, EXCEPT FOR THE OFFICES OF GOVERNOR AND LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR AND THE GOVERNING BODIES OF INSTITUTIONS OF HIGHER EDUCATION PROVIDED FOR IN THIS CONSTITUTION, SHALL BE ALLOCATED BY LAW AMONG AND WITHIN NOT MORE THAN 20 PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENTS, SO AS TO GROUP THEM AS FAR AS PRACTICABLE ACCORDING TO MAJOR PURPOSES. TEMPORARY COMMISSIONS OR AGENCIES FOR SPECIAL PURPOSES AND WITH A LIFE OF NO MORE THAN 2 YEARS MAY BE ESTABLISHED BY LAW AND NEED NOT BE ALLOCATED WITHIN A PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENT.

THE ALLOCATION OF DEPARTMENTS BY LAW PURSUANT TO THIS SECTION SHALL BE COMPLETED WITHIN 2 YEARS AFTER THE EFFECTIVE DATE OF THIS CONSTITUTION. IF SUCH ALLOCATION SHALL NOT HAVE BEEN COMPLETED WITHIN SUCH PERIOD, THE GOVERNOR, WITHIN ONE YEAR THEREAFTER, BY EXECUTIVE ORDER, SHALL MAKE SUCH ALLOCATION.

SUBSEQUENT TO SUCH ALLOCATION, THE GOVERNOR MAY MAKE CHANGES IN THE ORGANIZATION OF THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH OR IN THE ASSIGNMENT OF FUNCTIONS AMONG ITS UNITS WHICH HE CONSIDERS NECESSARY FOR EFFICIENT ADMINISTRATION. WHERE THESE CHANGES REQUIRE THE FORCE OF LAW, THEY SHALL BE SET FORTH IN EXECUTIVE ORDERS. THE LEGISLATURE SHALL HAVE 60 DAYS OF A REGULAR SESSION, OR A FULL SESSION IF OF SHORTER DURATION, TO DISAPPROVE THESE EXECUTIVE ORDERS. UNLESS DISAPPROVED IN BOTH HOUSES BY A RESOLUTION CONCURRED IN BY A MAJORITY OF THE MEMBERS ELECT OF EACH HOUSE, THESE ORDERS SHALL BECOME EFFECTIVE AT A DATE THEREAFTER TO BE DESIGNATED BY THE GOVERNOR.

THE HEAD OF EACH PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENT SHALL BE A SINGLE EXECUTIVE UNLESS OTHERWISE PROVIDED IN THIS CONSTITUTION OR BY LAW. THE SINGLE EXECUTIVES HEADING PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENTS SHALL INCLUDE A SECRETARY OF STATE, A STATE TREASURER, AND AN ATTORNEY GENERAL. AT THE CONCLUSION OF THE TERM OF OFFICE OF ALL STATE OFFICERS ELECTED UNDER THE CONSTITUTION OF 1908, AS AMENDED, WHEN A SINGLE EXECUTIVE IS THE HEAD OF A PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENT, HE SHALL BE NOMINATED AND, BY AND WITH THE ADVICE AND CONSENT OF THE SENATE, APPOINTED BY THE GOVERNOR AND HE SHALL SERVE AT THE PLEASURE OF THE GOVERNOR.

WHEN A BOARD OR COMMISSION IS AT THE HEAD OF A PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENT, THE MEMBERS THEREOF SHALL BE NOMINATED AND, BY AND WITH THE ADVICE AND CONSENT OF THE SENATE, APPOINTED BY THE GOVERNOR. THE TERM OF OFFICE AND REMOVAL OF SUCH MEMBERS SHALL BE AS PRESCRIBED IN THIS CONSTITUTION OR BY LAW. WHEN A CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER OF A BOARD OR COMMISSION HEADING A PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENT IS APPOINTED BY SUCH BOARD OR COMMISSION AS PRESCRIBED BY LAW, HIS APPOINTMENT SHALL BE SUBJECT TO THE APPROVAL OF THE GOVERNOR EXCEPT AS OTHERWISE PROVIDED IN THIS CONSTITUTION.

Sec. c. [They shall keep their offices at the seat of government, superintend them in person and perform such duties as may be prescribed by law. The office of commissioner of the state land office may be abolished by law.] SINGLE EXECUTIVES HEADING PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENTS AND THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICERS OF PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENTS HEADED BY BOARDS OR COMMISSIONS SHALL KEEP THEIR OFFICES AT THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, EXCEPT AS OTHERWISE PROVIDED BY LAW, SUPERINTEND THEM IN PERSON AND PERFORM SUCH DUTIES AS MAY BE PRESCRIBED BY LAW.

Sec. d. EACH PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENT SHALL BE UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF THE GOVERNOR. The governor shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed; shall transact all necessary business with the officers of government; and may require information in writing from all executive and administrative state officers, elective and appointive, upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices.

THE GOVERNOR MAY, BY APPROPRIATE COURT ACTION OR PROCEEDING BROUGHT IN THE NAME OF THE STATE, ENFORCE COMPLIANCE WITH ANY CONSTITUTIONAL OR LEGISLATIVE MANDATE, OR RESTRAIN VIOLATIONS OF ANY CONSTITUTIONAL OR LEGISLATIVE POWER, DUTY, OR RIGHT BY ANY OFFICER, DEPARTMENT, OR AGENCY OF THE STATE OR ANY OF ITS POLITICAL SUBDIVISIONS. THIS AUTHORITY SHALL NOT BE CONSTRUED TO AUTHORIZE ANY ACTION OR PROCEEDING AGAINST THE LEGISLATURE.

Sec. e. [Whenever a vacancy shall occur in any of the state offices, the governor shall fill the same by appointment, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, if in session.]

WHEN THE SENATE IS NOT IN SESSION AND A VACANCY OCCURS IN ANY OFFICE, APPOINTMENT TO WHICH REQUIRES ADVICE AND CONSENT OF THE SENATE, THE GOVERNOR SHALL FILL THE SAME BY APPOINTMENT. SUCH AN INTERIM APPOINTMENT MAY BE DISAPPROVED BY THE SENATE AS WITH OTHER APPOINTMENTS REQUIRING SUCH ADVICE AND CONSENT. A PERSON SO APPOINTED SHALL NOT BE ELIGIBLE FOR ANOTHER INTERIM APPOINTMENT TO SUCH OFFICE IF THE APPOINTMENT SHALL HAVE BEEN DISAPPROVED BY THE SENATE.

Sec. f. The governor may make a provisional appointment to fill a vacancy occasioned by the suspension of an officer UNDER IMPEACHMENT, until he shall be acquitted or until after the election and qualification of a successor.

Sec. g. The governor shall have power and it shall be his duty, [except at such time as the legislature may be in session,] to examine into the condition and administration of any public office and the acts of any public officer, elective or appointive; to remove OR SUSPEND from office for gross neglect of duty or for corrupt conduct in office, or any other misfeasance or malfeasance therein, any elective or appointive state officer, except legislative or judicial, and report the causes of such removal OR SUSPENSION to the legislature IF IN SESSION OR OTHERWISE at its next session.

APPOINTMENT BY AND WITH THE ADVICE AND CONSENT OF THE SENATE WHEN USED IN THIS CONSTITUTION OR IN STATUTES IN EFFECT OR HEREAFTER ENACTED SHALL MEAN APPOINTMENT SUBJECT TO DISAPPROVAL BY A MAJORITY VOTE OF THE MEMBERS ELECT OF THE SENATE IF SUCH ACTION IS TAKEN WITHIN 60 LEGISLATIVE DAYS AFTER THE DATE OF SUCH APPOINTMENT.

Mr. Martin, chairman of the committee on executive branch, submits the following reasons in support of Committee Proposal 71:

This proposal contains the major recommendations of the committee on executive branch for strengthening and improving the constitutional provisions for the executive branch in Michigan state government. The members of the committee are agreed that significant modifications are needed in the executive article of the constitution. Most of the recommendations in this proposal have the unanimous support of members of the committee.

The committee is unanimous in recommending a 4 year term for governor and lieutenant governor, with the election in even numbered nonpresidential election years. The governor now serves a 4 year term in 35 states. Several states have shifted to a 4 year term in recent years, and all of the states with recently framed or revised constitutions are in this group. In 25 of these states, the governor is not elected at the time of the presidential election. The committee believes that this arrangement as to length of term and time of election is the best combination.

The committee also unanimously approved the nomination of the lieutenant governor by party convention and his running with the governor as part of a team, with votes for the governor to be also cast for the lieutenant governor in the same manner as with the president and vice president of the United States. The committee also favors retaining the lieutenant governor as presiding officer of the senate, and it proposes that he be given a vote to break a tie. Additional duties can be delegated to him by the governor, but are not constitutionally assigned.

The committee considered carefully and extensively the question of election versus appointment of other state officers who are now elected. The recommendation of the committee, based on the majority view of its members, is that executive branch officials other than the governor and lieutenant governor should be appointed rather than elected.

The committee's action is based upon the feeling that the election of these officials does not bring government closer to the people, but on the contrary, divides authority in state government among numerous officials who have no real allegiance or responsibility to the governor and who are necessarily concerned in a major degree with furthering their own political ambitions. The majority on the committee felt that this continuing struggle for power at the top of the state government does not serve the people well and that since the people hold the governor responsible for what happens in state government, he should be permitted to appoint his principal officers subject to review by the senate. In this way the governor is made fully accountable for the actions of the executive branch of government for which the people hold him responsible.

The committee proposal assumes that the committee on legislative powers will submit with the committee on executive branch a joint committee proposal establishing the post of legislative auditor to replace the auditor general, and that the committee on education will recommend that the superintendent of public instruction be made an appointive rather than elective official. The majority of the committee on executive branch supports both of these suggestions.

The proposal suggests new language concerning the allocation of departments, procedure for administrative reorganization, the appointment and removal of department heads, and the supervision of departments by the governor. It incorporates language from sections 1 and 3 of article VI concerning duties of state officers, and the powers of the governor to take care that the laws be faithfully executed and to require information from state officers. It adds a new provision expressly authorizing the governor to resort to the courts in enforcing constitutional or legislative mandates. The proposal also recommends language which would replace section 10 of article VI on vacancies in state office, and sections 5 and 7 of article IX on provisional appointments and on removal and suspension of state officers by the governor.

The objective of the recommendation to place a limit of 20 on the number of principal departments is to reduce the number of agencies under the direct supervision of the governor to manageable proportions, and to bring about a more effective grouping of departments according to major purposes. Eight states now have comparable provisions in their constitutions. The usual constitutional maximum on the number of departments is 20. States with such a limitation include New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Hawaii and Alaska. The model state constitution also recommends such a restriction.

The committee proposal excepts from the limitation the offices of governor and lieutenant governor, and the governing bodies of institutions of higher education provided for in the constitution. It also authorizes the creation of temporary commissions or agencies for special purpose with a life of not more than 2 years. The committee has unanimously approved the recommendation, and it believes that inclusion in the new constitution of a constitutional maximum on the number of departments as proposed will bring about a much needed administrative reorganization, while providing sufficient flexibility for adjustments to meet future needs. The committee has been impressed by testimony given to it that states of comparable size, such as New York, New Jersey and Missouri, have found such limitations feasible and desirable. Adoption of this provision would retain in the hands of the legislature and the governor considerable discretion as to internal organization within the principal departments. For example, it would not prohibit the creation, for purposes of professional regulation, of professional or quasi professional licensing boards, made up in whole or in part of members of the profession, in a department of professional standards or of licensing such as now exist in several states. Under the proposal, a 2 year period would be provided for statutory allocation of departments. If not done during that time, the governor would have one year in which to make the allocation by executive order.

Another recommendation in the proposal gives constitutional status to the approach to administrative reorganization contained in Michigan public act 125 of 1958. This gives initiative in administrative reorganization to the governor with opportunity for rejection by the legislature of the governor's plans for reorganization. Alaska has included such a provision in its constitution. Several other states have granted such reorganization authority to the governor by statute. This device has been used successfully by the federal government over a period of many years. The committee believes that this procedure offers the best prospect of continuous reappraisal and adjustment of the state's administrative structure, following the initial reallocation of departments.

In choosing among several possible alternatives as to the requirement for legislative rejection of a reorganization plan, the committee favored a provision for rejection by a majority of the members elect of both houses of the legislature. The Michigan statute requires a majority of the members elect in either house to reject. The recommendation of the committee makes legislative disapproval of a proposal for reorganization somewhat more difficult than it now is under the statute, reflecting the view of a sizeable majority of committee members that reorganization plans submitted by the governor should become effective unless both houses of the legislature find them unacceptable and each house registers its disapproval. The governor is in the best position to have knowledge of the structural problems and needs that exist in the executive branch. His recommendations for administrative adjustments should be given considerable weight.

The proposal provides that the head of each principal department shall be a single executive unless otherwise provided by the constitution or by statute. Three officials are given constitutional status as single executives appointed as heads of principal executive departments. These are the secretary of state, the state treasurer and the attorney general.

The legislature would have the choice under the proposed language of providing that principal departments be headed either by a single executive who is appointed or by an appointed board or commission. It would not be possible to provide by statute for an elected department head, as is now the case with the state highway commissioner.

The proposal retains a requirement for senate review of gubernatorial appointments, both for single executives who are department heads and for members of boards or commissions. The committee has accepted the procedure suggested in Delegate Proposal 1716 concerning the nature of senatorial review. Such an appointment would be subject to disapproval by a majority vote of the members elect of the senate, provided the senate acts to disapprove within 60 legislative days after the appointment is submitted to it. If fewer than 60 legislative days remain for consideration after a submission of an appointment, the time available for possible disapproval would be extended into the next regular or special session for the balance of the specified period of 60 legislative or working days. The committee recommends this procedure as providing ample opportunity for the senate to render a negative judgment on gubernatorial appointees. At the same time, it permits the appointment to become effective unless the senate is willing to go on record as rejecting the appointee, and prevents withholding of confirmation simply by failure to act on an appointment.

In setting forth tenure and removal provisions, the proposal distinguishes between departments with single heads appointed by the governor and those headed by boards or commissions. A single executive appointed as the head of a department is to serve at the pleasure of the governor, but terms of office and conditions for removal of board and commission members may be set by law or specified in the constitution itself, as in the case of the civil service commission. When a board or commission at the head of a principal department appoints a chief executive officer as prescribed by law, the appointment must be approved by the governor except as provided elsewhere in this constitution. This recognizes the fact that such an official carries important policymaking responsibilities.

Language has been adapted from section 1 of article VI concerning the obligation of executive officials to superintend their offices in person, and perform duties as prescribed by law.

A provision, similar to that in several other recent state constitutions, states that each principal department shall be under the supervision of the governor. The proposal retains the wording of article VI, section 3, which provides that the governor shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed, and authorizes him to require information in writing from state officers. It adds a provision expressly authorizing the governor to resort to the courts to enforce compliance with any constitutional or legislative mandate, with the proviso that this authority shall not be construed to authorize any action or proceeding against the legislature. This provision is patterned after the Alaska constitution. The Hawaii constitution and the model state constitution contain similar provisions.

The recommendation concerning interim appointments is intended to clarify the power of the governor to make such appointments, and to specify that such an appointment will continue in effect unless disapproved by the senate within 60 legislative days after the beginning of its next session. In the event of disapproval, the same person is not eligible for another interim appointment to the same office.

The section concerning provisional appointments to fill vacancies caused by suspension of officers under impeachment has been transferred from article IX, where it appears as section 5.

The committee recommends retention, with one important change, of the language now in section 7 of article IX concerning the general removal power of the governor, and transfer of this provision to the executive article. The change is that the phrase in the present constitution withholding this power on the part of the governor when the legislature is not in session, has been deleted. This authorization was originally intended as a substitute for the impeachment process during times when the legislature is not in session. The committee has accepted the suggestion in Delegate Proposal 1102 that this authority should be placed in the hands of the governor at all times and should be considered supplemental to the impeachment process rather than a substitute for it. In addition, the proposal gives the governor power to suspend as well as to remove officials for the reasons set forth in the provision. These modifications have required a slight change in the wording of the last sentence in this section, concerning the governor's duty of reporting to the legislature as to the causes of removal or suspension.

The committee proposal requires that the governor and lieutenant governor be elected in 1964 for a 2 year term and that the first 4 year term will begin after the election in 1966. State officers who are elected under the Constitution of 1908 will fill out the term for which they are elected and will thereafter be subject to appointment by the governor then holding office, with the advice and consent of the senate.

The committee on executive branch urges favorable action on these related provisions, in the expectation that their adoption will greatly strengthen the executive branch and the administrative structure of Michigan state government, while retaining proper and important controls to be exercised by the legislature.

Following is minority report A to Committee Proposal 71 as offered and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

Messrs. Bentley, Hatch, Durst, Shackleton, King, Karn and Gust, a minority of the committee on executive branch, submit the following minority report to Committee Proposal 71:

A minority of the committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

(Immediately following paragraph one ". . . next succeeding their election.")

NO PERSON WHO HAS BEEN ELECTED GOVERNOR FOR 2 FULL SUCCESSIVE TERMS SHALL BE AGAIN ELIGIBLE TO HOLD THAT OFFICE UNTIL ONE FULL TERM HAS INTERVENED.

Messrs. Bentley, Hatch, Durst, Shackleton, King, Karn and Gust, a minority of the committee on executive branch, submit the following reasons in support of the foregoing minority report, which accompanied Committee Proposal 71:

The minority strongly believe that the constitution should set a limit of 2 full successive terms for the governor. In justifying this departure from the present constitution, the undersigned believe that some restriction is justified in view of the fact that the term of office is to be lengthened from 2 to 4 years. Our proposed limitation would permit a governor who has served 2 terms to be elected again after a full term has intervened.

Following is minority report B to Committee Proposal 71 as offered and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

Messrs. Bentley, Hatch, Shackleton, King, Karn, Shaffer and Dean Doty, a minority of the committee on executive branch, submit the following minority report to Committee Proposal 71:

A minority of the committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

(Page 3, line 5)

IN EITHER HOUSE BY A RESOLUTION CONCURRED IN BY A MAJORITY

(To replace, in the committee proposal)

IN BOTH HOUSES BY A RESOLUTION CONCURRED IN BY A MAJORITY

Messrs. Bentley, Hatch, Shackleton, King, Karn, Shaffer and Dean Doty, a minority of the committee on executive branch, submit the following reasons in support of the foregoing minority report, which accompanied Committee Proposal 71:

The minority believe that legislative rejection of a reorganization plan should be permitted by a majority of the members elect in either house. This is in accordance with the present statute, Michigan public act 125 of 1958. Our proposal would still permit administrative reorganization with the governor retaining this initiative and ample opportunity for legislative rejection. But we feel strongly that in view of the fact that this represents a considerable precedent in the constitution (only adopted by one state until now) legislative disapproval of a proposal for reorganization should not be more difficult than it now is under the statute, as under the committee proposal.

Following is minority report C to Committee Proposal 71 as offered and the reasons submitted in support thereof:

Messrs. Marshall, Greene, Kelsey, Perlich, Wilkowski, Miss Hart and Mrs. Daisy Elliott, a minority of the committee on executive branch, submit the following minority report to Committee Proposal 71:

A minority of the committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. THE GOVERNOR, LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR, SECRETARY OF STATE, STATE TREASURER, AUDITOR GENERAL, ATTORNEY GENERAL, HIGHWAY COMMISSIONER, AND SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION SHALL BE ELECTED AT THE GENERAL BIENNIAL ELECTION IN 1964 AND IN EACH ALTERNATE EVEN NUMBERED YEAR BEGINNING IN 1966. THEY SHALL, AFTER 1966, SERVE FOR TERMS OF 4 YEARS BEGINNING ON THE FIRST DAY OF JANUARY NEXT SUCCEEDING THEIR ELECTION.

THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR SHALL BE NOMINATED BY PARTY CONVENTION IN A MANNER PROVIDED BY LAW. IN THE GENERAL ELECTION THE VOTES CAST FOR A CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR SHALL BE CONSIDERED AS CAST ALSO FOR THE CANDIDATE FOR LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR RUNNING JOINTLY WITH HIM. THE CANDIDATE WHOSE NAME APPEARS ON THE BALLOT JOINTLY WITH THAT OF THE SUCCESSFUL CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR SHALL BE ELECTED LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

Sec. b. The lieutenant governor shall be president of the senate, but shall have no vote EXCEPT IN CASE OF EQUAL DIVISION. HE SHALL PERFORM SUCH ADDITIONAL DUTIES AS MAY BE DELEGATED TO HIM BY THE GOVERNOR.

ALL EXECUTIVE AND ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICES, AGENCIES AND INSTRUMENTALITIES OF THE STATE GOVERNMENT AND THEIR RESPECTIVE FUNCTIONS, POWERS AND DUTIES, EXCEPT AS OTHERWISE PROVIDED BY THIS CONSTITUTION, INCLUDING THE GOVERNING BODIES OF INSTITUTIONS OF HIGHER EDUCATION PROVIDED FOR IN THIS CONSTITUTION, SHALL BE ALLOCATED BY LAW AMONG AND WITHIN NOT MORE THAN 20 PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENTS, SO AS TO GROUP THEM AS FAR AS PRACTICABLE ACCORDING TO MAJOR PURPOSES. TEMPORARY COMMISSIONS OR AGENCIES FOR SPECIAL PURPOSES AND WITH A LIFE OF NO MORE THAN 2 YEARS MAY BE ESTABLISHED BY LAW AND NEED NOT BE ALLOCATED WITHIN A PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENT.

THE ALLOCATION OF DEPARTMENTS BY LAW PURSUANT TO THIS SECTION SHALL BE COMPLETED WITHIN 2 YEARS AFTER THE EFFECTIVE DATE OF THIS CONSTITUTION. IF SUCH ALLOCATION SHALL NOT HAVE BEEN COMPLETED WITHIN SUCH PERIOD, THE GOVERNOR WITHIN ONE YEAR THEREAFTER, BY EXECUTIVE ORDER, SHALL MAKE SUCH ALLOCATION.

SUBSEQUENT TO SUCH ALLOCATION, THE GOVERNOR MAY MAKE CHANGES IN THE ORGANIZATION OF THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH OR IN THE ASSIGNMENT OF FUNCTIONS AMONG ITS UNITS WHICH HE CONSIDERS NECESSARY FOR EFFICIENT ADMINISTRATION. WHERE THESE CHANGES

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

REQUIRE THE FORCE OF LAW, THEY SHALL BE SET FORTH IN EXECUTIVE ORDERS. THE LEGISLATURE SHALL HAVE 60 DAYS OF A REGULAR SESSION, OR A FULL SESSION IF OF SHORTER DURATION, TO DISAPPROVE THESE EXECUTIVE ORDERS. UNLESS DISAPPROVED IN BOTH HOUSES BY A RESOLUTION CONCURRED IN BY A 2/3 MAJORITY OF THE MEMBERS ELECT OF EACH HOUSE, THESE ORDERS SHALL BECOME EFFECTIVE AT A DATE THEREAFTER TO BE DESIGNATED BY THE GOVERNOR.

THE HEAD OF EACH PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENT SHALL BE A SINGLE EXECUTIVE UNLESS OTHERWISE PROVIDED IN THIS CONSTITUTION OR BY LAW.

WHEN A BOARD OR COMMISSION IS AT THE HEAD OF A PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENT, THE MEMBERS THEREOF SHALL BE APPOINTED BY THE GOVERNOR. THE TERM OF OFFICE AND THE REMOVAL OF SUCH MEMBERS SHALL BE AS PRESCRIBED IN THIS CONSTITUTION OR BY LAW. WHEN A CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER OF A BOARD OR COMMISSION HEADING A PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENT IS APPOINTED BY SUCH BOARD OR COMMISSION AS PRESCRIBED BY LAW, HIS APPOINTMENT SHALL BE SUBJECT TO THE APPROVAL OF THE GOVERNOR EXCEPT AS OTHERWISE PROVIDED IN THIS CONSTITUTION.

Sec. c. SINGLE EXECUTIVES HEADING PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENTS AND THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICERS OF PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENTS HEADED BY BOARDS OR COMMISSIONS SHALL KEEP THEIR OFFICES AT THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, EXCEPT AS OTHERWISE PROVIDED BY LAW, SUPERINTEND THEM IN PERSON AND PERFORM SUCH DUTIES AS MAY BE PRESCRIBED BY LAW.

Sec. d. EACH PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENT SHALL BE UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF THE GOVERNOR, UNLESS OTHERWISE PROVIDED BY THE CONSTITUTION. The governor shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed; shall transact all necessary business with the officers of government; and may require information in writing from all executive and administrative state officers, elective and appointive, upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices.

THE GOVERNOR MAY, BY APPROPRIATE COURT ACTION OR PROCEEDING BROUGHT IN THE NAME OF THE STATE, ENFORCE COMPLIANCE WITH ANY CONSTITUTIONAL OR LEGISLATIVE MANDATE, OR RESTRAIN VIOLATIONS OF ANY CONSTITUTIONAL OR LEGISLATIVE POWER, DUTY, OR RIGHT BY ANY OFFICER, DEPARTMENT, OR AGENCY OF THE STATE OR ANY OF ITS POLITICAL SUBDIVISIONS. THIS AUTHORITY SHALL NOT BE CONSTRUED TO AUTHORIZE ANY ACTION OR PROCEEDING AGAINST THE LEGISLATURE.

Sec. e. Whenever a vacancy shall occur in any of the state offices, the governor shall fill the same by appointment.

Sec. f. The governor may make a provisional appointment to fill a vacancy occasioned by the suspension of an officer, until he shall be acquitted or until after the election and qualification of a successor.

Sec. g. The governor shall have power and it shall be his duty, except at such time as the legislature may be in session, to examine into the condition and administration of any public office and the acts of any public officer, elective or appointive; to remove from office for gross neglect of duty or for corrupt conduct in office, or any other misfeasance or malfeasance therein, any elective or appointive state officer, except legislative or judicial, and report the causes of such removal to the legislature at its next session.

Explanation—Matter within [ ] is stricken, matter in capitals is new.

Messrs. Marshall, Greene, Kelsey, Perlich, Wilkowski, Miss Hart and Mrs. Daisy Elliott, a minority of the committee on executive branch, submit the following reasons in support of the foregoing minority report, which accompanied Committee Proposal 71:

We believe strongly in the popular election of members of the administrative board. These include the lieutenant governor, secretary of state, highway commissioner, attorney general, state treasurer, auditor general and superintendent of public instruction.

We can point to the historical success of this system. We can point out that it provides for responsible citizen participation in government, and contains safeguards against gubernatorial abuse of the appointive powers.

But few things exist independent of other factors. If the house and senate were apportioned on an equitable population basis—a vote for each person—then there would, of course, be guarantees that the governor would get the sort of administrative board he needed to implement his policies. With the present terminology of advice and consent, we have to refer to that old army saying, "when in doubt—don't." A house and senate antagonistic to the governor can readily block his appointments. We have a formidable list of precedents of such gubernatorial rebuke during the Williams and Swainson administrations as you all well know.

There is no evidence that the public wants this provision for election of their state officials to be changed. Certainly the events which brought the constitutional convention into being—the unjust apportionment of the legislature, the financial crisis, the new problems of metropolitan areas in the face of an immense population explosion—are not related to the election or appointment of state officials.

Therefore, we strongly advocate first, election of a secretary of state by the people. Inasmuch as he bears much responsibility for assuring honesty in elections, we want him to be independently and directly answerable to the people.

We favor election of the highway commissioner, a device which has assured the state a highway system which its citizens can point to with pride. As Commissioner Mackie pointed out in previous testimony, an elected highway commissioner can pinpoint responsibility for highway administration. Under the appointive system the pressure on a governor to "trade roads" for other parts of his program would be enormous. Further, election of a highway commissioner helps promote continuity of policy, so essential to the development of long range highway plans and programs for the state, city and county.

We favor election of the attorney general, the chief law enforcement officer of the state. In a representative government, appointment of the chief law enforcement officer would place him in a position of obligation which would make his duties more difficult. If the attorney general were appointed, he could be subjected to the influences of the appointing authority. Presently, he is able to make an independent legal judgment which might differ from the political decisions of other members of the executive branch.

We also want to emphasize that those offices concerned with handling the people's money—the treasurer and the auditor general—should be directly answerable to the people. The people should have an auditor who is elected by them and directly responsible to them. Michigan's history of dollar honesty in state government, regardless of party in power, has resulted partly from the high character of our citizens and partly from our form of government, with divided constitutional authority among law enforcement officials, financial officials, and other executive officials.

We want a school superintendent elected by the people and accountable to them for the decisions he makes concerning their youngsters. An elected superintendent will have the constitutional status and responsibility to support the needs of education in meetings of the administrative board and throughout his public activities.

Another reason for opposing the majority report is the veto power by the senate over appointments, a form of "advice and consent". A legislative body that is not truly representative of the electorate is not interested in implementing the powers or assuring the effectiveness of the chief executive. The advice and consent (or veto) concept can only mean that a minority of the people electing a majority of the senators would be able to block the wishes of a governor elected by the majority. Advice and consent forces a governor elected by a majority into an impossible struggle against a form of state government that cannot be representative of the people because of its very structure.

The minority report will result in responsible constitutional government. The governor's power will be sufficiently limited to prevent any undue usurpation of power by him, but at the same time, he will have sufficient flexibility to permit him to carry out his constitutional responsibilities. If power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely, we have found in this report the realistic balance between responsible government and citizen participation.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin. Excuse me. Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Yes. I was on the floor seeking recognition. I wish to make a brief statement and then I have a motion to make. I trust that the delegates take this in the same vein that it is given. On Thursday and Friday of last week, there was much talk on the floor of the convention and in the daily press about an alleged deal that had been consummated between factions within the convention. One of our very esteemed and distinguished delegates saw fit to take the floor and make a half hour or 45 minute speech explaining the alleged deal. Later a press conference was held, at which time the alleged deal was explained to the press, and all of you read that in the daily press. Now, because of the involvement—at least the stories in the press—by the explanation on the floor of this distinguished delegate and colleague of ours and in fairness to him and at the same time in fairness to all of the delegates here, that we might have his advice and counsel as we consider what I believe to be one of the most important issues before this convention, and inasmuch as the article that we are now about to take up is directly involved in the alleged deal, I would at this time, Mr. Chairman, move that we pass over Committee Proposal 71 until Friday morning, until the return of this very distinguished delegate, in order that we might have his advice and counsel in the debate, and I urge its adoption. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, we reached this in the order of business here and it seems to me we are prepared to go ahead on the matter. I see no reason why we shouldn't get it under way right now. It seems to me that all the questions that are likely to need consideration can come up and we will be discussing this for a long time. I am afraid we are going to be discussing it for several days and there will be plenty of time for everybody to be heard.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I yield to Delegate Ford, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Ford.

MR. FORD: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Martin's concern today with staying with the calendar is certainly not in keeping with what he expressed to us the other day when this was passed over. It was at the head of the calendar and was shoved down here on Thursday. We didn't know why on Friday. Some of us left here thinking we knew why. Some of us left here rather unhappy, thinking that Mr. Martin participated in setting the stage for what was done Thursday night. I think now that Mr. Marshall is raising a valid point here.

As far as the constituents in my area are concerned, they have been informed through the press and other means that a man who is supposedly a leader in this convention has answered this problem for us by bringing together divergent forces and "preventing the radical Democrats from Wayne county from getting together with the Hale Brake Republicans." This being the case, I don't think that we should proceed without having the benefit of his counsel, since he seems to be the man with the principal and most intimate knowledge of the details of what we are going to adopt here and probably we could save a lot of debate if we had the benefit of it at the beginning. I think that the reason for passing now is far more valid than the reasons given last Thursday when we passed over this thing in order to start taking up the ad board one item at a time. I support Mr. Marshall's motion.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I have nothing further to say. Only that I urge its adoption.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: I think we are fully ready to take the matter up and all the delegates will have an opportunity to express themselves in due course on this. I would move that the motion be defeated.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Brown, were you seeking recognition?

MR. G. E. BROWN: I'll pass.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I would just like to point out to our honorable committee chairman that we also were ready to proceed with Committee Proposal 71 the other day when the general orders were changed on us without any advance notice by a motion on the floor coming from the committee chairman. I think that at least we are playing the rules clean and the game according to the rules. I feel that inasmuch as there was considerable publicity, speeches on the floor of this convention, press conferences held, people throughout the state having read these, I think that the delegates to this convention and the people are entitled to have one of the moving parties —at least apparently from the papers—in this alleged deal present when this issue is debated on the floor. I do not believe that my motion to pass over this until Friday morning and proceed with the other orders of business is unreasonable. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair recognizes Mr. Walker.

MR. WALKER: A question of Mr. Martin through the Chair, please.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If Mr. Martin cares to answer.

MR. WALKER: Mr. Martin, only to save the time of this committee, from your insistence that you are ready to go ahead today, are we to interpret that as meaning that a deal has been consummated? If so, we can eliminate any debate and get on with the voting.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Walker, you are not to put any words in my mouth and you are not to draw any conclusions of that kind or any other kind of that nature. We have reached this in the normal course here. We have delayed it to give people a chance to discuss this matter. Both sides have had an opportunity to review it. And this is the next order of business. I suggest that we go ahead with the order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Do you have anything further on the question, Mr. Walker?

MR. WALKER: I have no further questions of Mr. Martin. May I make one more remark, please, sir?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Go right ahead, Mr. Walker.

MR. WALKER: It would appear to me that Mr. Marshall's remarks today and reasons were more cogent than any that we could find for Mr. Martin's the other day. And therefore, I would suggest that we adopt Mr. Marshall's motion.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Stamm.

MR. STAMM: I think this is a very reasonable request. I would like to see this committee grant it with the one condition that they also have Governor Swainson at the session Friday so that he may also speak on this article because I am sure it would be of much interest to both political parties, certainly to all the delegates in this convention, if he could repeat the testimony which he gave before the committee on executive branch. And I'd like to go along with Mr. Marshall with the extra proviso that we have the governor here also, because he is the one man interested in what is going on in the executive branch. (laughter)

MISS HART: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Miss Hart, Mr. Sterrett is next.

MISS HART: I beg your pardon.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize you—

MR. STERRETT: I'll yield to Miss Hart.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: All right, Miss Hart.

MISS HART: I sincerely hope that Mr. Stamm is sincere in that recommendation and I would certainly hope that we would invite Governor Swainson to appear before this committee on Friday. I think he would gladly come.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the motion to pass Committee Proposal 71 until Friday. Mr. Wanger.

MR. WANGER: Mr. Chairman, the remaining items upon the executive committee calendar, with the exception of Committee Proposal 71, will clearly not take up the time between now and Friday. Therefore, if we pass this, we are going to leave ourselves with either a day or perhaps a little more where we have nothing to do or we will have to go on to the consideration of some other matter. I think either one of these would be wrong because we should consider the work of each committee all at one time insofar as possible. Therefore, I urge you to vote against this motion.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Marshall motion. Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I would just like to point out to Delegate Wanger that we passed over 2 articles this morning, 2 proposals, which I am sure would take the rest of today and possibly all day tomorrow.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the Marshall motion to pass over until Friday. A division has been called for. Is there sufficient number up? There is. All those who are in favor of the Marshall motion to pass Committee Proposal 71 until Friday will vote aye. Those opposed will vote nay. Have you all voted? If so, the machine will be locked and the secretary will tally the vote.

SECRETARY CHASE: On the motion to postpone consideration of Committee Proposal 71 until Friday, the yeas are 39; the nays are 71.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The motion does not prevail.

Section a of Committee Proposal 71 has been read by the secretary. The Chair will recognize the chairman of the committee, Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, the provisions are a little complicated here. I would suggest that for purposes of following the discussion, you not only turn to your copy of Committee Proposal 71 on the green sheet, but to your committee minority report which will be minority report C, I believe, the yellow sheet, since that will be coming up shortly, and that you get from your desk—I hope you still have it—the series of sheets which are printed the length of the paper, which is headed, Comparative Analytical Presentation of the Majority and Minority Reports, Committee Proposal 71 on the executive branch. This in 2 columns compares the 2 reports and in the third column, indicates the differences. If you do not have this series of sheets, we have had some more copies printed and if you will hold up your hands, the pages will distribute them. Or you can put your light on if you want one. Have you all received a copy of that if you didn't have your original distributed copy? Now, I would like to suggest, Mr. Chairman, that we divide section a into 2 parts and that we consider the first paragraph on that which would be, on your green sheet, lines 10 through 19.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If there is no objection, that will be done.

MR. MARTIN: That paragraph is separate from the second paragraph which relates to the lieutenant governor. The portion of the section which we are considering, then, simply reads:

That paragraph provides, in effect, for the election of the governor and lieutenant governor for 4 year terms beginning in 1966. The election in 1962 and in 1964 will be for a 2 year term. The 4 year term would not begin until 1966. Now, the committee proposal eliminates from the present wording of the constitution the reference to a secretary of state, state treasurer, commissioner of state land office, an auditor general and an attorney general. It changes the term from 2 years to 4 years.

Very simply, Mr. Chairman, I would like to discuss for just a moment the committee's reasons for making this proposal which eliminates from election certain of the state officers. The reasons behind the committee's action are based upon the studies which have been made in Michigan over numbers of years in the past, particularly the little Hoover commission study, and these studies point out that the power and authority in Michigan at the top of its state government is dispersed and divided and redivided in a manner which classifies us as one of the states having the most completely fractionated government at its head of any state in the union. Not only do we have most of our principal departments headed by boards and commissions, but the top board of all, the administrative board, is so set up that 5 members can override the governor's veto or directives and, as a matter of fact, regularly did so when I was a member of that state administrative board. The people, I think, in general and throughout the state, don't fully understand this situation. In general, I think the people think that the governor has authority to govern and in fact, of course, this is not so. Instead of really orderly government, we have government by a multiple sort of executive, with no clear lines of responsibility at the top and some 7 men who may have no direct allegiance to the governor and no real feeling of loyalty toward him, who have their own political responsibilities and ambitions, and some of whom are considerably more powerful than the governor himself. This seems to the members of the committee who prepared this report to be not organization but disorganization.

One or two words with respect to some of the arguments that are used in this connection. One argument is that appointing these people provides too much power to the governor. The argument is that we don't want a dictator in Michigan. It seemed to me—and I think it seemed to the committee—that this was erecting a straw man; that no governor, whether he has a right to appoint his cabinet or not, is going to be a dictator in Michigan as long as we have a legislature as strong as the present legislature is, particularly if it is strengthed with a legislative auditor general, and as long as we have strong courts, and the legislature holds the pursestrings. As a matter of fact, we have far more power in the federal government in the president, who appoints his cabinet, and no one argues that there is any dictatorship there because of course congress won't permit it any more than the legislature in Michigan would permit it.

Another argument is that government wasn't meant to be efficient; that this is an attempt to impose efficiency on the people. Mr. Theodore Brown the other day said—I made a note of it—that government has in it a gross inefficiency to safeguard the rights of the people; that it wasn't meant to be efficient. I don't think any of us, or at least most of us, accept that proposition, and if we do we probably ought to give up our hopes for democracy, because certainly the state ought to be trying to be efficient if it possibly can.

One other argument is that there ought to be a balance of power in this picture. I think this completely misunderstands the balance of power doctrine or the separation of powers doctrine because while we do want a separation of powers, a balance of powers between the branches—

MR. MARSHALL: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: All right, Mr. Marshall, what is your point?

MR. MARSHALL: I have raised this question on the floor of this convention time and time and time and time again as to whether or not where there are minority reports filed, that the committee chairman should proceed debating the issues pro and con on the majority proposal without hearing the minority report.

Now, it's been ruled and explained to me on more than one occasion that the chairman of the committee has a right to present the majority report and explain it, and I have accepted that on more than one occasion, reluctantly. But, I submit that I do not believe—and I think, in all fairness, that the delegates to this convention will agree with me—that the committee chairman does not have the right at the same time he is presenting the majority proposal, to express his own personal opinions and start expressing the opinions of others that have appeared before this committee. And I would ask the Chair to respectfully ask the committee chairman to restrict himself to presenting the majority proposal and explaining it in order that we might get onto the minority report. Thank you. I make that as a point of order, Mr. Chairman.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, may I comment on the point before your ruling?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Just a moment. Mr. Marshall, the chairman of the committee, in presenting the proposal for the first time on the floor, has a right to present the expression of the committee which passed the proposal.

MR. MARSHALL: In other words, are you ruling, Mr. Chairman, that the chairman of the committee can get up and present the committee proposal and in doing it, submit the viewpoints of the majority of the committee as to why they adopted this report and at the same time go into all of these other statements which I am not going to repeat. I wrote some of them down if you want me to start repeating them. I say that the chairman is going beyond that which he is entitled to under the rules.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair thinks that the chairman of the committee has the right to present the proposal of the committee to this committee of the whole in its detail so it will know what the proposal is about and why the committee arrived at that decision.

MR. MARSHALL: Again—and I did this once before—I want to again read rule 33 of the rules as adopted by this convention:

> A majority of the members appointed to a committee shall be necessary to report a proposal out of committee. The report of a minority of at least 3 of the members of any committee shall be received, printed in the same manner as the majority report, and treated as an amendment or substitute offered to or for the report of the committee if offered as such on the floor. All proposals reported by a committee to the convention shall be referred to the committee of the whole.

I call to the attention of the chairman and the secretary that the minority report, as revised, presented by myself, Miss Hart, Mrs. Elliott and others was presented and is so labeled as a substitute for the committee report.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair can't read in here that you get priority until the majority has submitted its proposal.

MR. MARSHALL: If I offer a substitute for the committee proposal, I still don't get priority?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair doesn't think you do. You do not, the Chair will rule.

MR. MARSHALL: So you rule I do not?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair rules that the committee proposal should be presented first.

MR. PELLOW: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Pellow.

MR. PELLOW: I would request a ruling as to whether or not an amendment takes precedence over the main body of the proposal. It is my understanding as a member of the rules committee that the original intent of the rules was to allow an amendment to be explained before any main proposal is debated if such an amendment is offered. I also have been advised that minority reports take precedence and, therefore, I assume that Mr. Marshall is offering this minority report as an amendment to the main proposal.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Wait a minute.

MR. MARSHALL: I am not going to object.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair is going to answer Mr. Pellow.

MR. MARSHALL: Alright.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: There is nothing in here that says that the minority report shall be received on the floor before the committee proposal is received. The Chair is ruling that the committee proposal will be received first.

MR. PELLOW: Well, you still haven't answered my question, Mr. Chairman. I raise a further point of order as to whether or not a minority report, if it is offered as an amendment, shall be received first.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: You don't vote on an amendment until you have discussed the proposal.

MR. PELLOW: You don't discuss an amendment to a proposal first ?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: That is the Chair's ruling.

MR. PELLOW: Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I agree with you on your ruling on the amendment. I offered the minority report as a substitute for the majority proposal. But I will go one step further with you. I will not quarrel with the right of the committee chairman to make the report and present the majority proposal to this committee. But I am getting sick and tired day in and day out on this convention floor of having decisions—as was done here last week—made off the floor, then have the committee chairman, in effect, serve as president of the convention from way over in the corner someplace. And I call a point of order on this one thing alone. And in presenting the majority proposal to this committee, does any chairman have the right to debate the issue at the same time he is presenting the proposal? That is my only point of order, Mr. Chairman, at this time.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall, if you think the chairman or anybody is getting out of line, you have a right to object. And we'll proceed now.

MR. MARSHALL: I just did. I asked for a point of order.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: You are asking for me to rule in advance of what Mr. Martin says.

MR. MARSHALL: On what he has already said; not what he is going to say. I'll ask you to rule on—

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: You want it stricken from the record? Is that what you want?

MR. MARSHALL: I want a ruling, Mr. Chairman, and I don't want to take up your time, but my patience is getting awful thin—

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: So is the Chair's.

MR. MARSHALL: —with the type of parliamentary procedure that we have had here. I merely want a ruling of the Chair, that in presenting the majority proposal, does the committee chairman have the right, while he is presenting it to this committee, to at the same time debate the issues without hearing the substitute presented.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: He has a right to explain the committee proposal to the committee of the whole and he will proceed to do that. If you think he gets out of line, you have the right to raise a point of order.

MR. MARSHALL: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I think if he gets out of line again, I'll raise a point of order.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, let me say that we are not trying to take advantage of the minority in any way, shape or manner. We are only trying to proceed in a logical fashion. And it is logical that the committee of the whole know what the majority report is and what the committee's reasons for it were. In due course, we are going to have the minority report and it will be an amendment to the proposal and they will have a chance to present their views fully and we will not interrupt or object or raise difficulties about their presentation. It seems to me this is the only logical fashion in which the delegates can be fully apprised as to what is in both reports. We are not trying to take advantage of them and I want to make that very clear.

I want to continue very briefly here with the thoughts I was expressing, particularly the argument which has been presented which is made that we need a balance of power or a separation of powers within a branch here and that therefore you should divide authority within the executive branch among all of these elected officials. The committee believes that we have a responsibility to do something effective and constructive here; that we should not fractionate our government at the top; that we should not try to divide it up so that no one knows where the authority is, although the people hold the governor responsible for carrying out a program. And it seems to the committee we ought to take whatever steps we can—and we may not be able to go the whole way—but we ought to be able to take whatever steps we can to insure that we do not continue with a completely disintegrated, fractionated, multiple headed, irresponsible government in which there is no real allegiance to the governor and in which each man who is separately elected may proceed to do his best to realize his own political ambitions. We think this is not the way to make government work well and that no other kind of organization could survive with this kind of structure; that it is not the way to run a railroad or a business or a government.

With that, Mr. Chairman, we are ready for the minority to present its portion of the minority report with respect to this paragraph.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the first gentleman on the minority report, Mr. Marshall, to present his views in regard to the first paragraph of section a as presented in the committee report.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman—

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, parliamentary inquiry. Has the minority report been read as an amendment?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: It has not. The secretary will read it.

SECRETARY CHASE: Pursuant to minority report C of Messrs. Marshall, Greene, Kelsey, Perlich, Wilkowski, Miss Hart and Mrs. Daisy Elliott,

Mr. Marshall offers the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 10, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the first paragraph and inserting "The governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, state treasurer, auditor general, attorney general, highway commissioner, and superintendent of public instruction shall be elected at the general biennial election in 1964 and in each alternate even numbered year beginning in 1966. They shall, after 1966, serve for terms of 4 years beginning on the first day of January next succeeding their election.".

MR. BENTLEY: Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Bentley.

MR. BENTLEY: Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the reference in the amendment to the superintendent of public instruction since that office has already been decided upon by the committee of the whole on first reading.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: We suspected this would be raised and I think the question was asked somewhere along the line in the committee in particular what happened. We are talking about a section here which deals with whether we are going to have elective or appointive state officials. Even though you took action in the committee on education dealing with the superintendent of public instruction, I still believe it belongs in this report and it is in there because we are dealing here with the proposals of the committee on executive branch.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: You may proceed, Mr. Marshall.

MR. BENTLEY: Is the Chair ruling me out of order?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Yes. It is in the minority report and he has a right to discuss it.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of this committee, we have reached what I consider to be one of the key issues and one of the most crucial points in this convention. In accordance with the rules of the convention, we are taking this opportunity to submit a minority report on Committee Proposal 71 reported by the committee on executive branch. Our distinguished committee chairman, Mr. Martin, has presented to this committee a glowing majority report designed to give this committee the impression that most of the recommendations in this proposal have the unanimous support of members of the committee. If Mr. Martin was speaking of commas and sentence structure, his statement was entirely accurate. If Mr. Martin was speaking of political philosophy, then, ladies and gentlemen, his statement was grossly inaccurate.

The signers of this minority report totally reject the concept of an appointed administrative board as recommended in the majority report. We totally reject the language—and I quote:

> . . . that the election of these officials does not bring government closer to the people, but on the contrary, divides authority in state government among numerous officials who have no real allegiance or responsibility to the governor and who are necessarily concerned in a major degree with furthering their own political ambitions.

We in the minority believe that the election process does bring government closer to the people; that it does work and we as delegates here would be undermining the very principles of our American form of government if we in any way diminished the rights of people to say who shall govern them.

More than a full century ago, a constitutional convention was held in the state of Michigan which determined that the power of government shall be vested in the people; that the people should predominate in the election of the officials in this state. This conformed, of course, with the philosophy of Thomas Jefferson, who said, and I quote:

> I know of no safe depository of the ultimate powers of society but the people themselves; and if we think them not enlightened enough to exercise their control with a wholesome discretion, the remedy is not to take it from them but to inform their discretion by education.

Ironically, this quotation of Jefferson's is a favored one for many people, including many of the delegates to this convention. But its meaning is being distorted and perverted in every sense by the proposal which is being made by the majority in this convention.

Now, my friends, the system of the election of our state administrative officials was considered to be the epitome of impeccability for more than 100 years and bore no criticism until a little more than 12 years ago with the advent of a change in the political complexion of this state. Since 1948, with the election of G. Mennen Williams, and the ensuing consistent election victories at the polls by the Democratic party, with the change of almost a century of domination by Republicans of our state supreme court, our state administrative officials, our educational institutions, and other statewide officials, there have been ever increasing demands for changing the system of election of not only the state administrative board under discussion here, but the membership of the state supreme court as well. We simply cannot separate these issues because many of the same people who desire a change in the selection of the justices of the court want the changes made in the selection of our state administrative board. This also involves the whole question of the democratic process of government wherein one man's vote equals that of another.

It so happens that members of the state administrative board under discussion, as well as those elected to the supreme court, are elected on the basis of one man's vote equaling that of any other man's vote. And there has been a concerted effort by the members of the Republican majority in this convention to change the rules, to change this equality of voting power on the part of the electorate in every area of our state government. Change the rules, my friends, like a group of little boys playing baseball: one side is losing, instead of having 3 strikes, they want 5. The system of election of these state administrative officials was not subjected to criticism until Democrats were elected. Since that time, however, there have been consistent and constant attacks on the system wherein the majority of the people of the state would have a voice in the selection of these state officials. There has been no occasion where the quality and competency, the ability, the integrity of any of the officials elected under this system have been subject to valid criticism. Nor has there been any valid criticism of the manner in which they have officiated. As a matter of fact, there has been a grudging admission that these officials have served their state and served it well. Nevertheless, the manner in which they have been selected is found by the party organization which has been defeated to be unsatisfactory. In no instance, as an illustration, has the administration of Lynn Bartlett, superintendent of public instruction, been subjected to criticism for the manner in which he has administered that office, or, for that matter, any other state elected official. There has been nothing but praise for James Hare, secretary of state. And no one has been bold enough to even suggest a criticism of our highway commissioner. Under the prevailing basis of selection of our highway commissioner, the state of Michigan has built the best highway system of any state in this nation. Yes, my friends, we have not had any corruption and malfeasance or misfeasance in our highway system. And I refer you to such goings on in some of the other states where you have appointed highway commissioners. I only have to refer you to a recent article in a Detroit newspaper, Parade, a supplement magazine, which documented much of the graft and corruption that is going on in other states under appointed highway commissioners not answerable to the people. It would be highly improbable that Mackie could be defeated in an election, and everyone in this convention obviously recognizes this, due to the fact that he has established such an outstanding record of achievement that it is quite apparent that he would be elected as long as he continued to lead the nation in road building, as he has done in the past 5 years. So the only manner in which John Mackie can be displaced is by changing the rules under which he holds this state administrative post.

Now, I am certain, ladies and gentlemen, that the most courageous exponent of the changing of the rules would not dare to suggest any real criticism of Mackie, just as I am sure that everyone recognizes that the only real basic purpose of changing this rule is not one of concern for a continuation of good roads in Michigan, but can only be inspired by cheap political motivations to displace an outstanding highway builder with a political hack. Listen to this: to replace an outstanding road builder with nothing but a political hack. Avarice and voracious designs, with a greed unprecedented to again feed the patronage hungry Republicans for jobs so that they can again revert to the strips and bits of highway construction which lead absolutely nowhere. In plain words: to hell with highways. The people —

MR. WANGER: Point of order.

MR. MARSHALL: — the hope of patronage and control —

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Wanger, what is your point?

MR. MARSHALL: — is more important than good administration.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Just a moment. Mr. Wanger, what is your point?

MR. WANGER: The speaker has just used language which is entirely and completely nonparliamentary and out of order in this convention. (laughter)

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall, please confine your —

MR. MARSHALL: Yes. In this enlightened day and time, I didn't think "hell" was too bad. But I will apologize to the committee if it is offended. I'll say in plain words, blank.

The hope of patronage and control is more important than good administration. This is the noble purpose of changing the rules. It is unfortunate that it is necessary to reveal these unsavory truths to this committee. It is unfortunate that this kind of gutter politics should have to be injected into the convention, rather than adopting resolutions lauding a system of election of administrative officials who have achievements unparalleled by any other state in this nation. It is extremely regrettable, however, that this convention was obviously denuded of those wholesome objectives and that in its place political avarice reigns supreme. The objectives on the part of the majority is only one of control — changing the rules — a new device. Anything which will put the Republican party, as the handmaidens of big business, back into control of government in the state of Michigan.

In my opinion, this constitutes the despicable objective of relegating the state of Michigan to the ugly situation which it has endured for years now under the politics played by the Republican senators where politics always takes precedence over progress for the state. By the process of violating their oath of office, those senators have achieved outright theft of equality of citizenship from the people of the state. This then again, this proposal, is an outright attempt to wrest from the people their inalienable right to a voice in government. It restricts and contracts these fundamental and basic rights. If this philosophy is carried out to its ultimate conclusion, there is no reason for the people to continue to exercise their franchise in the election of a governor. If the philosophy reflected in the thinking of these people who would disenfranchise the electorate further should be carried to its logical conclusion, we should elect a president of the United States and consign the electorate's privileges to a vote of the president. Let him then appoint our state, county and municipal officials. Naturally, this would be as asinine as the proposal under discussion here. But a deal has been made, and the people will get a card or 2 from the bottom of the deck. The atrocities perpetrated on the people by this convention thus far will be further enhanced, my friends, by the adoption of the committee proposal.

I personally believe that if we continue on the same path that we have been going, I do not believe that this proposal presented by the majority will get the advice and consent of the people. I urge you to support the minority report amendment and help stop any further erosion of the people's democratic rights. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize —

MR. MARSHALL: At this time, I'd like to yield to Miss Hart.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Miss Hart.

MISS HART: Mr. Chairman, fellow delegates, the minority of the executive committee agrees with the majority that Michigan should reorganize the structure of state government. We agree on 4 year terms for state officials. We agree that the governor and lieutenant governor should be elected as a team. We part company on the question of constitutionally elected state officials versus an entire government of appointed department heads. The majority insists upon a so called strong governor, although it also insists upon tying his hands with the advice and consent of an unrepresentative senate. The theory, according to the majority, would establish a one man rule which could operate peacefully, efficiently and responsibly for the benefit of state government. The majority implies that this use of the executive appointment power parallels that of the federal government, but this analogy is misleading and unfair. It is a distortion of the facts, as you well know. Although presidential appointments to the cabinet are indeed subject to senate approval, presidential appointees almost never have been queried by the senate nor have they had to subject themselves to the humiliation of hearings.

The proposal of the majority would — and let's call a spade a spade — give a conservative Republican governor the team he wants, but any other governor, Republican or Democratic, would be subject to the rebuke of a hostile legislature. A strong executive — and this is what we all want — can only be so if he is elected as a team member with a team which he has a large hand in selecting during the process of the party convention.

But who with practical experience has ever said that a democracy is the most efficient, the most economical, or the least controversial form of government? Who says that all officials must see eye to eye, must be "yes" men, must get along? Most skillful practitioners of the democratic arts will readily assert that our system of government is clumsy, timeconsuming, frustrating and cantankerous, as witness the agonies of this convention. But with all of its faults, all of its inefficiencies, and all of its quarrelsome weakness, democracy has proved to be the best insurance man has yet devised to protect his rights and accomplish his purpose of self government. And the system that Democrats and Republicans alike embrace will endure and grow strong only if every citizen we can attract to the business of government keeps a watchful eye on the road, a strong hand on the reins, and a whip to snap when officialdom grows lax and the public good seems to be forgotten. Can we accomplish this end without strong political parties? And can political parties remain strong with great responsibility for government removed and only routine chores left to do? I think not.

Today in this state, we have 2 great political parties. They are fairly equal in numbers. They are respected as energetic and dedicated to their separate principles. They are busy. There is much to do. They need additional hands to help. They are forced to work day and night to recruit, to interest the uninterested in the business of government. Most of us who have worked for years on this aspect of political activity know the value of good candidates, of elected officials, of the human touch in fact, that attracts the uninitiated to examine the issues in government so important to the welfare of our state. People must be reached at their own level of experience. They must be persuaded to an interest in and understanding of their government. Many of them, when they have attained this background, must learn what they can do to achieve their will in the business of the state.

Michigan is a huge state. It is long and wide and populous. Its 83 counties are diversified in interest and kind. Partnership with the people served in the state is a tremendous challenge to the administration. It is a challenge to the opposition as well. How are people to decide who is to serve them? By reading the newspapers? Few in this convention would want to depend wholly on this source to plead their cause. Television or radio? Only rich men can afford to adopt this method often enough to serve good purpose. And heaven help the candidate or official who replaces Ed Sullivan or Gunsmoke. Then, too, shouldn't the public be afforded the opportunity to ask questions? To talk back?

Are we going to ask 2 men to bear the entire responsibility of taking issues of the party to the people? How thoroughly can they do it? It is an impossible task.

It is disturbing to me to hear delegates to this convention suggest that the people of our state are too disinterested to know their officials, to be aware of opposing candidates or their points of view, to be willing to hear and consider the issues of government described in a campaign. If it were true — and I do not admit it — the shame would then be on political parties, too unimaginative, too smug, too noninclusive to reach out and attract the citizenry to political activity.

Anyone who has ever scheduled political candidates in a campaign knows the eagerness with which local communities welcome men and women who have been selected by the parties and who can bring to them a personal interpretation of what goes on in government. Given a number of candidates for each party, the state may be reasonably covered and people throughout its length and breadth may have personal communication with those seeking to serve them. No greater stimulation can be given to citizen involvement in government than this personal review of campaign issues.

That it is helpful to a governor to have friendly associates, I would agree. If he is strong enough to be a governor, he will have little difficulty in the convention to secure able men and women of his own choosing to join his team. The danger of an administrative board composed of representatives of opposing parties can be settled with the exercise of some ingenuity without taking away the rights of the people to select their officers. I heard my fellow delegate from the tenth legislative district say that no one told him in the campaign that they wanted to vote for judges. Perhaps he didn't ask his constituency. I did as I went up and down the streets in my radio trailer and interviewed our constituency personally. The many citizens with whom I talked made it very plain to me that they not only wanted to vote for their judges, but they also wanted to vote for the executives of the state. The message was very clear.

If education of the people is needed in matters of government — and I'm sure it is — then, let us take the responsibility for educating them. Let us not be contemptuous of the citizenry because it may not be able to name every official within state government at any hour of the day, and then decide that they are hopeless. Let us accept it rather as a challenge to political parties to devise better means of persuading our citizens to participation in government, to interest in programs, and to the business of seeking solutions to the problems we face. I urge the support of the minority report amendment.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: At this time, I'd like to yield to Delegate Daisy Elliott for a brief statement.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Mrs. Elliott.

MRS. DAISY ELLIOTT: Mr. Chairman and delegates, I would like at this time to take the opportunity to support and urge your consideration of the election of the attorney general. There is considerable difference of opinion about the proper status of the attorney general. The attorney general is involved in more than merely giving legal advice and representing the state in litigation. He performs government functions which clothe the office with special roles of public interest. This office may serve as a watchdog to guard against administrative excesses in the governor's office. To elect the attorney general exemplifies the concept that forms the basis of the philosophy of government that accords the people the indiscriminate right to select, through the media of the direct vote qualified by the personal evaluation of the electors.

It is the inherent right of the people to select, in a government of the people, by the people and for the people. It is the only fair and honest media available. In 42 of our states, the attorney general is elected by the people.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I yield to Delegate Binkowski, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, I would like to yield to Delegate Pellow, if he would desire to speak at this time.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Pellow.

MR. PELLOW: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, men are naturally divided into 2 parties, the Republican party that fears and distrusts the people and wishes to draw all powers from them into the hands of the higher classes, and the Democratic party that identifies itself with the people and has confidence in them as the most honest and safe depository of the public interests. I take it to be a necessity of politics and of public business to open them wide to public view; to make them accessible to every force that moves, every opinion that prevails in the thought of the people; to give the people command of their own economic life again, by the writing of a just and democratic constitution.

Appointment of the administrative board would consist too much of private conferences and secret understandings, of the control of legislation by men who were not legislators, but who stood outside and dictated, controlling oftentimes by very questionable means which they would not have dreamed of allowing to become public. This whole process must be forbidden. We must never allow the selection of candidates for the ad board to be controlled by the hands of small groups of men, by the hands of machines working behind closed doors, and leave it to the people to decide to elect their chosen representatives themselves. The very fact that so much in politics is done in the dark, behind closed doors, promotes suspicion. Everybody knows that corruption thrives in secret places and avoids public places. The Democratic party believes it a fair presumption that secrecy means impropriety, so the rich corporations owe it to their reputations to bring their activities and politics out into the open.

This state is aware that the Republicans have certain very definite connections with men who are engaged in business on a large scale. And the suspicion which attaches to the machine itself has begun to attach also to business enterprises just because these connections are known to exist. If these connections were open and avowed, if everybody knew just what they involved and just what purported use was to be made of them, there would be no difficulty in keeping an eye upon affairs and in controlling them by public opinion, but unfortunately, the whole process of lawmaking in the state of Michigan is a very obscure one. There is no highway of legislation, but there are many byways. Parties are not organized in such a way as are legislators —

MR. PLANK: Point of order, Mr. Chairman. I fail to see what this has to do with the item before us. It seems to me this gentleman is a long way afield.

MR. PELLOW: I will connect it up, Mr. Chairman, with the elective process and the appointive process if I am allowed —

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: With that assurance, you may proceed.

MR. PELLOW: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. The whole process of discussion, if any discussion at all takes place, is private and shut away from the public scrutiny and knowledge. There are so many circles within circles, there are so many indirect and private ways of getting at legislative action that our community is constantly uneasy during the legislative sessions. It is this confusion and obscurity and privacy of the appointive method that gives the vested machine its opportunity. It would therefore be possible for this outside force to nominate members of the administrative board to assume the role of control. The vested interests who desire something done in the way of changing the law under which they were acting or who wish to prevent legislation which seemed to them to threaten their own interests, have known that there was this definite body of interests to resort to, and they have made terms with them.

There are 2 kinds of corruption: the obvious sort, and the crude sort; the sort which is known as direct bribery, and the much subtler, more dangerous sort which consists in corruption of the will. I take it to be a necessity of this constitutional convention to open up all the processes of politics, all the elections that may be had by the various suffrages granted to the people by this constitution and the Constitution of the United States. Incidentally, I understand we also passed the freedom of speech at this very convention. Every opinion that prevails in the thought of the people, to give society command of its own economic life again, not by revolutionary measures, but by steady application of the principle that the people have a right to elect officials to cut all privileges and patronage and private enjoyment and secret advantage out of the legislative and the executive branches.

Every man has a right to live, and this means that he also has the right to vote. We have no actual famine or dearth. Our industrial mechanism can produce enough and to spare. Our government — formal and informal, political and economic — owes to everyone an avenue to possess itself of that portion of that plenty sufficient for his needs through his own work. In our days, these economic truths have become accepted as self evident. We have accepted, so to speak, a second bill of rights under which a new basis of security and prosperity can be established for all, regardless of station, race or creed.

The upper peninsula's own rightful place in the state of Michigan — and at one time the upper peninsula was a proud and glorious part of this state until it was rigged by the eastern millionaires and all the mineral wealth is gone, and now we have a difficult time in attempting to even obtain industrial development of the upper peninsula by this very selection through the so called democratic process. The corporations, which should be carefully restrained creatures of the law and the servants of the people, are fast becoming the people's masters of the upper peninsula. The vested interests have entered into an agreement with the government for free trade, and unfortunately, the masses of our people are burdened beyond any useful public purpose and for the benefit of a favored few, to the injury of a vast majority of our people. This is not equality before the law. The arrogance of this assumption is unconcealed. It appears in the sordid disregard of all but personal interests in the refusal to abate, for the benefit of others, one iota of selfish advantage by appointing officials to perpetuate these advantages through efforts to control legislation and improperly influence the suffrage of our people.

Our people, in spite of misrepresentations — and at this time I would ask the Chair to call this committee to order — I don't mind competing with static, as Mr. Nord has pointed out —

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If you would confine yourself to the subject, you would get a little more attention. (laughter)

MR. PELLOW: If the Republican party would like to carry their secret caucus on down below, that's all right with me. (laughter)

Now — in spite of misrepresentations and misleading fallacies concerning appointments, our people will not be denied the right to vote.

It would be well here to refer to Franklin Delano Roosevelt's observation with regard to liberalism in America. In 1938 he wrote:

> Generally speaking, in a representative form of government, there are usually 2 general schools of political belief — liberal and conservative. The system of party responsibility in America requires that one of its parties be the liberal party and the other be the conservative party. This has been the division by which the major parties in American history have identified themselves whenever crises have been developed which required definite choice of direction. In Jefferson's day, in Jackson's day, and in Lincoln's and Theodore Roosevelt's and Wilson's day, one group emerged clearly as liberals opposed to the other, the conservatives.
> One great difference which has characterized this division has been that the liberal party — no matter what its particular name was at the time — believed in the wisdom and efficacy of the will of the great majority of the people, as distinguished from the judgment of a small minority of either education or wealth. The liberal group has always believed that control by a few — political control or economic control — if exercised for a long period of time, would be destructive of a sound representative democracy. For this reason, for example, it has always advocated the extension of the right of suffrage to as many people as possible, trusting the combined judgment of all the people in political matters rather than the judgment of a small minority.

The Democratic party believes strongly in the popular election of members of the administrative board. These include the lieutenant governor, secretary of state, highway commissioner, attorney general, state treasurer, auditor general and superintendent of public instruction.

At this time, I am quoting from the minority report because most of this constitutional convention has already been decided in secret to the exclusion of the minority, and perhaps you have not even read the minority report. So therefore, I am calling it to your attention just for the record.

[Paragraphs 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 of the reasons supporting minority report C were read by Mr. Pellow. For text, see above, page 1770.]

Incidentally, I read in the paper the other day where the upper peninsula was blessed finally with another stretch of U.S. 2, completing the last gravel road of U.S. 2 in the upper peninsula. That in itself is indeed an accomplishment.

[Paragraphs 7, 8 and 9 of the reasons supporting minority report C were read by Mr. Pellow. For text, see above, page 1770.]

In closing, ladies and gentlemen of this committee, I am certainly happy to know that the results are a foregone conclusion, that regardless of any debate to be held at this particular session of the constitutional convention, that all these issues are cut and dried, and actually if this convention were honest, it would come in tomorrow with a completed document and save the taxpayers of the state of Michigan at least $144,000. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall, are you waiving? Mr. Binkowski.

MR. BINKOWSKI: Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, my remarks will be brief at this particular time because as I understand it, a so called compromise or a deal has been made with respect to the office of the attorney general and while I'd like to speak at length on the reasons favoring the continued election of the attorney general, I don't think that it would be worthwhile taking your time. But very briefly, while I was a former assistant attorney general, I think there are those here who are more qualified than I am to speak on the reasons for electing the attorney general. Your chairman is a former attorney general. Of course, we have 2 delegates who are former deputy attorney generals.

Mr. Pellow has already commented that the attorney general is the chief law enforcement officer in the state of Michigan. I think that a great number of people, including the delegates here, perhaps are not aware of the multitude of functions that the office has and the effect it has on state government. I'd like your indulgence to quote 3 brief paragraphs from the General Management of Michigan State Government. It is a staff report regarding the reorganization of state government in November of 1951. This will give you an idea of the breadth of the office of the attorney general. It says:

> The activities of the attorney general's office range over the entire breadth of state government. His scope of interest is as great as that of the governor. The attorney general has an important role in judicial procedures. By the constitution, he is, with one exception, the only attorney permitted to represent the state in court. Also, the attorney general has the power to intervene in any case, public or private, whenever the state's interests are affected and to supercede a county prosecutor in any action in which he deems the prosecutor is not functioning in the best interests of the state.

Parenthetically, I think you have seen an example of this in Wayne county. I don't know who was right, the Wayne county prosecutor or our present attorney general. But I submit to you that by continuing the elective feature of both of these offices, we will give the people the opportunity to decide who was right and who was wrong. Continuing with the quote:

> His activities in the administrative branch of state government are quite varied. Short of the courts, the formal opinions of the attorney general are the most authoritative statements of the meaning of the laws. Statutes direct the attorney general to give his opinion on any questions of law upon the request of any state official.
> The attorney general gives opinions to more than just state officers. In the field of opinion writing, the attorney general's office is utilized more by the administrative agencies of the state that are under the direction of the governor than by any other class of governmental units.

I think that this gives you a bird's eye view of the functions of the office of the attorney general. This is by far the most important administrative official. By his decisions, he can stop many of the actions within administrative agencies. Of course, I think we have seen in recent history an attorney general who in some cases has stopped the program of the governor. Yet, he is accountable to the people. I think that the will of the people can best be served by an elected attorney general who is primarily responsible to them.

Now, Mr. Pellow has commented to you, and I think that you are well aware that the governor has to make many decisions. Many of them are political decisions. I don't think that the best interests of the state can be served if the attorney general is appointed so that he must confirm the political decision of the governor. I think that the people of the state of Michigan have a right to the service of an attorney general who can say no, when the law and the interpetation of law demands that he say no. Therefore, I favor the election of an attorney general and if I find out in the course of the proceedings with respect to Committee Proposal 71, that it is the feeling of the group that he should not be elected, I would of course speak at greater length. I would like to turn this back to Mr. Marshall.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: Mr. Chairman, we have several other speakers but I believe that to call on them at this point, would be repetitious on the arguments that we have presented. I think practically all of the points have been covered, so I have talked to the other speakers and they have graciously consented not to make a statement at this time and ask that I try and summarize with a few brief remarks — and I will be very brief because I do not want to repeat myself.

The majority report would have you believe that the elective administrative board system is a conglomerate of conniving public officials plotting to overthrow the chief executive. The majority report would have you believe that the chief executive is a political unit whose power is manipulated by a greedy satellite. I submit that nothing is further from the truth and I would submit further that no one knows this better than our honorable committee chairman. One fact is that in our political system the man running for governor has a personal and firm hand in choosing members of his cabinet, and that goes for both parties. Another fact is that under our present system, elected state officials are responsible to the governor and subject to removal if they abuse their constitutional or legal authority.

The majority report contends that these elected officials are "necessarily concerned in a major degree with furthering their own political ambitions." We in the minority — and we believe that you in the majority — should ask: who says so and where is the proof?

Let us examine the majority report as we proceed in our deliberations on its recommendations to strengthen the chief executive. We are asked to accept the proposition that one way to give this political unit power is to let him appoint his administrative board subject to review by the senate. And I emphasize "subject to review by the senate". Can any delegate or anyone within hearing distance of my voice explain to me or to any other delegate or to the people of this state how you go about strengthening the chief executive by giving a senate veto power over his appointees — a senate that is representative of the minority of the people, a majority in the senate who was elected by a minority of the votes cast? Can anyone convince me how you strengthen the chief executive by giving veto power — a Gromyko type veto, if you please — over the gubernatorial appointees by a malapportioned senate? And I don't think there is much question in anyone's mind when this convention is over that it will still be malapportioned.

So, in closing, I plead with the delegates, even though an alleged deal has been made, to reconsider the alleged deal and give serious consideration to the minority report amendment, help us to leave in the hands of the people of this state the right to elect their administrative officials rather than placing it in the hands of a small group of senators over on "the hill" who hold a Gromyko type veto over gubernatorial appointees. Thank you, Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: We have heard from the committee on the proposal and we have heard from the proponents of the minority report amendment. We are now open to individual delegates and Mr. Sterrett asked for recognition some time ago.

MR. STERRETT: Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, I am sure that some of our great orators here on the minority report amendment would put Senator Dirksen to shame. I have heard quite a bit of political screaming here. I was not going to speak on this subject, but I can't help it. I'd like to set the record straight.

First, I'd like to point out to Mr. Marshall, I do not believe it was all the Republicans' motivation. I recall some organizations, the league of woman voters, citizens for Michigan, citizens for a sound constitution, junior chamber of commerce. Also, Mr. Marshall, you spoke of political patronage by an appointive ad board. I believe that you voted for passing the civil service section. There are a number of exempt positions in the governor's office; there are a number of exempt positions in each department.

I heard Miss Hart say that when she was campaigning, she asked about the election of judges. I recall one evening when we were campaigning, I was among a group and she was among the same group and we spoke to some people. I asked the group if they could tell me who their judges were. Not one could. Also Miss Hart mentioned: do you want a "yes" man? Is the U. S. attorney general a "yes" man?

The governor has appointed people to the ad board for quite a while now, in the case of vacancies. If the people have been against this, why haven't they called for a special election to fill those vacancies?

I would like to quote to you from William Graham Sumner:

> The forgotten man is delving away in patient industry, supporting his family, paying his taxes, casting his vote, supporting the church and the school, reading his newspaper, and cheering for the politician of his admiration, but he is the only one for whom there is no provision in the great scramble and the big divide. He works. Generally he prays—but always he pays. Yes, above all, he pays. He keeps production going on. He is strongly patriotic. He gives no trouble. He excites no admiration. He is not in any way a hero nor a problem, nor notorious, nor an object of sentiment, nor a burden, nor the object of a job, nor one over whom sentimental economists and statesmen can parade their fine sentiments. Therefore, he is forgotten.

This is from an essay called The Forgotten Man. Candidate Roosevelt used it in a speech at the depth of the depression in 1932. It elicited a warm response and made his appeal understandable over the nation. Regrettably, a few years later, politics resumed its old habit of specific appeals to many minority groups. The forgotten man was once again forgotten. I would like to point out that in the past year it is very interesting how strongly the minority feels at the moment about electing the state ad board. In the past year, they switched their position completely. Maybe they realize the forgotten man should be looked at again.

Another thing that was mentioned was that we should have government of the people, for the people and by the people. I agree with this. If the people would elect a governor and permit the governor to appoint his administrative board, this would be for the people. It would be by the people because they had elected the governor. And it would also be of the people. By appointing the ad board, the people would still have control over the ad board with the election of the governor. He would then, for the first time, be held responsible and accountable. Thank you.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: Mr. Chairman, I just want to make a few comments on one or two of the things which have been said by some of the prior speakers, particularly with respect to this argument which both Mr. Marshall and Miss Hart used, that somehow this process of electing people who are unknown to the voters brings these elected officials closer to the people. In that regard—and there have been other studies on it—I think it is interesting to note the paragraph in the little Hoover commission report in which they say—and this is supported by an appendix:

> The voters' lack of knowledge concerning the incumbents in these offices is staggering. Very few voters can even name the statewide elected officials. A study made in one county of voters' knowledge with regard to the elected state officials, discloses that these officials are not well known. Voters interviewed were asked to select from a list of 9 state officers the one they knew most about. In identifying the incumbent of the office chosen as the one they knew most about, 73 per cent of those who chose the secretary of state could not name the incumbent, although he was then campaigning for the governorship. Seventy-five per cent could not name the highway commissioner, 77 per cent could not name the superintendent of public instruction, 81 per cent could not name the attorney general and 96 per cent could not name the treasurer who had been in office the longest of those on the list.

So it is perfectly clear, Mr. Chairman, that the voters are buying a complete pig in a poke when they vote for most of these officials after they have been in office for a period of time, particularly if their office lends itself to advertising and some of these offices do lend themselves to advertising. The secretary of state's office is one and the highway commissioner's office is another. The voters acquire a certain name familiarity with the individuals involved.

Mr. Marshall has devoted himself to a question with regard to the various officers now holding these positions. I don't want to criticize them individually as individuals, but since he has addressed himself to the particular jobholders, saying that no one could possibly criticize Mr. Bartlett and no one could have anything but praise for Mr. Hare, and that no one has questioned the highway commissioner, Mr. Mackie, the only question seems to me there would be this: would it be possible for the governor to fill these positions with people who were more qualified, who had more background in the field in which they were expected to perform? And I think it is fair to say that both in the case of the superintendent of public instruction, and in the case of the highway commissioner, at the time they were elected to office, there is no question whatever but that if we had searched the state or throughout the United States for the best man we could possibly have for these offices for purposes of appointment, we could have found someone who had better qualifications than either of those persons for the jobs to which they were elected.

I think it is rather interesting too that in spite of the vigorous arguments of the minority that all these people should be elected, that the man who had most experience with some of these jobs, particularly with the job of highway commissioner, Governor Williams, who held this office for a long time, longer than some of us would have liked, specifically recommended that the highway commissioner be appointed. Obviously, this was based on a long time judgment, I assume, since he made the recommendation after a Democratic highway commissioner had been elected; he was not deciding it solely on the question of whether there had been a Republican highway commissioner in office while he was governor. I assume he made the decision on the basis of the fact that in his judgment, after many years of experience which he had in the governor's office, it was his conclusion that an appointed highway commissioner would be a better highway commissioner, that he would perform the job better if he would be a more qualified individual, and that he would have background which would entitle him to hold that job and do an expert job in that field. So it seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that the arguments of the minority are in a large measure conditioned by the fact that at the present time, some of the members of their own party hold these offices. I don't question their motives. It is possible that if we were in the reverse position, some of us would be urging this. But this is a short range political argument and it has nothing to do with the broad question, the forward looking question for the next 50 years as to what is desirable to do with respect to election or appointment. The question of who holds these jobs is not important. The question of how you can get the best people to hold them is very important.

Mr. Chairman, I should like at this time to yield to Mr. Gust for a statement.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Grosse Pointe Farms, Mr. Gust.

MR. GUST: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee of the whole, I am just going to make a few brief remarks as to what transpired in our committee with reference to the drafting of this proposal and specifically the philosophy behind the first paragraph. This proposal has been submitted to the convention by the committee on executive branch with the objective of strengthening the executive branch of Michigan government. The committee's recommendations are based upon the conclusion that the present Michigan constitution needs some significant improvements in the provisions dealing with the executive branch. The committee agrees with the report of the commission on intergovernmental relations appointed by President Eisenhower that "The American system of separation of powers works best when all branches of government are strong, energetic and responsible." The commission concluded that few states today have an adequate executive branch and that although state constitutions provide in principle for 3 equal branches of government, "most of these constitutions and numerous laws based on them include provisions that tend to undermine this principle." Michigan, like many other states, is restricted in achieving a strong executive branch because of a short term of office, a multiplicity of elected officers, lack of a rational administrative structure, and other features of the present system. The commission on intergovernmental relations found that while "there is no unanimous agreement on a precise pattern of administrative organization applicable to all states, there is substantial agreement on certain arrangements which, if generally applied, would greatly strengthen state administration."

Committee Proposal 71 recommends changes in the executive article which correspond to recommendations of the commission on intergovernmental relations and to changes which have been made by a number of other states in recent revisions of their own constitutions. Support of these recommendations does not imply any hope that there is a magic formula which will solve all the problems of state administration, or that there is any scientific proof that a given set of constitutional provisions will assure more effective operation of the executive branch. Nevertheless, these proposals, taken together, offer our best prospect for accomplishing what the voters of the state expected from us at this convention in working toward modernization of the executive article of our constitution. The committee on executive branch, like most other committees, did not come out with a unanimous recommendation as to exactly what needs to be done. There were a number of divisions in this committee, and on some issues the committee was almost evenly split. Naturally, most attention will be given in the debate on the floor to those issues on which there is the closest division both among members of the committee and among the delegates to the convention as a whole.

In view of this, it is important to emphasize and underline the fact that the executive branch committee was unanimous in submitting some of its most important recommendations. For example, there was no dissent from the recommendation that the term of office of the governor and other elected executive officers should be for 4 years rather than 2. There was full agreement also that the election should take place in nonpresidential election years. The committee also unanimously approved the proposal to nominate the lieutenant governor by party convention and to have him run with the governor in a package arrangement, with votes for the governor to be also cast for the lieutenant governor in the same manner as with the president and vice president of the United States. There is no difference of opinion as to the value of a new constitutional provision which will place a limit of 20 on the number of principal departments and provide a method for accomplishing this within a reasonable period after the constitution goes into effect, either by statutory action or by executive order if the legislature fails to act within a designated time. Likewise, there is no dissent from the recommendation to give constitutional status to the approach to administrative reorganization which has already been adopted in Michigan public act 125 of 1958.

The only difference of opinion within the committee had to do with the requirement for disapproval of administrative reorganization plans proposed by the governor. Some committee members thought it should be more difficult and some thought it should be less difficult for the legislature to reject reorganization plans than is provided in the committee recommendation that a majority of the members elect of both houses of the legislature must be required for rejection.

Now, on these very significant and forward looking major recommendations, as well as on a number of less important matters, the committee on executive branch was able to reach substantial agreement. In contrast to this, the committee was divided on the issue of election versus appointment of executive officials other than the governor and lieutenant governor, and on the closely related question of whether or not there should be senate confirmation of appointments and if so, what form it should take. In all cases, a majority of the members of the committee favored appointment of these officials, although the vote was closer with respect to some of these offices than others.

As we all know, the Michigan constitution now provides for the election of the governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, state treasurer, auditor general and superintendent of public instruction. A highway commissioner is elected under statutory authority. Michigan elects a larger number of officials than is the case in most other states. Only 9 states elect a larger number than the 8 elected in Michigan. Our own arrangements have not always been the same. The 1835 Michigan constitution provided for the election by the voters of only the governor and lieutenant governor. The secretary of state, attorney general, and auditor general were appointed by the governor with senatorial consent. The state treasurer was appointed by the legislature and the superintendent of public instruction was appointed by the governor with the consent of the legislature in a joint vote. The 1850 constitution provided for direct popular election of a larger number of officials, and this was carried over into the Constitution of 1908. As probably many of you know, in 1850 there was a large, sweeping so called Jacksonian movement in this country and our state was caught up in it, as were a number of others.

The executive branch committee has recommended that only the governor and the lieutenant governor continue to be popularly elected. It has proposed that the auditor general be replaced by a legislative auditor—which is now, by virtue of Mr. Hutchinson's amendment, returned to the title of auditor general—selected by the legislature, and that the superintendent of public instruction also be made an appointive rather than an elective official. The committee proposal gives constitutional status to the secretary of state, state treasurer and attorney general, but they would be appointed by the governor rather than elected, and their appointment would be subject to disapproval by a majority vote of the members elect of the senate if such action is taken within 60 legislative days after the date of appointment. The language of the committee proposal would leave an option to the legislature to have principal departments not mentioned in the constitution headed either by a single executive who is appointed or by an appointed board or commission. It would not permit statutory provision for an elected department head, as is now the case for the highway commisioner.

There are 2 main advantages to be gained by reducing the number of elected officials below the present total of 8. One is that it reduces the number of offices on which the voter must inform himself and exercise a choice and hence contributes to a shorter ballot. There is no necessary correlation between the number of offices filled by popular election and the effectiveness of popular participation in government. We have not found it necessary to elect members of the president's cabinet in order to preserve democratic participation in national government and there is no more reason to think that this is necessary at the state level.

There is plenty of evidence to show that the voter frequently cannot name the incumbents of most of the state elective offices and it is doubtful whether most voters are in a position to judge the relative competence of candidates for specialized offices such as state treasurer or state attorney general. Election statistics show that there is a sharp falling off in the number of voters who cast ballots for minor state offices. If the spring election is eliminated, the problem of "voter fatigue" at the fall election will be even more serious, unless some effort is made to shorten the ballot. A second and more important reason for appointment rather than election is that this would lead toward a more unified executive branch. As set forth in the supporting statement for Committee Proposal 71:

> The committee's action is based upon the feeling that the election of these officials does not bring government closer to the people, but on the contrary, divides authority in state government among numerous officials who have no real allegiance or responsibility to the governor and who are necessarily concerned in a major degree with furthering their own political ambitions.

Appointment by the governor would permit the people to hold the governor directly responsible. Direct election of a number of executive officials leads to confusion of responsibility and buck passing.

It should also be pointed out that if the objective were to permit the voters to elect directly the most important executive officers, then there is not much logic in having those officials be the ones that have traditionally been popularly elected. In some cases, they are no longer the most important officials in terms of the size of their programs, money expended, or the importance of their work to the public safety and welfare. If we were to attempt to continue to elect at least the same number of officials and to select them so as to reduce the governor's control over the executive branch, then logically, there would be a different list of elected officials than the one we now have.

It must be conceded, of course, that the issue of senate confirmation has a bearing upon whether or not appointment rather than election will actually permit the governor to exercise a more effective choice in filling these offices. If the power of senate confirmation is exercised in a partisan and irresponsible fashion, the governor may have less freedom of choice as a matter of actual practice than when these officials are nominated in party convention and elected by popular vote. The change in the nature of senate confirmation which has been recommended by the committee majority is intended to make it possible for the senate to render a negative judgment on an appointee of the governor, but to make it more difficult than it is at present, and to make it impossible to withhold confirmation simply by failure to act on the appointment.

Opposition to appointment rather than election of these officials often takes the form not of a preference for election over appointment as a general principle, but of exceptions in favor of particular offices. An argument is made in specific terms in favor of continued election of the secretary of state, the state treasurer, the attorney general, or other particular officials. In the executive branch committee, the strongest claims were made on behalf of the attorney general, and the highway commissioner. In the case of the attorney general, it is felt that his position as the chief legal officer in the executive branch calls for an independent status and for his direct selection by the electorate. The claim is made that this office involves more than giving legal advice and representing the state in litigation, since the attorney general must represent the public interest and serves in a watchdog capacity which may bring him into conflict with the governor if that official should abuse his office. On the other hand, those who favor appointment stress that the primary function of the attorney general is to give legal advice to the governor, that his legal opinions are subject to judicial review and scrutiny which provides protection against undue subservience to the governor, and that there are other procedures including the impeachment process for dealing with a governor whose behavior calls for denunciation.

The supporters for continued election of the highway commissioner and for possibly requiring this by constitutional provision, usually rest their case on 2 grounds. First is the importance of the highway function in terms of number of employees, cost of the program, and its susceptibility to political pressures and corruption; and secondly, on the excellent record of performance of the Michigan highway department, which is often attributed to the fact that Michigan has an elected highway commissioner. If the first point is a valid one, it would lead to the conclusion, as has already been pointed out, that in addition to the highway commissioner, the superintendent of public instruction, the head of the Michigan employment security agency, the head of the conservation department, the head of the corrections department, and a number of other major department heads should also be elected. On the second point, little is offered in addition to the twin statements that we have an elected highway commissioner and that we have an excellent highway department. Only one other state has an elected highway commissioner, and that state is Mississippi. It probably would not be claimed that Mississippi's relatively poor record on highways should be attributed to its practice of electing the chief highway official. Likewise, it is hard to claim that no states with appointive highway department heads have managed to provide good highway systems. What needs to be kept in mind here is that there are probably other much more important considerations in explaining whether a state does or does not have an adequate system of highways than the fact of election or appointment of the highway commissioner.

Committee Proposal 71 advocates that only the governor and the lieutenant governor should continue to be elected and a change to appointment rather than election of the other officials is certainly one of the most salient features of this Committee Proposal 71. Let me say this: this proposal started out in our committee to be—and this probably will shock you—a noncontroversial proposal. For political or other reasons, the tide suddenly changed. Much has been made recently on this floor of a so called deal with reference to this proposal. All I can say to the minority party is that all of the testimony in favor of Committee Proposal 71 given on the floor today has been given by the majority party. If any of you want to cut off any deal that you think is already solidified, I can assure you that all you have to do is turn your green light on when this proposal comes up for a vote, and mine will be on with it.

I heard a story that Dr. Anspach told some time ago, and maybe it will relate here because much accusation has been made against Mr. Brake and his "courthouse gang." But the story is that 2 of his young radicals, early in their career, decided that thievery was the only way to promote their best interests. So as young lads, 2 of them went to rob a house in outstate Michigan. One of them acted as a lookout and the other went inside. He spent about an hour or an hour and a half rummaging around and when he came back out, the lookout said, "Did you get any money?" And the fellow that had gone inside said, "Why, no. Don't you know that's D. Hale Brake's house?" The lookout said, "Oh, my God, did you lose any money?" (laughter) Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Hanna.

MR. W. F. HANNA: Mr. Chairman and fellow delegates, some years ago, it was my privilege to be a member of the so called little Hoover commission which studied the administrative departments of the state. At that time, we had good honest differences of opinion concerning the election or appointment of the governor's administrative board. This split both parties at that time very decidedly. But it does perturb me as I listen to Mr. Marshall's speech and some of the others criticizing the committee's report for fear that the audience, and particularly the high school students, will gather that we are criticizing the federal constitution and saying that the federal constitution was designed by men not interested in the people or that the party in power is not interested in the people in that they have not advocated that the president's cabinet be elected by some method. I urge that as we discuss this, we avoid political insinuations and that we confine our discussion to good honest discussion of what is best for the people of Michigan, without criticizing; that we not leave with the audience and with the high school students of this state an implication that the federal constitution for some reason has deceived the people for some 100 years or more.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: I yield to Mr. Van Dusen for a statement.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Van Dusen.

MR. VAN DUSEN: Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, my statement is going to be brief. I have 3 points, the first of which to some degree violates the admonition just given us by Mr. Hanna, but I think it is desirable to call, as Miss Hart earlier said, a spade a spade. Mr. Marshall in his opening remarks made quite a point of the fact that the proposed change from the elective method of selecting administrative board members to the appointive method was motivated by political considerations. I'd like to suggest in the first place, as many of the speakers have indicated already, this change to an appointive method has been advocated for years by impartial study groups. The commission appointed by Governor Van Wagoner back in 1942, the little Hoover commission, the citizens research council, citizens for Michigan, league of women voters, all have been advocating the appointive method for years. When this convention convened, a substantial number of the delegates of both parties represented here, advocated the appointive method as distinguished from the elective method. As a matter of fact some of the signers of the minority report who now urge election, came here advocating appointment and submitted delegate proposals to that effect.

The only recent change of position with respect to the appointive method or the elective method came within the last few months when the state central committee of the Democratic party met and urged the election of all the administrative board officials. They were followed immediately by the governor, who had testified before the committee favoring appointment, and changed his position to favor election, and were then followed by a very substantial number of the delegates representing the minority party here who signed a statement of principle to that effect. If there has been a change of position for political purposes, I think it is clear where that change has been made.

Now, my second point is this: Miss Hart pointed out in her comments that the governor needs a strong team. And I completely agree with this. When I entered state government as a member of the house of representatives in 1954, nothing could have been farther from the strong team concept than the situation which then prevailed. The governor was a member of one party, the lieutenant governor, the secretary of state, the attorney general, the auditor general, the treasurer, the highway commissioner and the superintendent of public instruction were all members of the opposite party. There was no team concept, there was no cooperation, there was no responsibility which could be focused in the governor's office because he had only to point to the fact that 2 of the members of his administrative board, members of the opposite party, were out seeking the Republican nomination for governor to oppose him in the next election. As a matter of fact, that didn't bother him very much because he spent most of his time running against the Republican highway commissioner—very successfully, I might add—so that if there is to be a team concept, it can only be achieved by giving the governor the right to appoint these key officials.

Now finally, we get to the question of the responsibility of the governor for the conduct of the affairs of the executive branch. Currently, as we can see easily, the administrative board officials about whom we are talking are not responsible to the governor because they are elected directly by the people. I submit, on the basis of my experience campaigning in this state for election to the office of attorney general, that it is very hard to point to any degree of responsibility which these elected officials have to the people because the people simply don't know who they are. Time after time in meetings sponsored by my own party, I was introduced as the candidate for auditor general, or as the candidate for secretary of state, sometimes even as the candidate for state treasurer. The fact of the matter is that if these knowledgeable people, active in political affairs, didn't know the office for which I was running, I am confident that the great majority of the voters who were called upon to assess my qualifications for that office didn't know who I was or what I was running for either. So as a consequence, we have elected officials who are not responsible to the governor. And because they are not known to the people, they are not responsible to the people either. And they are therefore not responsible to anyone. And I think this is a very bad state of affairs and should be corrected.

I will conclude with a very short quotation by a man who has long experience in political affairs, who stated to this convention on January 18 of this year, ". . .I submit that to hold the governor responsible for the sound administration of government, he should have the power to make these key appointments. . . ." I am quoting from a transcript of the argument made by Delegate Tom Downs to this convention on January 18, 1962.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair will recognize Delegate Walker.

MR. WALKER: Mr. Chairman, this is all very cute and amusing, but let's get it over with and let's vote.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Marshall is next.

MR. MARSHALL: Well, I don't know who to answer first but I think I'll start off with Mr. Gust, and give him a little publicity since the announcement on Monday. Mr. Gust points out the state of Mississippi and its sordid record in road building as an example of what happens in the only other state that has an elected highway commissioner. I would like to correct Mr. Gust—at least, I think I'm in a position to correct him; I hope that I have the right information; I believe that I do—Mississippi does not have an elected highway director or commissioner. They have a board or commission, similar to the one that came out of the alleged deal the other day, which represents various sections of the state and they in turn appoint the highway director. Now, I would agree, Mr. Gust, before you get your blood pressure up, that they do elect these commissioners—I believe it's 3; I'm not sure—and they are balkanized. They represent sections of the state where all kinds of pressure can be applied to build roads across the pasture when it should be going to New Orleans. And this has not been good under this type of a system where you have a highway commission comprised of 3, 4 or any number that you want to select. And as you point out—and the only correction I want to make is that Michigan is the only state in this union of ours that elects its highway commissioner. I think we are unique in this. We should be proud of it. We are also the only state in this union that has a toll free, limited access highway from one border to the other. I thought that the little comparison should be made and I thought that it should be pointed out—the situation in the state of Mississippi—where you have a highway commission that appoints the director, the director is constantly under pressure from the so called commissioners to do certain things in certain sections of the state.

Now, when we talk about a strong executive—and I think Delegate Gust tried to compare the appointive system of the president of the United States to that on the state level. I may be incorrect, Delegate Gust, but I believe you made the statement that no one has suggested that the president's cabinet be elected. I point out, though, that examining the appointive power at the federal level as opposed to that in Michigan and comparing it with the consent and advice of the senate, it is obvious that the present situation here in Michigan does not aid sound government under the appointive system by rejecting an executive appointment. Now, let's take for an example any appointee of the governor—who is elected by the majority of the people—who might be the best qualified and the most capable man that you could find anywhere in the state, who might have incurred senatorial displeasure, is quite likely to find himself rejected by the senate—and we have a long history of this here in Michigan. While the federal appointees must also rely on senatorial approval, there is never any large group of unconfirmed appointees and never under the federal system do the appointees of the president to his cabinet have to toe the line so as not to incur senatorial displeasure. They must instead act so as not to incur presidential disapproval. It is true that the doctrine of senatorial courtesy does limit the executive somewhat but the approval that must be rendered by the senators of the same state as the appointee acts more as a negative check on the appointive power than a positive one.

I would also like to read a brief statement from a book which we all were presented with on the floor, in which a former governor was eulogized when it was presented. I too happen to think that this man was a great governor. The only knowledge I have of Governor Groesbeck was what I had read and I have read extensively into the background and the record of Governor Groesbeck, how he established the ad board, et cetera, et cetera; and he says—and I quote—"I do not believe in commissions of any kind, judiciary or otherwise. I believe them to be the last word in inefficiency." This is the clincher, "I am just as strongly opposed to them as I am to bureaucracy made up of irresponsible appointees who owe no allegiance whatsoever directly to the people."

Now, no one has denied the alleged deal yet, and I want to talk about that a moment. We are talking about how we are going to make a strong executive by giving him the authority to appoint all of the state officials and take the right away from the people to have a voice in this matter. Now just who will the governor appoint under the alleged deal? And I sat in on one of the gentleman's press conferences who was involved in this, when he explained it. All that you do under this alleged deal is that you leave the governor the appointment of the treasurer only. You would elect the attorney general and the secretary of state. You would have a bipartisan commission and all of us, I think—I see Mr. Brake looking at me and I am sure that he wants to laugh when we talk about bipartisan commissions—but nevertheless, some bipartisan commission would come along and appoint the highway director. Then we have a board of education who would appoint the superintendent of public instruction. Now, if anybody can convince me that this hodgepodge will strengthen the governor, if you can convince me where the governor is appointing his state ad board, when all you give him the right to appoint is the treasurer—the auditor general is going to be selected by the legislature and, unless we can make progress in apportionment, I assume that the auditor general will be selected by a minority of the people. Now, this is sheer hypocrisy to stand on the floor of this committee and talk about strengthening the governor by taking away the right of the people to a voice at the ballot box over who is going to be their chief law enforcement officer, who is going to insure honest elections, who is going to be the keeper of the till.

Now, let's just explore this. I didn't intend to make another speech, Delegate Van Dusen, so get off the fiddle, but I got up here primarily to answer Delegate Gust and I'd also like to reply briefly to Delegate Martin when he said that because members of the Democratic party now hold the state administrative posts, that some of the delegates are insisting that we continue the elective system rather than to go to the alleged deal. I don't think anyone has a hold on the governor's chair and I think it has been proven over the years here in the state that times change, people's viewpoints change, their thinking changes, even political parties cease to exist—and have—and new ones have been formed. So it is not, Delegate Martin, because the Democrats happen to be serving in these positions now, because I don't know—and you don't either—who will be serving in the next 10 years, 20 years or the next 4 or 5 decades. No one else in this convention can answer. But I am concerned by an attempt to set up a constitutional monarchy in the state of Michigan with 4 or 5 different factions being able to still hold the governor in a stranglehold, and in doing it, hold the progress of the state.

No one can deny the battle that went on when G. Mennen Williams was governor of this state with a malapportioned senate. It was a constant battle, and I would be the first to admit it. But you would have to convince me how you are going to strengthen the governor and have a strong executive by giving the legislature the right to select the auditor general, giving the board of education the right to select the superintendent of public instruction, giving some bipartisan commission—God knows what it will be made of—the right to select a highway commissioner who is going to spend many millions of dollars allocated to the highway department and then have the governor appoint the treasurer. There just simply is no rationale to this. You either believe in appointment of state officials or you believe in the elective system. And I don't believe that you can go halfway by dividing this thing the way that the deal has obviously been cut.

MR. GUST: I'd like to raise a point of order, Mr. Chairman. There is no such deal as Mr. Marshall speaks of before this committee for consideration, that I know of. It is only Committee Proposal 71 and his amendment thereto. There is no 3 headed highway commission or split deal or half appointed or half elected. His are all elected and mine are all appointed.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The Chair thinks that's correct, Mr. Marshall.

MR. MARSHALL: I think that is half correct. I know there was a speech made on the floor of the convention the other day by a very distinguished and prominent delegate, explaining what the deal was. I sat in the press conference and heard it explained. Now, the deal hasn't come out yet, but if I don't speak while this report is before this committee, I darn well won't have the chance after this deal has been acted upon. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Martin.

MR. MARTIN: I think we've been in session a little over 3 hours and probably long enough. I move the committee do now rise.

MR. DOWNS: Mr. Chairman, may I rise on a point of personal privilege?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: Mr. Downs, state your point.

MR. DOWNS: Delegate Van Dusen had mentioned a quote from me. I would like to speak very briefly on it so that our record will show that I did answer this today. I do not consider it normally personal privilege since I did not consider it an attack but rather not a complete quotation. Could I ask Mr. Martin if he would delay his motion?

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: If there is no objection, you may do so.

MR. MARTIN: No objection, Mr .Chairman.

MR. DOWNS: It is late in the day and I shall be just as brief as I can. You know, my good friend, Delegate Van Dusen, quoted part of a statement I made earlier. It reminds me a little of the story of the fellow that got on the bus and the bus driver said, "Congratulations." The fellow said, "What for?" The driver said, "I just heard you went to New York, were at the horse races and won $1,000." The fellow said, "Well, that's fine except you didn't get it quite right. It wasn't New York; it was Florida. It wasn't the horse races; it was the dog races. And I didn't win it; I lost it." (laughter)

Now, the quotation referred to is when we were discussing civil service at the committee hearing. From a paragraph and a half up from the part referred to, I quoted Mr. King, who was saying, "Because of an ambiguity in the constitution, the civil service commission classified the chief administrative officers of 9 boards or commissions at the request of these boards or commissions." I was talking about the necessity for changing the constitution so that the head of the statutory agencies would be appointed by the governor and not put under civil service. I said that the governor should be held responsible for the administration of these agencies and he would do that by being given the power to appoint, and I was very critical of the advice and consent concept. In fact, one sentence later on, I said that "the governor would have the responsibility for making that appointment, and that that power of the governor could not be taken away by the legislative branch" of government. And I referred in this to the discussion about these officers—speaking about these 9 boards or commissions that had been put under civil service. I want to make that clear. I believe what the minority report amendment does—and it was certainly my thinking then and is now—is that where the governor is responsible for the administration of an agency, he should have the power to appoint them, but that his power should be limited to the constitutional area that is not inconsistent with the constitutional selection of other areas of government which I hope to go into more at a later date of the convention when we discuss it.

I did want to clear up that my discussion was relating to the civil service commission and I was critical of having civil service take away the power of the governor to appoint the heads of agencies, not about the constitutional officers. Thank you.

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman.

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: For what purposes does the delegate rise?

MR. KING: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak to a point of personal privilege too. I was delighted to hear that our good friend, Delgate Marshall is a fan of Alex J. Groesbeck. I too am, and I think had he been here today, he would have perhaps picked up one of these badges that I am wearing. But I don't want to see his thoughts and ideas misconstrued and, for the benefit of Mr. Marshall, who may have not gotten as far as page 258, I would like to quote as follows:

"When the administrative board act was passed," he declared —

we're talking about Groesbeck now —

"a new era in the business administration of Michigan's affairs was ushered in. . . . It was to be expected," Groesbeck explained, "that any such departure in government would engender strong opposition, to say nothing of hatreds and animosities. The protagonists of this opposition have been most sedulous in the broadcasting of inexcusable untruths regarding not only the principles and purposes of the establishment of the board, but of the numerous beneficial results its operation has achieved for the public as well. . . . Instead of being weakened," he warned, "the administrative board should be strengthened." He suggested that could be accomplished through adoption of the short ballot, by which executive posts would be made appointive instead of elective, thus giving the governor a real cabinet.

There is one of the spokesmen that was around —

CHAIRMAN MILLARD: The question is on the motion to rise. All in favor will say aye. All opposed?

The motion prevails.

[Whereupon, the committee of the whole having risen, Vice President Hutchinson assumed the Chair.]

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The Chair recognizes the delegate from Genesee, Mr. Millard.

MR. MILLARD: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration certain proposals, of which the secretary will give a detailed report.

SECRETARY CHASE: Mr. President, the committee of the whole has had under consideration Committee Proposal 76, A proposal pertaining to the passage of permissive legislation to allow civil divisions of the state to establish local civil service systems and to receive assistance from the state civil service system. The committee of the whole reports this back to the convention with the following amendment:

1. Amend page 1, line 8, after "Sec. a.", by striking out the balance of the section and inserting "Each city, village, township, county, school district and metropolitan government may, by a majority vote of the electors voting thereon, establish, modify or discontinue a merit system for its employees except teachers under contract or tenure. The state civil service commission may furnish technical services on a reimbursable basis to any city, village, township, county, school district or metropolitan government requesting the same.".

The committee recommends the amendment be agreed to and the proposal as thus amended be passed.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: The question is upon concurring in the amendment made by the committee of the whole to Committee Proposal 76. All those in favor will say aye. Opposed will say no.

The amendment is adopted and Committee Proposal 76, as amended, is referred to the committee on style and drafting.

Following is Committee Proposal 76 as amended and referred to the committee on style and drafting:

The committee recommends that the following be included in the constitution:

Sec. a. The state civil service commission may furnish technical services on a reimbursable basis to any city, village, township, county, school district or metropolitan government requesting the same.

SECRETARY CHASE: The committee of the whole, Mr. President, has also had under consideration Committee Proposal 71 relative to the election, term and duties and so forth of state officers and has come to no final resolution thereon. This completes the report of the committee of the whole.

VICE PRESIDENT HUTCHINSON: Without objection, the several requests will be granted. The Chair hears no objection and the requests are granted.

ONE HUNDRED FOURTH DAY

Wednesday, March 21, 1962, 9:30 o'clock a.m.

PROCEEDINGS

PRESIDENT NISBET: The convention will please come to order.

Our invocation this morning will be given by the Reverend P. T. Calvin Johnson of the All Saints Evangelical Lutheran Church of East Detroit.

REVEREND JOHNSON: Lord God, today as representatives of the people of our state, remind us that we are first of all the representatives of Thy truth known within our highest and best.

Because we cannot speak but what we have received, keep us open to receive wisdom and insight by whatever channels they come to us. Give us humility to listen as well as courage to speak. Help us to state our differences with integrity and honor yet with alertness to see that the fullness of truth is not the monopoly of any one person or party. In debate and conversation filter our speech from the words that only becloud and do not clarify, and when our words are done, move us to act as fearlessly as we have tried to speak honestly.

Now having bowed our heads, enable us to bow our minds and wills to today's demands in the name and spirit of Him who came, not to be served but to serve and to give Himself for those in every need. Amen.

PRESIDENT NISBET: The roll call will be taken by the secretary. Those present, please vote aye. Those present, please record your attendance by voting aye. Have you all recorded your attendance? If so, the secretary will lock the machine and record your attendance.
